All Preston's spare time is spent on his fifty-foot power cruiser, which he bought with his first movie earnings.

Meet Mrs. Preston Foster. They fell in love when both worked for a shipbuilding corporation years ago.

Preston won praise for a small bit in "I'm a Fugitive from a Chain Gang." Foster begged for the part just because it was a Paul Muni picture.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

THE VANISHING American is one who retains some of the quaint habits of a simpler age. Noel Coward is not his prophet, and he doesn't have to start the day with a pick-me-up. He honors the Fifth Commandment. He enjoys a night club on the average of once a year. Home is neither a hotel where he hangs his hat nor a decorated interior for impressing the Joneses, but a gathering-place for the people he loves. He's not ashamed of sentiment, and values the old-fashioned virtues above a flip crack.

One such vanishing American is Preston Foster, and this is the story of how he got that way.

It goes back to his ancestry, German on his father's side, English on his mother's, and no nonsense about either. An average small town family in New Jersey, where money wasn't plentiful but affection was. Three youngsters, a boy, the pride of his father's heart, with eyes blue as the sea he would grow up to love, and two younger girls. The kind of family that had fun together.

"We always had better times with each other than we could find outside," says the boy, grown up. "The elder girl was a tomboy, and we played together as kids, always clowning round. No matter what the distress might be, there was usually something funny about it. We still live pretty much like that. My wife's on the quiet side, but she enjoys the fun from the sidelines."

A household of laughter then, but of discipline enough. There was never any doubt that father and mother were boss. "My father had a way of taking me by the forelock," says Foster, "and saying: 'Young man—'" He dropped his voice into his throat. "He'd never hurt me, just catch me by the forelock and hold me there. The only time he ever laid the weight of his hands on me was once when he caught me holding my younger sister by the heels over a sandpile, and trying to push her head into the sand. The only time he ever had me up on the carpet for fair was when I was eighteen, and said damn in my mother's presence.

"That was fifteen years ago, (Continued on page 96)

PRESTON FOSTER IS ONE WHO HAS RETAINED THE QUAINT HABITS OF A SIMPLER AGE

THOSE HOLLYWOOD MEN!

IF IT'S ROMANCE YOU'RE LOOKING FOR, YOU WON'T FIND IT IN MOVIETOWN AND NO ONE KNOWS THAT BETTER THAN MISS RICE

BY ELEANOR PACKER

Here's Florence, all dressed up, and no one to go with!

IT ALL began with a letter and a fire and a rainy day at home.

The letter was a part-fan and part-confession missive, written by a girl in Kansas to Florence Rice in Hollywood. The fire was crackling cheerily on the wide hearth in the white-paneled living-room of Florence's beach house. The rain pounded, as only California rains can pound, against the square windows.

Florence, dressed in peach and turquoise satin pajamas, was sitting on a low divan before the fire, looking through her mail, when I arrived.

"Read this," she said and gave me the typewritten letter with its small-town-in-Kansas address.

The writer of the letter explained, first of all, that she was twenty-five years old and a stenographer in one of the town's two banks. "I'm telling you these personal facts merely to prove to you that I'm not a very young and empty-headed girl," she wrote. She knew all about Florence. That she was the daughter of Grantland Rice, the famous sports writer and maker of those popular short sports pictures. That she had had a gay and exciting girlhood of private schools, summers at various Eastern beaches, trips to Europe and a constant association with the interesting, colorful people who were her father's friends. That she had appeared in several Broadway shows before going to California. That she had played the leading feminine roles in a dozen not very important pictures. And that she had recently signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which made her a major featured player.

So, because Florence had known the struggles and delights of both New York and Hollywood, Mary of Kansas was writing to ask Florence's advice. And here is where the letter reached its real point and purpose. The girl in Kansas was saving her pennies, going without all the luxuries and many of the necessities of life, in order to go to California, the land of sunshine and romance and handsome men. Spinsterhood was staring her straight in the face. The men whom she knew were neither interesting nor romantic. So she was preparing for one final fling at romance in Hollywood where all the handsome, clever and successful men seemed to be congregated, where romance was in the very air. Did Florence think she was planning wisely and well?

"What are you going to answer?" I asked curiously. It was the kind of letter which demands a reply and Florence is always faithful to her fan mail.

"I'm going to advise her to stay in Kansas," Florence said, her eyes twinkling. "If she is looking for men and romance, she'll certainly be disappointed in Hollywood."

"What's wrong with the (Continued on page 94)

WHAT DO you say if, instead of pointing out object lessons in beauty among the movie stars this month, I delve into my notes on just plain folks? I have a horrid habit of studying closely every girl I see—on the street, in the bus, in the stores—and one of these days, I know, some indignant gal is going to speak to me sharply and probably smack me soundly for my nosiness. However, in the meantime, if it brings grist to the Mary Marshall mill, who cares?

I want to point out average figure and face faults and tell you a little bit about correcting them. I shan't concern myself with the very fat, the very thin, the very beautiful, or the downright ugly. (No woman is downright ugly, anyway. No, she ain't!) I want to talk, in other words, about that person concerning whom her friends say, "She'd be an awfully pretty girl, a very attractive woman, except for . . . " It's that nasty compound conjunction, preposition, adverb—whatever it is—"except for," that I'd like to eliminate from your life.

First, three figure faults, which I saw on every beach I sunbathed on last summer and which I see regularly in evening gowns all winter. Sketches I, II, and III, executed in masterly style by our art department, illustrate these too-common faults of the otherwise good figure: One, the bulging abdomen—and why is it that girls with this blight-on-the-body will pull belts as tight as possible and simply refuse to wear girdles? Two, the hunk below the hip—and girls with this figure fault seem to dote upon standing with one leg thrown outa joint, so that the bulge is even more evident. And three, the figure that is very nice except for (there we are again) a shapelessness at the waistline.

Here's how to go about correcting these faults. For the protruding tum (if you are not really fat all over) perhaps very simple measures will help. First, wear a girdle, with some stiffening in front. Don't let that stiffening change from a straight line to an inelegant curve—you must sit straight as well as stand straight. Perhaps you bloat your abdomen with too much liquid. Get out of the habit of drinking with meals—drink after meals, even though you at first miss the comfortable sensation of sluicing down food with a beverage. Have one liquid meal a day if you like—that's fine—but don't chase solids with liquids. If you're a regular fish about drinking water, cut down to one large glass between meals.

IF LIQUIDS ain't the cause behind the bulge, perhaps it's too bulky food. Cut down on meats. Eat more vegetables. Of course, I don't need to tell you that candy, cake, pie, ice cream and cocktails never did anybody's stomach any good, either internally or externally. Stand or walk about for at least half an hour after each meal; if you have to trot out and do the dishes, don't complain—it's good for your figger. Put conscious effort into keeping your middle flat whenever you can. You can't think problem here?

by Mary Marshall

IF YOU ARE ONE OF THE JUST PLAIN FOLKS WITH AVERAGE FIGURE AND FACE FAULTS, HERE IS THE REMEDY YOU'VE BEEN LOOKING FOR about it all the time, of course, but there are lots of moments when you can definitely concentrate upon it. Other times, how about whipping up a password with a sister or a friend? Ask said sister or friend, whenever she sees you poking out in front, to say to you snappily, "Potato chips!" or something.

IV. Thin face, long nose? Soften them. V. Small features? Accentuate them.

If it's simply a slight excess of flesh which causes figure trouble No. I, this exercise, not new, but helpful, will work: lie on the floor, face down, and grasp your heels with your hands. Rock your body back and forth. This is better than the well known rolling stunt for taking off abdominal fat. A small, hard pillow is sometimes helpful.

If it's a slackness of the abdominal muscles which is unstreamlining your silhouette, here is the best exercise in the world, even if I have repeated it umpteen times: lie on the floor on your back. Legs together, knees stiff. Bring your legs up, together, to a right angle with your body. Let them down, down, slowly, to within a few inches of the floor, but don't let them touch the floor. Bring them on up again. Repeat, beginning with five times, working up to as many times as you can spare minutes to do. Wear a boned girdle. But—for an hour a day, perhaps, when you're alone—practice going without a girdle and see how nice and flat you can keep your tum without its assistance.

Figure Fault II: diet has nothing to do with this—exercise is the only cure, and it takes a lot of patience to cure it, too. First, wear a long girdle, that will hide this bump when you're wearing average-fitting dresses. Keep away from molded gowns until you get rid of it, choosing softer or even bouffant styles, if you can wear them. Come summer, choose a bathing suit with some sort of skirt effect.

Second, you can fool some of the people some of the time about this figure fault, if you'll do this: when standing, tighten the muscles of the thighs. It will pull in that bump like anythin'. Never stand on one foot, with the other leg "at ease." Do not flex the knee nearest the beholder, in the accepted manner of the movie star posing for fashion pictures. Stand straight, and keep the thighs tense.

Third, get busy and roll this lump away. Sit on the floor and roll from side to side on the derriere—rolling far enough so that you touch the offending bump. Also, get down on hands and knees and kick back—left, right, left, right—just as far and just as hard as you can kick. And, believe it or not, swinging your hips in the well known hula-hula motion is grand for muscular suppleness. Even if you feel silly, go on and do it.

Figure Fault III: stretch for grace and for a slender waistline. Stretch down—in front of you and to either side, with your knees straight and stiff, and try to touch a point just beyond your actual reach. Stretch up, on tiptoe, and try again to touch (Continued on page 113)

THE BEWILDERING BRADY

BY MARTHA KERR

SHE PERFORMS A DIZZY SLEIGHT OF HAND WITH COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

Alice Brady is one of filmdom's finest actresses.

Here she is as the dizzy damsel you know so well.

As an exponent of emotion in "In Old Chicago."

ALICE BRADY has Hollywood impaled on the horns of a dilemma because Hollywood doesn't know what to think about Miss Brady!

For six years Miss Brady has fluttered through films, waving her hands wildly about, throwing her voice into antic cadences, making the outlanders howl with laughter. Miss Brady was, accordingly, neatly catalogued "a comic." It made no difference that Miss Brady had come from the New York stage, one of the great dramatic actresses of the theatre. Miss Brady clicked as a comic on the screen, and as a comic on the screen she must continue to click.

Now, in "In Old Chicago," she has done such a right-about-face as bewilders a town which believes that black is black and white is white; Oakie, funny; Muni, unfunny; and that a lady who tickles its ribs does not, normally, agitate its tear ducts.

The question Hollywood is asking is, simply: Is she funny? Or isn't she funny? There are the twin masks of Comedy and Tragedy, of course. Well, then, does she caper about in her private life, wearing the mask of Comedy? Or does she sit, somber and brooding, behind the mask of Tragedy?

The answer, of course, is both. But I anticipate.

The other night I was invited to have dinner with Miss Brady.

So, I arrived at her home in Beverly Hills, a spacious white house somewhat in the Italianate style. A home occupied by five dogs, five servants, Miss Brady and a state of perpetual if pleasant pandemonium. The five dogs scuffle and yelp constantly; the five servants are not sufficient, it seems, to keep the domestic machinery functioning smoothly.

WE DID, in fact, dine. Eat would be too lowly a word for it. We dined on a round table placed, felicitously, near the fire; the table richly mounted in scarlet and silver-toned damask, fine old silver, elegantly cut crystal. Miss Brady made a face at the pigeon pie and said, "I'd just as soon take a pill!" There was, also, fizz. Fizz is her name for that aristocrat of beverages, champagne. Which she likes to drink from tall glasses equipped with chunks of ice, not, as she knows very well, the way connoisseurs drink champagne. But Miss Brady does in all things exactly what she feels (Continued on page 118)

OFF THEIR GUARD

Puttin' on the Ritz! Brian Aherne and Constance Bennett, in white tie and mink, step out in that "luxurious" limousine!

Gary Cooper proves that a screen hero is really a hero when he has one of those six a. m. calls. Just one more stretch before he answers the phone.

"Sure I'm up." Practically at the studio right this minute, aren't you, Gary?

Something's wrong with this picture. But what? Gary, we don't think you're awake!

Even a screen hero's gotta work, so Gary is off to the set of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

THAT 6 A. M. CALL

That's better! Now just turn the faucet. Nothing like a nice shower to give you that "wide awake" look, and that Cooper pep!

WHAT PRICE ART?

Unfortunately her director in "You and Me" does not!

Sylvia Sidney's hobby is needlepoint. She goes for it in a big way.

He wants to talk script. "Are you here again? Wait 'till I catch this stitch," Sylvia sighs.

He wins and Sylvia gives her all to Art. The dejected looking needlepoint knows it must wait.

Is your mind on your work? You wanted to finish an inch to-day? What price Art!

GOING PLACES

Judging by that big smile on her boy friend's face, Janet Gaynor is more than holding her own in the Tyrone Power sweepstakes.

At the preview of "Tom Sawyer", Comedienne Irene Dunne is propelled through the crowd by her husband, Dr. Griffin—a shadowy figure.

A couple of "Tom Sawyer" enthusiasts clutch their tickets—Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Tracy.

The bride comes home. Even a good excuse like a honeymoon couldn't keep Virginia Bruce and J. Walter Ruben away from home.

One of the cast goes to the "Tom Sawyer" preview with her best beau. Cora Sue Collins and Freddie Bartholomew have a date.

Fannie Brice and her escort both have a sense of humor. He's Jackie Cooper, all grown up.

Andrea Leeds clasps the arm of Skater Jack Dunn with that contented look. Meaning they're a new romance.

The Fred Astaires take in "Tom Sawyer," too, which incidentally, is as much fun for grown-ups as for ole swimmin' hole devotees.

"They" say that Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward will stroll up the bridal path shortly. Anna-hoo, they're everywhere else together.

Here is little Durbin out on her first date. The lucky lad is Jackie Moran, who is taking Deanna to see him in "Tom Sawyer."

Margot Grahame and Lester Matthews, a couple of players from London town, "do" the Wilshire Bowl together and talk about home.

This time Frances Langford steps out with Jon Hall. Gosh, that boy certainly gets around as fast as a "Hurricane."

Here we have Paulette Goddard, but have not Charlie Chaplin. It is Anderson Lawler who escorts Scarlett O'Hara.

SKIP IT!

Action! And the Ritz Bros. relax as cute Marjorie Weaver skips rope.

COWBOY DICK POWELL SHOWS TENDERFEET

A real buckaroo uses both hands and his teeth to start the roll. It's simple!

Marjorie skipped gaily into the lead of their "Kentucky Moonshine."

Between scenes of the pix, Al Ritz skips it, too, for his daily dozen.

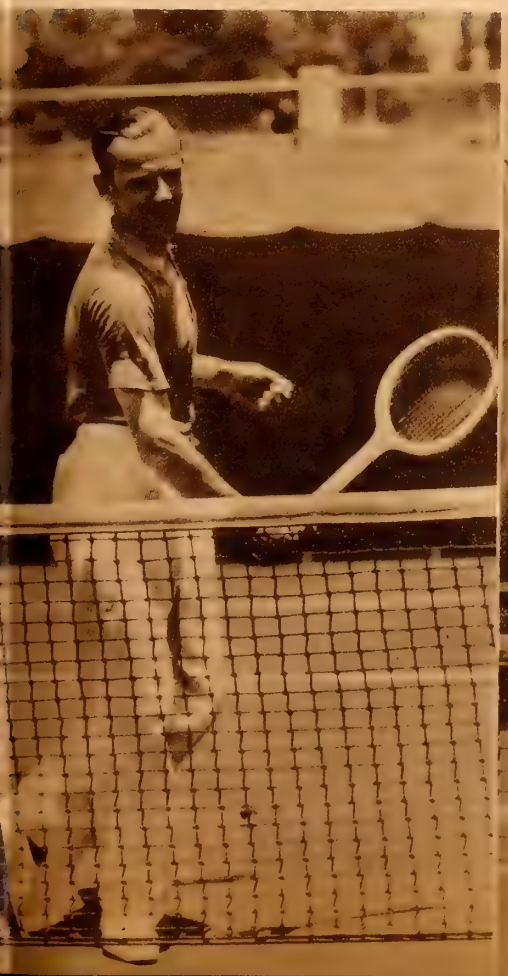
HOW THEY ROLL 'EM OUT IN THE OPEN SPACES

Howz it goin'? Well, let's pour the tobacco in a pipe and light it. It's sure!

Constance Bennett does a "Gertrude Ederle" in her own back pool. Yep, the Bennett would rather swim than make cold cream!

Here she is with a four-footed friend who looks as if he understands a thing or two. Anyway, he is Connie's favorite canine.

A two-footed friend who comes to discuss scripts and studio business. Don't you know, Mister, this is to be a day of rest?



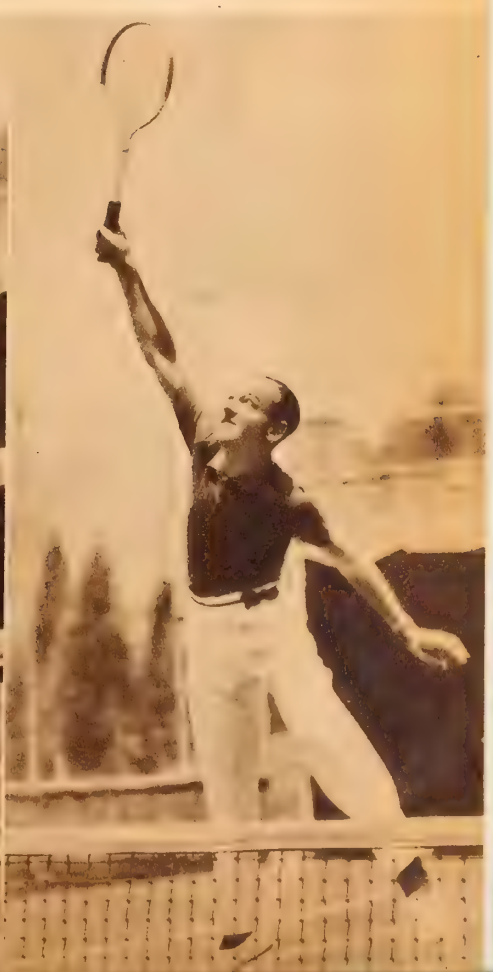
A DAY OFF

A pretty picture of a pretty picture player. Miss Bennett, minus temperament, is back in the movies to stay.

You'd imagine a fine dancer to be a fine tennis player, now wouldn't you? Well, Fred Astaire is. When he's not at the studio, he is out practicing.

This looks enough like a dance pose to make Astaire feel right at home. Guess dancing and tennis go together—eh, wot?

Here's something coming, and Mr. A. is gonna wallop it right back. Note the concentration, please.



TENNIS

Now, we really have something! Looks like a stunt play's been accomplished, from the pained expression on his face.

If you're up on your tennis, you know what Freddie is going through here. He has served something to his opponent and is avidly watching for the effect.

Reaching for a high one with a look of real confidence. Yes, seems as if Freddie really knows his stuff!

Andrea Leeds, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen.

Jack Oakie and Dorothy Lamour go Hawaiian!

GOOD NEWS

BY LEO TOWNSEND

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy have turned down offers running up to $5,000. for a single appearance, but we know how you can get their act for nothing. All you have to have is Bergen's phone number. Just call the house and ask for Charlie, and if Bergen is home he'll bring young Mr. McC. to the phone and entertain you as long as your nickel holds out.

Washington, Note!

Last year Carole Lombard worked hard, made $460,000 and paid most of it back to the government in taxes. Right now she is in the middle of a three-months' vacation, and our spies report that she plans to take it easy this year. It's a drastic situation, boys. How can we build battleships with Lombard lying down on the job?

■ ■ ■

More Lombard information: When Miss L. finishes a picture she always has her phone number changed so her studio can't contact her until she's ready to work again. . . . The sheepdog Clark Gable gave her for Christmas is very unhappy with Carole's Siamese cats. She's thinking of hiring a wolf in sheep's clothing, just to keep the hound contented.

Oh Boy!

Martha Raye is doing all right these days. She has her own apartment, Myrna Loy's former maid, Elissa Landi's former secretary, and she has just added to her collection of "jools" a $2,500. bracelet. The bracelet is a 9-piece miniature orchestra, done in diamonds and rubies. So when Martha yells "Oh Boy!" these days, she means it.

■ ■ ■

Although most people know that Frances Farmer is currently a hit on Broadway in Clifford Odet's play, "Golden Boy," few are aware that her husband, Leif Erikson, is also in the same show. He's doing a walk-on bit, just to be near his wife. The word is, though, that he'll get a leading role in Odet's next production.

Junior Diversion

All Hollywood—as they say in the gossip columns—is watching the romance between Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville. They're working together in "White Banners," and Jackie sent her flowers on her 15th birthday. You know what that means. It's wedding bells any day now.

■ ■ ■

On a clear day out here you can see three gents puffing heavily and pedalling bicycles over Cahuenga Pass. The gents are Rudy Vallee and his two secretaries, and they're doing it because Rudy decided to take off a little weight. Every morning they cycle to work, followed by Rudy's limousine, which collects the bikes at the studio. The secretaries, who would rather lose weight than their jobs, say it's a very healthful practice.

Unemployment Note

Miss Marlene Dietrich, recently employed by a major studio, has rented a cottage in Beverly Hills and taken her furniture out of storage. She expects to make her home in Hollywood, and many of her friends have told her she ought to be in pictures. It's nice work, they all tell her, if you can get it.

■ ■ ■

One publicity department, justly eager to plug its forthcoming pictures, sends the following: "Dorothy Lamour and her bandleader husband, Herbie Kay, will 'You and Me' it when he begins his engagement at the 'Cocoanut Grove.' Later they plan a 'Tropical Holiday' in Hawaii." You can probably gather from the above that the recession has hit Hollywood.

Carole Lombard and Clark Gable make the rounds of the night spots.

A Dutch girl and a guy from Iowa —Anita Louise and Ronald Reagan.

Congratulations

They're congratulating Dick Powell on the impending arrival of an addition to his family, and Joan Blondell blushes properly whenever she's within earshot. Incidentally, did you know that when he's working and she's not, he phones her every afternoon at three? The other day, though, he didn't get to the phone until three twenty. Said Joan: "Don't you love me any more?"

■ ■ ■

When Jack Haley's option was taken up by his studio recently, Mr. H. had a ready explanation for it. He claims the main reason was that no one was able to scrape his picture off the wall in the studio reception room.

Ditto, Sam

This month's Sam Goldwyn story: Mr. G. recently returned from Hawaii on the Lurline. The boat docked at San Francisco, laid over a day and pulled out for Los Angeles. At sailing time several hundred people were at the dock waving goodbye to friends. Sam, at the rail, waved back and yelled, "Bon voyage!"

■ ■ ■

His studio looked all over for George Brent the other day. He was scheduled to appear in Weaverville, California, for the premiere of "Gold is Where You Find It." The studio couldn't locate him by phone, so they resorted to the radio, sending out queries for him on their own broadcasting station. Brent, like gold, is where you find him. In this case it was Palm Springs.

Family Pride

Looks as though the one-time feud between Al Jolson and the Warner Brothers is being carried into the second generation—which will distinguish it as the only second-generation feud in these parts. It happened at a children's party given by Darryl Zanuck's youngsters (who can afford it). When young Sonny Jolson arrived at the affair he marched immediately over to Mervyn LeRoy's son, Warner, and socked him. Rumor has it that he apologized later, when he discovered that Warner's papa had just transferred his portfolio to Metro. After all, you can't sock a guy just because his old man doesn't work for Warners'.

■ ■ ■

The latest Hollywood beauty hint—and we got this straight from a Hollywood beauty who does a lot of hinting—is colored eyelashes for evening wear. If you're a brunette, the local experts have decided you should wear brown lashes with blue tips. And if you're a blonde, you buy yourself a set of gold ones. Personally, we're going to try to get another year's wear out of last year's.

Good Casting!

John and Elaine Barrymore have just bought a play, called "My Dear Joan," which they will try out in San Francisco as soon as John finishes his picture commitments, which will be in August. If the play goes over, they will take it to New York. What's news about this item is the fact that John will play Elaine's father!

■ ■ ■

John Barrymore's comeback is now officially successful. A small theatre on Hollywood Boulevard, playing a revival of "Bill of Divorcement," billed it "John Barrymore in 'Bill of Divorcement'." And not even a mention of Katharine Hepburn.

Ritzy, huh!

After scoring in several recent pictures, the Ritz Brothers tried to live up to their name by insisting on telling directors just how their scenes should be played. Most comedians are extremely unfunny when they decide to go serious, so Darryl Zanuck took the balmy brothers into his private office and explained to them that directors have a weakness for directing their own pictures. The brothers got the idea, and now all is calm in Beverly Hills.

■ ■ ■

And the best act in town—another free one—is put on by Martha Raye and Ruby Keeler. For their own amusement they do a screaming takeoff on the Busby Berkeley girls. If you Berkeley girls would only leave the room for a minute we'd go into detail.

Charles Boyer and Pat Paterson attend "Goldwyn Follies" preview.

James Cagney and Pat O'Brien step out together. They are old pals.

Another Garbo?

During the making of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," Sigrid Gurie, Goldwyn's Norwegian importation, was billed as the "Girl Who Didn't Know Hollywood." Reports from the Goldwyn camp were that Miss Gurie had never been on Hollywood Boulevard, had never entered a Hollywood night club, and in fact had done nothing but work for Mr. Goldwyn since her arrival on these shores. Came the night of the preview, and Miss Gurie was to make her grand entrance—her first public appearance. Crowds waited, but nothing happened. Miss G. was home with a cold.

■ ■ ■

There's talk around that Mr. and Mrs. Walter Withers, Jane's parents, want to adopt two children. Reason is that Jane has a tremendous number of pets around the house on which she has lavished much attention and considerable expense. Papa and mamma feel that she'll soon outgrow them, and they think a couple of youngsters might be very happy with them.

Nice Custom

Best Scene in a Current Picture: The moment when Marco Polo (Gary Cooper) teaches the Chinese princess (Sigrid Gurie) the western world's favorite salute—a kiss. The princess, whose family has been rubbing noses for centuries, is first astonished, then highly pleased, with the new world's trick.

Gladys Swarthout and hubby, Frank Chapman, are east for opera dates

■ ■ ■

Next time you get a run in the chiffon number nines, gals, think of poor old 20th Century-Fox. The studio paid out $2,200. for runs during the filming of one picture—and for one player. The young lady was Sonja Henie. The opera length hose she wore in "Happy Landing" cost $37. a pair, and she sometimes went through six pairs in a day.

Music to Soothe

When Annabella started work on "The Baroness and the Butler," she wanted music on the set, so she bought a huge radio-phonograph to soothe her between scenes. When the picture finished, the prop department asked her what she intended to do about moving the thing. Said Annabella: "I'm finished with it. Give it to the crew." So the boys drew lots, and a guy named Brownie now has a radio-phonograph to get him in the mood for scene shifting.

(Continued on page 90)

"...but what is this difference you notice between Camels and other Cigarettes?"

...Kathleen Williams asks Alma Nicoll, debutante daughter of De Lancey Nicoll, Jr., of New York and Middleburg, Virginia.

And here is Miss Nicoll's answer:

"Do I find Camels different from other cigarettes? Yes, definitely! For instance, after hours in the saddle, I'm quite weary. Smoking Camels gives me a delightful 'lift'! And Camels never jangle my nerves—another way they are different! I smoke as many Camels as I please...and they never tire my taste. Camels are mild...gentle on my throat. And so you see, in so many ways, Camels agree with me."

It is not surprising that smokers are so enthusiastic about Camels. Camel spends millions more, year after year, to assure a finer, more delicate quality for Camel smokers.

THE Nicoll family have occupied positions of prominence here since Matthias Nicoll crossed to these shores in 1664. Alma Nicoll (above, right) is a fine horsewoman, devoted to the life of the Long Island and Virginia hunting country. She has traveled in England, on the Continent, and in the Near East. At right, Miss Nicoll poses before dining out. She is typical of the younger crowd in her enthusiasm for Camels. "At all the parties," she says, "I notice that Camels are served. Between courses...and, of course, after dessert, I smoke Camels —'for digestion's sake!' Camels add to mealtime pleasure."

DO PEOPLE APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS?—

—CAMELS ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

Among the many distinguished women who find Camels mild and refreshing:

Mrs. Nicholas Biddle, Philadelphia • Mrs. Powell Cabot, Boston • Mrs. Thomas M. Carnegie, Jr., New York • Mrs. J. Gardner Coolidge 2nd, Boston • Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel 3rd, Philadelphia • Mrs. Chiswell Dabney Langhorne, Virginia Mrs. Nicholas G. Penniman III, Baltimore • Mrs. John W. Rockefeller, Jr., New York • Mrs. Rufus Paine Spalding III, Pasadena • Mrs. Louis Swift, Jr., Chicago • Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Jr., Philadelphia • Mrs. Howard F. Whitney, New York

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER

"Camels agree with me!"

Copyright, 1938, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C

YOUNG LOVE

Richard Greene, fresh from England, makes his romantic debut with Loretta Young in "Four Men and a Prayer."

Nourishes as well as Cleanses

"IT'S WONDERFUL TO HAVE such a grand nourishing cream and cleansing cream in one. Pond's new Cold Cream does so much more for my skin."

MRS. A. J. DREXEL, III

"KEEPS MY SKIN FINER . . . Pond's new Cold Cream keeps my skin finer and softer in spite of all my sports."

JOAN BELMONT, Mrs. Ellsworth N. Bailey

"SMOOTHS OUT TIRED LINES . . . Pond's new 'skin-vitamin' Cold Cream gives my skin a livelier, more glowing look —smooths out tired lines."

THE COUNTESS DE LA FALAISE

Today—more and more women are using this new cream with "Skin-Vitamin"

THE first announcement of Pond's "skin-vitamin" Cold Cream brought almost immediate response. Hundreds of women tried the new cream.

And steadily your demand has increased for this new cream that brings to women such important new aid to skin beauty.

For years, leading doctors have known how this "skin-vitamin" heals skin faster when applied to wounds or burns. And also how skin may grow rough and subject to infections when there is not enough of this "skin-vitamin" in the diet!

Then we tested it in Pond's Creams! In animal tests, skin that had been rough, dry because of "skin-vitamin" deficiency in diet became smooth and supple again—in only 3 weeks!

Use this new cream in your regular way for cleansing and before make-up. Pat it in. Soon you, too, will be agreeing that the use of the new "skin-vitamin" cream does bring to your skin something active and essential to its health—gives it a livelier, more glowing look!

Same jars, same labels, same price

Now every jar of Pond's Cold Cream you buy contains this new cream with "skin-vitamin" in it. You will find it in the same jars, with the same labels, at the same price.

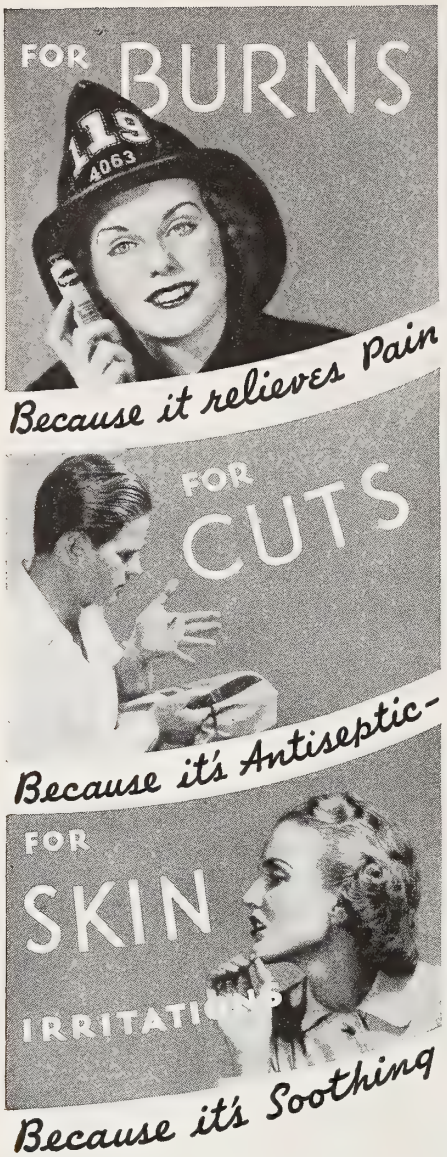
SEND FOR THE NEW CREAM!

"SKIN YOUNGER . . . The new Pond's Cold Cream with 'skin-vitamin' has made my skin smoother and younger, the colour fresher—within just a few weeks."

LADY MARGARET DOUGLAS-HOME

TEST IT IN 9 TREATMENTS

Pond's, Dept. 9MS-CS, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's "skin-vitamin" Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments with samples of 2 other Pond's "skin-vitamin" Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10c to cover postage and packing.



Name_____

Street_____

City_____ State_____

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N.Y. Time, N.B.C.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

Unguentine takes the fire out of a burn and the burning pain out of a cut; it relieves the itching of eczema . . . and provides lasting antiseptic protection. It is the antiseptic in soothing form.

Never, never be without an adequate supply of Unguentine. Big tube 50¢; economical family size jar, $1. At drug stores.

HIS LIFE'S EXCITING

(Continued from page 36)

consequent unhappiness of a child divided. He tried to act eighteen when he was fourteen—and succeeded almost too well. He studied art in Paris, was broke and had a beautiful, Left-Bankish time of it, acquiring hollow cheeks and stoicism. He tried his hand at writing, was published, and is still writing.

When he wanted to go into pictures, and did, his father "disinherited" him, but both recovered. However, it was an experience.

For the past four years he has lived, more or less continuously, in London. He left London because he and his associates in picture-making there did not agree. It has been stated that he owned his producing company there. That, he tells me, is not a fact. He also left London because David Selznick paged him for the role of Hentzau in Prisoner of Zenda, and Hentzau would be irresistible to one who is by way of being Hentzau's blood brother. And it was.

In the London group of Forty, which is the much more selective equivalent of New York's one-time Four Hundred, the name of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. is listed.

He lived sleekly in London, in the narrow, five-storied house in Mayfair which overhangs Locks, the hatshop, the one-time house of Nell Gwynn snuggling cosily in his back garden, or in the more recent, smart pent-house apartment, which he still maintains. Or he can live, and has, when low on funds, in a mews, finding his fun poking about on the river, dining alone at little marshy inns, dropping in on the farmers for a talk and a pipe.

He numbers among his friends the distinguished in almost every station in life . . . Clemence Dane, playwright and novelist, Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to France, Dr. Will Durant, Charlie Chaplin and last, but Lordy, Lordy, not least, the Duke of Kent! And, as a friend of the Duke of Kent's he has, it is said, met and mingled familiarly with royalty, including the Duke of Windsor and the surely immortal, however deservedly, Mrs. Simpson. He has had, he admits, adventures which can only be recorded when he is, probably, eighty-two. Or when the other participants are all gone beyond the sound and fury of this earth. For the adventures have been political adventures and belong, not to him alone, but to history. Nevertheless, he has had them or witnessed them. And that he has had them is a part of his provocativeness.

HE has been variously rumored as romancing with Marlene Dietrich; more recently Hollywood has had him "dating" Norma Shearer, Katharine Hepburn, others. Probably he has had these dates, why not?

Having seen Douglas in "Having Wonderful Time," with Ginger Rogers, having caught glimpses of him in action for 'The Joy Of Loving," I can prophesy that he will be one of the but really terrific heart-throbs of our screen this year. I, therefore, take pleasure in announcing to you, his fans, who will be intensely interested that—he is not in love. He is not only not in love but he is not, by his own casual admission "going with" any particular lady. When I reminded him that the column-chatterers have been "linking" him he said, "They have to have something to print. Obviously, romance-rumors make the most fetching fillers. And they leave me quite helpless, for, also obviously, a gentleman cannot announce that he is not in love with a lady, has no intentions, matrimonial or otherwise."

He does, however, hope to marry again some day. "I certainly have no objections to marriage," he told me, "but not now."

He has leased a house on the beach, quite near to his father. He keeps one servant, drives his own car, entertains informally, liking it when Ronald Colman and Leslie Howard "drop down." He enjoys parties when Cary Grant is among the guests. They have a lot of fun together. He goes to night clubs much less often than he used to. He sees quite a lot of his father.

"Our relationship has never been that of father and son, you know," Douglas told me. "There has never been the adult, paternal superiority of the parent on my father's part, nor the father-what-is-beer on mine. We're good friends. I would seek his company if we were not any kin at all. In a kind of similar dissimilar way the characters we like to play on the screen stem from the same root. My father's "Zoro," "Thief of Bagdad" and the others were thrilling fantasy. The characters I like to play are more rooted in fact, or could be fact."

The elder Fairbanks, I thought, swashbuckled physically; the younger Fairbanks swashbuckles mentally.

"There are three reasons why I am glad I was born in this age," he continued. "The first is the telephone. I love to carry on interminable debates with my friends, righting the wrongs of the world. For me to talk publicly about how I should like to right the wrongs of the world would be, in my position, as presumptuous as giving advice on love. But I can, I do," laughed Douglas, rather grimly, "drop seeds. The second reason for my gratitude that the year 1909 saw my birth, is the wireless. I loathe to write letters, and never do. Therefore, my social obligations are salved by means of telegrams. The third object of my gratitude is the speed of this age, the fast trains, cars, planes. To lag in anything is to lose interest."

Douglas was called then. "In the meantime," he said, "I work. And I take my work seriously. I take everything I do seriously."

Loretta Young's littlest sister, grown up, renamed Ann Royal, is playing her first role in "Mad About Music." Time marches on!

SPONSORS FOR LATE SPRING

Mlle. Alix

Cutex Heather

Gray chiffon jersey dinner dress

Wine jersey with blue panels

Pink organza with poly-color stripes

"Wear it with wine, gray, raspberry, pink, the new smoky blues, brown, green,"* she says

MORE urbane and sophisticated than ever in her sensational Late Spring collection, Mlle. Alix, noted Paris dressmaker, sponsors the new Cutex HEATHER to wear with her newest and most exciting creations.

Famed for her use of jersey—from wool to chiffon—Alix is acknowledged mistress of the new loose-flowing line—the ultra-feminine effect.

HEATHER adapted to her designing

She loves the new Cutex HEATHER, says—"It is so subtle and feminine it adapts itself beautifully to that soft, loose look I've always been mad about. And the hint of purple in it blends with all the newest Spring colors."

Cutex HEATHER is a deep, smoky rose, with a suggestion of purple that makes it absolutely "right" with all the Spring "rock-garden" colors—the lovely fresh lavenders, blues and pinks, and yellows. It dramatizes the soft new grays—blends perfectly with the purples and raspberries, brown and green.

Decide right now to look your most Parisian this spring and summer in Cutex HEATHER, sponsored by Alix!

And be glad that, like all Cutex shades, Cutex HEATHER will never fade, chip or peel. HEATHER goes on with the smoothness of satin, yet wears "like iron." Ask to see the complete range of stunning new Cutex colors. Only 35¢ a bottle!

Northam Warren • New York, Montreal, London, Paris

6 NEW SOFT SHADES TO CHOOSE FROM

HEATHER: A deep, smoky rose, with a hint of purple. Grand with wine, gray, pink, blues, brown, green.

LAUREL: Ashes of roses, a subtle grayed pink. Lovely with Spring pastels, gray, beige.

CLOVER: Deep, winy red—goes beautifully with everything except orange tones.

THISTLE: Rust and Rose have met and mingled. For gray, green, rust, brown.

TULIP: A fresh, true crimson. It goes perfectly with black, gray, blue, bright green, fuchsia, yellow.

ROBIN RED: True red, subdued in intensity. It really goes with everything.

Also Rose, Old Rose, Rust, Natural, Colorless and Burgundy . . . 12 smart shades in all.

Northam Warren Corporation, Dept. 8-M-5, 191 Hudson St., New York. (In Canada, P. O. Box 427, Montreal.)

I enclose 15¢ to help cover postage and packing for Cutex Set, including one shade of Cutex Liquid Polish. (Check one shade desired.)

Clover ☐ Tulip ☐ Thistle ☐ Heather ☐ Laurel ☐

Name_____

Address_____

City _____ State

The Calendar said:

"CALL IT OFF"

MIDOL

said: "LET THEM COME"

DO you still let pain take precedence to pleasure certain days each month? If you do, you should know doctors have discovered severe or prolonged periodic functional pain is not natural to most women —and that thousands of women have discovered it is not necessary. For unless there is some organic disorder demanding a physician's or surgeon's attention, Midol helps most women who try it.

Why not give Midol a chance to help you — to render dreaded days as carefree as others? Midol is made for this purpose. It acts quickly, and in all but unusual instances brings relief. A few Midol tablets should see you comfortably through your worst day. Your druggist has Midol in convenient purse-size tins.

ON THE COUNTER AT DRUGSTORES

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Adventure's End (Universal)	2★
Adventurous Blonde (Warners)	2½★
Alcatraz Island (Warners)	2½★
Ali Baba Goes to Town (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Annapolis Salute (RKO)	2★
Another Dawn (Warners)	2½★
*Arsene Lupin Returns (M-G-M)	2★
Artists and Models (Paramount)	3★
The Awful Truth (Columbia)	4★
Back in Circulation (Warners)	2★
Bad Guy (M-G-M)	2★
The Bad Man of Brimstone (M-G-M)	2½★
The Barrier (Paramount)	1★
Beg, Borrow or Steal (M-G-M)	2½★
Behind the Mike (Universal)	2½★
Big City (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Town Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Blonde Trouble (Paramount)	2½★
Blossoms on Broadway (Paramount)	1★
Boots and Saddles (Republic)	2½★
Boss of Lonely Valley (Universal)	2★
Breakfast for Two (RKO)	2★
A Bride for Henry (Monogram)	1★
The Bride Wore Red (M-G-M)	1★
Broadway Melody of 1938 (M-G-M)	3★
The Buccaneer (Paramount)	3½★
Bulldog Drummond at Bay (Republic)	1½★
Bulldog Drummond Comes Back (Paramount)	1★
Bulldog Drummond's Revenge (Paramount)	2½★
Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Charlie Chan on Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	2★
*Checkers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Colorado Kid (Republic)	2★
Confession (Warners)	2★
Conquest (M-G-M)	4★
Counsel for Crime (Columbia)	2★
Courage of the West (Universal)	1½★
Crashing Hollywood (RKO)	2½★
Criminals of the Air (Columbia)	2★
A Damsel in Distress (RKO)	3★
Dance, Charlie, Dance (Warners)	2★
Danger—Love at Work (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Dangerously Yours (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Danger Patrol (RKO)	2★
Dark Journey (United Artists)	3★
Daughter of Shanghai (Paramount)	2½★
Dead End (Samuel Goldwyn)	4★
Double Wedding (M-G-M)	2★
*Every Day's A Holiday (Paramount)	3★
*Everybody Sing (M-G-M)	3★
Escape by Night (Republic)	1½★
Ebb-Tide (Paramount)	3★
52nd Street (Walter Wanger)	2★
Fight For Your Lady (RKO)	2★
The Firefly (M-G-M)	3★
First Lady (Warners)	3★
Fit for a King (RKO)	2★
Flight from Glory (RKO)	2★
Footloose Heiress (Warners)	1★
Forty-Five Fathers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Forty Naughty Girls (RKO)	2★
Frame-Up (Columbia)	2★
The Game that Kills (Columbia)	2★
Gold Is Where You Find It (Warners)	2★
The Gold Racket (Grand National)	2★
The Goldwyn Follies (Samuel Goldwyn)	3★
The Great Garrick (Warners)	3★
Happy Landing (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Headin' East (Columbia)	2★
Heidi (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Here's Flash Casey (Grand National)	2★
High Wide and Handsome (Paramount)	3½★
Hitting a New High (RKO)	2★
Hold 'Em Navy (Paramount)	2★
Hollywood Hotel (Warner)	3★
Hot Water (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Hurricane (Samuel Goldwyn)	3½★
Idol of the Crowds (Universal)	2★
I'll Take Romance (Columbia)	3★
I Met My Love Again (Walter Wanger)	3★
In Old Chicago (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
It Can't Last Forever (Columbia)	1½★
It Happened in Hollywood (Columbia)	2½★
It's All Yours (Columbia)	2★
It's Love I'm After (Warners)	4★
King Solomon's Mines (GB)	2★
Lady, Behave (Republic)	2★
The Lady Escapes (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
*The Lady Fights Back (Universal)	1★
Lancer Spy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Last Gangster (M-G-M)	3★
Life Begins in College (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Live, Love and Learn (M-G-M)	3★
Look Out, Mr. Moto (20th Century-Fox)	1★
The Life of Emile Zola (Warners)	4★
The Life of the Party (RKO)	1★
Last Horizon (Columbia)	4★
Love and Hisses (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Love Is on the Air (Warners)	2★
Love Is A Headache (M-G-M)	2½★
Love Takes Flight (Grand National)	1½★
Love On A Budget (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Love on Toast (Paramount)	2★
Love Under Fire (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Madam X (M-G-M)	1½★
Make a Wish (RKO)	2½★
Mannequin (M-G-M)	3★
Man-Proof (M-G-M)	2½★
Married Before Breakfast (M-G-M)	2½★
Mayerling (Nero)	4★
Merry-Go-Round of 1938 (Universal)	2★
Missing Witnesses (Warners)	2★
Murder in Greenwich Village (Columbia)	1★
Murder on Diamond Row (London Films)	2½★
Music for Madame (RKO)	2★
Navy Blue and Gold (M-G-M)	3★
New Faces of 1937 (RKO)	3★
Night Club Scandal (Paramount)	2★
Non-Stop New York (GB)	2★
Nothing Sacred (Selznick-International)	3★
One Mile from Heaven (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
On Again—Off Again (RKO)	1★
100 Men and a Girl (Universal)	4★
On Such a Night (Paramount)	1★
Over the Goal (Warners)	1★
Paid to Dance (Columbia)	1★
Paradise For Three (M-G-M)	2★
Partners in Crime (Paramount)	1★
*Penrod And His Twin Brother (Warners)	2★
The Perfect Specimen (Warners)	3★
Prescription for Romance (Universal)	1★
Portia on Trial (Republic)	3★
Prisoner of Zenda (Selznick-International)	4★
Reported Missing (Universal)	2★
Renfrew of the Royal Mounted (Grand National)	2★
Rosalie (M-G-M)	3★
The Road Back (Universal)	3★
Roaring Timber (Columbia)	2★
San Quentin (Warners)	2½★
Saturday's Heroes (RKO)	2½★
Sea Racketeers (Republic)	1½★
Second Honeymoon (20th Century-Fox)	2★
She Asked for It (Paramount)	2★
The Sheik Steps Out (Republic)	2★
Sh! The Octopus (Warners)	2★
She's Got Everything (RKO)	2★
She's No Lady (Paramount)	1★
Snow White and the 7 Dwarfs (Disney)	4★
Small Town Boy (Grand National)	2★
Something to Sing About (Grand National)	2½★
Sophie Lang Goes West (Paramount)	2½★
Souls at Sea (Paramount)	3★
Spy Ring (Universal)	2★
Stage Door (RKO)	4★
Stand-In (Walter Wanger)	3★
Stella Dallas (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
Super Sleuth (RKO)	1★
Strangers on a Honeymoon (GB)	2★
Submarine D-1 (Warners)	2★
Swing It Sailor (Grand National)	1★
Swing Your Lady (Warners)	2½★
Tarzan's Revenge (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Tes Rides with the Boy Scouts (Grand National)	2★
Texas Trail (Paramount)	2★
The Shadow (Columbia)	2★
There Goes The Groom (RKO)	2★
That Certain Woman (Warners)	2★
They Won't Forget (Warners)	3★
Thin Ice (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Think Fast, Mr. Moto (20th Century-Fox)	2★
This Way, Please (Paramount)	1★
Thoroughbreds Don't Cry (M-G-M)	2½★
Thrill of a Lifetime (Paramount)	1★
Thunder Trail (Paramount)	2★
Trapped by G-Men (Columbia)	1½★
True Confession (Paramount)	4★
The Toast of New York (RKO)	3★
Topper (Hal Roach)	3★
Tovarich (Warners)	3★
Under Suspicion (Columbia)	2★
Varsity Show (Warners)	3★
Victoria the Great (RKO)	4★
Vogues of 1938 (Walter Wanger)	3★
Wee Willie Winkie (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Wells Fargo (Paramount)	3★
West of Shanghai (Warners)	1½★
The Westland Case (Universal)	2★
White Bondage (Warners)	1★
Wife, Doctor and Nurse (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Wild and Woolly (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Wild Money (Paramount)	1★
Wine, Women and Horses (Warners)	1★
Wise Girl (RKO)	3★
*A Yank at Oxford (M-G-M)	3★
You're A Sweetheart (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*You're Only Young Once (M-G-M)	2★
You Can't Have Everything (20th Century-Fox)	3★

Turn to our Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. It's a valuable guide in choosing entertainment. Instead of giving the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authorative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under General Rating, beside each picture. 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. Asterisk denotes that only Modern Screen ratings are given on films not reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

"Dainty Girls Win Out"

says DOROTHY LAMOUR

STAR OF THE PARAMOUNT PRODUCTION "Her Jungle Love"

HOLLYWOOD'S beauty bath makes you sure of daintiness. Lux Toilet Soap's ACTIVE lather carries away from the pores stale perspiration, every trace of dust and dirt. Other lovely screen stars such as Bette Davis, Irene Dunne, Joan Blondell tell you that they use Lux Toilet Soap as a bath soap, too, because it leaves skin smooth and fragrant. You'll love this Hollywood way of insuring daintiness!

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

"STEP ALONG MISTER!"

BEEMAN'S PEPSIN GUM

"DON'T rush me, woman! I'm in no party mood—but I'll brighten up in a hurry if you'll share that package of Beeman's! You know that flavor's a real joy reviver. It's got a frisky freshness, a tingly tang—in short, it's great.

If you don't know, the package is sealed airtight to keep all that luscious freshness inside. I'll stop on the way. We need a fresh package."

Beeman's
AIDS DIGESTION...

BLUFFS THAT WORKED

(Continued from page 49)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In another city, she said Paramount had signed her. In still a third city, she said she was under contract to Universal.

The truth was that, although she had been tested, no company had signed her.

But motion picture executives always read such items carefully. They began to ask, "Who is this Sonja Henie?"

The final stunt was pulled just before Sonja reached the coast. At the Metro publicity office, they received a telegram ordering them to meet Sonja Henie with photographers. "She is coming to work for us," the telegram said.

Naturally they sent photographers, and some of the photographs got into the newspapers. By the time they discovered that the telegram had not been authorized by the New York office, Hollywood was beginning to be Henie-conscious. Thus when she staged her famous exhibition at the Polar Ice Palace, executives from every major company attended.

James Cagney once succeeded in bluffing his own movie company. It was back in 1932, and Jimmy, engaged in one of his periodic fights, was demanding more money.

The studio refused to consider giving Jimmy any kind of a raise. Finally he quit work.

"I don't have to remain an actor," he said. "All my life I've been interested in medicine. I'm going to study at Columbia University, and give up my screen career entirely. My wife approves of my plan."

If Jimmy had threatened to go to another movie company and sell his services, there were legal steps that might have been taken. But if he was going to become a doctor, no contract could stop him.

Of course the studio knew it might all be a bluff, but on the other hand, if Jimmy was not faking, they would lose one of their most valuable properties. In the end, Jimmy got pretty nearly everything for which he asked.

After he and Warners' had patched up their difficulties, reporters asked him if he had really been serious about his plan to become a physician. Jimmy grinned.

"No," he said, "that was just a gag."

While Nelson Eddy has never had to bluff in his motion picture career, he fibbed about his experience when he was trying to get a job on a newspaper in Philadelphia. Before he went to see the editors he had never written a line. But he persuaded them to give him a job in the advertising department by saying that he was an advertising man. From that he advanced to reporter, to rewrite man and finally to the copy desk by pretending that he could do all these things, then taking the time to learn how in order to back up his bluff.

Necessity is the mother of most hoaxes, and that was the case with W. C. Fields. Shortly after the Spanish American War, he was forced to accept a vaudeville engagement in Spain, and due to the resentment toward Americans at that time, he was billed as an Englishman. Since he was doing a pantomime act, it was not necessary for him to speak on the stage. For about three months he was successful at this bluff until he gave vent to some typical Fieldsian dialogue backstage, was overheard by a Spaniard and was fired.

Tyrone Power and Joseph Schildkraut look with equal admiration on Norma Shearer's get-up as "Marie Antoinette."

Anna May Wong confides something to Akim Tamiroff in her native Chinese—but it's still her secret.

EARLY IN her career Ginger Rogers tried a bluff that definitely did not work. While she was in New York, playing a leading role in "Girl Crazy," she was also making films for an eastern motion picture studio. Hoping that she could persuade the motion picture executives to give her more money and better roles in pictures, she stalked up to an executive of the company, said she wasn't getting as much money from the studio as she was from the musical comedy contract, and demanded her release. To her amazement, the official gave her the release.

"That incident taught me a lesson," Ginger said, laughing, "about the technique of a bluff."

The most successful practical joke Ginger ever tried was the famous "Lady Ainsley" hoax, perpetrated at the time when Producer Pandro Berman was having great difficulty finding the right actress to play Elizabeth in "Mary of Scotland."

One day Director John Ford, who was in on the hoax, said to Producer Pan Berman, "I've just heard that Lady Ainsley, the famous English actress, is in town. She has played Elizabeth hundreds of times on the stage—in fact, she's a direct descendant of the Queen. Why don't you get her to take a test?"

Pan Berman authorized a test of Lady Ainsley.

A few days later, when he saw the test, he was electrified. The girl who appeared as Queen Elizabeth, her hair piled high on her head, her face vicious with cruelty and lust for power, was just the actress he had been searching for.

"Send for her," he said. "She's marvelous!"

Director Ford shrugged his shoulders and intimated that there might be difficulties. Lady Ainsley was just like Katharine Cornell in her aversion toward making pictures.

For a week, Berman frantically sought to contact Lady Ainsley. Then one day a newspaper item reported, "What red-haired star is playing a gigantic practical joke on what producer by posing as a great foreign actress who doesn't exist?"

Berman got the point at once. But though Ginger's bluff was called, she had attained her secret objective. For a long time she had been trying to persuade her studio that she could play dramatic roles. It took the great Lady Ainsley hoax to make her company realize that Ginger was more than just a foil for Fred Astaire.

Gerald Wright at 4 months

Somebody's coming with a bowl and a spoon. Jerry knows what that means—he's been having Clapp's Baby Cereal for a month. He's one of the small citizens of a New Jersey community who is contributing pictures and growth records to a study of infant feeding. Clapp's Strained Vegetables will go on his diet list soon.

Gerald Wright at 8 months

Jerry's mother doesn't have a worry except that his blond hair won't lie down. For he's growing steadily and putting on some good solid pounds. Besides Clapp's Vegetables, Jerry has been having Clapp's Strained Soups and Strained Fruits lately. Smooth, finely strained, but not too liquid—these foods have the exact texture that doctors approve.

Gerald's husky at 11 months

Vitamin-rich Clapp's Foods, pressure-cooked to hold in food value, have built Jerry into a hefty little rascal, weighing 23 pounds. His steady progress is typical of all the Clapp-fed babies in the test. And so is his freedom from food dislikes. Clapp's Foods really do taste better!

how he got his head start....

16 Varieties of Clapp's Strained Baby Foods—Baby Soup Strained or Unstrained, Vegetable Soup, Beef Broth, Liver Soup; Apricots, Prunes, Apple Sauce; Tomatoes, Asparagus, Peas, Spinach, Beets, Carrots, Green Beans; Baby Cereal.

Free Booklet! Photographs and records of 12 Clapp-fed babies. Valuable diet facts. Write to Harold H. Clapp, Inc., Dept. QSY, 777 Mount Read Blvd., Rochester, N. Y.

NEW!... for older babies
Clapp's Chopped Foods

Doctors asked for them...even-textured foods with all the advantages of Clapp's Strained Foods, but more coarsely divided. At dealers' now—remember them when your baby outgrows Clapp's Strained Foods.

Clapp's Strained Baby Foods

How to be a Good Homemaker and your Husband's Pal, too

DON'T work so hard over your home that you're exhausted when your husband wants to go out! Learn the labor-saving ways of doing things and you will be astonished at the time you save.

Imagine a delicious, nourishing food that all your family will enjoy, that costs only 3 cents a portion, and that you can put on the table, piping hot, in less than ten minutes! That's Franco-American — America's largest selling ready-cooked spaghetti.

Give it to the children for lunch, with milk and fruit. It will keep them going strong all afternoon. Other days for dinner serve Franco-American Spaghetti as a main dish, or use it to make left-overs go further. This delicious spaghetti combines wonderfully with other foods, because of its eleven-ingredient sauce with its unforgettable and savory flavor.

Franco-American is entirely different from ordinary ready-cooked spaghetti. Get some at your grocer's today! Serve your family delicious meals and have time for your husband, too!

Franco-American
SPAGHETTI
Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

THE FRANCO-AMERICAN FOOD COMPANY, Dept. 65
Camden, New Jersey. Please send me your free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."

Name (print)_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

STRANGER THAN FICTION

(Continued from page 47)

the unsuspecting Alan and said, "You! Come in here!" Alan, perplexed, went in. The producer asked him what he had "done." Alan said, with emphasis, "Plenty." The producer said, "And just what parts have you played?" "Blimey," thought Alan, "he takes me for an actor!" Alan thought then, amused, but always quick on the uptake, of parts he had seen on the stage and thought he might have been able to do. He named three or four of them, with glib assurance. The producer looked skeptical but needed a man of Alan's type and hired him!

When the friend arrived Alan was awaiting him outside in the rain. "Why didn't you go in out of the rain?" asked the friend. "Oh," said Alan easily, "I went inside!" Then he told what had happened. The friend staggered momentarily and said, "That's the billet I was after!" Alan offered to go back and fix things but the friend would have none of it. "You go ahead and do it," he said sincerely.

THE play was "The Cinderella Man." Alan, in the lead role, toured England with the third company. He just memorized his lines and spoke them, he says, nothing more. He hadn't the foggiest notion how to act. At the end of their first performance at some English watering place, the cast, as is customary, went to a pub to celebrate. Alan, still in funds, ordered brandies and sodas. The rest of the company ordered beers.

They cast wistful eyes at Alan's luxury. He invited them to join him and stood treat to brandies and sodas. In return for his hospitality they broke the ice and told him he had given the worst performance they had ever seen in all their years of trouping. It was not, they said, humanly possible to act worse than he did. His performance, they elaborated, had left them stunned. They offered to teach him how to act. They did. They taught him how to use his hands, gesture, raise his eye-brows, modulate his voice. They also taught him what they called, "The dirty business of acting." They invented bits of business for their own parts which were calculated to kill his effects. He, in turn, thought up bits of business that would kill their effects. This game was the making of an actor.

In 1923 he came to America. No work. Money dwindled, and then was not. That was the four month period which Alan Mowbray spent sleeping on a bench in Central Park.

Sitting, the other day, in his cedar-panelled library in Beverly Hills, comfortable in deep red leather chairs, the red-hearted fire roaring on the hearth, his small daughter twined about him, Alan said, briefly, "I learned a lot. Makeshifts. Devices. I didn't have a nickel. Not one. Now and again I'd meet a friend and pull the well known, 'Say, old man, I want to phone. Lend me a nickel, will you? No change, y'know.' I learned how to eat without a nickel. I'd go, for instance, to the Automat in New York. No one pays much attention to you in the Automat. I found that customers always got two rolls and a pat of butter with their dinners and that, in nine cases out of ten, they only ate one of the two rolls. It was a simple matter to wander about and with fair surreptitiousness to slip a couple of rolls into my pocket. There was always a tomato catsup bottle handy. Water was free. I'd take a catsup bottle, pour a little catsup into a paper cup of water, and there I'd be—with a reasonably decent cup of tomato soup and a roll!

"Now and again I'd run into an old friend and be invited to a cocktail party or something. I managed to maintain a fairly well groomed appearance. I had a friend who had an office down town. He never got to his office until late. I'd get there early. I'd use his razor, have a wash, comb my hair. I'd also rinse out my 'other shirt' and dangle it over the window ledge to dry. And there I'd be. I'd go to the party. They were, unfortunately, those parties rather short on eats and long on drinks. I didn't dare take anything to drink on my empty stomach. But I'd go and, on more than one occasion, a swank limousine would drop me at the gates of Central Park. I'd say, breezily, that I always liked 'a turn in the Park before turning in!'

WHILE I was 'in residence' in the Park I had another study in irony, my portrait painted! My friend, the Countess Wenner, did it. When it was eventually hung, it hung between the portraits of two ex-kings! The Countess never suspected my predicament. She also did a portrait of my dog, Pal. Pal shared all of the vicissitudes of my life with me. It was while I was in New York that I wrote 'Dinner Is Served.' I wrote it to keep myself awake until it was time to go around to the Hippodrome Grill where I collected meat scraps for my dog. We shared those meat scraps, Pal and I. That is his portrait over the fire there. He died a year and a half ago, out here." "And when he died," small "P.M." chimed in, "Daddy started to cry. . . ." Alan, unashamed, did not deny it.

"I had a couple of adventures," Alan went on. "One night it was raining. I was sitting under a heavy tree. You acquire a fine flair for self protection when you are without protection of any kind. As I sat there an ancient crone came and huddled there by me. She was the type you read about. She rather resembled May Robson in an Apple Annie make-up. She peered at me, without interest, and said, 'Life's lousy, ain't it, young man?' I said, 'For some of us, yes.' You can't lie to a soul like that. They are too near the terrible truth of some things. I didn't ask her to 'tell me her story.' I didn't need to. She didn't ask me mine. She didn't need to. God knows, she had rubbed elbows with down-and-outers these many years, no doubt.

"One night a tough looking chap sat down beside me. He began to talk to me, without glancing at me, without moving his mouth at all. He said, 'Better scram. They're after you. If you don't scram now you won't live to regret it.' I answered, also without moving my mouth, 'What would anyone be after me for, in God's name?' He said, 'You look pretty nippy. They think you've got something. They've got a rod!' I said, 'Then they're wrong. I haven't got a sou in the world nor a meal in my belly. Let 'em try it!' I was sore and bitter and discouraged. The one thing I couldn't do was run. The rod was pushed into me. I hauled off and let the bloke have it. I knocked him cold, took his rod away from him and beat it. There it is up there, a little old '22, the only fire-arm I've ever owned since I came out of the War.

"Of the friends I ran into during those four months, not one ever suspected my plight. They never have. I've never told this part of my life before. They will learn it now, if they read this, for the first time.

"At the end of the four months, and pretty near at the end of me, I guess, I got a job with the Boston Repertory Theatre.

"They advanced me some money and I took the train for Boston. En route I ordered steak and potatoes and onions and coffee and pie. When I arrived in Boston I was carried off the train. They called a doctor and he said to me, 'What's the matter with you? What have you been doing to yourself?' 'Nothing,' I said. 'Come, let's have the truth,' he ordered, 'you're starved, aren't you?' I admitted the diagnosis then and he told me that I had just about committed suicide. My stomach had shrunk to the size of a walnut. I should have had a couple of pellets of bread soaked in consomme and very few of those! The steak and fixin's about fixed me.

"After that, things went all right. 'The Amorous Antic' was my first Broadway show, with Phoebe Foster and Frank Morgan. I toured with the Theatre Guild in 'The Apple Cart,' 'The Doctor's Dilemma' and 'The Second Man.'

"I came to Hollywood in Shaw's 'The Apple Cart,' which was, by the way, so similar in theme to the Simpson-ex-King case as to be a deft prophesy of things to come. I played the King of England in the stage play and then went to the part of George Washington in 'Alexander Hamilton,' the film starring George Arliss. From the King of England to the first President of the United States was what might be termed a political manoeuver without precedent.

"And I like Hollywood. It satisfies me, thus far. When the children are grown I may shy off and try something else, far afield. I have the usual actor's ambition to direct one of these days. It's been said so often I hate to say it, but there it is. They used to say that at Shepherd's Hotel in Cairo you could meet the whole world. Now that is true of only one place, Hollywood. It's exciting here because exciting people come here. The work is fun. The money is fun. I have my wife and home and youngsters. They're fun, too.

"My experiences," said Alan Mowbray, "have taught me one thing. It's this: I look at a mountain as a mountain and at a molehill as a molehill."

And these, I think, are about the wisest words I have ever heard. From about the wisest man I've ever met. A man who can mix the incredible ingredients of life with the mixing spoon of tolerance; who can give an epitaph in one breath and sing a bawdy ditty in the next. I give you Alan Mowbray.

Papa Allan Jones even passed the cigars out in the stable when his son and heir was born.

MARVELOUS FOR COMPLEXIONS, TOO!

You'll want to use this pure, creamy-white soap for both face and bath.

Cashmere Bouquet's lather is so gentle and caressing. Yet it removes dirt and cosmetics so thoroughly, leaving your skin clearer, softer... more radiant and alluring!

NOW ONLY 10¢
at drug, department, ten-cent stores

TO KEEP FRAGRANTLY DAINTY—BATHE WITH PERFUMED

CASHMERE BOUQUET SOAP

LIGHT-PROOF FACE POWDER

The make-up improvement that has proved a sensation

Try Luxor Powder. It's* light-proof. *Your face won't shine. Try it! We will send you a box for a DIME.

● At parties, do you instinctively avoid certain lights that play havoc with your complexion? All that trouble with fickle make-up will be overcome when you finish with powder whose particles do not glisten in every strong light.

Seeing is believing

With light-proof powder, your complexion will not constantly be light-struck. In any light. Day or night. Nor will you have all that worry over shine.

We will send you a box of Luxor for ten cents. Or you can buy a large box anywhere without waiting, and have your money back if it doesn't please.

Test it in all lights, under all conditions. See how it improves your appearance. See the lovely softness and absence of shine. See how such powder subdues those high lights of cheekbones and chin, and nose.

A large box of Luxor light-proof powder is 55c at drug and department stores; 10c sizes at the five-and-ten stores . . . Or mail coupon below enclosing a silver dime.

LUXOR, Ltd. M. M. 5-38
Chicago

Send me a trial box of Luxor light-proof powder, postpaid. I enclose 10c (silver dime).

☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Rose Rachel
☐ Rachel No. 2 ☐ Brunette

Name .....

St. & No. .....

P. O. ..... State .....

(This offer not good in Canada)

BETWEEN YOU

$5.00 Prize Letter

Always a Playboy?

It was with considerable irritation that I listened to Jimmy Fidler holding forth the other night on Montgomery's grave error in playing in "Night Must Fall." It seems that a dear old lady wrote and said she felt just as if a member of her own family had taken to crime.

Mr. Fidler feels that an actor should stick to his type. The fact that an actor who sticks to his type is not an actor, seems to have escaped him. Why should Robert Montgomery continue to play in one idiotic picture after another, simply because he was cast in them in the first place?

Fredric March has played in comedy, in tragedy, even appeared as Mr. Hyde, and no one complained. Spencer Tracy plays an endless variety of roles, and no one is disappointed. Why, then, should Robert Montgomery, who has proved himself the equal of either, be doomed to an infinity of bedroom farces?

Who can deny that Charlie Ruggles' part of the reporter in "Exclusive" is miles above anything else he has done? Must we see him in nutty comedy for the rest of his career because he started as a nutty comedian?

I'm quite sure that for every old lady who has deserted him, Robert Montgomery has two astounded and admiring followers. —Mrs. N. H. Stratten, Winnipeg, Can.

$2.00 Prize Poem

Ode To The Villain

Some of my pals pray for Gable,
And some for a man like Tyrone.
But I'll take the villains just any old day,
And let all the heroes alone.

When six-shooters barked and the bandits
Were robbing the pony express,
And they wanted a blackguard to handle the job—
Could Lloyd Nolan do it? Why, yes!

If it's dashing and swashbuckling sword play,
There must be a dastardly foe.
Give me Doug as a gay and adventurous rogue,
(That would be Fairbanks, Jr. you know.)

If it's suave and sophisticate villainy
That's my fancy in crime for the nonce,
Basil Rathbone I'll try as a slithering spy,
He tops 'em in cool nonchalance.

There are others I really should mention—
Alan Baxter, his gang and a gat;
Raymond Massey, that sneering and sinister plotter,
And several others like that.
It's agreed that all pictures have villains,
And I like 'em, so what can I lose?
Rest assured, oh you rascally actors, from me
You'll get bouquets of orchids, not boos.
—Betty D. Frye, Santa Ana, Cal.

Her friends pray for Tyrone and Gable, but one gal prefers the good old-fashioned villain any day.

$2.00 Prize Letter

Candid Shots

Call it "high treason," hang me for a traitor, but I must, I simply must know the why and wherefore, thusly:

Why do the stars who are so widely bally-hooed as gorgeous, glamorous, romantic, and super-marvelous consent to pose for informal shots, on the set, at a preview, at a racetrack, restaurant, or party? Such pictures always have a way of appearing in all the fan magazines, and greatly disillusion the dear public who were justly led to believe all is as appears in the silver flickers.

For illustration, we have Carole Lombard (very "high treason," this) in an off shot, looking anything but glamorous, rather skinny and colorless, not at all La Lombard of our fond dreams; Kay Francis, in an unguarded moment, looking all of at least forty years old, plus one double chin; Robert Taylor, a very much unshaven young man (perhaps he's just growing said stubble for his next picture, eh?), not at all romantic; not to mention his constant gal friend, Barbara Stanwyck, looking for all the world like a slightly dowdy school marm; Claudette Colbert, oh, so peaked looking, a small pinched smile on her face, not the pert, comely Claudette of "I Met Him in Paris."

Oh, I could go on and on. Really, the only one I recognize at all is good old homely Spencer Tracy—he at least looks the same in any language.—Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, Rochester, N. Y.

$1.00 Prize Letter

À la Natural

Now I'm not one of these sticklers for reality so don't get me wrong. I'm a dizzy young thing, chock full of romantic notions, and nothing thrills me so much as a shiek making violent love to a divinely beautiful maiden in the heart of the desert to the accompaniment of dreamy music. But, I say, give us more girls like Carole Lombard who seemingly doesn't give a darn

'N' ME

TRY YOUR LUCK AT WINNING A CASH PRIZE. WHAT DO YOU HAVE TO SAY ABOUT THE STARS AND THE MOVIES YOU SEE?

WRITE A LETTER—
WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

Another fan resents the candid camera, whose relentless frankness catches the stars in unflattering poses.

how she looks but instead concentrates on giving us entertainment with a capital E. You've succeeded, Carole, and how.

Take Susie Glutz, for example. She goes to bed and tosses and tumbles half the night worrying over the unpaid mortgage, but the next morning up she jumps bright as a dewdrop, hair beautifully coiffured and not a wrinkle in her satin pajamas. Now I ask you is that natural? Of course not, and it simply spoils the picture for me. No one is beautiful all the time and when the star is rumpled and mussed, even as you and I, she seems more warm and human. The picture becomes a reality. We really live it, instead of feeling that it's "just another picture."

Bouquets to Carole Lombard for her naturalness. Ditto for Ann Sothern and Sylvia Sidney.—Peggy Ruff, Hendersonville, N. C.

$1.00 Prize Letter

Stars as People

According to a recent report made by a Hollywood commentator, the movie executives and directors have put a ban on all publicity dealing with the home life of movie stars.

All I can say is that said executives and directors certainly must underrate the intelligence of the average theatre-goer. A person who is ballyhooed as a lover of everything except a home and family is soon looked upon as a freak.

The lives of glamor girls and matinee idols hardly belong to themselves. They must have publicity to help their star to soar—in fact, to earn a living. Why not, then, have the simple stories that tell of

(Continued on page 108)

LIVE A COLORFUL LIFE ON 15¢

Have you had the fun and adventure of changing drab frocks to gay ones, making lingerie sparkle? Then hurry out for Rit—its amazing new formula contains "neomerpin"... makes cloth soak up color evenly, beautifully, without boiling. You'll find dozens of uses for Rit, all so easy you'll "DYE" LAUGHING!

RIT TINTS & DYES

Never say "Dye"—say RIT!

MY DENTIST TOLD ME THAT HEALTHY GUMS MEAN BRIGHTER TEETH! FORHAN'S AND MASSAGE HELP ME KEEP MY GUMS HEALTHY!

Even my dentist was delighted at the improvement in my teeth and my gums!

Forhan's gum massage makes teeth brighter and helps make gums healthy. For a trial tube, send 10¢ to Forhan's, Dept. 519, New Brunswick, N. J.

Forhan's DOES BOTH JOBS
CLEANS TEETH · AIDS GUMS

SMALL TOWN GIRL

(Continued from page 45)

be," she snapped. "After all, if chance circumstances hadn't taken me away from Fargo eight years ago, that's exactly the life I'd be leading. Yes, and I'd be darned happy in it, too. As it is, I'm more than a little homesick for it all."

"One of Hollywood's chief glamor girls homesick for the prairie? Don't be silly! Besides, you never would have stayed there with your ambitions!"

It was not her ambitions that took her away from Fargo in the first place, Virginia insisted. She did not have any at that time, at least not for the stage or screen They would not even let her play in the high school dramatic productions, so little did they think of her talents, if any, and she thought less. It was simply a case of the family moving, and daughter Virginia with it. The picture career was accidental, something that just happened.

Virginia, then Virginia Briggs, the most beautiful girl in town, was an eighteen year old graduate of Fargo High School when that well-known depression caught up with her father, Earl F. Briggs, a prominent insurance broker. Not that the family finances were pinched; just that California seemed a better field for his business. And so they moved, bag and baggage, to Los Angeles where Virginia was to enter the University of California at Los Angeles. That was before the school moved to its present elaborate site in Westwood.

She had matriculated, in fact, and was being given a flattering rush by campus sororities when the new world of the screen opened up. Director Harry Beaudine happened to see her on the street, asked her if she worked in pictures. No. Did she want to? Maybe. The upshot was she signed a personal contract with him at $25 a week.

Her first role was as an extra in a picture starring Madge Bellamy. Virginia remembers meeting another blonde extra in that picture. Her name was Jean Harlow. After that, came a bit part in a Helen Twelvetrees story, and then Paramount, at Beaudine's urging, gave her a singing test. Result, a contract and $75 a week, of which she received one third. She played a lady-in-waiting in Chevalier's "The Love Parade." But chiefly, she says, she was waiting for that $25 a week contract to expire!

MEANTIME, John Harkrider was scouting for beauties for Sam Goldwyn's "Whoopee" with Eddie Cantor. He was scenic designer for Ziegfeld and was on loan to Goldwyn. He considers Virginia the loveliest of all the girls he signed for the picture.

When she was free to make a new contract, Harkrider was back in New York. Virginia wrote him, received a bid, at $90 a week, to be a Ziegfeld beauty in "Smiles" on Broadway, neatly reversing the Broadway to Hollywood custom. After two shows in New York, she returned to Hollywood and her present M-G-M contract which has built her from comparative obscurity to starring material.

In 1932 she married the late John Gilbert, divorcing him two years later after the birth of her daughter, Susan Ann.

Time passed and Virginia's career continued to skyrocket. Susan Ann grew from a chubby infant into a charming little girl and movie goers became increasingly conscious of the golden beauty which was Virginia's. During those years she went about, of course, but her name was never linked seriously with any man's.

Then came "Bad Man of Brimstone." J. Walter Ruben was assigned to direct this opus and Virginia got the feminine lead. She'd known Ruben for a number of years—casually. They'd been to some of the same parties, had seen each other in night clubs, had danced together and talked about the weather and the picture business.

Working together did something to both of them. Casual acquaintanceship ripened into friendship which, in turn, became a great deal more. Thus it was that love came a second time to Virginia Bruce. You read about her marriage to Ruben. It was one of the most beautiful ceremonies Hollywood has ever witnessed, with little Susan Ann serving as flower girl. It is a marriage based on the sound foundation of mutual respect and friendship as well as mutual affection. It is a marriage which means complete happiness to Virginia.

But it is a different sort of happiness from that which she knew back in the small town of her birth. And she is well aware of that difference.

"You said something about life in Fargo being amusing," Virginia went on. "It would have been for me, but not in the patronizing way you implied. Rather, it would have been fun. Here's why. Here's what would have happened to me if I had stayed there.

TO begin with, I probably would have married, after a year or so at the university," Virginia picked up the story. "His name probably would have been John. My beaus always seemed to have that name, which simplified things in one way. He might have worked in a bank and by this time might be a junior vice-president getting a salary—and quite a handsome one, too, of about $300 a month.

A dark horse in the race for the part of the sister in "Holiday," Doris Nolan got the job.

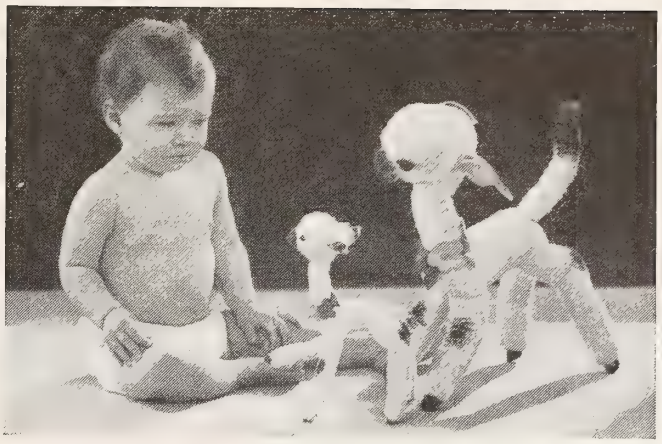
"Before I married, in church with white satin, veil, and all the trimmings, I would have been guest of honor at all sorts of hen parties. Kitchen showers, handkerchief showers, odds and ends showers. My engagement would have been announced at a tea.

"After a honeymoon, probably in the Twin Cities (Minneapolis and St. Paul) or Chicago, we would have taken a house on Eighth or Ninth Street, buying it on time. It probably would have been of red brick and not very handsome, architecturally speaking, but sturdily built to keep out the winter cold. Two-story, it might have had seven or eight rooms, a good sized yard, flowers, shrubs and vines on the house. And most certainly it would have had sliding doors on the garage in back.

"In the basement would be a large cool room called the fruit cellar, where jams, preserves, apples and potatoes were stored. The laundry might have been in the basement or on the back porch and the clothesline would be strung between two wooden poles just close enough to the garage to get the clothes dirty if a stiff breeze came up! John would keep promising to move them and never get around to it. So much for the house.

"We would have had what we call 'the girl.' Her duties encompass everything from cooking, housework and laundry to helping look after the children, and it would never enter her head to expect otherwise. She'd live in the house with us, of course, and her salary would be around twenty-five dollars a month. She could bake marvelous cakes and her chocolate icing would be divine.

"The week would be blocked out and it would take a major catastrophe to deviate from washing on Monday, ironing on Tuesday, mending on Wednesday, day off on Thursday, cleaning on Friday and baking on Saturday.



"Week days John would come home for lunch at 12:30 and dinner would be at 6:30. On Sundays dinner would be at 2 o'clock with a roast large enough so Monday's dinner could come out of it, potatoes, two vegetables, a salad and cake. Sunday evenings we'd fix a snack in the kitchen.

"We probably would have three children, one boy named after John's father, one after mine, and a girl whose name would be wholly of my own choosing. They'd have the usual childhood diseases but the family doctor could handle everything nicely. If it was contagious, the children not affected probably would be sent to their grandmother's to stay until the quarantine was lifted.

"John would be at business all day, so I would find ways to occupy my time. Since I can play the piano fairly well, I would have joined the Fine Arts Club and accompanied the soloists. Occasionally I might be asked for a vocal solo myself.

"I would have joined the Women's Club and given papers on current topics when my turn came around. I would have been on committees to sell tickets to lectures by visiting notables. I would have made it a point to develop such small talents as I had for drawing, painting and singing. As it is, my singing is the only thing I've had time to cultivate.

I WOULD have belonged to a foursome or an eightsome which met once a week at our respective homes for bridge in the afternoon, and I'd have racked my brain, every time it was my turn, to figure out something novel to serve for refreshments that were limited to two dishes. We probably would have played for a quarter on the corner, and my winnings would go in a cloisonne box on my dresser for John's Christmas present.

• "You poor baby lamb! Still got on long woolen underwear! And your mother says she can't help it, you have to wear it. Dear—dear! You'd think you were a black sheep, the way they treat you!"

• "Wait—see that beautiful woman over there in the apron? Well, that's my mother! You only have to mention in her hearing that you're somewhat hot and sticky, and she reaches for the Johnson's Baby Powder..."

• "Next thing you know, something soft and downy goes tickle-tickle down your back—whee-ee! After that, you can say phooey to rashes and chafes and prickly heat, and play Run, Sheep, Run with the best of them!"

• "Did you ever notice how smooth Johnson's Baby Powder is? That must be why it keeps my skin just perfect!" Perfect skin condition is a baby's best protection against skin infections, Mothers. So guard your baby's skin with Johnson's Baby Powder, the kind that's made of finest imported talc—no orris-root... Also important for the bath-basket: Johnson's Baby Soap and Baby Cream, and Baby Oil for tiny babies...safe, soothing, stainless, and it cannot turn rancid.

Johnson & Johnson
NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

COPYRIGHT, 1936, JOHNSON & JOHNSON

Want a lipstick that's permanent?

...keeps your lips soft too?

Then here is the lipstick for you . . . The color stays on, yet this new kind of lipstick keeps your lips smooth, youthfully moist.

ROMANTIC CALIFORNIA COLORS

WINE is a dark vibrant color for brunettes with dark skin. SPANISH is a daring red styled for the complexion of a flashing senorita. DESERT FLAME is a brilliant youthful color for blondes. CINEMA a new shade styled in Hollywood for wear under artificial light.

Large regular size for 60c at all Drug and Dept. Stores and 25c size at Dime Stores.

DUART lipstick

Alviene SCHOOL OF THE Theatre

(45th Year.) Stage, Talkie, Radio, Graduates: Lee Tracy, Fred Astaire, Una Merkel, Zita Johann, etc. Drama, Dance, Musical Comedy, Teaching, Directing, Personal development. Stock Theatre Training. (Appearances). For catalog, write Sec'y Teller, 66 West 85th St., N. Y.

TEETH Hard TO BRYTEN?

HAVE YOU FAILED to remove ugly stains? Use Iodent No. 2. Specially compounded by a Dentist to safely remove stains from teeth hard-to-bryten. Specially made to polish dull teeth to a beautiful lustre. Made also in No. 1 texture for teeth easy-to-bryten. Try Iodent today! Enjoy its pure, minty flavor.

IODENT

No. 1 FOR TEETH EASY TO BRYTEN TOOTH PASTE also POWDER No. 2 FOR TEETH HARD TO BRYTEN

"I would have bought matched canisters, or embroidered kitchen towels to take to kitchen showers for other brides; and found time to knit a darling sweater or bind a blanket in satin for a baby shower.

"A couple of times a week I might have gone to a matinee movie with my closest girl friend, stopping for a hot fudge sundae afterwards. Clark Gable and Bob Taylor would have thrilled us.

"As far as that goes, the movies would have been our chief diversion in the evening. After the children were put to bed, with 'the girl' left to keep an eye on them, we'd get in the family car (a standard make sedan in the medium price range) and John would drive us to the theatre. If we couldn't find parking space within a few doors, he'd grumble. If a Myrna Loy picture was playing, we'd see it, at John's suggestion, on the opening night.

"Once in awhile we'd play chess at home and raid the ice box for a glass of milk and some sugar cookies before bed. Other nights Joe and Mary Louise would come over for bridge and we'd have a few highballs during the evening. Every so often there would come one of those nights when John or Joe would insist on mixing some newfangled drink they'd heard about. Usually we'd decide it wasn't much good.

"John's boss and his wife would come for dinner on special occasions and I'd pretend it was nothing to get excited about. But I'd plan the menu for days, get my best monogrammed linen out of its sheafs of blue tissue paper, use my sterling given us for a wedding present by John's parents, and spend an hour arranging the flowers.

"We'd join the B. and B. and have a grand time at the two parties a year it gives. If possible, we'd budget a new evening dress for me for each party. I'd put the studs and such in John's shirt and help him tie his tie. We'd probably join the Century Club, too. That's another social club.

"Two or three times a year we might go to Minneapolis for the week-end, crowding it with shows, night clubs and hurried shopping.

"On Sunday we'd play tennis, ride horseback, shoot a game of golf or take the children to the farm of a relative for the day. Each summer we'd take a cottage at Pettibone Lodge at the lakes at Shoreham, Minn.

"As for clothes, I'd have the two new evening dresses, skirts and sweaters, a nice tailored suit, a couple of informal afternoon dresses, a dinner dress and maybe a tea dress. Mornings I would wear cute ginghams. About every five years I'd have a new fur coat, probably pony skin or caracul, or maybe even squirrel.

"Well, there it is. The girl I would have been, the life I would have lived if I had stayed in Fargo. Amusing? What have I got in Hollywood? A successful director-husband, about eight or ten new evening dresses a year, a house with seven bedrooms and five baths, and four servants. I go to movies, play tennis, dress up for dances. I don't have the time I want with Susan Ann; I'm missing half the fun of her growing up because I have to be at the studio during the day.

"I have fame and more money? Granted. But I also have all the nagging worries, the troubles, the twenty-four-hour-a-day fight to keep what I've won!

"Boil it all down to relative values. Then tell me if I'm winner or loser. Show me where I'm any happier than I would have been in Fargo!"

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 74)

Short Story

Six months ago a prominent film star and a handsome leading man were in the middle of a colossal and terrific romance. She sent him a gift, on which was engraved a history of their dates together. Later, the young man shifted to another gal. After a few months he sent her a very novel gift which pleased her immensely, because on it was engraved the history of their dates together.

■ ■ ■

Extra! Bob Taylor goes to a night club alone! The event, which should have been recorded for posterity like the footprints at Grauman's Chinese, occurred two nights before Mr. T. made an appearance on the Jack Benny radio show. The unglamorous facts are that he rehearsed late, and dropped in at Ray Haller's for a night cap before going home. And he went home alone, so it's hardly an item.

Count Sheep

The other day we asked Margot Grahame —who should be an expert on the subject— for advice on the care and maintenance of a good figure. There was nothing personal in the question, for our own figure is perfect, but we thought her words might be something every young girl should know. Said Margot: "Don't exercise at all. I never touch the stuff. Sleep till noon when you can, and when you can't, see that you get to bed early the night before." End of quotation.

Hearts and Flowers dept.: Most consistent romance in town is that of Tyrone Power and Janet Gaynor. He's her steady fella. The Taylor-Stanwyck alliance remains unchanged. You can see her almost every Wednesday evening, sitting in the back of a darkened theatre, watching him rehearse his radio show. Newest romance has Jon Hall and Frances Langford sharing the billing. They've sneak-previewed it at several local night spots, and the reviewers are already calling it a hit.

Polo Fan

First public appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Franchot Tone since he returned from hospitalization in Baltimore was at the preview of "Adventures of Marco Polo." Our spy, who sat next to Miss Crawford, reports she was completely captivated by the activities of Mr. Polo; so much so that she didn't stop her frantic gum-chewing until the picture was over.

■ ■ ■

Now that both Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger are practically single, their romance has advanced beyond the rumor stage. As is the case in most well-known Hollywood romances, both principals are trying their best to keep it a secret. At the "Tom Sawyer" preview, for instance, they pulled a surprise end run on photographers and romped across the goal line (Grauman's entrance) without a single flash bulb near them.

(Continued on page 123)

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

(Continued from page 53)

On the appointed day they stepped out on the dance floor. Somehow, they got through with it. The customers, largely recruited from among their friends and their friends' friends, applauded. Johnson and Murphy had brought them in, so the management was satisfied. And by the end of the six weeks' engagement, they were winning plaudits even from strangers.

To follow their fight for recognition is to follow a monotonous succession of hopes and disappointments, of jobs promised and withdrawn, of engagements filled and not paid for, of money spent to buy new dance routines, of practice to perfect their technique. There was the time when they knew that, unless something broke by the end of the week, Julie would have to go back to Detroit and George to Wall Street. Julie was trying to keep her tears from spotting the lingerie she was packing, when George waltzed in, yelling: "The fort is saved." There was the blessed time when they worked with George Olsen for two solid years.

JULIE soon took over the business end. George was a fiend for work. George was a marvel at thinking up snappy routines. But when some manager, choked to the gills with coin, would pour a hard luck tale into George's ear, George would weep for him. "The guy's in a spot," he'd tell Julie. "We've got to play ball with him." Wise Julie played ball, till George discovered for himself a couple of times, who was in the spot. Thereafter he told the managers: "Go cry on Julie's shoulder. Mine has a headache. He was, and still is, temperamentally incapable of driving a bargain. He wanted to work. Try as he would, he couldn't lash himself into a lather over whether he worked for five dollars or twenty-five.

From the day when he realized that he couldn't bear to have Julie in Florida, with himself in New York, he'd known he wanted her to be his wife. He suspected she knew it too. He hadn't said anything because he was waiting for that visionary day when he could afford to marry. They'd been dancing together for a year and a half, and the day seemed as far off as ever. George suddenly decided he could wait no longer.

When Julie's around, he tells the story of his proposal this way: "I pulled the old gag about two living cheaper than one. She laughed. Three times I asked her to marry, and she turned me down. Finally I said: 'Nuts, we'll forget about it!' Then Julie got interested."

Her blue eyes dance, but she refuses to confirm or deny the story.

They didn't want to go on being just a dance team. Their object was to break into a show.

Their chance finally came with the London production of "Good News." They'd been playing for a week when the leading man was fired, and the part given to George. "Wait till we ram this down their throats in New York," he said, seated for the first time before an array of make-up cream. "Say, which of these things do you smear on your face first?"

Before the run was over, they received a cabled offer to do a show in New York. They were to be back by Christmas. That would give them time to see England, which they did in style. Why hoard money, with a show on Broadway waiting to welcome them in?

What welcomed them as they stepped off the gangplank was the news that the show

Your choice is right with

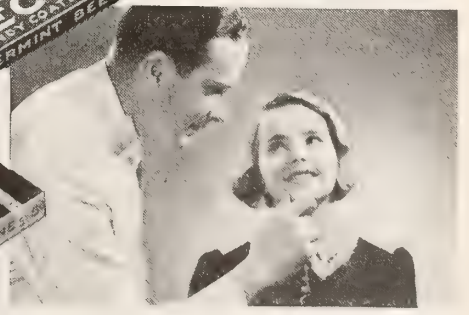
BEECH-NUT GUM

for flavor and refreshment

ALWAYS REFRESHING

Beech-Nut Peppermint Gum is so good it's the most popular flavor of gum in America.

Beech-Nut Spearmint has a richness you're sure to enjoy.



WHEN WORK PILES UP

...the use of chewing gum helps lessen fatigue, improve alertness and mental efficiency.

BEECHIES are the "candy-coated" variety in your choice of flavors . . . Peppermint, Pepsin or Spearmint.

"CHEW WITH A PURPOSE"

The use of chewing gum gives your mouth, teeth and gums beneficial exercise. Beech-Nut Oralgene is specially made for this purpose. It's firmer, "chewier"...helps keep teeth clean and fresh looking.

Always worth stopping for

2 SHORT CUTS TO BEAUTY!

Twin Sisters
CLEANSING PADS

Non-drying Instant Facials Anywhere . . . Anytime!

Little pads of cloth saturated with a special non-drying lotion. You carry them in purse or pocket for a refreshing, skin-soothing facial after shopping, motoring or sports . . . at the dance, theatre or office. Softens skin. Removes make-up and grime perfectly. Excellent powder base, too. You'll agree they're handy as a hanky . . . indispensable as a lipstick. Compact and 15 Pads, 10c. Refills of 60 Pads, 25c.

Twin Sisters
REMOV-O-PADS

Removes Nail Polish Lubricates Nails

A new nail-beauty treatment! You merely dab your ten nails with a Twin Sisters Remov-O-Pad and off comes the polish—slick and quick! Lubricates nail and cuticle and prevents peeling or cracking. Daintily perfumed. Convenient—nothing to spill and waste. Contains no acetone, non-drying. At leading five and ten cent stores. Try them! 15 Pads 10c.

AT MOST 5c AND 10c STORES

If unobtainable, send direct. (Add 5c to each item for postage and packing). Clark-Millner Co., 666 St. Clair St., Dept.50-E, Chicago. Sent only in U. S. A.

In spite of all that has been written about bad breath, thousands still lose friends through this unpleasant fault. Yet sour stomach with its resultant bad breath is frequently only the result of constipation. Just as loss of appetite, early weakness, nervousness, mental dullness, can all be caused by it.

So keep regular. And if you need to assist Nature, use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This mild laxative brings relief, yet is always gentle. Extremely important, too, is the mild stimulation it gives the flow of bile from the liver, without the discomfort of drastic, irritating drugs. That's why millions use Olive Tablets yearly. At your druggists, 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

had blown up. The weary round began again. "You're a dance team," said the producers. "We played 'Good News' in London," said George. "Is that so?" said the producers. "We didn't see you."

It took Heywood Broun, that discerning journalist, to recognize comedy talent without waiting for somebody else to tell him about it. He spotted the two in scene after scene throughout his co-operative show, "Shoot the Works." The producers came, and the rest was plain sailing.

They worked in "Of Thee I Sing" and in "Roberta," but Julie didn't keep her "Roberta" part. She'd been cast as the menace. "And," says George, "she was so much cuter and better-looking than the lead that they fired her."

IN the heat of resentment he wanted to throw up his job, too. "Now wouldn't that be silly?" she smiled. She was really smiling. He searched her blue eyes for a trace of hurt, and couldn't find it. "You know I never cared about all this except as a means to an end. Maybe it's come."

"What's come?"

"What we've always been talking about. The time when you'd bread-win alone, and I'd be the little woman at home."

"And you'll be just as well satisfied?"

"Better."

She's stuck to that. George's path led to Hollywood, via Sam Goldwyn, who saw a test he'd made to oblige a friend. There was no dancing in it. It was a comedy scene, topped by a song, so Goldwyn spotted him for a song in "Kid Millions." A contract with Columbia was followed by one with Metro. But his career languished till Universal borrowed him for "Top of the Town." Preview night came, and the plaudits next morning were all for an engaging personality named George Murphy. "Broadway Melody" sent his stock soaring still higher, and the lead opposite Alice Faye in Universal's "Young Man's Fancy" bids fair to do the rest.

The day after "Top of the Town" was previewed, came an irate wire from Goldwyn: "Why in blazes didn't you tell me you could dance?"

How Sam had escaped that knowledge it's hard to say. One of the pleasantest sights at the Troc of an evening was that of George and Julie dancing together. Without any such intention on their part, it would often resolve itself into an exhibition performance. People instinctively stepped back, as they always will, to watch perfection. Again and again, when they'd returned to their table, a message would be delivered to Julie. Would she make a movie test? The answer has always been no, thank you.

Temperamentally different, they are alike in sharing warm hearts and a sense of fun. Their's is one of the few Hollywood households where friends stop by without phoning first. A crowd will drop in, and presently Julie's at the piano, playing the old songs. "Time to make a break," someone will say at midnight. "Remember this one?" George cuts in, and at two in the morning they're still remembering.

They delight in poking fun at each other. George, for instance, is an excellent raconteur, but his stories have a tendency to go on. "He's off again," Julie sighs. But let someone else venture a similar remark, and she's up in arms. "Who can tell a story better than Murph?" she flares.

It's easy to see why he stirs the protective instinct. He's the kind who treasures his friends above everything else. He couldn't sleep one night because a gossip writer had compared him favorably with Astaire. He was all for rushing down to proffer his apologies to Fred. "They're crazy," he kept yelling. "I couldn't touch that guy in a million years."

Cesar Romero, Number One ladies' man of the film colony, shares himself between June Lang and Ethel Merman, who don't seem to mind.

They can find food for laughter where the more heavyhanded would find only grief. They were expecting guests for dinner just after Christmas last year, when Julie conceived the notion of burning the branches of the Christmas tree in the fireplace. "Make the house smell nice."

"Sure," agreed George, on his way up to the shower.

A few minutes later he heard her call pleasantly, "We're on fire, Murph," then, after a second's pause: "Lord, we are on fire."

With a towel draped round his midsection, he dashed out, discovered that the blaze was spreading merrily by way of the vines covering the house, and rushed for the extinguishers. Meantime Julie was calling the Hollywood fire department. "You're in Beverly Hills, lady," they told her. "We can't come." Beverly Hills told her to apply to the county. The county told her she lived in Hollywood.

"What do I call next?" she asked her husband, who by now was playing the hose over the vines. Inside they heard the phone ring, and the voice of their domestic drawling: "Mrs. Murphy's residence. No, Mrs. Murphy can't come to the phone just now. We're having a fire."

Eventually, three fire companies and the bewildered dinner guests arrived at the same moment.

They've recently bought their own house in Beverly Hills, the first they've ever owned. Rather than furnish it with stuff they could afford but couldn't love, they're doing it piecemeal. They're making progress, though. They've got the kitchen, the maid's room and two bedrooms done, and they've started on the dining room.

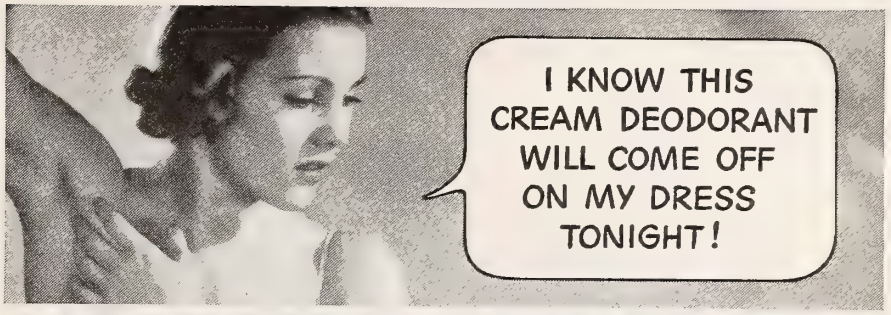
JULIE'S the servant expert. But it was George who picked the pair that now form their staff. He got home one evening to find them in the kitchen, being interviewed. Having viewed no more than the back of their heads, he gave Julie a violent nod and said: "You're hired."

"What did you do that for?" his wife inquired, when the couple had retired beaming.

"He was a prizefighter."

"How do you know?"

"Cauliflower ear." He strode to the door, and called after the man: "When did you quit fighting?"



The answer boomed back on a chuckle. "Three years ago."

"See?" exulted George. "If he's got sense of humor enough to be a prizefighter, I want him around, even if he doesn't work so well."

The incident which best illustrates their relationship happened at the Cocoanut Grove, where George was about to make a personal appearance. Julie was at a table with some friends. As the time for George's appearance drew near, one of them noticed that Julie was turning pale green. She waved their concern away. "It'll pass," she murmured. "I know how nervous Murph is. I'm just sick with sympathy."

George came on, smiled at Julie, and started his song. Two minutes later Julie relaxed and her face was restored to its natural color.

Feeling sick with sympathy for your husband may not sound on the face of it, especially romantic. Maybe romantic isn't the word for the Murphys, after all. It smacks of puppy love. What they share goes deeper than roses drenched in moonlight. It's the kind of thing which makes a sacrament instead of a farce of the promise, "for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness, in health, till death do us part."

New Cooling ICE Deodorant goes on like a vanishing cream—checks perspiration instantly

IT'S HERE AT LAST! The perfect answer to the complaints of fastidious women about old-fashioned cream deodorants. An ICE DEODORANT that vanishes without leaving the slightest trace of grease or stickiness! Yet checks perspiration the minute you put it on!

The new Odorono ICE is based on an entirely new principle. It's actually cooling and refreshing to the skin! Dainty and easy to use. Smooth it on—it liquefies and vanishes as you apply it! Without fuss or bother, you've checked underarm odor and dampness for 1 to 3 days.

It leaves no greasy film to come off on your clothes—no musty "giveaway" odor. Its own fresh smell of pure alcohol evaporates immediately. No wonder 80% of the women who have tried it prefer it to any other deodorant they have ever used! Don't risk offending. The new Odorono Ice is only 35¢ at all Toilet-Goods Departments. Get a jar TODAY!

● "Safe and effective—cuts down clothing damage, when used according to directions," says The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, after making intensive laboratory tests of Odorono preparations.

*Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

*ODO-RO-NO ICE
NON-GREASY

SEND 10¢ FOR INTRODUCTORY JAR

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. 5-E-8*, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 427, Montreal)
I enclose 10¢ (15¢ in Canada) to cover cost of postage and packing for generous introductory jar of Odorono Ice.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

THE EASIEST WAY TO KEEP A TOILET CLEAN IS THE BEST WAY

No AMOUNT of unpleasant scrubbing and scouring can keep a toilet bowl really clean. Because you cannot reach the hidden trap, under the bowl. SANI-FLUSH is made scientifically to clean toilets better —and without any work.

Just shake a bit of SANI-FLUSH in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet, and the job is done. SANI-FLUSH has no odor. It removes stains. It kills germs. It cannot injure plumbing connections. SANI-FLUSH is also effective for cleaning auto radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

LAW STUDY AT HOME

Win greater respect and success. Learn more, earn more. We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Degree of LL. B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Training for Leadership" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept.5318-L Chicago

STOPS SWEEPERS FROM DISTURBING SLEEPERS!

Oil your carpet sweeper, vacuum cleaner, sewing machine and other household mechanisms with 3-In-One Oil. Lubricates, cleans, prevents rust. At hdwe., drug, grocery, 10¢ stores.

3-IN-ONE OIL

THOSE HOLLYWOOD MEN

(Continued from page 55)

Hollywood men?" I asked, gasping a little with surprise because Florence's words were not the ones which I had expected to hear.

"There's nothing wrong with the men, except that there aren't enough of them to go around," Florence told me. "The question is, where are those romantic, handsome Hollywood men whom that girl is hoping to see? Look around and you'll discover for yourself how few eligible males there are in town. Almost all the actors and writers and practically all the producers and directors are married. The eligible girls outnumber the men at least seven to one. So far as I can see, there's less chance for romance in Hollywood, the supposed land of romantic adventure, than in the average American city or town."

Florence is the sort of girl who is made for romance, a magazine-cover kind of girl with burnished gold hair and deep, blue eyes and a soft, rounded slenderness. The room in which we were sitting was a perfect setting for the girl and for romance—deep rugs, low chairs, bowls of roses and the glowing fire. Yet Florence told me seriously that, during the two and a half years which she has spent in Hollywood, romance has not once entered her life in any important way.

OTHER girls, young, lovely, successful, glamorous Hollywood women, complain of the dearth of eligible males. So, that afternoon, listening to Florence's voice, I made a mental count of the unmarried young men in the film colony. There is Robert Taylor, of course, but his devotion to Barbara Stanwyck immediately eliminates him from the field. George Raft pays attention only to Virginia Peine. Clark Gable, who is practically, if not technically, free, is devoted solely to the blonde and gay Carole Lombard. That leaves only a scant handful of heart whole and fancy free young men, among them Jimmy Stewart, Nelson Eddy, Michael Bartlett, George Brent, Lee Tracy and Cesar Romero. The ranks of the eligible writers and directors are even more discouragingly thin.

"It's not so bad for the very young girls in their 'teens," Florence was saying when I stopped counting. "There are a comparatively large number of boys, just beginning their careers of acting or writing or working in the technical branches of the picture business. But for girls like this Kansas Mary or like me, girls in their middle twenties, there aren't nearly enough men to go around. We're too old for the boys and too young for the retired widowers who make Hollywood a playground.

"Please don't think that I'm complaining," Florence said with a sudden little gurgle of laughter, "I'm not worried about Hollywood's manless condition. I'm not the lonely kind of person. I have a few good friends, mostly married couples. I have all the fun and companionship I need or want. Besides, I'm not thinking of romance now. The main thing that interests me is my work. I think that most of the girls, who are struggling for success, feel as I do. Some day, of course, we'll want romance. That's only natural. But, when we do, we'll be lucky if we find it in California."

Florence had her share of romance before she came to Hollywood. Her name has been linked romantically with a dozen young men during the short, crowded years since she made her theatrical debut in "June Moon."

"I'm a deep-dyed romantic at heart," she confessed. "Since I started school I have always been falling either in or out of love. At first it was with the brothers of my school mates. Then, after I went on the stage, it was with the young men whom I met at parties and with the sons of my father's friends, Ring Lardner, Junior, Owen Davis, Junior, and Phillips Holmes, among them."

When she was eighteen years old, Florence put away her school books and firmly announced that she wanted to be an actress. Her father confided her desires to one of his good friends, Ring Lardner, who was writing a play, "June Moon," destined to be one of Broadway's greatest successes. Mr. Lardner wrote in a small part for the daughter of his friend and Florence played the role on Broadway for many long, successful months.

TOWARD the end of the "June Moon" engagement, when Florence was nineteen, she met the attractive and charming Sidney Smith, one of the most popular figures of both Broadway and Park Avenue. Their romance was a hectic, exciting, breathtaking affair and, as soon as "June Moon" closed for the summer, they were married.

But, like so many youthful, tumultuous marriages, theirs was doomed to failure. It lasted exactly three months. Then they separated. Florence returned to the home of her parents and to a winter of fun and dancing and gay parties. That was the hectic era of cocktail parties and tea dances and velvet-shrouded speakeasies and all the forced gaiety which New York wore to cover the first shock of the stock market crumble. Florence was the gayest of the gay, her father's brilliant and interesting friends opening wide their doors to his lovely daughter.

The starry babes of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis, get a trip to New York.

"When that year was ended, I had made up my mind," Florence said. "I knew that I didn't want an idle, useless, fun-filled life. So I decided to try to find another job on the stage. This time I didn't go to Dad or to any of his friends. I was determined to paddle my own canoe. For weeks I made the rounds of the agencies and, finally, I landed a very small part in another big success, 'Once In A Lifetime.' After that I joined a stock company for the summer and played everything from maids, with one line to speak, to ingenue leads. I learned more in those few months than I could have learned in a year on Broadway, playing one small part."

When the stock company closed, Florence went back to job-hunting. After weeks of searching, she found a job in the New York production, "She Loves Me Not," found it solely and entirely by her own efforts, without the help of her influential father or his influential friends. It was during the run of "She Loves Me Not," that talent scouts from Hollywood discovered her, tested her and offered her a contract with the Columbia Studio. So Florence packed her trunks and departed for Hollywood.

Her first appearance in pictures was in a small role in "Carnival" with Lee Tracy. But, brief as was that part, people noticed the lovely girl with the clear voice and the slender, blonde grace. From that part she stepped immediately into leading roles in a dozen small pictures.

"I was pretty discouraged," she told me, remembering those early days. "It looked as if I might go on and on forever, getting nowhere, doing merely second-rate parts. Dad offered to help me, but I wouldn't let him do anything for me. I was so terribly anxious to make good by my own efforts. Finally, I left Columbia and free lanced. I managed to get a test for the leading feminine role in 'Sworn Enemy' at Metro. The test was successful and I was given the part. That was the beginning of my new lease on life, my new contract and my new hopes for the future. So you can see why I haven't time to worry about the lack of romance in my life.

"There is one thing about Hollywood to which I can't become accustomed, however. That's going to public places, unescorted. Of course, I can understand why it's necessary. With the dearth of men, the girls would have to stay home forever, if they waited for escorts. This lack of men has developed a splendid self-reliance and independence and self-sufficiency in the Hollywood girls, however. There are no clinging vines among the unattached Hollywood women. It's every girl for herself with a free field and no rules. They all are on their toes always, alert, wide-awake, vital.

"I honestly pity the Hollywood men more than the girls. Suppose the conditions were reversed and there were seven free men to every woman. Imagine how we'd feel in the mad scramble for our companionship. The amazing thing is the way in which the men manage to keep their heads and their sense of humor. But I notice that they usually attach themselves as quickly as possible to one girl. That's the greatest protection they can find. Only a few hardy souls, like Nelson Eddy and Jimmy Stewart and Lee Tracy, dare to play the field. It's an exciting game, both to play and to watch from the sidelines."

Suddenly Florence smiled and her eyes crinkled with laughter.

"Maybe I won't advise that Mary to stay in Kansas," she said, "after all, she might be one of the lucky ones to find real romance in Hollywood. While there's life, there's hope, you know."

Women on the go

DEMAND A SANITARY NAPKIN THAT LIVES UP TO ITS PROMISES!

When you buy Kotex* you can be sure that:

★ Kotex stays Wondersoft--for it's cushioned in cotton.

★ Kotex can be worn on either side--no risk of using a pad with a non-absorbent side.

★ Only Kotex offers three types --Regular, Junior and Super-- for different women on different days.

★ Kotex can't chafe, can't fail, can't show.

★ You get full value for your money . . . the most efficient, comfortable sanitary service that 18 years of experience can produce.

Use Quest* with Kotex... the new positive deodorant powder developed especially for sanitary napkins—soothing, completely effective and only 35c for large 2-ounce size.

YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR—WHEN YOU BUY

KOTEX*

SANITARY NAPKINS (*Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

NONSPI IS SAFE

Thanks to Nonspi, women with sensitive skin can now enjoy full-strength underarm protection. Nonspi keeps underarms dry...immaculate...2 to 5 days...yet is non-irritating when properly applied. Nonspi goes on more easily ...dries more quickly. Sold at all drug and department stores—35¢ and 60¢.

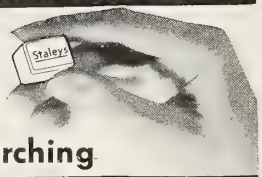
The SAFE Deodorant
—Stops Perspiration

The Nonspi Company
113 West 18th St., N. Y. C.

Please send special trial bottle of Nonspi. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin).

*Name*_____
*Street*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____
MS55

IMPORTED SIMULATED



DIAMOND RING 15¢

To introduce HOLLYWOOD'S Newest ORIZABA Diamond reproductions. Dazzling, Brilliant, Full of Blazing Fire (worn by Movie Stars) we will send ½ Kt. simulated Brazilian DIAMOND MOUNTED IN SOLID GOLD effect ring as illustrated (looks like $150. gem) for 15c sent postpaid. Money back if not delighted. AGENTS WANTED.

FIELD'S DIAMOND CO.—Dept. MS-510 S. Hill St., Los Angeles, Calif. (2 for 25c.)

NEW! STARCH IN CUBES

Just count cubes for perfect starching

EXACT MEASURE

Cuts my ironing time 1/3

QUICKER, EASIER

STALEY'S STARCH IN CUBES

A. E. Staley Mfg. Co., Decatur, Ill.

ASK YOUR GROCER

VANISHING AMERICAN

(Continued from page 54)

but I've never forgotten his opening lines. 'Young man,' he said, 'we're either going to make a man or a damned fool out of you, and it's going to be decided right now.' I've forgotten the rest of the speech, but not how it made me feel—pretty cheap, I can tell you, standing there digging my toe into the carpet.

"But whatever he said or did never made any difference in the way I felt for him. I loved him but, besides that, I never disliked him, if you know what I mean. You know, even people you love sometimes do things you find yourself disliking them for. But when Dad corrected me, I always knew it was for my own good."

Father and son were particularly close. They liked the same things, and liked to do them together. The elder Foster taught the boy to hunt, bought him his first gun, made him his first fishing-rod. Preston still has it. The one thing he wouldn't teach him was to swim. The father had dreamed that his first child would be a son, and that he would die by drowning. When half of the dream came true, he tried to keep the boy from the water. As well try to keep a fish. From then till now docks, boats, the sea, have been his ruling passion. He haunted the piers, and at seven decided that one day he would own a motorboat. Today he owns the best power cruiser on the market, and spends there every moment he can steal from his work.

HIS two remaining ambitions were born in church, where he sang in the choir and listened with awe and admiration to the rumbling notes of a bass singer, over six feet tall. He vowed that some day he would be over six feet tall and a bass singer. The former end he achieved without a struggle. By the time he was seventeen and in his junior year at high school, he was growing impatient to do something about the latter, though he felt he might have to abandon the bass idea and compromise on a baritone.

His father was opposed to his leaving school.

"But this stuff I'm studying won't help me to be a singer," he protested.

"Plenty of time for that, if that's what you're going to be, after you graduate. Anyway, I don't hold with this singing business. Land you in the theatre. What kind of work is that for a man?"

But here his mother came unexpectedly to the rescue. "He's been taught what's wrong and what's right, and what he makes of himself is up to himself. I daresay there's many a good man in the theatre business," she declared mildly.

However, his father remained adamant on the subject of school. So Preston took his own way out. He neglected his work, he became obstreperous, he organized a systematic method of annoying the authorities, till they finally told him, "Behave or get out."

Bearing this ultimatum as if it were a hallowed treasure, he returned to his father. "Better let me quit, Dad, before they throw me out. Think of the blot on the honored name of Foster," he grinned.

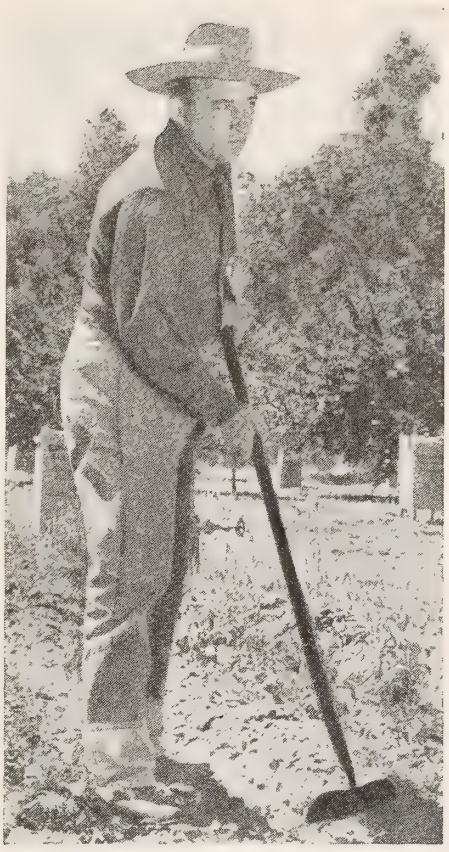
"And Dad," he recalls, "said, 'Young man, this' and 'Young man, that', but at last he said yes."

The nearest he could get to a singing job was packing Victrola records. He thought at first it might be a good omen, but he gave the omen the go-by when he decided that the excelsior dust was ruining his vocal chords. There was no dust at the shipbuilding corporation where he next got a job as a clerk. There was a girl, though, named Gertrude Warren. (He calls her True now.) They couldn't marry yet, of course. He had to save his money for singing lessons.

He took them for eight months. Then he told his teacher: "I know enough now. I'm going to New York and try my luck."

The teacher flung up his hands in horror. "You've got to study and study."

"Can't wait," smiled Preston and went to New York, where the only offer he got was to sing with a quartette at $35 a week. This, he thought, smacked of a chorusman's job and was far beneath him. So he went back home.



What becomes of old tennis balls in Hollywood? Una Merkel feeds them to "Shanty" and "Jock," her two pet Scotties.

The next few years were a monotonous record of being hired and fired. The town knew him as "that crazy Foster boy who wanted to be a singer and wanted to be an actor and didn't know what he wanted." They didn't understand that there boiled within him a fierce, if inarticulate, need to expand beyond the limits of clerking or truckdriving. To them he was just a ne'er-do-well who couldn't keep a job. Even True's family eyed him askance. "I was nothing a mother wanted for her girl," he says cheerfully. His own family, doubtful of the wisdom of his course, still continued to believe in him, however.

PRESENTLY he himself began doubting the wisdom of his course. Anyway, he wanted to marry True. He was given a second chance on a newspaper he'd already been fired from, "and this time, by golly, I stuck. True and I were married and I told myself I was going to forget show business, quit singing, and buckle down to harness. And I did, for almost two years."

The cloud on the tranquil horizon appeared in the shape of an Italian singer, "who got me all steamed up again. He sent me to the maestro of a little opera company he was interested in, and this guy put me in the chorus. Then someone took sick, and he gave me small parts to sing. My chest went out. I was still on the paper, but began neglecting my work, and first thing I knew, I was out on my ear."

True didn't say much, but she couldn't help seeing which way the wind blew. Then "The Miracle" came to Philadelphia, and Foster got a job in the chorus. Morris Gest singled him out from among the others, and told him he might have a job for him some day. Foster figured that really made him an actor. He raced home in a fever. Nothing could stop him now.

The Crosby vocal chords get a rest as Bing dons his blue jeans and gives his hands a workout.

With fifty dollars in his pocket, he crossed the river to New York and called on an agent he knew. "There's a piece called 'The New Moon' with a part open. Go down and see them."

The producer took one look at him and said, "That's the guy. Here, read this." He read two lines and they gave him the air.

"I had it cinched," he says, "the thing I'd been dreaming about. I had it in my pocket, and then I didn't have it. I got my chance and I wasn't good enough. When a thing like that happens to you, you either give up or else you get fighting mad. I got fighting mad. I had fifty bucks. When that was gone, I told myself, I'd wash windows. But I wouldn't leave that town till it gave me a job."

As he entered the agent's office a few days later, that gentleman eyed him speculatively. "There's a part I think you can fill. All they want is somebody six feet tall. There won't be any lines to wreck yourself on. It's a deaf and dumb Chinaman."

He got the part. Five minutes later an excited young man was phoning his wife in New Jersey that he had a job at fifty dollars a week. It was a mystery play called "The Silent House," and it ran for six months. He understudied three long speaking parts, and spent his days hoping to heaven someone would get sick. No one did. He decided that acting was a cinch, compared to singing. The show closed and he got another part with Lionel Atwill. He became stage manager at a hundred a week. His wife joined him. Atwill grew interested in him, coached

(Continued on page 100)

What a moment to lose S.A.

*[STOCKING APPEAL]

guards S.A.*

They couldn't help noticing Betty's great big RUN . . .

POOR BETTY! Just as she had captured the two most attractive men in the room, that awful run had to pop. It made her look so dowdy . . . killed S. A.*

Why not cut down runs . . . guard S. A. . . . with Lux? Lux saves the elasticity of stockings so the silk can stretch without snapping so easily — then spring back into shape. You cut down runs, avoid wrinkles, wobbly seams.

Cake-soap rubbing and soaps with harmful alkali weaken elasticity, rob you of S. A. Lux has no harmful alkali. Buy the big box for extra economy.

ACCENT ON SPRING

BY ANN WILLS

ACCENT ON Spring! In this new season of 1938, this means, according to Hollywood's best designers—accent on naturalness, gayety, youth, and femininity! Which ought to be pleasing news to all you gals who like your clothes to be flattering as well as smart. If you're young, feminine, with an eye for color, then this Spring's styles were just made for you.

Hollywood expresses femininity and naturalness through fitted lines and soft draping. Youth and gayety are stressed through the use of brilliant colors, brief skirts, bolero and jacket frocks, wide-brimmed and chin-strap chapeaux, or the three "B's" that are filmland's favorites—berets, beanies and babushkas.

Very smart, wearable and typical of Spring were the costumes worn by Joan Perry and Gertrude Niesen in their recent college picture, "Start Cheering." Most of these were two or three piece in contrasting or harmonizing colors, with straight, short skirts, gay print blouses and tricky little jackets trimly tailored, but with attention to smart detail in their unusual buttons and fastenings, novel treatment of sleeves, neckline and waist, so they might be worn for almost any type of daytime occasion.

Marjorie Weaver's black dress features a mottled leather belt which matches her peaked hat of stitched straw. On her high-placed double flap pockets, she wears one of the popular "head hunter" clips.

Joan Perry wears an all purpose three-piece sports suit made of closely woven nubbly wool. The hip-length coat, with its slightly full shoulder line and straight, slim sleeves, has deep lapels and four patch-pockets.

Another type of all-around utility costume is the three-piece sports suit which Joan Perry models for you here. If you have no use for a man-tailored suit because you live in the country, or because your activities are such that you're either all dressed up or in sports clothes—then what you need most is an all-purpose suit like Joan's. It looks very much like an expensive imported tweed and gives the same effect of casual elegance. But in reality, it's made of closely woven nubbly wool. Four colors are combined in this ensemble, with grey predominant. The hip-length coat is a black, grey and red mixture, with deep lapels and four patch pockets placed so that their stripes run across the stripes on the coat, for contrast. The shoulder line is slightly full, the sleeves straight and slim. Joan's sweater, of a matching grey, boasts a tiny white piqué collar, while her white hankie tucked into the jacket pocket is an extra touch to carry out the color scheme. The closely knit skirt with its deep centre pleat is also of grey. Black accessories, gabardine and kid pumps and kid belt, complete the costume.

The beauty of a suit like this is its versatility, for it can be combined with other blouses, skirts and jackets in your wardrobe. For days in the country and spectator sports events, it is worn as is, with the sweater blouse, black classic felt hat and black pull-on gloves. When it goes to town for the day, the jacket and skirt are worn with a tailored silk blouse, white or red, and a soft felt hat with a red quill feather. With formal accessories, a small fur scarf may be worn. And, incidentally, if you want to be "ultra-ultra," be sure to wear the new delicately meshed lisle hose with your tweeds and knit dresses for both town and country.

THOSE of you who are strictly city-dwellers, however, will find more use for the formal man-tailored suit, a perfect example of which is worn by Gail Patrick in "Dangerous to Know." This is the type of suit that will be chosen for street wear by smart metropolitans from Fifth Avenue to Hollywood Boulevard.

With Paris and Hollywood both crying, "Color!" what are we who have to count our pennies going to do about it? We can't go out and choose five or ten different costumes in our favorite colors, with as many pairs of shoes, hats and gloves to match. But we are living in a wonderful age—the age of the Accessory Dress, which allows us, when Fashion clamors for color, to keep up with the best of them. We take a simple dark dress, made on the lines most becoming to our own individual figures, and we use this as a foil for the newest shades on the color chart, sometimes cleverly combining as many as three different colors in our accessory scheme.

Just such a basic dress is the one shown here by Marjorie Weaver, whom you will soon see in "Kentucky Moonshine." Marjorie sets off her short-sleeved black dress with accessories of Sierra beige, a warm golden tone. The belt is of mottled leather, matching her peaked hat of stitched straw; the buttons are bone. On one of the high-placed double flap pockets she wears a black enamel "head hunter" clip with gold tassels hanging from the ears and a gold ring in the nose.

It would take very little effort or expenditure to make this into a completely different ensemble. New buttons, belt and hat create an entirely new effect.

AND little touches of originality like Marjorie's unusual clip go a long way toward enhancing the basic frock. Just wander along the jewelry counter in the five and ten, and you'll see all sorts of fascinating pins and clips—beetles and delightfully ugly spiders, gay flower combinations, clusters of colorful little Tyrolean hats, little tinkling bells, tiny wooden shoes. Make a collection of these and clip them to your dresses and hats. Make yourself a smart brass-studded sports belt by joining together two dog collars in the same or contrasting colors, bought at the five and dime for less than fifty cents!

The problem of having enough changes of hats should hold no fears for those of you who share Hollywood's fondness for the "beanie," or calot. And then, too, there's the babushka, that cute little bonnet which ties under the chin. Not only are they worn for evening as a hood, and with active sports costumes, but you can also wear them with your afternoon and street dresses—and here's the secret. Instead of tying the strings under your chin, bring them around to the back of your head, tie them in a tiny bow, and presto! you've a fetching little bonnet. By tacking on a circular veil, you can be even more dressy.

Briefly, here is all you have to do to present to your public an appearance that is smart and distinctive. Study the general style trends as you see them in the magazines, newspapers and on the screen. Choose those that are most becoming and which will be of the greatest service to you. Then make these styles individually yours by little touches of originality such as those I have suggested. Just dust off your imagination, and you will be surprised at the very charming results you can achieve!

DRY SKIN SOFTENED NEW HOLLYWOOD WAY

WITH THE SAME CREAM THE STARS USE

Here's That Amazing New Cream with Skin Softening Emollients That's Thrilling All America

TAYTON'S CREAM

Floats Away Dirt. Dissolves Dry, Rough Skin. Smooths—Softens. Powder Stays On

★ EVELYN DAW

The Lovely star with Jimmy Cagney in "Something to Sing About," says—"I use Tayton's Cream to cleanse and keep my skin smooth and youthful looking."

Test This Thrilling Beauty Discovery UNDER MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Make your skin smooth and alluring like the Stars do. . . . TAYTON'S CREAM releases precious triple-whipped emollients that cleanse and also dissolve dry, scaly skin cells that cause roughness, your powder to flake off, skin to shine, look parched and old. Lubricates dryness. Flushes blackheads. Rouses oil glands. Helps bring out new, live, fresh skin. Thousands praise it. Get TAYTON'S CREAM at your 10c store, Drug and Dept. Store. Cleanse with it, also use it as a night cream. If your skin is not smoother, fresher and younger looking after first application your money will be refunded.

FREE Also test TAYTON'S new glamour face powder the stars use. Send your name and address and 3c stamp to Tayton Company, Dept. C, 811 West 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif., and generous samples of all six shades will be sent you free so you can choose your most flattering shade, and if you also want the new-glamour lipstick enclose 10c stating color.

YOU simply can't wear a hard-base powder and escape criticism in this day of beautiful women. A hard-base powder is bound to show up chalky in one light—dusky in another . . . because hard-base powders are made that way.

Lovely Lady Face Powder is winning new friends by thousands, because it contains BALMITE, an exquisite new SOFT-BASE—blends out to harmonize with all these daily variations in light—never looks chalky or muddy in any light.

The one powder for important occasions—when you must know that you're just gloriously beautiful!

Try it!—today. Choose your favorite shade. See how evenly and smoothly Lovely Lady goes on—how silky-soft it feels to your skin—and really, how much longer it banishes troublesome shine. You'll adore it! At any 10c store—take this coupon with you.

FREE OF EXTRA COST

Lovely Lady, Chicago, Ill.

Take this coupon to any 10c store for beautiful 4 color Spill-proof Compact absolutely FREE with purchase of 10c or 20c box of new Lovely Lady Face Powder. If out, ask for store manager—he can get yours for you.

VANISHING AMERICAN

(Continued from page 97)

him, worked with him, till "finally I knew what to do with my big hands and feet." He got a singing job in vaudeville with Fritzi Scheff. He got a job that Allen Jenkins walked out on. Finally he got a job in a play called "Two Seconds."

The emotional impact of this play was such that when the final curtain fell on opening night, the audience stood huzzaing, while Foster and the leading man took curtain call after curtain call, the tears streaming helplessly down their cheeks.

"The day after you open in this part," his manager, William Stephens, had told him, "I'll sell you down the river to pictures." And he kept his promise.

On the screen he played his original part in "Two Seconds," following it with a lead in "The Last Mile." Then, because Paul Muni was in it, he took a bit in "I'm a Fugitive From a Chain Gang." Purple adjectives aren't in Foster's line, but the way his face lights up at mention of Muni's name is worth more than adjectives. "There's an actor," he says, his voice almost tender. "There's the boy for my money. I was tickled to death when they gave him the Academy Award." The smile in his eyes deepened. "Only one thing could make me happier—if I got it myself."

Originally he was not cast for "The Informer." But he asked to be.

"We're building you up for leads," they protested. "There's nothing here for you but a third part."

"I don't care if it's a tenth part. I've got a notion this picture is going places. I want to go with it."

And go with it he did, playing the Irish patriot to such perfection that, even in the face of McLaglen's superb performance, his own made its own deep impression.

He's one of those who wanted to go to Hollywood and, having gone, wants to stay. He says phooey to any yearning nostalgia for the stage. "There is a thrill in the personal contact," he admits. "I got mine on the opening night of 'Two Seconds.' I might go for fifty years and never match it. Meantime, the movies offer plenty to compensate."

The first thing he did on arrival was to inspect the harbors. When he found one to suit him at Balboa, he bought a boat. His boat and his business absorb him. It's not so much that he avoids the publicized pitfalls of Hollywood as that for him they don't exist. His head is too hard to swell. An occasional cocktail before dinner begins and ends his drinking. He loves his wife. She couldn't be bribed to return to New York. Her life, like his, revolves around essentials. The girl who stood by him when he was "that crazy Foster boy" now handles his fan mail, because she likes to. For the rest, a few close friends and a children's hospital that she's interested in suffice to fill her days.

ONE Christmas, Foster had made railroad reservations to go East. "We're a sentimental family about Christmas," he explains. "It's always been the same procedure ever since we were kids. We get up early on Christmas morning. The gifts are all put together in the middle of the room, and one of the girls gives them out. Then we have Christmas breakfast, and spend the rest of the day together at home. It's always been a great time with us. Dad was ailing, and I had a hunch it would be the last Christmas we'd all have together."

He was offered a part in "Love Before Breakfast" with Carole Lombard.

"I won't take it," he said. "My father's sick. It's Christmas and I'm going."

But a contract's a contract. It was Christmas and he stayed.

They sent for him the following October. When he entered the sickroom, his father murmured: "My boy—best boy that ever lived."

So long as he knew them, they kidded him gently, and he smiled back. It was the old, the ingrained habit of keeping up the morale. Preston brought new strength to the weary household. He even tried to force a smile to his mother's lips, make her forget for a moment what she was going through. They took turns at the bedside, wife, son, daughters, in-laws. One night the nurse said: "I doubt if he'll see another."

Preston kept vigil till four, then was sent to sleep for a couple of hours. Returning, he took his father's hand in his to feel the pulse. He was still holding it when the pulse stopped.

In going through his father's wallet later, he found among other things numerous clippings and pictures of himself. "I'm afraid he made rather a nuisance of himself in local circles, talking about his 'young man,'" said the "young man" gently.

Maybe he did. I doubt if the local circles minded. They seem to have done quite a lot of bragging on their own account. But if the old man was proud of his son's success, he must have been still prouder of something else. It wasn't the actor he welcomed with his dying eyes. It was "my boy—the best boy that ever lived."

After that sojourn in the gutter that she managed so capably for "Dead End," Claire Trevor gets back into the trappings of a lady. You'll see her in "Walking Down Broadway."

GLAMOR FOR RENT

(Continued from page 41)

once upon a time Mr. Von Sternberg himself didn't mind paying for? No one knew who the star was, but that was the very secret of the secret's success. That was the kind of campaign that any space-salesman could thrill to. Thus Samuel Goldwyn personally went to the bill-board bat for Anna Sten. Thus Darryl Zanuck for Simone Simon. But now, only about two years later, no more. The public is no longer fascinated just by one name. New imports are now given the opportunity—yea, the edict, to show first what they can do, and not until after the first preview are they introduced to the public at large.

And neither of these girls arrived with the fifteen or twenty trunks of clothes, that an earlier harbinger from Europe, Lilian Harvey, brought with her a few years ago, and all to no avail. In fact if one has clothes today, whole carloads of them, it's the smartest thing to keep them out of the public eye, for the actress who is a clothes horse is also on the wane, along with all those other fancy appurtenances of the Great Glamor decade. Marlene Dietrich still traipses back and forth to Europe with three suites, one for herself and two for her veils, but that hasn't helped the public any too much either when it comes to a show-down of acclaiming her favorite.

But it was chiefly because of Dietrich, back there in the early thirties, and the example which she set, that a few of the others who would have liked to follow in her romantic footsteps came upon the idea that what glamor they couldn't buy, they might rent. There was one youngster, Madge Evans by name, who suddenly realized that she'd never get anywhere as long as producers, directors and such, persisted in thinking of her as an uninteresting but nice-enough child. Something had to be done, and quickly, and there was no time, nor the inclination to go to work building up a real romance, so Madge did the next best thing and hied herself to one of Hollywood's big jewelry shops, where she rented a ring. It was a large ring, a very large diamond, set in a circle of small sapphires, and Madge wore no gloves for that whole week afterward. Heads turned and tongues wagged and there was plenty of conjecture. Little Madge snag-

It's chic to whip up a little needlework between scenes, but Glenda Farrell crochets the bedspread to end all bedspreads.

HELP WANTED...WOMEN!

"Lysol" gives greater assurance of intimate cleanliness

WOMEN . . . any woman . . . YOU . . . are foolish to risk offending by neglect of personal daintiness. Your happiness and even the security of your home may rest on a dependable method of intimate feminine hygiene. Use the "Lysol" method.

Often the very nicest and loveliest women are at fault. No one warns you. The offense is too personal. Yet so many women would benefit by giving this subject honest thought. Ask any experienced family doctor.

The fact often is—your fussiest bathing, your loveliest beauty aids, just cannot make you completely clean, sweetly nice. People may notice; your husband surely will. And may think you are carelessly neglectful. To be sure of not offending, use the wholesome, efficient method many doctors and nurses recommend—"Lysol" in the proper dilution with water.

You can buy "Lysol" disinfectant in any drug store—with detailed directions for use on every bottle.

Six reasons why "Lysol" is recommended for your intimate hygiene—to give you assurance of intimate cleanliness.

1—Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in the proper dilution, is gentle. It contains no harmful free caustic alkali.

2—Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions, effective in the presence of organic matter (such as dirt, mucus, serum, etc.).

3—Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension, and thus virtually search out germs.

4—Economy . . . "Lysol", because it is concentrated, costs only about one cent an application in the proper dilution for feminine hygiene.

5—Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use.

6—Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, no matter how often it is uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND THIS COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK Products Corp.
Dept. 5-M. S, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "Lysol vs. Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol."

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Copyright 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

To SAVE BABY FEET

Don't buy Baby Shoes by Guess!

Stores listed below use this measuring device.

You can be sure of the correct size, provided you buy Wee Walker Shoes. If it is inconvenient to bring baby with you, simply bring along an outline of baby's stockinged foot, taken while standing. The store, with the aid of the measure, will give you the exact size needed. WARNING: Measure is accurate only for Wee Walker Shoes.

Wee Walkers have every practical feature of expensive shoes, yet cost very little. For baby's sake change to new ones often, as baby feet grow very rapidly. The price is low because they are the product of America's largest exclusive infant shoe makers and are sold in stores with very low selling cost. Look for them in the Infant's Wear Department of the following:

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co. H. L. Green Co., Inc. (F & W Grand Stores, Isaac Silver and Bros., Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.) G. R. Kinney Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck Charles Stores Schulte-United Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.

WEE WALKER Shoes

LOOK FOR THIS TRADE-MARK

MORAN SHOE CO.

CARLYLE, ILL.

This Beautiful, Lifelike PHOTO RING

SEND NO MONEY

50c

NEWEST SENSATION! Send any snapshot or photo and we'll reproduce it in this beautiful onyx-like ring. (Photos Returned) (Hand-painted 25c extra) Indestructible! Waterproof! Enclose strip of paper for ring size. Pay postman plus a few cents postage. If you send 50c we will pay postage. REX PHOTO RING CO., Dept. MR-7, Box 947, Cincinnati, Ohio.

(Canadian Orders Send Cash)

ging that! Hmmm.

When questioned, Madge managed to look flustered and embarrassed, and said the wedding would be soon, which only made the "Hmmm" continue a little louder. Before the week was up Madge was assigned a part which up until then had been declared too old and a little beyond her.

But this practice wasn't indulged in only by Madge. There were others before, and since, who added quite a glitter to their personality by the simple expedient of rented gems, but the rental business in this particular line has fallen off, too. Just recently a jeweler approached Wendy Barrie and asked her to wear a certain necklace which he had just originated, rubies and pearls in a beautiful design. Miss Barrie would not even have to pay for the privilege, he assured her. He only wanted her word that she would wear it to all the best places, and when it was admired, she was to say where she had purchased it.

This proposal, surprisingly enough, was turned down cold. "That's all very well and good," Miss Barrie said, "but suppose somebody begins to wonder how I can afford such a necklace. Not only my immediate family, it would upset them enough, I know, but I also have another relative whose good will, even above the others, I'd like to keep. Maybe you've heard of him. We call him Uncle Sam," she added with a smile, "and as it happens he has a very accurate accounting of what I make and what I own. I'm sorry, and thanks just the same."

THERE are many furriers in Hollywood who still do rent fur coats, but their business, surprisingly enough, is mostly among the extras, and even this is not so much for personal show as for business, as these are evening wraps mostly. With such a trick up her sleeve, an extra girl can answer the call for dress extras, and make fifteen dollars a day, instead of the usual seven-fifty. The coat costs her three or four dollars, depending on what it is, and she's still several dollars to the good, above the usual figure. However, some of these girls do manage sometimes to buy clothes which once belonged to the big stars, and there is one place out in Beverly Hills, the Patsy Rogan Shop, where Joan Bennett and Myrna Loy and others take their old things, which in turn are sold at a fraction of their original cost to anyone who has a few dollars and the figure to get into them. There have also been several instances where dress shop owners have outfitted newcomers for nothing, with the promise that if they succeed, they'll pay up for past deliveries, and continue to do business with them.

This kind of an agreement was made, not so long ago, between Harry Cooper and Dorothy Lamour. Dorothy arrived in town, with scarcely more than two or three complete outfits to her name, and one day she went into the Cooper shop to see if she could open a charge account. She told him frankly that she had no money, but begged him to trust her with "just a few things."

After talking with her a while, Mr. Cooper said he would do better than that. "What you need is a lot of things, and good things, and as for the money, you let me worry about that." Now his faith in her has been justified. Dorothy is one customer he's sure he'll never lose.

But even Dorothy didn't burst out in "glamor clothes" as we used to know them. Neat little sport suits, tailored dresses, plain but smart hats. Here she is, one of the newest and most luscious of the new glamor stars, but only on the screen and in her publicity pictures. Off the screen she dresses simply, rides simply and lives simply, and she is so typical of the many new youngsters in pictures that you can see where and why the business part of the glamor industry is slipping. "You should rent a beautiful big house out in Bel Air, have a maid or two, and do a little entertaining," the renting agents from all the real estate offices tell her. "That's how to get along in this town."

But Dorothy smiles a smile which seems to say that she's doing all right as she is, and then she tells them about that four-year lease which she has on her present small apartment. "That's my insurance against falling for that old-fashioned argument," she tells them plainly, and it's no wonder they go away grumbling.

Dorothy isn't the only one. There's Olivia de Havilland, who still lives with her mother and her sister in a small Hollywood apartment. Martha Raye packs her loud voice, her screaming vitality and all her fifty pairs of shoes in just four rooms.

It used to be the first thing one did, on arriving in Hollywood. One rented a big house first, then went to town afterward. But it is rapidly becoming an old Hollywood custom. When Sonja Henie arrived and rented a big white house on a hill, and bought herself an extravagant-looking white car to run around in, the glamor agents, for one brief moment of happiness, thought that perhaps the custom was being revived. But, then, Sonja explained that this display had nothing to do with what she hoped to make out of her career as an actress. This was merely living up to her reputation as a world champion ice skater. This, then, was not glamor rented on hope, as in the old days, but "position" bought and paid for on skates.

No, they are not making the splashes as they once did. What has happened to the Carole Lombard who, several years ago, achieved a new reputation and a second wind spurt in her career, by being known as Hollywood's biggest party giver. There was that time she rented the entire amusement pier at Venice; turned it into an hilarious party place, so that Dietrich might slide down slides and Claudette Colbert take a turn through tumbling barrels, not only to their personal delight, but for the delight of the world. After that, there were quite a few wholesale rentals — skating rinks, bowling alleys, dance halls and what not.

Where are those parties, those extravagant shebangs now? Miss Lombard has all but gone into solitude, spending her free time on her ranch, and even Kay Francis, who used to rent a place such as the Vendome once each year for the whole stellar list of Hollywood, now rents no more, but occasionally has a few guests to dine in her own home.

John Barrymore tussles with his daily crossword puzzle. It's all part of the domesticating process achieved by the resolute Mrs. Barrymore.

Are they getting stingy? Not a bit of it. But they are getting wise. They see that the public, living moderately itself, has come to prefer the stars who live that way, too. Instead of that old awe, a new palsy-walsy feeling has taken its place. "They're just human after all!" say the fans when they read that Clark Gable or Jimmy Stewart tinkers with his own car; that Loretta Young does her own marketing.

GONE even are the glamorous gestures that the great screen idols used to make toward their lady-loves. Gone so far into the past that some of them are hard to recall, but there are a few which stand out. Notably there was the time when Rudolph Valentino hired the staff of a large flower house, to properly decorate his home and the entrance up to it, to welcome Pola Negri, who was merely coming to dinner. There was a pathway of roses over which she walked, a table cloth of gardenias over which she ate. To-day Bob Taylor takes Barbara Stanwyck to Ocean Park and together they ride on the roller coaster. It goes to show how things have changed.

And there was that one other occasion, the occasion of probably the greatest glamor rental in history. A very famous young man, some say it was John Gilbert, and his equally famous lady friend once stopped at a well-known California resort. They were driving and they only intended to stop for tea, but the lady looked at the deep green pool about which the hotel was built, and she breathed, "How beautiful it would be to swim there, in the nude, in all that sunshine. It's something I've always wanted to do ever since I was a child."

A few minutes later it was arranged. But it wasn't so easy as it may seem. The pool part was easy enough, but the hotel was a popular one, and every room which looked out over the pool was taken at the time. But, within the hour, guests were moved, the blinds pulled, and to the tune of a four-figure sum, the lady had her swim—alone, we might add, without a soul looking on.

But such things don't happen any more. It's sad in a way, and it's tough on the publicists who now have to make much of such things as how Maureen O'Sullivan makes good old-fashioned potato bread, but it's all in the name of progress toward a greater sanity and a more simple life.

W. C. Fields, restored to health, is soon to co-star with John Barrymore in "Things Began to Happen."

FIRED: REHIRED— when she found out how to correct her misfit makeup

"Just fired the best stenographer I ever had. Nice girl but I couldn't stand her painted face."

"It's not your work, dear—it's that misfit makeup. Why don't you do something about it?"

"Miss Roberts, I guess I spoke too soon. Let's forget it—the job's yours as long as you want it."

MISSING OUT on jobs, on dates, on fun? There might be a reason . . . misfit makeup . . . those unrelated cosmetics that clash, that can't possibly look well together . . . or on you. Easy to correct—with Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup. For here's . . .

MAKEUP THAT MATCHES . . . face powder, rouge, and lipstick . . . eye makeup, too . . . in color-harmonized sets. And here's makeup that matches you . . . for it's keyed to your true personality color, the color that never changes, the color of your eyes.

NOW YOU CAN BE SURE your skin, your hair, your eyes look their loveliest, because you're following Nature's color plan for you! Stage and screen stars, beauty editors, fashion experts endorse Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup. Thousands of women who have tried it agree it's the way to immediate new beauty.

THE PRICE IS LOW. . . . Start now to build your matched set. Buy that lipstick . . . rouge, face powder, eye shadow, or mascara . . . in Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup . . . only 55¢ each (Canada 65¢). Your drug or department store recommends this makeup, advises:

If your eyes are { BLUE . . . . wear DRESDEN type / GRAY . . . . wear PATRICIAN type / BROWN . . wear PARISIAN type / HAZEL . . . wear CONTINENTAL type }

YOU'RE EAGER for success . . . in work, in life, in love! Invite it . . . wear makeup that matches . . . makeup that matches you!

COPYRIGHT 1938, BY RICHARD HUDNUT

MARVELOUS EYE-MATCHED MAKEUP by Richard Hudnut

Try it! Mail coupon NOW for Marvelous Makeup, keyed to your eyes! See how much lovelier you'll be with makeup that matches . . . and matches you.

RICHARD HUDNUT, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Avenue, New York City MM-5-38

I enclose 10 cents to help cover mailing costs. Send my Tryout Kit of Marvelous Makeup . . . harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick for my type, as checked below:

✓ My eyes are
☐ Blue ☐ Brown
☐ Gray ☐ Hazel

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

Calling all CHEEKS!

Attention! Go at once to your favorite toiletry counter. Get a box of Po-Go Rouge, Brique shade. Touch it to your cheeks and see how well you look!

Po-Go's a remarkable rouge. Costs only 55c, yet it's hand-made in Paris. It's soft, fine, feathery—goes on and blends as easily as powder, then lasts and lasts!

And that Brique shade is unusually flattering! Blonde or brunette, you'll call your cheeks perfect when you use Po-Go, Brique. Try it! If your store can't serve you, send 55c (stamps will do) direct to GuyT.Gibson,Inc.,565FifthAve.,N.Y.C.

The perfect shade, BRIQUE—only in

Po-Go ROUGE

55¢

Copyright, 1938 G. T. G. Inc.

If you have one single

GRAY HAIR

mail this Free Test

Now—before others think of you as "older"—is the time to touch up those first gray streaks. Millions—both men and women—have discovered this way to color fading strands. Just combing clear liquid through hair brings color: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Entirely SAFE ... Hair stays soft and lustrous. Get a bottle from your druggist on money-back guarantee.

Test it FREE

We'll send Complete Test Package Free. Snip lock from hair. Try first on this. No risk this way. State color of hair. Write Mary T. Goldman Company, Dept. 108 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

HAS SHE ANYTHING LEFT TO WANT?

(Continued from page 39)

haven't worked for.

"And I want to remember this phase of my life for all of my life. It's a salutary thought. And I'd like others to remember it, too, if they are interested. For I believe that anyone can get from life exactly what they want if they have the physical "wam," the intestinal fortitude, to go out and get it. There are hundreds of girls with voices every bit as good as mine, girls born with more looks than I was born with, and they do nothing about it. The trouble with them is it's all mental. They sit around and think about what they would like to do, what they should be doing, instead of doing something active about it."

"But, after all, Jeanette, you had great beauty and the voice. Do you honestly believe you would have got where you are now if you had been plain, unprepossessing?"

"Who says I had beauty?" demanded Jeanette. "I did not! And I can prove it." And Jeanette took herself into the library, returned with a portfolio of pictures, produced photographs of herself at the ages of eleven, fourteen, sixteen, said triumphantly. "See, I was too thin, much too thin. When I first went to New York I was all eyes and teeth. I didn't have beauty nor self-confidence nor glamor nor training nor pull. I did have ambition, I did have the physical energy to move the body from place to place. I did not sit and mope and pine and say, 'Oh, well, of course it was different for Jenny Lind!'

"I had patience. I took advice. I gained ten pounds, deliberately, and a commensurate amount of looks. I firmly believe that any girl can even make herself pretty according to the way she thinks. I also believe that laziness, alibis, what is known as 'passing the buck' are the only real deterrents to success.

"Yes, that's something I do want to remember—how hard I worked, how steep that upgrade was. I want to remember it well because it's a spine-stiffening thought if ever I have to make an upgrade again.

RIGHT now, I am thankful, of course. I count my blessings. Whenever I am petty—and we are all petty, I'm afraid, at times—I have the grace to be good and ashamed of myself.

"I am thankful but I am also aware that the truest axiom ever written is, 'This, too, shall pass away.'

"Ultimately I must give up my ambition, of course. We all lay down the cudgels sooner or later for younger hands to pick up. I shall doubtless have more ups and more downs in my work, in my life. What I want is to be able to take the downs as gallantly as, for instance, the late great Madame Schumann-Heink did. Think of how many times she was down and would have been completely out if it had not been for her invincible spirit.

"I want," said Jeanette, "an invincible spirit. That, above all, is what I do want. When the bad times come, or if they come, I want to be big enough to take them without whining.

"You know," Jeanette went on, speaking with that gravity which can only come from some deep-felt source, "one never knows. Life is fluid and keeps moving and motion means change. I know that everything I have now can pass away. I know that the money I have worked for and put away against the future may, with conditions in the world what they are today, be swept away, next year, five years from now, who can tell? There may be wars and I may lose my husband. Youth passes and the lustre of fame dims. These are inevitabilities. You say that I have my voice, too. Yes, but that also can go. It has happened to others. It could happen to me.

"I want to learn well the lesson that we are, all of us, essentially alone. We have, in the last analysis, only ourselves to depend on. Only that stuff of which we are made, or make ourselves, can stand us in stead, good or bad. The very words I am saying to you may enter your mind and there be transmuted into meanings I never intended them to have. I sing on the air and my voice goes from me and is mine no longer. It is everyone's who listens.

"To hold the memory of my happiness," she said, then, "I want that so much."

She told some of the memories she hopes will never dim for her. The little thoughtfulnesses of Gene, the gifts he sends her when she begins each new picture, the charm bracelet he sent her when she started "Maytime," with tiny golden clefs and notes of music as the charms, and miniature golden letters spelling out the word "Sweetheart," the jade brooch he gave her when she started "Firefly"; the charm bracelet he sent her when she started work in "The Girl of The Golden West," the charms two tiny gold guns, a tiny upright gold piano, a gold lariat, a couple of miniature gold horses. "And I am superstitious about these gifts, too" Jeanette laughed. "I wear each one throughout the picture. I wouldn't shoot a single foot of film without wearing it, even if I have to put it in my shoe. I've always been superstitious about anything like that."

AND Jeanette does her share, too. For while Gene was making "Stolen Heaven" recently, he had a dance number to do and Jeanette sent him a bronze dance trophy, one of those things with "To The Winner" engraved on the base. And the director, acting in cooperation with Jeanette, presented it to Gene on the set. "Gene," Jeanette said, "all but died of embarrassment and I nearly died of laughter when he came home that night and told me about it!"

Jeanette MacDonald, "Girl of the Golden West," goes in for puddings between scenes, to keep her voice smooth or something.

Guess what famous phrase Dancer Buddy Ebsen is illustrating—with the help of Kidder Leo Carrillo.

And there are the games they play. "We've always been slightly mad about games," laughed Jeanette. "Our Christmas tree resembled a six-year-old's idea of what Santa would do in a generous mood. Every game in the toy departments was there. Our current favorite is, of course, Indications, a kind of new version of the old Charades, Gene had to do Minnie the Moocher the other night and he couldn't do it—because, he said, he didn't know how to mooch.

"I've always heard," said Jeanette, amused, "that the first year of married life is the hardest. Well, then, I have yet another blessing to count, for in the eighth month of married life, I can only say that I'll want to remember every day of it. I'll want to remember our mutual love of music, the songs we sing together, the friends we share together, our love of horses and the rides we take.

"I want to keep the material things I have, too, our home and all of our beautiful things. For to have is one thing, to keep is another. I want to keep them beautiful. I am still in the stage where I go about just touching things to be sure they are here, and ours, and won't vanish. I like to take care of my things, too, and do. I'm not careless. I'm not extravagant. I don't think I waste my blessings, either material or immaterial. I never squander money on furs, jewels, imported gowns, other feminine frivolities. I am, on the other hand, full of pet economies.

EVERY Thursday I go into the kitchen and inspect the ice box. And nothing makes me more furious than to find two or three surplus quarts of milk there. I can't help thinking of all the underfed children in the world to whom this milk, spoiling in my ice-box, would mean life. I will not allow waste. If we have a roast for dinner Tuesday night, we have hash or stew the next night. I wouldn't dream of wearing a dress, a hat, a couple of times and then tossing them aside. No ma'am, I have my clothes made over, sometimes *Oiliness results in unflattering shine. Dermatologists identify excessive oiliness as Seborrhea. Germs aggravate this condition. Woodbury's Powder retards germ-growth, helps subdue nose shine.

EVER since Eve, women have complained about Shiny Nose . . . until Woodbury skin scientists perfected a germ-free face powder, which helps subdue this age-old enemy of beauty!

Germs May Aggravate Shiny Nose

All very simple how noses come to shine like Cellophane! Dermatologists say the excessive oiliness that makes the nose shine is often due to a condition called Seborrhea. Germs tend to aggravate this unwholesome skin condition.

Vital, then, to use face powder that is free from harmful germ-life! That's how Woodbury's Facial Powder helps inhibit ugly germ-induced shine. In tests, Woodbury's was the only one among 20 leading brands that was germ-free before use and still germ-free after contact with a germ-laden powder puff!

You'll love the shades of this exquisite beauty powder, too. Seven in all, covering the whole range of skin types. See the new Windsor Rose, styled in Paris, gloriously flattering to almost every woman.

Woodbury's Facial Powder comes in the new blue box at $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢. And to complete your make-up, try Woodbury's Germ-proof Rouge and Lipstick.

Send for 7 Thrilling Youth-Blend Shades

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9189 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario
Please send me 7 shades of Woodbury's Facial Powder; trial tubes of two Woodbury's Beauty Creams; guest-size Woodbury's Facial Soap. I enclose 10¢ to cover mailing costs.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

With Lovely CLOPAY Lintone WINDOW SHADES at 15¢ EACH

YEARS of use in millions of homes show that CLOPAY 15c window shades don't crack, don't pinhole, wear amazingly. And the new Lintone finish gives them a lovely linen-like texture that looks like $1.50 instead of 15c. No wonder millions of women now replace shabby shades with 15c CLOPAYS . . . and have beautiful, durable new window shades for less than the cost of cleaning old ones. See CLOPAYS in 5c and 10c and neighborhood stores everywhere.

NEW! WASHABLE Shades, Only 35c Complete on Roller

A way has been found to apply a special oil-finish to both sides of amazing CLOPAY Lintone material. Makes possible new CLOPAY WASHABLE Shades. Can actually be scrubbed with soap and water. Don't streak, curl or watermark. Yet cost only 35c each complete on rollers, for 36″x6′ size. Many attractive colors, enriched by the lovely Lintone texture. Send 3c stamp for color samples of both types of shade. Write CLOPAY CORPORATION, 1360 York Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

100% Washable

DEUBENER'S No. 20 Basketlyke Carrier—10c

Makes it, Oh—so easy to shop for that Easter outfit. And these attractive, snappy Carriers in the distinctive basket weave design not only look right but save you money. So useful for sewing or knitting too. Join the growing throngs of smart women who carry them.

DEUBENER'S No. 1 Leatherlyke Shopping Bag - 5c

"America's Standard" Shopping Bag. The ropes around the bottom give extra wear and carrying capacity. Look for the Deubener name on bottom and get extra value at YOUR Favorite Store.

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS
GARFIELD PARK, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The event of the year at Universal will be the debut of Danielle Darrieux in "The Rage of Paris." Danielle and her writer-husband, Henri Decoin, puzzle over the English language.

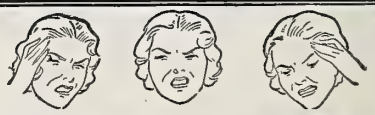
more than once. I save things. I even save little odds and ends of ribbon, from florists' boxes, gift boxes. I give them to my maid to cover plain wooden hangers with. She pads the hangers with cotton first, then twines the fragments of ribbons around them and there they are, gay and attractive and costing nothing!

"I do have one extravagance, though," laughed Jeanette, "and it's a complex for making long distance telephone calls! It's a positive phobia with me. When I was in New York the autumn before Gene and I were married, well, I had a phone bill and it was a honey! When I was in Tahoe on location, ditto. I never think of waiting for the lowered-rate hours. I talk and talk and talk, for hours. But in every other respect" said Jeanette, with emphasis, "I'd call myself economical.

"I don't like the idea of doing a house over every year or so. I like the feeling of things I've lived with. I like the chintzes to grow a little faded, comfy dents in the chairs where my friends have rested, the kind of a house where you can sit on the divans and chairs with your feet tucked under you without feeling that your hostess may be, mentally, raising pained eyebrows. To take care of what I have," Jeanette said, "the things I can see and touch, that is what I want.

"And oh, there are lots of little things, too, for me to want. I'd like to be able to sleep nights, for one not-so-little instance. For it's not such a little thing, being an insomniac. I've tried everything, from turning on the radio softly to counting sheep. I try reading myself to sleep but that makes it worse. Once I start a book I'm awake until the book is finished. I want to get over my perfect genius for saying the wrong thing. I've given myself some of the most embarrassing moments thanks to this 'gift.' I remember a time, some years ago, when my young nephew was caught playing hooky from school. I decided to read him the riot act, and did. I said to him, 'Here I am, working myself to skin and bone, going to the theatre every night and what do you do? You take advantage of me, you don't appreciate

TAKE YOUR PICK



The new GRIFFIN A. B. C. Liquid Wax, in black, tan, brown and blue . . . No dauber, no brush, no polishing cloth — just spread it on with swab in bottle. It dries to a shine — recolors faded leathers.

— or, GRIFFIN A. B. C. Wax Polish in the jumbo tin, all popular colors, for the nearest thing to a professional shine at home.

Bottle or Tin 10c

BOTH MADE BY
GRIFFIN
THE GREATEST NAME IN SHOE POLISH

ONE SICK HEADACHE AFTER ANOTHER

BUT THAT IS ALL OVER NOW

I FEEL grand since I began taking the ALL-VEGETABLE Laxative, Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets). One NR Tablet convinced me . . . so mild, thorough, refreshing, invigorating.

Dependable relief from sick headaches, bilious spells and that tired-out feeling, when caused by or associated with constipation.

Without Risk get a 25c box of NRs from any druggist. Use for a week. If not more than pleased, return the box and we will refund purchase price. That's fair. Try it—NR Tonight —Tomorrow Alright.

Nature's Remedy NR-TABLETS-NR

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly, embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoy the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. PRINT NAME PLAINLY. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Walgreen Drug Stores.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

Lake Laboratories, Box 6, Northwestern Station, Dept. 605. Detroit. Mich.

Sonja Henie got herself decked out in ermine tails to go stepping with a new beau—Cesar Romero.

what I am trying to do and—and I don't mean a word of it!' And then I clapped my hand over my mouth and gave myself the laugh and he, of course, did the same thing. What I'd meant to say was, 'And I mean every word of it!' I get so excited with what I am saying that it doesn't seem to matter to me what words I use.

"I should like to write. And if ever I do any writing it will not be poetry! I detest poetry. I never read it, it bores me. If ever I do any writing it will be, I think, very simple, very down-to-earth writing.

"I have one obsessing yen, to take a trip in a trailer with Gene. It would be more fun than to take any kind of a trip on the most de luxe ship, train or plane. I want to keep house in a trailer. I want to cook in a trailer."

Gene phoned. A week-end trip was planned, then and there. Jeanette's maid was summoned, packing instructions given.

Jeanette walked to the door with me, she walked down the flower-bordered path, sweet-scented in the dusk. She looked back at the house which contains her happiness and I looked at her, who gives happiness to so many. I went away with a newly increased respect for this girl who, endowed with and surrounded by all the treasures of the earth says, "I want to keep what I have—I want an invincible spirit."

Solution to Puzzle on Page 12

A BEAUTY SECRET FROM NOBILITY AND SCREEN
To Double Your Attractiveness!

"Marchand's Golden Hair Wash lightened my hair simply and effectively . . . and I recommend it to any woman to restore her natural loveliness." . . . SAYS
Countess Eleanora Colloredo-Mannsfeld
Born to nobility, the Countess is descended from the house of Prince Peter Ernst Mansfeld, 17th Century Ruler of The Netherlands.

"If your hair has become dark and dull, take a tip from me! Use Marchand's, as I do, to keep your hair naturally light and radiant."
. . . SAYS Barbara Pepper
One of Hollywood's loveliest blondes . . . admired for the golden radiance of her hair . . . appearing currently in "Hollywood's Stadium Mystery"
A REPUBLIC PICTURE

60% OF ALL WOMEN WERE BORN BLONDE!
. . . But time dulls the radiance of any shade of hair

If your hair is darker now than it was when you were a child, there is new loveliness in store for you. Let Marchand's Golden Hair Wash restore the natural sunny highlights of your hair. It is as though a miracle takes place . . . your whole personality is spot-lighted. Try a bottle of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash today . . . follow simple directions . . . and double your attractiveness, overnight.

MARCHAND'S GOLDEN HAIR WASH
AT ALL DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

You'll Enjoy MANICURING!

Ginnie-Lou VITAMIZED
FINGER NAIL CLEANSING PADS

You'll enthuse about these handy new ready-prepared pads which remove old nail polish in a jiffy—no liquid, no fuss, no muss. These unique pads also contain Vitamin "F" and oils to condition your nails against brittleness.

Get a handsome jar of pads today and start manicuring the easy way that saves your time.

10¢ and 25¢ PACKAGES

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

25 Movie Star Pictures 25c

PLUS 3c STAMP FOR POSTAGE

Send in for a set of 25 beautifully colored Pictures of Popular Movie Stars. Size 5x7.

Screen Art Studios
2529 N. Richmond St.
Chicago, Illinois

A SHORT-CUT TO Beautiful Hair!

GET A Lovely WAVE THIS QUICK, EASY WAY

It's easy . . . it's inexpensive . . . to give yourself a soft, beautiful wave with Dr. Ellis' Wave-Set. This superior waving fluid holds your wave longer. It dries quickly, and will not flake. Sold everywhere—get a bottle today!

Dr. Ellis Sales Corp., 1125 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. (Canadian Office: Toronto, Ontario)

AT ALL 5 & 10 AND DRUG STORES

ONLY 10¢ DR. ELLIS' WAVE-SET

BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME

(Continued from page 87)

their mates, their children and their homes, rather than an elaborate description of Dawn Darling spending every day gambling at the race track, and spending long hours each night at the Swanky Swank Club. This latter type of publicity isn't exactly wholesome, and we theatre-goers aren't so degenerate that we can't appreciate the splendid father Bing Crosby is, or grin when we see a picture of lovable Wally Beery with his adorable Carol Ann. Even Gary Cooper has been roped and branded as a home lover—and he is prouder of his new daughter than of any picture he ever made. The same goes for feminine stars. Let's hear more of their homes and babies, and less about night clubs and prospective divorces.—Gladyce Bennett, Houston, Texas.

$1.00 Prize Letter

As She Sees Them

Shirley Temple—bonny.
Sunshine dancing on yellow poppies . . .
Irene Dunne—genial.
Fragrant apple pies on the kitchen table.
Claudette Colbert—vivacious.
High heels . . . wind-tossed laughter . . .
Ginger Rogers—animated.
Hurdy-gurdy music on a spring day. . . .
Greta Garbo—idealist.
Wind-swept cliff overlooking a pounding sea.
Mae West—suggestive.
Cigarette glowing in the dark. . . .
Myrna Loy—sophisticated.
Orchids . . . soft candle-light on a lace cloth. . . .
Katharine Hepburn—spirited.
Cornered kitten, snarling to hide its fear. . . .

—Mrs. Edna Geries, Fresno, Cal.

$1.00 Prize Letter

Is Nothing Sacred?

"Nothing Sacred" might have been extraordinarily funny had it boasted a different theme. Somehow, I couldn't get into the fun as whole-heartedly as I might. The actors gave smooth performances, the dialogue was consistently amusing, and yet . . . .

Perhaps I am unique, but to me death just isn't a comic subject. Some one supposedly dying by inches, even "just pretending," somehow went against the grain, and made the laughs stick in my throat.

I would enjoy seeing the same cast in a comedy with a less macabre theme.—D. H. Chapman, Los Angeles, Cal.

$1.00 Prize Poem

He'd Rather See Than Be

Profoundly I worship the matchless maneuvers
Of Sonja, our dainty, diminutive star;
Convinced as I am that her rythmical motion
Surpasses the skill of her sisters by far.

Personification of effortless ease,
Exemplar of all that is skating finesse,
In tossing my personal orchid to you
I've blundered unwittingly into a mess.
Unhappy the day that I followed your skate-steps
Endeavoring vainly to echo your grace,
For each of my feeble, decrepitous capers
Unfailingly landed me flat on my face!

Henceforth my applause shall be utterly passive;
The cheers of a fan who's contented as such,
For since I attempted to say it with skating
I've worshipped your skill from the top of a crutch!

—Gene Gleason, East Cleveland, Ohio.

$1.00 Prize Letter

1st Degree Murder

A couple of years ago, I saw "Times Square Lady" and also a gentleman by the name of Robert Taylor. Since then Mr. Taylor has reached the very pinnacle of fame, but, unfortunately, recently has lost most of his popularity.

It is a famous saying—"the fans are fickle." I disagree. It is not the fault of the public that a star falls into oblivion. Silly publicity is mainly at fault. What could be more ridiculous than this "Do you consider yourself beautiful?" business? Why, it has finally got to the point where a person can't confess that he is a Taylor fan, without being ridiculed.

I admit that Mr. Taylor is not the best actor in Hollywood, but he certainly can point with pride to his best performance in "Magnificent Obsession." Since then, how many worthwhile pictures has MGM cast him in? In "Broadway Melody of 1938" he didn't have one decent line. In all of his pictures, his features have a tendency to look feminine because of excess makeup. Therefore, MGM, I accuse you of murder in the 1st degree—the murder of Robert Taylor's popularity.

However, MGM is not the only studio at fault. Take heed, Studios! We fans do not destroy stars. If some who deserve to shine brightly are flickering and even fading, the blame rests upon you. The jury finds you guilty of the murder of worthwhile careers and recommends capital punishment.—Florence Toomey, Verona, N. J.

Edward G. Robinson and Rosemary Lane, of the innumerable Lane sisters, see the same joke at a Warner Brothers banquet.

THAT THING CALLED TEMPERAMENT

(Continued from page 43)

hold," he said, "and so what was there for them to do but fire me?"

His father then obtained a job for him with a friend as assistant manager for a theatrical company, and it was while working at this job that he decided to become an actor, "because they made more money than I was getting," he explained.

He traveled with the company, working as business manager and jumping into unimportant roles when he was needed. His ability to act and his popularity with audiences increased simultaneously and at the end of two years he found himself a success on the London stage in the role of Tommy in "Brewster's Millions."

Then along came the war, interrupting his career just as it was nicely started. He won't talk of the war; of his own injuries, which put him in a hospital for thirteen long months; but those years made a definite impression on his character and left their imprint on his face.

Thirteen months is a long time to lie in a hospital; a long time when all he could do was think and think and think. It isn't strange that things as unimportant as temperament seem silly to him. One of the most important lessons he learned during that period was self-control.

With self-control he learned tolerance, with the result that he considers the other fellow's point of view as well as his own. I happened to be at the studio one day when he had an appointment for an interview. It was a day when he was having one of his very occasional holidays from work and he had broken a personal engagement to keep this appointment. He waited until two o'clock but the reporter neither appeared nor telephoned. Finally he ate a solitary lunch.

"I'm sure something must have happened to her," he said, and waited another hour. Later the reporter appeared. She had met with an accident on a country road miles from a telephone. Marshall agreed to an appointment for a later date. Not a word was said about his ruined holiday.

HOWEVER, don't think, from that incident, that he can be pushed around or made to do anything he doesn't want to do.

He has learned how to live gracefully and how to get the most out of life. When he says "kicking up a row takes too much energy" he means just that. It is much easier, he has learned, to gain your ends by less spectacular methods. I had an opportunity to see how this worked out in one instance.

When he signed his new contract, he was assigned one of the star dressing-room suites. When I went to the studio to see him he had just moved in, the place hadn't been cleaned up after the last occupant, and things were in a bit of a mess, as he would say. Unlike many another star, he made no demands. He moved in and waited.

We had barely sat down when there was a rap on the door. A studio decorator had come to ask if Mr. Marshall would like his suite done over.

"Oh, if I might have some covers put on this furniture," he said eagerly. "Some loose covers of some gay material."

He said it with the manner that the decorator was doing him the greatest personal favor in the world and just as though he couldn't pick up the telephone, call the front office, demand satin upholstered walls and other luxurious furnishings and get them.

"And there are two of these dressing tables with mirrors," he continued. "I don't need two, but both mirrors are cracked and it's most depressing to look at yourself in a cracked mirror. And something at the windows?" he suggested questioningly.

"Would you like Venetian blinds, Mr. Marshall?" the young man asked.

"Oh, say!" the actor replied enthusiastically. "That would be terrific!"

It would be my private guess that by now he has the smartest dressing-room at the studio.

Before he left he told me of his hopes to visit England after another picture or two.

"I'm going to England to get a look at it," he said. "You know how Americans are. They live here all their lives and never see the Grand Canyon. Well, I'm that way about England. I've never really seen my own land. I've always been too busy."

Judging by the way producers rush him from one picture to another, it doesn't look as though he will see it soon.

JOAN PERRY
Columbia Pictures

NEW!

We asked women everywhere...in homes, in beauty shops, in stores and offices...and they said "Give us a curler that will make large, soft, natural-looking curls." So we designed the HOLLYWOOD GIANT, pictured here in actual size. Curls made on this big cylinder look softer, more natural. They comb without becoming frizzy. And they give the large, full curls so favored in the new hair styles. The HOLLYWOOD GIANT is easy to use...rolls smoothly, dries quickly, withdraws without spoiling curl. They're 2 for 10¢ at dime stores and notion counters.

ACTUAL SIZE
3 inches by ½ inch

U. S. PATENTS
2000893 2000894

Giant
HOLLYWOOD
Rapid Dry CURLERS
AT 5c AND 10c STORES & NOTION COUNTERS

New!...A 7 DAY SHAMPOO FOR BLONDES

You Keep the Brilliance, Lustre and Loveliness this Shampoo Gives Blonde Hair For a WHOLE WEEK!

Ends Dull, Between-Shampoo Look!

A single wash with this amazing new type shampoo instantly removes the dull, dingy oil and dust-laden film that leaves blonde hair lifeless, mouse-colored and "old" looking, and enables you to keep that "JUST SHAMPOOED" look, all week. Done in a few minutes and at a cost of but a few pennies, New Blondex gives your hair that glorious, lustrous, shimmering radiance that usually comes only in childhood. All shades of blondes find New Blondex leaves their hair lighter—lovelier. Start BLONDEX today. New combination package—shampoo with separate rinse—at all stores.

NEURITIS Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the Doctor's formula. No opiates, no narcotics. Does the work quickly—must relieve worst pain to your satisfaction in few minutes or money back at Druggist's. Don't suffer. Get trustworthy NURITO today on this guarantee.

MUTUAL BENEFIT ASS'N.

(Continued from page 35)

and who told her daily how lucky she was to have him, she found herself being forced into a back seat, both as an actress and as a woman. It was, to put it bluntly, seven years of stooging.

They never went out, court was held at home, and there were only the husband's old vaudeville friends to pay him homage. When Barbara made a picture, as she did occasionally, it was with the enforced attitude that it was only a side-line, only for pin money. Naturally her career suffered, but deeper than that went the destruction. Every woman needs a certain amount of attention, a certain amount of mental cuddling and patting, a certain amount of "position" both in the home and out of it to keep her ego at a proper level. These were all things which were lacking.

WHEN Barbara finally emerged from that dark existence, it was, as she once put it, "like the first day when she'd been released from the orphanage." That was when she was about twelve. It was some holiday's outing: out from cold dank walls into the limitless sunshine. When Barbara stepped out into the sunshine of Hollywood freedom and airiness it was like that. Like a little girl who had escaped pigtails and black and white checkered gingham, and was going for a great glorious walk into the open.

But can't you imagine that a little girl who has been in an orphanage all her life finds the world rather startling, is a little amazed and benumbed about it, and doesn't quite know how to act? That was what happened to Barbara in 1936; an older, but still a little-girl Barbara.

Which brings us to the second important line on her picture. Barbara in those days was not only drab-hearted, but she was also ungracious; one of the most ungracious girls who ever ungraced a Hollywood gathering. That first gathering which she attended is well-remembered by a friend who says that "Barbara was in that peculiar kind of state known as corner-sitting. She just sat there and nobody could get her out of it. Even civil conversation she ignored. For example, you'd say, 'It's been a nice day to-day, hasn't it?' and she'd say, 'I don't know. I wasn't out in it.' It wasn't that she meant to be like that, it was just that she was strained and self-conscious and she didn't know what to do about it."

Yet it was on that same evening that she met Robert Taylor. It is still a mystery to the world, and to Barbara too, considering the unpleasantness of her mood, how he ever happened to be attracted to her. But perhaps that was it. Besieged and torn apart by flagrant flappers at every turn, perhaps it was exactly this unresponsiveness which looked good to him, although those of us who know Bob a little better are rather inclined to hand him more of a bouquet on the matter. Bob is not the fly-by-night, light-and-laughter young man he is sometimes made out to be. There is a stalwartness in him some people don't know about. Looking through and beyond the flippant "so-what" mask Barbara was wearing, he saw a harmonizing stalwartness there behind that mask, and it was something he had been looking for.

The result was the first date Barbara had ever had with a man since the end of her marriage. The result of that result is that up until this moment Barbara has never had another date with anyone else.

Bob's frankness and directness made him, in the beginning, a welcome figure in Barbara's life. Back there at the time of her new stepping-out into the world she had been beaten down, and then along came this young man, the idol of millions, to build her up. That phrase, "idol of millions," is used, incidentally, only as an explanatory phrase in connection with Robert; it is not in the least explanatory of what happened to her. While aside from the fact that Bob's attentions were flattering in the eyes of other people, because he was and still is the romance man of the hour, it wasn't this which meant so much to her. It was because he was a fine, clean young man who adored her, who not only didn't mind letting her know about it, in a thousand little gestures, little words, little ways, but didn't mind letting the world know about it either.

For the first time in seven years, she knew what it was to hear a man say, "Gee, I like your hair that way. That's swell. It looks awfully pretty." Or, "Good girl, you wore my favorite dress again." Or, "Barbara, where would you like to go to dinner?" Little things, but with big meanings. Barbara found herself being important again.

Because she was important now to someone else, she was becoming important to herself, and that was what she needed. Slowly, and by degrees, that chip lost its balance on her shoulder, then it slipped and fell altogether. Barbara left it somewhere along the road, behind her, because the new Barbara was making fast strides along that road, away from the dark abode where once she had been hiding.

There are concrete things, too, to show how she has blossomed—such a trite word, but in this case the only one that adequately describes the process. There is her attitude toward clothes, for example, and jewelry and perfumes and furs, and all those outer things which nevertheless indicate the degree of femininity and senti-

James Stewart tries to do an Astaire in Ginger Rogers' picture, "Vivacious Lady." Ginger looks doubtful, but Jimmy will convince her, we know.

Joan Blondell plays a lady detective in "There's Always A Woman," and she just can't get that suspicious look out of her eyes.

La Hawkshaw isn't afraid to hold the magnifying glass up to nature. If all sleuths looked like Joan, crime would certainly pay.

Joan twirls her moustache, sticks out her little finger, and prepares to show up Philo Vance, Charlie Chan, and Mr. Moto.

mental care in the inner woman. Barbara used to be a perennial headache to all of the fashion experts in town who were sometimes required to outfit her for publicity and fashion pictures. We say "sometimes" because requests for Barbara displaying the smartest and latest of this and that weren't very many or very frequent. Her reputation as a lazy, slip-shod model was already too well known. She had this reputation because that was her viewpoint toward this type of work.

"Oh, so you want me to give it this!" she would say belittlingly to the overwrought photographer who was merely trying to get her to tip her hat at a more sophisticated angle, to swing her hips a little to the left, or maybe it was an even smaller matter of just wetting her lips. "Oh, so you want me to be a Glamor Girl —well, how's this?"

"No, not like that, Barbara, please. Don't kid it, please. Oh, Barbara!"

IT was always hopeless, not only the poses, but the type of clothes she insisted on wearing. "Don't make me out a movie queen," she would say, ordering a whole bunch of hot-from-the-designer creations back to the wardrobe department. "What's the matter with this little number I'm wearing? It's not very new, I'll admit, but I've never worn it before. Save those other things for somebody who's got the style. I just haven't and I know it."

But this situation is no more, as the fashion editors of many a publication will testify. They want more and more photographs of Barbara. And she hasn't spruced up on clothes just to please a new-found public. Barbara has had public before. It's something she has done because of Bob. Not directly perhaps. It was not anything ever mentioned between them, but when she saw that he noticed things about clothes, she naturally strived to please him on this subject.

For example, she discovered that he admired tailored suits on women. An exclusive Hollywood tailor had a new customer shortly afterward. Another thing, Barbara had never worn jewelry in her life. Bob gave her some, a bracelet, a watch, several rings. On the occasion of the first gift, Barbara said in a frank outburst, because she never does or says anything any other way, "Oh, Bob, I'm not the type!"

"What do you mean you're not the type?" he returned in the same manner. "To me, you're beautiful and lovely and you decorate my life. I don't know why you shouldn't be decked out a little."

All right, and she wore it. Now the dangling bangles on her arm are a symbol of the new, lighter and happier tinkle in her personality.

Part of this tinkle may also be ascribed to the influence that Bob's own special graciousness has also had in her life. During those seven years she had been embarrassed on so many occasions that friends and a social life were absolutely denied her. Not only because of her husband's peculiar behavior, but he had made a ruling that she should never have any friends of her own. Now you may also understand what it meant to her to be suddenly escorted by a man who, because of his gentlemanliness, his sociability and his own personality-grace, was welcomed and wanted everywhere. In the presence of such pleasantness, Barbara couldn't help relaxing, and bringing forth some of her own. The association brought her a marvelous new gaiety. In her heart, as well as in her actions, she became at ease.

Naturally, in the beginning, there were those in town who said that Barbara was going around with Bob only for the publicity that it gave her and that once she had gotten hold of him she'd never let him go. Knowing Barbara and knowing how completely naive she is, how unsuspecting of maliciousness in others, it is quite certain that the existence of this attitude never even occurred to her. But Bob, being perhaps a little more open-eyed and open-eared about such things, may have heard about it, and it is he who has finally succeeded in putting a stop to it. If you had ever seen them together at some small party you would know what we mean.

It isn't that Bob is gushy and demonstrative with her. But suppose they are starting to leave, and a last minute discussion comes up, and they come back into the room. Barbara sinks into a chair. Bob sits down on that chair's arm, his arm lightly on the back of it. Or maybe they are just idling in the doorway over those last few goodnights. He stands behind her, with his arms boyishly and affectionately encircling her. It's not that usual type of Hollywood familiarity at which anyone might take offense. It's only a touching and enlightening tenderness-indication between them. Still on some occasions there have been more wide-spread and far-flung expressions of this feeling. Barbara laughs a little in confusion when she tells of those across-the-ocean phone calls that Bob made to her from London when he was there on his "A Yank At Oxford" picture a few months ago.

What happened was this. The first time he called, he shouted at the top of his lungs as though he worried for fear she couldn't hear him. "I love you! I love you!" the vibrant, enthusiastic voice sang across the world. Later, after the excitement of those few moments had passed, Barbara realized that trans-Atlantic calls are not very private, that anyone on any boat or anyone with a particular kind of short wave receiver could pick up every word they were saying. She cabled him a warning saying that probably the whole world was listening in and to be more careful in the future. But the very next night he called again, and there it was, the very same message, the very same words, only if anything, shouted even more

(Continued on page 114)

Either the Best Dressed Woman is setting a new style in overdraperies, or else Kay Francis is protecting her dress with an apron as she reads the script of "Women Are Like That."

IS YOUR BEAUTY PROBLEM HERE?

(Continued from page 57)

something just out of touching distance.

THIS is a good exercise, too, for adding shape to a waistline which is pretty much straight up-and-down: stand erect with hands on hips. Bend your upper body to the left, and at the same time do a side left kick, keeping your leg straight and your knee stiff—iffen you can. Do this to music whenever possible. Having been practicing what I preach, I find that "Bei Mir Bist Du Schön" is simply swell for this—kick and bend on "mir" and again on "schön"—in that tempo.

The above are figure faults which are fairly typical, I think. The rest of this article will be devoted to case histories—notes I've made on average folks I've observed. And if you recognize one of your faults or mistakes here, maybe my suggestions will help.

Girl with thin face, long nose—you get a rough idea of what I mean in Sketch IV. She had dark hair and it was pulled back from her forehead and tucked behind her ears. Her dress had a V-neckline. Nothing—but nothing—could be "wronger." A short bang, or at least soft waves pressed down to conceal the hairline (which wasn't good, ennyhoo) would have taken attention away from the long nose. The bang would widen the face. Her rather thin mouth might have been improved by widening the curve of the upper lip just a trifle. Her brown eyes were really beautiful, but obscured by lack of eyebrow grooming. Eyebrows do obscure or set off the "windows of your soul."

She had a Latin look—probably Italian or Spanish descent. I've observed that most Latin-American gals are apt to do their hair in too severe a style, probably because their mamas and grandmamas kept to their nationality's slick hair-do. It shouldn't be so. Only true beauty or great chic can get away with ultra-severe coiffures. One needn't go to the other extreme, and blossom out in tight waves and ringlets. But there are such things as short center parts, soft, flattish curls emphasizing the width of the face, and an upward trend to the back hair, to get away from that pulled-down effect. Okay to show the tip of the ear, but not the entire ear. And a boat-shaped or base-of-throat neckline is much better than a V for a thin face.

The girl whose salient face faults are illustrated in Sketch V was potentially kinda cute, but she did nothing whatever to enhance her charms. She did everything to detract from them. Features—not much. Nose a bit bulbous at the tip, but not an ugly nose. Simply a run-of-the-mill nose. Mouth very small—not much could be done about it in the way of enlarging it with lipstick, but this girl need not have made it up in the old Cupid's bow style, which is as out of date as the corset cover.

Her eyes were rather small and deepset, but well spaced. However, nothing was accomplished in the way of improving these windows of the soul by the over-plucked eyebrows, placed entirely too high above the eyes, and painted, so help muh, black as ink when the gal's coloring was medium blonde. The brows should have been trained down closer to the eyes, by brushing and oiling, and should not have been plucked at all, except perhaps for straggly hairs near the nose. They should have been pencilled brown, and lengthened a little bit at the outer edge, to give the eyes the illusion of greater size. And eyeshadow should certainly have entered the picture—to shadow the whole lid, increasing in depth a little toward the outer side, and all blended in very cleverly, of course.

'Twas the hair-do, though, that really got me down. It was high, and wide, and not very handsome. With a small face, and small, rather insignificant features (though the face as a whole was pleasing), this kid had shwooshed her hair out in almost an old fashioned pompadour style. An old fashioned, wooden marcel, with the ends finished in combed-out, rather messy curls—oh dear! Before you ask where did I see this wench—in the Ark?—let me tell you I see many similar hair-dos. Perhaps not quite so bad, but at least, far too bushy, or over-curled and over-permanented, and quite lacking in the closer, smarter, more ladylike style which is rapidly becoming popular. Another thing: this girl had a low forehead, and like many similarly featured, she had thought to give height to her forehead by taking all the hair off'n it. The opposite trick gives the desired effect: cover part of your forehead, and keep the public guessing how low or high this feature of yours may be.

Now—with the active "Skin-Vitamin" it NOURISHES Skin, too

Miss Margaret Biddle

"I always did love Pond's Vanishing Cream for powder base. But now as nourishing cream, it is too perfect for words. Such a light, greaseless cream to use on your face at night!"

A CREAM that is powder base and nourishing cream in one! The new Pond's Vanishing Cream is a revelation to many women.

It is positively not a grease cream . . . It positively does not come out again in a "goo" . . . It holds your powder faithfully . . . And—it contains that blessed "skin-vitamin" which nourishes the skin and improves its texture!

The new Pond's Vanishing Cream with "skin-vitamin" in it is grand as ever for melting away little roughnesses and smoothing your skin for powder. And is never drying! Use it for overnight after cleansing and in the daytime under your powder. Now Pond's Vanishing Cream with "skin-vitamin" is nourishing your skin while it is holding your powder! Its use helps to make skin finer and lovelier, fresher.

Same jars, same labels, same price . . .

Now every jar of Pond's Vanishing Cream you buy contains this new cream with "skin-vitamin" in it. You will find it in the same jars, with the same labels, at the same price.

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N.Y.Time, N.B.C.

SEND FOR THE NEW CREAM!

TEST IT IN 9 TREATMENTS

Pond's, Dept. 9MS-VS, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's new "skin-vitamin" Vanishing Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with samples of 2 other Pond's "skin-vitamin" Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

Name_____

Street_____

City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

because her soft, young hair enchants him

● In courtship or marriage—a girl is irresistible when she has alluring hair—lustrous, youthful hair, as only Admiracion gives you. New, and entirely different, Admiracion is the only Oil shampoo that lathers. Its rich, creamy foam floats away all dirt, dandruff and dulling film... rinses away in clear water—and leaves your hair delightfully clean, soft, more manageable and more radiantly beautiful than ever before! Get Admiracion today at drug, department and 10¢ stores.

Should you prefer an oil shampoo that makes no lather, ask for Admiracion Olive Oil Shampoo in the RED package.

In new GREEN package
ADMIRACION
FOAMY OIL SHAMPOO

ECZEMA Itching and Burning quickly subdued and healing of the angry skin aided with Resinol
Sample free Resinol-A, Balto., Md.
Resinol

Makes Ironing Easy

No "married look" to collars and cuffs starched this easy way. Just cream this ready mixed powder in a little cold water... then add hot. That's all. A wonderful invention. Your iron fairly glides. Send now for free sample packet.

THANK YOU

THE HUBINGER CO., No. 518, Keokuk, Ia.
Your free sample of QUICK ELASTIC, please. "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

Name .....

Address .....

MUTUAL BENEFIT ASS'N.

(Continued from page 112)

loudly and more enthusiastically. Barbara's "sh's!" were unheeded.

Thus, from this small anecdote you may judge that it is only her "yes" which is lacking to make this twosome a marriage. Her delay may seem quite incomprehensible to the millions of Taylor's female worshippers, but it's to be remembered that Barbara is no ordinary girl, and she has a knack of being able to see both sides of a question. She doesn't believe that a marriage for Bob is what his fans would want right now. She has said honestly. Which evidences her acceptance of that old Hollywood rule that while there's no wife, there's still hope for the legion of a movie man's admirers.

IN respect to her naivete, there is a further example in that same recent court hearing over the little boy. When Barbara went to court to fight for the right to be the sole custodian of her child she was totally unprepared for the introduction of Bob's name into it. She felt that Bob's name had no place in the case, that he had nothing to do with her life as Mrs. Fay, and since she always fights by fair rules herself, she had no thought that the fight might be conducted otherwise. Then, on the second or third day of the hearing, Bob's name hit the headlines too.

It was brought in by the opposition. They put her on the stand to have her admit that he was a frequent visitor at her house, but Barbara insisted that this had nothing to do with it. It was a blow to her, and she was heartsick that they should thus side-track the issue. Bob took it all graciously and kept quietly and calmly at a distance. He begged her to believe that it didn't upset him a bit, and in the end the calmness and quietness of his attitude did more than anything to ease the hurt. If it hadn't been for him the reopening of an old wound would certainly have put her back in the same bitter state from which he had once rescued her. In every big crisis then, as well as in the small daily ones he has been just as surely a blessing to her, in pulling her out of an old life, as she has been helpful to him in advising him on how to get established in a new one.

So you can see that there has been a "give" and a benefit on both sides, and that is what makes their love story such a full, rich one, and one which is more surely to be continued, installment after installment, a story without end. Everywhere you turn now in this town, you hear people commenting on the Stanwyck-Taylor association which has withstood even a separation of four months while Bob made his trip to England, and always you hear the phrase, "Well, he's certainly lucky to have her!" We mean that she's a true-blue girl who has been a help to him rather than a hindrance. In a town of gold-digging and hothouse forced-plant marriages, she is a remarkable exception. It's time now that we also begin to exclaim that she's lucky to have him, and not just because he's handsome, and wealthy and successful, either. That, as we hope we've made clear, is only the smallest part of the story. The big part of the story may be found in the new steady glow in her eyes, in the accentuated verve in her acting, and in the new feeling of importance and superiority she nurtures in her heart. A woman has to have that to be happy, and it is through Bob, his fineness and his tenderness, that she has won this new capacity.

QUIVERING nerves can make you old and haggard looking, cranky and hard to live with—can keep you awake nights and rob you of good health, good times and jobs.

Don't let yourself "go" like that. Start taking a good, reliable tonic, made especially for women. And could you ask for any whose benefits have been better proved than the famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Let the wholesome herbs and roots of Pinkham's Compound help Nature tone up your system, and thus calm shrieking nerves, help lessen distress from female functional disorders and give you more strength.

For over 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Pinkham's Compound. Why not let it HELP YOU?

Lydia E. Pinkham's
VEGETABLE COMPOUND

YOUR choice included with every ring ordered and paid for on this Amazing new plan — Wear 10 days AT OUR RISK!

FREE of extra charge

$1,000,000 FACTORY guarantees their ACCURACY. Simulated gold front watches—stainless back. Jewelled. Your choice included FREE to introduce fiery, flashing simulated diamond ring set in LIFETIME Sterling—925/1000 pure—Looks like $300.00. WEAR 10 days FREE TRIAL. Make 2 monthly $2 payments (total $4 in all). We gladly trust you. —Send 10 cents for packing, etc.—Your order shipped SAME DAY BY RETURN MAIL.

Gold Standard Watch Co., Dept. C-325, Newton, Mass.

SHUNNED AT SCHOOL BECAUSE OF PIMPLES?

Take steps to free your blood of skin-defiling poisons

Stop being the victim of ugly hickies. Don't be shunned and laughed at. Get right to the root of the trouble. It may be poisons in your blood.

Between the ages of 13 and 25, important glands are developing. These gland changes often upset your system. At the same time, waste poisons from the intestinal tract may collect in the blood stream... bubble out on your skin in disfiguring pimples.

You want to rid your blood of these skin-irritating poisons. Thousands have succeeded—just by eating Fleischmann's Yeast, 3 cakes a day. The millions of tiny, living plants in each cake help you keep these poisons out of your blood, give you clearer, smoother skin.

Many get splendid results in 30 days or less. Don't waste time and run the risk of permanently damaged skin. Start eating Fleischmann's Yeast today!

PRESTO CHANGE-O

(Continued from page 51)

As her waist line tapered down, she appeared to take on height. This slender, chestnut-haired, quietly poised young lady bore little resemblance to the rollicking, wide-eyed blonde who had married Lew Ayres.

"I realized that for the first time in my life I was thoroughly enjoying life," explained Lola. "It had taken quiet and study and normal living to bring out the real Lola Lane. The other Lola, in her eagerness to appear a sophisticate, had put on a gay front that did not belong to her inner self."

Lola now commenced gathering together a wardrobe to suit her new personality. Plain, expertly tailored suits became a passion with her. A beautiful mink coat did away with numerous evening wraps. A pair of silver fox furs was replaced by a smart skunk cape. Woolen and silk tailored slacks replaced other informal attire. Lola became clothes conscious and style conscious, until today one of the head designers in the movie capital has listed Lola as one of the ten best dressed women in Hollywood.

At the end of seven months a new Lola Lane walked into the office of her former agent announcing that she was ready to go out after the kind of parts she had always wanted to do.

Once more Lola commenced making the rounds of the studios. She was complimented on her smart appearance, but continued to receive offers to do ingénue parts. It seemed impossible to break away from the roles in which she had been typed.

"I turned down several fat parts," said Lola. "I was determined never again to do an ingénue. I didn't care how small the part, if it had a bit of real acting in it. There were days of heartbreaking experiences. Finally I was offered a small part in 'Marked Woman.' Here was something I could get my teeth into. I signed up."

LOLA'S next picture was opposite Ramon Novarro in "The Sheik Steps Out." This was her first experience in playing comedy. The swell job she did in portraying the spoiled daughter of rich, doting parents, resulted in her being signed for "Hollywood Hotel."

And now with a series of "Torchy Blane" pictures ahead of her, it looks as though Lola has carved out a new career for herself.

"I was never more contented and happy," said Lola. "With mother, Rosemary and Priscilla living out here my life is very full."

When Lola's two sisters, Rosemary and Priscilla, came out here last summer, under contract to make pictures, they took a house high on a hill, overlooking San Fernando Valley, about a mile from Lola. For the first time since she was a little girl, Lola has a part of her family near her. There are two other sisters. Leota is in New York studying for Grand Opera. Martha, who is married, is out here now with her little girl on a visit.

Lola, Rosemary, Pat, and Cora, their mother, call themselves a closed corporation. Their work, business and daily doings are freely discussed among themselves, but never beyond their own immediate circle. All are called to sit in on important decisions. There is no jealousy, selfishness or dissension among them. All are for one. One is for all.

Lola is determined that "the kids," as she calls Rosemary and Pat, will make no mistakes. Her knowledge of the "whys"

(Continued on page 121)

Stunning Shelving STILL 5¢

ALMOST EVERYTHING you buy costs more these days... but you can still trim and protect shelves with beautiful Royledge for a nickel! And this strong, double-edge shelving lasts a whole season, doesn't frazzle, curl up, catch dust or get limp. No laundry costs either; once up, stays up.

Your nearest 5-and-10¢, neighborhood or department store has slews of smart new Royledge patterns and colors, decorator approved, at 5¢ for the 9-ft. package. (10¢ sizes, too.) Millions of thrifty women use it... many who could afford extravagant, fussy shelving. Try Royledge once; you'll never change. Roylace, 99 Gold St., B'klyn, N.Y.

9 FT. 5¢ "FEEL THE EDGE" Royledge REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. SHELVING

Jessie Mathews, with her twinkling toes and peppy personality, is in GB's "Sailing Along."

• At home—quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural appearing color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

So natural they even have half-moons.

NOW! Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

NEW! Smart, long, tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10c stores.

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS

NU-NAIL CO. 5249 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

"KEEP NAILS SHAPELY THE Wigder WAY".....

MEN love to see a girl's fingertips well-groomed. Keep them always lovely-to-look-at with the daily use of a Wigder Nail File. The triple-cut teeth file faster, more smoothly; the special Improved Cleaner Point safeguards the tender skin under the nail. Ask for the WIGDER Nail File!

On sale at all drug and 10-cent stores 10c

Wigder
NEWARK NEW JERSEY
quality costs no more
NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

CORNS REMOVED WITH CASTOR OIL PREPARATION

Say goodbye to clumsy corn-pads and dangerous razors. A new liquid, NOXACORN, relieves pain fast and dries up the pestiest corns, callus and warts. Contains six ingredients including pure castor oil, iodine, and the substance from which aspirin is made. Absolutely safe. Easy directions in package. 35c bottle saves untold misery. Druggist returns money if it fails to remove corn.

NOXACORN

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove the hair permanently, safely, privately at home, following simple directions with proper care. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Also used by professionals. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Illustrated Booklet, "How to Remove Superfluous Hair Forever." D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36E, Providence, R. I.

That 'come hither' complexion, irresistible to men . . . envied by all girls . . . heretofore exclusive with screen stars, can be yours with the NEW

MINER'S Theatrical MAKE-UP FOR STREET WEAR

HANDY STICK (3 shades) at all 10¢ stores . . . or mail coupon

A startling new make-up that imparts natural satin-smoothness to your skin . . . velvety . . . luminous . . . lasts hours. Use it and have a "star's" complexion of your own.

MINER'S, 40 E. 20th St., Dept. MD5, New York, N. Y.
Enclosed find 10¢ for Miner's Theatrical Make-up for street wear.
Name_____
Address_____
Check shade desired: PEACH ☐ RACHEL ☐ BRUNETTE ☐

SPUNKY SPANKY

BY MERLIN PIERCE

Meet Spanky McFarland, the leader of the "Gang," who could pass up spinach, but doesn't!

I COULD eat twenty million miles of spaghetti, but I'll eat some spinach, on account of my mother's so good to me."

This statement is pretty indicative of Spanky McFarland's outlook on life. He's darned philosophical about everything. Anybody who's simply nuts about spaghetti, but will deign to toy with a filthy weed like spinach must fundamentally have a sense of balance.

This is further evidenced in his attitude towards his new-found stardom. When asked if he'd like a star's dressing room, he emphatically replied, "Heck, no. They've always given us kids clubhouses and I like 'em." (The dressing-rooms of the "gang" have always been called clubhouses.) His use of the word "us" is indicative. Never I, always us. But he feels his leadership in quite another way, however. He's head of his gang, and don't think he isn't! After all, he's belonged to this gang for years now, and why shouldn't he be its rightful leader?

And, as with all chiefs, it's not all honor and glory, sweetness and light, or what have you. He feels it incumbent upon him, to settle all internal strife, sometimes resorting to fisticuffs to enforce his mandates. He has a typical boy's room which he shares with his brother. It has a berth-like arrangement of beds. Blackboards and school desks, with a fine collection of guns. He likes all the things most kids like—dogs, ice cream, games and of course, he has a girl.

Yes, it's the blonde in the gang. But also, like all regular guys, his yen in this direction is strictly on the q. t., and he won't talk about his heart interest. Time enough for that later on.

He's a natural as a comedian. Even his entrance into the Hal Roach Studios smacked of the ludicrous. He had made his artistic debut as an ornament on a bread wrapper, and some astute salesman figured, that if his pan had so much sales appeal, it would be further heightened if the lisping voice could be heard in a frantic appeal for more of this particular bread. And that's where Fate stepped in. For an aunt of Georgie McFarland's, who had been reading of Hal Roach, glorifier of American kids, brought this advertising reel to his attention, which resulted in a trip to Hollywood for Baby Georgie.

During the first interview, as so often happens, Baby refused to do any of his cute tricks for Massa Roach. Small wonder he couldn't be interested in this grown-up conversation, for he had discovered a most intriguing gadget on Mr. R.'s desk—which had fine shiny jiggers, which, when pressed down by Mr. Roach, brought forth voices from nowhere, just like that.

So while Auntie and Mr. Roach carried on, Georgie Porgie seized his opportunity and all the shiny black jiggers all at once, and with one magnificent click, was amply rewarded with several hellos in all sorts of voices. Although this delighted Georgie and amused Mr. Roach, not so Auntie. She rushed over and, slapping the infant's hands, scolded, "Spanky! spanky!" So another nom de movie was born. And private Spanky McFarland is now General Spanky. Not bad for five years in any man's army.

AFTER HE became an old-timer of two-and-a-half or thereabouts, he toddled off the set one day and went visiting a couple of other comedians, Laurel and Hardy. As befitting a good trouper, he stood by silently watching. As a climax to a sequence, Hardy did his famous "double take." You know, that wide-eyed stare directly into the camera. This fascinated our young hero and he clapped his hands gleefully and chortled: "Ba-bee, ba-bee." It takes a baby to recognize a baby stare, and so to this day big, lumbering Oliver Hardy is much better known as "Babe."

But the incident was not closed for Spanky. The next day they were shooting Spanky in a sequence where he had some business with a trick pack of cigarettes representing a toy gun. The director was satisfied and was going on to something else, but not so Spanky. He indicated he'd like to do it over, so out of curiosity, they complied. He repeated his previous performance up to a certain point, then, with perfect timing, he calmly faced the camera and did a perfect Hardy double-take! Ba-bee! So he's a showman as well as a comedian.

A visitor to his set is most impressed with the complete lack of professionalism. On location at a golf-course nearby, the Gang seems more like any bunch of kids getting together in a corner of the meadow for a nice quiet blood-curdling game. This atmosphere is carefully maintained without any obvious effort on the part of director or crew. Mothers of the young performers, sitting around under the trees with their knitting, do nothing to dispel the homely, bucolic charm of the picture.

Darla Hood and Spanky go to school every day and drink their milk as all good little girls and boys should. The girl-friend pours while Spanky gets ready for the first sip.

Between shots, Spanky runs over to a nearby tree where a huge turtle is sunning himself. He has done some of his most amusing scenes off the set with this lazy pet. In fact, many of his best performances have been caught by the camera with Spanky all unawares. One day when he was four, he was regaling his pals with a highly imaginative story, with gestures, about a rat who swallowed a monkey. Someone caught him as he was at the point of showing how the monkey's tail persisted in hanging out of the rat's mouth, which obstacle was surmounted by the rat simply going F-f-f-f-t (the intake noise his favorite spaghetti makes). This has always remained one of his best performances.

While recently performing, Spanky blew up in his lines. Truly a phenomenon for this seasoned trouper. His poise in this emergency was indeed interesting. He just stopped short, looked into the camera a long moment, then went over and sat on the grass nearby. There was the slightest look of disgust on his face, then Director Newmeyer said:

"Got it, Spanky?" and he nodded and went through it perfectly. Some of our adult stars could well take a lesson from Spanky.

Just now our Spanky is really upset. He has two purportedly thoroughbred Scottie puppies, Sandy and Inky. But it seems their legs just grow and grow and Spanky is beginning to feel there's something wrong somewhere. So, if he seems a bit worried when next you see him on the screen, you'll know that leg-growing trouble is still afoot. Even a big movie star like Spanky has his troubles!

Here's a Queer Way for Many Skinny Girls to Become Glamour Girls

THOUSANDS HAVE DISCOVERED THAT BY ADDING TWO SIMPLE ELEMENTS TO THEIR DAILY FOOD THEY EASILY GAINED WEIGHT AND Naturally Alluring Curves

THERE'S real hope today for thousands of thin, scrawny-looking girls who have almost despaired of ever having the naturally attractive curves and happy pep that often bring "glamour," popularity and success. For new food discoveries have helped thousands of others to quickly gain just the pounds of firm flesh they needed, new health, strength and joy in life.

How it is done

You see, scientists have discovered that great numbers of people are thin and rundown only because they do not get sufficient Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Without these vital elements you may lack appetite and not get the most body-building good out of what you eat. But when in such cases these two simple food elements are properly supplied, the quick gains in weight, strength, and pep are often astonishing.

Today you can get these exact missing food elements in the new Ironized Yeast tablets. They're made by a new costly process from one of the richest sources of health-building Vitamin B—the special rich yeast used in making English ale. This yeast is highly concentrated, then combined in a new formula with pasteurized English ale yeast and three kinds of blood-strengthening iron.

The result is these marvelous new Ironized Yeast tablets which have already helped thousands of the thinnest, most unattractive girls who needed these elements quickly to gain just the normal pleasing curves they needed, naturally clear skin, new pep and new glamour.

Make this money-back test

Get Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist today. If with the very first package you don't begin to eat better and get more enjoyment and benefit from your food—if you don't feel better, with more strength and pep—if you are not convinced that Ironized Yeast will give you the pounds of normally attractive flesh you need—the price of this first package will be promptly refunded. So start today.

Special Offer!

To start thousands building up their health right away, we make this special offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists, Ironized Yeast Co., Inc., Dept. 35, Atlanta, Ga.

Posed by professional models

New beauty for your hair . . . with this new 4 Purpose Rinse

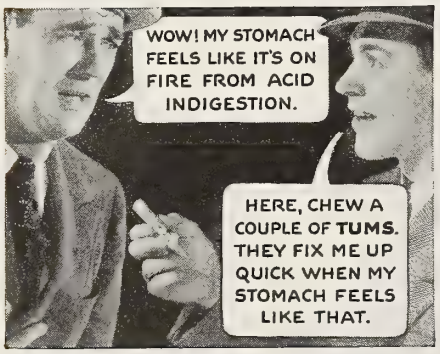
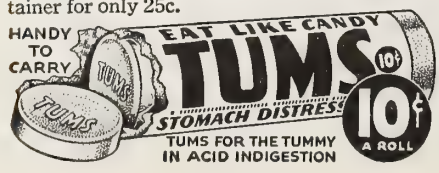
Lovalon, the 4 Purpose Rinse does all these four things for your hair in one quick, easy operation:

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Keeps hair neatly in place.



Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. See the life and sparkle and healthful, youthful glow it gives your hair.

Lovalon comes in 12 different shades. You can match and enrich the natural color of your hair or make it brighter or deeper. Lovalon does not dye or bleach. It's a pure, vegetable, odorless hair rinse—one of the very few hair toiletries approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Package of 5 for 25¢ at drug and dept. stores. Trial size at 10¢ stores. (Or, any good beauty shop will Lovalon your hair.)



LOVALON

the 4 purpose hair rinse

HERE'S AMAZING RELIEF FROM ACID INDIGESTION

YES—TUMS, a remarkable discovery brings amazing quick relief from indigestion, heartburn, sour stomach, gas, and constant burning caused by excess acid. For TUMS work on the true basic principle. Act unbelievably fast to neutralize excess acid conditions. Acid pains are relieved almost at once. TUMS contain no laxatives; no harmful drugs. Guaranteed to contain no soda. Over 1½ billion TUMS already used—proving their amazing benefit. Try TUMS today. Only 10c for 12 TUMS at all druggists. Most economical relief. Chew like candy mints. Get a handy 10c roll today, or the three roll economy package with metal container for only 25c.

THE BEWILDERING BRADY

(Continued from page 58)

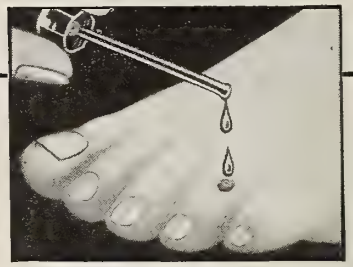
like doing. Liking fizzy beverages she was asked whether she didn't think they were bad for her and she said, "I am the healthiest person in the world and I haven't had a glass of water in six years!"

She has always done what she wanted to do. Her father, famed theatrical producer, William A. Brady, didn't want her to go on the stage in spite of his own tremendous theatrical interests. In spite of the fact that the famous Grace George became her step-mother, he kept her, as a child and a very young girl, away from all talk of and contact with the theatre as well as theatrical people. But Miss Brady wanted to go on the stage. Her first public appearance was at a ship's concert when, at the age of thirteen, she was on her way to Europe with her father. Having made secret arrangements with the ship's entertainment committee to "appear" she rendered one of Caruso's favorite records with the fine operatic style, the famed, florid gestures of the great tenor himself. She had learned the Saluto by playing the Caruso record over and over. Her unsuspecting father, in the audience, was first stricken with surprise, then stormed by the applause and the expressed opinions that "the girl is a genius."

And so to the stage, musical comedies, Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, and then, her father capitulating, the producer in him conquering the father's protest; as Meg in Little Women, as a star in Forever After, and a long line of successful plays. And Broadway paid its tribute and legal tender to a great dramatic talent. Which talent, now lost to Broadway, both Broadway and Mr. Brady mourn; but must continue to mourn because Miss Brady will not go back to Broadway.

Miss Brady lives, to be flagrantly facetious, a dog's life. But literally. There is Checker, a Cocker spaniel; Lavinia Manon (named after her role in "Mourning Becomes Electra"), a Scottie; Desire, a wire-haired terrier; Drunky, another wire-haired and Snooky, a poon dog. Now I'm sure I don't know what a poon dog means and Miss Brady is sure that she does know what it means. But she didn't seem able to explain other than to say that she had rescued the poon from the pound and that poon seems to fit a dog rescued from the pound!



MISS BRADY is, at heart, more tragic than gay. She told me so. She is inclined to be morbid, or rather to find a strange pleasure which is also pain, in dwelling on morbid things. There was once a ghastly murder in New York. Two women, bitter enemies, met in the elevator of their apartment house. One stabbed the other through the heart. And the dying woman said, "Why, it's gone right through me!" Years ago and yet, Miss Brady says, she has never been able to forget, to cease to dwell on the stark simplicity, the incredible incredulity of those last words!

But she has, also, a philosophy of life, the philosophy commonly called Fatalism. She believes that what is to be is to be, and what to do about it? Nothing. Therefore, you can do what you choose about it, laugh or cry. She chooses to laugh.

For there have been shadows over the life of Alice Brady. Her own mother, Marie Rene, a French dancer, died when Alice was three. Her young brother died when she was very young. Her marriage to James Crane lasted only two and a half ill-fated years and could have left a scar,

QUICK WAY TO REMOVE CORNS

no cutting . . . no pads

RELIEVE CORN PAIN QUICKLY

If you want to remove those aching corns just get a bottle of FREEZONE from any druggist. Put a drop or two on the corn. The pain is quickly relieved. Then in a few days the corn gets so loose you can lift it right off with your fingers.

A bottle of FREEZONE costs a few cents at any drug store and is sufficient to remove most hard corns, soft corns and calluses. Try it!

FREEZONE

REMOVE HAIR without razor, liquid paste or powder 25c

Baby Touch Hair Remover is the new, amazing way to remove hair from arms, legs and face—quickly and safely. Used like a powder puff. Odorless, painless, better than a razor. Baby Touch leaves the skin soft, white and restores youth and beauty to the skin. Satisfaction guaranteed. At drug and department stores or send 25c for one or $1.00 for five of the Baby Touch Pads. Baby Touch Mittens (Two sides) 35c each. 3 for $1.00.

BABY TOUCH HAIR REMOVER CO.
2325 Olive, St. Louis, Mo.

BANISH DANGER of LOOSE WIRES with JUSTRITE PUSH CLIPS

Keep lamp, radio, telephone wires SAFE and neat — off the floor with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIPS. In colors to match lamp cords or woodwork. Insist on famous Justrite Quality Push-Clips — set of 8 for 10c.

EASY TO INSTALL NO TOOLS REQUIRED

8 for 10¢

AT YOUR 10-CENT STORE

Many Never SUSPECT Cause of Backaches

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

and probably did. Her half-brother was burned to death a little more than two years ago. Yes, one has the feeling that there are secrets buried in Alice Brady's heart and memory, bruises on her spirit, but buried deep because the will that buried them is stronger than the secrets and the pain.

"All comedians," said Miss Brady, "are sad of heart. They have to be or they couldn't give to comedy the macabre touch it needs."

Her childhood, however, was happy and normal, though carefully chaperoned. For which she is, now, very grateful. "At least I wasn't satiated before I was out of my 'teens," she said. A cousin, a kindly woman of middle years came into the household upon the death of Alice's mother. Later, of course, Mr. Brady married Grace George to whom Miss Brady refers, affectionately, as "Mom." There was a town house and a country place and the small Alice attended a convent school in Madison, New Jersey. She had her own pony and cart and plenty of books and affection. But she was, even then, always wondering what it was all about.

She is, now, very pleased to be "doing my own work again." She is grateful to Mr. Zanuck for giving her the opportunity to do the kind of thing she does do, most naturally, most instinctively. She said, "I have pleaded with producers for six years to give me dramatic roles. But, no, they couldn't see it.

"When I did my first comedy role in 'Mademoiselle,' I hadn't the foggiest notion of how to be funny. I didn't know what on earth to do. I just thought I'd flap my hands about even more than normally and 'talk silly.' I did—and I've lived off of it for six years. But I never have any idea of what I'm doing, or why."

She has erratic bouts of mad extravagance. She told me, "I spent thirty-seven thousand dollars in the first six months I was in Hollywood. What on? I haven't the least idea! Scents and furs and things, you know. I'd just go down to shop every single morning and stand there in the middle of the place and think, 'Now, let me see, what can I buy today?' And then I'd just shop and shop. After all, I don't play tennis, and I had to do something!"

Now Miss Brady has a manager and is not allowed to so much as make out a check. She does, however, she told me happily, manage a little leeway for herself now and then by telling him that she has to have money to send to her little son back East in school. "You know how children are," she tells him. "Always needing something." Now and again, she manages to ring in a diamond ring for herself.

SHE loves to "do" houses, her surroundings being important to her. She spent four months planning and decorating the dining-room in her home, peacock blue walls, lovely reflecting mirrors. She sent to Venice for the crystal chandeliers and—has used the dining-room twice in the six months she has been in the house. She does think it a pity that the Venetian treasures came so far to be so seldom appreciated.

She never takes exercise. "Exercise," she laughed, "is decadent." She never goes anywhere. She has lived in Hollywood for six years and has never been to Palm Springs.

She doesn't gossip. She lives and lets live and keeps to the letter as well as to the spirit of this law. On the sets, you never find her sitting on the side lines gossiping between scenes. She is either on the floor shooting crap with some of the stage hands or she is in her dressing-room, taking the only sound sleep she ever gets.

She admits to a very bad temper.

Franciska Gaal of "The Buccaneer" is making "Never Say Die."

"My Secret of Eye Make-Up"

by
GENEVIEVE TOBIN
Lovely Star of Stage and Screen

FIRST—USE NEW LOTION TO MAKE EYES CLEAR, WHITE, LARGER LOOKING!

"DON'T forget the most important step in eye make-up . . . clear, white eyes," says Genevieve Tobin, popular film star. Dull, tired eyes can ruin the effect of the most careful eye make-up. That's why thousands begin eye make-up with two drops of Eye-Gene, an eye specialist's formula. It makes eyes that were reddened, veined, dulled by late hours, reading, fatigue, exposure, so clear and sparkling white . . . and therefore larger looking! Try Eye-Gene. Double eye beauty! Purse size at all 5 and 10c stores. Economy size at all drug stores.

EYE-GENE Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Will Your Hands Stand This Test?

If Not . . .

You need to get acquainted with Barrington Hand Cream, a delightful cream made specially to keep your hands soft and white. Beautiful hands are essential to good grooming. Don't let household duties keep your hands rough or red when a few seconds regular care with this wonderfully successful Hand Cream can keep them soft and attractive.

NORTH AMERICAN DYE CORPORATION
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

...Use Barrington HAND CREAM

Sold in drug, department, and the better 5 and 10 cent stores.

Another NADCO Product

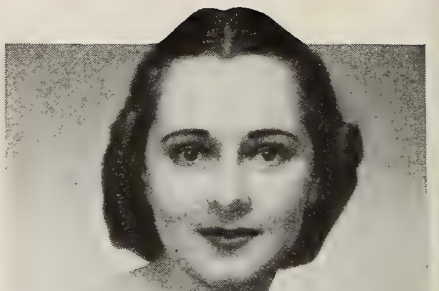
Her motto in life is: Never stand up when you can sit down; never sit down when you can lie down; never just lie down if you can lie down and sleep.

It is because Hollywood allows her to be "a mushroom," to live pretty much according to her motto that she is in Hollywood. She will never, she stated with fire and emphasis, go back to Broadway.



We argued with her. We reminded her of her "art," of those rare souls who starve in attics, enduring all things, that their art may be preserved, intact, free from commercialism. "Such people are cursed," laughed Miss Brady. "I am thankful that I am not so cursed. I am the laziest woman in the world. People think of me as fiercely energetic, furiously ambitious. I am not. I have a pleasant house here, my dogs, books, friends, work to do. What more is there? Tell me that!

"I enjoy making pictures. I take them seriously when I am working because I take any work I am doing seriously. But I like to be comfortable. I like to sit with my feet up on a chair, like this. I like to be able to go out without wearing chinchillas up around my eyes. You can't wear chinchillas up around your eyes in Hollywood. You have to have big buildings for that. I'm not happy. Of course not. No one but an idiot is really happy, do you think? But I am content with leading," she laughed, "my dog's life."

A great personality, Miss Brady, doing a dizzy sleight of hand with the masks of Comedy and Tragedy, blending one into the other as they have been blended into her own life. An example, becoming almost extinct, of the cultured aristocrat of the theatre, a woman who, regardless of her work, her "art," makes the world richer, more exciting merely by what she is.

A bride can't sit down, so some great mind at the studio invented this wrinkle-proof gadget for Rochelle Hudson to relax in.

MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM KEEPS YOUR SKIN Young Looking

Mercolized Wax Cream flakes off the surface skin in tiny, invisible particles. Reveals the clear, soft, smooth, young looking underskin. This simple, all-in-one cleansing, softening and beautifying cream has been a favorite for over a quarter century with lovely women the world over. Bring out the hidden beauty of your skin with Mercolized Wax Cream.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily
THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory
For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.
Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

TOUCH UP GRAY STREAKS

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK
Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your own home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. $1.35, for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE. State original hair color
Brookline Chemical Co., Dept. M-58
79 Sudbury St., Boston, Mass.

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

One-Spot Flea Killer Dustone one spot only Trade Mark Reg. GUARANTEED by Good Housekeeping

Kills Lice, Ants, Fleas, Aphids, Bedbugs, Chafers, Crab Lice, Red Spiders, Leaf Hoppers, Caterpillars, Root Maggots, Cabbage Worms, Mexican Bean Beetles

If your store can't supply you send 25c or 50c to One-Spot Co., Elkridge, Md.

Good For Kidney and Bladder Weakness

LOOK AND FEEL YOUNGER

ALL over America men and women who want to cleanse kidneys of waste matter and irritating acids and poisons and lead a longer, healthier, happier life are turning to GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules.

So now you know the way to help bring about more healthy kidney activity and stop getting up often at night. Other symptoms are backache, irritated bladder—difficult or smarting passage—puffiness under eyes—nervousness and shifting pains.

This harmless yet effective medicine brings results—you'll feel better in a few days. So why not get a 35¢ box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules today—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—Don't accept a counterfeit—Ask for and get GOLD MEDAL.

PRESTO CHANGE-O

(Continued from page 115)

and "wherefores" of this fantastic business has smoothed over many a rough spot for her sisters.

While all three girls have good singing voices, dance well and have what it takes to play leads, each personality is decidedly different. Each has an outstanding talent. With Rosemary it is her singing. Pat is the finished dancer, while Lola is the dramatic actress.

The one thing that all have in common is a swell sense of humor and love of fun. Birthdays call for big celebrations. It is then that each tries to outdo the other in gag gifts, tricks and surprises. All packages are approached warily. Elaborately wrapped boxes often prove to be gags. The plainest package usually holds the important present —the gift of the three of them to the fourth.

No matter how tired she is after a hard day at the studio, Lola drops in to see Cora on her way home. Sunday is reserved for the Lane family to get together. At dinner, at Lola's or Cora's, the four of them sit down to a specialty of Cora's. Their favorite is fricassee chicken, just as Cora always prepared it when they were youngsters at home.

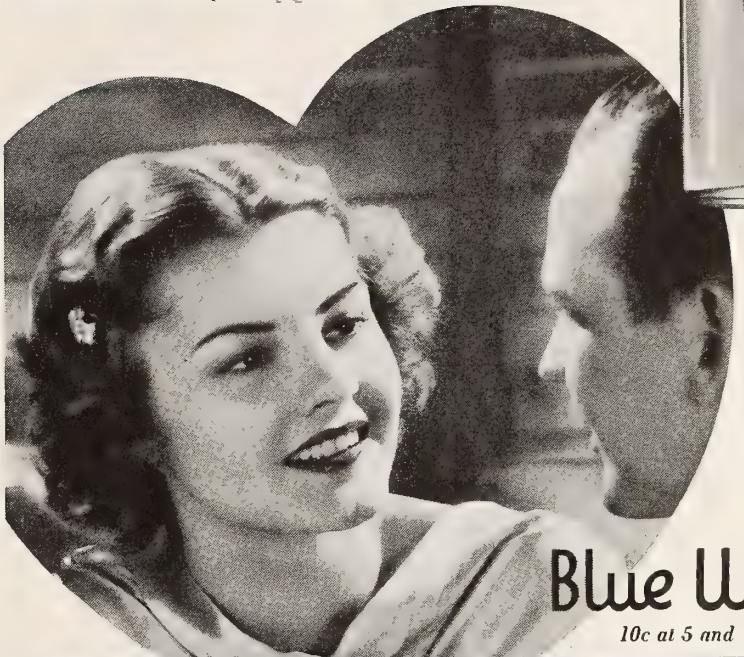
Today Lola has a new understanding and appreciation of life. Rarely is she seen out in public. Occasionally she goes into the Brown Derby for lunch. On rare occasions she spends an evening at the Trocadero.

"I WANT to go on working in pictures as long as I am able to work," said Lola. "Happiness to me means independence, work and, of course, success.

"Work in pictures satisfies all of my longing for romance, glamor and change. Outside of an occasional trip to the nearby mountains, the desert and New York, I am content to settle down in the valley.

"At present I am considering plans for my own farmstead to be built on my own acreage not far from where I now live. As much attention will be given to the grounds as to the house. There will be extensive vegetable gardens, fruit trees, berries and a profusion of flowers.

"I will never give up my career. The glamor and excitement surrounding my work will be nicely balanced by the quiet and rest in my peaceful valley home."



Jane Wyman is mighty pretty in that hunting outfit—but she looks like fair game to us. Jane gets the lead opposite Johnny Davis in "The Chump."

BLUE now dreams come true

When it's swingtime and dancetime, she'll never be lonely again. What a difference since she discovered Blue Waltz Perfume! There's something actually tantalizing about its lovely, floral bouquet. Perhaps you'd find greater happiness, too, if you'd remember to say "Blue Waltz" when you buy perfume and cosmetics.

Blue Waltz

10c at 5 and 10c stores.

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME • FACE POWDER • LIPSTICK • BRILLIANTINE • COLOGNE

June Modern Screen tells you

WHY GABLE IS KING

Yes, there's a reason!

STUDY FASHION MODELLING The "Hollywood Way"

Attractive girls and women learn to be a glamorous fashion model. Send 10c in stamps for Booklet A.

ANNE ARDIS, Box 422, Hollywood, Calif.

HOW YOU CAN REMOVE CORNS ROOT* AND ALL

New Modern Method

safer—quicker—easier!

NOW you can remove corns easily, quickly, painlessly without dangerous old-fashioned paring that only affects the surface, leaves the root to come back bigger, uglier. The new, double-action Blue-Jay stops pain instantly, and then by its gentle medicated action, removes corns, root and all, in just 3 short days (exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application).

Blue-Jay is a tiny medicated plaster. Easy to use —invisible. Safe, scientific, quick-acting. 25¢ for 6. Same price in Canada.

BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

*A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

"I USE SITROUX TISSUES.. they're softer!"

...says beautiful Mary Russell, starring in Columbia's new picture "EXTORTION"...

STARS of stage and screen, and fastidious girls everywhere, prefer Sitroux Tissues, because they're soft as a flower petal, yet so much stronger they won't "come apart" in the hand. Give your skin better care with these delightful, fine-quality tissues. Look for the attractive gold-and-blue box!

At Your 5 and 10¢ STORE!

THE Glamorous BEAUTY OF ALLURING EYES

• FINELY arched eyebrows enhance the loveliness of the eyes ... Rely on HENCO Tweezers . . . specially designed for plucking, thinning and training . . . in eyebrow care . . . Skilfully designed, with platform points (corrugated inside) to give positive grip without cutting the hair, and finger-rest on handles. Each pair individually tested. Have a pair of inexpensive HENCO Tweezers always at hand.

TRADE HENCO MARK

Ask for HENCO Tweezers and Nail Files (10c) . . . Manicure Scissors (20c) . . . at drug and 5 & 10c stores.

THE HENKEL-CLAUSS CO.
Fremont, Ohio

Fine Cutlery for 50 Years

10c

New approved formula

REMOVES FRECKLES WHILE YOU SLEEP

Whether you have a few freckles or many, fade them out quickly and gently while you sleep. Get a jar of Nadinola Freckle Cream today and apply at bedtime. Day by day skin becomes clearer, fresher. Usually freckles disappear in 5 to 10 days. So do other blemishes. Nadinola Freckle Cream is guaranteed by a famous laboratory with 36 years' experience in this type of skin treatment. Only 60c at drug and toilet counters; 10c size at Ten Cent Stores. • Or send a dime for trial package to NADINOLA, Dept. 154, Paris, Tenn.

NADINOLA Freckle Cream

HAIR KILLED FOREVER

KILLED PERMANENTLY

From face or body without harm to skin, by following easy directions. Our electrolysis device is used by physicians and is guaranteed to kill hair forever or money refunded. Your electric current not used. Only $1.95 complete. Prepaid or C.O.D. plus postage.

CANFIELD ELECTROLYSIS CO., 3-H, 2675 Broadway, N.Y.City

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS!

START $1260 to $2100 YEAR

Men—Women
Get ready Immediately
Common Education
Mail Coupon today sure

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. P266, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name.....
Address.....

These are the legs that are supposed to shame Dietrich. Martha Raye is the owner, Ben Blue the critic.

REVIEWS

(Continued from page 23)

★★ The Girl Was Young

Gaumont British presents Nova Pilbeam in "The Girl Was Young," which, in itself, is in the nature of an understatement. For, Nova Pilbeam is far too young to be entirely convincing as a clever sleuth. However, her charm and sincerity tend to offset the fact that she plays an adolescent too tragically precocious.

Here, again, we have that much overworked situation of an innocent youth suspected of cold blooded murder. Needless to say, when Erica Burgoyne, the chief constable's daughter, administers first aid to revive the apparent assassin, her limpid eyes at once overflow with true love and in the end brings the real culprit to justice. As the heroine, Nova Pilbeam brings a serious quality to the role which almost overshadows her unsuitability to it.

Derrick DeMarney, as Robert Tisdall who is caught in a web of circumstantial evidence, gives an impressive performance.

Even though "youth will be served," top honors in this production go to the character actors. If you are among the many who have wondered what's become of Percy Marmont, you will be pleased to find him here in the role of the Constable. Playing the role of the girl's father with his customary ease and conviction, he does much to insure interest.

Edward Rigby as Old Will, the china mender who puts the finger on the real murderer, gives a very creditable performance proving that even a friendless bum may have a heart of gold.

While there is something to be desired in this picture, it will no doubt prove popular through its theme and characterizations. For, a movie mystery is apt to be a good entertainment bet, and, a movie mystery with real acting thrown in, worth your cash at the box office. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock.—Gaumont British.

Won't slip out
STRONGER SPRING TIGHTER GRIP

VOICE

100% Improvement Guaranteed

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons—but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises . . and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100%. . . . Write for wonderful voice book—sent free. Learn WHY you can now have the voice you want. No literature sent to anyone under 17 unless signed by parent.

PERFECT VOICE INSTITUTE, Studio 7215
64 E. Lake St., Chicago

GIRLS! MORE MILEAGE FROM YOUR STOCKINGS

There's nothing like RUN-R-STOP to give more wear per pair! As soon as a run or snag appears apply RUN-R-STOP to save your stockings — save you money. Permanent—will not wash out. HANDSOME RED & BLACK VANITY protects tube in purse.—10c Ask for it at chain, department and shoe stores.

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping as advertised therein.

10c

RUN-R-STOP

FREE—we will send you a handy purse-size case of Nail White in a new convenient form. Simply mail the instruction sheet from a package of Run-R-Stop to Dept. M.

CAMILLE INC.—49 East 21st Street, N.Y.C.

CRO★PAX FOOT AIDS
For Every Foot Ailment

Instant RELIEF for 10¢

Go to your nearest ten cent store and insist on CRO★PAX Corn Pads, waterproof, with medicated discs for safe, sure, quick relief.

Accept No Substitute

Price slightly higher in Canada

CRO★PAX PRODUCTS, CLEVELAND, O.

AT YOUR 5 & 10c STORE

The BEST GRAY HAIR REMEDY IS MADE at Home!

WHY let prematurely gray hair make you look far older than your years? Now, with a better remedy, mixed and applied in the privacy of your own home, costing only a few cents, any man or woman can get rid of this social and business handicap.

Simply get from your druggist one-fourth ounce of glycerin, one ounce of bay rum, and a box of Barbo Compound. Mix these in one-half pint of water, or your druggist will mix it for you. This colorless liquid will impart a natural-like color to faded, gray hair. This color will not wash out, does not affect permanents or waves, will not color the scalp, and adds to the beauty, luster, softness and youth of your hair.

If you want to look ten years younger in ten days start with Barbo today.

Do This For BLACKHEADS

They Fall Right Out!

BLACKHEADS persist because they are literally trapped in your skin! Locked there by a film of sluggish, surface skin! You can't wash them away! But you can release them! Golden Peacock Bleach Creme will lift away the film of coarsened surface skin—dissolving it in tiny invisible particles. Blackheads are released. They flake away, fall out! Surface pimples, too—in fact, all blemishes in the surface skin! You discover your own finer skin—smooth, utterly clear, alluringly white! All in just 5 days! Discover Golden Peacock Bleach Creme! At drug and department stores—or send 50c to Golden Peacock Inc., Dept. E-206, Paris, Tenn.

SKIN RASH

RELIEVED....ITCHING STOPPED

For quick relief from itching of eczema, rashes, pimples, athlete's foot, and other externally caused skin eruptions, use cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION. Greaseless, stainless, dries fast. Stops the most intense itching in a hurry. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

D.D.D. Prescription

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE...

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 90)

Meanies

At the moment, Gene Autry and Republic Studios are still shooting it out. When he couldn't get an adjustment on his contract, Gene walked out and went on a personal appearance tour which was netting him $3,500 a week when a studio injunction halted it. Now he's on a sit-down strike, and refuses to work until he gets more money. Facts are that Autry, whose pictures draw top money for westerns, makes eight pictures a year and gets only $5000 for each of them. The profits on his pictures warrant a larger salary, but the studio contends that a contract's a contract.

■ ■ ■

We still think the tops in lovers' quarrels was the Nelson Eddy—Eleanor Powell squabble in "Rosalie." To keep a date with her in far-off Ruritania, Nelson makes a solo flight across the Atlantic. Angered when he learns she's engaged to another guy, he turns right around and flies back, making Lindbergh—and everybody connected with "Rosalie"—look silly.

Chivalry, Farewell

Romance, in the movies, still goes hand in hand with assault and battery. In other words, if the hero says he loves the girl, and she tells him the same thing, audiences immediately know they don't mean it. But let him sock her on the jaw, or let her break some china on his profile and everyone knows that theirs is a true and lasting love. Latest example is in "Love, Honor and Behave." Wayne Morris is about to lose his wife (Priscilla Lane), but he comes home one night, blacks her eye and knocks her down. Love surges in her breast, and she crowns him with a chair. And we remember the good old days, when the guy who socked the heroine was the villain.

■ ■ ■

Those who see the stars in their least glamorous moments are the gals in the studio wardrobe departments. If a star has temperament, the wardrobe department is usually the place she turns it on. All of which leads up to an unofficial vote taken in the wardrobe department at 20th Century-Fox. Most popular star: Sonja Henie. Least popular: Simone Simon.

Wayne Morris gets a shiner from Priscilla Lane—it's "Love, Honor and Behave."

DON'T BE A "MARKED" GIRL!

*DISFIGURING BLEMISHES NOW SO EASILY CONCEALED!

SKIN BLEMISHES need no longer be embarrassing. Untold numbers of smart girls have learned this simple secret of always having clear-looking, lovely skin despite unexpected or permanent blemishes. HIDE-IT conceals pimples, birthmarks, freckles, scars and all discolorations. Waterproof—won't easily rub off—lasts all day until removed. Four flesh shades. Cream or Stick $1 at Department and Leading Drug Stores. 10c size at Ten Cent Stores.

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST

Apply HIDE-IT on the blemish. Let dry. Dust with powder, apply usual make-up.

Now! See how completely blemish has been concealed. See how marvelously clear and flawless your skin looks. You'll never be without HIDE-IT!

Hide-it HIDES SKIN BLEMISHES

Clark-Millner Co., Dept. 15-E, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago
Please send me free Story Booklet "Marked Girl." I enclose 10c (Canada 15c) for sample "Hide-it" ☐ Cream ☐ Stick. Check shade: ☐ Light ☐ Medium ☐ Brunette ☐ Sun Tan.

Name.....Town.....

Address.....State.....

Alluring Hands with the NEW LADY LILLIAN CREME NAIL POLISH

Are you sure your nails are as lovely as they can be? Try the new stay-on-a-week Lady Lillian Creme Nail Polish and revel in its fashion-right shades. Ask for Lady Lillian Rust, Robin Red, Old Rose, Thistle, Cloverine, Tulip Red, or Windsor Rose. The trial kit shown contains Nail Polish, Remover, Nail White, Manicure Stick and Cotton .... all for 10 cents and is on sale at 5 and 10 cent stores.

Approved by Good Housekeeping

SPECIAL 3c TRIAL OFFER

For single generous trial bottle send this ad and 3c stamp to LADY LILLIAN, Dept. M-12, 1140 Washington St., Boston, Mass. Specify shade you prefer.

Lovely Loretta Young has her night with young Mr. Alfred Vanderbilt, who craves constant change.

The Adolphe Menjous, once wan and ailing, look positively abloom as they escort Josephine Hutchinson to the preview.

At the "Goldwyn Follies," Kay Francis, smiling in spite of legal troubles, welcomes the Dick Barthelmesses.

Making her American screen debut, Annabella won the approval of a preview audience with her performance, but her appeal was not at all heightened by the fact that her French accent made some of her lines impossible to understand. And for the same reason, the meaning of some of her lines was distorted. For example, in one scene she turns to Bill Powell and bewilders him and the audience by saying, "Don't bite the hand that fits you."

Fashion Note

When the Cedric Gibbons' left on their trip to Africa, eleven of their trunks were filled with brand new gowns for Dolores Del Rio. Mr. G. also took along a trunkload of camera equipment, with which he hopes to photograph African wild life. Can't you picture the lovely Dolores, in Schiaperelli's latest, perched fetchingly on the carcass of a hippo?

■ ■ ■

Out on the 20th Century-Fox lot is a trailer which is the last word in that sort of thing. It's Darryl Zanuck's reconciliation gift to the Ritz Brothers. The Ritzes, of course, have added a touch of their own. Over the door a sign says: "Through these portals pass the most beautiful boys in the world." What will they do next?

Stop Worrying

Speaking of the desirability of raising children in Hollywood, Stuart Erwin's press agent quotes Mr. E. as follows: "People in the East who fear that film colony children will come under an evil influence are wasting their worry. In the 10 years I've been in Hollywood I've seen hundreds of babies grow into healthy and mannerly children." Note to those people in the East: Stop your worrying.

■ ■ ■

Myrna Loy has just finished redecorating her dressing room at Metro. It's all "blonde," because Myrna has always wanted to be one herself. The other day she invited the cast of "Test Pilot" to a "premeer" of the new room, but most of the attention was focused on a gift from Arthur Hornblow. It was a Capehart which matches the decorations.

Tom Sawyer

Interesting to watch the reaction of the audience at the preview of "Tom Sawyer." It was hardly a "Hollywood" type of picture, yet it brought cheers from such effete gents as Fred Astaire and Sam Goldwyn. Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitch (daughter of Mark Twain) wept silently, and Deanna Durbin was wreathed in smiles. But no one knew whether it was because of the picture or because she had attended the preview with her first date. The lucky swain was Jackie Moran, the film's Huckleberry Finn.

■ ■ ■

After the incident in Arizona, when he hurled shoes at a crowd assembled to greet him, Warner Oland and his studio are more at odds than ever. The great Chinese detective drew a suspension when he walked out on his last picture, and the studio promptly substituted the Japanese sleuth, Mr. Motto. So now there's a wild rumor around that Oland's next will be "Charlie Chan at Loggerheads."

All for Art

Richard Greene, the young English actor billed as a cross between Tyrone Power and Robert Taylor (that's nice double billing, if you ask us) is still a bit baffled about Hollywood. Rushed here for the lead opposite Loretta Young in "Four Men and a Prayer," he was first fitted to a brand new wardrobe, his English clothes having been declared n. g. for picture purposes. Next he was taken over by a make-up expert, who said, "Let's see your teeth." In Hollywood, perfect molars come before Art, even if you're a second Clark Gable.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

TROPIC

NEW COAST-TO-COAST NAIL POLISH COLOR SENSATION

Joan Bennett, Charming Star of "I Met My Love Again," a Walter Wanger Production.

TROPIC playground of Hollywood stars—Hawaii's golden sands and flaming flowers inspired Glazo's new color success—TROPIC.

"I love it," SAYS JOAN BENNETT

I'VE adopted this gorgeous new Glazo shade for my very own," exclaims Miss Bennett, known for her flawless taste as well as her beauty. "Tropic is the most exciting nail polish creation in years!"

TROPIC brings flattering warmth to every skin-tone—a subtle accent to smart spring costume colors. And, because it is Glazo's new Perfected Polish, TROPIC wears perfectly for days!

TROPIC is sweeping the country! Warm, provocative, glowing—it is the essence of spring—a prophecy of exciting new clothes, new places.

As Joan Bennett says: "Find out for yourself what fun it is to wear!"

Your approval of Glazo's shades will include not only Tropic, but also the new Congo, Spice and Cabaña. Vary them with fashion-approved Thistle, Suntan, Old Rose, Russet, Dahlia, Flame, Shell and Natural.

Lead Fashion—Wear TROPIC Now

Your favorite toilet goods counter—in every city and town from coast-to-coast—is featuring Glazo's latest color sensation. See how TROPIC adds new beauty to your hands and a new zest to your life!

For a perfect manicure, apply TROPIC after using Glazo Polish Remover and Cuticle Remover. Extra-large sizes at all drug counters, 25¢.

GLAZO

The Smart Manicure

GLAZO'S New Perfected Polish

New Glazo gives you these three conclusive points of superiority:

1. LONG WEAR—the New Glazo wears for days and days without peeling, chipping or fading! Slightly heavier for extra "coverage," it meets the demand for a polish that really clings to the nails!
2. EASE OF APPLICATION—every drop in the bottle goes on easily, evenly. It will not streak or run; dries quickly.
3. BRILLIANT LUSTRE—won't fade in sun or water.

Glazo's Perfected Polish gives all 3 points of excellence to these new shades:

TROPIC —lovely with all spring costume colors.
CONGO —perfect for bright shades and prints.
SPICE —wear it with grey, pastels and all blues.
CABAÑA —gay with beige, yellow, green, black.

Chesterfields are made of mild ripe tobaccos . . . rolled in pure cigarette paper . . . the best ingredients a cigarette can have

For You . . . there's MORE PLEASURE in Chesterfield's milder better taste

They Satisfy

Copyright 1938, LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

IUNDREDS OF INTIMATE PICTURES!

Modern Screen

UNE
O
ENTS

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

GARBO FINDS LOVE!

GRETA GARBO
and
LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI

Like BEES after HONEY
Men pursue you
WHEN YOU'RE SWEET AS A FLOWER
You'll be pursued . . . admired . . . adored, if you have the exciting, tempting fragrance of Nature's own flowers!
Just as the perfume of flowers calls to the bee . . . so does the perfume of Lander's Blended-Flower Talcs whisper a love call that awakens masculine hearts . . . and makes you utterly seductive and desirable.
Try the exquisite Lilacs and Roses Blend. Every morning dust your whole body with this lovely powder . . . smell sweet all over! Instantly, you feel flower-fresh, glorified, inspired . . . you know that you can win love!
And Lander's Blended-Flower Talc does more—it guards your refinement . . . makes a man long to protect you because you're sweet as a flower. He knows you're refined. His love for you is sacred and he dreams of you as his wife to adore forever! Get Lander's Blended-Flower Talc today. Perfumed with a blend of true flowers. The large can only 10¢ each at your 10¢ store.
LILACS and ROSES Blended
GARDENIA and SWEET PEA Blended
Smell sweet all over
Lander
LANDER'S BLENDED FLOWER TALCS
LILACS AND ROSES • GARDENIA AND SWEET PEA • CARNATION AND LILY OF THE VALLEY • LAVENDER AND PINE • ORCHID AND ORANGE BLOSSOM 10¢
SOLD ONLY AT ALL 10¢ STORES

ANN TOOK A CHANCE ON A BATH ALONE

JOAN PLAYED SAFE WITH A BATH PLUS MUM

Underarms need special care that a bath alone can't give!

CLEVER JOAN. Popular Joan! No matter how warm the evening—or how late the dance, Joan always has partners galore. Joan dances every dance.

For she never takes chances with underarm odor—the one fault above all others men can't stand. She realizes that a bath takes care only of past perspiration—that it can't prevent odor to come. So Joan never trusts her bath alone.

She follows her bath with Mum—to be sure she's safe from underarm odor. Mum makes the freshness of your bath last all evening long. Don't risk the loss of daintiness, don't spoil your charm for others. Always use Mum, every single day and after every bath!

MUM IS QUICK! Just one-half minute is all Mum takes to apply.

MUM IS SAFE! Even the most delicate skin finds Mum soothing. And Mum is harmless to fabrics.

MUM IS SURE! Without stopping perspiration, Mum banishes every trace of odor for a full day or evening.

ANOTHER USE FOR MUM—Use Mum for Sanitary Napkins, as thousands of women do. Then you're always safe, free from worry.

So easy to use Mum! As simple as applying a touch of face cream. And—proof of Mum's gentleness—more nurses use Mum than any other deodorant. They know underarms need special care!

MUM

takes the odor out of perspiration

©C1B 378006
MAY -5 1938

THE FIRST THOUGHT IN...

Unguentine is the first thought in first aid

...it doesn't hurt a hurt, but soothes it and relieves the pain. There's no hurt either, when the Unguentine bandage comes off, for it doesn't dry and stick to the wound.

Yet Unguentine is positively and effectively antiseptic. Rub it into the skin to relieve the itching and burning of eczema; spread it thickly on a bandage for burns and injuries. The standard tube is only 50¢; the economical family size jar, $1.00.

Just put on some Unguentine

Norwich

MODERN SCREEN

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co. Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor

NOW SHOWING

GARBO FINDS LOVE 24 MARTHA KERR
WHY GABLE IS KING 26 GLADYS HALL
NEARLY NATURAL 28 NANETTE KUTNER
WHAT'S ALL THE SHOUTING FOR? 30 IDA ZEITLIN
HER STAND-IN MADE HER A STAND-OUT 32 JAMES REID
DICK POWELL TAKES THE STAND 34 GLADYS HALL
FANNY'S FOLLIES 36 GEORGE BENJAMIN
RUNNING AWAY FROM IT ALL 38 CAROLINE S. HOYT
SLAVES TO HOLLYWOOD 40 A MOVIE TRUE STORY
BAD MAN OF BURBANK 42 FAITH SERVICE
ONE VILLAIN COMIN' UP 44 MARY PARKES
FOREIGN FLAVOR 45 ROBERT McILWAINE
HOW TO WIN MEN 46 MARY MARSHALL
HAND IT TO HALEY 48 BEN MADDOX
KICKING OVER THE TRACES 50 MALCOLM OETTINGER

SHORT SUBJECTS

REVIEWS 8 FILM GUIDE
MALE ORDER DESSERTS 10 STU ERWIN'S FAVORITES
OUR PUZZLE PAGE 12 MOVIE X-WORD
INFORMATION DESK 14 ANSWER PAGE
NECESSARY KNITS 16 NEW PATTERNS
PORTRAIT GALLERY 19 OF YOUR FAVORITES
OFF THEIR GUARD 51 CANDID SHOTS
GOOD NEWS 64 GOINGS-ON SUMMER STARTERS 72 FASHIONS
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME 92 PRIZE LETTERS

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President, J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 1, June, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post-office, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington, San Francisco, California; and Houston, Texas. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E.C. 4, England. Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

. . Torn from a million souls !

Out of the inferno of war came three men and a woman—to live their lives, to strive for happiness, to seek love . . . The most heart-touching romance of our time, brilliantly re-created upon the screen, from the world-renowned novel by the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front".

ROBERT TAYLOR MARGARET SULLAVAN

FRANCHOT TONE ROBERT YOUNG

in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Vivid Drama of Today

Three Comrades

with GUY KIBBEE • LIONEL ATWILL • HENRY HULL

A FRANK BORZAGE Production • A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

Directed by FRANK BORZAGE • Produced by Joseph L. Mankiewicz

Screenplay by F. Scott Fitzgerald and Edward E. Paramore

Color-
with
ERROL FLYNN
OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND · BASIL RATHBONE · CLAUDE RAINS
PATRIC KNOWLES · EUGENE PALLETTE
ALAN HALE · MELVILLE COOPER
IAN HUNTER · UNA O'CONNOR
Directed by Michael Curtiz and William Keighley Original Screen Play by Norman Reilly Raine and Seton I. Miller · Based Upon Ancient Robin Hood Legends · Music by Erich Wolfgang Korngold · A FIRST NATIONAL PICTURE

NOW PAINTS

THEIR DASHING DEEDS TO LIVE FOR THE AGES!

Loving, roistering, battling . . . blazing their deeds of daring into the legends of the world! History's most beloved rogue and all his merry men come fighting again for Richard, King of the Lion's Heart! Come galloping out of their outlaws' forest to storm and take forever the castle of romance!

The Adventures of Robin Hood

Presented by WARNER BROS.
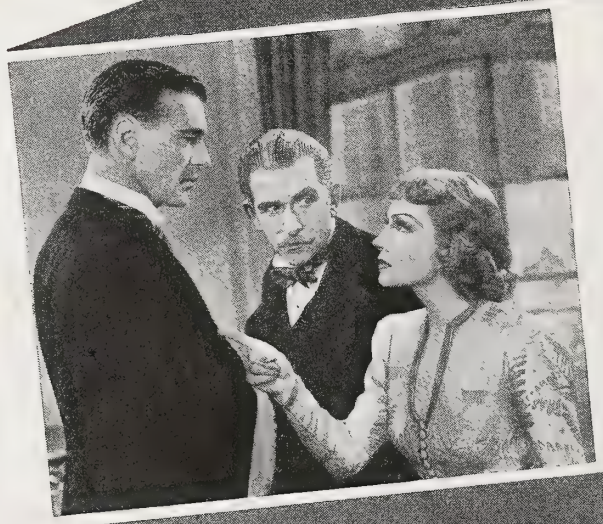
in
TECHNICOLOR

MOVIE REVIEWS



★★★★ Mad About Music

Deanna Durbin's new film "Mad About Music" is the best in her series, heart-warming and completely captivating, and the most pleasant hour and a half Hollywood has devised so far this season.

Deanna plays the daughter of a movie queen, in school in Switzerland because movie queens aren't supposed to have four-teen-year-old daughters. Embarrassed because her schoolmates constantly get letters from their parents, she makes up a father and writes lengthy epistles to herself telling of his exploits in far-off places. Herbert Marshall happens along about this time and is surprised to find himself nominated a father. After many de-lightful sequences, situations adjust themselves and all is well.

Most impressive of the songs is Deanna's rendition of Gounod's "Ave Maria." Of the popular numbers, "I Love to Whistle" is the catchiest. Herbert Marshall is suave and charming as the make-believe father, and Gail Patrick lends sympathy to the role of the movie star mother. Marcia Mae Jones is splendid as one of Deanna's classmates, as is Helen Parrish as the villainess of the school, and Jackie Moran in what must be the romantic lead. Arthur Treacher, William Frawley, Christian Rub, Elizabeth Risdon and Nana Bryant head an excellent supporting cast. Directed by Norman Taurog.—Universal.

★★★★ Bluebeard's Eighth Wife

This one amounts to a triple triumph. For Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert, it presents them in a pair of the finest screen roles they've ever had, and for Ernst Lubitsch, the film marks a return to his old mastery of witty and sophisticated comedy. All in all, it's entertainment of the highest order.

The story, concerning a brusque American millionaire and a slightly impoverished daughter of French aristocracy, manages always to be light in mood and tempo while at the same time it supplies a strong foundation for the antic carryings on of the cast. Mr. Lubitsch, wiser than the directors of most of the recent "mad" films, sees to it that all the insane interludes fit neatly into the plot. There is no reaching out for gags—they all belong to the story.

With the possible exception of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," this is Gary Cooper's best screen work. Claudette Colbert is charm-ing and beautiful as the French gal, and there are swell supporting roles by Edward Everett Horton, David Niven, Elizabeth Patter-son and Warren Hymer. In addition, as in all Lubitsch pictures, every bit player turns in a perfect performance. "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" will rank among the very best of its type for 1938. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch.—Paramount.

★★★ Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm

Shirley Temple has been credited with having started 20th Cen-tury-Fox on its road to financial security. Now nine years old and a cinema veteran, she continues to bring happiness to the paying customers as well as to her studio's accounting department.

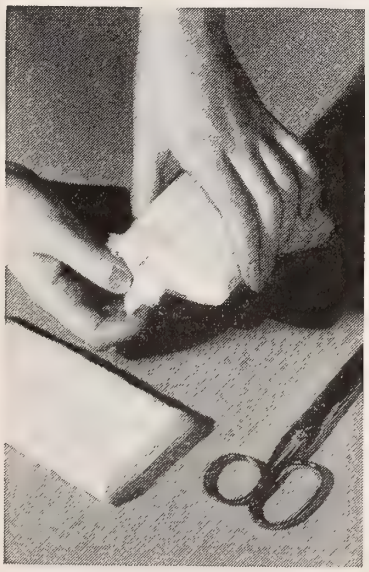
You'll hardly recognize Mrs. Wiggin's story. Rebecca is now a radio star who lends her voice to the advancement of Crackly Grim Flakes when she's not furthering a romance between her country cousin (Gloria Stuart) and the handsome advertising executive (Randolph Scott). Shirley offers quite a repertory of songs and dances, and shows off to best advantage tap dancing with Bill Robinson, accompanied by the Raymond Scott quintette. She also brings laughs when she sits down at the piano and "reminisces," singing song hits from most of her previous pictures.

The supporting cast includes Jack Haley, Helen Westley, Slim Summerville, Phyllis Brooks, J. Edward Bromberg and William Demarest. There's also an amusing bit by Franklin Pangborn as an emergency radio organist who finally gets his chance. Directed by Allan Dwan.—20th Century-Fox.

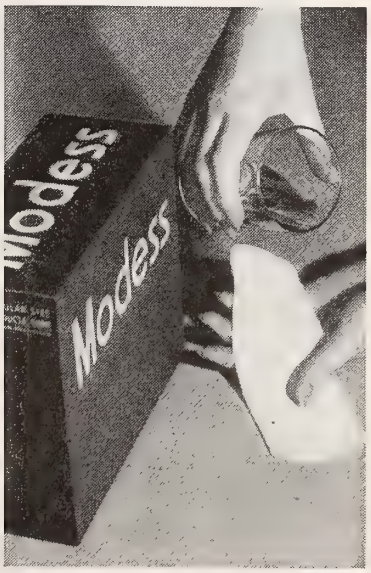
More Reviews on Page 80

BY LEO TOWNSEND

Life as a model taught me ...



"Once I was a lady of leisure—with nothing to do but go to parties if I felt like it . . . take it easy if I didn't. But those days are gone forever! It was in the cards, I guess. You know the saying—'Friday's child is loving and giving . . . Saturday's child works hard for a living.' That's me!"



"Now I model clothes—at a shop where I used to buy them! And whew! —the weary miles we models trudge! Up and down . . . back and forth . . . shoulders back, 'tummy' in, head high!"

"Naturally 'certain days' are worse than others. But I soon learned from the other models how to make those days a lot easier! They introduced me to Modess—and, believe me, when you're on your feet all day, a napkin that doesn't chafe makes a world of difference!"

"If you'd like to know why Modess is more comfortable . . . just cut a pad in two. Feel that filler! It's like the down on a duck! So soft and fluffy—entirely different from napkins made of crêpey, close-packed layers."

"And—how much safer! Prove it for yourself. Take the moisture-proof backing from inside a Modess pad and drop water on it! That will show you why you need never worry again about ruining a dress . . . or being embarrassed."

"Then—if you're earning your own living and have to count the pennies, as I do . . . here's some more good news. Modess is easy on the pay envelope! Honestly—for all its greater comfort and security—Modess costs no more than any other nationally known napkin! So—take a tip from me and buy yourself a box of Modess today."

Get in the habit of saying "Modess"!

IF YOU PREFER A SMALLER, SLIGHTLY NARROWER PAD, SAY "JUNIOR MODESS"

"Stu" Erwin's whole family prefers pie. Look. No wonder.

MALE ORDER DESSERTS

BY MARJORIE DEEN

WELL gals, gather 'round, for I've just collected recipes for three of Stuart Erwin's favorite desserts, along with further proof —if proof were necessary—that if you leave the choosing of the meal's last course to the man of the family the "male order" for dessert will be pie nine times out of ten! Yes, at home or in a restaurant, leave the choice up to him and he'll specify some form of tempting filling encased in rich, flaky pastry.

Stuart Erwin is no exception in this respect, according to his lovely wife, who is still remembered by all of us as "the charming June Collyer." But June is more than content these days to be known just as "Stu's" wife and the mother of his two fine children, Bill and Judy. In fact the joy of her life lies in catering to their every wish.

That being the case you can be sure that the Erwin cook is instructed by June to prepare pies at most frequent intervals for the all-important sweet course of the day's most important meal. This is a year 'round standing order. However, when the warmer days set in, the only pies that make their appearance at the festive board in the Erwin's attractive dining room are of the lighter textured one-crust variety such as ever popular "cream" pies.

"This type of dessert is especially good when there are small children in the family," June informed me as together we searched through the family recipe file for the pies that had won the family's highest praises.

"You see," she continued, "even a toddler like Judy can eat the creamy filling that goes into making the Butterscotch Pie that I'm giving you, even though she isn't supposed to have the crust. But whether served as a pie or as a pudding I can certainly say that this particular dessert is a great favorite with the entire Erwin family.

"My pet pie in its early stages is just a smooth custard, such as any small child can enjoy. But when fixed up with strawberries and cream for guests and older members of the family, it turns out to be the richest and most beautiful of pastry desserts."

Since this particular treat happened to be in the refrigerator at the very time that Mrs. Erwin was describing it to me, we made a point of photographing June's pie before we took the picture of the entire Erwin family caught in the act of enjoying its Spring-like, delicious flavor. So here you will find photographs and recipes, as well; given with a special thought to increasing the "male order" business of appreciation for your knowledge of cooking and catering.

Incidentally, to make an attractive pie shell, try shaping and baking it over the back of a straight-sided cake pan. (June's pie shell, you'll notice from its shape in the picture on this page, is made in this way.)

JUNE PIE

- ⅔ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
- 2 cups scalded milk
- ¼ cup unwhipped cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1½ cups sliced strawberries
- ⅓ cup powdered sugar
- 1 baked (or graham cracker) pie shell
- ¾ cup cream, whipped and slightly sweetened
- 2 tablespoons fine graham cracker crumbs
- 1 teaspoon granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons melted butter
- 1 dozen whole, perfect berries, for garnishing

Combine granulated sugar, flour and salt. Beat in egg yolks. Slowly add scalded milk. Turn into top of double boiler and cook over boiling water for 10 minutes, stirring constantly for the first 5 minutes, frequently during the last 5

"Stu" Erwin's favorite pies would win a heart of stone. Don't say we didn't minutes. Remove from heat. Add vanilla and ¼ cup cream. Strain into bowl, cover and chill. Clean berries, slice thin and combine with powdered sugar, allowing them to stand for at least ½ hour. Shortly before serving time spread chilled custard filling in baked (or cracker) pie shell. Cover filling with the sliced, sweetened berries. Spread slightly sweetened whipped cream over the berries. Combine cracker crumbs with teaspoon of sugar; mix in melted butter with a fork. Sprinkle crumbs over pie. Garnish with whole berries. (See illustration.)

BUTTERSCOTCH CREAM PIE

2 cups scalded milk
4 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons flour
⅓ teaspoon salt
1¾ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ cup cold milk
2 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons vanilla
4 tablespoons cream
1 baked pie shell
¾ cup cream, whipped

Scald the 2 cups of milk in top of double boiler. Mix cornstarch, flour, salt and brown sugar. Beat in the egg yolks. Gradually add the cold milk. Add this mixture slowly to scalded milk, stirring vigorously. Add butter. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened (about 5 minutes). Cover and continue cooking over boiling water 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat, add vanilla and 4 tablespoons cream. Blend well. Place in a tightly covered bowl in refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Just before serving spread this filling in cooked pie shell. Top with whipped cream, very slightly sweetened.

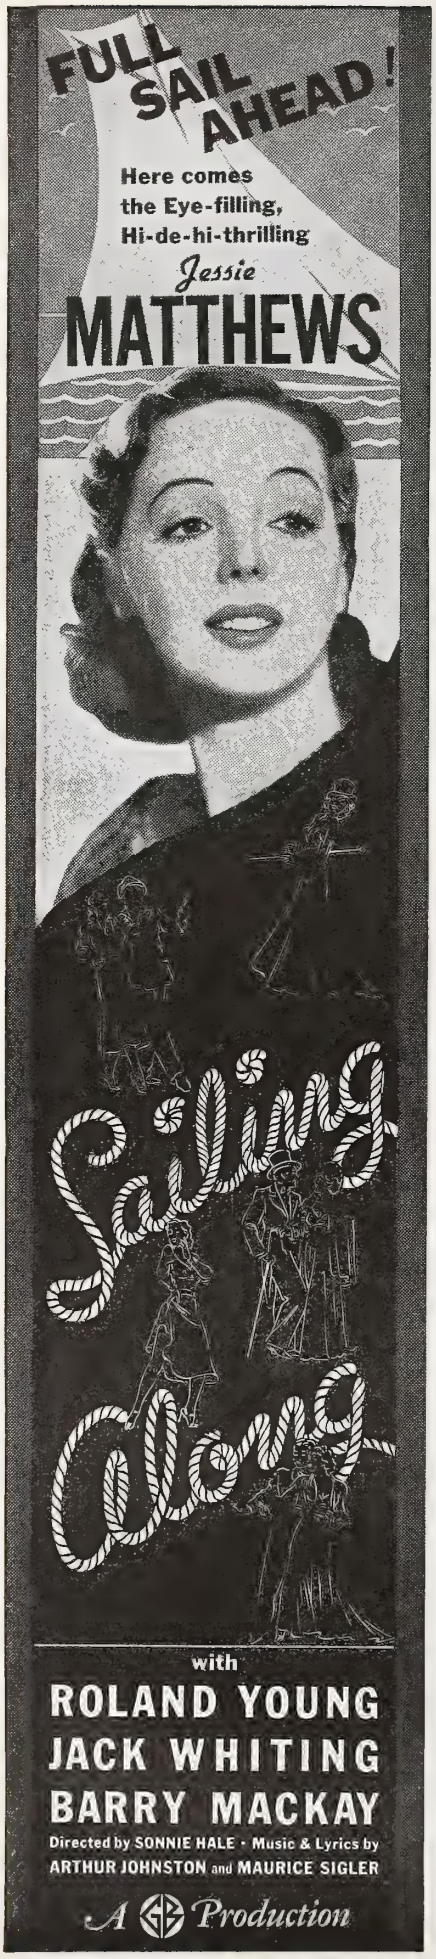
Don't spread a cream filling in your pie shell any longer ahead of time than is absolutely necessary, by the way.

warn you about these

Two Little Play Suits Climbed the Hill...

Two little play suits climbed the hill—
One on Jack, and one on Jill.
Look at Jill's—so bright and gay!
But Jack's is full of tattle-tale gray.

For Jill's mom knows what Jack's does not—
That lazy soap just hasn't got
The pep to wash clothes really clean.
And that's why Jack's things look so mean.



If Jack's mom were as wise as Jill's,
She'd quickly cure her washday ills.
She'd get the golden bar today
That chases pesky tattle-tale gray.

Fels-Naptha Soap is what she'd buy—
So full of naptha, dirt must fly!
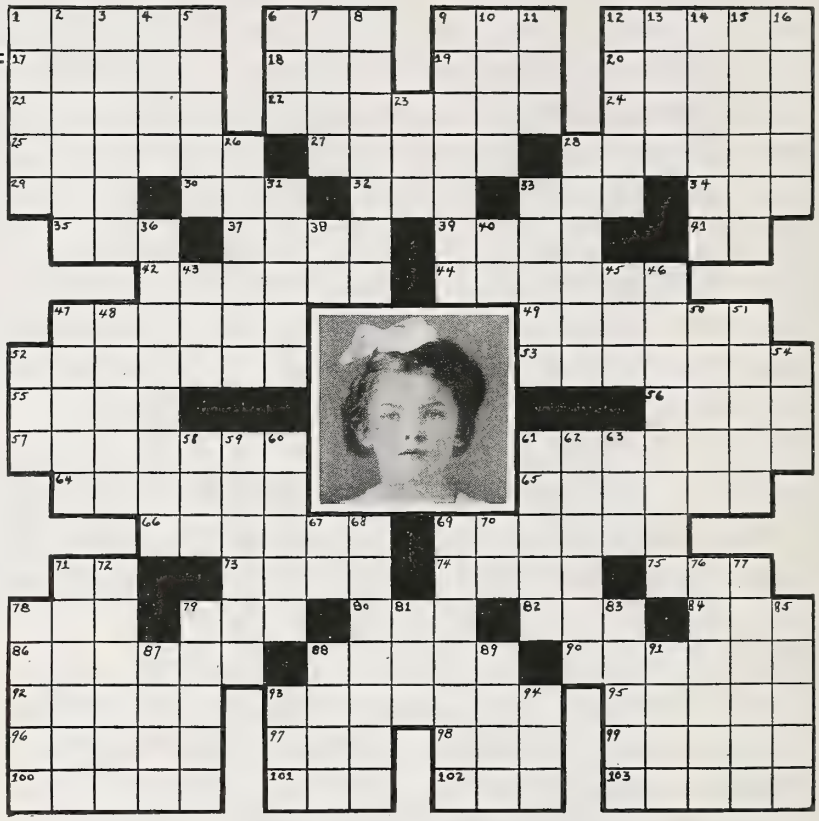
Then white as Jill's, Jack's clothes would be,
And as for mom, she'd shout with glee.



BANISH "TATTLE-TALE GRAY" WITH FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

(NEW! Try Fels-Naptha Soap Chips, too!)

COPR. 1938, FELS & CO.

OUR PUZZLE

Puzzle Solution on Page 86

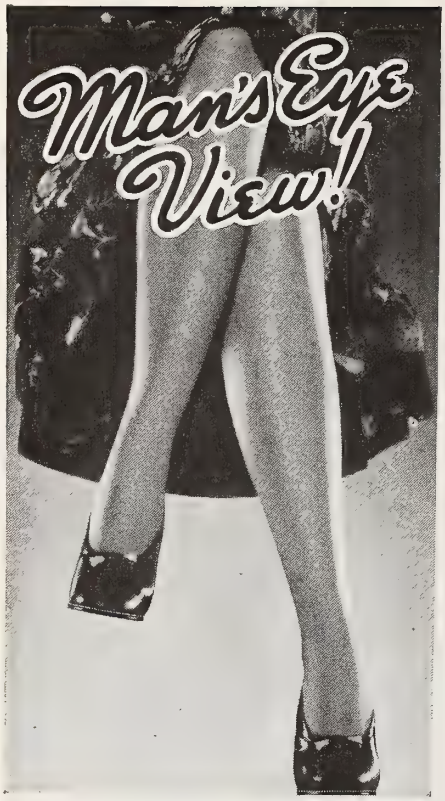
ACROSS

1. First name of star pictured
6. "--- American Chump"
9. Last name of star pictured
12. "I Met Him in -----"
17. The Barrymores' sister
18. King: Fr.
19. Female sheep
20. ----- Massey of "Rosalie"
21. One indifferent to pain
22. Birth state of star pictured
24. Her first name's Elissa
25. Stella ------, newcomer
27. Female servants
28. Hero of "Night Spot"
29. Jes--- Matthews
30. Turf
32. Ruby ---ler
33. Male lead in "Women Are Like That"
34. H--- Gibson
35. Shade tree
37. Part of a skeleton
39. Spool on which film is wound
41. Cleo Fielding in "Big Broadcast of 1938"
42. Instrument used on cans
44. Sickly color
47. Dawn
49. Smaller
52. Femme star of "Merrily We Live"
53. Small surgical knife
55. Inhabitant of Arabia
56. Wife of Errol Flynn
57. Without a cover
61. Song-and-dance movie
64. Sandra ------, model
65. Restless
66. Author
69. Star of "Wise Girl"
71. Exclamation
73. Rosemary, Priscilla and Lola
74. Javanese weight
75. Drink in small quantities
78. "Over --- Wall"
79. Mrs. Bing Crosby
80. ---ry Crabbe
82. Comedian who died recently
84. Witness a movie
86. Trusts
88. Leases
90. Walt Disney's duck
92. Rugged crest of a mountain range
93. Vic LeRoy in "Dr. Rhythm"
95. Orchestra leader on Burns' and Allen's airshow
96. Interior
97. Ands: Fr.
98. No: Scot.
99. Mary -----
100. Screen pairs
101. Born
102. ---r Gorin
103. Seasons

PAGE

DOWN

1. Plateaus with steep sides
2. Yttrium sesquioxide
3. Erik ------
4. ---- Hamilton
5. Genus including the moose
6. Robert --- strong
7. Weaving frame
8. Kay -------
9. Guides
10. Possesses
11. Affirmative vote
12. "Test -----"
13. Winged
14. Cheerful musical compositions
15. Pertaining to a building's interior
16. Godly person
23. Knot
26. The "Yank at Oxford"
28. French
31. Star of "Knight Without Armor"
33. Animal skins
36. Our star's husband
38. Star of "Girl of the Golden West": init.
40. Each: abbr.
43. Author of "The Raven"
45. Indian of Tierra del Fuego
46. Real name of our star
47. Airships: coll.
48. Not likely
50. Colossal historical films
51. Supply arranged beforehand for successive relief
52. A player of small roles
54. Mae West wrote "Diamond ---"
58. Go astray
59. Cheerful expressions
60. Bristles
61. Annabella's husband
62. Combined
63. "Souls At ---"
67. Printer's measure
68. Show a film
69. Star of "I'll Take Romance"
70. "-'- No Angel"
71. Male star of "Merrily We Live"
72. Town of our star's birth
76. ------ Jewell
77. Small ball of food
78. "The ----- or"
79. Sinister looks
81. Small insect
83. Do nots: contr.
85. Paradises
87. Short article
88. Network of nerves
89. Protuberance
91. Our star's "Thin Man" name
93. Comedian in "You're A Sweetheart"
94. Gladys --- rge



ROCHELLE HUDSON
20th Century-Fox Star
Half and Half
The smooth fitting half-skirt of this Lastex Wisp-o-weight suit gives maillot-slimness to the hips. Jantzen-spun wool and Lastex yarn . . . $5.95
Other Jantzen Creations
$4.95 to $12.95

The Suit of the Future-
JANTZEN
Lastex Wisp-O-Weight

The miracle of Lastex knitted into Jantzen fabrics by a new and exclusive process has made obsolete all former standards of fit and figure-control in water wear. Step into 1939 in a new Jantzen Lastex Wisp-o-weight It's a year ahead, the suit of the future. It is wondrously light, exceptionally soft, rapid-drying. But more than that—it fits you perfectly and makes you look better than any suit you have ever worn. It has just the ideal ratio of two-way stretch, molding your body in the natural lines of youth. It softens contours, slims and slenderizes you, firmly yet comfortably.
Jantzen Knitting Mills, Portland, Oregon; Vancouver, Canada.

Jantzen
LASTEX WISP-O-WEIGHT SWIM SUITS

JANTZEN KNITTING MILLS, Dept. 161, Portland, Oregon
Send me style folder in color featuring new 1938 models. Women's ☐ Men's ☐
Name
Street City

UNSIGHTLY HAIR SPOILS YOUR CHARM

Rinse It Off This Quick, Easy Way!

This season's shorter skirts . . . sheer stockings . . . and modern bathing suits . . . keep women's legs in the spotlight. See that yours are always smooth and feminine. Avoid unsightly hair!

Simply spread NEET (like a cold cream) on unwanted hair. Then rinse off with water—that's all. NEET gently, safely removes hair invisibly close to the skin surface. It leaves your arms and legs satin-smooth. NEET—used by millions of women—is easier and safer than shaving.

NEET leaves your legs like velvet

Avoid Bristly Razor Stubble

NEET eliminates bristly re-growth that follows shaving—sharp-edged stubble that may snag stockings. NEET ends danger of cuts—prevents razor-roughened skin.

For lovely legs and arms—with no unsightly hair—get NEET today! At your drug or department store. Generous trial size at all ten-cent stores.

NEET Just Rinse Off Unsightly Hair

Boost your favorite player by sending in the coupon

ROBERT MONTGOMERY: "So the poor little rich boy had to go to work, and years later he became a famous movie star." Yes, Robert Montgomery (and that is his real name) was born in Beacon, New York, the son of Henry Montgomery, vice-president of the N. Y. Rubber Co. When he was a youngster there were tutors and exclusive schools—his prep-school days were spent at the fashionable Pauling School in New York, and he later studied in England, France, Switzerland, and Germany. When Bob was sixteen his father died and young Bob suddenly found it necessary to go to work. His first job was as a mechanic's helper on a railroad. His next one was as a deck hand on an oil tanker, and the third was doing "bits" in a Faversham show in New York. Then there was work with a stock company in Rochester, N. Y., and after that Broadway for five years. Meantime Bob was offered a contract in silent pictures and refused, but was finally won over by the "Talkies." He did one picture after another in quick succession until he was made a star in "Man in Possession." Then followed a long list of starring and co-starring pictures in which Bob's brisk, breezy, sophisticated charm skyrocketed him into the first ranks of popularity where he has stayed ever since. His most recent picture is "The First Hundred Years." His next will be "Yellowjack." Bob is just as popular off screen as on. He shoots a good game of golf, and is one of the best tennis players in the film colony. He also plays a mean piano, and sings a nifty tenor. He likes music by Ravel and Irving Berlin, is an incessant reader, and has written and published many short stories. He likes Scottie dogs, and has several of them. Bob's big ambition is to write and direct pictures. He is happily married, and has two charming small daughters. His birthday is May 21st. He is six feet tall, weighs one hundred and sixty pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. He takes his work seriously, is president of the Screen Actor's Guild, and is an all 'round grand person to know.

ANITA LOUISE: This lovely blonde starlet first saw the sun in the sky in New York City on January 9th, 1917. She is descended from mingled French, German, and English ancestry, and her real name is Anita Louise Fremalt. Both of her parents were born in Alsace Lorraine. Anita was educated at the Professional School in New York, and the Greenwood School for Girls in Hollywood. Her first ambitions were to be an actress and to write music. She is beautifully accomplished at both the harp and the piano, has a fine singing voice, and is a talented dancer. She also is adept at several foreign languages. The tender age of seven found Anita on the New York stage where she appeared in a number of successful plays. She was under contract to a major studio for a whole year before a suitable role came along. Then she went to work on the "Du Barry" set. Anita is fond of all outdoor sports, especially riding, swimming and fencing. She doesn't know what it is to have to diet, and she loves thick steaks and roast turkey. She knows how to cook them too. She follows her mother's recipes. Soap and water are Anita's only beauty secrets. Pretty clothes naturally appeal to her, and she knows how to wear them. Hollywood and New York fashions interest her much more than those from Paris. Anita's home is full of needlework that she herself made. Flowers are a hobby with her too. She will save diligently by doing her own hair and nails, and then go on a cut flower spree, filling the house with Briarcliff roses and lillies-of-the-valley. Her lone pet is a Scottie named "Wee Thistle." Anita col-

HAVE YOU SENT FOR YOUR LIST OF ADDRESSES?

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking! So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, listing the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing address. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

lects rare coins and good luck charms. She also prizes a very old piano and a two hundred year old violin. This radiant young star is five feet three inches tall, weighs one hundred and six pounds, has light blue eyes and very blonde hair. Her most recent pictures include "Green Light," "The Go-Getter," "That Certain Woman," "First Lady," "Tovarich," and "Marie Antoinette." Her next picture will be "Sister Act."

RAY CORRIGAN: No mere accident catapulted Ray Corrigan into the movies, and into the hearts of a growing Corrigan-conscious public. True, when he was still a handsome young student at the North Denver High School out in Colorado he thought some of becoming the world's greatest electrical engineer. And the devious ways of fate and stern necessity did lead him through several subsequent years of business in oil, radio, electricity, and even physical education. But Ray had seen Douglas Fairbanks père do his dashing athletic stunts on the screen, and right then and there he had determined to perform a few movie stunts of his own. He had the makings, for he is six feet two inches tall, weighs two hundred pounds, has laughing gray eyes, dark brown hair, and he inherits plenty of courage and brawn from a fine mixture of French and German ancestry. In fact his mother is descended from the royal family of Hohenzollern. Ray studied dramatics, did a series of six plays for the Hollywood Community Theatre, playing heavies. Then in 1932 his movie chance came. They needed someone of Johnny Weismuller's physical appearance, and Cedric Gibbons got Ray his first opportunity. His first talking picture came in 1934 when he played Apollo in "Night Life of the Gods." Then followed the "Darkest Africa" and "Under Sea Kingdom" serials and later the "Three Mesquiteers" pictures in which he co-stars with Robert Livingston. Some of his latest pictures have been "Heart of the Rockies," "Trigger Trio," "Wild Horse Rodeo," "The Purple Vigilantes," and his new one "Outlaws of Sonora." Ray Corrigan was born February 14, 1907 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. His family name is Benard. He likes to swim, plays hand ball, and prefers to act in Western pictures. He has twenty-one patents to his credit, of which he is very proud. He is thirty-one years old—and, girls, he isn't married!

Helen Walden, Los Angeles, Cal. Jon Hall was born in Fresno, Cal. February 26, 1913. His real name is Charles Hall Locker. Yes, he does all his own swimming, and did all the diving in "Hurricane" except the dive from the cliff, for which a double was used. You can reach him at United Artists Studios. His next picture is to be "The Cowboy and the Lady."

Blanche Kelly, Cincinnati, O. Griffith Jones played Paul Beaumont, Maureen O'Sullivan's brother in "A Yank at Oxford." He is English, over six feet tall, has a fine physique, and is an all-'round athlete, tennis and riding being among his favorites. He started out to study law, but switched to the stage and later the movies.

(Continued on page 17)

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

.....

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

If you would like our chart with weights, heights, ages, birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.

AN EXPERIENCED WOMAN

could have told her!

Neglect of intimate cleanliness may rob the loveliest woman of her charm... Use "Lysol" for feminine hygiene

ONE lesson life teaches a woman is the need for complete intimate daintiness.

A man wants to think of the woman whose love and companionship he seeks as his dream of feminine loveliness . . . fresh and exquisite at all times. But, without realizing it, there are times when even perfumes, baths and beauty aids may fail to make you attractive—if you neglect the practice of feminine hygiene. Many experienced family doctors know that this neglect has wrecked the happiness of countless marriages.

Don't risk offending in this most personal way. Be sure of complete exquisiteness. Follow the "Lysol" method of efficient feminine hygiene.

Ask your own doctor about "Lysol" disinfectant. He will tell you "Lysol" has been used in many hospitals and clinics for years as an effective antiseptic douche. Directions for use are on each bottle.

Six reasons for using "Lysol" for feminine hygiene—

1—Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in the proper dilution, is gentle and efficient, contains no harmful free caustic alkali.

2—Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions, effective in the presence of organic matter (such as dirt, mucus, serum, etc.).

3—Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension, and thus virtually search out germs.

4—Economy . . . "Lysol" is concentrated, costs only about one cent an application in the proper dilution for feminine hygiene.

5—Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use.

6—Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, how often it is uncorked.

•

Also, try Lysol Hygienic Soap for bath, hands and complexion. It's cleansing, deodorant.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND THIS COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK Products Corp.,
Dept. 6-M. S., Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "Lysol vs. Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol."

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Copyright 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT—and Romeo couldn't forget the pulse-stirring fragrance that Juliet wore.

TODAY'S ROMEO CAN'T RESIST the magic lure of Djer-Kiss—the exquisite fragrance that becomes yours when you wear Djer-Kiss Talc.

START your day the Djer-Kiss way! Bathe your entire body with this delightful talc each morning. Djer-Kiss keeps you dainty and refreshed all day. . . . Helps you stay cool, for it actually lowers body temperature. Clothes feel more comfortable . . . Makes you alluringly fragrant. Use Djer-Kiss generously, for the cost is surprisingly small. Buy it today at drug and toilet goods counters—25c and 75c sizes. Liberal 10c size at all 10c stores.

The same delightful fragrance in Djer-Kiss Sachet, Eau de Toilette and Face Powder.

YOURS FREE—the exciting new book, "Women Men Love—Which Type Are You?"

—full of valuable hints on how to make yourself more alluring. Just send a post card with your name and address to Parfums Kerkoff, Inc., Dept. Z, New York.

. . . genuine imported talc scented with Djer-Kiss perfume by Kerkoff, Paris.

DJER-KISS
(Pronounced "Dear-Kiss")
TALC
By KERKOFF · PARIS

NECESSARY KNITS

BM 3703—The Brooks cardigan, below, perfect for sports wear.

BM 3701—A tricky new stitch makes your extra suit blouse.

IT'S A simple matter to knit yourself a smart Brooks cardigan, and once you've started wearing it, you'll see why this classic sweater is the perennial pet of college girls and debbies. Straight stockinette stitch and soft saxony yarn make the perfect combination of smart simplicity.

Or, if you prefer a dressier design and a more elaborate stitch, then try your hand at BM 3701. Two shades of yarn are used to produce the novel pattern of this dressmaker blouse, fascinating to follow as you knit it up. An unusual detail is seen in the slide fastener pull, which is finished off by two little Darby and Joan figures, made of the yarn.

Free directions for both these designs are ready and waiting for you to make your selection. Clip the coupon and send in your stamped (3c) envelope.

ANN WILLS, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:
Knitting directions for BM 3703.....
Knitting directions for BM 3701.....
I am enclosing a stamped, addressed (large) envelope.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....
(Check one or both designs and please print name and address)

INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 15)

Phyllis White, New York. Stories about James Stewart appeared in MODERN SCREEN in August 1936, November 1936, November 1937 and April 1938. Yes, many scenes of "Navy Blue and Gold" were shot at Annapolis.

Shirley Woodin, West Haven, Conn. Annabella was born in Paris, France, and appeared in many European movies before coming to America. She is with 20th Century-Fox Studios. Madeleine Carroll was born in England, February 26, 1906. She is with United Artists.

Martha W. R., Monroe, La. Mickey Rooney was born September 23rd, 1921. His real name is Joe Yule, Jr. His height and weight being in constant process of change it is impossible to give accurate figures.

Dolores Krajeski, Chicago, Ill. Here are the ages you asked for: Deanna Durbin is fifteen years old, Bonita Granville is fifteen, Mickey Rooney is seventeen, Jackie Cooper is fifteen, Freddie Bartholomew is fourteen, and George Ernest is sixteen.

Go Sam Suan, Cebu, Philippine Islands. Dick Powell is six feet tall, has blue eyes and red hair, weighs one hundred seventy-two pounds. His last picture was "Hollywood Hotel," next will be "Brooklyn Cowboy."

Marjory Adamson, Salt Lake City, Utah. William Gargon is his real name. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. July 17, 1905. He is married. His first picture was "Rain," his most recent, "You're a Sweetheart."

Enid Finn, Vancouver, B. C. Ronald Colman is with United Artists Studios. He has been married and separated from his wife. He was born February 9, 1891 in England.

Robert Bremlett, Monroe, La. Ray Milland's next picture will be "Tropic Holiday." John Carradine was born in New York City, February 6th, 1906.

Yvonne Ribet, Medford, L. I., N. Y. Robert Taylor's real name is Arlington Brugh. He was born August 5th, 1911. He is six feet tall, has brown hair and blue eyes. "A Yank at Oxford" is his most recent picture. You can get his picture by sending twenty-five cents in stamps to M-G-M studios in Hollywood.

Mary Putt, Fort Wayne, Ind. Anthony Quinn was born in Mexico. He is six feet two inches tall, weighs one hundred eighty-five pounds, has black hair and brown eyes. Three of his recent pictures are "The Plainsman," "Swing High, Swing Low," and "Waikiki Wedding."

Rietta Hertwig, Brooklyn, N. Y. Victor McLaglen was born December 11, 1886. His hair and eyes are brown. He is six feet three inches tall, weighs two hundred and twenty-five pounds. James Stewart is six feet two inches tall, has brown hair and gray eyes. He was born May 20th, 1908. He can be reached at M-G-M studios.

Doris Hill, Savannah, Ga. Robert Livingston is twenty-nine years old, and is married. Stories about Jean Harlow appeared in MODERN SCREEN in March 1935, April 1936, September 1936, and February 1937. If you will send ten cents a copy to our subscription department we will be glad to mail back issues. A story about Gene Autry was published in the October 1937 MODERN SCREEN. An Information Desk sketch appeared in July 1937. He was born September 29, 1907. The Lone Ranger's identity is still a secret.

Helen Kratzner, Linden, N. J. Spencer Tracy is thirty-seven years old, weighs one hundred sixty-five pounds, and is five feet ten and one-half inches tall. Wayne Morris is twenty-four years old. His last picture was "The Kid Comes Back." His next will be "Glitter." Eleanor Powell is five feet six and a half inches tall.

Adele Watson, Birmingham, Ala. Nelson Eddy is thirty-seven years old, weighs one hundred seventy-three pounds, and is six feet tall.

They give you FRESH Faces

They Keep Stars Fresh!

Who keeps your favorite movie star looking so FRESH? Why, it's those geniuses of make-up! They give you FRESH FACES on the screen, as Old Gold gives you FRESHNESS in cigarettes.

OLD GOLD gives you FRESH CIGARETTES

HOURS waiting "on the lot". Dust and dirt. The heat of Kleig lights. Yet a screen star . . . to retain her charm and appeal . . . must be utterly fresh the instant she steps before the camera.

Cigarettes face that freshness problem, too. They travel far to reach you; and along the way they're beset by dryness, dampness, dust. Yet a cigarette . . . to retain its charm and appeal . . . must be utterly fresh the instant you put a match to it.

Hollywood spends a fortune to guard the freshness of its stars. We spend a fortune to guard the freshness of our star . . . Double-Mellow Old Gold.

We put an extra jacket of costly moisture-proof Cellophane around every Old Gold package. Thus, double-wrapped and double-sealed, Old Gold's mellow prize crop tobaccos are protected from staleness. Every Old Gold reaches you exactly as we make it . . . and that's as fine as a cigarette can be made.

TUNE IN on Old Gold's Hollywood Screenscoops, Tues. and Thurs. nights, Columbia Network, Coast-to-Coast

Here's why the O.G. package keeps 'em fresh

Copyright, 1938, by P. Lorillard Co., Inc.

IT'S FUN O'CLOCK, MOUNTAIN TIME!
. . . and how the fun keeps mountin' up!
Jeepers Creepers! Wait'll you see those Ritzes as imitation hillbillies on a rampage in the corn likker country! They've cooked up the con-sarndest mess of fun since Grampaw shot the galluses off'n that revenooer! "Life Begins In College" was just a warm-up for Public Maniacs No.'s 1, 2 and 3!
...and there's romance in them thar hills!
Tony Martin as the singing radio talent scout "discovers" cute little Marjorie Weaver in Coma, Ky....and they've been in a coma of love ever since!
The RITZ BROTHERS in KENTUCKY MOONSHINE
A 20th Century-Fox Picture with
TONY MARTIN • MARJORIE WEAVER
Slim Summerville • John Carradine • Wally Vernon
Berton Churchill • Eddie Collins
Directed by David Butler
Associate Producer Kenneth Macgowan • Screen Play by Art Arthur and M. M. Musselman • Original story by M. M. Musselman and Jack Lait, Jr.
Additional Dialogue and Comedy Songs by Sid Kuller and Ray Golden
Darryl F. Zanuck in Charge of Production
Songs!
Pollack and Mitchell's tunefullest, swingin'-est, best!

Margaret Sullavan

Ray Milland

Simone Simon

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Olivia de Havilland

Though Leopold Stokowski is twenty years her senior, Garbo finds supreme happiness in his companionship.

Has Greta Garbo a chance at happiness? Here is the true story of her big romance

GARBO FINDS LOVE

GRETA GARBO has found love at last. The First Lady of Filmdom, who knew unfaltering devotion through her affection for the late Mauritz Stiller, and who learned of the gayness of light romance from the impetuous John Gilbert, now realizes, for the first time, the true meaning of love.

Garbo herself has said, "Love is not really dramatic. It is what is behind love and romance that gives us the greatest emotion. I don't know what the greatest emotion really is. Perhaps it is sacrifice. That is, of course, a big part of love."

And if sacrifice is needed as proof of her present deep affection, it is evident. For, she has tossed aside her most important personal possession—her dearly valued privacy—in defense of her feeling for the famed musician, Leopold Stokowski.

Yes, Greta Garbo faced a battery of inquisitive reporters in Ravello, recently, and confided that her famous companion in their Italian retreat had offered to show her some of the beauty of the world. The fact that the woman more men have dreamed of knowing than any other accepted the offer seems proof enough of her great love for the man whose association she has secretly enjoyed these many months.

Garbo's very few intimates have actually thrilled to her newfound peace and contentment, for her life has been punctuated with unhappiness and disaster. She has known frustration and loneliness such as has been the lot of few people. She has met disillusionment through trust, and loss through death. She has felt the cutting pain of broken confidences, and the deep, dull ache at the removal of those few who have been near and dear to her.

No, Greta Garbo's personal life has not been an enviable one. But she has hidden the wounds from the eyes of the world just as she has sought to keep her personal activities to herself. And so, it is only just and right that she should at last find her measure of contentment and happiness.

The first inkling that her close friends had that her attachment for Stokowski was a real and important one was when he brought Deanna Durbin, in whose picture he was appearing, to see Garbo. He had talked often of this amazing child and Garbo soon expressed a desire to meet her and hear her sing. Word of the visit leaked out somehow and accounted for Stokowski's absence from musical and the more exclusive social circles of filmdom. He was spending his free time in the company of Greta Garbo.

The musician's recent divorce from his second wife only served to add fuel to the flame of speculation and tended to prove that he and Garbo had plans for a permanent companionship. The fact that Stokowski has been accused of being a publicity-seeker and that, in this particular instance, no one could pry from him a word as to the progress of his friendship with the most famous of movie stars, served again to give credence to his sincerity toward their romance.

AT ANY rate, when all the speculation is over and done with, one salient fact remains and that is that Garbo and Stokowski have an "understanding," that he has brought her happiness and love and that she would rather be in his company than in anyone's else in the world. Yes, while Garbo's cry has hitherto been that she wanted to be alone, it is now that she wants to be alone with the one man in the world who really matters to her.

Independence has somehow always been forced upon this great actress; that is, with the exception of her association with the late Mauritz Stiller. She learned to depend upon his affection, rely upon his judgment. His devotion was the nearest approach to security she has ever known—until now. No, Greta Garbo has not wanted to be "master of her fate and captain of her soul," although circumstances have often seemed to tend to make her self-sufficient. Indeed, she is fundamentally the "clinging vine," the woman who prefers seclusion and the devotion of a man whom she can love and respect.

It seems as if, at last, this man has arrived and Greta Garbo has taken, and plans to hold, the joy that she has long been (Continued on page 109)

BY MARTHA KERR

Garbo feels that there is a law that governs all her actions. Is it the marriage law this time?

WHY

Even with strong competition from younger, handsomer men, Gable's still the tops—and here is the reason

BY

GLADYS HALL

The artist's dream of King Gable in his crown — purely imaginary, for heman Clark won't wear it.

GABLE IS KING

One horse who likes his work. If equines could cast a vote, it's plain Clark would have been king by one more ballot.

Lombard and Gable can smile when they sign those autographs. It's "the common touch" which keeps the crown firmly atop the head.

YOU HAVE elected Gable King of the Movies.

In a nationwide newspaper poll, twenty million votes came in and—Gable wears the crown.

Just why?

The better part of twenty million people can't be wrong. But it seems to us that they may be interested in knowing, specifically, why they are right.

It's one thing to elect a man king from distances which may lend enchantment. It's another thing to find that your votes are ratified by the men and women who work for and with your screen sovereign, who know him as he is, not as he seems to be.

There is no better way of taking the measure of a man than by talking about him with the people who work with him: prop boys, assistant directors, his stand-in, the gang with whom it is not necessary to "put on a show" but to whose measuring, experienced eyes a man does show what manner of man he is. No better way than talking with his fellow actors who are also, remember, his keen competitors.

And if you think that Hollywood doesn't dare to say what it really thinks about one of its members you should have heard what I heard when I collected opinions of a certain famed woman star. They positively blistered. I had, finally, to go to the star herself in order to hear something pleasant about her! In Gable's case the reverse was true. I had to go to him and say "F'r crying out loud, say something disagreeable about yourself, will ya?"

Yes, Hollywood crowns with laurels but it also crowns with thorns when unpleasing is the head that wears a crown.

On the M-G-M lot the other day, on the set of "Test Pilot" in which Clark, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy are co-starred, in triplicate, Spence came by as I was standing around waiting for a word with Gable.

"Come over to see the King today, huh?" he grinned. He sat down on a camera case only to rise at once, sweep an imaginary hat to the floor, bow low and declaim, "The Queen!" as Myrna came, all quietly, to join us. Instantly every voice on the set took up the cry, "The Queen! The Queen!" and knees were bent, heads lowered, one felt that plumes went down before royalty.

Myrna pushed Spence back on the camera case, sat down beside him and said, "This king and queen business, we'll never live it down, it's terrific."

Spencer said, "Well, speaking of the King, saving your presence, Ma'am, he is terrific. You can't defeat him. Because he has a swell sense of humor, a great sense of humor."

"A lovely thing, in kings," murmured Myrna.

"So great," went on Spencer, ignoring the royal interruption, "that you couldn't kill it, not by flattery, nor by success, nor even by failure."

Said Myrna, "Spence is right, it's the spirit of the man, the high, healthy spirit of him that buoys everyone up and himself along with the rest of us. I would feel lost and low if Clark didn't have a new story for me every morning when we meet on the set. He's sort of like a little boy, you know, an awful tease. But he's also a kind-hearted little boy who never goes too far. For if the Ki—if Clark thinks his cracks are going to upset you he'll stop."

(Continued on page 74)

Charm of a child—art of a veteran.

Come on now, everybody, sing!

Can't you just hear that sweet voice?

Do I have to sing it that way?

NEARLY NATURAL

BY NANETTE KUTNER

SOMEBODY MUST have told Deanna Durbin not to talk. Somebody must have cautioned her about interviews, must have said, "Be careful to act natural."

This advice has left Deanna, innately a wholesome unaffected girl, so puzzled and terrified, lest she utter the wrong words, that whenever I asked her a question, her blue eyes widened, her brown head lowered, and the forefinger of her right hand automatically stroked her tiny nose, while that strong voice of hers lost its amazing grown-up quality, becoming childlike in its bewildered helplessness, as she bemoaned, much in the manner of Alice's white rabbit, "Oh, dear, oh, dear."

Such was her answer to all questions. There was only one thing to do. Stop asking. I did.

For the Deanna that her friends know is a live little person with a quick and ready sense of humor. Eddie Cantor, whose own humor is not so bad, testifies to this.

There was the blustering spring day that Cantor and his radio troupe arrived in New York, directly from the sunny warmth of California. The change in temperature was a violent one, and before they could get themselves acclimated, in fact, on their very first afternoon in Manhattan, a magazine suggested that they journey to the zoo and have their pictures snapped feeding the animals. So up to Bronx Park they went, the thermometer registering near the zero point, and their teeth chattering, their knees quaking with the cold.

For one half hour, patiently holding peanuts in their frozen fingers, Eddie and Deanna stood outside the iron fence that skirts the quarters belonging to the bears.

But there was not a bear in sight.

Deanna did catch a glimpse of one warming himself behind some rocks.

"He's white," she said. "All white."

"A real polar bear," said Eddie. "But why doesn't he come out? Here, bear, bear," he called. "Here, pretty bear, eatee nicee peanuts, get your picture took."

The polar bear never deigned to look. Instead, he turned his back and disappeared, joining his family in their comfortable cave.

Then up spoke Deanna, suddenly, decisively. "I know why they won't come out."

"Why?" asked Eddie Cantor.

"Why?" echoed the equally frozen cameramen.

"Because," said Deanna, shivering there in the cold, "we're the only fools."

THERE IS the matter of temperament. Although Deanna confides that her ambition is to be like Lily Pons or Grace Moore and sing at the Metropolitan and on the screen and radio, up to date she has evinced but one temperamental display. However, it showed her possibilities. It was quite an effective exhibition. It held up a picture. This is the story.

They were shooting "One Hundred Men and a Girl," and Deanna was chewing a licorice drop.

"In the first place, I had no business to be chewing it," she admitted, wagging that forefinger at me.

But chewing it she was, and presently came time for her scene, and director Henry Koster, noting Deanna's industrious jaws, cried, "Spit it out!"

Shocked, Deanna stared at him.

"Mr. Koster is really a darling," she told me. "But he is a foreigner and I guess he doesn't know how American girls feel about spitting."

"What did you do?"

"At first I stood there and refused. Then the assistant director took up the order, 'Hurry up, spit it out,' he yelled.

"But I couldn't, I just couldn't! I stamped my foot, and cried, and," she added shamefacedly, "I guess I made a dreadful scene. However, I finally won out."

Deanna's proud mother arranges her schedule.

Young, beautiful, talented and radiantly happy.

Jackie Moran capitulated to Deanna's charm.

"How?" I queried, amused at her serious expression.

"I swallowed it," Deanna said, grinning an infectious little girl grin.

Meeting her, one can readily understand just why it was that she found it impossible to spit out that licorice drop. For Deanna is essentially a neat person. Her bureau drawers are a joy to behold.

"Mother keeps them for me," she says. "I haven't the time."

But if she were not a star and her mother did not tidy those bureau drawers, they would still be immaculate. Deanna is that kind of a girl.

ON HER hair she wore two perky blue bows.

"Do you buy them that way?" I asked.

"No, I make them myself. I have a knack." Then shyly, "Shall I make you some?"

She wears flat heeled sandals, although on special dressed-up occasions, "I wear high."

Her clothes are designed by the studio wardrobe expert and are of the Eton jacket variety. She mostly wears blue.

"And I'm growing taller all the time," she said. "I'm now over five feet four. It's good they make my clothes to order, because I'd be awfully hard to fit. I swim in a twelve,"

At present she is supremely happy. (Continued on page 82)

Tennis is his great hobby.

WHEN A writer's assigned to do a story on Fred MacMurray both writer and MacMurray groan.

"He won't talk," wails the writer.

"What's all the talking for?" MacMurray mutters.

No one has ever accused him of temperament in its Hollywood sense. He doesn't deny himself to interviewers. His trouble is that he can't talk about himself. At least, with any comfort. He can face you as he might face a firing squad, wincing and desperate-eyed. But at such cost to you both that you think twice before subjecting him or yourself to the ordeal.

"They ask me these questions," he says, "and I jump like a rabbit, because I don't know the answers. I don't know what I like except coffee and doughnuts and hamburgers, and who the deuce cares? Another one that gets me is, how does it feel to be a movie actor? It feels the same as not being a movie actor, except you can buy more suits and pay for 'em sooner. It feels swell to have more money and more security, but it feels jittery, too. How long can it last? How soon before you get conked on the head and wake up? The less you think about that, the better you sleep. As for anything else, you're the same guy you'd be if you weren't a movie actor. So what's all the shouting for?"

A record speech for MacMurray—a speech to end all speeches. He touched the core when he said, "You're the same guy you'd be if you weren't an actor." Some are, some aren't. MacMurray is.

He was born in a small town, an only child. His mother had planned on a girl, whose name was to be Rose. When Fred appeared, she consoled herself by calling him Bud.

WHAT'S ALL THE SHOUTING FOR?

BY IDA ZEITLIN

Want to know Fred MacMurray's secret? He'll never tell, but we're not so cagey

He glowers mildly at that memory.

He was bred to what's come to be known as the old-fashioned qualities —hard work, decent living and loyalty to one woman. His parents separated soon after his birth. His mother, not at all sorry for herself, earned a living for them both. They moved to California to join Fred's grandmother and aunts. Fred earned his school tuition by way of the saxophone and any other jobs he could find. Then his mother fell, injured her hip, and was bedridden for fourteen months, so Fred quit school, and gave his tuition money to pay the first month's hospital bills. When they offered to let the debt ride, he shook his head. From the little he earned, he paid the entire bill. That, according to Fred's light, was nothing to make speeches about. His mother told the story.

(Continued on page 84)

Fred consoles Billy Lee in "Cocoanut Grove."

Marjorie's a "Loo-ahvul" lady—lovely and lazy, but she gets there!

Judi has the ambition and Marjorie the ability in the Parks-Weaver firm.

BY JAMES REID

If Marjorie Weaver had never met Judi Parks, you never would have known Marjorie

HER STAND-

Marjorie and Eddie Collins provide the sunshine in "Kentucky Moonshine."

IN MADE HER A STAND-OUT

HERE IS an amazing, and amusing, story. Hollywood has never had a story like it, and—it hasn't been told until now.

Perhaps you noticed Marjorie Weaver before "Second Honeymoon." She played enough "bits" for somebody, somewhere, to begin noticing her. But you never met her, close up, until then.

In "Second Honeymoon," you couldn't miss her. She was Loretta Young's rival, Tyrone Power's other interest. A brown-eyed, very young, very pert and very naïve charmer with a soft southern accent. A new and interesting screen face, a "natural," non-theatrical face.

You wondered who she was, where she had come from. You learned that she was a beauty contest winner, one of the very few who had ever given Hollywood the impression of having ability to match appearance. You learned that she was from Louisville—pronounced "*Loo*ahvul." You learned amusedly before the movies would give her a real break, she had had to lose her southern accent, and then, in her first important role, the movies had asked her to have just that—a southern accent.

Among other things, you read that she and her stand-in, Judi Parks, went to the University of Indiana together. That didn't sound like news. Marjorie wasn't the first to have a former college chum for a stand-in. Robert Taylor and his stand-in, Redmond Doms, were pals at Pomona.

But Marjorie and Judi weren't the same physical types —as stars and stand-ins are supposed to be. Judi's face was more angular. Her eyes and hair were of a darker brown. She didn't have the same kind of figure. She didn't present the same lighting problems, and she was two inches shorter than Marjorie and had to carry around a lacquered two-inch block of wood to stand on.

In view of all that, it was a bit unusual that Marjorie insisted on having Judi, and no one else, for a stand-in. It looked like a sentimental gesture on Marjorie's part. She was simply befriending a friend. But was that the only explanation?

Recently, I walked on the set to ask Marjorie and Judi. I found Marjorie present, but not Judi. At the moment, Marjorie was standing in for her stand-in.

That is one thing that stars aren't supposed to do. Studios discourage it violently. "Standing in" is exhausting work. Studios want stars to save their energies for actual acting. If stand-ins are absent, studios find substitutes—pronto. If a star refuses a substitute, there can be only one reason: she is making sure that the job is being saved for her regular stand-in.

I asked Marjorie where Judi and her wooden block were.

"There's the block," said Marjorie, smiling, "but Judi's out house-hunting. Our rent's due tomorrow and if we're going to move, we have to find a house today. She'll join us at lunch if she's had any luck." In the commissary it looked as if luck hadn't been with the house-hunter. There was no sign of Judi.

"But she'll be here," Marjorie was positive. "I've got a hunch that she's found something. And you'd be surprised about my hunches."

MARJORIE, WHO was disconcertingly bright-eyed and excited over the prospect of an interview, asked what we were going to talk about. I told her that I had a purely personal hunch that her stand-in had made her a stand-out.

Her eyes became still brighter. Her smile widened. "You've hit on something there. If I am a stand-out. You know, they say that your (Continued on page 70)

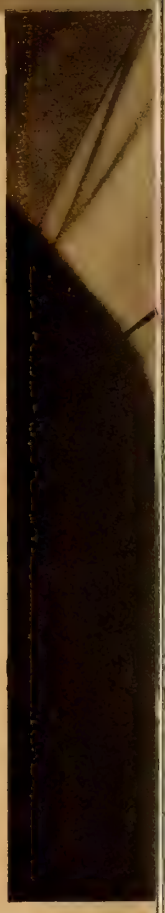
Crooners have their serious moments too.

DICK POWELL TAKES THE STAND

BY GLADYS HALL

IN THE commissary on the studio lot one recent day, Dick Powell chanced to overhear a conversation—and saw red. And when Dick sees red, it is good and red. The smiling crooner of love songs has plenty of capacity for righteous resentment; has, too, the courage of his convictions.

This conversation being carried on very audibly at the next table had to do with an article printed in a national magazine under the by-line of a famous star. Said one of the speakers, "D'you believe he really wrote it?" Said the other, with a contemptuous shrug and a laugh, "Of course not. He had a ghost writer. Actors can't write."



It was at this point that Richard E. Powell of Arkansas rose in his wrath and took the stand for the defense of actors. He informed the benighted one that the star did indeed write that article—all by himself—and further, that if at any time this actor should decide to stop being a darned swell actor he could unquestionably become a darned swell writer or darned swell almost anything he might choose.

There does seem to be a curious misconception about members of the acting guild. If it has been printed once that Joan Crawford READS it has been printed a dozen times, always with a believe-it-or-not Ripley implication, much as it would be noised about that a man walks on his head or a babe in arms spouts Arabic. Nevertheless, Jean Hersholt is a bibliophile, Harold Lloyd has done some excellent paintings, Carole Lombard has proven that she could make a tasty fortune at interior decorating if she should ever elect to cease decorating the screen. Ask Clark Gable. She's just done over his ranch house so successfully you wouldn't know the old place. Bing Crosby could give any business tycoon a run for his money—and come in first. Jean Harlow wrote a book. All these are established facts, yet our reaction to them is too often one of supercilious incredulity.

Dick Powell took the stand for the defense that day in the commissary with an applauding audience including Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Pat O'Brien, Mayor Hugh Herbert, Humphrey Bogart and a bevy of admiring extras and bit players. Always popular on the lot, Dick has since become the tow-headed White Hope of all the misunderstood.

Later in his dressing room at the studio Dick again took the stand for the defense. As he paced up and down the floor, thumbs thrust in coat lapels, hair ruffled, blue eyes hot, he repeated, "I'm tired of hearing this nonsense about actors. I'm tired of having to say, 'Listen, World, we can both read and write.' I'm tired of saying 'I don't know what my I. Q. would be today but I'd like to lay a wager that the I. Q.s of such men as Fredric March, Leslie Howard, Paul Muni, Ronald Colman and some others I could mention would stack up right along with the cream of the intelligentsia.

"I don't wonder, gents of the jury," grinned Dick, his stern judicial frown relaxing a degree, "I don't wonder that there is such a crack-brained misconception abroad about actors in general. I'm tired of the fluff and stuff I read about us—such choice bits as this one to the effect that I call Joan every morning at eleven and every afternoon at three. It's preposterous to begin with. When I'm on the set I don't know what time it is until my director or my stomach tells me. I don't work that way. Furthermore, this little piece went on to relate that one day I was unavoidably (though forcibly) detained on the set with the result that I didn't make my three o'clock call until, think of it, 3:20. Whereupon Joan burst into tears, asked me if I didn't love her any more, and only by the powers of plushy persuasion on my part did this little scene fade out to the strains of Hearts and Flowers.

NOW, GENTLEMEN, if I read that about anybody (and I, like millions of others, know only what I read in the papers) if I read that, I say—and believed it—I would certainly conclude that the parties concerned couldn't even be taught to read and write.

"On another occasion I was again impressed to hear that Joan Blondell, whom I have the honor to call my wife, has installed at her front door (which also happens to be mine) a trick camera which instantaneously photographs anyone who rings our bell. Whereupon Joan, having apparently nothing better (Continued on page 68)

Dick may lose his job but he has a surprise solution for even such a problem

Dick's had no vacation for thirteen years but Mrs. Powell—Joan Blondell to you—would make up for a lot of vacations, we'd think.

Two and a half year old, little Norman Scott Powell is already the image of his beautiful mother. Adorable, isn't he?

Has romance passed you by? Your sense of humor may be to blame! Fanny claims they don't mix
Don't let the fan and footwear deceive you. Fanny is not a ballet dancer!
FANNY'S FOLLIES

That incorrigible, incomparable, incredible Baby Snooks at play (?).

"You appil to me," Fanny says to Monty Woolly in "Everybody Sing."

EVERY WOMAN is a comedienne," said Fanny Brice, "by the time a beauty parlor finishes with her. If she doesn't look funny when she goes in, she will when she comes out."

She glanced again at her dressing-room mirror, warily, out of the corner of her eye. The mirror revealed a brand-new fugitive from a permanent-wave machine. Her hair, still damp, clung to her head as if glued there, in a carefully constructed cascade of flat ringlets.

"The only reason I go," she explained, "is to catch up on the gossip."

The coiffure fascinated me. It was that unexpected that the pected on Baby Snooks. So unexpected that Baby Snooks general impression it created was that Baby Snooks had met not only a hairdresser, but an accident.

"I'm always meeting with accidents," commented Fanny. "That's half the fun of life. It's the reason I'm what I am. You just can't be funny by formula. The biggest laughs are always accidents. The minute I become conscious that a certain gag is funny, done a certain way, it isn't funny any more. I have to drop it, wait for something else to hit me —bang!—like that."

She raised her pale gray-green eyes to mine, pursed her expressive lips, shrugged her eloquent shoulders. "That's life. The best things you do are never the things you plan. They're spontaneous."

Scratch a comic and, underneath, you'll find a philosopher every time. I asked Fanny if she would call her whole career—which begins to look more and more like a good thing—an accident.

"Give me time on that one," she answered, the corners of her mouth curving upward. "No one ever brought it up before."

She took time out to go rummaging in her handbag—a miniature brief case. My curiosity was aroused. I wondered if, perchance, she carried around a sawed-off shotgun to meet a situation like this. Instead, triumphantly, she brought forth a cigarette.

The cigarette lighted, she answered, "Sure, my career could be called an accident. 'Fanny's Follies,'" She shook her head. "It started like a catastrophe. I was going to be a great dramatic actress. Let Fanny's story be a warning to young, potential comediennes today who yearn to become Garbos and Shearers, to be held in the arms of tomorrow's Robert Taylors and Tyrone Powers.

Fanny was born in New York City's Ghetto. That was before anyone thought of slum clearance and Federal housing projects, or playgrounds for underprivileged children. It never entered Fanny's head, in those days, that she was one of the underprivileged. If she couldn't play in the street outside, for the pushcarts there, (Continued on page 88)

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

RUNNING AWAY FROM IT ALL

"S" is for Sylvia and "sulk," but it's also for "smart," so little Sidney soon "got over it!" She's as good as she looks now.

BY CAROLINE S. HOYT

When Katie Hepburn won the Academy Award, she didn't even bother to accept it. Good manners? What do you think?

Fred has definite notions as to what is right for Mr. Astaire. Sometimes he's wrong, however.

Polite people might call Miriam Hopkins an escapist. Well, anyway, she likes to run—and does!

WHETHER SOMEBODY reached for a copy of Doctor Freud's teachings on complexes, or whether the candid camera fiends have terrorized the town with their clicking shutters, or whether some of our movie stars have actually gone soft after all these years of keeping in condition, I wouldn't be knowing! But—there is an epidemic of "running away from it all" in Hollywood, particularly from cameras and reporters. The epidemic has reached such proportions that whenever a child of the studios reaches New York, the Big Town feels its effects, too.

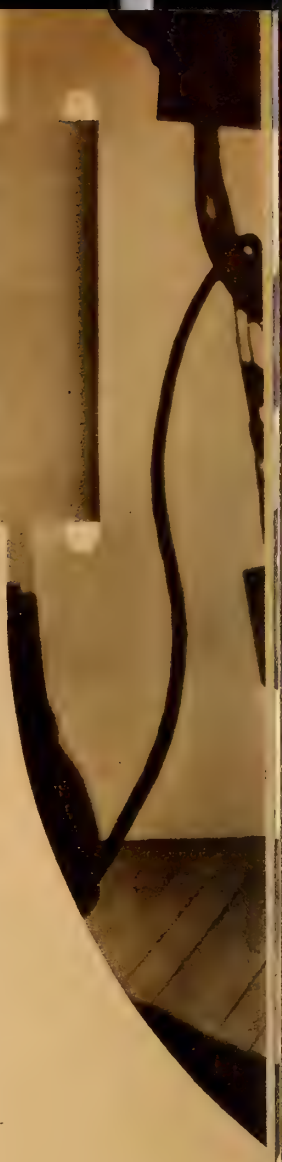
Of course, the No. 1 Sissy is, and has been for years, our New England-bred Katie Hepburn. Katie has never been able to take it on the chin. If she sees anything coming her way that she doesn't like, she runs like mad.

When Katie first came to Hollywood, she gave every indication of being a girl with a sense of humor, one who knew what made the clock tick. Evidently determined to ridicule any "intimate" stories written about her, she told her first interviewers that she "couldn't remember" whether she was married or not, but that she "believed" she had two children. She also told them she didn't like publicity.

When interviewers kidded right back by printing these bald and undeniably ridiculous statements, and reported how Miss Hepburn was going Miss Dietrich one better by going around town in blue overalls, Katie got mad. She refused to see any more reporters. That was nearly six years ago and she hasn't relented since. She couldn't take it.

When Hepburn was awarded the greatest honor that Hollywood can bestow, the Academy gold statue, or "Oscar," for a best performance, she wasn't even grown up and gracious about that. For, even as the Academy banquet was being held in Hollywood, Katie was loping up the third class gangway of a Europe-bound steamer, trying not to see anybody or say anything. She didn't even acknowledge telegrams of congratulations from friends.

To escape whatever it is she tries to escape in her life, she went all the way to Merida, Yucatan, when she got her divorce. Which, after all, was tops in running away.



Somehow, admiring Hepburn's stubbornly brittle work on the screen, I wish that some day she'd stick her chin out and take things like a Big Girl instead of ducking them like an adolescent.

USUALLY it is the glamor girls who can't take it, but occasionally a male star does his stuff in this direction. At the moment, Fred Astaire rates top billing as the No. 1 Male Long Distance Runner-Awayer. Every year in every way, he gets more and more skittish. A fuss-budget, a fretter, a stickler for minor details, he has an exaggerated sense of what is good and what is bad for Fred Astaire.

For example, he doesn't care to have it mentioned that his real name is Austerlitz, that he is losing his hair, or that he rose to his present prestige and dignity as a star from the vaudeville circuit. He prefers to remember only his New York musical comedy days. All of which details of his life history are, of course, facts that have been printed and are occasionally (Continued on page 86)

The bright stars can take it, but there are those who run when a situation with which they cannot cope arises! Conceit or cowardice?

SLAVES TO HOLLYWOOD

IF I WERE to tell you my real name, you wouldn't believe me. I'm the young meteor who burst upon Hollywood a few years ago, spectacularly, the way they say it happens only in scenarios. I got here by way of a beauty contest which carried a free trip to the film capital and a screen test as a prize. I stayed because I could dance. It seemed unbelievable luck to me then!

Today I'm a big name. I'm hailed on billboards, in big electric signs. I'm "young as youth and twice as glamorous." I'm "The bright star of the twinkling toes and the dazzling smile." I'll call myself Linda Chalmers.

Each month, my face laughs up at you from magazine covers. I'm legend. To look at me is to love me, the studio's publicity blurbs say. Girls copy my hair-do and my clothes and my vivacious manner. Also they envy me.

All that would be funny if it weren't tragic. Because I'm paying a terrible price for success. I'm paying with my happiness, the right to be myself. Have you ever thought what happened to Cinderella after she went to live in the prince's palace? The fairy tale doesn't say. It ends with the words "and so they were happy forever after." But I don't believe that. Because the little scullery maid, with only her natural grace and charm to guide her, had to step into a queen's shoes, which are vastly different from glass slippers.

The little scullery maid had to find out all about precedent, and etiquette, and dignity, and learn how to talk to ambassadors and ministers, and how to head a banquet table under the critical supercilious eyes of courtiers and grand ladies. Sometimes I suspect she must have been snubbed by butlers. Why? Well, that's part of my story.

I wouldn't be telling this if it weren't for Joe Turner. Joe isn't the glamorous prince type at all. He is a nobody by Hollywood standards, only a second cameraman on our lot. But to me he's the most wonderful person in the world, and I live from day to day in fear that I'm going to lose him in the mad, crazy whirl of moviedom.

I shall never forget the day Joe and I met. We were starting to shoot the dance ensemble sequences for "Rhythm in Your Blood," the musical in which I'm co-starred with Tom Lane. It was a difficult, eccentric routine, and though the chorus had been rehearsing for weeks, we couldn't seem to get things perfect. We did the first number fourteen times before the disgruntled director bellowed that we could rest.

Well, everybody but me fell into chairs. I didn't feel like resting. I was having too much fun. Until suddenly Tom Lane said in a disgusted drawl, "For goodness' sake, Chalmers, stop that exhibition." (You wouldn't think, seeing us on the screen together, that he could ever be anything but charming to me!) "You make the rest of us feel tired. Think we can relax while you perform?"

There was a little silence in which the tap of my feet echoed too loudly. I missed a step, tripped over an electric cord, lost my balance, and fell to the floor. Joe Turner's strong, steady arms caught me. "Easy there," he whispered. "It isn't only women who are cats."

His voice was deep and warm. His sensitive face was unspectacular until you looked at it twice. Then you saw a dreamer's face, with eyes that looked into the future, but weren't content with just looking. The clean line of his jaw, the stubborn chin attested to that.

He said again, quietly, "Easy there." And suddenly our eyes met, and I knew, the way a woman knows these things, that it was a moment to remember. That the wild beating of my heart had nothing to do with the tempo of my dance, nor with tripping. And I felt Joe's heart hammer against mine.

IT ALL took less time than the telling. Then I was standing on my own two feet, saying shakily, "I'm all right. No damage."

"You might have wrenched an ankle."

I couldn't help a wry little smile. "And that would have been unforgivable, wouldn't it? A dancing star can't afford to delay production."

"You're not a star," he said with queer intensity. "You're just a kid! And when you act you're not playing any part. You're only being yourself!" All at once I wanted to cry. For the first time since I'd been launched in pictures someone saw me as I really was, not as the publicity office had said I was. And he actually seemed to like me.

But perhaps I'd better go back to when I first came to Hollywood. I was terribly young, terribly green, terribly in love with life and laughter. A dancing fool. I had a lithe body, large blue eyes in a small face and a shock of wheat-colored hair. In other words, I was a natural. And I hadn't an inhibition to my name.

Why would I have? In the little Ohio town where I was born life was not complicated. You started out with the assumption that the world was a gay place. I'd been

Love has come to a glittering young star, but she dares not accept it! You brought up to the idea that you choose your friends for what they are, not who they are. So my first months in Hollywood I went blithely along pulling what I've since learned are social boners.

I lost my balance and fell to the floor. Joe Turner's strong, steady arms caught me.

At first no one said anything about it, because the studio had an idea I was just another contest winner doomed to failure. Until they saw the rushes of my first film. Then they got excited. They called me in and gave me a contract. They decided to spend some money and build me up. Star material, I was called. A diamond in the rough. "Very rough," they said, shaking their heads.

The trouble? Well, in the first place I had no mystery, no aura. So the first thing I knew, I was handed a brand-new personality on a silver platter. I was told how to dress, where to go, whom to see.

I said with all the naiveté of my eighteen years, "But what does it matter what I do in my free time so long as I'm okay at work?" They answered that stars were never free. They were public figures. They must behave accordingly.

Well, under my scatter-brain manner I'm plenty stubborn, and at that time I wanted passionately to succeed. I wanted to make money and send my kid brother through engineering school. Do things for my big sister and her quiet bank-clerk husband. Make Dad retire from the hardware business which no longer gave him a living.

In those days I still believed that money could make people happy. So I said, "I'll be good. You tell me what to do and I'll do it." I thought, if I work hard at climbing the ladder, afterwards, when I'm tops, I'll live my life my own way.

My manager and the publicity boys went to work on me together. Maybe you remember the series of interviews that came out about the time I was picked as one of the Wampas babies? Linda Chalmers in severely tailored housecoat, curled up with a book. Linda Chalmers beside her radio, listening to Toscanini.

But it was my new social life that depressed me most. Oh, it was full enough! I got around to all the right places. The Brown Derby and the Trocadero. The races and the West Side Tennis Club.

My name began to appear in the gossip columns. There'd be a candid camera shot of me with my escort of the moment.

YOU'D THINK that a kid of eighteen, partying with men who only a few months earlier had seemed like storybook heroes, would love every minute of it. But I didn't. For the first time I was faced with the crushing knowledge that I was a failure. I wasn't popular. I couldn't make people really like me.

The reason? Because I was scared to death, self-conscious. All this talk about a new personality had given me an inferiority complex. (Continued on page 98) will be amazed at this true story of the sacrifices Hollywood demands

BAD MAN OF BURBANK

No heart of gold nestles within the indignant chest of Humphrey Bogart! He's one villain who will never let you down

BY FAITH SERVICE

"HIST!" HISSES the Villain, with murder in his eye and a lollipop for the kiddies in his jeans. "Ha, ha, ha!" laughs the Menace, horribly, running off between menaces to send a Mothers' Day message to the dearest little mother in the world. Boris Karloff scrubs off the make-up of a Frankenstein and reveals an English gentleman who keeps canaries and is tender to his wife; Wally-Bad-Man-Of-Brimstone Beery has a little child to lead him; Peter Lorre cries into his pillow when one of his kittens is missing; Basil Rathbone carries baskets of goodies around with him and feeds stray dogs and homeless horses. They all have hearts of gold, these deceiving villains. And not even good, hard, cold metallic gold, either. No, squshy, melty gold that drips good deeds and loving kindness and makes you feel that you can't trust anybody. The Clown with the breaking heart, the Villain with the heart of gold —these are moulds which are never broken, characters who move, forever changeless, down the pages of fiction and fact.

And right along with these unversatile characters, says Humphrey Bogart, goes the Movie Actor, a composite of all the virtues, a cardboard cut-out presented to the world with slogans that seldom vary, not even from time to time. We read, says Humphrey, with a sardonic laugh and oh, the Saints be blessed, it is a sardonic laugh—we read that the movie actor is a "man's man," he is always a "man's man," why, if he weren't, what would people think? We read that he is always "thoughtful and considerate;" we read about his "dream woman;" we muse over the "forgotten loves" in his life, so faint, so sweet, so far away; we see pictures of him at the Babies' Hospital, distributing largess with loving smiles and such a loving heart; we read, eyes bulging, that he sleeps without the upper half of his pajamas—world-shaking news; we read about "The Influence That Changed My Life;" we read about his "favorite flower", "favorite color," "favorite hobby;" we read that "Money Doesn't Matter, says Matthew Manly." It was while Humphrey Bogart, bless his renegade heart, was in process of reading a little piece about the young and too-handsome star who sleeps without the upper half of his pajamas that I happened upon him, so happily for me in my diligent pursuit of Truth.

For I had given up hope until I met Humphrey. I was even sadly certain that the Killer in "Petrified Forest," the thoroughly unregenerate bad man of "Marked Woman," "Kid Galahad," and the others would turn out to be just another Fauntleroy, his heart soft as butter, his hands as white as the driven snow, his point of view a plasticine copy of the points of view publicized as being held by our Movie Models, God bless them, every one.

But no! No!

I CAME upon Mr. Bogart, on the set of "Crime School," where he had been slapping down the "Dead End" boys, who are still fresh from their New York triumph and in constant need of slapping down. They get it from Humphrey, and think he is a "keen guy' in spite of it, or perhaps because of it. I found him reading the little piece about the star who sleeps minus half his pajamas and muttering, "It's tripe." And when I gave a wild whoop of relief and surprise he took me to the Lakeside Country Club for lunch because he doesn't like to eat in the commissary, and so doesn't eat there. And over tomato juice, bacon and eggs, Mr. Bogart let fly.

He said, "My heart isn't even gold-plated. I haven't a dram of sentimentality in me, with or without make-up.

"I have no 'forgotten loves.' I remember 'em all; some of the memories bless, others burn. I don't remember my 'first kiss.' Maybe there were more than one on the day of initiation into the osculatory art. There has never been a 'great influence in my life' which changed everything for me, including my own black heart. I have no 'first childhood memory.' If I could dig one up, and I won't, I'm sure it would be too unpleasant to print. I have no 'dream woman'—prefer live ones.

"I've never been photographed, while conscious, with a pipe in my mouth, a book in my hand, a dog at my feet, or my shirt opened at the neck.

"I can't give a story elaborating on my preference for Stage versus Screen, because," said Mr. Bogart, indifferently, "acting is acting, no matter where you do it.

"I'm tired of reading about (Continued on page 102)

"Bogie" and Mayo Methot, soon to be the third Mrs. Bogart.

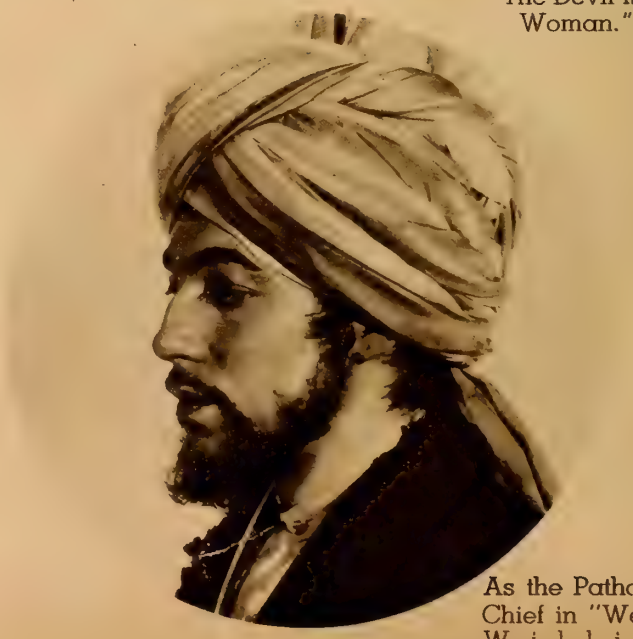
"I haven't a dram of sentimentality in me, with or without make-up," brags Mr. Bogart.

ONE VILLAIN COMIN' UP!

Romero as the gang leader in "Blonde Dynamite."

BY MARY PARKES

CESAR ROMERO is living for the day when he'll win the girl in the last reel, having wrested her from the ugly villain who doesn't mean right by our Nell. However, since he is destined to go through life with the same set of features with which he entered it, Romero has little hope of doing much hero-ing in celluloid, for casting directors seem to feel that he simply doesn't look as if he'd do a good deed a day, or even, for the matter of that, know one if he ran smack up against it.



"I appeared as a gigolo in the first movie I ever made," opined this Latin from Manhattan, "and I must have made good, for I've been cast as a gent of unsavory reputation ever since. Whenever they need someone to do the dirty work in a sleek way, they invariably call on Romero, probably figuring that if he can't act it, he sure can look it! It would all get me down, too, if I didn't like sunshine and sound tracks and swimming pools and salary checks, all of which can make any guy philosophical."

Romero has been cast as a gang leader, a wolf in Spaniard's clothing in "The Devil Is a Woman" and a Pathan Chief in "Wee Willie Winkie." Yep, he's a bad man in anybody's language or nationality. Then, of course, there was his role of the comedy cad in "Happy Landing," in which Cesar played a strictly "love 'em and leave 'em" lad. He didn't mind this so much, for Ethel Merman was always around, cinematically, to do him no good, which gave the audience a certain sympathy for one Romero.

From the tall tales that emanated from the Sonja Henie set, Ethel Merman was around, in spirit anyway, after hours. She played a few practical jokes on Cesar that left him dizzier than the Ritz Brothers. Ethel had a little trick of sending herself a corsage and the bill for it to Mr. R. It drove him a bit cuh-razy, too, when a gathering of gents, who looked like the laundrymen's convention in session, appeared for shirts and collars that weren't ready to be laundered a-tall! However, Romero retaliated, feebly and gentlemanly, and is waiting to properly "pay off" Miss Merman (Continued on page 105)

As the Spanish menace in "The Devil Is a Woman."

As the Pathan Chief in "Wee Willie Winkie."

Cesar Romero is fated to play the bad boy simply because he looks that way

FOREIGN FLAVOR

Those continental cocktails give a tempting tang to our movie menu, so they're always welcome!

BY ROBERT McILWAINE

MAYBE YOU'RE one who can take your eggs without salt, but to many of us they'd be darn tasteless that way. Personally, I go for the well seasoned stuff, even in my movies! Just think how dull our home-made films would be without a little "foreign" flavor!

And so, to offset possible monotony, our moom pitchers are well sprinkled with furriners. They sort of give zest and zip to the industry, not to mention that inspiring sense of competition to our own favorites.

Among the latest importations from across-the-sea are such notables as Danielle Darrieux, Annabella and Franciska Gaal.

Out in Hollywood, the captains of industry play a little game called "search for talent." Back home, youngsters play the same game, only they call it "follow the leader." Time has proven that, after the first foreign accent turned up at the Trocadero, each and every movie company quickly produced its own particular brand—occasionally with instructions as to how to pronounce her name. Simone Simon—remember?

One foreign player who has beauty and brains is Danielle Darrieux, (Continued on page 101)

Danielle Darrieux has everything—beauty, ability and a fascinating French accent.

Annabella, below, has Bill Powell as leading man in her first picture over here.

First, it's done with mirrors, but once you have beauty, let your mind start working Virginia Bruce is thrilled over the fashionable new pallor.

HOW TO WIN

MEN ARE in the habit of doing what they want to do. One of the things they're not too, too eager to do these days is to fall seriously in love and get married. Sure and begorra, I can't altogether blame them. In Grandma's day, in return for making an honest woman out of a gal, a fellow got a fine housekeeper, a personal valet, good cook, a devoted mama for his all-too-populous family, and a twenty-four-hour-a-day nurse for himself if he should get sick. He did not, however, always get a gay companion and an intelligent pal, which is where we modern girls have the edge on grandma, if we'll play our cards right. Furthermore, Grandma's physical allure was apt to buckle under at thirty, and no wonder. Today, clever women stay slim, smart and pretty up to and past fifty.

Good skin and sparkling eyes are Eleanor Powell's claims to beauty.

MEN AND INFLUENCE BACHELORS

One of the things the modern young man does want to do is to collect as many feminine scalps as possible, and let the hearts break where they will. In this modern war between the sexes, I wish every maid would be as smart as every swain. Therefore this article. Some months ago, in these pages, I whipped up a little thesis entitled "What Do Men Fall For?" in which certain obvious and infallible tricks for tripping the male were discussed. Like neatness and daintiness, un-obvious make-up—but make-up, by all means!—a certain aloofness, and so on. Here are some further more recent observations on the subject—partly good old reliable hints about putting on the war paint and streamlining the figure, and partly a psychological pep talk on snaring the elusive male, whether for a date or for a march up the aisle to the strains of "Lohengrin."

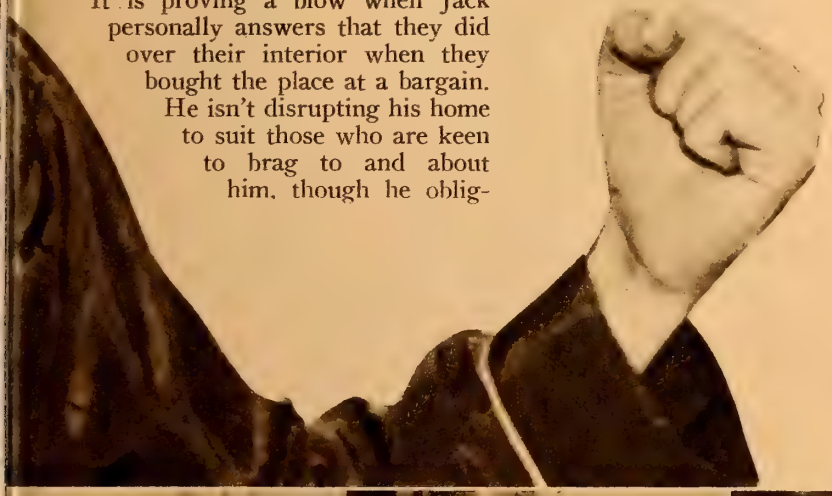
Take a leaf from the masculine book in not being particularly eager yourself to get married. That's where lots of young girls make a big mistake. They get that matrimony look on their faces at about the third date or the first kiss. First place, this frightens a fancy-free gent worse than the plague. Second place, I think it really is a good idea to get married when one is a little older and a little wiser. Not only does it give you a chance to develop qualities of tolerance, clear-sightedness and so on, but you also have a chance to get some of the things you want for yourself.

Consider your man. Weed out undesirables from your list, even if it means (Continued on page 95)

BY MARY MARSHALL

In addition to her other charming attributes, Claudette Colbert has the allure of a beautiful figure.

Phyllis Brooks and Jack are in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."



Love or success—which will you have? Would you work for them as Jack did?

ACTUALLY, he is shy yet shrewd. He's whimsical, but a bear for business when it comes to protecting his family. He is the type every girl should set her cap for, because he knows that love is worth fighting for. He's one go-getter who hasn't said goodby to his ideals in learning how to shuffle the cards of life so he draws the aces.

Unquestionably, Jack Haley is a unique man on the Hollywood horizon today. He's the town's best joke on itself. He has been discovered—after having been a vital cog in motion picture casts for all of six unsung years.

Since he quietly stole "Wake Up and Live," the telephone is on a constant rampage in Jack's Beverly Hills home. The studio is calling! Will he hurry right over for a conference with the powers-that-be? Can he tell his true life story to an important interviewer?

When it isn't the studio on the other end of the wire it's filmland society. Mr. and Mrs. Haley simply must come to dinner at nine a week from next Thursday. There will be only the inner circle, Jack old boy. Or if it isn't society, it's a super-salesman. The Haleys no doubt need a new limousine. Or surely they're re-doing their interior in tomorrow's mode? It is proving a blow when Jack personally answers that they did over their interior when they bought the place at a bargain. He isn't disrupting his home to suit those who are keen to brag to and about him, though he obligingly does pose for the photographs of his house that are now wanted. He isn't changing his friends because he can at last have his pick of celebrities as chums. His wife and his two children mean too much to Jack to be tampered with by any new, pretentious rules for the acknowledged famous.

I have no difficulty explaining why he can withstand this sudden transformation from expert performer to ballyhooed star and not be spoiled by it. Jack Haley is a person with character. He can distinguish between what's worth-while and what isn't, and he can then stick to his guns no matter what happens all around him.

What makes him so regular is that he has climbed the hard way. He has had to go out and learn how to progress, literally. In this process he has selected the kind of man he'd rather be. He isn't an extraordinary husband and father merely because he's a prig, or because he goes to church. He is human. Jack has been tempted. But he believes in the right way, wholeheartedly. He pays homage to all womankind through his devotion to his mother and to his wife. He discovered for himself that there is but one correct choice in every dilemma. Life taught him not only that persistence wins, but what a fool he was to nurture a half-baked philosophy. Fortunately he didn't have to be hit on the head for decades to absorb truths; he caught on quickly.

Jack has gone after romance just as he has gone after success. He tries to plan ahead, and then gambles on his hunches. In the beginning he liked girls a little too much. He pitied the saps who went soft. He wouldn't let any woman nail him down! At first, too, he thought money was merely something to throw around and heaven would rain more pennies somehow. Then he realized that it's the confirmed (Continued on page 106)

The fans keep Jack plenty busy these days, and no wonder.

A script, a pipe, a pillow—nice work if you can afford it!

KICKING OVER THE TRACES

Career for sale! Claire Trevor tells why she'll take love, a home and babies—and forego fame

THE ONLY fun I get out of life," said Claire Trevor, "is in doing the things I'm not supposed to do."

Most of us would subscribe to that, but it is a new high in frankness coming from the lips of a movie star. The average celluloid ingenue on vacation in New York concentrates her remarks on the weather, the shows, and the eternal verities. But when I visited Miss Trevor in her hotel apartment the fading twilight moved her to talk about things that are usually left unsaid.

"I've always been pretty sensible and economical," mused Claire. "I'm not so sure it's the right idea. I went to Hollywood to make money and I've made it. It's salted away in real estate and insurance, as it should be. I haven't a maid, a swimming pool, or a fleet of cars. I've lived quietly with my mother, almost frugally. During the past five years there's nothing that stands out in my memory except the single time I kicked over the traces and did exactly what I wanted to do.

"That was the time I took that never-to-be-forgotten Panama Canal trip to New York.

IN ITSELF that wasn't giddy. But when I arrived I took the swankiest tower suite at the Waldorf, paying twice what it could possibly be worth. Then I rented a long, luxurious Isotta, complete with chauffeur and footman. And did I do the town! Clothes from the smartest and most expensive shops. Hats designed for my particular head by Lily Daché and John-Frederics at fifty dollars a copy. A ducky little bangle from Cartier's and a love of a wrist-watch. A pencil from Dunhill's with a teeny watch inset—silly but slick.

"I lived that week-end as though it were to be my last. I crowded every extravagant whim into it, and had the time of my life. When it was all over I discovered that it had run into three thousand dollars—probably most of it spent foolishly. Or was it? I can remember every thrill I got out of that one colossal binge. I did what I wanted, bought what I liked, I let myself go. I'll never forget a moment of it. (Continued on page 78)

Dixie Dunbar, Jayne Regan and Claire Trevor in "Walking Down Broadway."

"Live your own life," says Claire. And she knows what it means not to.

BY MALCOLM OETTINGER

OFF THEIR GUARD

Lona Andre and her sister Betty go in for a little "ladylike" clowning after a hard day at the studio.

Lona Andre brings her night work—script to you—home to study.

Starlets have their clothes problems too. Nice work, Lona.

Off with 'em early. Tomorrow's a big day at the studio.

A girl has to keep up appearances from tip to toe. Lona knows how.

AFTER THE DAY'S WORK

Best supporting actor, Joseph Schildkraut in "Life of Emile Zola."

Best performance, S. Tracy in "Captains Courageous."

ACADEMY AWARD NIGHT

Janet Gaynor and Tyrone Power were there together.

Mrs. Spencer Tracy accepted for Spence who was ill.

Best performance. Luise Rainer in "Good Earth."

Best supporting actress. Alice Brady in "In Old Chicago."

Beauty, brains and talent had their night when the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Made Awards

Charlie McCarthy admires the special award Bergen won.

Louis B. Mayer escorted the lovely Norma Shearer.

Joan Bennett was with Walter Wanger, whom she'll soon marry.

Joe Penner laughs as W. C. Fields tells his newest and funniest one.

Darryl Zanuck received the Thalberg Award from Doug Fairbanks.

Eddie Arnold joined Bob Montgomery and his lovely wife Betty.

Gregory LaCava and Loretta Young admire Leo McCarey's "Oscar."

Vivacious Virginia Field and suave Vic Orsatti look awfully pleased about it all.

Moviedom's most beautiful figure belongs to the dancing star, Zorina.

Marlene Dietrich continues to hold her title of Hollywood's most alluring legs.

PHYSICAL

AWARD DAY

The loveliest arms and shoulders belong to seductive Dorothy Lamour.

Dolores Del Rio has the most beautiful and expressive eyes in Hollywood.

Loretta Young, Hollywood's most beautiful girl, is perfect in no single feature.

Here are some of filmdom's famous with their stand-ins. A stand-in, in case you don't know, is someone with looks and ability, but little opportunity. Here is Ben Splane, who is "lighted" for George Brent.

Mary Lou Islieb is Shirley's chum and stand-in. Mary Lou got the job because her mother and Mrs. Temple are old friends. Everybody loves the star, but only her family and Shirley love her stand-in.

ME AND MY SHADOW

Helene Holmes is Alice Faye's "shadow." She is also her best friend and her personal wardrobe designer.

Sally Sage is prettier than Bette Davis, but she hasn't Bette's dramatic ability. That's why you've never heard of her while Bette ranks high among your favorites. So near and yet so far from fame and fortune!

Tyrone Power got his stand-in job for Tom Noonan, one of his most intimate personal friends. While they'd never be mistaken for each other, their build and coloring are the same. Stand-ins work hard, too.

Peter Lorre and Delmar Costello (left) are interchangeable on the set —as are Errol Flynn and Don Turner. When Turner is not serving as stand-in, he is the studio's chief stunt man.

SOFT BALL ADDICT

There's plenty of action in a game of soft ball when Wayne Morris goes to bat. What, a lady catcher?

Off with stiff mufties, on with the good old corduroys. Now for a walloping good game of soft ball. Some fun!

Let 'er fly! Wayne Morris is all set for anything. What a game for muscle control, agility and poise!

Frank McHugh and Hugh Herbert are veteran addicts. They're spectating today, but tomorrow, who knows?

STREAMLINED SILHOUETTE

Margot Grahame recommends swimming for a beautiful body.

Try the water. Slide in gradually. Don't dive first.

A good overhand stroke is fine for general exercise.

Climb out while you still feel exhilarated. Ten minutes may be long enough.

BY LEO TOWNSEND

You've heard the one about a gal being worth her weight in gold? Well, here's a new angle on that old story with a movie twist to boot! It may sound amusing enough to you, but its heroine somehow can't laugh it off so readily. Norma Shearer is worth her weight in clothes on the "Marie Antoinette" set. She only weighs one hundred and ten, but six of her costumes weigh between one hundred and five and one hundred and twelve pounds. Adrian's so disgusted that his beautiful costumes aren't going to be photographed in color that he's making a complete color version of the picture with his own miniature color camera.

Behind Scenes

It's fun to watch the extras on the "Marie Antoinette" scenes. The costumes are breathtakingly beautiful—really Adrian's masterpiece in costume production. After a scene of great elegance they stroll off the set and are themselves. One girl pulls up her exquisitely embroidered petticoats and hoops and displays bright red flannel slacks, from the pocket of which she extracts a pack of cigarettes. A man sheds his stiffly embroidered coat and walks around in a dirty sweat shirt above molded white satin pants. Another delicate beauty, in white wig, beauty patches and flowing taffeta skirts puffs away on a big black stogie. This, to our relief, turned out to be a stunt man.

■ ■ ■

Shirley Temple startled everyone when she came rushing on the "Little Miss Broadway" set the other morning and inquired, "Has Snow White had kittens yet?" It was finally all cleared up by a prop man, who owns the expectant cat.

To the Point

Best and briefest speech at the Academy banquet was supplied by Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy. Bergen was awarded a miniature statuette for "creating a new comedy character." He accepted it, then turned to Charlie and asked him if he'd like to say a few words about it. "Yes," said Mr. McC.; "it's damn small."

■ ■ ■

It sounds silly, but if you knew Marie Wilson you'd know it could happen. At a dance, recently, she met a girl from her studio publicity department. The gal said "Hello," but Marie didn't recognize her. So the young lady introduced herself. "Oh, of course," said Marie. "But you look so different at night, like another woman. You really should change your name at night."

What's Left?

Dick Powell, a hard-working young man about town, doesn't believe all he reads in the papers about high-salaried movie stars. Salaries are fine, he thinks, if you could only get them. He says only five percent of his wages finds its way into his own pocket. Eighty-five percent goes for Federal and California taxes on income and property, ten percent goes to his agent, and—well, figure it out. Of course five percent of a lot of money still buys groceries, with enough left over to toss a little something to the wolf.

■ ■ ■

In "Three Comrades," Franchot Tone, Bob Taylor and Bob Young play three German youths during the pre-Hitler period. Of the three, only Franchot Tone wears a short, military haircut. Before the picture started, Metro ordered the three of them to visit the barber. Tone complied, but Taylor and Young refused. So Metro rescinded the order, but Tone was stuck with his short haircut. This picturization of Erich Maria Remarque's novel by the same name is powerfully dramatic, and should be worth seeing. Besides the stars mentioned, Margaret Sullavan has a leading role. This will be her first screen appearance since the birth of her daughter, Brooke.

Marlene Dietrich and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. make news anywhere, and they've been together a lot lately.

Joe Schenck says Mary Maguire makes a charming dinner companion. We're inclined to agree.

GOOD

Spring is here—with movie stars catching up with social activities and

The devoted Arleen Whelan and Richard Greene didn't escape us at the "Rebecca" preview.

NEWS

Edgar Bergen doesn't need a tall one with Dorothy Lamour around. But where is Charlie McCarthy?

Double Trouble

Rumors that Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres plan to take up their marriage from where they dropped it several years ago are now being denied by both Ginger and Lew, who ought to know. The thing started when Lew was reported seen at several night spots with Ginger. The reporters were only partly correct. His companion's name was Ginger, but it wasn't Ginger Rogers. It was Ginger Alton, a young lady who is a double for Miss Rogers, and who once was her stand-in.

■ ■ ■

Joan Bennett's new home in Holmby Hills is really something. It is French Provincial, and all the interior decorations were planned by herself. It's completely feminine, as you might expect, except for one guest room and a den which are done up with bear skin rugs, Hudson Bay blankets which Joan brought back from Canada, and pictures of Joan all over the two rooms—pictures that are Walter Wanger's favorite studies of her.

Good Acting

If the Academy ever gives an award for overacting, it will probably go to Luise Rainer for the histrionics she exhibited at this year's Awards banquet. When she was announced as the winner of the 1937 "Oscar," Luise managed to look completely surprised, even though she had posed accepting it two hours before for the newsreels. Her performance when she reached the speakers' table and officially accepted the award was magnificent to watch. It was "The Good Earth" and "The Great Ziegfeld" telephone scene rolled into one.

■ ■ ■

Out on the set of "When Were You Born," conversation had turned to the mother-in-law problem and someone contended that bogey was pretty much passé—women today, having a better understanding of psychology, got along better. Anna May Wong's remark was, "The Chinese are psychological as a race. And don't forget their symbol for 'trouble.' It's one horizontal line with two shorter lines beneath, signifying two women under one roof."

Rudy Trucks

We spent an afternoon on the set of "Gold Diggers in Paris" the other day, watching Rudy Vallee truck—or rather, watching Mr. V. trying to truck. They were shooting the finale number of the picture, and forty gold diggers and all the principals of the cast were trucking away for dear life, the Warner Brothers and Busby Berkeley. It seems if you can't truck, you just can't truck—and that was Rudy's rather embarrassing spot. To make matters worse, his gal, Judy Stewart, was on the sidelines. They tried it again and again, and along about dinner time, Rudy finally came through and was pronounced a rug cutter. So when you see the picture and the cast looks just a little weary in that finale, you'll know why.

■ ■ ■

When a screen and radio comic's home was endangered by the recent flood, a gang of studio workmen came to his rescue with sandbags and shovels and managed to prevent considerable damage. When they finished, after working all day, the guy didn't offer them even a cup of coffee for their pains. Lately they've been finding it a little difficult to laugh at his jokes.

A Veteran

Twenty-five years in pictures in Hollywood is nice steady work if you can get it. Jean Hersholt just celebrated his first quarter century before the local cameras, and he likes it. When he first arrived in Hollywood, he put on his best clothes, a cutaway, striped trousers and top hat which he had purchased in Denmark, and walked three miles to what our reporter catching up with movie stars—and a good time was had by all was then the Ince Studios. "'Are those your own clothes?" asked the casting director. Hersholt told him they were, and the guy signed him up to start work immediately, at $15.00 per week. Today, out of all the congratulatory wires he received, his most prized is one from Denmark—from the tailor who made that cutaway!

■ ■ ■ ■

In those days, says Hersholt, almost every picture was a western, and almost every one of those showed the pioneers being attacked by the Indians. Hersholt really learned acting in that period, for often he spent the morning behind a covered wagon defending himself from the Indians, then put on warpaint and rode around all afternoon shooting hell out of the same covered wagon.

Much Gained

Mrs. Jack Oakie, known in the Brentwood Heights section as editor of the Illustrated Animal News, plans to return to the screen. She's been on a weight-increasing diet, and has added thirty pounds in places where thirty pounds do a girl the most good. Only trouble with the diet is that it has added some fifty pounds to the master of the house, who could do without it.

■ ■ ■

On the "Three Comrades" set, Gordon Cravath, a stunt man, was doubling for Henry Hull. He was made up exactly like him, and after a soap-box scene, was to be mobbed, and really mobbed, by a crowd of people. But some of his fellow stunt men decided that Gordon wasn't really getting the works, so, after the scene, they fell on him and dragged him around the set, giving him a thorough going-over. They were delighted with his agonized yells—until they finally heard a weak voice, "Lemme down—I'm Henry Hull."

Knockout

Arleen Whelan took a beating on the set of "Kidnapped" the other day. She was thrown against a table and knocked out for almost five minutes. However, she revived in time to lunch with that combination of Tyrone Power and Robert Taylor—Richard Greene.

■ ■ ■

There are Great Lovers galore on the Warner lot—Errol Flynn, George Brent, Wayne Morris and Dick Powell, to name a few—but only one individual out there has any practical claim to the mantle of Casanova. That one is Arno, a debonair Schnauzer with a breath-taking profile. Arno is the property of Errol Flynn, and has the run of the Warner lot when his master is working. A month ago a litter of puppies were born to a Cocker Spaniel on one of the sets. The offspring, it is whispered, bear a suspicious resemblance to Arno.

(Continued on page 97)

While in New York, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bellamy "did" the Rainbow Room.

Margaret Sullavan, Frank Borzage and Robert Taylor caught off guard.

Mother and Dad took Shirley Temple to her own preview of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

It helps their Skin more directly!

THE NEW CREAM WITH "Skin-Vitamin"

FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB
now MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, Jr.

MRS. VICTOR DU PONT, III

MRS. HENRY LATROBE ROOSEVELT, JR.

A NEW CREAM that puts the necessary "skin-vitamin" right into skin!—The vitamin which especially helps to build new skin tissue—which aids in keeping skin beautiful!

Since Pond's new "skin-vitamin" Cold Cream was announced, hundreds of women have tried it!

In this advertisement we are repeating the words of some of the first to try it—"A great advance"—"Keeps my skin better than ever"—"Gives better color"—"Keeps my skin finer and softer in spite of all my sports."

Exposure dries the "skin-vitamin" out of skin . . .

Exposure is constantly drying this "skin-vitamin" out of the skin. When there is not enough of this "skin-vitamin" in the diet, the skin may suffer—become undernourished, rough and subject to infections.

"A great advance . . .

"Pond's new Cold Cream is a really scientific beauty care. I'll never be afraid of sports or travel drying my skin, with this new cream to put the 'skin-vitamin' back into it."
MRS. HENRY LATROBE ROOSEVELT, JR.

"Helps skin more . . .

"I've always been devoted to Pond's. Now with the 'skin-vitamin,' it helps my skin more than ever. Keeps it bright and fresh looking all through the gayest season."
FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB
now MRS. DAVID S. GAMBLE, JR.

"Gets skin really clean . . .

"Pond's Cold Cream gets my skin really clean. Now it nourishes, too, and keeps my skin so much softer."
MRS. VICTOR DU PONT, III

Suppose you see what putting the "skin-vitamin" directly into your skin will do for it? In animal tests, skin that had been rough and dry because of "skin-vitamin" deficiency in the diet became smooth and supple again—in only 3 weeks.

Use the new Pond's Cold Cream in your regular way for cleansing and before make-up. Pat it in. Leave some on overnight and whenever you have a chance. Do this faithfully for 2 or 3 weeks. Some women reported enthusiastically within that time!

Same jars, same labels, same price

Now every jar of Pond's Cold Cream you buy contains this new cream with "skin-vitamin" in it. You will find it in the same jars, with the same labels, at the same price.

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N. Y. Time, N.B.C.

SEND FOR THE NEW CREAM! TEST IT IN 9 TREATMENTS

Pond's, Dept. 9MS-CT, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's "skin-vitamin" Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with samples of 2 other Pond's "skin-vitamin" Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

Name_____

Street_____

City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

"STOP GROWLING!"

"QUICK—cheer up with a stick of Beeman's! There's nothing like that delicious Beeman's flavor to drive off a grouch—that fresh zip and tang is a tonic.

Do you know why it tastes so refreshing? That airtight package keeps the flavor fresh and delicious as the day it was made! Now don't be selfish—I'll have a stick of Beeman's too!"

Beeman's
AIDS DIGESTION...

DICK POWELL TAKES THE STAND

(Continued from page 34)

to do than to lie in wait for doorbells to ring, grabs the film from the camera, rushes to a handy dark-room, develops the film, and the caller is then admitted or not depending on how Joan likes what she sees on the negative. Now, what would anyone think of people reported to indulge in such naive tricks?

"I am tired, your honor and gentlemen of the jury, of the belief that when an actor is washed up as an actor he is also washed up as a man, as someone to be reckoned with. I would like to tell the court that if ever I have to make a living away from the screen, I can do it in any one of half a dozen different ways.

"And in just about two years I may have to prove that statement unless I make better pictures than I have been turning out. I can see that writing on the wall—and read it, too!" (Dick doesn't want to make big musicals any more. He doesn't want to "go Hamlet" on Hollywood, not that, but he would like a chance to play in pictures like "The Awful Truth," "Bringing Up Baby," and such. He knows, he says, that he can't be a juvenile crooner at forty!)

"But," continued the young attorney for the defense, "you are probably saying to yourself, 'Yes, then what would you do, Actor?' All right, you don't scare me. I might sell insurance. I might sell real estate. I'd try something where the ability to talk fast would stand me in good stead.

"Let me tell you a few things about actors which you may not have paused to consider. (1) The nature of our work makes most of us versatile. We have to get under the skin of so many different characters that we can't help learning something about the manner of men we play. (2) We've got to be 'quick studies,' learn our lines and remember them. Our memories must function smoothly and accurately. (3) We've got to be diplomats too, good mixers, because we must be on good terms with the prop boy, the producer, our fellow players, and also with perfect strangers. (4) We must at all times have poise, sometimes under very startling circumstances. And, gentlemen, if these aren't every one of them qualities which would be essentials to the success of a doctor, or merchant, then maybe I'm wrong.

ACTORS, my friends, do see themselves not as others see them but as themselves. Take fellows like Fred MacMurray, Gary Cooper, Jimmy Cagney, Warner Baxter, Frank McHugh, to mention a few. I defy anyone, in any walk of life, to name men of finer intelligence, clearer perspective, wider interests, or greater potential abilities.

"Think, gentlemen, what an insurance salesman Robert Taylor would make. If there is an insurance salesman among my readers, let him shudder. For I'll wager that Bob Taylor with his gift of speech, his looks, his honesty, his persuasiveness would make a tidy fortune in the insurance field. Think of what Herbert Marshal would add to the diplomatic service with his intelligence, his charm, his knowledge of the world on both sides of the water, his faultless diction. Think of the medico Jimmy Cagney would make, with his basis of scientific interest, his nerves of steel, his clear-thinking mind. Think of the scientist Paul Muni would be if he brought to that work his tremendous powers of concentration, his patience, his gift for research, his earnestness and self-control.

"We are not a special race of men, gentlemen, we who wear the motley. I very much doubt that there's any such thing as a 'born actor' any more than there is a born bond salesman or a born stock broker.

"We're actors, most of us, because we happened to get into the business of acting, found that it paid, and stayed with it—not because we couldn't have been anything but actors.

"Besides varied abilities, actors have, sirs, more varied interests than any group of people I have ever known. It's been said that we always 'talk shop.' We don't in our home for one. We talk about boats, and fishing, and golf, the state of the stock market, whether to buy land here or invest our money in foreign securities, about the races at Santa Anita, about books we've read, about the fun we'd like to have. We never talk shop. Can you imagine a subject that Robert Taylor or Clark Gable could be more tired of than Robert Taylor or Clark Gable?

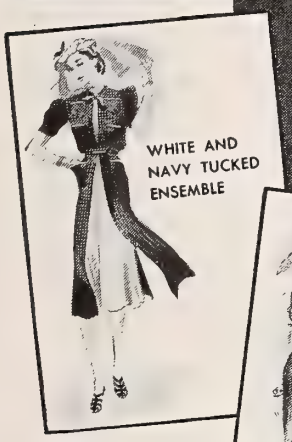
"But about having fun," said Richard E., looking a dash wistful, "I'd like to tell the world that I'm beginning to have fun for the first time since I started to sing on the stage.

"When I was on the stage back in the Pittsburgh days, you see, I never had good times as the normal man understands them. For seven years without a single vacation I played five shows a day, the music halls at nights. I've been in Hollywood for six years and have had no vacation since I've been here. Even such slight sallies into the amusement world as I take turn into jobs. I rarely walk into a night club that I'm not asked to sing. You say why do I do it? So that I won't read in the morning papers that a certain Arkansas boy has gone awfully snarky, and is a stuck-up, disobliging so-and-so.

MY sailboat is my main diversion. Joan doesn't care for boats. She likes to knit. I don't like to knit. So Joan knits and I play about with the boat and everything is jake. I golf and ride and swim. And I think I know a good contract bridge hand when I see one—and I like to see one. That's fun. I hope to buy an aeroplane soon. I love to eat ham and eggs, too, and I also like to mess around in a garden.

"Let me tell you, when Joan and I are alone, in the privacy of our home, we seldom if ever talk shop. We talk about our home. We discuss the servant problem.

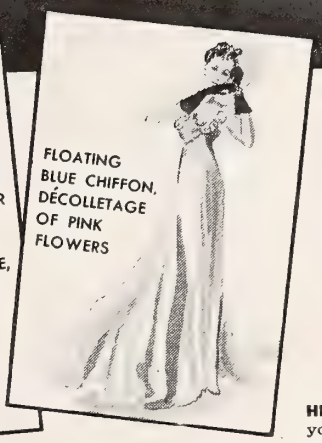
"We talk about the children, about Normy and about the baby who is to come. We discuss the possibility of Normy's future career as an actor. You would be surprised, gentlemen, at how rich and varied and important the off-screen lives of actors can be.



"So, I say, gents of the jury," summed up Dick, "first, that I have now to go to the dentist, and secondly, that just as it's not a trick personality which makes a man a tycoon in the lumber business, so it's not a trick personality that makes an actor great. I say, gentlemen, that you have to know your ABC's in any line of endeavor if you would be successful, and I repeat that our foremost actors do know their ABC's, know how to read and write, and could earn their daily bread and butter in innumerable other ways. A trick personality masking dim wits may get a fellow his first chance on the screen but it won't keep him there.

"The defense rests its case."

Lelong SPONSORS FOR SUMMER Cutex Laurel



"Wear it with Blue, Rose, Violet, Beige, Gray or Green..." he says

WITH his intuitive sense of the wearable, Lucien Lelong, famous Paris dressmaker, sponsors the new Cutex LAUREL to go with his loveliest new creations.

A masterly eye always on the final, complete effect—he says: "The new Cutex LAUREL adds the final soigné touch to my summer ensembles. It has been mixed with subtlety and restraint . . . is so softly feminine even men will like it."

Wearable...Flattering..."Summery"

Cutex LAUREL is a perfect summertime shade. A subtle grayed pink that tones in with any of the colors in a flower-garden bouquet. LAUREL is especially good with the new muted purples, blues, with rose and with beige. Lovely, too, with green, brown or gray. A truly versatile shade . . . right in the spirit of the 1938 rampage of color.

This summer be enchantingly, literally smart to your finger tips in Cutex LAUREL sponsored by Lelong!

You'll rave about the way Cutex LAUREL, like all Cutex shades, resists fading, chipping, peeling. LAUREL goes on like a charm and stays on for days, unmarred. Ask to see all the chic, new-season Cutex colors. Only 35¢ a bottle!

Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris

6 NEW SHADES TO CHOOSE FROM

HEATHER: A deep, purplish rose for your navy, beige or gray suits.

LAUREL: A subtle grayed pink. For blue, rose, violet, beige, gray, green.

CLOVER: Deep, winy red—goes with everything except orange.

THISTLE: Blended Rust and Rose. Perfect with gray, green, rust, brown.

TULIP: A fresh, bright red. Stunning with black, all colors.

ROBIN RED: True red, subdued. Goes with everything.

Also Rose, Old Rose, Rust, Natural, Colorless and Burgundy.

CUTEX INTRODUCTORY SET

—containing your favorite new Cutex shade, Cutex Oily Polish Remover, Cutex Oily Cuticle Remover, 15¢.

NORTHAM WARREN CORPORATION, Dept. 8-M-6,
191 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y.
(In Canada, P. O. Box 427, Montreal)

I enclose 15¢ to help cover postage and packing for Cutex Set, including one shade of Cutex Liquid Polish. (Check one shade desired.)

Clover ☐ Tulip ☐ Thistle ☐ Heather ☐ Laurel ☐

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

DANDRUFF?

4 Minute Treatment Stops Dandruff Itch

And Kills Nasty Scalp Odor

Dandruff is the sign of a diseased, unclean scalp. Through neglect, the tiny sebaceous glands (oil glands) fail to work as they should and become clogged with scales and dirt. The scalp becomes infected by germs and fungi, and the condition spreads.

Skin specialists generally agree that effective treatment for dandruff must include (1) regular cleansing of scalp; (2) killing the germs that spread infection; (3) stimulating circulation of the scalp; (4) lubrication of scalp to prevent dryness.

The Zonite Antiseptic Scalp Treatment Does These 4 Things

WHAT TO DO: Massage head for 3 minutes with this Zonite solution — 2 tablespoons Zonite to 1 quart of water. Use this same solution for shampoo with any good soap. Rinse very thoroughly. If scalp is dry, massage in any preferred scalp oil. (For complete details of treatment, read folder in Zonite package.)

It is vitally important to use this treatment regularly (twice every week at first) to keep dandruff under control and keep germs from spreading. Because reinfection constantly takes place from hats, bed-pillows, combs and brushes.

If you're faithful, you'll be delighted with the way this treatment leaves your scalp clean and healthy—free from itch and nasty scalp odor.

At all U. S. and Canadian drug stores.

TRIAL OFFER—For a real trial bottle of Zonite, mailed to you postpaid, send 10¢ to Zonite 610 New Brunswick, New Jersey U. S. A.

HER STAND-IN MADE HER A STAND-OUT

(Continued from page 33)

best friend knows you better than you know yourself. Judi thinks I'm an actress. I don't. If it's proven that I am an actress, it will only prove that old saying.

"Judi and I hated each other at first sight, positively hated each other. Why, I was the only girl in our sorority who voted against her. I was a senior. She was one of the freshmen the House was 'rushing.' She came to the rushing party, a symphony in black. It was Fall, and black was perfectly proper. But all the other freshmen were in sweet little prints. And in came this one in a black dress that just clung to her, sheer stockings, black shoes, carrying a black pocketbook—very, very sophisticated. Much too sophisticated for a freshman. And she was wearing a big black pancake hat. I didn't like that hat. I hated it. I decided, the minute I saw it, that I couldn't like anybody who would wear such a hat."

Majorie laughed at her memory and at herself. "I have that hat now. And I'm crazy about it. I wouldn't part with it.

"I couldn't take my eyes off that girl. I decided I wouldn't like her even without the hat. For one thing, she didn't laugh like most people. She whoo-ed. And the way she got attention! Nobody was noticing any of the other freshmen. Nobody except me.

"As captain of the rushing, I had arranged some stunts and some skits. In the middle of the entertainment, I suddenly missed Judi. And where do you suppose I found her? Up in the smoker, smoking—chatting nonchalantly with the president of the House. Monopolizing her.

"That night, when we voted on the rushes, I held out against 'that Judi Parks.' My roommate kept me up until four A. M., arguing with me. 'Everybody else wants her,' she said. I finally said, all worn out, 'All right. You can have her.' We pledged her.

"And, immediately, Judi became the problem child of the freshman class. She had dates every night in the week. And she accepted a frat pin—another thing no freshman was supposed to do.

"I hated her so that they made me her 'house mother.' They made her my roommate, the second semester. On the theory that she could talk everybody else out of things, but not me. I'd sit on her.

"As a freshman, she was supposed to do certain things around the House. She usually managed to get out of doing them. I decided to fix her.

"One time I was ill. She was supposed to bring food up to me. She didn't appear till four P. M. I was so mad that I got out of bed to tell her what I thought of her. I told her that she was 'just a fair-weather friend,' that when I couldn't do things for her, she wouldn't do anything for me. That hurt her. She was sorry. She couldn't do enough for me after that. I couldn't do enough for her."

AT this moment, Judi arrived at our luncheon table. Her eyes had a gleam in them. She had found a house. Time had to be taken out while she described it—a little white Colonial in Westwood, with two bedrooms, and a fireplace, and a yard. Then Marjorie told her what we had been talking about.

Judi demanded, "Did you tell him about our 'penitence box?'" She turned to me and said, "Every time one of us forgets to do something, a nickel has to go into the box. Marjorie's always putting in."

Marjorie, pretending not to hear her, and went right on telling her story.

"One afternoon, I was sitting with a boy on the front steps of the sorority house when Judi came up the walk with a magazine in her hand. 'I've found a beauty contest for you to enter,' she said. I could have killed her. You know how boys are about girls who enter beauty contests.

"I managed to shoo her away"—a memory that evoked a whoo from Judi. "But when I went up to our room I found the magazine open at that page, on top of my dresser. I threw it in the wastebasket. Next morning there it was, on top of my dresser again. I must have thrown it away a dozen times; and every time it would come back, open at that page."

"She didn't think she stood a chance," said Judi. "I knew differently. She had placed second in a 'Miss Kentucky' contest one year. She had been 'Miss Kentucky State Fair.' She had been voted the prettiest girl at Indiana for three straight years. The prize in the contest was a course in a dancing school in New York. Marjorie had been the dancing lead in campus shows for three years. I had visions of a career for her. She didn't—until then."

What was she planning to do after college?

"I thought I'd probably be teaching," Marjorie said. "I never thought of asking my family for money to go away and try to get started on a career. In the first place, my family didn't have that kind of money. And I didn't have that kind of ambition."

Judi shook her head in mock wonder.

"No," said Marjorie, "I wasn't wondering how soon I'd be getting married. I was never serious with any boy. Except maybe one. His name?" She smiled teasingly. "Oh, but we were talking about a beauty contest.

"You had to send in a picture of yourself in a dancing costume. I had some from one of the campus shows, three years before. Judi picked out the one she liked best, and said that was the one I ought to send. I was beginning to be a little enthused by this time—thanks to Judi. But I still didn't have nerve enough to send off the picture. 'Don't you worry about the nerve to send it,' Judi said. 'You just write a little letter, telling who you are, and I'll send it off.'"

"It took me three days to get her to write the letter," put in Judi.

"Well, anyhow," said Marjorie, "when the news came that I had won I said, 'Judi, now I'm really going to work.' I went up to New York with my mother and fifty dollars, to start that dancing course. Mother stayed three weeks. Then Judi came. She didn't go back to college."

"How could I?" demanded Judi, "I had to keep my eye on you."

SO," explained Marjorie, "she came up to New York to go to dramatic school. We took a little apartment. I learned little things about acting from her. She learned little things about dancing from me. With Judi there, I didn't have a chance to get lonely. Or a chance to remember that I was scared stiff of New York.

"I had just fifty dollars, remember. I didn't want any more than that, didn't want my family to gamble any more than that on my becoming something. But fifty dollars didn't go very far in New York. I had to do something to earn a living till

(Continued on page 109)

"Look at those snapshots . . . then decide," says DOROTHY DIX, famous adviser on life and marriage

'I BELIEVE that practically every girl or man has a chance, sometime during romance days, to make a happy marriage. Unhappy marriages simply show how many let the right chance slip . . .

"Try this plan: When you meet someone you like, see that you get plenty of snapshots. This is a natural and easy thing to do—romance and snapshots go together like music and moonlight . . .

"And be sure to save your snapshots. Then, when you think your big moment has arrived, get out the snapshots of all the others. See what they say to you. See if the faces and scenes don't awaken memories that make you pause. Perhaps you'll recognize the right chance that has gone by temporarily, but can be regained."

* * *

Whether you're expert or inexperienced—for day-in and day-out picture making—use Kodak Verichrome Film for surer results. Double-coated by a special process—it takes care of reasonable exposure errors—increases your ability to get clear, satisfying pictures. Nothing else is "just as good." And certainly there is nothing better. Play safe. Use it always . . . Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

SUMMER STARTERS

BY ANN WILLS

In "Stolen Heaven," Glenda Farrell wears a shirtmaker, all-purpose frock for summer.

Also excellent to start the summer is her two-piece jacket suit in lightweight wool.

WELL, MY LOVELIES, spring and its constant attendant, the newest thing in fashion, are both well under way. For the new season, you selected the most becoming outfit you could find, and I've no doubt that when the boy-friend called to take you riding on Easter Sunday afternoon, the loveliness of you in your new ensemble drove the dear man absolutely ga-ga and even made him forget his favorite movie actress!

But the wise little gal won't stop here and rest on her laurels (or the posies of her new spring bonnet). She looks forward a little and sees summer coming up awfully fast. Now, summer means vacation. And vacation means new clothes, most of them to be useful only during those two or three glorious weeks of freedom, and week-ends afterwards. But how about the rest of the time, when you're just living your regular everyday existence?

After all, you can't wear sunback frocks or play suits all the time, especially if you live in the city. You must have cool, comfortable, yet smart clothes to further your career, even to do the family shopping, go to the movies, or to any of the places that require a certain formality in your dress.

Right now we're in a sort of in-between season, with no special events to buy clothes for, so I suggest that you look into the future a little and get a few things to start the summer right. Then, when it's time to begin thinking about vacation clothes, you'll be that much ahead. With the practical side of your summer wardrobe out of the way, you can devote all your energy and budget to the fascinating new play clothes! (Continued on page 79)

Designed to make you look as smart as a star and as fresh as a daisy

Healthful Double Mint gum shows you this doubly lovely way to charm and popularity

S-119

Men—women, too, for that matter—are attracted to a charming smile and smart clothes—a winning combination that healthful, delicious Double Mint gum enables you to have. The daily enjoyment of this double-lasting, mint-flavored gum provides beneficial chewing exercise which beautifies your lips, mouth and teeth, increasing the loveliness of your smile. You look your radiant best—a person people want to know. Try it today...Left, Double Mint gum introduces a new creation of Valentina whose clients from New York to Hollywood rank among the best dressed women in the world. Double Mint has put this charmingly becoming dress into a Simplicity Pattern for you. This, then, is Double Mint gum's doubly lovely way of helping you win admiration and popularity.

Keep young—be doubly lovely the Double Mint way. Remember also Double Mint gum aids digestion, relaxes tense nerves, assures a sweet inoffensive breath. Buy several packages today.

Left, exquisite Double Mint gum dress produced in New York by VALENTINA, original creator of modern classic design —modeled for you in Hollywood by the gorgeous star of stage and screen, GLORIA SWANSON. Made available to you by Double Mint gum in SIMPLICITY Pattern 2784. At nearly all good Department, Dry Goods or Variety Stores you can buy this pattern. Or, write Double Mint Dress Pattern Dept., 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

COLLEGE GIRLS LEAD THE WAY

in discovering TAMPAX

It is natural that enlightened college women should lead in adopting Tampax, the new internal absorbent for monthly sanitary protection. It means safety, comfort, assurance. Learn about this medically-endorsed, revolutionary product—and tell your friends!

● CURIOSITY IS AROUSED

"I've heard about this Tampax . . . It's so compact that a month's supply will go in your purse. Wonder how it works—"

● THE TRUTH DAWNS

"Well, it's rather startling at first! . . . Perfected by a doctor. For use internally! . . . You're not aware of its presence."

● IT'S THE CIVILIZED WAY

"Why wasn't this invented years ago? Patented applicator. No belts, no pins, no pads, no odor . . . You ride, dance, swim."

● ANY WOMAN CAN USE IT

". . . and feel at ease in any costume . . . 35¢ a month's supply . . . drug stores and notion counters."

Accepted for Advertising by The Journal of the American Medical Association

TAMPAX Incorporated
New Brunswick, N. J. MM-68

Please send me introductory size package of Tampax. Enclosed is 20¢ (stamps or coins).

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

WHY GABLE IS KING

(Continued from page 27)

Spencer said, "Yeah—and Gable's never forgotten that a hundred dollars is a helluva lot of dough, if you know what I mean. You don't have to pamper that guy, either, that's why he'll wear the crown until he takes it off with his own hands. He's an all-round human being and appreciates a joke on himself as much as he appreciates the horsing he gives others. He takes his work seriously, too, don't let him kid you about that. He won't say so because of his fear of ever seeming pompous or pretentious, the heavy actor stuff, but he couldn't have developed as he has, he couldn't be the swell actor he is unless he did take it seriously. He may crown me for this," laughed Spence.

"He can get along with absolutely anybody, too, from a punk kid to some grand dame giving him the works. He's escaped being the bohunk some other fellow in his spot might easily have become because he's a right guy. He's tops with me, on the set and off, I'm telling you."

"And he's terrifically interested in other people, too," Myrna said, "all kinds of people, what they're doing and want to do and why. That's very handy in a King, you know, being interested in the People. I heard him talking the other day to a young woman from the publicity department. She happened to mention that her little boy was going to military school and she hoped she was doing the right thing in sending him there. Clark talked to her for half an hour, discussing the advantages versus the disadvantages of military school for a small boy he'd never seen. Anyway, how long he's been tops tells the story—more than four years, isn't it? And in that time many have come and some have gone, but Clark's position remains supreme and undisputed."

"Sounds too perfect," I murmured.

"No," said Myrna, "I wouldn't say that of anybody. He's got his faults. He's got a good broad streak of Dutch stubbornness He makes up his mind about something and, right or wrong, it stays made up."

"I know I wouldn't put my frail shoulders to the job of trying to change it," laughed Spence—but so warmly and affectionately that it would warm the cockles of your heart to hear one man speak so of another man, one star of another star.

Gable and Director Victor Fleming appeared. Spence and Gable went into action, a big scene, magnificently done. When it was over Clark shouted to Director Fleming, "How was it, Vic?"

"Pretty good," countered Fleming, winking at me.

"Whaddyou mean, 'Pretty good'?" yelled Clark, "Power and Taylor couldn't give you any better!"

WHEN Clark is on the set, in action, he is the character he plays, assured, easy. The instant he steps off the set he looks like a small boy who, having just recited a piece triumphantly, squirms with embarrassment, gets red in the face, says, "Aw, heck!" to cover his shyness.

It was Vic Fleming who said to me, "It's pretty obvious, of course, why Gable was chosen King. He has a handsome robustness, a fine personality. But it's more than that. He has a strange form of intellect, something that photographs. His charm is not a physical thing, it's a mental thing. It comes creeping out through his eyes, a shine, a brilliance, a rich laughter. Not an educated, small mind; an uneducated big mind, that's Gable. By which I do not mean a lack of schooling but a lack of the necessity to exploit a pseudo intelligence, to cultivate mannerisms. He is absolutely without ego; there's a fine pride in the man, but no ego. He's a very reticent man, a very sensitive man. Perspires freely under the collar when he is embarrassed and he's embarrassed far more easily and far more often than you would ever suspect. He's so sensitive that he wears an armour of gruffness to protect himself. He's a very tender man, a very understanding man. He's never been changed by the terrific barrage of flattery and attention to which he is subjected because he knows that if he did succumb he would be a fool. He has the rare quality of humility which is worth all the false pride in the world. He still remembers that the word 'fan' derives from the word 'fanatic.' He'd be equally successful in anything he might choose to do or to be because he's a great guy in the place where a great guy begins—the heart."

IT was Walter Strohm, the assistant director, who told me more reasons to prove that your votes were right votes. Let me tell you, when an assistant director is 'for' a star, that star is just about as Four-Square as Aimee's gospel. Too often, the assistant director is the man upon whom the star, little of soul though big of rôle, vents his spleen. Too cautious, too cagey, perhaps too cowardly to hackle the director, he will badger the life out of the assistant director. These boys would make themselves pretty scarce if they knew they were to be asked to talk about some of the stars they have worked with. But when Strohm knew that I wanted some "inside stuff" on Gable, he was anxious to talk.

He told me that when Clark was out at the army flying field the other day, he took as much interest in meeting the army fliers as ever any fan took in meeting him. He wanted to do things their way. They took him up in a bomber, let him handle the controls, were amazed at his competence. But not until they came down and asked him did he let on that he had flown many times.

Clark's never too big to ask advice, according to Strohm. His "technical advisers" on "Test Pilot" have been all the licensed aviators on the studio lot—Wally Beery, Jimmy Stewart, Clarence Brown and others. His personal heroes—and the point is that he has heroes—are Lindbergh, the lost Amelia Earhart, Jimmy Mattern, Kingsford-Smith, and Bob Fogg who flew into the wilds of Alaska to deliver the serum that saved the lives of an entire Arctic community. These are the men and women, these are the deeds of valour that make the heart of Gable pound in the deep cavity of his chest, as your heart (or mine) may pound when we look at Gable!

He's never a Know-It-All. He's never a complainer. He never worries about whether his car is waiting for him at the entrance to the set; he never fusses about his dressing room, where it is placed on the set, whether it is hot or cold, what the equipment may be. He eats in the commissary, and he never sends anything back. He never holds up production by making unreasonable demands, by not knowing his lines, by being unnecessarily late on the set.

He doesn't give presents, as a lot of stars do, at the end of a picture. This seems to be a strange reason to give for a man's popularity. But with the gang he works with, it is a reason. "He doesn't give

(Continued on page 76)

Olivia de Havilland

IN

"THE ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD"

A WARNER BROS. PRODUCTION

"You can give new charm to your beauty with Color Harmony Make-Up"

YOU'LL be amazed what wonderful things correct make-up colors will do for your beauty... how much more attractive, charming and interesting you will appear.

Blonde or brunette... brownette or redhead... there is a color harmony in Max Factor's powder, rouge, lipstick, originally created for screen star types, that will be perfectly lovely and flattering for you. Try it today.. share this make-up secret of Hollywood's stars. Note coupon for special make-up test.

POWDER... The perfect color harmony shades of Max Factor's Face Powder actually enliven the beauty of your skin. Soft and fine in texture, it imparts a clinging satin-smooth make-up that will give you confidence in any close-up test... $1.

ROUGE... It's so important to have the right shade of rouge to give naturalness to your make-up. That is why Max Factor created lifelike colors for blonde, brunette, brownette and redhead. You'll be amazed how lovely your color harmony shade will look... 50¢.

LIPSTICK... Hollywood knows Max Factor's Lipstick will withstand every test. Try it once... and you will never use any other. Moisture-proof, super-indelible... the color remains uniformly lovely for hours. Original color harmony shades to accent the attraction of each type... $1.

☆ Announcing!... MAX FACTOR'S NORMALIZING CLEANSING CREAM... a perfectly balanced cream that will "agree" with your skin whether it is dry, oily, or normal.

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR, Max Factor's Make-Up Studio, Hollywood:
Send Purse-Size Box of Powder and Rouge Sampler in my color harmony shade; also Lipstick Color Sampler, four shades. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and 48-page Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Society Make-Up"..... FREE

24-6-43

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BROWNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BRUNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	REDHEAD Light ☐ Dark ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (color)
Olive ☐	Light ☐
SKIN Dry ☐ Oily ☐ Normal ☐	Dark ☐	If Hair is Gray check type above and here ☐
	AGE

Max Factor ★ Hollywood

That Luscious New Shade is CONGO!

"Thrilling with Spring Costume colors," SAYS JOAN BENNETT charming star of I Met My Love Again

CONGO is fascinating...utterly feminine...in tune with Fashion! Congo is Glazo's newest nail polish success—an enchanting deep orchid-rose picked by stylists to harmonize with the season's blues, grays and beige.

Wherever you go you'll see Congo. It's a color men admire, too. Accent your costume with this latest, perfect shade. And remember Glazo's other smart new colors: TROPIC... SPICE...CABAÑA. Each is a gem of beauty. You'll love their variety!

GLAZO'S NEW Perfected Polish

1. LONGER WEAR—lasts for days and days without peeling, chipping or fading! Meets the demand for a slightly heavier polish that really clings to the nails.

2. EASE OF APPLICATION—every drop goes on evenly. Will not streak or run.

3. BRILLIANT LUSTRE—won't fade in sun or water.

Get Glazo's new, exciting colors—CONGO, SPICE, CABAÑA and TROPIC—at all drug counters, in extra large sizes at..... 25¢

GLAZO
The Smart Manicure

WHY GABLE IS KING

(Continued from page 74)

presents," they say, "because he's never the big star, condescending, bestowing favours upon the humble henchmen. It would just never occur to him to give presents, because he thinks of himself as one of us, doing his share of the job as we are doing our share. He doesn't expect anyone to give him a present when the job is done. Why should he do any different from the rest of us?"

"When we were at San Diego, at the flying field," Mr. Strohm assured me, "he ate his box lunch with the gang. There were some 7,000 fans gathered about and he signed all of the autograph books he had time to sign between takes. When someone comes up to him and says, 'Oh, Mr. Gable, I knew you in Dallas!' He doesn't, half the time, place the person. But he never lets on. He always says 'Oh, sure! How are you?'

"No one," said Mr. Strohm, the honest admiration of one man for another in his eyes "no one would ever ask Gable for bread and get a stone, that's sure."

He doesn't do any of the things a star does to "keep" his stardom. He isn't seen in the "right places," with the "right people." As he doesn't bite the hand that feeds him, neither does he butter it.

"What I say is, he's real," said Johnny Miller, the props man who has been with Gable, and how many others, through many pictures. "What I mean is, he takes as much interest in the props as I do. And he doesn't mind putting his own shoulder to the wheel when there's a job of work to be done.

"When he was making 'Saratoga' and he and Miss Harlow were having such good times together, he used to ride a bike around the lot and onto the set. One day he stumbled on the thing, it being too small, though full-sized, for such a big man. He laughed and said to me 'How old's your kid, Johnny?' I told him and he said, 'Take this thing home to him.'

"Just today he said to me, 'This is the scene where I wear my wrist-watch, Johnny.' Now you may be wondering what that's got to do with anything. Well, it's got this to do with things—some stars would a'gone into the scene without the watch, knowing jolly well they should be wearing it, and at the end of the scene they'd have hollered at me about not having it. Not that Gable. He takes care the other fellow's job is as "cushy" as his own. He's a right guy he is. I know."

And so the evidence that you have chosen a King who is a king kept piling up. From his stand-in, Lew Smith, I learned that people have a hard time doing anything for Gable. He never asks or expects anyone to do anything he won't do himself (a lesson to kings). The morning of the day I was on the set they had done the scene where the bomber bursts into flame. Lew Smith was supposed to pull a man out of the burning wreck. But no, Gable did it himself. "Nothing pantie-waist about him, if you know what I mean," said his stand-in.

AND small Martin, aged ten, the newsboy whom Clark got into the picture, young Martin pip-squeaked at me, "Say, he's okay, Mr. Gable is. He got me a chanct in this pitcher. Say, I nearly had a chanct in another pitcher but the star of that one wouldn't have me because he said I have a unique poisanality. But Mr. Gable don't hold that against me, not him, boy!"

I learned that Gable says of Tracy, "I owe a lot to that guy. If it wasn't for him, I'd probably be playing the one-night hops. He's the one who made a star out of me." And when he was asked, "How?" the answer was, "I imitated him." Clark was referring to the old days in the East when he was doing one show in New York, and in a theatre next door Tracy was playing Killer Mears in "The Last Mile." "When I was called to Los Angeles to do 'The Last Mile' out here I took a look at Tracy doing the part and hopped the first plane for Hollywood."

I learned that he says, "There is a proven army rule that it takes ten men behind the lines to keep one man in the trenches during war. A picture star needs a hundred times that many men to keep him in close-ups on the screen, from producer to props. We couldn't stay put without 'em."

I heard that he says, "You don't have to put up a front in Hollywood in order to get along. Look at the best of 'em, Tracy, Muni, Jimmy Stewart, Wally Beery. Nothing fancy about them."

And it remained for Fanny Brice to put the next-to-the-last touches on this portrait of a King. Said Fanny, "He's King as far as I'm concerned. I'd put a crown on his head any time. He's 100 per cent man. He looks like he can be awfully tender or awfully rough. I think the women is liking that. A man has got to be bigger than his job, and that's Gable. He's honest with himself; that's what makes him a swell actor. Nothing fakey comes through—and does that come through on the screen!" Thus Fanny (Snooks) Brice, with that gleam in her eye! Fanny who can add up her troupers like on an adding machine!

IT was then I got around to Gable, saying, "I'm going down for the third time, it's all too beautiful—tell me some of your faults!" And Gable came back, "Sure. I'm subborn as a mule. I'm impatient, especially at the end of a picture when I get a little tired. I have to watch myself, get irritated at things I wouldn't notice when the picture starts. I'm impatient, get mad at things in general, let off steam on one fellow, perhaps, tell him off. He doesn't know what it's all about, doesn't know that he's just the straw breaking the camel's back. Neither do I know at the time.

"I'm a little thoughtless—about sending flowers and that kind of stuff. I honestly don't think it's lack of generosity. I just don't think, especially when I'm working. It's worse then.

"I'm a dull dog, the dullest bohunk in Hollywood, no foolin'. Don't know a thing about music or art. I like 'em all right but I don't know a thing about 'em.

"I get a laugh out of this Best Dressed Man in Hollywood bologna. I've got about eight suits. When I'm not working I wear khaki slacks and an old polo shirt.

"What do I think when I look in the mirror? I've never thought what the heck I look like. The only exception being when a cameraman says to me 'Don't look so much into the camera, Gable,' and I say, 'Why not?' and he says, 'The ears, the EARS!' Vic and I doped out a swell ending for this picture. We were going to have me looking straight into the camera, the ears for wings and then just a take-off. Swell idea, but I guess we can't do it."

And then Director Fleming called the man whom you, the People, have elected King, and told him to get to work.

This Summer

Go NEW HAVEN to

Southern NEW ENGLAND!

A delightful ride to a delightful vacationland! Step aboard a luxurious air-conditioned New Haven coach, sink back in a deep, comfortable seat and enjoy a care-free trip that actually becomes part of the vacation itself!

Relax under the spell of cool, clean, conditioned air . . . read or rest if you wish; New Haven's fine, modern coaches are scientifically lighted, silent and smooth riding. And remember . . . low fares in these luxurious coaches are always friendly to vacation budgets!

This summer be free of traffic jams, highway hazards! Travel the steel highway on one of the nation's safest railroads where it's always clear track ahead and a swift, smooth ride to your favorite summer resort.

FREE 1938 Summer Guide to southern New England. Completely informative, illustrated. Tells where to go, how to go. Gives resort rates, fares, schedules, etc. Limited supply. Send for your copy NOW! Address: Room 596, South Station, Boston, Mass.

THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

ONE MOTHER TELLS ANOTHER!

Now millions praise the new

SCIENTIFICALLY IMPROVED EX-LAX

FOR YEARS, millions of mothers have given Ex-Lax to their children to relieve constipation . . . "It's just the thing for youngsters," they said, "so gentle and effective, and yet so easy to take" . . . And now the word is spreading—Ex-Lax has been Scientifically Improved! America's most popular family laxative is even better than before! Better in 3 important ways:

TASTES BETTER THAN EVER!

Ex-Lax now has a smoother, richer chocolate flavor. It tastes even better than before!

ACTS BETTER THAN EVER!

Ex-Lax is now even more effective! Empties the bowels thoroughly and more smoothly in less time than before.

MORE GENTLE THAN EVER!

Ex-Lax is today so remarkably gentle that, except for the relief you enjoy, you scarcely realize you have taken a laxative.

• • •

Ask for the new Scientifically Improved Ex-Lax at your druggist's. The box is the same as always, but the contents are better than ever! 10c and 25c.

CRO•PAX FOOT AIDS
For Every Foot Ailment

CORNS
6 Cro★Pax Waterproof pads...4 medicated discs... for quick, safe removal of stubborn corns.

CALLOUSES
Cro★Pax Callous Pads, waterproof, remove pressure; medicated discs remove core.

BUNIONS
Cro★Pax Bunion Pads... Waterproof... medicated ...Relieve Pressure.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

INSTANT RELIEF 10c

Price slightly higher in Canada.
CRO•PAX PRODUCTS, CLEVELAND, OHIO
AT YOUR 5 & 10c STORE

KICKING OVER THE TRACES

(Continued from page 50)

Yet I can't recall anything about the five years I've been acting sensible and saving. So I say kick over the old traces once in a while. It's good for the ego, swell for the imagination, and beneficial generally."

For years, four to be exact, you've seen Claire Trevor illuminating program pictures, better known as "Bs" in the trade. These are quickies made on major lots with minor budgets, released without build-up or ballyhoo, save in rare cases like "The Informer." "B" pictures are designed to serve as the rear end of double bills. They are run of the mill, pleasantly missed. Claire Trevor is far too good for them, yet she has graced twenty-three!

"At first I accepted anything I was handed, as anyone crashing pictures should. When the scripts turned out to be crumby and inconsistent I just did the best I could, because I figured this was good training for a tyro. I was learning the angles. But the program didn't change after two years of mediocrity. They kept me in 'B' stuff.

"Don't misunderstand me, please. I know that 'B' pictures fill a definite want. Mass entertainment, easy to understand, made to formula, they're the backbone of studio production, making possible prestige pictures that invariably lose money. I know all about why they're necessary, but I don't want to be in them!"

BEFORE any of you go so far as to envy a lovely blonde like Claire Trevor, remember that her day starts at six-thirty A.M. in order to get her on the set, in make-up, by nine.

"Extra girls get up at five-thirty to be there at seven, to be made up by the crew. And the crew is temperamental. Artists, you know. Me, I slap the stuff on my face in ten minutes or less, and it looks as good as if I'd fussed over it an hour."

The Trevor features, by the way, are flawless. Her nose is a pert retroussé, her lips appealing and her eyes searchlights. But we were talking about her work-day.

"I'm home about seven, too tired to eat. Lines for the next day have to be studied. Then I pound the pillow. You must have lots of sleep if you want to wake up looking bee-ootiful."

Claire devotes only one night a week to frivolity. On Saturday she "dates." But none of your Trocadero or La Maze for this canny child of the cinema. No photographers in her freshly waved hair! So her private life is her own. No one knows where she is or with whom. But rumor links her name with that of a well known supervisor. Perhaps that is why Claire was so vehement in her defense of supervisors, when I casually belittled them.

"Picture executives have been heckled as pants pressers and lowbrows, but I know that's all wrong. The supervisors I've come in contact with are smart men, well informed and sensitive regarding current trends here and abroad. They know their box office figures, but they know what's behind a good picture, too. A much maligned set of men, the supervisors."

Actors are handed less by the outspoken Claire. "The interesting ones are too old. The young ones are stupid," she said.

"If I could fall in love permanently I'd marry. I'd drop Hollywood and pictures in two minutes for marriage and babies. I don't think you can raise a family and conduct a career at the same time."

Wouldn't she miss the glamor of the studios?

"Absolutely not," said Claire. "I owe pictures a lot. I've made an unbelievable amount of money in the last four years. But it's given me no artistic satisfaction to be in movies. I've done nothing I can point to with pride. I thought 'Dead End' was going to mean everything—with a beautiful script, good director (Willie Wyler), and topflight cast—but I was disappointed in my performance when I saw the picture. I hadn't given what I thought I had. Or else they didn't use the shot where I gave the most. That's the trouble with pictures. You go through a scene four or five times, then they throw away the take you liked and print one that you're ashamed to see. But, of course, besides being art the cinema is big business. Isn't it the fourth largest industry? It has to make money for the stockholders. Everything is box office."

Rumors had preceded Claire to New York, rumors that this Eastern trek was to culminate in orange blossoms. But, "No," said Claire, positively. There was nothing in that. She would marry when she found the right man, but as we rolled to press he was still to be encountered.

Ronald Colman she thinks is the most charming actor in Hollywood. But her husband will have to be twenty-eight or nine to complement her twenty-five years. Off the screen she looks younger than on.

Always trying to be helpful, I mentioned Cary Grant as a handsome and eligible mate. "He is fine," said Claire sweetly, "for Phyllis Brooks."

LIKE most of the boys and girls toiling before the cameras, she cherishes the idea of returning to the Broadway stage in a good comedy "with a lot of strong drama in it," but she has uncovered nothing that fits that description. Freddy March thought he had until he read the reviews.

"I think a home with children would be the most marvelous thing in the world," Claire confessed. "Of course, if I were married and didn't have children I'd probably go on doing an occasional picture. I'd hate complete inactivity. But if you have children it's a full time job. And I want a whole lot of 'em.

"Nothing makes me more envious than a visit with friends who have children. Hollywood is artificial and insincere in the main. Children would bring me reality."

If the "B" picture situation doesn't change for the better Claire proposes to freelance.

"It's a gamble, but I always have radio to fall back on. Radio is a swell meal ticket, too, you know."

On the air she teams with Edward G. Robinson in a newspaper serial, "Big Town," conceded to be one of the best dramatic programs.

"You see," said Claire frankly, "I don't want to be just another leading lady. And so I'm going to do something about it! For two years I took 'B' pictures without a murmur. Good training, I told my mother. Sound basis for a screen career. Yes, indeed! But they've kept me buzzing in the B-hive for four years and no relief in sight. So one of these days I'm going to surprise everybody and say, no, this part is not for me. This picture is not for me. I won't do another 'B'!"

Those are strong words from a fragile, glossy blonde with such a demurely lovely face. But the Trevor chin stuck out determinedly as she spoke and the Trevor eyes flashed danger signals. So it looks as if she's about to kick over the traces again!

SUMMER STARTERS

(Continued from page 72)

Keep this thought in mind when you see Glenda Farrell in "Stolen Heaven." Glenda's clothes in this picture are, as always, extremely smart and very wearable. You should get lots of ideas from Glenda. Two of her ensembles in particular I'd like you to note as being perfect "summer starters."

For general, all-around summer wear, nothing will ever take the place of the smart shirtmaker frock. The 1938 version of this summer favorite as worn by Glenda Farrell shows us that dots are back again for summer daytime frocks. Distinctive features that make a classic look "different" are the white pearl buttons all the way down the front, and rows of white stitching that finish the patch pocket and belt and form a border from its hem all the way around the tailored collar.

While the lines are classically simple, this year's newest mode is reflected in the full blouse gathered at the waist (Gibson Girl influence), and in the skirt gores which give a gentle fullness toward the hem.

An "all-purpose" frock, this. It's grand for office wear, for mornings in town, for bridge on warm afternoons, or for spectator sports. In fact, you'll feel a glow of thankfulness every time you wear it, it's that right for so many occasions.

As for color Glenda's dress is in bright blue, but I'd advise you to choose yours in navy or some other basic color, to give you a greater variety of accessory combinations. White, pink, bright yellow, pale blue or green are just a few of the possible colors to be worn with navy, black or brown. Red-and-white accessories also set off navy beautifully. Shoes, hats and gloves, of course, are accessories that can be changed about for color effects, and you can also do many clever tricks with gay colored scarves, hankies, or wacky ornaments. Just remember when choosing these accessories that the shirtmaker dress is essentially a sports frock, and that good taste demands accessories in harmony.

IT may cost a little more, but you'll be repaid many times over if your dress is of a pure dye silk, which will be fresh and cool, and wash so beautifully that it can be laundered every week all summer without fading or losing its shape.

Glenda's other costume, also excellent as a "summer starter," is entirely different, a two-piece jacket frock in two shades of lightweight green wool.

Now wait a minute, before you say, "What! wool for summer?" Let me explain. Believe you me, these worsted sheers are going to be awfully important this season. For, paradoxical as it may sound, they're about the coolest, most comfortable, most practical things you can wear. The worsted yarns are twisted tightly to allow "breathing space," and they're porous to keep you cool as a cucumber. Besides, these worsted sheers will not crush or wilt on hot days, so they make ideal town and sports costumes.

Glenda's frock in a warm "blotter" green, piped in a tender leaf green, has a straight wrap-around skirt and belted hip-length jacket buttoned up the front with matching green buttons. The leaf green lapels of the collarless jacket are matched by the edgings of the four slit pockets. A peaked hat of green antelope with a black quill matches the dress.

With two frocks like these, you will be well equipped to start the summer in your office, social life, or traveling.

MARVELOUS FOR COMPLEXIONS, TOO!

You'll want to use this pure, creamy-white soap for both face and bath.

Cashmere Bouquet's lather is so gentle and caressing. Yet it removes dirt and cosmetics so thoroughly, leaving your skin clearer, softer... more radiant and alluring!

NOW ONLY 10¢
at drug, department, ten-cent stores

TO KEEP Fragrantly Dainty —BATHE WITH PERFUMED

CASHMERE BOUQUET SOAP

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 8)

★★★ The Joy of Living

In the parade of screwball comedies emanating from Hollywood this month, "The Joy of Living" rates as one of the most entertaining. It is brightened by sprightly dialogue and played with zest by an excellent cast, headed by Irene Dunne and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Miss Dunne is a glamorous movie star whose life is more than a bit on the dull side due to the fact that her family, greedy for her money, keeps her pretty much under its collective thumb. Along, however, comes Fairbanks, a romantic and whimsical young man who owns an island in the South Seas, and he proceeds to shake her out of the doldrums. He accomplishes it by introducing her, among other things, to the joys of drinking beer and the simple pleasures of a roller rink.

There is much in the film that is amusing, and there are several moments of hilarity which are reminiscent of "The Awful Truth." Although "The Joy of Living" doesn't measure up to that comedy masterpiece it is still better entertainment than most of its type. Irene Dunne, adding another to her list of rowdy performances, pleased a preview audience mightily, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the playboy role, will win new fans with his breezy performance. A large supporting cast is capably headed by Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee, Lucille Ball, Jean Dixon, Eric Blore, Franklyn Pangborn and Warren Hymer. Directed by Tay Garnett.—RKO-Radio.

★★★ There's Always a Woman

We have still more riotous whimsy in "There's Always a Woman."

The picture is a lightly-turned husband-and-wife story with a murder mystery background, and serves, happily, to introduce Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas as a team. Lunatic situations arise from the sleuthing of the ambitious husband (Melvyn Douglas), and the super-sleuthing of his wife (Joan Blondell). When the husband has to give up his private detecting and go back to the district attorney's office, his wife decides to pick up the business where he left it. She stumbles into a murder mystery, and her frenzied efforts to solve it keep her popping up in the path of her exasperated husband, who is working on the same case. The mystery is solved to nobody's particular credit—but everybody's had a lot of fun. It's strictly in the "Thin Man" tradition, but it manages to be highly amusing without treading on the toes of its inspiration.

Joan Blondell is lovely in a new hairdress and some attractive clothes, and Melvyn Douglas as a foil is perfect. Mary Astor, Jerome Cowan and Frances Drake are good in small parts. Directed by Al Hall.—Columbia.

★★ Her Jungle Love

Remember Ray Milland and Dorothy Lamour in "Jungle Princess" last year? Well, they've put Dorothy back in her Maybelline Solid-form Mascara in metal vanity. Maybelline Cream-form Mascara in dainty zipper case. Colors:—Black, Brown, Blue.

For Beautiful Eyes this finer Mascara

Of course you want the natural appearance of long, dark, curling lashes—what woman doesn't? Well, there is no longer any possible excuse for blank, unattractive eyes or scraggly lashes when Maybelline Mascara is so reasonably priced. A few simple brush strokes of either the solid or cream-form will give your lashes radiant beauty instantly. Harmless, tear-proof, non-smarting, and keeps lashes soft and silky. Velvety Black, Midnight Blue, or rich shade of Brown. Vanity size, in beautiful metal case or tube, 75c. Purse sizes at all 10c stores. Beautiful eyes are yours for the asking when you ask for Maybelline Mascara.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil in Black, Blue, Brown. . . Maybelline Eye Shadow, in Blue, Blue-Gray, Brown Green, Violet.

match Eyebrow Pencil and Eye Shadow for complete harmony

Fashion decrees, and make-up experts agree that you must now harmonize your entire eye make-up. Match your Eyebrow Pencil and Eye Shadow with your Mascara for naturalness—this is the newest note in beauty, and in no way can you achieve this better than with Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids. The exquisitely smooth-marking Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil forms lovely, graceful eyebrows—and a subtle touch of colorful Maybelline Eye Shadow will work wonders for the sparkle in your eyes.

Maybelline

Maybelline Eye Cream to ward off eye wrinkles.

and Smooth Skin Around the Eyes with this rich Eye Cream

Crows-feet, circles, and crepey lids detract so much from any woman's appearance. Help keep smooth and soft the tender skin area around the eyes by using this beneficial Special Eye Cream. Apply it faithfully every night for most pleasing results. Liberal introductory sizes at ten cent stores.

LARGEST SELLING EYE BEAUTY AIDS IN THE WORLD

Alice Brady gives Irene Dunne a few tips on "The Joy of Living," a sprightly new comedy.

sarong and her tropical island setting, and Ray discovers her all over again, only this time he does it in Technicolor. Everyone who liked last year's bit of make-believe will enjoy this year's installment, because it is compounded from the same formula.

Miss Lamour is Tura, the beautiful song-and-sarong girl, whose only companions are Gaga, a chimpanzee, and Meewah, a belligerent little lion cub. Into this more or less idyllic setting comes Milland, who has brought along Lynne Overman for laughs. They're a pair of stranded aviators —if landing on an island inhabited by Dorothy Lamour can be called stranded. Miss L. learns English quickly, for a few minutes after she sings something in her native tongue she's swinging out on an American tune with no apparent difficulty. In fact, the trio has a happy time of it until they get mixed up with a nasty bunch of nearby-island warriors who have a quaint conviction that all white people should be tossed to the crocodiles. They are about to follow through on their notion when a volcano fortunately wipes them out, and a rescue boat arrives to pick up the three principals.

Miss Lamour and Mr. Milland are on familiar ground in this sort of thing, and they play their roles effectively. Lynne Overman supplies welcome comedy, and J. Carroll Naish is a villainous heavy. Two of the best performances, however, are turned in by Jiggs, who plays Gaga, the chimpanzee, and the unnamed lion cub who portrays Meewah. Directed by George Archainbaud.—Paramount.

★★ Judge Hardy's Children

The Hardy family is still going strong, though we prefer them in their native habitat rather than Washington, D. C. The Judge is called to the capital on political business in this picture. Though he thinks it a fine idea for himself and his wife to have one trip to themselves, it ends up, of course, with the children tagging along and stirring up more trouble than is their custom. If you've seen former "Judge Hardy's Children" pictures, you can figure out for yourself that the children are terrific in this one. And very entertaining, it goes without saying.

The amusing Mickey Rooney is perfectly cast as the freckled adolescent son, and Cecilia Parker does an excellent job with the role of his big sister who "goes sophisticate" all of a sudden, much to Mickey's disgust and the family's amusement. Lewis Stone, as Judge Hardy, is an understanding and unbelievably patient father, bringing to his role all the incomparable Stone charm.

Another player we can't wax too enthusiastic about is Fay Holden as the wife and mother, but we'd like to throw in a word of praise for a new member of the cast, Jacqueline Laurent, who plays Mickey's French gal. She's pretty as a picture and shows every sign of being material for bigger and better roles. It's all good family film fare, though even the family could probably do with a little less moralizing. Directed by George Seitz.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

(Continued on page 112)

"There's Always a Woman" and Melvyn Douglas discovers she'll bear watching if it's Joan Blondell.

FROM HOLLYWOOD ...Sanitary Protection without pads, pins, belts

From Hollywood, world style center, comes the modern method of sanitary protection! Holly-Pax affords invisible sanitary protection, banishing telltale pads and belts. A highly absorbent cotton tampon worn internally, Holly-Pax can't chafe and is so comfortable its presence is not felt. Because it absorbs internally, there is no possibility of odor. Its low cost of 25c for a complete month's supply makes it the most economical form of protection. Ask for Holly-Pax at department, drug and five and ten cent stores. Or send coupon for introductory package.

NO DANGER OF ODOR

UTTERLY INVISIBLE

NO CHAFING

holly-Pax

THE WIX COMPANY M68
Minneapolis, Minnesota, or Hollywood, California
For the enclosed 10c (stamps or coin) send me regular size package of Holly-Pax under your special offer.
Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

Don't Let a Smart Appearance Run Out on You

The minute a run appears in your stocking—smartness flies out of the window. That's why thousands of well dressed women carry RUN-R-STOP in their purse. One drop stops a run permanently. Will not wash out. Ask for it at drug, chain, department and shoe stores. Only 10c complete with purse vanity. 10c

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping as advertised therein

RUN-R-STOP

NEW FREE OFFER —we want you to try BATH-O-MILK Camille's new real milk beauty bath that will make you lovelier—give you new allure. Send 10c for BATH-O-MILK and we'll also send FREE handy purse-size case of Nail White in new, convenient form. Address Dept. M.

CAMILLE INC., 49 E. 21st Street, N. Y. C.

NEARLY NATURAL

(Continued from page 29)

If the proverbial good fairy appeared offering three wishes there is nothing for which Deanna would ask.

"Absolutely nothing," she told me.

"She is satisfied with the simple things," her mother said. "A dollar gift makes her happy."

"The family handles my money," Deanna explained. "I don't even get an allowance. I just ask for what I want. It would be too much of a nuisance to keep track of an allowance. I haven't the time."

Indeed, if there is a rift in her horizon it is this matter of time. If President Roosevelt would somehow change our normal, old-fashioned twenty-four-hour day into thirty-six, life would be pleasanter for Miss Durbin. She has so much to do.

There is the tutor who travels with her. "I keep up my studies, you know."

There is the little matter of French lessons. "And I've got to learn even more languages if I'm ever to sing at the Met."

And there are the radio rehearsals plus the arduous learning of new picture roles.

"I don't know which part I liked best. It's like having several friends and liking each one for a totally different reason."

One of the major tragedies involved in having too little time and too much to do is that Deanna, try as she may, cannot keep up her former school friendships.

"The girls still telephone and come over to the house, but we are gradually drifting apart. I've had to substitute new friends—mostly the grown-ups around the studio. But I will say this, all the old people act young. I guess the nice ones are young inside.

"They're always sending me funny presents. All during one picture we pretended we were gangsters and kept using that phrase, 'Regards from the mob,' so Bruce Manning, one of our writers, sent me an enormous flashlight." She giggled.

EVEN at this age of fifteen, she has learned the meaning of nerves.

"I sleep like a top, even on a train, but I get tense before singing a new number. I guess that's natural. I lost four and a half inches around the waist while we made 'Mad About Music.'"

When she is being formal for the interviewer, Deanna speaks of Eddie Cantor as Mr. Cantor. But, as we became more friendly and "less for the press" she lapsed into "Uncle Eddie."

"I owe everything to him," she said, nodding towards the stage where Cantor was busy rehearsing his radio act.

Theirs is a unique friendship, Eddie's and Deanna's. Besides aiding her career, Eddie has helped Deanna over the hard spots. The spots another impresario, solely interested in the theatre, might never notice. Spots like that time in Boston when Deanna, not yet earning big money, was making a personal appearance.

"My bag was packed and in the car that waited outside the theatre. We planned to leave immediately after the show. But when the performance was over, we discovered the bag had been stolen, and in it was my new winter coat."

It was "Uncle Eddie" who immediately bought Deanna another coat, "Uncle Eddie," who, through his close association with his own five daughters, knows what a brand new winter coat, with fur collar, can mean to a young lady in her teens.

We were sitting in the darkened theatre; Deanna twisted a lock of hair. It is rich brown hair, straight at the top, curly at the ends, a soft and youthful coiffure.

"A permanent?" I asked.

"No," she smiled. "Nearly natural."

I immediately thought what a perfect simile this was, certainly a fitting description of Deanna Durbin and her life. Here she sat, surrounded by a mama, a tutor and a manager. The latter constantly interrupting us with, "Don't sit in a draft, Deanna," or "Here, put this coat over your shoulders, you mustn't catch cold." At the same time they may have privately been admonishing her to be natural.

This is no sob story. For all I know Deanna's youth is just as pleasant and far more interesting than the average young girl's yet, be natural, be natural. A kid who has lost the time to play with companions of her own age, to exchange secrets, found mysterious clubs and swap sandwiches at lunch hour. Be natural. A kid, who daren't sneeze. Be natural. A kid, who, but a few short years back must have worn rompers, and now, when she thought this interviewer wasn't looking, quickly blackened her eyebrows with the little brush she carries in her purse. Be natural. Why it's a miracle that the girl has turned out as natural as she is, for Deanna Durbin appears as nearly natural as any human could be under those circumstances.

Certainly, she is far more natural than young Master Freddie Bartholomew, who once at a Vallee broadcast, floored Rudy, to say nothing of myself, with his unaccountable manly poise.

And certainly, she is far more natural than Bobbie Breen, who, all during our interview, could be seen parading up and down the aisles, greeting various radio executives with the ease and suavity of an experienced, old-hand master of ceremonies.

Let's go to Mexico! Helaine Moler looks as tho' she could make a brief holiday there plenty exciting.

No, Deanna, thank goodness, resembles none of her contemporaries. Instead, when she spied the radio executives, she quickly whispered, "I can never remember their names. I meet so many."

That whisper was interrupted by a call to the stage for a microphone rehearsal.

"I'm singing 'Smoke,'" she explained. "That's 'Smoke Gets In Your Eyes.' You have to abbreviate in this business."

And she was off, running down the aisle, a fifteen-year-old with a fifteen-year-old's run, only to change before my eyes as she stood upon that stage, and sang with an adult fire, "They asked me how I knew, if my true love was true."

I sat there marveling at this child of contradictions. One minute, unsophisticated, excitedly telling me that she collects match boxes and menus from the restaurants she visits. Another, almost world weary, as she admits that after she achieves that Metropolitan ambition, "I'll probably quit. I can't last forever."

All the while she is so thirsty for knowledge that although she has given up tennis and horse back riding and can find no time for dancing lessons, she reads continuously.

"I've just finished 'The Citadel.' I'm now on 'Northwest Passage.'"

And staring at her, standing up there on that stage, balancing herself in those little flat heeled sandals, I couldn't help remembering the words of a far better writer, Mr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who said it all so long ago and yet so well, words I keep recalling whenever I think of Deanna and her magic of being now child, now woman:

"Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet Womanhood and childhood fleet!"

That's Deanna Durbin.

"Tropic Holiday" is full of the most alluring damsels you ever saw if Dolores Casey is any example.

ACTUALLY COOLING ON YOUR SKIN . . . GREASELESS

New Odorono ICE goes on like a Vanishing Cream . . . checks underarm perspiration 1 to 3 days

IMAGINE the convenience and comfort! An ICE deodorant that is absolutely greaseless—and that checks perspiration at once!

Made on a new principle, the new Odorono ICE vanishes as you put it on! Leaves your underarm feeling cool and refreshed! And, because this new preparation is made to check perspiration, it keeps your underarm always dry—relieves you of all fear of odor and dampness for as much as 3 days.

And Odorono ICE has only its own clean, fresh odor of pure alcohol, which evaporates immediately. Just one more reason why so many women who have tried it prefer Odorono ICE!

With Odorono ICE so delightfully easy to apply, so effective and so sure—you need never have another moment's worry over perspiration odor or unsightly stains. Only 35¢ for the new Odorono ICE at any Toilet-Goods Department. Get a jar today!

● "Safe and effective—cuts down clothing damage, when used according to directions," says The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, after making intensive laboratory tests of Odorono Preparations.

*Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

*ODO-RO-NO ICE
COOLING—NON-GREASY

SEND 10¢ FOR INTRODUCTORY JAR

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. 6-E-8*, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 427, Montreal)
I enclose 10¢ (15¢ in Canada) to cover cost of postage and packing for generous introductory jar of Odorono Ice.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

YOU'LL "DYE" WHEN YOU READ THIS!

Even if you never dyed a dress before,—do it now and don't be timid . . . because Rit banishes uncertainty and is so simple to use it's really fun. Rit's new formula contains "neomerpin" which makes the fabric literally soak up the color . . . gives rich, luscious, flattering shades WITHOUT BOILING. Ask for Rit . . . and you'll "dye" laughing!

RIT TINTS & DYES

Never say "Dye"—say RIT!

BRIGHT TEETH MEAN A LOT TO ME! THAT'S WHY I MASSAGE MY GUMS WITH FORHAN'S—IT HAS A SPECIAL INGREDIENT FOR THE GUMS

She knows that it is vital to cooperate with her dentist at home!

Massage gums and clean teeth twice daily with Forhan's. It makes teeth brilliant, helps keep gums firm and healthy. For a trial tube, send 10¢ to Forhan's, Dept. 619, New Brunswick, N. J.

Forhan's DOES BOTH JOBS
CLEANS TEETH · AIDS GUMS

WHAT'S ALL THE SHOUTING FOR?

(Continued from page 31)

In New York he met and fell in love with Lillian Lamont. There never has been any other girl. When the movies took him, she got herself a job and a small apartment in Hollywood, so the width of the continent wouldn't divide them. Even Fred's reticence thawed in his joy at presenting her with an engagement ring. It was a small diamond. He still was not in the money. But it was the symbol of their love and he was proud of it. When company came he'd hover at her shoulder and inquire in his best offhand manner, "Shown them your ring, Lillian?"

Sorrow came to them in Lillian's long illness following their marriage. Their house was being built. Having a natural taste for interior decorating, Lillian chafed at her inability to supervise the details. Fred would dash back and forth with samples for her approval, and the moment the place was at all habitable, he had her carried in so she could lie out on her own sunporch.

A recent personal appearance trip to San Francisco reveals him perhaps as clearly as anything could. The San Francisco theatre gave five performances daily. They wanted Fred to appear at all five. "One," he said, firmly, "and heaven be thanked if I live through that."

A publicity man went with him—the same publicity man who, day in and day out through "True Confession," had battered his head against MacMurray's reserve in an effort to get material from him. The moment they were on the train away from the Hollywood atmosphere, "Fred was a different guy. He blossomed out, started burbling about a duckhunting trip he'd been on, and talked so well that he fascinated even me, who don't know a pickerel from a wild goose."

By the time they reached San Francisco, the P. M. had learned more about Fred than in all the weeks he'd spent at the studio. He'd learned that Fred was rabid about hunting and fishing, but that sports and the pictures didn't comprise his entire world; that an alert intelligence kept him abreast of his times; that, as a topic of discussion, he preferred the latest bulletins from Europe to his own latest triumph; in short, that he was a man like other men, with a mind more stimulating, more eager to be stimulated than most.

Arrived at the hotel, he first phoned Lillian. Then he called a friend of his mother's, then a cousin who worked at the Alameda airport. Then the press came trooping. Fred passed the ordeal with flying colors.

AS evening drew closer, however, he lost his sangfroid. "What'm I going to say?" he'd gasp at intervals. The P. M. offered a suggestion or two that didn't make Fred any better. Dinner was sent up. Fred eyed a chicken sandwich with distaste, picked it up, took a bite, laid it back on the plate and retired to his bedroom. At the theatre, he found himself a dark corner in the wings and sat there shaking. The P. M. stood silently by, waiting to push him out. Harry Owens, the orchestra leader, was making a polished little speech of introduction, an elegant gem that was bound to show Fred up worse than ever. The P. M. stole a glance at him. He was clammy-looking. Perspiration stood out on his brow.

"He'll never make it—he'll never get out to the middle of that stage," thought the P. M. wildly.

Harry Owens' eyes turned toward the wings. "Here's Fred MacMurray," he announced.

Fred walked out under his own steam. He spoke, and his voice was steady and his words made sense. The P. M. came out of his private bout with the tremors to discover that the words were not only making sense, but drawing laughter and applause. The audience liked Fred. Fred liked the audience. He talked to them for three or four minutes, as affably and naturally as if they were all his friends. Which they were by the time he got

John Barrymore, Gladys Swarthout and John Boles spend their rest time on the set playing 3-handed Casino. Is it that Mr. Barrymore needs watching or just that it is his turn to play? At any rate, he seems to be giving his hand a thorough studying.

Priscilla Lane and Wayne Morris did so many retakes on this scene for "Men Are Such Fools" that they learned to like it, and now it's part of their daily routine.

through, for they rose to their feet and cheered him lustily.

"When did you make up that speech?" the P. M. inquired in the cab later.

"Part of it while I was wringing my hands in the corner. The rest when I saw there wouldn't be any tomatoes to dodge." He was so pleased that he blurted out, "Gee, that was fun. I wish Lillian could have been there."

San Francisco was ready to turn itself over to him. The authorities begged him to stay and let them show him the town. He'd like to have stayed. But he'd told Lillian he would be home next morning, and home was where he was going to be.

Home is a structure of gray stone and white wood in Belair, green-roofed and green-shuttered, with no more pretentiousness than its owners. The seven or eight pleasantly furnished rooms create an atmosphere of warmth and intimacy. Lillian planned it all herself.

He pretends to a certain masculine scorn of what he calls their "doodads."

"How's the house furnished, Fred?"

"I dunno. Early American on the hoof or something."

"What color's the dining-room rug?"

"Looks plain red to me. Ask Lillian. She'll tell it to you fancy." It turned out to be Dubonnet.

Yet it may be noted that, when Lillian is showing the house to visitors, Fred is at her heels, gloating innocently if he thinks himself unobserved, turning nonchalant when somebody catches him at it.

Their most frequent companions are Taylor and Stanwyck, Ray Milland and his lovely wife, Muriel. The boys play blackjack while the girls knit.

When, out of a clear sky, MacMurray, the unknown, was cast opposite Colbert in "The Gilded Lily," his thoughts ran something like this: "Here's a great star, and here am I, a punk, and she won't want to work with me, and I'll mess the whole thing up." The first scene required him to take her arm, and walk down the street. His arm shook so violently that Claudette's shook with it.

Essentially, he's the same MacMurray. While he no longer trembles at the call of "Camera!" he'll never forget the time when he did. You may groan at the thought of extracting information from him. Be it said, however, it's the only thought connected with him that you do groan about.

Paul Lukas lends a helping hand

PAUL LUKAS
Favorite actor of stage and screen.

"AFTER A MATINÉE of my latest Broadway show, a friend brought his sister to my dressing room to see me . . .

"SHE WANTED TO BE an actress—was understudying the star in another play. She had talent, but . . ."

"GIRLS MUST LOOK their best to win success. Although pretty, her lips were rough and dry. When she asked my advice about her career . . .

"I TOLD HER that I thought she would benefit by using a special lipstick praised by many stage and screen beauties. Later she phoned me . . ."

HELLO, MR. LUKAS! LAST NIGHT I MADE A BIG HIT IN THE STAR'S ROLE! AND I GIVE CREDIT FOR MY PERFORMANCE TO THE KISSPROOF LIPSTICK YOU TOLD ME ABOUT. ITS BEAUTY-CREAM BASE KEEPS MY LIPS SOFT AND SMOOTH..GAVE ME CONFIDENCE BY MAKING ME LOOK MY BEST!

Kissproof Lipstick in 5 luscious shades at drug and dept. stores 50c
Match it with Kissproof rouge, 2 styles—Lip and Cheek (creme) or Compact (dry). Kissproof Powder in 5 flattering shades. Generous trial sizes at all 10¢ stores.

Kissproof
Indelible LIPSTICK and ROUGE

SCENARIO BY PAUL LUKAS

Portrait of a Lovely Lady.....

Boston debutante, lovely Nicole Goodlett, uses Marchand's Golden Hair Wash to keep her hair blonde and lustrous.

.....Who Stays Blonde with Marchand's

60% OF ALL WOMEN WERE BORN BLONDE!

Don't Let Time Darken Your Hair

Hair like spun gold...highlights and sunny tints that mean youth and loveliness...as refreshing as Spring—all the result of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash. Try Marchand's today. Restore and brighten the natural radiant shade of your hair. A scientific preparation designed solely to lighten and beautify all shades of hair, Marchand's improves texture of the hair and will not interfere with permanents.

A HINT TO FASTIDIOUS WOMEN

Make dark hair on arms and legs unnoticeable with Marchand's Golden Hair Wash. Marchand's lightens the color of superfluous hair...blending it to your natural skin tones. Simple . . . safe . . . odorless . . . no regrowth problems.

MARCHAND'S
GOLDEN HAIR WASH
AT ALL DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

RUNNING AWAY FROM IT ALL

(Continued from page 39)

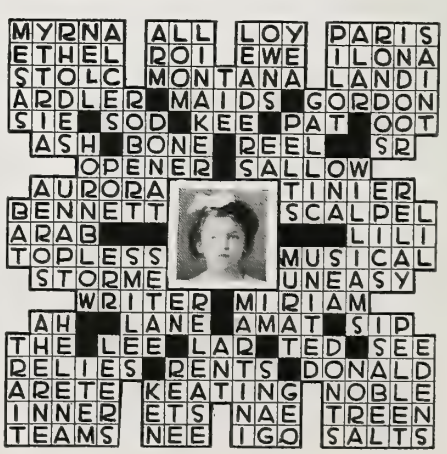
re-presented in current accounts of Mr. Astaire's glamor and charm. Let Astaire see one of these to-be-printed accounts, however, and he insists upon deleting all references to his past.

But when Astaire really reveals his escapist tendencies is when he runs from his fans. His pet stunt, when traveling to a destination where his arrival has been heralded in advance, is to hide himself in the back of his station wagon. Then, before fans are aware of what a precious load the insignificant looking car is carrying, he jumps out agilely and runs.

Of course, antics such as these are not serious and do not affect, in the slightest, Mr. Astaire's ability as a performer. They merely make him seem silly.

Miriam Hopkins had a regular field day with the New York press recently. At first, she refused to see anybody.

Later, suddenly and agreeably, she informed her representative that she would be happy to devote her last day in town to meeting the press. Accordingly, the time was booked, and appointments staggered at half hour intervals through the day.



Came the morning and Miss Hopkins as suddenly decided she couldn't take it after all. But neither could she bring herself to break her decision to anybody. She kept it a secret and just ducked. All day long the Hopkins doorbell rang regularly each half hour as eager reporters mounted her doorsteps, and sadly trod down them again. Where Hopkins was, nobody knew.

SYLVIA SIDNEY shows fleet feet and runs away from it all whenever she wants to, which is often. She, of course, has no repressions about not taking it on the chin and as a result of some of her actions can safely be nominated as Hollywood's Tantrum Girl.

For example, when she refused to have her picture taken upon arrival in this country on the Berengaria, she told photographers flatly, "I don't feel like it and I won't." They got the pictures anyway which showed Sylvia pouting.

An amateur camera hound in California did the Gotham boys one better when he snapped her getting off the train in San Bernardino with an even more petulant look upon her dark face and sent the picture into a news service with the unkind caption: "Sylvia Sidney Arriving in San Bernardino Evidently Expecting to Meet Somebody Who Didn't Meet Her."

Solution to Puzzle on Page 12

Even California in the rain has its charms when Mary Carlisle comes along looking like this.

Aren't there any glamor girls who can take it? Aren't there some adults in the Hollywood lineup who have proved themselves under trying circumstances?

Certainly. There is Bette Davis, for one, who had to swallow about as bitter a pill as has been given to any star, when she was forced to return to work at her studio after suing the firm to get out of her contract.

Bette stuck out her chin and took the rap. She came back to Hollywood gracious and smiling. She said, "I've been beaten and I have to go back to work where I don't want to, but I am going to make myself like it."

The sequel to her display of sportsmanship was that her studio tried to show themselves equally big. They filled her dressing-room with flowers, gave her a much coveted picture and engaged Edmund Goulding to direct her.

Marlene Dietrich has a peculiar "off with their heads" manner of shifting responsibility. When she wants to run away from the consequences of an unfortunate action, she is apt to dump the responsibility in the lap of somebody less important than herself. For example, when —all on her own—she expressed herself indiscreetly to the press on conditions abroad, she blamed a poor press agent who certainly had had nothing to do with her speaking her piece. He couldn't stop her but he almost lost his job.

Where is this current epidemic of running away from it all, of not taking it on the chin, going to lead? Probably not anywhere! The bright stars will recover; the stupid won't, but meantime life will go on just the same.

FAY WRAY'S Beauty Method can bring you, too, a Glorious "Camera Skin"

The beauty cream of young Hollywood Stars is Germ-Free—helps keep skin clear of blemishes

LIKE many glamorous film stars, Fay Wray has a simple beauty program to thank for her radiant "Camera Skin". First, nourishing foods and plenty of rest. Second, daily use of Woodbury's Cold Cream.

Her beauty cream retains its germ-free purity as long as it lasts. On the skin, itself, Woodbury's inhibits germ-life, thus lessens the risk of blemishes and faults.

The soothing oils in Woodbury's Cold Cream help give the skin the softness of velvet. And skin-stimulating Vitamin D enlivens the skin, speeds up its breathing.

Why not put Fay Wray's beauty program to work for your complexion? Woodbury's Cold Cream only $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢.

Woodbury's Germ-Free Cold Cream

FAY WRAY in the Universal picture "The Jury's Secret", with Kent Taylor. She says: "The clearer the skin, the brighter the star. Besides cleansing, one's skin deserves its own beauty diet. Woodbury's Cold Cream is part of my skin's daily diet."

Helps guard from blemishes
Cleanses the pores thoroughly—Stimulates —Contains skin-stimulating Vitamin D
Overcomes dry skin

Send for Trial Tubes of Woodbury's Creams

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 6790 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario

Please send me trial tubes of Woodbury's Cold and Facial Creams; 7 shades of Woodbury's Facial Powder; guest-size Woodbury's Facial Soap. I enclose 10¢ to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

It is hard to believe that
Feminine Hygiene

can be so dainty, easy and Greaseless

UT IT IS TRUE. Zonitors, snow-white, antiseptic, greaseless, are not only easy to use but are completely removable with water. For that reason alone thousands of women now prefer them to messy, greasy suppositories. Entirely ready for use, requiring no mixing or clumsy apparatus. Odorless—and ideal for deodorizing. You'll find them superior for this purpose, too!

• More and more women are ending the nuisance of greasy suppositories, thanks to the exclusive new greaseless Zonitors, for modern feminine hygiene.

There is nothing like Zonitors for daintiness, easy application and easy removal. They contain no harmful drugs — no greasy base to melt or run. Zonitors make use of the world-famous Zonite antiseptic principle favored because of its antiseptic power combined with its freedom from "burn" danger to delicate tissues.

Full instructions in package. $1 for box of 12—at all U. S. and Canadian druggists. Free booklet in plain envelope on request. Write Zonitors, 3609, Chrysler Bldg., New York City.

Each in individual glass vial.

Zonitors
FOR FEMININE HYGIENE
A Zonite Product

Curls
AND LOTS OF THEM Say BEAUTY
EXPERTS!

Use DR. ELLIS' WAVE SET to give yourself a smart spring hair-dress! Dr. Ellis gives you a lovely, lasting wave. It leaves your hair soft and beautiful. Dries quickly . . . never flakes. Sold everywhere—get a bottle today!

• Beauty Hint! Use Dr. Ellis' Brilliantine to add lustre to your hair!

Dr. Ellis Sales Co., Inc., 1125 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. (Canadian Office: Toronto, Ontario).

Get a Beautiful Wave with—

ONLY 10¢ HIGHER IN CANADA

DR. ELLIS' WAVE SET

AT ALL 5 & 10's AND DRUG STORES

FANNY'S FOLLIES

(Continued from page 37)

well, she had the privilege of skinning her knees on the pavement of the next block, then.

Her natal day was October 29th. But what year? You can only guess. Fanny, woman-like, isn't telling. And your guess may be five years out of the way, even taking into account the number of years she has been a star and—a mother. She started young.

Tall, she has a non-matronly figure, the vitality of a six-day bicycle rider, and a face too mobile for the years ever to have a chance to imprint themselves there. She is practically as young as Baby Snooks.

Her parents were Charles and Rose Borach, whose closest approach to the stage, up to the advent of Fanny, had been two seats in the gallery. They suspected almost immediately that they had produced the world's most irresistible mimic, this being a common failing of parents, the world over. But they never had a chance to rid themselves of the suspicion. It grew as their offspring grew. Until, finally, Rose Borach agreed with her persistent problem-child that she "ought to be on the stage."

Not that Fanny was a problem-child after the manner of Baby Snooks. Not that she lacked imagination. She had too much of it.

"I hated school. And school hated me. Ask me to spell 'cat' today, and I couldn't tell you. I never was in any one school long enough to find out. Those I didn't run away from, I was thrown out of. You couldn't print some of the things I did to get thrown out. They'd give the younger generation ideas. And the younger generation has enough ideas already, without starting any more trouble."

One morning she was dodging a large flat-footed gent in a blue coat with brass buttons. She saw an open door with pitch-darkness beyond. Instinct told her that way lay escape. She scurried through the door into the darkness. It was a theatre, getting a morning airing before the day's performances. She hid under some seats until paying customers began to arrive. Then she took a seat herself. She discovered show business. And her eyes popped.

It was a ten-twent'-thirt' variety theatre, rowdy and lowbrow. But to Fanny, who had never seen any drama except the turbid drama of life in the slums, never heard any dialogue except the many-accented clamor of the Ghetto, this was a new and wondrous world. An exciting and challenging world, in which you stood a chance of getting applauded by somebody besides your family—who laughed at you, even when you were serious.

She went back. She discovered other theatres that aired out in the mornings. She relived every show in mimicry.

THEN I heard about Amateur Nights. They had 'em, even in those days. That's how I started. We were living in Newark, New Jersey, then. I was thirteen—tall and scrawny, a scarecrow in skirts. I had never seen a musical show, but somebody told me that scouts for musicals sometimes went to these Amateur Nights. I'd never had a voice lesson in my life, and I didn't know music was written in 'keys.' The only keys I had ever heard of were door keys. But I went out there singing—a little number entitled 'When You Know You're Not Forgotten by the Girl You Can't Forget.'"

She hummed a few measures. "I guess the audience thought I was starving to death or somebody in my family had died. They gave me first prize."

Fanny went looking for other Amateur Night worlds to conquer. She won more first prizes. And her luck held when her family moved to Brooklyn, then to New York. On occasion, she invaded the Bronx, famed even then for its own individual cheer. But the Bronx gave Fanny only more first prizes.

"I thought I was pretty good." Fanny raised her eyebrows, as a commentary on the self-deception of adolescence. "I kept pestering Mom to let me quit school and go on the stage. Then one day I saw an ad in the paper. A woman—we'd better skip the name, though she's probably using another one now—was offering stage careers to 'new beginners.' Not just beginners. New beginners. That was me. Mother and I went down to see her.

"This woman said she could make a great actress out of me for two hundred and fifty dollars. We talked a couple of hours. She finally said she could make a great actress out of me for thirty-five dollars." Fanny grimaced, sardonically. "So we signed up. For thirty-five dollars I was going to be a great actress. Not only that. I was going to have 'some wonderful clothes.' Who could doubt it? This genius promised.

"She tells me to report at her hotel for rehearsals the next Monday. I report, and I don't see anybody else there. This goes on for a week. Then I say something about the 'wonderful clothes.' Oh, she's so glad I reminded her. She'll measure me for them. So she measures me for another week.

"I don't know why all this is happening. I don't know she's drumming up more customers. All I know is: I'm not becoming a great actress. But the week after, when I go back, I find a room full of performers. We're going to put on a play called 'The Ballad Girl'—with rented costumes.

"We open in some little town in Pennsylvania. (I never thought I'd forget the name of that burg!) We make up by candlelight. And before we can use the dressing-rooms, we have to take an afternoon to clean them. I mean I have to take an afternoon to clean them.

"I know by this time that I'm not the leading lady. My big-hearted benefactress promises me my turn is coming, in the next play. Meanwhile, I have my doubts about my costume. It's a yellow cheesecloth dress—cheesecloth, so help me—that comes up to here." Fanny tapped her thigh. "I make my first entrance on the stage as a great dramatic actress like this." She rises to illustrate. Her eyes register coy terror. Both knees are bent in a semi-crouch, and both hands are frantically tugging downward at her skirt.

"We're living at a boarding house. That night, the landlady's daughter knocks on my door, and says, 'Oh, you were grand. But why did you walk around like that?'" Fanny illustrated again, with devastating effect. "'That dress,' I tell her. 'I felt like I was walking in the nude.'

"I have some little diamond rings and earrings. My great dramatic teacher gets those away from me—'as a loan.' But we can't afford the boarding-house, even after she hocks those. We have to move to a broken-down hotel. Nobody's coming to our show. So Mrs. So-and-So says we'll put on a new one, 'The Royal Slave.' And

I'm to be given 'a big important part.'

"She discovers I can sew. So she puts me to work on a fancy Spanish gown. I'm up all night, sewing. And what do I get to wear? A bandana around here"—she indicated her chest—"and here"—her hips—"and that same yellow cheesecloth dress. I wear the yellow cheesecloth in my Big Dramatic Scene.

"This is the scene in which my cruel stepmother forces me into a matrimony worse than death. We need a bridal veil. So Mrs. Great-Dramatic-Teacher helps herself to a little net curtain in the hotel. My big moment arrives. Here I am, standing outside the door in the scenery, waiting for my cue. I'm so excited, I forget the door has to open toward me. I hear my cue, and I push the door. It goes about this far"—she held her hands a foot apart. "What to do? I've had my cue. I've got to get out on that stage, somehow. I can't hold up the show. So I start squeezing through that opening. Me, in my yellow cheesecloth dress and fake wedding veil. This is a very intense scene, mind you. Well, I finally make it. But by that time the audience is screaming itself to death with hysterics.

"And that isn't all. After the show, I find the hotel manager waiting outside for me. He has recognized his curtain, and he wants his curtain.

"In 'The Royal Slave,' the villain meets a gruesome end. He is swallowed by an alligator. The next night, I'm the alligator. I wear the alligator's upper jaw over my right arm, and the lower jaw over my left arm, and when the villain takes his fall, I reach up the two jaws where the audience can see them, and clamp them together. I'm lying on my elbows behind a low piece of scenery. I lie there twenty minutes. I work up a big sore on each elbow. But does anybody care? Mrs. So-and-So tells me, 'You were wonderful! So realistic! Nobody else could possibly do it like you!'" Fanny chortled, grimly amused by the memory of that dismaying flattery.

I WAS tired of the deal I had been getting—sure. But I was only fourteen, and I wanted to be an actress. Maybe I'd get a chance yet. I stuck. Two weeks went by, and nobody saw any money. The show had closed. Mrs. Great-Dramatic-Teacher said she was waiting for money from New York. Then we'd go on to another town, and change our luck.

"The hotel had a writing desk in the lobby, with a mirror above it. One night I was sitting there, writing my mother what a great success I was. In the mirror, I saw Mrs. So-and-So and her boy-friend tiptoeing past the door, carrying their luggage. They were jumping the show. Another girl and her mother and I followed them—to the railroad station. There wasn't any use going back after our bags. There wasn't anything in them. Mrs. So-and-So had got it all. So we hid till the train came in. Then we boarded the back end of the car they boarded. When the conductor asked for our tickets, we pointed up front and said, 'They'll pay for us.' Were we happy!

"The girl and her mother didn't have anywhere to go in New York, so I took them to my house, and they lay around for weeks, until my mother finally put them out. The next time I went on the road my mother said, 'Good luck, and goodbye, and don't bring no more good-for-nothings home with you.'"

Fanny, ever since her encounter with that phoney woman dramatic teacher has been different from most other women. It cured her of bargain-hunting.

"Before I did the burlesque show, though, I worked in a motion picture

JUST A HOME GIRL until she changed that Misfit Makeup

"I'll stay with the children, Mrs. Brown. I never have any dates."

"Frankly, Mary, if I were you I'd correct that misfit makeup."

To herself: "Bless Mrs. Brown and her tip about makeup."

PERHAPS YOU, TOO, are missing out on fun by wearing misfit makeup . . . unrelated cosmetics that clash, that can't possibly look well together . . . or on you. Yet it's so unnecessary . . . with the new Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup. For here's . . .

MAKEUP THAT MATCHES . . . face powder, rouge, and lipstick . . . eye makeup, too . . . in color-harmonized sets. And here's makeup that matches you . . . for it's keyed to your true personality color, the color that never changes, the color of your eyes.

NOW YOU CAN BE SURE your skin, your hair, your eyes look their loveliest, because you're following Nature's color plan for you! Stage and screen stars, beauty editors, fashion experts approve Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup. Thousands of women who have tried it agree it's the way to immediate new beauty.

THE PRICE IS LOW. Start now to build your matched set. Buy that lipstick . . . or rouge, face powder, eye shadow, or mascara . . . in Marvelous Eye-Matched Makeup . . . only 55¢ each (Canada 65¢). Your drug or department store recommends this makeup, advises:

If your eyes are
- BLUE . . . . wear DRESDEN type
- GRAY . . . . wear PATRICIAN type
- BROWN . . wear PARISIAN type
- HAZEL . . . wear CONTINENTAL type

STEPPING OUT TONIGHT? Don't risk misfit makeup! Be lovelier . . . be happier . . . in makeup that matches . . . makeup that matches you!

COPYRIGHT 1938, BY RICHARD HUDNUT

MARVELOUS EYE MATCHED MAKEUP by Richard Hudnut

Try it! Mail coupon NOW for Marvelous Makeup, keyed to your eyes! See how much lovelier you'll be with makeup that matches . . . and matches you.

RICHARD HUDNUT, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Avenue, New York City MM-6-38

I enclose 10 cents to help cover mailing costs. Send my Tryout Kit of Marvelous Makeup . . . harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick for my type, as checked below:

✓ My eyes are
☐ Blue ☐ Brown
☐ Gray ☐ Hazel

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

welcome NONSPI

Thousands of women with sensitive skin are now using a full-strength deodorant... For Nonspi is non-irritating when properly applied. Now Nonspi goes on more easily, dries more quickly... and all underarm odor and moisture vanish, for 2 to 5 days! Sold at all drug and department stores—35c and 60c. Slightly higher in Canada.

SAFE Deodorant
—Stops Perspiration

The Nonspi Company
113 West 18th St., N. Y. C.

Please send special trial bottle of Nonspi. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin).

*Name*_____
*Street*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____

MS66

NEW TIPS TO BEAUTY

★FACIAL REFRESHMENT

Take a Twin Sisters Cleansing Pad from its slim compact and enjoy the grandest "minute facial" you ever had! Best of all, you can have one anytime, any place!... especially after shopping, or sports; at the office or dance! Each pad is saturated with a special lotion non-drying to the skin. Leaves face cleansed, refreshed, soft and toned for new make-up. 15 Pads 10c. Refills of 60 Pads, 25c.

Twin Sisters
CLEANSING PADS

★BEAUTIFUL FINGER NAILS

So easy... so simple... to remove nail polish! Just dab ten nails with one Twin Sisters Remov-O-Pad and off comes enamel, slick and quick! Lubricates nail and cuticle to prevent peeling or cracking. Daintily perfumed; non-drying. Convenient—nothing to spill or waste. Try them once and you'll never go back to the old way. 15 Pads 10c.

Twin Sisters
REMOV-O-PADS
Removes Nail Polish

AT MOST 5c AND 10c STORES

If unobtainable, send direct. (Add 5c to each item for postage and packing.) Clark-Millner Co., 666 St. Clair St., Dept. 60-F Chicago. Sent only in U. S. A.

house on Second Avenue. I didn't do much. Just sang illustrated songs, played the piano, painted ad signs, sold tickets while the ticket girl ate, collected them while the doorman ate. The ticket girl saw an ad in the paper for chorus girls for a new Cohan and Harris show. I walk in, and Sam Harris gives me a contract for twenty-three dollars a week.

"I still hadn't seen a musical show, but here I was in one without knowing my left foot from my right. And I was supposed to dance! I thought to myself, 'If he'd give me this much as a dancer—what would he give if he heard me sing?' The first thing we had to do was a song number. I started holding onto the last note when everybody else let go. He barked out: 'Whoever's holding those notes so long, stop it!'

"Now came the dancing. He got one look at me, and said, 'Back to the kitchen for you!' I was fired. I went downstairs to the dressing-room and cried and cried. But no one came, no one cared. I ran out of tears, and started wetting my eyes from the faucet—and still no one came. I went home and told my mother, 'They said I was too thin.' I said to myself, 'Maybe you're not good enough for Broadway.' So what? So I wasn't going to break my heart. I went into burlesque (Hurtig and Seaman's).

"The company was going on the road. I filled my bag with all the clothes I had. I'd offer one girl a shirtwaist if she'd teach me one routine, and another girl a chemise if she'd teach me another routine. I was down to one skirt and one shirtwaist—well, practically—by the time I found out how to order my feet around.

"I was in the last row of the chorus. That wasn't enough for me. I worked up to the second row, then to the first row. That wasn't enough, either. Every show had a chorus girl contest. I kept winning. They made me understudy to the soubrette.

"She was a big, strong Italian girl. 'She'll never get sick' I said to myself. That's what she thought, too. But what should happen—accidents again, you see—but she develops a big abscess behind her ear. It gets as big as a grapefruit, but she won't give up. She covers it with a big pink bow. The thing hurts, but she's afraid to let me play the part. Then, one night in Cincinnati, she's just coming in the stage door when the abscess breaks. The soubrette is on next. They push me on, all excited and wild-eyed. But the people applaud, they keep calling me back. When the soubrette gets well, she's in the chorus, and I'm up front.

"After that, I'm the headliner at the Columbia Burlesque House in New York. I'm very ambitious. I'm a ballad-singer. Then I try an imitation of Joe Welch, Jew comedy, with a derby pulled down over my ears—and I almost get the hook. I try other characters. I know all the dialects, after the Ghetto. The audience begins to go for them. But my first real hit in dialect is—you guessed it—an accident. I go to Irving Berlin's publishing house for a couple of new songs. Irving sings me 'Yiddle on the Fiddle' and 'Sadie Salome.' He sings with a Jewish accent. I sing them the same way, just to see what will happen. They bring down the house.

"That was where Ziegfeld discovered me. Just about the way the movie had it. Only there was a different reason why I didn't believe 'em when they said Ziegfeld was outside and wanted to see me. A few weeks before, a woman named Miss Ziegfeld had been down. She had 'a great song' she wanted me to sing. Afterward, I showed her card around, with my thumb over the first part of her name. 'See? Ziegfeld's after me!' So when they said Ziegfeld was outside, sure, I thought they were kidding me.

Gary Cooper referees while Sheila Darcy and Edward Everett Horton have a spirited game of "Tit-Tat-Toe" on the set of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

"He told that he found me on a street corner in the Ghetto, selling papers. He knew I had once—and he thought it was a good publicity angle. 'From newsgirl to Follies.' I didn't care what they thought. I was in the Follies!

"I made my first Broadway hit—this was probably another accident—with a coon song, 'Lovey Joe.' I don't know what made me sing it. Nerve, I guess. But coon ballads and I sort of got along.

"I was with Ziegfeld fourteen or fifteen years, and never had a written contract after the first one. It was all verbal. He was a wonderful man. I would say I'd like to try a number. 'All right,' he'd say, 'we'll try it.' I can't rehearse. I can't get up in a room and act. I have to have an audience. But I could go into Ziegfeld's office and play as if I were on the stage. He was as good as a standing-room-only house."

Fanny wasn't any too popular with some of the other Glorified Girls. But she didn't let that worry her. She had more important things to think about.

"They hated me. They called me 'the curbstone comic.' I wanted to be everything, do everything. That was all right, as I look back now. I was learning things. Dancing, for example. That came in handy when I wanted to burlesque 'The Dying Swan' and 'Spring Song.' You can't burlesque something until you know how to do it straight.

THE smartest thing I ever did was to notice that all the big-timers were natural. That was why they were big-timers, sure of what they were doing. You don't have to be conceited to be sure of yourself. Just honest with yourself. And that goes in any life, not only theatrical life.

"Your audience does what you do. If you're comfortable, they're comfortable. If you work hard, they sweat, too.

"Do you want to know the most uncomfortable performance I ever gave? In 'The Great Ziegfeld.' I can be comfortable every time, if you give me a character to play. I've always played characters, except that once. They told me, 'You're not going to play a character. You're going to play Fanny Brice.' I didn't know where to start. 'What am I like?' I wanted to know. If I played Fanny Brice the way Fanny Brice is away from audiences I'd be playing straight. And I couldn't be comical unless I was acting, playing a character. That's the hardest work I ever did in my life. In 'Everybody Sing,' that was different. I was a character. I had a better time, and audiences had a better time watching me.

"Funny thing. I don't remember anything tough about getting started. Nothing's ever tough when you're a beginner. Trying to get somewhere is too much fun. The tough part comes when you arrive—trying to stay there."

Despite her individual brand of clowning, she doesn't write her own material. The only thing she has written is the skit, "Mrs. Cohen at the Beach," which has grown to a whole catalogue of Mrs. Cohen skits. Another surprising Brice admission: she isn't amazed at the success of her Baby Snooks, or Snooks' rivalry with Charlie McCarthy as the rage of the day, or the demand for a Baby Snooks comic strip, Baby Snooks dolls, Baby Snooks this, and Baby Snooks that.

"I'm amazed that it has taken this long. I put her on the air five years ago for the first time. I've always had her up my sleeve. And speaking of Snooks"—she pronounced it Schnooks—"that was something else that just happened. When I was a kid, I always wanted to play Topsy in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' Now I'm getting it out of my system. Snooks is just a white Topsy. Anything that Snooks does or says, Topsy might do or say."

CONSIDERING that she is a comedienne, America's top comedienne today, her biggest hit on the stage could almost be considered an accident. She made that hit with the song, "My Man."

"I always wanted to do a 'sad' song—just to prove I could do something serious. Ziegfeld had this song. A semi-operatic star was going to sing it. Then, one day he said to me, 'You know, Fanny, I think you could do that song.' I don't know what made him say it; he probably didn't, either. I said, 'You think I could? Just give me the chance!' The first night I sang it I died a thousand times. I was afraid they'd laugh when I got up to be sad. When they didn't that was the biggest thrill of my life."

Fanny's poignant singing of "My Man" touched the heart-strings of America. For behind the scenes, Fanny at that time was suffering poignantly. Her man, Nicky Arnstein, the father of her two children, was in serious trouble—trouble that finally wrecked their marriage, despite her loyalty. All that is a faraway memory now, something Fanny does not mention. Proudly, she does talk of her two children, both with her in Hollywood, where, by the way, she hopes to stay. ("They'd better keep me. I've bought a house.")

"My boy Bill is sixteen. He paints, and I think he's really going places. I've always painted, still do. Time was when I didn't know whether I wanted to be a dressmaker, an artist or an actress. I thought the stage would probably be the most fun, and I could still paint and sew. My girl Frances—she's eighteen—hasn't made up her mind about her future. I don't think she'll be a singer. She can't carry a tune!"

Many things have happened to Fanny Brice. But happy marriage is not one of them. She has been married three times, divorced twice, and her third marriage, to Billy Rose, the theatrical producer, has recently been the subject of on-the-rocks headlines.

She told me, with a half-wistful, let's-make-the-best-of-it smile, "It takes courage to be a comedienne. You can't have success as a comedienne and have romance, too. No man ever fell in love with a woman for her sense of humor."

PORE-POCKED NOSE!

Watch the Pores on Your Nose! Largest Pores on Your Body—A Stern Test of Your Cleansing Methods

Gorgeous figure—lovely face—but the whole effect ruined by Pore-Pocked Nose! All because she carelessly permitted those large nose pores to fill up with dirt and waste matter and become coarse and unsightly!

You must keep these pores C-L-E-A-N! Not merely surface clean. You need that deep under-layer cleansing that penetrates the mouths of your pores and lifts out hidden dirt that may have accumulated for months. It is this dirt that causes trouble. It becomes embedded and grimy—may breed tiny skin infections or result in blackheads, bumps and coarse, rough skin!

Lady Esther Face Cream penetrates this under-layer dirt. It breaks up the embedded packs in the mouths of your pores and makes them easily removable. Just look at your cloth when you wipe Lady Esther Cream away. You'll be astounded at the amount of dirt that was hidden away! In just a short time your skin is glowingly clean and smooth—alive with vibrant freshness and beauty.

Make this Free Test

Let me prove, at my expense, that Lady Esther Cream will cleanse and soften your skin better than any method you have ever used. Just mail the coupon below and I'll send you a generous sample of Lady Esther Face Cream, free and postpaid. I'll also send all ten shades of Lady Esther Face Powder. Mail the coupon now.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard) FREE

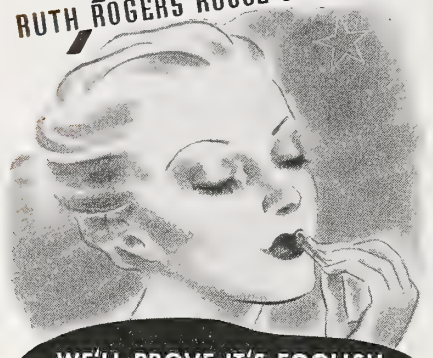
Lady Esther, 7110 West 65th Street, Chicago, Illinois (43)

Please send me your generous supply of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream; also ten shades of Face Powder, FREE and postpaid.



*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

Free A FULL SIZED RUTH ROGERS ROUGE OR LIPSTICK

WE'LL PROVE IT'S FOOLISH TO PAY MORE THAN 20c FOR ROUGE OR LIPSTICK

Because Ruth Rogers is sold only at F. W. Woolworth Co Stores, more of your money goes into beauty-giving ingredients, less into excessive selling costs. That is why smart women are saving as much as $20 a year by using Ruth Rogers Rouge, Lipstick and Related Beauty Aids. ✶ These same women have found Ruth Rogers offers a new approach to beauty at sensible prices. Now Ruth Rogers makes this startling free offer to prove to you that quality need not be expensive.

20¢ MADE IN HOLLYWOOD — Sold only at F. W. WOOLWORTH STORES

HOLLYWOOD'S Ruth Rogers ENDORSED RELATED AIDS TO Loveliness

Cleansing cream; tissue cream; face powder; skin lotion; astringent; liquid make-up.

FREE

Ruth Rogers, Box 287, Hollywood, California
Here are two 3c stamps to cover mailing—handling. Send me a regular-sized RUTH ROGERS Rouge ☐ OR Lipstick ☐ My complexion is: Blond ☐ Brunette ☐ Auburn ☐ Dark ☐

Name_____

Address_____ State_____ MM6

City_____

Hundreds of intimate candid camera shots of your favorites in the July Modern Screen

NEVER OFFEND! BE "SURE" OF YOUR BREATH

Use "Sure" the amazing new breath purifier that helps in romance, social contacts, business. Removes offensive breath odors from onions, garlic, tobacco, cocktails, etc. Just use one drop on the tongue and your breath will be sweet. Also removes odors from hands. Fits purse or pocket—sold everywhere on money-back guarantee.

GET YOURS FREE. WRITE SURE LABORATORIES
Dept. M1-847 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

THERE IS ONLY ONE "Sure" REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. BREATH PURIFIER

ONE DROP DOES THE TRICK! 10¢ WEEK'S SUPPLY

Sales Territories Still Open • Write at Once

BETWEEN YOU

An Ohio fan gives a spirited cheer for Danielle, the newest gal from across the way.

$5.00 Prize Letter
Don't Blame Hollywood!

When our movies relent and muster all their potent forces towards a picturization of the realistic tragedies inherent in the innumerable "Dead End" sections of our country; when they succeed in capturing the economic causes of crime; when they delineate for us graphically all the eloquent grimness of the lives of the poverty-stricken, stifled and enmeshed in an almost macabre environment; when Hollywood halts its musical extravaganzas, its grade B mediocrities to present a slice of life, our hats should be doffed!

But—and the pity of it—when our audiences manifest so pathetic a lack of understanding and appreciation of the tragedies of the lives unreeled before them; when they indulge in loud, abandoned guffaws at the "antics" of the embryonic gangsters in "Dead End"; when they fail to sense the tragic undertones that run through the youngsters' "capers;" when their only comments consist of "The kids were swell"; one senses the futility of any serious effort on Hollywood's part.

Is Hollywood, then, entirely to blame for the plethora of inconsequential movies that flicker across our movie screen?

—Fred Rosenberg, Brooklyn, N. Y.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Del Rio Can Take It

Oh you Candid Cam, are you mean to them there Hollywood gals! You sneak around and catch them shaking sand out of their eyes in the morning—truly not the best time to snap any gal, let alone a glamor gal. You invade their baths, their exercise routines, even their shampoos. You strip them of every shred of loveliness, every vestige of the beauty that thrills us poor everyday mortals on the screen. It's getting so a gal can't squirt grapefruit juice in her eye without the nation knowing about it!

Ah, but there is one, Cam, who resists all your efforts to distort. One whose beauty is so real that even you cannot find a flaw. She is Dolores Del Rio. We have yet to come upon a picture of her that looks like a cross between a scarecrow and a sideshow freak. Snoop and spy as you like, you cannot catch Del Rio in an ungainly pose, for the simple reason that she isn't ungainly.

You have met your Nemesis, Candid Cam. May we appoint you, Dolores Del Rio, Queen of the Candid Camera subjects!

—Mrs. John Allman, Buffalo, N. Y.

$2.00 Prize Poem
A Yell for Danielle

Ric-a-racquer! Fire cracquer! S'il vous plaît!
Let's raise a yell for the latest gal from across the way.
She can look dumb with more aplomb
Than simple simple Simone Simon.
Whieux? Yieux! Whieux? Yieux!
Whieux, Darrieux! Darrieux! Darrieux!

Tar-blood! Whack-thud! Cinema est égal!
They'll make you a queen of the silver screen if you can't act at all!
They'll harrieux and carrieux,
And after a while they'll burieux.
Whieux? Yieux! Whieux? Yieux!
Whieux? Darrieux! Darrieux! Darrieux!

Black! Red! Nuff sed! Vive le W. C.!
Another stooge from the Moulin Rouge to stimulate industry!
They've discovered your frame will add to your fame
But half you make the Feds will take.
If your husband hadn't accompaniedieux,
I think I'd like to marrieux!
Yes yieux, Darrieux, just yieux, yieux, yieux!

—Ray Williams, East Cleveland, Ohio.

$1.00 Prize Letter
A True Actor

One who earns his laurels should certainly be given opportunity to wear them, and to add to his collection of honors. I am referring to a fine and versatile actor—Spencer Tracy.

He used to play rather unsympathetic "tough guy" roles in pictures, and yet, he managed to steal a majority of the most dramatic scenes from the more well-known players whom he supported.

Soaring to starry heights as the fighting priest of "San Francisco", holding firm in "Big City" with Luise Rainer, and topping it all with his immortal performance as Manuel in "Captains Courageous," he must be given parts that are worthy of his superlative ability as a fine actor—and by "actor" I mean one who depends not on his handsome face but on his talent to put him across.

—Floy Wooten, Memphis, Tenn.

$1.00 Prize Letter
The Flynn Feud

Anne Park's "Slap in the Face for Errol Flynn" in the March issue of MODERN SCREEN made me furious, to say the least. Since you state your opinions so bluntly, Miss Park, here are mine!

Errol Flynn is undoubtedly the most natural star on the screen, a grand actor, and

'N' ME

Have you voiced your pet peeve or joy concerning moviedom? Nine cash prizes given every month!

The Errol Flynn feud continues as an irate young lady from Philadelphia speaks her piece.

one of the handsomest men I have ever seen. A little more of what you term "ego" would improve many actors—it is really just the self-assurance which makes all his movements easy and graceful. He impresses me as a most delightful person to know, and I envy anyone who has the privilege of being his friend.

As for his being domesticated, that's impossible! He is as much the rover as ever as he proved in his trip to Spain. He is all the more refreshing for it; his travels have given him more color and glamor than Taylor and Power could ever have.

As for his fights with Mrs. Flynn, whose business is it but their own? Because of his being in the limelight every scrap they have gets into the tabloids. His so-called slurs at womanhood? Ridiculous! He is noted above everything else for his gallantry.

Errol Flynn isn't half appreciated for what he is—he has brought to the screen color and verve that have been missing since Valentino. He has everything he wants in life plus the admiration of millions. You pity him? I envy him—Mary Slaughter, Philadelphia, Penna.

$1.00 Prize Poem

Char-Actors

When stars magnificently emote
According to their separate codes,
No lump arises in my throat,
I'm busy watching Erik Rhodes.

The heart-throb lies upon a mat
And passes out with gesture sportin',
While I am laughing with and at
The grimaces of E. E. Horton.

WRITE A LETTER—

WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

COURSE I'M YOUNG BUT "MIDDLE-AGE" SKIN ALMOST GOT ME!

READ THIS GIRL'S STORY!

WHERE'S BILL THESE DAYS? HAVE YOU TWO HAD A SPAT?

NO, BUT HE HASN'T TELEPHONED. AND THE LAST TIME WE WERE OUT TOGETHER, HE DID NOTHING BUT RAVE ABOUT JANE, AND HER "SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION"!

WELL, MEN ADORE LOVELY COMPLEXIONS—AND YOURS IS SO DRY, LIFELESS, COARSE-LOOKING LATELY! REGULAR "MIDDLE-AGE" SKIN! MAYBE IT'S THAT SOAP YOU'RE USING... WHY NOT CHANGE TO PALMOLIVE?

WHY WOULD PALMOLIVE MAKE SUCH A DIFFERENCE?

BECAUSE PALMOLIVE IS MADE WITH OLIVE OIL...A SPECIAL BLEND OF OLIVE AND PALM OILS, NATURE'S FINEST BEAUTY AIDS! THAT'S WHY IT'S SO GOOD FOR DRY, LIFELESS SKIN. IT SOFTENS AND REFINES SKIN TEXTURE! CLEANSES SO THOROUGHLY, TOO... LEAVES COMPLEXIONS RADIANT!

I'LL CHANGE TO PALMOLIVE RIGHT AWAY!

BILL RAVES ABOUT MY COMPLEXION, NOW THAT I USE ONLY PALMOLIVE, THE SOAP MADE WITH OLIVE OIL TO KEEP SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, YOUNG!

PALMOLIVE

ANY CHILD COULD KEEP A TOILET CLEAN AND PURE

No MORE scrubbing toilets. No more smelly disinfectants. You don't even touch the bowl with your hands. SANI-FLUSH is made scientifically to clean toilets.

Just dash a little in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet and that's all there is to it! Stains and spots vanish. Odors are banished. Germs are killed. The hidden trap that no amount of scrubbing can reach is purified. The bowl glistens like new. SANI-FLUSH can't injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

Be a FASHION MODEL

Attractive girls and women study Fashion Modeling the Hollywood Way. Professionals earn $25 to $100 weekly. Send 10c in stamps for booklet B to

ANNE ARDIS
Box 422 Hollywood, Calif.

How To Shampoo Blonde Hair to Keep It Golden and Lustrous

Blonde hair requires special care if you would preserve its lovely golden beauty. Even the most attractive light hair will fade or darken with age. To keep your hair charming and alluring, wash it with New Blondex, the amazing blonde hair Shampoo and Special Rinse. Costs but a few pennies to use and is absolutely safe. Used regularly, it keeps hair lighter, lovelier, gleaming with fascinating lustre, glorious highlights. Get New Blondex today. New combination package—shampoo with separate rinse—sold at all stores

When heroes battling hungry sharks
Require a practicing physician,
I'd have them buried by Ned Sparks,
That mirth-provoking, mad mortician.

You see, I'm not a Big League Fan,
Who totes an album seeking signers
And raves about some Greek God's "pan,"
I sing my praisies to the Minors.
—Catherine Delaney, New York City.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Barbara's Sincerity

Barbara Stanwyck is the most talented actress on the screen. She is so honest in portraying characters. No matter what part she is playing, she plays it with a sincerity that makes the audience feel with her. In "Stella Dallas" she played the title role so well that I lived through all her emotions with her.

I wonder how many of Hollywood's "glamor" girls would be willing to act as Barbara did in "Stella Dallas." Wouldn't they have left out the vulgar parts for fear they would cheapen themselves? Barbara didn't, and that is why, in my opinion, she is the only true actress that Hollywood has. —Clarence Buenger, Louise, Texas.

$1.00 Prize Letter
More Awards

Now that everyone else has done it, I take my turn to give the yearly awards:

To Franciska Gaal—For having the oddest-sounding last name in pictures.
To Loretta Young—Those clothes she wears would be reason enough for an award, but for her beauty which outshines theirs.
To Cesar Romero—For the surprise performance in "Happy Landing."
To Robert Taylor—For being such a good scout during all the fuss over him in New York and England.
To Don Ameche—For the most engaging smile and the most expressive voice.
To Claire Trevor—For becoming one of our favorites, in spite of what seems the concerted effort of the producers to keep her in "B" pictures.
To Tyrone Power—For having real talent and for not trying to hide it behind a load of boyish charm.
To Connie Bennett—For trying so hard to beat the temperament bugaboo by changing to a warm, likeable person.
To Clark Gable—For wearing old clothes and driving an old car when he wants to.
To Sonja Henie—For that cute nose.
—Janet Hope, West Los Angeles, Calif.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Type-casting

My little piece is about type-casting. I think that when a star becomes famous for his success in portraying a villain or a hero or a comedian, that he should always play that role. The audience becomes accustomed to seeing the player in that part and knows what to expect. However, lately the fashion seems to be to switch players. In one picture you find the actor playing a dyed-in-the-wool gangster and in the next, the reformer out to clean up the town.

For example, we are all accustomed to seeing Jack La Rue play the sinister menace. In "Captains Courageous" he was cast as the benign priest. And what happened? I saw the picture twice and, each time the scene where he comes on was flashed, the audience howled. The scene was a solemn one, but the audience just couldn't see Jack as a priest!

I think that Robert Montgomery wasn't the type for "Night Must Fall." He was good—yes. But in several scenes where he smiled, he had the same whimsical, good natured smile that made him famous—it was hardly the smirk of a killer.—G. Garnin, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Here are the players you voted tops in the Between You 'n' Me Questionnaire printed in February

Favorite actor, Nelson Eddy; actress, Jeannette MacDonald; Scarlett O'Hara, Miriam Hopkins; favorite screen star on the radio, Don Ameche; handsomest man, Robert Taylor; most beautiful girl, Loretta Young; favorite cowboy, Gene Autry; most promising newcomer, Marjorie Weaver; favorite child actor, Freddie Bartholomew; child actress, Shirley Temple. You would like to meet Nelson Eddy, like the double feature program, and want a Modern Screen life story of Irene Dunne. The best picture in 1937, "Stella Dallas;" and the worst, "The Bride Wore Red."

Little Jane Withers, Sixth Lady of the Box Office, shows you how much alike a star and her stand-in sometimes look. Kay Connors is on the right.

HOW TO WIN MEN AND INFLUENCE BACHELORS

(Continued from page 47)

sitting at home for several evenings with the good book. As an example: There are a heap of young men in this world similar to the worthless young husband portrayed in "Mannequin." Eddie—out for himself, figuring that any way he got what he wanted was okey doke. Fine—Eddie had a perfect right to figure that way, but his type is a dangerous playmate for little girls. What he needed was a nice selfish siren to take him over the hurdle. On the other hand, there's the type of young man Wayne Morris plays on the screen. Jimmy Stewart, too. Nice, honest, never glib and not very smooth, but never dumb, either.

If there is a William-Powellish sort of guy on your date list, you've probably been warned plenty by friend and family that he's "dangerous"—meaning that he has low designs on your virtue. I'm inclined to say pooh. What you haven't been warned against is that it is dangerous to try tricks on a man like this. He knows them all. He has had women throwing themselves at his head for so long that he may be pardoned for holding virtue in low esteem.

If he'll fall for anything, he'll fall for a brand new sort of attack, which really isn't an attack at all. By that I mean an attitude of honesty and sincerity, with just a pinch of live-and-let-live thrown in. Don't be coy. Don't pretend to be ignorant of matters which are perfectly understandable to you, and oppositely, don't pretend to be ineffably wise about matters which are Greek to you, just for the sake of impressing him. Beat him at his own game. He may make the statement, more likely imply it, that "you're a nice girl and I like you, but I'm not serious about this thing, you understand."

Answer him with "Sure—I'm so glad you feel that way." Imply that you, too, want to have some fun and enjoy some laughs, and maybe play-act at a little romancing, and when you're ready to call quits, you're going to call quits. Keep up this attitude, even if you suddenly find your heart doing flip-flops at the sound of his voice. It will keep him dialing your number for a while, and perhaps eventually he'll begin to figure, "There's a nice, comfortable girl to know. Wish I hadn't been quite so hard-boiled in my attitude toward her." Perhaps, when that time comes, he'll begin to change his attitude.

STOP hoping against hope where men are concerned. I think young girls are inclined to do this. Miss A. is intrigued with Mr. B. Mr. B. shows no inclination to return the compliment and no inclination to take up Miss A.'s time. So what does Miss A. do? Instead of common-sensibly gathering that he just is not interested, she tries to work out some involved muddle-headed idea in her mind that he's acting that way to make her jealous, or to play hard to get. Cross Mr. B. off your list, Miss A., and concentrate upon Mr. C.

Then there is the problem of the girl who is pretty, slim, well-groomed and guilty of none of the sins we're warned against in the more frank advertisements—and still the gents stay away in droves, or else they quaff a run-out potion after one date. Many's the letter I've received from young kids in this pickle, and the most common plaint is "Miss M., I never can think of anything to say. My face freezes into a sickly grin, I get tongue-tied—why, my hands actually get red from nervousness."

Now, now, what in the world is there about the male of the species which can scare a nice, intelligent girl into such a state? But I should talk! The first time a boy ever "took me home" from a party, I was so painfully embarrassed, I don't think I said two words. Yet I saw this chap every day of my life. We were in the same classes in high school. I could have asked, "Do you think we have any chance of beating Mt. Grange at football this year?" I could have said anything that I'd say naturally and comfortably to any body else. Men are just people. But there is sometimes the feeling that a gal must talk about different subjects with a man.

There are just a few, a very few, topics that are taboo in talking to a guy. Diet, your simply ducky doings with other fellers, catty remarks, chit-chat about clothes—such conversations are apt to be boring. But ask questions, start an argument, flatter a little, laugh a lot, say whatever pops into your head, without considering too much whether he'll approve.

But dear me, sirs, this is supposed to be a beauty article of a sort, isn't it? And that brings me to the big beauty and style news for Spring 1938. We're going ter-

ALWAYS GRAND FOR Flaky SKIN

Now—with the active "Skin-Vitamin" it NOURISHES Skin, too

GLORIOUS days in the out-of-doors!—Are you wondering what you can do for that flaky skin?

This year you are doubly fortunate! Pond's Vanishing Cream, always so grand for flaky skin, is now a nourishing cream, too. It contains the active "skin-vitamin" which aids in keeping skin beautiful.

This new Pond's "skin-vitamin" Vanishing Cream is never drying! . . . It simply does not come out on your skin in a "goo"! It's a triumph of modern science—a true nourishing cream—yet nothing greasy or heavy about it. Pond's Vanishing Cream is light and delicate in texture!

Put it on always before you powder. Again after coming in from outdoors. And of course for overnight after cleansing.

Same jars, same labels, same price

Now every jar of Pond's Vanishing Cream you buy contains this new cream with "skin-vitamin" in it. You will find it in the same jars, with the same labels, at the same price.

Miss Camilla Morgan

"Pond's 'skin-vitamin' Vanishing Cream is good news. A powder base that actually nourishes skin is almost too good to be true."

SEND FOR THE NEW CREAM!

TEST IT IN 9 TREATMENTS

Pond's, Dept. 9MS-VT, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's new "skin-vitamin" Vanishing Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with samples of 2 other Pond's "skin-vitamin" Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

Name_____

Street_____

City_____ State_____

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N. Y. Time, N.B.C.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

ANY ONE CAN PUT IN

TALON

SLIDE FASTENERS

One, two, three... they're in! Any one can do it by following the simplified instructions that come with every Talon Slide Fastener you buy in a chain store. Foolproof, flexible, they launder perfectly and make the smartest, smoothest closings for your own and your children's new spring clothes. Wonderful for modernizing last year's dresses, too!

TALON

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF., TALON, INC.

SLIDE FASTENERS

As little as 15c—at

F. W. Woolworth Co — The W. T. Grant Co.
S. S. Kresge — H. L. Green & Co.
J. J. Newberry — The McLellan Stores
McCrory Stores Corp. — G. C. Murphy Co.
S. H. Kress & Co. — Scott Burr Co.
and other variety chain stores.

Also—Sears, Roebuck & Company
Montgomery, Ward & Company

Sensational FREE Offer

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous FLAME-GLO Triple Indelible Lipsticks FREE . . . each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks... that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

Flame-Glo
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
TRIPLE INDELIBLE

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. JM116 W. 14th ST., N. Y. C.
Send me 3 trial size FLAME-GLO Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs. 15c in Canada.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

10c, 20c and 25c
AT LEADING
5 & 10¢ STORES

ribly, terribly feminine. And femininity is the strongest man-magnet there is. It rolls into one all you've ever heard about soft colors, soft curves hinted at but not brazenly revealed, fragrant hair, eyes which speak more than lips, quiet voices and a body that seems to become thistledown when the dancing partner grabs a-holt of you.

Unless a tan is the most becoming thing you've ever worn, don't get sunburned this summer. White skins are back in vogue. Protect your skin with large hats and beach coats and creams that filter the sun. I've always maintained that a creamy or pink and white pelt is a girl's loveliest attribute, but for about ten years I've been completely out of style. Throw away your dark powder and get a box of one of the creamy new tints. New rouges and lipsticks have a bluish or mauve cast—deadly with a suntan, heavenly with a white skin.

Virginia Bruce, whose epidermis is pink and white and tender, and the redheads like Jeanette MacDonald and Janet Gaynor, who fry to a crisp in the sun, are in high glee over the fashionable new pallor. And, by the way, for extra allure some romantic evening, try one of Virginia's eye make-up tricks. Rub a little cream eyeshadow on your eyelids, exactly in the center, of the same color as your eyes. It sort of gives the effect of the color showing thru when you lower your lids.

And—girls with smallish mouths—try Miss Gaynor's trick for enlarging your lips the least bit. Make up your mouth in its exact natural shape first with a very light lipstick, then go over it and enlarge it a little bit at the bow of the upper lip and the curve of the lower lip with a deeper shade. If, like Jeanette MacDonald, you have trouble in keeping lipstick on (and how men do hate to see a gal re-apply it in public!), try making up your mouth first with a very light, very indelible stick, then put on another coat of whatever shade is your pet at the moment, and blot the whole paint job lightly with tissue.

There are two sorts of facial allure. The first, the allure of a nice skin, sparkling eyes, red lips, all enhanced with clever make-up and framed in shining hair. Most girls do pretty well in developing this sort of sex appeal. But a more potent appeal lies in the face which has interesting planes and highlights. And everywhere I see faces which completely neglect these possibilities—in fact, the make-up on these faces does everything possible to hide the beauty which lies in the bone structure.

Study your face in a good strong light. See if you have some interesting planes and hollows in that pan of yours. A slight hollow below the cheekbones is chockful of allure. Large and beautifully shaped eye sockets can do things for your eyes, which may not, in themselves, be remarkable for color or size. Then study the portraits in this magazine, see if you find one of the Hollywood belles with a facial structure similar in any way to your own, and try to copy her make-up tricks. Highlight interesting points in your face, not with a crude dab of rouge, but with a subtle blending of a darker or lighter shade of powder. Perhaps the merest touch of cream or oil will do the trick, leaving other make-up off that particular spot. Some girls use soap for this stunt, since it leaves an interesting shine and doesn't smear.

If your eye sockets are large and nicely shaped, work on your eyebrows to play up this interesting facial point. Don't send them on a detour from their natural shape, but rather darken them or thicken them or lengthen them with all the skill you have. If your brows are too heavy and therefore blur this interesting line, do not pluck them too industriously—merely trim out the stray hairs—and otherwise make them behave with vaseline, eyelash grower, lanoline or our friend the cake of soap again.

Jackie Cooper "plants one" on her forehead, and Bonita Granville likes it in "Young Romance."

It occurs to me, offhand, that stars like Carole Lombard, the great Garbo, Luise Rainer and Claudette Colbert all have, in addition to their other charming attributes, this allure of interesting facial structure. On the other hand, stars like Barbara Stanwyck, our afore-mentioned friends Jeanette MacD. and Janet G., Eleanor Powell and Ginger Rogers stake their claims to loveliness on the allure of pretty skin, sparkling eyes, and so on. Which type are you?

Well, I started out by telling you not to be in too hot a rush to marry yourself off, and meandered along through every new stunt I could think of which might induce an ardent gent to pop the question, along with a little help from the moon and some soft music. But I also said somewhere along the line that I wished every girl could be as smart as every guy in this romance battle of the sexes. I don't mean I want you to start collecting lovers as some folks collect stamps. However, I think it's only fair that a girl should have the time and peace of mind to develop her good looks, her personality and herself to the utmost, and to do that one needs the excitement and fillip which popularity, plenty of dates and admiration give to life.

Not a word about diet or exercise in all this! How did that happen? Well, next month I'll devote the whole session to some perfectly elegant new figure-improves—I will, so help me!

Uh—oh! Forgot the present. This time, it's six sample shades of an excellent face powder—six delicious shades, ladeez. Namely: a fine natural and light rachel, a rose rachel, a brunette, a suntan and a perfectly spiffy flattering dark shade called hi-brown. Fill in the coupon below and—note this carefully—please send a three-cent stamp to cover cost of mailing. Print name and address plainly to avoid wear and tear on the eyes of our mailing department—they want to keep beautiful, too.

Mary Marshall
Modern Screen
149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

Please send me free samples of the six shades of powder recommended by you. I am enclosing a 3c stamp for postage.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 66)

Kay's Next

On his first day's work on "The Secrets of an Actress," Kay Francis' new picture, director Bill Keighly received a mysterious funeral wreath and a card saying, "Deepest Sympathy." Fortunately, the wreath proved highly unnecessary, for Miss F., all during the production, was as nice a young lady as any director could hope for. Word is that her new mood is inspired by her forthcoming marriage to Baron Raven Erik Angus Barnekow, the German nobleman who is to be Kay's fifth mate. The Baron, incidentally, prefers to be known as Mister. He's an American citizen, and plans to build an airplane factory here.

■ ■ ■

The fact that Marie Wilson receives more fan mail than any star at her studio so impressed a friend of hers that she sent the item to Ripley. Her letter was returned, with a note from Ripley: "I don't believe it."

Wise Connie

When Connie Bennett started her "Constance Bennett Cosmetics" people around town wondered whether she was smart to sink a lot of money in a business she knew nothing about. But Connie turned out to be smarter than those who were doing the worrying. For she invested nothing but her name. The dough comes from the Countess di Frasso.

There's a tiny desert island built on one of Universal's sound stages for use in "Sinners in Paradise," a story of six people who are stranded on the island after a plane crash. Said one of the principals, John Boles, when he first saw it: "It doesn't look much like Paradise to me. And there isn't even enough room to sin."

Bologna

Funny, and sometimes just slightly tragic, how a few good rôles can go to an actor's alleged head. A case in particular is that of a guy who was just another handsome leading man up to a year or so ago. Then a series of swell rôles and a lot of good publicity boosted him to the top. The other day a writer tried to arrange an interview appointment with him. "I don't need interviews," said the guy. "All I need is to continue my good work on the screen." You can buy the same sort of stuff at the corner meat market. Just ask the man for bologna.

■ ■ ■

Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow, who wanted privacy, invested puh-lenty in a brand new home in Coldwater Canyon. It's a showplace, and very lovely—a big, rambling house and a large area in back equipped with swimming pool, tennis court and playhouse. The only hitch is that the pool can be seen from any of three highways above the canyon, and tourists have already begun parking along the road waiting for Myrna to indulge in a bit of privacy.

Lucky Lady

Perhaps you've read something about the thirteen-year-old girl being sponsored by Bette Davis and her husband, Harmon Nelson. The young lady is Pamela Bascom, an orphan from Pomona, California. Nelson, who is an agent, heard her sing, and he and Bette are so convinced she has a fine future that they've taken her into their home, where they're giving her all possible advantages in the hope that one day she'll be a screen star. Briefly, little Miss Bascom is a very lucky young lady.

■ ■ ■

Some of the boys at Paramount are still chuckling—well, they were when this was written, anyway—over Franciska Gaal. Franciska, who starred in "The Buccaneer," signed her contract with her real name—Fanny Zilverstitch.

Why, Arthur!

Here's a California flood item which Arthur Treacher swears is true. We won't vouch for it, but here it is: A friend of Treacher's, who owned a small ranch, was worried because his crops didn't have enough moisture, so he prayed for the Lord to send down a little rain. Next day the deluge started, and when the friend saw part of his barn float away, he looked heavenward and said solemnly, "Now God, don't be silly!"

(Continued on page 111)

Lucky the Bride

WHO KNOWS THIS CHARM SECRET

Lovely women are like flowers — and flower perfumes are the very essence of feminine appeal. The girl who wins her man — and keeps him! — knows the lure of these odeurs. Park & Tilford presents "Lilac," the breath of fragrant spring; and "Cherish," a new floral odeur as spicy as a coquette's glance. Let blossom-time surround you — always!

Delightful, delicate, lingering — sweet "Lilac" and spicy "Cherish" are now at all ten-cent stores in smart tuckaway sizes 10c

Lilac AND Cherish PERFUMES

PARK & TILFORD

FINE PERFUMES FOR HALF A CENTURY

THERE'S MAGIC
in your eyes!

● Bring out the enchantment of your eyes—reveal their depth and brilliance with a frame of sweeping lashes! KURLASH works this magic in 30 seconds, curls lashes so they look long, dark and alluring. No heat, cosmetics or practice needed—$1 at any good store.

Learn—absolutely free—what shades of eye make-up are becoming to you—learn how to apply them skilfully! Send your name, address and coloring to Jane Heath, Kurlash beauty consultant, Dept. E-6; she will send you a personal color-chart and complete instructions in eye make-up!

THE KURLASH COMPANY, Inc.
Rochester, N.Y. Canada, Toronto 3

Kurlash

Copyright 1938, The Kurlash Co., Inc.

SLAVES TO HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 41)

I was scared to talk for fear of saying the wrong thing. Of course, if there was dancing I was all right. Nobody could make me feel shy on the dance floor. But the moment the music stopped, the fun went out of everything.

There was one night I especially remember. The occasion was a huge, elaborate banquet given by an executive of my studio. I was invited because I'd just made my first real hit in a featured role.

I had an exquisite dress designed for the occasion. Oh, I looked like a princess going to the ball. I thought, maybe this time I can act like one, too.

You know that grand feeling a girl gets when she walks into a room and everyone turns to look at her. That's what happened to me that night, and for a moment I felt exactly as I'd felt going to parties back home, knowing every minute of the evening would be fun.

And then the banquet started. I was seated between a distinguished foreign director and a famous musician. Across the horse-shoe table was the star whose film I had stolen. She said to the musician with deadly sweetness, "Oh, Maestro, Miss Chalmers is passionate about symphony music. Do have her tell you about it." She had, you see, followed my publicity build-up, and being Hollywood herself, knew exactly what there was to it.

But the Maestro didn't. His eyes lighted up with interest. "Indeed? Have you been following the Toscanini broadcasts? What did you think of his interpretation of Sibelius' first symphony last week?" I don't remember what I answered. He tried a few more conversational openings, then gave up. The woman across the table went on smiling. I fared no better with the director on my left.

A clock struck somewhere in the huge hall, and I swear I looked at my dress expecting to see it turn to cheesecloth. And then I thought, it isn't midnight yet. Long before midnight I left that party.

There's no use telling you about more parties, because they were all pretty much alike. I suppose if my box-office success hadn't been so rapid, I'd have managed to find a set of youngsters who could have become my friends. But success did come, and it was a hard taskmaster until that day I met Joe.

It was open mutiny for me to make a date with him. Joe himself was the first to point that out. "I can't take you to the places where you're used to going. And even if I did, you wouldn't thank me for it. You know and I know what Hollywood is like. You're a headliner. I'm not. That's the answer. We just don't mix."

I said, "I won't let it be like that! I want to see you!" That was at the end of that crazy, harrowing day of rehearsal. "Please let's see each other tonight!" Then, as suddenly I realized I was actually begging a boy for a date. "See how you make me act! You wouldn't be ungallant and turn me down now!"

He grinned. "Gee, you are a crazy kid!" He came for me that evening and we went out. His car was a rattle-trap. He turned it in the direction opposite all the night-spots and correct places, and drove fast.

Instinctively, I'd known I mustn't dress for this date. I wore slacks and a sweater. Joe said, "Gee, you're sweet, with no trimmings." I smiled up at him, my throat too tight to speak.

We drove towards the ocean, and high up on a cliff Joe parked. The warm, fragrant California night was magic about us. There was a moon, and I think in our hearts there was moon-madness.

I said, "Let's forget, just for tonight, we're Hollywood. Let's pretend I'm still back home, and I've just met you at a dance, and . . ."

"And we've fallen in love," Joe whispered. Only we couldn't pretend. We knew it had happened to us. And it was terribly important.

I whispered, "You make me feel real again. I'm so happy." And then I was crying. He let me cry a long time against the rough tweed of his shoulder. Then he let me talk. About myself, about my family, about the travesty of success I had achieved.

Joe said, "You poor little sacrificial lamb." Then his arms were around me. "I thought we were supposed to be happy tonight! Let's forget trouble. Let's laugh. Let's be crazy."

THAT was the first of a dozen wonderful evenings. We went to the kind of places I hadn't been near since leaving home. Midnight snacks at hot-dog wagons. Lunch, on Sunday, on a tray in the car, somewhere on the highway at places where a second cameraman would take his girl and where no one recognized me simply because it was so absurd for a movie queen to be there.

Oh, we had such fun! Then one night Joe was oddly silent. He didn't say, when he left me, "I'll see you tomorrow at the same time." He just kissed me with a queer intensity that frightened me. And next evening he didn't show up.

I spent frantic hours waiting. At last I called his house, and his landlady said that Mr. Turner was in his laboratory. He had given orders not to be disturbed.

I couldn't believe it. I knew, of course, that before our meeting Joe had spent all his free time experimenting with color photography, that he meant to get somewhere in his own profession. But to think that would make him forget about me. Why, it didn't make sense.

Margaret Sullavan has adopted this Great Dane pup—feet and all. Don't you love him?

But when I saw him on the lot next morning, it did make sense. There was no smile for me in his face. Only formal politeness. "Joe," I tried to speak lightly, "are you in the habit of standing up dates? I waited last night."

"We didn't have a date. Besides, I was busy. Didn't my landlady tell you?" He said this without looking at me, but the line of his jaw was set. "There's some stuff I had to get done."

Something was terribly wrong, but I couldn't guess what. "I'm not trying to scold you, darling," I said gently. "We'll make up for lost time tonight."

"I'm not coming tonight, either." It was like a stranger speaking.

So that night I went to the Trocadero with Tom Lane, wearing slinky black satin and half a dozen orchids. And we danced beautifully together for the benefit of newsmongers, smiling up into each other's eyes.

The next night I went to a select gambling palace with Hugh Lewis, Hollywood's most eligible bachelor. I lost a thousand dollars playing the numbers of Joe's car license.

At the end of a week I swallowed my pride and went to see Joe at his shabby, comfortable home. "What happened to you, to us? Joe, have I done anything to make you angry? I'm so miserable."

At first he wouldn't talk. Then, slowly, he admitted the trouble. My manager had got wind of our friendship, and had come to him in a rage. Shouted that I was cutting my own throat, and that Joe was helping me do it.

"He told me," Joe said, his eyes dark with pain, "that if I was any kind of friend to you I'd fade out of the picture. That he and the studio had slaved to build you up, and now you . . ." He was silent, then went on, "Heaven knows I'm—your friend. I—darling, he told me you broke dates with people to go out with me. I can't let you do things like that. Don't you see? I can't let you deliberately scotch your own chances."

I cried, "I don't give a hoot in heaven about my chances! Joe, you and I love each other, you know we do! We can't let my career and Hollywood stand in our way! Joe, I don't want to be famous if I can't have happiness, and you."

IF Joe is stubborn, so am I. I fought for my future. I said I'd behave any way I wanted to behave, and if the studio didn't like it, they could break my contract. I said I'd learn to cook and we could live on an assistant cameraman's salary. I said all the things any girl in love would say.

In the end, Joe gave in. He drove me home and it was like our first date all over again. Joe kissed me, holding me as if he'd never let me go. "Goodnight, beloved." For the first time in ages, that night I slept deeply.

But you can't live your life exactly the way you plan it. You can't cheat fate. The next day, something happened that changed the whole course of our lives. A telegram came for me from home. My father had died suddenly of heart failure.

I couldn't leave the lot and go home to be with mother. I couldn't even give way to my own grief, because "Rhythm in Your Blood" was in its final, feverish stages and it costs thousands of dollars to stop production, even for a day.

So my feet had to go on dancing and there was a smile glued rigidly on my face all during working hours. Afterwards, I talked to mother and my sister on the long distance phone. I heard myself saying, "We'll pull through, somehow. I'll—take care of you."

And then all at once the meaning of what I said hit me, hard. With father gone, the family was my responsibility. And so I wasn't free to snap my fingers at Hollywood after all.

I talked it over with Joe, weeks later, when I had the courage to do it without going all to pieces. "We've got to figure out some way, dearest. I've got to play ball and go on being a career girl. But gosh, there must be something we can do, some compromise."

Joe said, smiling his wry smile, "The grand duchess and the butler, on the butler's night off?"

I wouldn't let him be bitter. I said, "No. Cinderella sneaking out of the palace to be herself."

We tried it. For a month, grimly, I stuck to the social calendar of my manager's making six days a week, and played hooky with Joe on the seventh. And it was like a travesty of our former, joyous dates. We were self-conscious. We were tense and nervous, and little things loomed suddenly like huge obstacles to happiness. If you've ever tried to be casual about life-and-death matters, you will know what I mean.

What precipitated the explosion was my manager's decision that I must give a party. A Hollywood party. Caviar by the ton and champagne by the barrel. Hundreds of orchids to decorate the tables. Two swing bands.

He handed me the list of prospective guests and it read like a Who's Who in the Movies. Then he said with belated courtesy, "And, of course, anyone else you may care to invite."

DO AS ACTRESSES DO

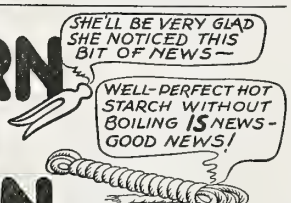
TO KEEP SKIN CLEAN

"One of the first beauty tricks I learned as a professional actress was Albolene Solid for cleansing."—VIRGINIA COPELAND.

Why do so many actresses use Albolene Solid? Because they know it is a special kind of cleansing cream. Extra pure. Extra efficient... because it was originally made for hospitals.

Made of delicate oils, Albolene penetrates as deep as dirt can. Loosens even heavy stage make-up amazingly fast. Leaves pores clear as a baby's. Your skin feels gloriously refreshed—silky and soft.

HOSPITAL PROVED. Remember—this is the same Albolene Solid that has actually been used in leading hospitals for over 20 years! Jar, 50¢. Professional pound tin, only $1.



ALBOLENE
SOLID CLEANSING CREAM

Bad days
Reduce the pain
Save your nerves
No narcotics
Salicon TABLETS

LEARN TO IRON

BEAUTIFULLY SPEEDILY HAPPILY!

Here's that modern way to hot starch without mixing, boiling and bother as with lump starch. Makes starching easy. Makes ironing easy. Restores elasticity and that soft charm of newness. No sticking. No scorching. Your iron fairly glides. A wonderful invention. This free test convinces. Send for a Trial Packet.

ELASTIC STARCH

THANK YOU

THE HUBINGER CO., No.519, Keokuk Ia.
Your free sample of QUICK ELASTIC, please. "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

.....

.....

I don't think he expected a single suggestion from me. I said, very angrily and very quietly, "I'm going to ask only one personal friend. Joe Turner."

To Joe I said, "Please, darling, please come. It means such a lot to me! I'm sick of running off with you, of sneaking as if we were doing something wrong to be together! I'm not that kind of person!"

"I know," he said, "I feel the same way."

Afterwards, we were both to wish he had turned the invitation down. Because that was the most ghastly evening I've ever spent. For hours, in my own house, at my own party, Joe and I were thoroughly and mercilessly snubbed.

When it was over Joe faced me. "This can't go on, Linda," he said. "It's suicide for you. And it's no fun for me. We might as well face reality. There's no future for us. We'll just have to—forget one another."

I was crying. "Joe," I said, "we've been all over this. Joe, you and I can't forget."

"And can we go on like this, do you think?" His hands were on my shoulders now, he was looking into my face. "Be honest, Linda. Would you like me to make a habit of taking what I had to take tonight? Would you have much respect for me if I did?"

I hadn't thought of it that way. He went on. "And what of you? Tonight didn't do you any good. Now that you can't just snap your fingers at your career."

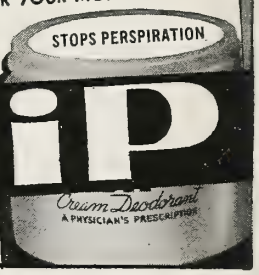
I cried, "Let's get married, then! They'll have to accept you. After a while people will find out what a grand person you are."

He laughed, and it was the most tragic sound I ever heard. "You innocent baby! Do you really still think that, after the way you've been treated? Why darling, no one will bother to find out a thing about me until I make them, not until I make a name for myself, with color photography, or with some other trick. In this town, people only stop to look at you if you're ten times as big as life."

AFTER a while he went on, "And suppose I did marry you now. Do you know what would happen? You'd have to go right on with your schedule of a public-personal life. You'd go out with other men six nights a week. You'd pay the house bills out of your star's salary.

"And in the end I'd become Mr. Linda Chalmers. If I ever got anywhere, people would say, 'Oh, yes, he's so-and-so's husband. I suppose she did everything to pull the strings for him. No thanks, Linda. I've seen too many Hollywood marriages on precisely that pattern. Seen every one of them go on the rocks."

And against all that cold barrage of reason I had only one argument left. "But I love you. I love you, Joe." It was stronger than all the others, after all. Hours later, when Joe drove away, I had his promise that he wouldn't try to do anything crazy, that we would let things ride and hope for a way out.



And this is where we are now. Joe and I are engaged, secretly. I still see him once a week, secretly. I no longer try to fight, to buck opinion, to force Joe on people, or even to be seen with him publicly as I tried for a while. We live on crumbs of fun and happiness, and wait. We're both so young. Maybe something will happen that will make everything right.

Five years, we've given ourselves. But five years is an eternity of waiting. Will he still love me then? Will his love survive the snubs, the barbs that still occasionally appear in gossip columns, the whole nerve-racking mess? Or will he turn to some less famous girl? Every day, every hour, I live with that fear. And there is no answer. Only time can tell.

Stops PERSPIRATION
FOR ONE TO THREE DAYS

ZIP CREAM DEODORANT
Destroys body odors. Easy to apply; harmless to clothing; and ideal on sanitary napkins. Just a little under the arm and ZIP!—you're free of perspiration odor.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY
THE BEST TO BE HAD
10c • 25c • 50c

For unwanted hair—ZIP Depilatory Cream

HAIR ON FACE
ARMS, LEGS and BODY
REALLY GONE!

ZIP EPILATOR — IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT

Simple. Quick. Leaves no trace of hair. With each package of ZIP Epilator, you get a dollar bottle of BOUQUET JORDEAU—a refreshing fragrance. A $2.00 value for only $1.00. Good stores or send $1.00 to Madame Berthé, 562 Fifth Ave., New York

BLONDES

More Fascinating With FAIR SKIN

HAVE IT IN ONE WEEK! Blondes . . . brunettes . . . don't let dull, blemished, freckled skin ruin charm! Gentle Golden Peacock Bleach Creme . . . removes dull film holding surface freckles, pimples and blackheads almost overnight! Gives you clear, flawless, younger looking, alluring skin. At all toilet goods counters.

Rheumatism Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the Doctor's formula. No opiates, no narcotics. Does the work quickly—must relieve worst pain to your satisfaction in few minutes or money back at Druggist's. Don't suffer. Get trustworthy NURITO today on this guarantee.

Help Kidneys
Don't Take Drastic Drugs

Your Kidneys contain 9 million tiny tubes or filters which may be endangered by neglect or drastic irritating drugs. Be careful. If functional disorders of the Kidneys or Bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Backache, Swollen Joints, Excess Acidity, or Burning Passages, don't rely on ordinary medicines. Fight such troubles with the doctor's prescription Cystex. Cystex starts working in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week, and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Siss-tex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co.

FOREIGN FLAVOR

(Continued from page 45)

late of the French theatre and films. Mme. Darrieux was induced to come to our shores for $125,000 per picture.

Arriving with her director-husband, Danielle immediately requested a house, a car and a contract for hubby. All of which she got! However, unlike Dietrich, she can really act, which even makes demanding permissible. Not only is Danielle a sensation in France, but the New York Critics' Award for the best picture of 1937 went to her "Mayerling."

Paramount's Franciska Gaal is a gal who believes in plenty of action and not much talk. She quietly slipped into Hollywood from her native Budapest and went to work on "The Buccaneer." Since its premiere, she has been taken into the hearts of millions of fans.

Franciska is a veteran of the theatre, having been a child actress of note abroad. The youngest of thirteen, she naturally felt left out of family conferences, so decided to be very important so that everyone would have to notice her. However, no one thought her histrionics worthy of even a dramatic class. In fact, the most she managed was to be allowed to sit in at rehearsals. However, the gods were with her, for at the last rehearsal, the child actress in the play was stricken ill. After much arguing, little Gaal was given the part. The result was stranger than fiction and she rocketed to fame.

However, making the movie grade was a horse of a different color. Franciska says:

"When we see the first day's picture shots, I am sick. From the looks of the director, he is also sick. So, I go home and spend all the nights figuring how to do this camera acting. Next morning, after I work for long time, I am sure they are good. For they say, 'Babee, you are okay.' Now I like it better than stage acting."

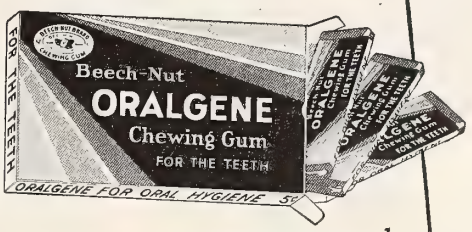
ANNABELLA, who won her spurs in "Wings of the Morning," is now seriously taking up the business of American films. Already famous in England, as in her native France, she plans to scale the heights here or know the reason why.

As a little girl, Annabella's burning ambition was to become as famous as the stars whose photographs adorned her walls.

Arriving in this country with little ballyhoo, Annabella went directly to the coast. Traveling with her was her husband, Jean Murat, who keeps well in the background. To date, he has asked nothing of Hollywood except fair treatment for his wife.

Although no hair styles nor cold creams have been named for Annabella, we predict a great future for her here. Fortunate enough to be co-starred with William Powell in her first picture, we can only wish her the same luck Luise Rainer had under the same circumstances.

All of which brings me back to the main issue at hand—the importance of foreign flavor. What would we do if Alan Mowbray, Arthur Treacher or Eric Blore were suddenly to say, "We're going home." There would certainly be many a disappointed movie-goer in the land. These popular players often receive as much money for two or three days' work as the star they support gets in a whole week.



There's no denying that our foreign actors add that certain important something to a picture program. They do things to our entertainment appetite—and mighty nice things, too!

CHEW WITH A PURPOSE

ORALGENE is a firmer, "chewier" gum. Gives teeth needed exercise. Contains milk of magnesia (dehydrated). Helps to mouth-freshness.

In the modern package

Each piece individually wrapped

ORALGENE

a delicious new BEECH-NUT product

"HOLLYWOOD IS NOT FOR ME!"

One of filmdom's most famous stars makes this startling statement in the July Modern Screen

DO YOUR NAILS SPLIT?

PUT A WAX CUSHION ON YOUR NAILS

● STOP Polish from Splitting and Drying Your Nails

Are your nails a serious problem? Do they break and split? Do they look shabby and neglected? Then you'll welcome this amazing new toiletry that is revolutionizing the manicure. Not a polish. Not an oil.

Sav-A-Nail Forms Protective Cushion between Nails and Polish

It goes on easily and quickly, completely covering the sensitive nail surface and shielding it from harsh polishes. You'll be thrilled with the results, the first time you use Sav-A-Nail.

Polish Looks Smarter

Smooth protective base actually accentuates polish —brightens its color—adds to its fascinating sheen and brilliance. One trial will prove Sav-A-Nail is the one thing you need to make every manicure a success. Endorsed by leading beauty salons.

1-Minute Treatment Encourages Nail growth for lovely, long Nails

Smart manicures demand long nails. Protect your nails with Sav-A-Nail. Give them a chance to grow. Simply brush on Sav-A-Nail—dries instantly. Then apply polish.

End your Nail Troubles Today

Get your bottle of Sav-A-Nail today, at the toilet goods counter of all 5-10 cent stores. If not sold in your town send 10c to Natone, 826 S. Flower, Los Angeles, California. 10c

A Real Dollar Value for a Dime

SAV-A-NAIL

TORCH FISHING Lithograph by ROBERT RIGGS

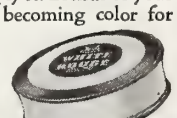
DRINK Dole Pineapple Juice from Hawaii. You will revel in its flavor. It's the pure, natural, unsweetened juice of Dole-grown pineapples.

Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., also packers of "Dole Pineapple Gems," Sliced, Crushed, Tidbits, and the new "Royal Spears." Honolulu, Hawaii, U. S. A.—Sales Offices: San Francisco, Cal.

NEW "MYSTERY" ROUGE MAKES BIG HIT WITH USERS!



Gives Stunning Effect!

Changes color to suit your complexion —like magic!

SO NATURAL! EVERYONE NOW RAVES OVER MY COMPLEXION! WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?

SMART GIRLS know that the correct shade of rouge flatters . . . the wrong shade detracts. Why guess? White Rouge is always correct. That's because White Rouge changes color to precisely suit your skin the moment you apply it. Blends to your own true shade . . . the one becoming color for you. No rouge like it. Waterproof . . . an application lasts the day. At leading dept. and drug stores 50c. Trial size 10c at most ten cent stores.

WHITE-ROUGE

Your Skin Determines Its Color

Clark-Millner Co., 666 St. Clair St., Dept. 30-F, Chicago, Ill. Send me generous trial size of White Rouge. I enclose 15c for postage and handling. (Sent in U. S. only.)

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

BAD MAN OF BURBANK

(Continued from page 42)

actors who are 'so thoughtful.' I'm not. Ask my best girl," (Mayo Methot is the 'best girl', soon to be the third Mrs. Humphrey Bogart) "she'll tell you. She told me, plenty. Because I forgot to send her a valentine on last Valentine's Day. Never thought of it, that's all. No one ever sent me a valentine.

"I was brought up very unsentimentally but very straightforwardly," continued Mr. Bogart who, in person, looks ten years younger than he looks on the screen. "A kiss, in our family, was an event. Our mother and father didn't glug over us, my two sisters and me. They had too many other things to do, and so did we. My mother, Maude Humphrey, an artist of repute, always had swell jobs, was always interested and busy. My father was a doctor, pretty much of a he-man. Christmas, which happens to be my birthday, was not exactly overlooked, but there was no to-do about it. Everyone was busy with matters of more interest and importance.

"I respect my mother more than I respect anyone in the world. But ours is not the kind of affection that spills over or makes pretty pictures. If I sent my mother one of those Mother's Day telegrams or said it with flowers, she would return the wire and flowers to me, collect.

"I was born in New York City and thereafter went to various schools, eventually to Andover. My career there was abruptly terminated by the headmaster who caught me and some other students ducking a junior professor whom we did not revere. I can't show reverence where I feel none. I joined the Navy, served through the war, got out from under as fast as I could. The adventure was too strenuous for me, as adventure usually is. I have no desire to be a Don Quixote, Don Juan, crusader, explorer or anything that requires any effort. I'm lazy, and when people ask me what I would do if I didn't act, I say, 'nothing,' and mean it.

"After the War I got a job on Wall Street and was so bored my ears flattened out. Too lazy to rescue myself by looking for work elsewhere, I was rescued by William A. Brady (father of Alice) who took an interest in me and gave me a job backstage in one of his theatres. I became an assistant stage manager, I don't know how, and then slipped into the greasepaint and that was that.

BUT to continue the shearing-of-sentiment process—actors are always publicized as having a 'beautiful courtesy.' I haven't. I'm the most impolite person in the world. It's thoughtlessness again. If I start to be polite you can hear it for forty miles. I never think to light a lady's cigarette. Sometimes I rise when a lady leaves the room, more often not. Now and then I find myself rising when a man leaves the room. If I open a door for a lady, my arm always gets in the way so that she either has to duck under or get hit in the nose. It's an effort for me to do things people believe should 'be done.' I don't see why I should conform to Mrs. Emily Post, not because I'm an actor and believe that being an actor gives me special dispensations to be 'different,' but because I'm a human being with a pattern of my own and the right to work out my pattern in my own way.

"If I feel like going to the Troc wearing this coat (a brown and tan checked garment, with 'gussets' of suede at the elbows, not very new) and a pair of moccasins, that is the way I go to the Troc,

BABY FEET RUINED by OUTGROWN SHOES

It's true Mother!

X-Ray of baby foot in new inexpensive Wee Walker shoe contrasted with foot in a still good, but outgrown shoe.

Millions of baby feet are RUINED because mother lets baby wear outgrown shoes. Short, tight, outgrown shoes, no matter what you paid, will twist and warp the soft, delicate bones forever out of shape.

Wee Walker shoes are so inexpensive you can afford to change to new ones often. They have every feature baby needs. They are correctly proportioned, full-sized, roomy shoes that give real barefoot freedom. They are good-looking, flexible, soft. Distributed at low cost through nation-wide stores maintaining a low profit policy. The stores listed have or will gladly order the size and style you want. See them—compare them—in the infants' wear department. For baby's sake accept no substitute.

ACCEPTED by PARENTS' MAGAZINE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co. H. L. Green Co., Inc. (F & W Grand Stores, Isaac Silver and Bros., Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.) G. R. Kinney Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck Charles Stores Schulte-United Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.

Alviene SCHOOL OF THE Theatre

(45th Year.) Stage, Talkie, Radio, Graduates: Lee Tracy, Fred Astaire, Una Merkel, Zita Johann, etc. Drama, Dance, Musical Comedy, Teaching, Directing, Personal development. Stock Theatre Training. (Appearances). For catalog, write Sec'y Teller, 66 West 85th St., N. Y.

GLUE THINGS!

Wood, Paper
Leather
Celluloid
Plywood
Porcelain
Tile, Glass
China

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores

BOUGHT BY MILLIONS EVERYWHERE

Kills Lice, Ants, Fleas, Aphids, Bedbugs, Chafers, Crab Lice, Red Spiders, Leaf Hoppers, Caterpillars, Root Maggots, Cabbage Worms, Mexican Bean Beetles

If your store can't supply you send 25c or 50c to One-Spot Co., Elkridge, Md.

Included FREE of extra charge

Your choice of Man's or Lady's Wrist Watch FREE with every Ring ordered during this SALE and paid for on our easy monthly plan. Lady's or Man's Ring, with simulated diamond that you'd think cost at least $200. Nothing extra for the watch. It's included FREE. Ladies 1939 dainty model; Men's "Shockproof" military wrist watch-gold plate front—with all the color and charm of natural yellow gold; Jeweled; Guaranteed by $1,000,000 FACTORY. Send only 3 cent stamp with your ring size (strip of paper wound round finger will do). Make two monthly $2 payments. WE TRUST YOU—your package comes AT ONCE by Return mail.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO.
Dept. C-326, Newton, Mass.

Rush offer by RETURN MAIL—all postage paid to my door. 3 cents enclosed.

☐ Ladies' Model
☐ Men's Model

NAME_____

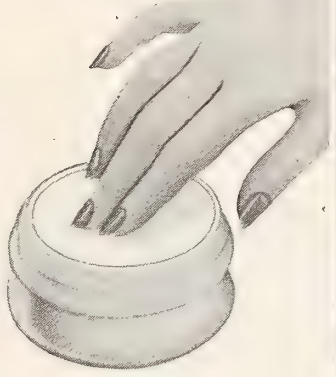
ADDRESS_____

Rosemary Lane's nifty ballet work isn't the least reason why you'll enjoy "Gold Diggers in Paris."

if at all. If I go to the Troc and want to make a jack-ass of myself in front of every producer in town, that's my business.

"But what I really can't understand," Mr. Bogart said, seriously now, "is why actors can't have human frailties like other people; why they can't make the same mistakes, guess wrong now and then; why they must be presented to the world as of a uniform and unassailable virtue. You take a composite cut-out of everything you read about actors and actresses and you'll get one female star, one male star, one villain. The hundreds of actors and actresses, with their highly individual faults and failings and sins and repentances, are melted together into three lay figures.

"The actor is a 'popular guy' is another well-worn slogan. Well, I'm not popular in the hail-fellow-well-met sense in which the phrase is meant. I'm not like Frank McHugh who has to shake his pals off his coat lapels. I have a few good close friends, that's all. Everybody doesn't like me. And I don't like everybody.



"The actor is always a 'man's man.' It's doubtful whether I'd qualify or not. I don't hunt big game or mice, because I don't like to kill things. The 'Killer' throwing away his B.B. gun rather lets you down, huh? Still, there'd be no fun in human nature without a few inconsistencies. I don't fish because I fished for ten years and never caught anything. So that lets me out of the 'man's man' class, no doubt. I've never read about a man's man who didn't hunt or wasn't a 'compleat angler.' I'm not a big, hearty eater, either, downing two dozen oysters and a haunch of venison as a lesser man would eat a tray of canapes.

"I hate to handle money. I like to talk when I have stimulating people around me, but not for the sake of hearing my own jaws break. I'm a Liberal-Democrat, and think Roosevelt's a grand guy.

NEW . . . a CREAM DEODORANT which safely
STOPS under-arm PERSPIRATION

Arrid is the ONLY deodorant to stop perspiration with all these five advantages:—

1. Does not harm dresses, does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly stops perspiration for 1 to 3 days—removes odor from perspiration, keeps armpits dry.
4. A pure, white, greaseless stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid is the ONLY deodorant to stop perspiration which has been awarded the Textile Seal of Approval of The American Institute of Laundering for being HARMLESS TO FABRIC.

39¢ a jar
At drug and dept. stores

10¢ size at all 5 and 10 cent stores

ARRID

Gives a "new shoe" finish because it cleans as it whitens . . . whitens whiter and will not rub off. Absolutely neutral . . . safe and easy to apply.

When emotions are stirred you perspire!

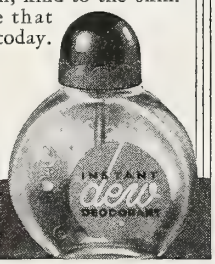
Work and play, and summer weather aren't the only things that make you perspire. When you cry or get angry or excited, especially in those intimate moments that mean so much, perspiration becomes more active.



Beauty, charm, personality—all the feminine attributes that win a man's affection—can be completely marred by under-arm odor.

Careful women use DEW — the modern deodorant. Stops perspiration and keeps the under-arm dry regardless of what you do. Be as gay and active as you please without thought of perspiration odor. Be confident of your daintiness.

Use DEW to guard frocks from ugly perspiration stains.

DEW is mild in action, kind to the skin.

Enjoy the assurance that DEW gives. Get a bottle today.

INSTANT dew
DEODORANT
Stops Perspiration

10c

● Bestow the utmost care on your hands, with the help of HENCO Beauty Aids . . . Never be without a HENCO Nail File (in sheath) for your purse or pocket . . . and have a HENCO triple-cut Professional File on your dressing-table. Their daily use becomes a pleasant habit.

TRADE HENCO MARK

THE HENKEL-CLAUSS CO., FREMONT, OHIO

Fine Cutlery for 50 Years

Ask for HENCO Tweezers and Nail Files (10c) . . . Manicure Scissors (20c) . . . at drug and 5 & 10c stores.

I have a pet aversion, though. This kind of types me—all the Best Actors have their 'pet aversions.' Mine is book jackets. I always rip em off and get down to the raw when I read. I read in bed and smoke before rising. I like to smoke a pipe but they're too much trouble so I go for cigarettes. I like rough, tweedy clothes, and would go in for nudism if I could get away with it. I couldn't. The composite cut-out certainly doesn't include any such thing as a nudist. I seldom go to the movies because to go to the movies means that I have to go—and to go anywhere entails too much expenditure of energy.

"An actor is always, at one time or another, shown 'in his garden', with a knowing-about-flowers-look in his eye. Flowers? I don't know a damn thing about them. Call a rose by any other name and you couldn't prove it by me.

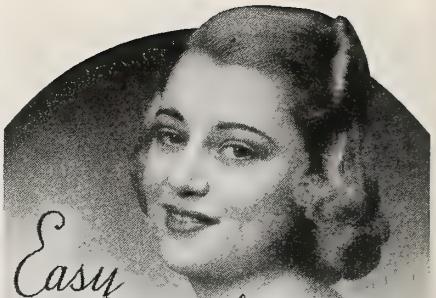
"I will not say that 'money is not important,' appealing to the higher ideals though such a story always is. Money is darned important to me. I have a lot of things to do with it, a lot of people to make comfortable and secure. I want to be comfortable myself, not in any superfashion. I don't need a yacht, a swimming pool, a private projection room, a de luxe car. I only want the things I need for my comfort, a pleasant home (I just bought Hugh Herbert's house in the Valley, and that's where Mayo and I will live when we're married), a good car, some kind of a boat to bat around in—because I like water and everything in it, on it and with it.

"I'm not a respecter of Tradition, of the kind that makes people kow-tow to some young pipsqueak because he is the descendant of a long line, born to the name of Gouldfellow or something. Not until the young p.s. has done something himself can I respect him. Leaning on a name is the perfect equivalent of leaning on the other fellow all your life.

I TAKE my work seriously—but none of this 'art for art's sake,' if you don't mind. Any 'art' or any job of work that's any good at all sells. If it's worth selling, it's worth buying. I have no sentimentality about such matters. If someone offers me five dollars a year more than I'm getting, I take it. And would kiss an 'old stand' goodbye without a single teardrop.

"I believe in the institution of marriage. The institution of marriage is right. It's human beings who are wrong. There's nothing the matter with marriage, per se. The matter is with the persons who make mock of it—and with it.

"I believe in love. Not 'the one love of a lifetime,' pretty tale as that can always make, too. There couldn't be just one love—among fifty million people it would be pretty hard to find it.



"Love is very warming, heartening, enjoyable, a necessary exercise for the heart and soul and intelligence. If you're not in love, you dry up. I'm in love now. After all, the best proof a man can give of his belief in love and marriage is—to marry more than once. If you're not married or in love you're on the loose and that's not comfortable. Love is comforting, too. It is the one emotion which can relieve, as much as is ever possible, the awful essential aloneness of us all.

"So you have me," said Mr. Bogart as, luncheon finished, we walked to his car, started the short drive back to the Warner Bros. Studio at Burbank.

"So you have me," said Mr. Bogart, "heart of stone and all."

Humphrey Bogart has broken the mould!

The Villain does not always have a heart of gold; the Movie Actor, composite of all the virtues, can have a cloven hoof concealed among the flowers. Hallelujah!

Easy to Beautify Skin with
MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM

Make your skin young looking. Flake off the stale, surface skin. Reveal the clear, beautiful underskin by using Mercolized Wax Cream regularly. Give your skin the combined benefits of cleansing, clearing, softening, smoothing and beautifying in every application of this single cream. Mercolized Wax Cream brings out the hidden beauty of the skin.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily

THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

RET Cleans FALSE TEETH Clean!

RET works like magic - soaks teeth pure and clean - no brushing. Get RET today! At all drug and ten cent stores-or send 10c for liberal sample.

RET PRODUCTS CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Good For Kidney and Bladder Weakness

LOOK AND FEEL YOUNGER

ALL over America men and women who want to cleanse kidneys of waste matter and irritating acids and poisons and lead a longer, healthier, happier life are turning to GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules.

So now you know the way to help bring about more healthy kidney activity and stop getting up often at night. Other symptoms are backache, irritated bladder—difficult or smarting passage—puffiness under eyes—nervousness and shifting pains.

This harmless yet effective medicine brings results—you'll feel better in a few days. So why not get a 35¢ box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules today—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—Don't accept a counterfeit—Ask for and get GOLD MEDAL.

CORNS REMOVED WITH CASTOR OIL PREPARATION

Say goodbye to clumsy corn-pads and dangerous razors. A new liquid, NOXACORN, relieves pain fast and dries up the pestiest corns, callus and warts. Contains six ingredients including pure castor oil, iodine, and the substance from which aspirin is made. Absolutely safe. Easy directions in package. 35c bottle saves untold misery. Druggist returns money if it fails to remove corn.

NOXACORN

ITCH OF ECZEMA, RASHES AND OTHER EXTERNALLY CAUSED SKIN TROUBLES STOPPED QUICKLY

Use D.D.D. Prescription

AT ALL DRUGGISTS 35c • 60c • $1.00

NOW...introducing
FLAMINGO
America's finest
NAIL POLISH

★ —Easier Application
—Wears and WEARS
—New HIGHER lustre

The most exquisite Nail Polish you've ever tried...FLAMINGO, guaranteed Beauty-Salon Super-quality! FLAMINGO Nail Polish is Hollywood-produced for the world's most exacting nail-beauty demands...Choose your favorite of FLAMINGO'S 20 distinct popular shades for new glamour on every occasion

Introductory size now being introduced at ★ WOOLWORTH, KRESS and NEWBERRY ★ STORES

FLAMINGO
NAIL POLISH

Brush Away
GRAY HAIR
and LOOK 10 Years Younger

● At home—quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural appearing color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee

BANISH DANGER of LOOSE WIRES with JUSTRITE PUSH CLIPS
Keep lamp, radio, telephone wires SAFE and neat — off the floor with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIPS. In colors to match lamp cords or woodwork. Insist on famous Justrite Quality Push-Clips — set of 8 for 10c.
8 for 10¢
EASY TO INSTALL
NO TOOLS REQUIRED
AT YOUR 10-CENT STORE

NOW!
Beautiful
NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

So natural they even have half-moons

NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10c stores

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS

NU-NAIL CO. 5249 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

ONE VILLAIN COMIN' UP!

(Continued from page 44)

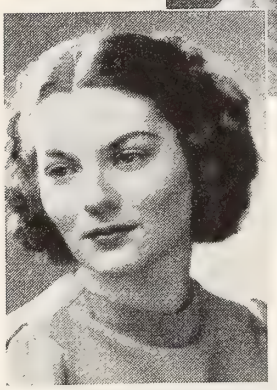
at some well chosen future occasion.

Cesar Romero's theatrical career was all a happy accident. At one time he worked in an office, even as you and I. He met a girl who liked to dance and, after hours, they'd invent and practice tricky ballroom steps. A friend said he could land them an evening job tripping the light fantastic. Would they take it? Would they! It wasn't long before the popular pair had so many dancing jobs that it took them hours to figure out new routines. So Cesar left the office—never to return.

"The dancing didn't go on forever, though," reminisced Romero. "After a while it was over. But it had a lasting effect. I never wanted to be a clerk again. I made the rounds of theatrical offices and soon became very broke. I was hungry and locked out of my hotel room and had all the other harrowing experiences beginners fall heir to. Then I landed a job on the road. With practically no professional experience, I became the male lead in 'Strictly Dishonorable.' Things began to look up."

It was while playing this semi-villainous role that the proverbial movie talent scout found Romero and drafted him into cinema service. Cesar had been "discovered" as a baddie and, since his sleek looks contributed toward the illusion, a baddie he has remained through dozens of pictures. What's more, he will probably continue in the role until he becomes resigned to it.

Anyway, playing villain has netted him the things he likes—money, California and the friendship of pretty girls—so perhaps, even before he ever becomes a reel hero, he will be a real philosopher.



Smokey kisses Allan Jones good night in his best Hollywood manner.

LIGHT-PROOF
FACE POWDER!

The greatest make-up improvement in years

THIS is what happens when your make-up reflects every ray of light.

SEE the difference with light-proof powder that modifies the light rays.

Luxor powder is light-proof. If you use it, your face will not shine. Trial box sent postpaid for a dime!

● At parties, do you instinctively avoid certain lights that you can just feel are playing havoc with your complexion? All that trouble with fickle make-up will be overcome when you finish with powder whose particles do not glisten in every strong light.

Many women think they have a shiny skin, when the shine is due entirely to their powder!

With a finishing touch of light-proof powder, your complexion will not constantly be light-struck. In any light. Day or night. Nor will you have to worry over shine.

Seeing is believing

You have doubtless bought expensive boxes of powder on claims and promises, only to find that you wasted the money. You don't run much risk with Luxor, because your first box will cost you only ten cents!

Test it in all lights, day and night—under all conditions. See for yourself the lovely softness and absence of shine when you use light-proof powder. See how it subdues those highlights of cheek-bones and chin, and nose.

MM-6-38

LUXOR, Ltd., Chicago
Send me a trial box of Luxor light-proof powder, postpaid. I enclose 10c (silver dime).

☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Rose Rachel
☐ Rachel No. 2 ☐ Brunette

Name .....
St. & No. .....
P. O. ..... State .....
(This offer not good in Canada)

ANDREA LEEDS in the GOLDWYN FOLLIES

SECRET of the milky way to soft skin

Famous beauties have bathed in milk for centuries. Now science knows why. Milk contains certain oils very similar to those which normally keep your skin soft and youthful. But no longer need you bathe in milk to enjoy its fabulous beautifying powers. Duart brings you genuine milk-oils in a new-type beauty creme, marvelously softening to dry skin. Try Duart Creme of Milk and learn the secret of the "milky way" to a satin complexion. At drug, department, and 10c stores and beauty shops.

DUART
CREME OF MILK
creme

CONTAINS MILK-OILS BLENDED WITH OTHER OILS

Corns Come Back Bigger, Uglier
—unless removed Root* and All

● Don't take chances by paring corns at home. Corns come back bigger, uglier, more painful than ever, unless removed Root and All. End that corn for good with this new, double-action Blue-Jay method. Pain stops instantly, by removing the pressure. Then the corn lifts out, Root and All in 3 short days. (Exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application.) Blue-Jay is a tiny, modern, scientific corn plaster, held snugly in place by Wet-Pruf adhesive. Try Blue-Jay now. 25¢ for a package of 6. Same price in Canada.

FREE OFFER: We will be glad to send one Blue-Jay absolutely free to anyone who has a corn, to prove that it ends pain instantly, removes the corn completely. Just send your name and address to Bauer & Black, Division of The Kendall Co., Dept. J-90, 2500 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. Act quickly before this trial offer expires.

BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

*A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. It left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

HAND IT TO HALEY

(Continued from page 49)

bachelor who is missing so much, and that while a gay café date makes you feel superficially jolly for a couple of hours, a bank account's a thrill that's more permanent.

It was at the emphatically tender age of five, at a Christmas festival at church, that Jack decided he would be an actor. He hasn't been pulled this way and that by the usual diverse tendencies, as a direct consequence. His parents attempted to overlook his idiosyncrasy and the people in their circle in Boston laughed at his crazy ambition. But Jack noticed that they also chuckled at his droll antics.

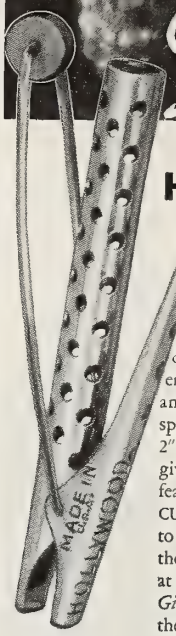
Instead of falling for Santa Claus on that holiday before he entered school, Jack had one of those inspired hunches of his. He sensed that he didn't want to be president as his mother suggested, nor a navigator like his father. He didn't even want to be a fireman anymore. A certain lad was leading a group of children through a manual of arms in the pageant. The supposed soldiers tried to obey their chief, but the amateur officer was wearing one of those tall, furred Buckingham Palace hats and it slid over his face so often that the audience rudely howled with delight. Jack wanted to be in that spot. The following Christmas he saw to it that he was one of the singers in a little number entitled "Leapfrog, Jump!"

WHEN he graduated from grammar school he made the class address, and nearly dropped to the platform from nervousness. He kept thinking how well the other entertainers were doing, and the horror of not coming up to snuff gripped him.

After school hours he worked at sundry humble jobs. When he graduated from high school his family wished him to be a competent electrician, so he got on the payroll at the Charleston Navy Yard.

"That was when I nearly made my running start on the wrong track," he confesses now. "I turned over most of what I earned to mother, but with what was left I stepped out. It never occurred to me to save money until one day a kid who was working with me showed up in an automobile. To my astonishment I found he'd bought it by putting aside something each Saturday.

"After that I hoarded what I could to run away and get on the stage. There was no entrée there in Boston. One weekend, when I had forty dollars altogether, I told mother that I'd been transferred to the Philadelphia Navy Yard and that it was a chance for advancement. Really, I had been writing to a pal of mine there and I figured that if I got to Philadelphia I'd be able to dash up to New York for weekends and get acquainted with some actors who'd give me a break.



"When I arrived in Philadelphia I felt guilty, so I mailed mom ten dollars. She sent back twenty. So you can guess what kind she is!

"My pal couldn't get me on at the navy yard. But after a week or so of looking around, I landed a job as a song-plugger for one of the music houses. I sang in movie theatres and I was almost an actor.

"One day when I was at the music store a genuine actor walked in to inquire whether anyone knew of an idle comedian who'd join his vaudeville act. I'd had to wait three months for that opportunity, so I immediately went into my well-rehearsed sales chatter."

ON TWO NEW HOLLYWOOD
CURLERS
...with spring end holders

U. S. PATENTS
2,000,893
2,000,894

If you like curlers with spring end holders, you will like these new HOLLYWOODS. They are designed so that they hold hair ends securely yet do not crimp and will slip off easily without spoiling the curl. Two sizes...with 2" and 2¾" curling surfaces. They give you all the superior, patented features that make HOLLYWOOD CURLERS so easy to use, so quick to dry, so pleasing in results. See the complete HOLLYWOOD line at your variety store...from the new Giant that makes big soft curls to the little Midget that is so useful in controlling short, bothersome ends.

Insist on HOLLYWOOD Curlers
...ask for them by name.

HOLLYWOOD ☆
Rapid Dry CURLERS
AT 5c AND 10c STORES AND NOTION COUNTERS

The Daintier Hair-Remover
QUICKTONE
delicately fragranced
DEPILATORY
POWDER

A safe—effective—delightful method of removing superfluous hair and retarding further growth. Leaves skin velvety-smooth.
Send 10c for trial size to PHARMATONE, Inc., 220 Fulton St., N. Y. C.

IMPORTED SIMULATED

DIAMOND RING 15¢

To introduce HOLLYWOOD'S Newest ORIZABA Diamond reproductions. Dazzling, Brilliant, Full of Blazing Fire (worn by Movie Stars) we will send ½ Kt. simulated Brazilian DIAMOND MOUNTED IN SOLID GOLD effect ring as illustrated (looks like $150. gem) for 15c sent postpaid. Money back if not delighted. AGENTS WANTED.
FIELD'S DIAMOND CO.—Dept. MS-510 S. Hill St., Los Angeles, Calif. (2 for 25c.)

HAIR KILLED FOREVER

KILLED PERMANENTLY
From face or body without harm to skin, by following easy directions. Our electrolysis device is used by physicians and is guaranteed to kill hair forever or money refunded. Your electric current not used. Only $1.95 complete. Prepaid or C.O.D. plus postage.

CANFIELD ELECTROLYSIS CO., 2-H, 2675 Broadway, N.Y.City

Darling, your hair's SO LOVABLE!

Not a fly-a-way hair in sight . . . yet she shampooed that hair only a few hours ago.

● Does your present shampoo leave your hair bodiless? Make you think you've got a dried-out mop? Then try the new oil shampoo used by beauty specialists. It's an oil shampoo that FOAMS! Water can be hot, cold, hard or soft. Wonderful for dry, coarse or heavy hair. Oily hair benefits too. Science says you should combat excessive oiliness with oil. For lustrous, clean hair that stays set, ask for Admiracion FOAMY Oil Shampoo. Three 3¢ stamps bring a sample. Admiracion, Harrison, N. J.

Should you prefer an oil shampoo that makes no lather, ask for Admiracion Olive Oil Shampoo in the RED package.

In new GREEN package
ADMIRACION
FOAMY OIL SHAMPOO

I WANT YOU
Work for "Uncle Sam"
Start $1260 to $2100 a year
MEN—WOMEN. Common education usually sufficient. 42,766 appointments 1937 Gov't year. Short hours. Write today sure for free 32-page book, with list of positions and full particulars telling how to qualify for them.
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. R267 Rochester, N. Y.

Happy Relief From Painful Backache
Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Jack got the vacancy, and for six months he played the small-time circuit. He became familiar with split weeks, with cold trains and all the unglamorous drudgery of that branch of the theatrical game. But he couldn't be dismayed. He saved enough to tour the New York booking offices and land with Winnie Lightner on the Keith Circuit. Winnie had some singing and dancing girls for background, and one of them was Florence McFadden, a blue-eyed blonde who was terribly in earnest. Jack didn't pay any special attention to her then.

But a half-year later, which was just one year after he'd begun his career, he formed his own act. Within a few months he was appearing at the Palace Theatre in New York City, the mecca of all vaudeville artists.

"I'd stopped practicing putting on make-up!" he grins, remembering. "When I won that first job I nearly bought out the drugstore and I had to try the grease-paint on in front of all the customers. Then my landlady objected so forcefully to my ruining her towels that I began taking my trimmings easier!"

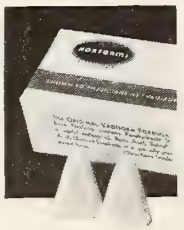
He admits that he was scared stiff when he went on at the Palace for the first time. "Sophie Tucker and a lot of big folks were on that bill. Once I got into my routine I was all right, but how I suffered each day while I was waiting to go on. It's been worse than dreaming you were caught short on Park Avenue without a stitch on, that fear of not making good which has pursued me."

Jack splurged for the last time then. He bought a car. You really don't need a car in New York City, as he subsequently discovered. But if he hadn't bought that car he might never have found the one girl. He checked over his address book and rode out to the McFadden's. The elder sister wasn't in, but Florence was. So he asked her to go driving with him anyway. After that he discerned a growing yearning for her company.

"I liked Jack," Florence Haley remarks, "because he didn't look like an actor. He didn't talk about himself unless you probed. Then, too, I liked the way he treated his mother and went to church with her. He was self-respecting and serious."

WHENEVER he was in the city from his out-of-town engagements Jack and Florence used to invite half-a-dozen friends over to cook a community dinner. Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa, Jack Benny and Mary Livingston, and George Burns and Gracie Allen were particular pals. That was before radio had skyrocketed them to fame.

He could have made the jump into Broadway musical revues three years sooner if he hadn't been deviled by his peculiar handicap.



"I was a hit at the Palace and a producer sent for me to come over to his office to discuss a lead. He gave me the script and told me he was quite sure I'd do. Next day, when I was to read it along with several others, I only got as far as the theatre. I just couldn't make myself go in. I never even tried for the part!"

But after his three years of big-time vaudeville he mustered up sufficient confidence to tackle the revue producers again. Two seasons of headlining and he came to another turning-point. He had gradually reorganized his ideas about women. He saw that love wasn't a casual matter at all. He saw romance in its true colors, as a beautiful, essential experience. As a lasting reinforcement he wanted it. He awoke to the fact that Florence was far more than pretty. He appreciated her sterling qualities. They were married between a matinée and evening show.

But because Jack went up so fast, and

FEMININE HYGIENE made easy

THE MODERN METHOD
Norforms are ready for use. There's nothing to mix, nothing to measure. You don't have to worry about an "overdose" or "burn." No apparatus is needed to apply Norforms. They are the modern way to feminine hygiene.

NORFORMS have revolutionized feminine hygiene—made it simple, convenient and easy. These antiseptic suppositories are very easy to use... much more convenient and satisfactory than the old methods of achieving inner cleanliness. They leave no embarrassing antiseptic odor around the room or about your person.

Norforms melt at internal body temperature, releasing a concentrated yet non-irritating antiseptic film that remains in prolonged and effective contact. This antiseptic—anhydro-para-hydroxy-mercuri-meta-cresol—called Parahydrecin for short—is available in no other product for feminine hygiene. Norforms are positively antiseptic and non-irritating.

MILLIONS USED EVERY YEAR
Send for the new Norforms booklet, "Feminine Hygiene Made Easy." Or, buy a box of Norforms at your druggist's today. 12 in a package, complete with leaflet of instructions. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, New York; Toronto, Canada; makers of Unguentine.

NORFORMS

© N. P. C. 1938 Known to Physicians as "Vagiforms"

WILL YOU HAVE CURLS in the morning? Yes, if they are set with Nestle Superset! This wave-lotion keeps your hair beautifully curled and perfectly in place for days.

ALL SET TO GO PLACES, with your hair always well-groomed. You can depend on Superset, the long-lasting, quick-drying wave-set that is never sticky or flaky.

Superset is the superior wave-set lotion that smart women prefer. It moulds the hair in smooth waves and curls; dries in record time; leaves the hair soft and clean. There is no greasy or flaky deposit. Superset waves last longer, too -- your hair is always at its best.

Choose either kind of Superset -- the regular (green) or the new No. 2 (transparent and extra fast-drying). Get the large bottle with the comb-dip neck at all 10-cent stores . . 10c

Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Nestle SUPERSET WAVING LOTION

Sharmonel Beauty Course

$1.00 A complete Professional Beauty Course (Simplified). $1.00 Cash or M. O. Earn while you learn at home. $1.00

Box 408, Cincinnati, Ohio

TEETH Hard to Bryten?

STAINS DISAPPEAR QUICKLY—even stubborn smoke stains—with Iodent No. 2 Tooth Paste or Powder. Specially compounded by a Dentist to clean hard-to-bryten teeth safely. Polishes your teeth to glistening beauty. Also made in No. 1 texture for teeth easy-to-bryten. Try Iodent—enjoy its purity and delicious minty flavor.

IODENT

No. 1 FOR TEETH EASY TO BRYTEN TOOTH PASTE also POWDER No. 2 FOR TEETH HARD TO BRYTEN

was a Broadway favorite in his early twenties, don't think that he was able to stop there. An audience doesn't clap at every production, you know, even though those who are in it have the best of intentions. He was so blue over the revue role he was doing when they married that he went back into vaudeville. Florence teamed with him.

After a season they had their introduction to Hollywood. A studio signed them for a two-reel reproduction of their act. After that Jack signed as master of ceremonies in a Los Angeles movie house.

"I had a chance to stay on indefinitely, but I also had one of my inspirations. A Chicago company of 'Good News' was being organized and I was offered the lead."

He did so splendidly in it that a pair of prominent writers wrote "Follow Thru" for him and starred him on Broadway in it. Remember "Button Up Your Overcoat?" That was Jack's song. Two years afterwards he introduced the equally popular tune, "You're an Old Smoothie."

But even when he was imported by Hollywood the following year he never became a smoothie in reality. He is proud of the Haley name. First he and Florence had a daughter, and then a son. The children are the apples of his eye.

A year ago Jack bought a house in Beverly Hills for his family. It's in a fashionable neighborhood and there is a swimming pool in the garden. But he candidly says that he bought it at a great bargain and wouldn't have put in the pool if he hadn't known it would enhance the re-sale value. He is among the well-to-to because he has remained conservative in spite of his increasing salary, because he has carefully, habitually invested a major share of his income. He has the blood of Erin coursing through his veins, but he's a smart Irishman. He wants a roof for his family in the future, as well as now when the spotlight's shining.

He hopes he can go on and on with his acting, and he finds Hollywood an ideal place to live. The Allens, the Bennys, and the Burnses and Benny Rubin remain the Haleys' best friends. "Yet we don't have any more fun than we did when the girls fixed up a spread in someone's tiny apartment, back in our New York vaudeville days!" Pictures aren't as difficult as vaudeville, incidentally. "There one had to absolutely depend upon himself. You either clicked or you didn't. Nobody advised you how to get on, or gave you a retake."

Still, he is remarkably honest when he concludes, "If I had to begin today I doubt if I could get over at all on the screen. I don't see how beginners can secure any training. Comedy after all is developed by audience reaction; fundamentally, it's a matter of timing. If you haven't an audience to practice on, if you can't alter and polish, how can you improve?"

The big shot among forgotten magnetic men—if there is such a tribe—is the success who has finally made good with Hollywood itself. It's a grand and faintly ironic feeling that bubbles over in Jack today. And if he isn't upsetting himself or the one he loves, nevertheless he is excited beneath his calm at this late recognition.

"Imagine!" he exclaims with a modest whistle. His blue eyes are more sky-blue than ever as his cherubic face lights up. He gives an embarrassed shrug, then a puzzled look possesses him. "I never quite understood why nobody ever wanted to interview me before. You know I've really been getting paid very well all along. I guess I shouldn't admit it, but I always wondered—secretly—why no one ever got any assignments to talk to me. And now I'm, well, I'm afraid I won't come up to your expectations!"

Hand your applause to Haley. He deserves it.

YOU simply can't wear a hard-base powder and escape criticism in this day of beautiful women. A hard-base powder is bound to show up chalky in one light—dusky in another . . . because hard-base powders are made that way.

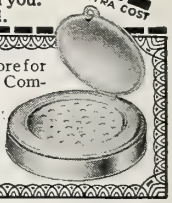
Lovely Lady Face Powder is winning new friends by thousands, because it contains BALMITE, an exquisite new SOFT-BASE—blends out to harmonize with all these daily variations in light—never looks chalky or muddy in any light.



The one powder for important occasions—when you must know that you're just gloriously beautiful!

Try it!—today. Choose your favorite shade. See how evenly and smoothly Lovely Lady goes on—how silky-soft it feels to your skin—and really, how much longer it banishes troublesome shine. You'll adore it! At any 10c store—take this coupon with you.

FREE OF EXTRA COST

Lovely Lady, Chicago, Ill.

Take this coupon to any 10c store for 4 color convertible Spill-proof Compact absolutely FREE with purchase of 10c or 20c box of new Lovely Lady Face Powder. If out, ask store manager —he can get yours for you.

FRECKLES

DISAPPEAR in 5 to 10 days

Don't worry over unsightly freckles. Here's a new way to remove them quickly and gently while you sleep. Simply apply Nadinola Freckle Cream over face and arms at night. Then watch freckles disappear usually in 5 to 10 days. Your skin is cleared, freshened, becomes satin-smooth. NADINOLA Freckle Cream is guaranteed by a laboratory with over 36 years' experience in this type of skin treatment. Only 60c at toilet counters; 10c size at Five and Ten Cent Stores. • Or send a dime for trial package to NADINOLA, Dept. 155, Paris, Tenn.

NADINOLA Freckle Cream

The least little thing can break the intimate charm of a "close-up." Play safe—don't wear glaring, conspicuous bob pins.

Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins (made exclusively by Sta-Rite) are dull textured—won't shine in your hair. They come in four colors to blend with any hair.

Smoothly finished on the inside, Blend-Rites slide in with utmost ease. "Tension-tite," they hold the hair in place securely.

Ask your dealer for Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins by Sta-Rite. If he cannot supply you send 10¢ mentioning color wanted (brown, blonde, black or gray) to Dept. M4, Sta-Rite Hair Pin Co., Shelbyville, Illinois.

97

STA-RITE Hair Pins Bob Pins

LAW STUDY AT HOME

Win greater respect and success. Learn more, earn more. We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Degree of LL. B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Training for Leadership" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept. 6318L, Chicago

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove the hair permanently, safely, privately at home, following simple directions with proper care. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Also used by professionals. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Illustrated Booklet, "How to Remove Superfluous Hair Forever." D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36F, Providence, R. I.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE . . .

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

GARBO FINDS LOVE

(Continued from page 24)

deprived of. To thoroughly enjoy the complete companionship of the man she loves satisfies her at the moment. Dwelling near him in a flower-decked villa by the sea, with time to revel in his company, is more bliss than she has believed ever could be hers. And yet, she is timid about announcing her new-found happiness to the world. She continues to hide her love behind words like friendship and companionship. Is it because she feels that to confide her feeling would be to lose her chance of its continuance? Perhaps.

And, as we go to press, word comes to us that Garbo and Stokowski have silently stolen away from their retreat in Ravello and have moved on to Taormina, a seaside village in Sicily. Rumor is rife that here, under the shadow of the ever-smoking volcano, Mount Etna, they will be married.

Whether they will or not, only time will tell, but the fact remains that Greta Garbo has found love, which she always feared was not in store for her. And, knowing values as she does, it is our guess that she will keep it, and our wish that she will find continued happiness in the companionship of the man she loves—Leopold Stokowski.

HER STAND-IN MADE HER A STAND-OUT

(Continued from page 70)

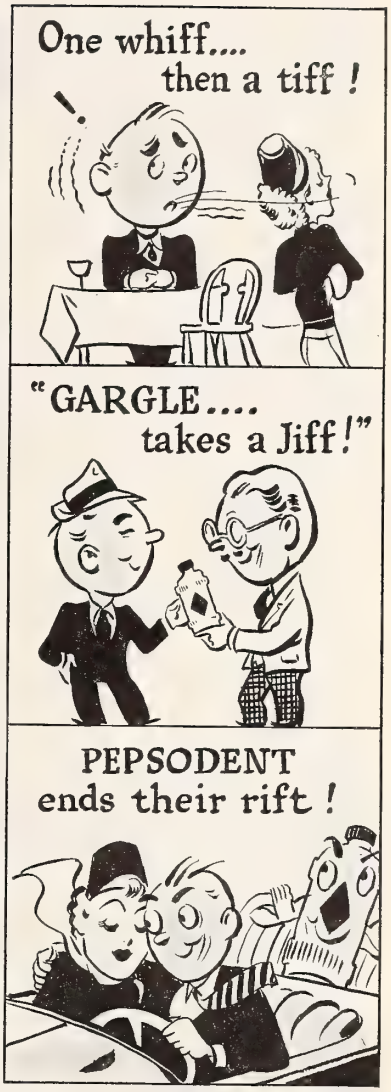
I finished out my nine-week course. So I went to work as a model.

"I learned a little more about acting. Not much, but a little, and every little bit helped, believe me. Especially when a studio offered me a screen test. I took the test from 8:30 to 12:30, and at 3:30 that afternoon was on the train to 'Looahvul.' Four days later Judi finished her course, and came down to visit me. She was there when word came for me to get started for Hollywood. So mother and I set out. And Judi cried all over the place, she was so happy for me."

In Hollywood, the newly-arrived and ambitious Marjorie felt that she was getting nowhere. She was discouraged, unhappy.



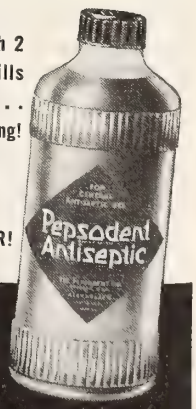
"I kept writing Judi about it. And Judi didn't come right back at me with a bunch of pep talks—which wouldn't have done any good. She wrote: 'I got you into it, and if you don't like it, honey, I'm all for your getting out of it. Come on home and get married and forget Hollywood.'"

"I wasn't disappointed in Marjorie," interrupted Judi. "I was disappointed in Hollywood. I wrote her that, too."

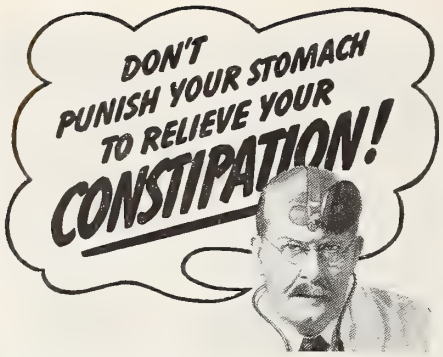
"It helped, too," said Marjorie, "but Mother was the one who made me stick it out. Mothers are that way. 'No, you've got to stay. You've got to show them.' I'd pack my bag and she'd unpack it. When my contract was almost up, and I knew it wasn't going to be renewed, we had quite some scenes. I said I couldn't see spending her money to stay in Hollywood, just to hope.

"But, almost immediately, another studio signed me. That was a year ago. I saw I was going to learn things, have a chance. I wired Judi: 'Come on out—we're on our way.'"

She did extra work at first. "I wasn't deserving of a stand-in till 'Second Honeymoon.' They told me about the second day



In Germ-killing power...



1 BOTTLE
PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC EQUALS 3 BOTTLES OF ORDINARY KINDS

Even when diluted with 2 parts water, still kills germs in seconds . . . Lasts 3 times as long!

MAKES YOUR MONEY GO 3 TIMES AS FAR!

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC keeps your MOUTH and BREATH SWEETER HOURS LONGER

IF you're "blue," no pep, out of sorts due to constipation, don't risk making matters worse. Win back normal energy and pep the way millions of others do — with FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing gum laxative! It gives you all three of these great benefits:

1. NO STOMACH UPSET — With FEEN-A-MINT you don't swallow a heavy, bulky dose; there's nothing to burden digestion.
2. CHEWING AIDS DIGESTION—The chewing stimulates the flow of the same natural alkaline fluids that help food digest.
3. ACTS WHERE YOU NEED IT — FEEN-A-MINT's tasteless laxative ingredient does not interfere with stomach action but passes to the intestine and does its work where it should—easily, pleasantly, comfortably.

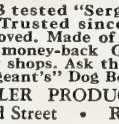
You'll bless FEEN-A-MINT's gentle, thorough, dependable results. FEEN-A-MINT is marvelous for children too. They love the taste. Won't gripe, nauseate, or disturb sleep. Get a package today at your druggists, or write for generous FREE trial package. Dept. 68, FEEN-A-MINT, Newark, N. J.

NO OTHER TYPE OF LAXATIVE CAN DO EXACTLY WHAT FEEN-A-MINT DOES

Hundreds of intimate candid camera shots of your favorites in the July Modern Screen

LUCKY NAME PLATE FOR CANARY CAGE FREE



Handsome Good Luck Charm, in colors. Lettered with your Canary's name. Fastens easily on side of cage. Simply mail box top from French's Bird Seed or French's Bird Gravel and Canary's name to:

R. T. French Co., 2281 Mustard St., Rochester, N. Y.

MY WORM MEDICINES ARE SAFE AND EASY FOR OWNERS TO GIVE

There are 23 tested "Sergeant's" Dog Medicines. Trusted since 1879. Constantly improved. Made of finest drugs. Sold under money-back Guarantee by drug and pet shops. Ask them for a free copy of "Sergeant's" Dog Book, or write:
POLK MILLER PRODUCTS CORP.
506 W. Broad Street • Richmond, Va.
Copr. 1938, Polk Miller Products Corp.

Sergeant's DOG MEDICINES

that I could have one. I spoke up for Judi. They found out that we didn't look very much alike, and kept saying 'No.' Finally, I said, 'Look—she's my best friend. She's got to have the job.' I needed her now, more than ever. I needed her advice and encouragement. I needed her help to make the most of the chance I had.

"She was the one who had the belief that I had talent. I wasn't. I just had the desire to have talent. Judi thought I could act, but didn't quite know how. She'd rehearse me for hours on end. She had the patience to do that. She cried at the preview, boohooed like a baby. She said, 'You've done it!'

"I dreaded that preview. I didn't see how I could live through the agony, or how I'd be able to live afterward. I could just hear people saying, 'That terrible girl, so silly, so gapey. She can't act.' I still can't understand why they didn't say all that. I can't see why they said I was 'new and different.' I may be new, but I can't see how I'm any different.

"I don't know what kind of rôles Mr. Zanuck has in mind for me, but I have a hunch. 'Natural' rôles. If he ever called on me to be a dramatic actress, I know I'd be all hands and feet. At least for a couple of years yet. And if they ever wanted me to play a beauty—that would be just as bad. I don't have so much as one dimple."

AFTER "Second Honeymoon," Louisville wanted her to make a personal appearance there. And she was all set to go, when her phone rang. The man calling said he was Gene Markey, the producer.

"The idea of Gene Markey calling me was preposterous. I suspected it was the publicity man on the picture. He was always kidding. I said, 'Not Gene Markey, the big shot?' 'Yes, Gene Markey—the, er, big shot.' He had a rôle for me in 'Sally, Irene and Mary.' I joked right back. Finally, he said, 'If you don't listen to me, young lady, I'll tell Mr. Zunck on you.' Then he gave up.

"The next morning, Mr. Markey's secretary called me and said, 'If you don't come right over, he'll drag you here.' If I ever wanted to sink straight through to China, that was the time. I worried for two days about losing my job.

"And I," said Judi, "helped her worry. I did some of the talking over the telephone that night."

Marjorie fastened those shining brown eyes on me. "Do you want to know what gives me the most marvelous feeling in the world? To be in the picture at the end of ten days. By that time I feel as if they're going to leave me in it. I live in mortal dread of being in a picture only two days and then being yanked. When that happens, it will take more than encouragement to get me to stay in Hollywood. I don't know if I could take it."

Is she afraid that success will do things to her friendship with Judi?

Their instant, whole-hearted smiles were reassuring answers to such a question. Marjorie said, "We live the same as we did in college, except that Mother's with us. We sleep in the same room. We both wear the famous black hat. We're two girl-friends, having a grand time together.

"I'd still be myself if I were in Judi's shoes and she were in mine. If I ever started acting any differently toward her, that would be the first touch of 'going Hollywood.'"

Judi leaned toward me and said, confidentially, "Don't worry about Judi. She'll never be mistreated. Not by Marjorie Weaver.' Judi added, "And with her looks and her talent, and my ambition for her—well, what's going to happen to Garbo and Dietrich?"

"Try SITROUX TISSUES, girls! They're delightfully soft . . . and Stronger"

. . . says lovely GLENDA FARRELL Warner Bros. Star

Stars of stage and screen . . . beautiful women everywhere prefer Sitroux Tissues! So delicately soft, their touch is like a caress—yet so much stronger, they hold together; won't "come apart" in the hand! That's why they're so ideal for cleansing the skin. Why not care for YOUR complexion the way Glenda Farrell does—with SITROUX tissues (pronounced "SIT-TRUE"). Get a box today!

IN THE BLUE-AND-GOLD BOX 10¢ AND 20¢ SIZES

AT YOUR FAVORITE 5 and 10¢ STORE

TOUCH UP GRAY STREAKS

ANY COLOR LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your own home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. $1.35, for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE. State original hair color
Brookline Chemical Co., Dept. M-68
79 Sudbury St., Boston, Mass.

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly, embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. PRINT NAME PLAINLY. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Walgreen Drug Stores.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

Lake Laboratories, Box 6, Northwestern Station, Dept. 606, Detroit, Mich.

BE A NURSE

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 39th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 236, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____

New beauty for your hair . . . with this new 4 Purpose Rinse

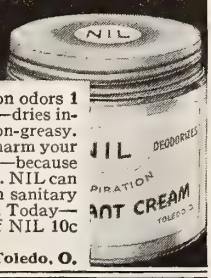
Lovalon, the 4 Purpose Rinse does all these four things for your hair in one quick, easy operation:

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Keeps hair neatly in place.

Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. See the life and sparkle and healthful, youthful glow it gives your hair.



Lovalon comes in 12 different shades. You can match and enrich the natural color of your hair or make it brighter or deeper. Lovalon does not dye or bleach. It's a pure, vegetable, odorless hair rinse—one of the very few hair toiletries approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Package of 5 for 25¢ at drug and dept. stores. Trial size at 10¢ stores. (Or, any good beauty shop will Lovalon your hair.)

LOVALON

the 4 purpose hair rinse

NIL ENDS UGLY ODOR OF PERSPIRATION

Instantly checks perspiration odors 1 to 3 days. Smooth on NIL—dries instantly—won't rub off—non-greasy. Perspiration acids can't harm your clothes when you use NIL—because NIL neutralizes these acids. NIL can be used after shaving, or on sanitary napkins—won't irritate . . . Today—get the generous 1 oz. jar of NIL 10c—at leading 10c stores.

NIL LABORATORIES • Toledo, O.

Try a VEGETABLE LAXATIVE

What a Difference!

IF you think all laxatives act alike . . . just try the ALL-VEGETABLE laxative, Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) . . . so mild, thorough, refreshing and invigorating.

Dependable relief for sick headaches, bilious spells and that tired-out feeling, when caused by or associated with constipation.

Without Risk get a 25c box of NRs from any druggist. Use for one week; if you are not more than pleased, return the box and we will refund the purchase price. That's fair. Try it — NR Tonight — Tomorrow Alright.

Nature's Remedy REG. U.S. PAT. OFFICE NR-TABLETS-NR

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 97)

Madeleine Carroll put in a strenuous day on the "The Adventuress" set a while back. The scene was a shell-torn Spanish town, and the action called for Henry Fonda to drag Miss C. over a pile of rocks. The thing was shot over and over again, until Madeleine called a halt and took time out to bolster her posterior with a pillow. War is one thing, but a girl's anatomy is certainly another.

Ingenuity Plus

It took a prop man to solve a momentous problem on the set of "White Banners" the other day. The scene they were shooting showed Jackie Cooper, in tweed knickers, leaving the home of Bonita Granville to go skating. Everything was set when the cameraman announced that the tweed trousers would photograph white, which would never do. The director, the assistant director and everyone else sat down to confer, when the prop man produced a spray gun, sprayed the Cooper pants with brown lacquer, and the show went on.

■ ■ ■

Rosalind Russell stopped in at a prominent Hollywood beauty parlor recently and was talked into a "personality" hair-do. After being sculptured to perfection, she was led out to the dryers. Rosalind took a look at the other gals in the room and discovered they all had "personality" treatments. Miss R., after a few censored remarks, ripped heck out of her new personality and walked out of the "jernt."

Technician Loy

Press Agent Item: "Myrna Loy is so interested in 'process' shots that she spent an entire day at the studio, when her own work was finished, watching Clark Gable doing 'process' scenes for 'Test Pilot.'" Miss Loy's interest in the technical end of pictures is Hollywood legend. She often amuses, but never surprises, her co-workers by insisting on building her own sets. Between scenes she can always be found rearranging the heavy arc lights, or "grips," as she calls them.

■ ■ ■

Mae West, who has long been rumored the owner of the Ravenswood Apartments in Hollywood, where she lives, denies everything. Mae says she hasn't an apartment house to her name. As a matter of fact, the Ravenswood is owned by the George Pepperdine Foundation, a philanthropic organization, and Mae's rent helps support a Home for underprivileged girls, a classification in which Mae herself has never been included.

Sam's Fraud

Samuel Goldwyn is beamingly happy over the fact that his highly publicized Norwegian star, Sigrid Gurie, turned out to be a fraud. Sam, who imported her from Norway, spent a year teaching her English, and not until a mysterious husband sued her for divorce did he learn that Miss G. was born and raised in good old Brooklyn, where a number of elementary schools include English on their regular curricula. But it's all good publicity, and Mr. Goldwyn has yet to shudder at a press clipping.

FOOT ITCH
ATHLETE'S FOOT

Send Coupon

Don't Pay Until Relieved

According to the Government Health Bulletin No. E-28, at least 50% of the adult population of the United States are being attacked by the disease known as Athlete's Foot.

Usually the disease starts between the toes. Little watery blisters form and the skin cracks and peels. After a while the itching becomes intense and you feel as though you would like to scratch off all the skin.

Beware of It Spreading

Often the disease travels all over the bottom of the feet. The soles of your feet become red and swollen. The skin also cracks and peels, and the itching becomes worse and worse.

Get rid of this disease as quickly as possible, because it is very contagious and it may go to your hands or even to the under arm or crotch of the legs.

Most people who have Athlete's Foot have tried all kinds of remedies to cure it without success. Ordinary germicides, antiseptics, salve or ointments, seldom do any good.

Here's How to Treat It

The germ that causes the disease is known as Tinea Trichophyton. It buries itself deep in the tissues of the skin and is very hard to kill. A test made shows it takes 15 minutes of boiling to kill the germ, so you can see why the ordinary remedies are unsuccessful.

H. F. was developed solely for the purpose of treating Athlete's Foot. It is a liquid that penetrates and dries quickly. You just paint the affected parts. It peels off the tissue of the skin where the germ breeds.

Itching Stops Immediately

As soon as you apply H. F. you will find that the itching is immediately relieved. You should paint the infected parts with H. F. night and morning until your feet are well. Usually this takes from three to ten days, although in severe cases it may take longer or in mild cases less time.

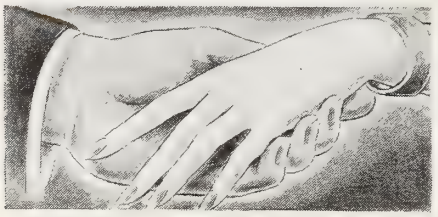
H. F. will leave the skin soft and smooth. You will marvel at the quick way it brings you relief; especially if you are one of those who have tried for years to get rid of Athlete's Foot without success.

H. F. Sent on Free Trial

Sign and mail the coupon and a bottle of H.F. will be mailed you immediately. Don't send any money and don't pay the postman any money, don't pay anything any time unless H. F. is helping you. If it does help we know you will be glad to send us $1 for the treatment at the end of ten days. That's how much faith we have in H. F. Read, sign, and mail the coupon today.

GORE PRODUCTS, INC.
829 Perdido St., New Orleans, La. M

Please send me immediately a complete treatment for foot trouble as described above. I agree to use it according to directions. If at the end of 10 days my feet are getting better I will send you $1. If I am not entirely satisfied I will return the unused portion of the bottle to you within 15 days from the time I receive it.



NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

CITY..... STATE.....

YOUR FINGER NAILS WORK HARD ALL DAY...

SO KEEP THEM NICE THE Wigder WAY

WELL-GROOMED women insist upon the Wigder Nail File to keep nails smooth and shapely. Note the triple-cut teeth for fast, even filing; the special Improved Cleaner Point that safeguards the tender skin under the nail. Ask for the Wigder File!

On sale at all drug and 10-cent stores

10¢ Wigder

NEWARK NEW JERSEY

quality costs no more

NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

HOLLYWOOD MASK LIPSTICK

For glamorous lips, use Hollywood Mask Lipstick! Choice of 5 heavenly shades. Match with Hollywood Mask Rouge for thrilling cheek glow; and Hollywood Mask Powder, velvet-soft and clinging. A make-up ensemble that re-creates YOU! At 5 and 10c counters.

The movie star method! Make-up Chart keyed to your coloring FREE with 10c purchase. Or send 10c stating shade of hair, eyes and item desired. Hollywood Mask, 105 W. Monroe, Chicago.

Sensational FREE Offer

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous REJUVIA Lipsticks "None Better Made" FREE...each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks...that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

REJUVIA LIPSTICK

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. RM116 W. 14th ST., N. Y. C.
Send me 3 trial size REJUVIA Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs. (15c in Canada).

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

ONLY 10¢ AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 81)

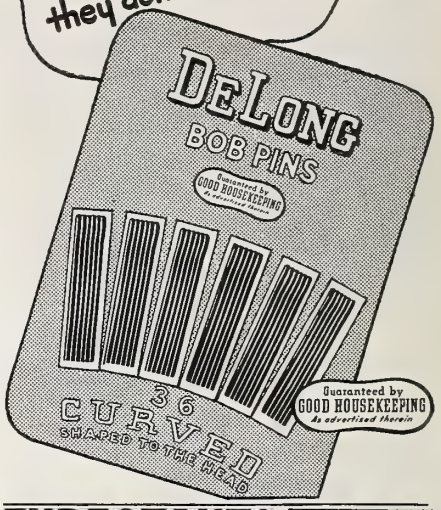
★★ Sally, Irene and Mary

"Sally, Irene and Mary" is an average screen musical, worth seeing because it is full of gags (some good and some you-know-what), because there are several good musical numbers, and mainly because it has Fred Allen. The persimmon-panned Mr. A. walks away with the show.

Sally, Irene and Mary are the names Mr. Zanuck has given Alice Faye, Joan Davis and Marjorie Weaver, three stage-struck manicurists who have placed themselves under the management of Allen, a shoestring theatrical producer. Their plans for a musical blow up when Alice Faye falls in love with singer Tony Martin, who is the sweetheart of the show's potential backer, Louise Hovick. Later Marjorie Weaver inherits a worn-out river barge, and with the help of Gregory Ratoff and a little tinsel the thing is converted into a showboat—and the show goes on.

Alice Faye and Tony Martin handle the romantic tunes effectively, and Joan Davis and Gregory Ratoff furnish a riotous moment with their parody on a Russian number. Jimmy Durante, as a street cleaner who becomes a producer, furnishes his own robust type of comedy and draws his share of the laughs. Marjorie Weaver, who has little to do, is disappointing. Directed by William Seiter.—(20th Century-Fox).

★★ Fools for Scandal



Mark this down as one of the season's major disappointments. With Mervyn LeRoy at the helm and a cast headed by Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet, the picture should have been a howling success, and audiences have a right to expect just that. What they get is a confused mixture of slapstick and supposedly continental comedy, and the result can hardly be recommended to discriminating patrons—unless an extra special set of dishes goes with it.

The story deals with the romance between an American movie star incognito in Paris and an impoverished marquis who charms her with crepes suzette and a Gallic manner. The personable nobleman joins her household staff as a cook, breaks up her engagement to a stuffy insurance salesman (Ralph Bellamy) and wins her for what a blessing they don't show in your hair

Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet are "Fools for Scandal" but it's all in good fun.

EXPECTANT?

Consult your doctor regularly before and after baby comes. Ask him about easily cleaned Hygeia Nipples and Bottles. New patented ridge prevents nipple collapse. Tab keeps nipple germ-free. Don't take chances. Insist on Hygeia, the safe nursing bottle and nipple.

HYGEIA NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE

SAFEST because easiest to clean

MILLIONS ALWAYS WEAR

—At Hosiery Counters 20¢ PAIR

ROMANCE WRECKED BY UGLY PIMPLES?

Here is how to help keep skin-irritating poisons from your blood

Don't let repulsive-looking hickies rob you of charm . . . ruin your chances for friendship and affection . . . spoil your good times. Find out what the trouble may be, and take steps to correct it.

During the years of adolescence, from 13 to 25, important glands are developing. These gland changes upset your system.

At the same time intestinal waste poisons are often deposited in the blood stream, and may irritate the sensitive skin of your face and shoulders. Pimples break out.

Fortunately, there is a way to help keep these skin-irritating poisons out of your blood. Eat Fleischmann's Yeast, 3 cakes a day. The millions of tiny, living plants in each cake of this fresh food help to remove the wastes the natural way and clear the skin of pimples. Thousands of young people get results in 30 days or less. Act now. Get Fleischmann's Yeast and eat it faithfully. See how your skin clears up.

DRY SKIN SOFTENED NEW HOLLYWOOD WAY

With Same Cream The Stars Use

TAYTON'S CREAM

Floats Away Dirt, Dissolves, Dry, Rough Skin. Smooths—Softens, Powder Stays On

★ EVELYN DAW

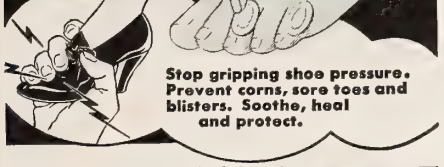
The lovely star with Jimmy Cagney in "Something to Sing About," says—"I use Tayton's Cream to cleanse and keep my skin smooth and youthful looking.

Approved By Good Housekeeping Bureau

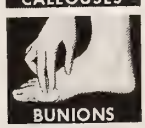


Test This Thrilling Beauty Discovery UNDER MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Make your skin smooth, soft and alluring like the stars do. . . . TAYTON'S CREAM releases precious triple-whipped emollients that cleanse and also dissolve dry, scaly skin cells that cause roughness, your powder to flake off, skin to shine, look parched and old. Lubricates dryness. Flushes blackheads. Rouses oil glands. Helps bring out new, live, fresh skin. Thousands praise it. Try it. Give your skin these new beauty benefits like the movie stars do. Get TAYTON'S CREAM at your 10c store or drug store. Cleanse with it, also use it as a night cream. If your skin is not smoother, softer and younger looking after first application, your money will be refunded. If your dealer is out, send your order with 25c to us, address below.

FREE New glamour lipstick and face powder the stars use. Send label from 25c jar of Tayton's Cream and 3c stamp with your name and address to Tayton Company Dept. D, 811 West 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif. and generous trial of all five shades of powder and also lipstick will be sent you. State lipstick color.

CORNS



Relief In ONE Minute

Stop gripping shoe pressure. Prevent corns, sore toes and blisters. Soothe, heal and protect.

Aching corns, painful callouses, throbbing bunions, sore toes—all are instantly relieved when you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. They end gripping shoe pressure on the sensitive spot; soothe irritated nerves; prevent corns, sore toes and blisters. Make new or tight shoes fit with slipper-like ease! Safe, sure.

Corns, Callouses Soon Lift Out

Corns or callouses soon lift out when you use Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads with the separate Medication, included in every box.

Made THIN and THICK in sizes and shapes for all conditions. Cost but a trifle. FREE sample (Corn size) also Dr. Scholl's FOOT Booklet—address Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Chicago, Ill.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

There is a Dr. Scholl Remedy, Appliance or Arch Support for Every Foot Trouble himself. Handled with more skill, this plot might have formed the groundwork for swell comedy. As it is, it will confuse some audiences and bore others.

Fernand Gravet suffers by comparison with his American screen debut in "The King and the Chorus Girl," although he manages to lend his role more charm and appeal than a less capable actor would have given it. Carole Lombard's fans are in for a letdown, for her work doesn't measure up to the hilarious portrayals she has recently given the screen. Ralph Bellamy is excellent as the insurance salesman, and Marie Wilson gets laughs as Miss Lombard's maid. Isabel Jeans, Allen Jenkins and Marcia Ralston head the supporting cast.

Directed by Mervyn Le Roy.—(First National).

★★ Romance in the Dark

If the advertisements for this one mention "a new Gladys Swarthout" you can pretty well believe them, for "Romance in the Dark" offers Miss Swarthout the best opportunity she has had in pictures. Paramount has contrived a neat comedy with music which should win her many new friends.

Best thing about the picture is that its music fits inobtrusively into the story. There are nine musical numbers in the film, some sung by Miss Swarthout alone and some in duet with John Boles, and they are all pleasant to listen to.

Comedy is supplied in abundance by John Barrymore, who has recently been busy brightening up the screen with his own special brand of high comedy. As a romantic impressario with a keen eye both for business and beautiful women, he is a constant delight, and walks away with all of his scenes. John Boles appears a bit more relaxed than has been his custom of late, and there are fine supporting rôles by Fritz Feld, Claire Dodd and Curt Bois. There is but one criticism for Miss Swarthout. Despite her beauty, she still appears cold and aloof on the screen, although her work in this picture shows evidence of considerable defrosting. Directed by H. C. Potter.—(Paramount).

★ The First Hundred Years

You've seen this one before. It concerns the modern, sophisticated young couple whose careers conflict. Robert Montgomery wants to go to New Bedford and build ships, and Virginia Bruce prefers to stay in New York with her profitable theatrical agency. They can't agree, so the usual separation ensues. Then there is the alluring Other Woman, admirably played by Binnie Barnes, and the understanding, good-humored Other Man, nicely portrayed by Lee Bowman. Things look helpless until the advent of—surprise!—the elderly relative, who, despite advancing years, turns out to be more modern than either of the young battlers. There are moments of light-hearted banter which are pleasing, and there are several good performances. Main trouble is that it has all been done before, even up to the ending, when the modern young couple is reunited by the old-fashioned stork.

Robert Montgomery, who is used to this sort of thing, plays it well, but he has served his time and should get what he deserves, better rôles in better pictures. Virginia Bruce, unattractively gowned, tried her best to make the young wife a believable person. Allan Dinehart is good as a blustering lawyer, but Warren William seems out of place as a sophisticated New Yorker due to the fact that he wears Spanish sideburns and those shirts with the long, pointed collars. Richard Thorpe directed.—(M-G-M).

LIKE TO TRY IT? Send coupon and 10c (Canada 15c) each to CLARK-MILLNER CO., Dept. 15-F, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago, Ill., for ☐Cream or ☐Stick. Check tint: ☐Light ☐Medium ☐Brunette ☐Sun Tan.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

TODAY'S TALKIES

★★★ Jezebel

If you enjoy a direct and violent assault on your emotions, "Jezebel" will please you. Otherwise it may not.

Background of the story is New Orleans shortly before the Civil War. The yellow fever epidemic of 1853 furnishes its climax and its most exciting moments, even though the film is devoted mainly to a character study of Julie Marsden, its central character. Played by Bette Davis, Julie Marsden is a self-centered and imperious Southern belle in love with a young banker (Henry Fonda). Her own spiteful passion breaks their engagement, but when he returns from the north with a bride (Margaret Lindsay) she will not accept her defeat. Her connivery causes a duel and the death of the hot-headed young man (George Brent) whom she had tricked into defending her honor. The picture's end finds the young banker stricken with yellow fever and sentenced to a leper colony, with Julie Marsden a tragic figure trying to undo some of her wrongs by accompanying the man she loves to the colony and certain death.

Bette Davis does a fine job, and Henry Fonda is capable. Best male performance, however, is George Brent's portrayal of the high-strung Southerner. Others are Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Donald Crisp, Margaret Lindsay, Richard Cromwell and John Litel. Directed by William Wyler.—Warner Brothers.

★★ Merrily We Live

Depicting the antics of a zany family, this film is distinctly of the "My Man Godfrey" school of screen comedies. It has plenty of laughs, manages to be completely cockeyed most of the time, and probably is much funnier than it seems to a reviewer who has seen more than his share of lunatic families on the screen.

This one concerns the Kilbourne family. They are wealthy, of course, because it takes a certain amount of financial security to run a screwy menage. Mrs. Kilbourne (Billie Burke) is a goldfish fancier and a reformer of hoboes, much to the disgust of her husband (Clarence Kolb) and Grosvenor, the butler (Alan Mowbray). Daughter Jerry (Constance Bennett) seems given to mental voids, and her young brother and sister, (Tom Brown and Bonita Granville) spend most of their time bickering with the rest of the family. When an unkempt gent (Brian Aherne) wanders into this set-up he is immediately pounced upon by Mrs. Kilbourne, who wants to reform him, and Grosvenor, who wants to throw him out. Of course, he's really not a hobo at all. He's an author, but no one knows it until the last reel.

"Merrily We Live" is full of robust comedy, and if you aren't jaded with this sort of entertainment, you'll enjoy it a lot. The entire cast is first-rate, each member doing his share to add to the general confusion. Directed by Norman McCleod.—Hal Roach.

★★The Girl of the Golden West

This story of hearts entwined and the old, old west has been done before, but the present version is notable, among other things, for the most spectacular miscasting of the season. It's difficult to imagine Jeanette MacDonald as a saloon keeper, ruling over a bar patronized only by the bearded gentry of a tough Western town. It's no easier to picture Nelson Eddy as a bold, bad bandit with a price on his head.

Jeanette, or Butch, as they must have called her at the Polka Dot saloon, is betrothed to the local sheriff (Walter Pidgeon), who is ambitious to wipe out Ramirez, the much-feared bandit for whom a reward of ten thousand dollars has been offered. When the two finally meet there is much talk of "This Town ain't big enough for the two of us" and other standard Western threats, but the pure love of the beautiful barkeeper for the handsome bandit softens the sheriff's murderous intentions. Nice gesture, too, for it turns out later that Ramirez had been giving all his plunder to charity.

Miss MacDonald affects an exaggerated swagger for her heroine role, while Nelson Eddy's Ramirez could pass for a choir singer on an outing. However, they're not wholly at fault in such flagrant miscasting, and they make up for it with several pleasing songs. Walter Pidgeon and Leo Carrillo stand out in the supporting cast. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard.—M-G-M.

Pick your pictures by our reviews and you'll enjoy them more than ever

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

When work piles up and you're under pressure there's real relief from tension in the use of Beech-Nut Gum! Tests in a large university show that chewing gum helps lessen fatigue . . . improve alertness and mental efficiency. Have a package handy.

Always take Beech-Nut Gum with you in the car . . . it adds pleasure to every trip. Gives relief to your nerves when traffic is heavy . . . keeps your throat moist and refreshed . . . helps you stay awake and alert on long trips and when driving at night.

The use of chewing gum gives your mouth, teeth and gums beneficial exercise. Beech-Nut Oralgene is specially made for this purpose. It is firmer, "chewier" and gives your mouth the exercise it needs.

Opening day–and every day–

BEECH-NUT GUM

is the password to pleasure

ALWAYS REFRESHING

Beech-Nut Peppermint Gum is so good it is the most popular flavor of gum in America.

Beech-Nut Spearmint has a richness you're sure to enjoy.

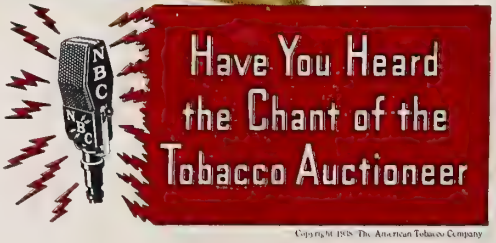
3 KINDS OF BEECHIES

A package full of candy-coated individual pieces of gum—in three flavors—Peppermint, Pepsin and Spearmint—select the kind you like best.

"CHEW WITH A PURPOSE"

Oralgene helps keep teeth clean and fresh-looking . . . is a real aid for mouth health.

With Independent Tobacco Experts..



WITH MEN WHO KNOW TOBACCO BEST

It's Luckies 2 to 1

HERE ARE THE FACTS! Sworn records show that among independent tobacco experts, Lucky Strike has twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together. These men are auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen. They deal with all, but are not connected with any manufacturer. They know tobacco and they smoke Luckies... 2 to 1!

Remember, too, the throat protection of the exclusive process, "It's Toasted." This process removes certain harsh irritants present in all tobacco, and makes Lucky Strike a light smoke—easy on your throat.

Copyright 1938 The American Tobacco Company

HUNDREDS OF INTIMATE PICTURES!

Modern Screen

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

ULY

O

ENTS

JUN 2 .. 1939
PERIODICAL DIVISION

SIMONE SIMON

"HOLLYWOOD IS NOT FOR ME!"
—Sylvia Sidney

Earl Christy

Irresistible
Be divinely Irresistible...be the star of his heart to-night with Irresistible Perfume... A touch on your wrists, your throat and your petite evening muff and you become a more thrilling person to yourself, and to him. Teasing...provocative...irresistible! Discover the exciting new confidence that Irresistible Perfume gives you. Tonight, try Irresistible Perfume. You'll be sparkling, electric, ready to conquer the world and the man! To be completely ravishing use all of the Irresistible Beauty Aids. Certified pure, laboratory tested and approved.
10c at all 5 and 10c stores
Irresistible
TALC
IRRESISTIBLE
YOUR LIPS ALLURE WITH IRRESISTIBLE LIPLURE

Well, I'm Elected——
I've got "Pink Tooth Brush" now!

Neglect, Wrong Care, Ignorance of the Ipana Technique of Gum Massage—all can bring about

"PINK TOOTH BRUSH"

ANN: "Hello, Jane. Well, the laugh's on me—there's a tinge of 'pink' on my tooth brush. What do I do now?"

JANE: "See your dentist, pronto. Cheer up, my pet—maybe it's nothing serious!"

ANN: "Good heavens, I hope not. What did Dr. Bowen tell you?"

JANE: "Mine was a plain case of gums that practically never work—I eat so many soft foods. Believe me, I've been using Ipana with massage ever since. It's made a world of difference in the looks of my teeth and smile!"

ANN: "You make good sense, darling. Guess there's just one thing to do—find out what Dr. Bowen tells me..."

Don't let "Pink Tooth Brush" ruin your smile

WHEN you see "pink tooth brush" see your dentist. You may not be in for serious trouble, but let him decide. Usually, he'll tell you that yours is merely another case of neglected gums. Because so many modern foods are creamy and soft, they fail to give our gums the exercise they need. That's why so many dentists today advise "the healthful stimulation of Ipana with massage."

For Ipana, with massage, is especially designed to help the gums as well as clean the teeth. Each time you brush your teeth, massage a little extra Ipana into your gums. As circulation increases within the gum tissues, gums tend to become firmer, healthier.

Play safe! Change today to Ipana and massage. Help your dentist help you to sounder gums—brighter teeth—a lovelier smile!

* * *

DOUBLE DUTY—Perfected with the aid of over 1,000 dentists, Rubberset's Double Duty Tooth Brush is especially designed to make gum massage easy and more effective.

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

JUN -2 1938 ©CIB 377996

Are You a MODERN CLEOPATRA?

THE GLAMOUR-QUEEN of the Nile knew this fascinating secret — the lure of a smooth and deliciously fragrant skin...

TAKE A TIP from History's No. 1 Charmer and keep always adorable with the romantic, lingering scent of Djer-Kiss Talc.

START your day the Djer-Kiss way! Bathe your entire body with this delightful talc each morning. Djer-Kiss keeps you dainty and refreshed all day . . . Helps you stay cool, for it actually lowers body temperature. Clothes feel more comfortable . . . Makes you alluringly fragrant. Use Djer-Kiss generously, for the cost is surprisingly small. Buy it today at drug and toilet goods counters—25c and 75c sizes. Liberal 10c size at all 10c stores.

The same delightful fragrance in Djer-Kiss Sachet, Eau de Toilette and Face Powder.

YOURS FREE—the exciting new book, "Women Men Love—Which Type Are You?"

—full of valuable hints on how to make yourself more alluring. Just send a post card with your name and address to Parfums Kerkoff, Inc., Dept. A, New York.

... genuine imported talc scented with Djer-Kiss perfume by Kerkoff, Paris.

DJER-KISS
(Pronounced "Dear Kiss")
TALC
By KERKOFF · PARIS

MODERN Screen

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co. Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor

NOW SHOWING

HIZZONER THE MAYOR	6	GEORGE BENJAMIN
MR. B. GOES TO TOWN	8	MACK HUGHES
"HOLLYWOOD IS NOT FOR ME!"	26	NANETTE KUTNER
FOR HE'S A SERIOUS FELLOW	28	GLADYS HALL
THAT GIRL'S HERE AGAIN!	30	IDA ZEITLIN
A MAN WITHOUT FEAR	32	CAROLINE S HOYT
FIRST AID FOR FALLING STARS	34	VIRGINIA VANCE
WRECKING THOSE RUMORS	36	DORA ALBERT
DON AMECHE'S SECRET HAPPINESS	38	MARY PARKES
FAREWELL TO FRANCIS	40	FAITH SERVICE
FIGURE IT OUT THIS WAY	42	MARY MARSHALL
THE SKIPPER AND HIS LADIES	44	MARTHA KERR
THE LOVES OF LAMOUR	46	DOROTHY GULMAN
TEMPESTUOUS TENOR	47	ROBERT McILWAINE
SUIT YOURSELF	48	ANN WILLS
FUNNIEST GAL IN TOWN	50	MARY SHARON

SHORT SUBJECTS

MOVIE REVIEWS	10	WHAT TO SEE
OUR PUZZLE PAGE	14	MOVIE X-WORD
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME	16	PRIZE LETTERS
PORTRAIT GALLERY	19	OF YOUR FAVORITES
OFF THEIR GUARD	51	CANDID SHOTS
GOOD NEWS	62	MOVIE CHATTER
FALL FORECAST	70	NEW KNITS
EXTRA ADDED ATTRACTION!	76	ANITA LOUISE'S RECIPES
INFORMATION DESK	82	QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 2, July, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post-office, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington; San Francisco, California; and Houston, Texas. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E.C. 4, England
Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semifictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

TWO YEARS IN A ROW THE PRIZE AWARD!

Talented Luise Rainer again wins the Academy Award. This time for pathetic Olan in "The Good Earth." Last year for Anna Held in "The Great Ziegfeld." Her new role is her greatest!

Luise Rainer as "THE TOY WIFE"

...who has youth and beauty and all the world to gamble it in..."life slips too hurriedly by, so sip the cup of frivolity and danger while you may"...you will watch with beating heart this sensational drama of New Orleans' gayest, maddest era in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's glamorous production. In the cast also: MELVYN DOUGLAS, ROBERT YOUNG, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Produced by Merian C. Cooper. Screen Play by Zoe Akins.

HIZZONER—THE MAYOR

By GEORGE BENJAMIN

Did you know that comedian Hugh Herbert is a big political figure?

Mr. Herbert writes a column, too. A jack of all trades and master of—all.

DID YOU know that Hugh Herbert is a Mayor? Or, that he's chairman of the Chamber of Commerce?

Yep, there's not a lazy hair in the Herbert head. In fact, besides these "minor" duties, he's honorary editor of the town newspaper, and knocks off a column, too. The town, y'know is Studio City. This doesn't mean the Warner lot either. Nope, it's a growing section all its own, boasting Glenda Farrell as Citizen No. 2, to say nothing of the many other celebrities in residence.

All this Hugh manages after his real job, acting in the movies, is completed. You must admit there's no grass growing under the Screen's No. 1 comedian's feet. For just in case you didn't realize it, our "Woo-Woo" man polled more votes in a recent popularity contest than any other two funnies combined!

Incidentally, Mr. Herbert explained just how he came by that Woo-Woo that's made him famous.

"I didn't really start that Woo-Woo! Oh, my no!" Herbert Amusements, Ltd., stated. "You see, it was actually the extras who made it a go. I was doing a picture with Louis Calhern. We had to do location shots, if the rain stopped. It had been going on for days! Louis and I decided to have a couple one evening. And after—well, shall we say several—we called it a night, never expecting to be called for work next day. But at seven a. m. the phone rang, and they said, 'Report at once!'

"My, my, that was bad! But, what was worse than our heads was that the scene was to be made on a limb up in a tree, about thirty feet off the ground. Louis and I finally got set, and, no sooner did we take an easy breath than along came a strong gust of wind to do us in! Well, as we swayed back, almost toppling, I said, 'Woo-WOO!' The whole company laughed. Very funny, very funny indeed, they thought! What they didn't know was how we felt. After that, every time I walked on a set the extras would give me the Woo-Woo, so I put it in the act."

Just how Hugh Herbert got started doing comedy proves you can never tell when your lucky break will be a disappointment in disguise.

"When I was a kid I used to usher in a stock house uptown," said Hugh. "I was always observant, even to remembering my customers and where they liked to sit. Before long I was entertaining the scrubwomen and stagehands by giving impersonations of the acts. My boss saw me and said if he ever had a spot in the show he'd give it to me. One day he let me paste on a mustache and go on in 'a bit,' but that was enough for my customers to recognize me and give their pal a big hand. Right then and there I took my bows, several of them, to the manager's chagrin."

HERBERT chuckled as he reminisced, "After a few of these 'successes,' I wouldn't go back to ushering. Oh my no! Too far beneath me! Some time later pictures came in, and a girl and I stood behind the screen and did all the voices of the characters. About a year of this and I decided I was big stuff, so I wrote a vaudeville sketch for a fellow and myself. We had an agent and were going to be great; that is, until we drifted apart before our debut. Later on I wrote another for a girl and myself, and we actually played the circuits.

"From this I got an offer to go into a Burlesque. They were to get a new sketch for me, 'til I showed them my own and they liked it. This eventually proved my entree into the legitimate theatre, and I finally wound up on the coast—where all good actors go—Woo-Woo!

"But to get back to Studio City! I sure like being its mayor. We get things done. Have the streets lighted and paved already. It's a growing, important place, Studio City! Y'know, I get them together for council meetings, and the aldermen do things because they must listen to us. We're strong. Why, I sent out two hundred invitations, and four hundred came once! Great response, great!

"Oh, yes," Mr. H. answered. "I do a column on our town paper. Use lots of my fan mail as material. Some are very funny, my yes—very funny. One lady wrote me that I reminded her of her dear departed husband, poor guy, (Continued on page 107)

"When your feet hurt···you hurt all over!"

WM. M. SCHOLL, M. D.

SAYS DR. SCHOLL

"The ill-effects of foot trouble are many. Often they are felt in parts of the body remote from the feet—in the form of backaches, neuritis, arthritic or rheumatic-like pain in the knees, legs and feet, excessive fatigue after standing or walking, etc. . . Besides your general health, your looks, earning power, disposition, personality—all suffer when your feet hurt."

Don't neglect your feet! There is a Dr. Scholl Foot Comfort* Remedy, Appliance or Arch Support for your foot trouble, assuring quick, medically safe relief at small cost. They are the result of 34 years of study, research, laboratory experimenting and clinical testing by this internationally famous foot authority.

CORNS, SORE TOES

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads relieve pain; remove corns. Stop cause—shoe friction and pressure; prevent sore toes, blisters. Thin, soothing, healing, cushioning.

CALLOUSES

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads, special size for callouses, quickly relieve pain, safely remove hard, dead skin. Stop shoe pressure. Very soothing and healing.

BUNIONS

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads for bunions relieve pain; stop shoe pressure on the sore spot. Thin, protective, healing, safe, sure. Won't come off in bath.

SOFT CORNS

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads for soft corns between toes, relieve pain instantly; take pressure off the sore spot; quickly, safely loosen and remove soft corns.

FOOT RELIEF

Dr. Scholl's Kurotex, velvety-soft foot plaster relieves shoe pressure on corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots, prevents blisters. Cut it to any size.

CORNS, CALLOUSES

Dr. Scholl's Liquid Corn and Callous Remedy. 2 drops relieve pain quickly; soon loosen and remove hard or soft corns and callouses with ease.

REMOVES CORNS

Dr. Scholl's Corn Salve quickly relieves pain and soon loosens old, hard corns for easy removal. Dependable, economical. Easy to apply.

REMOVES CORNS

Dr. Scholl's Fixo Corn Plasters quickly relieve pain and remove corns. Stop nagging shoe pressure. Easy to apply, stay in place. Waterproof.

EASES FEET

Dr. Scholl's Moleskin, foot plaster for relieving shoe pressure on corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots. Prevents blisters. Cut it to any size or shape.

NOW is the time to get relief—during DR. SCHOLL'S FOOT COMFORT WEEK.

Over 125,000 Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ Stores are behind this annual drive to relieve foot troubles. Go to your dealer now and let him show you how easy Dr. Scholl has made it for you to be foot-happy.

Remember—anything you buy bearing Dr. Scholl's name must give you satisfaction, or your money will be refunded.

For FREE FOOT BOOK and sample of Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads for relieving corns and sore toes, write Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Dept. MCW, Chicago, Ill.

TENDER FEET

Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder relieves tender, hot, tired, chafed or perspiring feet. Soothing, comforting to irritated skin. Eases new or tight shoes.

TIRED, ACHING FEET

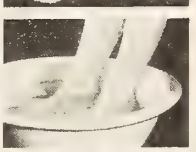
Dr. Scholl's Foot Balm quickly relieves feverish, aching, tender, sensitive, tired feet, caused by exertion and fatigue. Safe, sure. Very refreshing.

CLEANSES FEET

Dr. Scholl's Foot Soap (granular), loosens secretions of the skin; cleanses skin pores; stimulates normal circulation, aids in promoting foot health.

PROTECTS STOCKING

Ease-all Stocking Heel Protector firmly but comfortably grips the heel, saves wear of stocking at the heel, prevents blisters. Washable.



FOOT LOTION

Dr. Scholl's Foot Lotion cools, soothes, invigorates tired, burning feet. Relieves soreness. Delightfully comforting; deodorizing and antiseptic.

RELIEVES SORE FEET

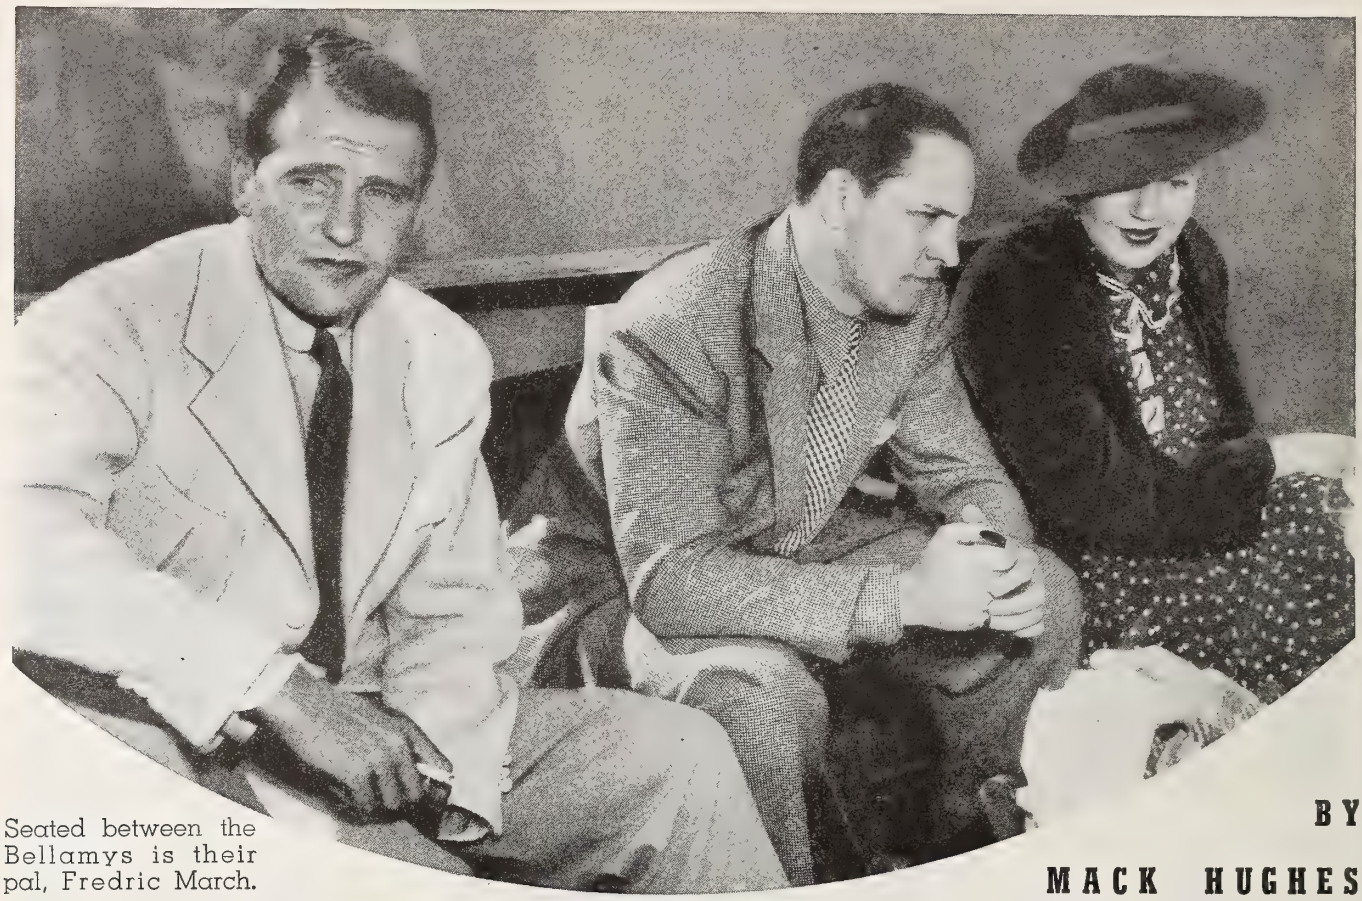
Dr. Scholl's Bath Salts relieve tired, aching feet. Also useful in bath for relieving muscular aches, pains. Soften water for all toilet purposes.

CROOKED HEELS

Dr. Scholl's Walk-Strates prevent crooked heels, keep shoes shapely. Cushion heel; save on repairs. Easily attached in any shoe. For men and women.

SORE, TENDER HEELS

Dr. Scholl's Heel Cushions make walking a pleasure; provide mild support for the arch. Made of sponge rubber, covered with leather. Easily applied.



CORNS, BUNIONS

Dr. Scholl's Felt Pads in sizes for corns and bunions instantly relieve pain of these foot troubles by stopping shoe pressure on sore spot. Easy to apply.

Dr Scholl's Foot Comfort Week

*TRADE MARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Seated between the Bellamys is their pal, Fredric March.

BY MACK HUGHES

MR. B. GOES TO TOWN

THERE'S NOTHING like it!" exclaimed Ralph Bellamy. "Every movie actor should come to New York at least once a year. It's so stimulating, this town, that no one should be away too long.

"You know, when Catherine and I came east, I was completely worn out from overwork—thank goodness! But, now that we've had three weeks holiday here, I feel like a new person. Not that we've had much chance to rest, for we haven't, what with theatres and old friends to see. It's been three and four o'clock every morning, but even so, I feel far better than I did before we arrived. Now I'm all set to go back and do some hard work."

This seems to be the general opinion of those immersed in the vast business of making movies. Nothing is quite so relaxing as a complete change, particularly when the new scenery is the axis about which things concerning your main interest in life (acting) revolves. For it was from the New York theatre that Ralph Bellamy went to join the movie colony.

"The Awful Truth" is that Ralph didn't want to play in it.

"At home, you know, when friends gather, there seems no way to escape discussing the picture business. But in New York that isn't so. There are so many other things to divert one, the opera, commercial business and, of course, the theatre," explained Mr. B.

All things considered, it is only logical that movietown dwellers are primarily interested in movies, for there, everything centers around the picture industry. Everyone seems connected in one way or another with this enterprise. Even, as Mr. Bellamy points out, most of the natives and settlers are in some way or other concerned. Once they've retired and settled in Hollywood, with their life savings, they register with Central Casting for an occasional job as extra.

"So you can understand why they have fourteen thousand people registered for these jobs when there are approximately only three thousand jobs," continued Bellamy.

"Did I say Hollywood was the only place where the topic of conversation was pictures?" laughed Mr. B. "Well, since you liked 'The Awful Truth,' I'll give you the low-down on it!

"I had had (Continued on page 105)

Ralph Bellamy takes some bows which he claims he doesn't rate

HERE THEY COME ON A MILLION DOLLAR SPREE TO WAKE AND MAKE AND TAKE PAREE!

Those gorgeous "Gold Digger" lovelies have taken America twice! Now see what they do to 50 million Frenchmen!

"GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS"

HEAR for the first time on the screen— The SCHNICKELFRITZ BAND

& 4 Brilliant Song Hits

"Day Dreaming" • "A Stranger in Paris" • "The Latin Quarter"

"I Wanna Go Back to Bali"

Starring

RUDY VALLEE

ROSEMARY LANE • HUGH HERBERT

ALLEN JENKINS • GLORIA DICKSON

MELVILLE COOPER • MABEL TODD • FRITZ FELD

Directed by RAY ENRIGHT • Screen Play by Earl Baldwin and Warren Duff • Story by Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay, Maurice Leo From an Idea by Jerry Horwin and James Seymour • Music and Lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin • A WARNER BROS. PICTURE

MOVIE REVIEWS

★★★★ Test Pilot

In a month full of mediocre films, Metro really startled the Hollywood preview-goers with one of the year's fastest and most exciting screen dramas—one of those rare pictures which actually live up to their advance notices. "Test Pilot" has everything: a swell story, a splendid cast, and powerful air stuff which furnishes some of the most breath-taking moments the screen has ever offered.

Clark Gable plays an aerial daredevil whose business is risking his neck trying out new ships. Boy meets girl when Gable is forced down in a Kansas wheat field, not more than fifty paces from Myrna Loy. They marry, much to the disgust of Spencer Tracy, Gable's mechanic, and Lionel Barrymore, his boss. But Myrna wins them over, and, with Gable and Tracy, makes "Test Pilot" the most virile and—potentially—the most profitable picture of the year.

Gable and Tracy are excellent in their he-man roles, and Myrna Loy is at her charming best. In the supporting cast, Lionel Barrymore deserves praise, as do Ted Pearson, Marjorie Main, Gloria Holden and Louis Jean Heydt. Best scene is the terrific moment when a plane, in a power dive, loses both wings, and the pilot calmly rips off the instrument board, for his records, before he bails out. Victor Fleming directed.—M-G-M.

★★★ Port of Seven Seas

After a deluge of screwball comedies, an honest, well-written and well-played film like this is a welcome and very pleasant relief. Its title is misleading, for it is a psychological drama which uses the seaport only as setting and background. It's only other fault is that it may be considered too talky for some moviegoers; but for intelligent audiences "Port of Seven Seas" is both appealing and charming.

Story concerns the love of Madelon (Maureen O'Sullivan) and Marius (John Beal). Marius leaves for the sea on short notice and Madelon discovers she is to become a mother. She tells Marius' father, Cesar (Wallace Beery), and she tells Panisse (Frank Morgan), an elderly suitor. Panisse, who has loved her for years, marries her, and with the aid of Cesar they find happiness and contentment, until the return of Marius brings emotional conflict.

For Wallace Beery, the role of Cesar offers a fine contrast to his usual slapstick comedy. The roles of Marius and Madelon are effectively played by John Beal and Maureen O'Sullivan, and Frank Morgan, scaling the range from comedy to pathos, turns in the picture's most expert performance. Etienne Girardot and Jessie Ralph head the supporting cast. Directed by James Whale.—M-G-M.

★★ Four Men and a Prayer

Had the director told his cast exactly what type of picture they were making, much better results might have come of "Four Men and a Prayer." Indications are, however, that he was not too sure himself, for his film skips from screwball farce to serious intrigue and back again with almost clock-like regularity. The proceedings left this reviewer, for one, more baffled than entertained.

C. Aubrey Smith, a British colonel in India, has been dishonorably discharged. He returns to England with proof that the incriminating evidence had been forged, and calls his four sons home to aid him in erasing the disgrace. On his first night home he is murdered, and his papers stolen. The picture then centers about the efforts of the four sons to track down the murderer and clear their father's name.

Richard Greene, the young English actor making his Hollywood debut, scores as an excellent leading man type. Loretta Young does what she can with a not too clearly defined character. David Niven plays a comedy role and turns in the picture's best performance. C. Aubrey Smith is gruff and noble as the wronged colonel, and the other two sons are ably portrayed by George Sanders and William Henry. Directed by John Ford.—20th Century-Fox.

BY LEO TOWNSEND

FROM STAGE HIT TO SCREEN SENSATION in a blaze of glorious romance and heart-lighting laughter! . . . The play that pierced the armor of New York . . . screened in all the punch and drama and excitement that kept it running month after month on Broadway! . . . Get your hoped-for thrills from the screen this summer . . . in the vacation-camp romance that piles up all the adventures you've ever dreamed for yourself in new places among strange faces! . . . DON'T LET ANYTHING KEEP YOU AWAY!

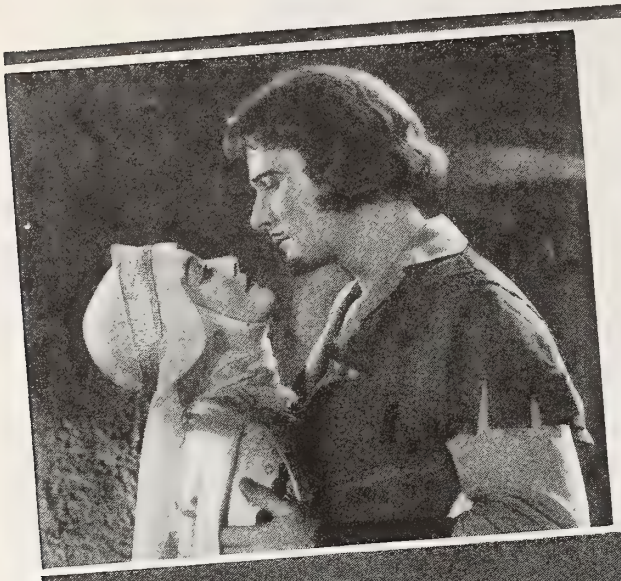
GINGER ROGERS AND DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

Having Wonderful Time

WITH



PEGGY CONKLIN · LUCILLE BALL · LEE BOWMAN
RICHARD (RED) SKELTON · ANN MILLER · DONALD MEEK

A PANDRO S. BERMAN Production · Directed by ALFRED SANTELL

Screen play by ARTHUR KOBER
Adapted from his New York Stage success as produced by MARC CONNELLY

RKO RADIO PICTURES

TODAY'S TALKIES

★★★★ The Adventures of Robin Hood

For pageantry, spectacle, romance, and beauty, the new "Robin Hood" is tops in screen entertainment. The Sherwood Forest and Nottingham Castle backgrounds are perfect for Technicolor. Whether it be horses kicking up a spray as they cross a stream, or a great hall full of brilliantly garbed knights in mass duel, the color is a constant delight.

The story has been given a deeper social significance than it heretofore had, and, by emphasizing government greed and the tyranny of power-mad rulers, has been considerably modernized. Robin is now a more purposeful character, whose hobby of robbing the rich to give to the poor is incidental to his desire to rid the tax-payers of their inhuman burden.

Errol Flynn is a magnificent Robin Hood, who dashes about in a most romantic and swashbuckling manner. Claude Rains is splendid as the cruel Prince John, and Basil Rathbone does a superb job as Sir Guy of Gisbourne. Olivia De Havilland is decorative as Maid Marian. In fact the entire cast deserves much credit, as also do Erich Wolfgang Korngold's musical score, and the co-directors Michael Curtiz and William Keighley.—Warner Brothers.

★★★ Dr. Rhythm

The latest Bing Crosby opus offers something rare in film entertainment—a musical with a sense of humor. There is nothing of the pretentious boredom which takes possession of most "big" musicals, and not one bit of self-conscious tomfoolery. A swell cast is perfectly at home with a good script, and everyone has a fine time. All of which makes "Dr. Rhythm" Dr. Crosby's best picture.

The good doctor, who prefers to be known as "the groaner," is most ably assisted by the drolleries of Beatrice Lillie, whose zany antics run the gamut from high satire to low burlesque. Her gipsy dance with Crosby, to the tune of "Only a Gipsy Knows," is one of the funniest moments in a picture loaded with highlights. Other high comedy interludes include a mad water sequence between Andy Devine and an indignant seal, a devastating bit featuring an operating table with merry-go-round proclivities, and a department store scene in which Miss Lillie attempts to purchase "two dozen double damask dinner napkins" from Franklin Pangborn.

Bing Crosby performs with ease and charm, and croons well. Mary Carlisle is pleasing in the feminine lead. Directed by Frank Tuttle.—Paramount.

★★★ To the Victor

Here is a wonderfully refreshing picture whose power lies in its simplicity. There is artistry in its direction, and great beauty in its characterizations. Will Fyffe gives an unforgettable portrayal of the gnarled old Scotsman in whose black heart there is room for no one except his dog, a cup-winning shepherd named Black Wull. The dog's only rival is Owd Bob, who belongs to a neighbor (John Loder). In a thrilling sequence Owd Bob wins in the trials. Broken hearted, the old man goes back to his lonely existence, and soon after this, it is proven that his dog, Black Wull, is a killer. The high point of the picture is Fyffe's scene with his dog—when he quietly explains to him why he must be shot. With a tender sort of brutality, without bitterness or anger, he leads the dog into the hills toward death.

There is a pleasant romance between John Loder and the old man's daughter (Margaret Lockwood), and a great deal of action by the antagonistic herders. The supporting roles are handled with understanding and honesty, but the picture belongs to Will Fyffe—with honors to its director, Robert Stevenson.—Gaumont-British.

More Reviews on page 80

Pick your pictures by our reviews and you will enjoy them so much more

NEW STARLIGHT FOR HOLLYWOOD

The New Universal proudly presents The American Debut of

DANIELLE DARRIEUX

The girl whose exquisite beauty . . . charm of performance...has made her the most beloved stage and screen star in all Europe . . . The star of the sensational MAYERLING . . . which all America has taken to its heart!

DANIELLE DARRIEUX • DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, Jr.

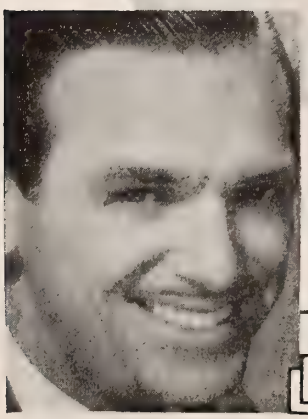
in

"THE RAGE OF PARIS"

with

MISCHA AUER · HELEN BRODERICK · LOUIS HAYWARD

Original Story and Screen Play by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson



Directed by HENRY KOSTER who made "3 SMART GIRLS" and "100 MEN AND A GIRL"

Produced by B. G. de SYLVA

CHARLES R. ROGERS

Executive Vice-President in Charge of Production

UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Creature of a thousand new moods of femininity!

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR

HELEN BRODERICK

MISCHA AUER

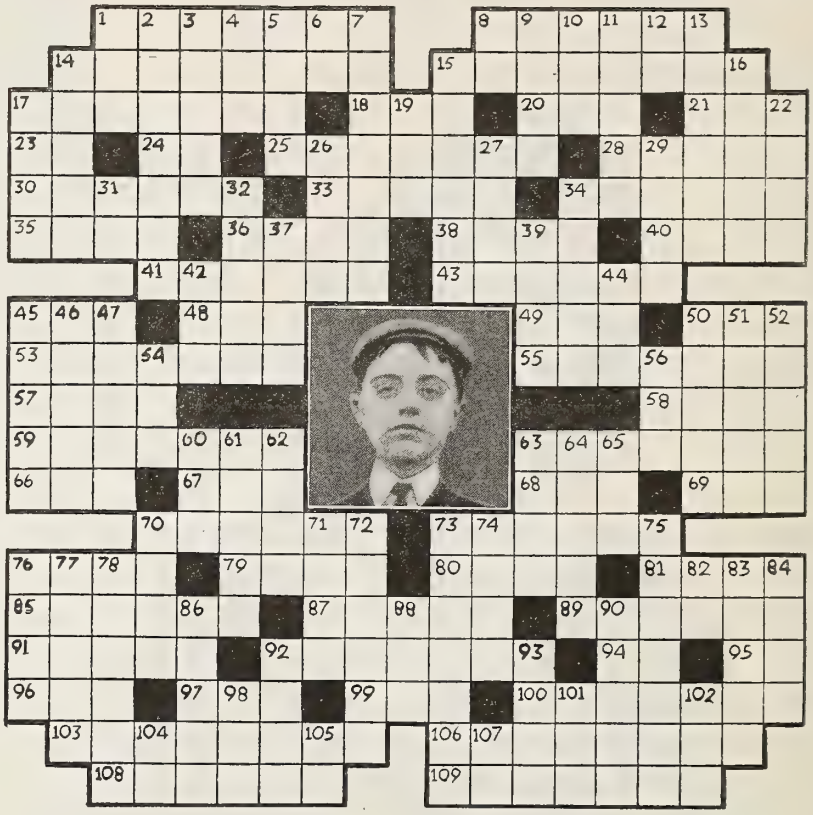
"DANDRUFF ITCH?"

Use This Antiseptic Scalp Treatment

Skin specialists generally agree that effective treatment must include (1) regular cleansing of scalp; (2) killing germs that spread infection; (3) stimulating circulation of the scalp; (4) lubrication of the scalp to prevent dryness.

To Accomplish This Is Easy With The Zonite Antiseptic Treatment

Just add 2 tablespoons of Zonite to each quart of water in basin . . . Then do this:—



1. Massage head for 3 minutes with this Zonite solution. (This gives hair and scalp an antiseptic cleansing—stimulates scalp—kills all germs at contact.)
2. Lather head with any good soap shampoo, using same Zonite solution. (This cuts oil and grease in hair and scalp—loosens dirt and dandruff scales.)
3. Rinse very thoroughly. (Your head is now clean—your scalp free from scales.)
4. If scalp is dry, massage in any preferred scalp oil. (This relieves dryness.)

RESULTS: By using this simple antiseptic shampoo treatment regularly (twice every week at first) you do what skin specialists say is necessary, if you want to rid yourself of dandruff itch and nasty scalp odors. We believe that if you are faithful, you will be delighted with results.

TRIAL OFFER—For a real trial bottle of Zonite, mailed to you postpaid, send 10¢ to Zonite 710 New Brunswick, New Jersey U. S. A.

OUR PUZZLE

• ACROSS

Answer to Puzzle on Page 91

1. First name of star pictured
8. He was "The Thin Man"
14. Friar Tuck in "The Adventures of Robin Hood"
15. Gene Lockhart's wife
17. Blacky in "Tip-off Girls"
18. Ma - - - Wilson
20. "- - - Many Wives"
21. Producers Wurtzel and Lesser
23. P - - l Kelly
24. State of Alice Faye's birth: abbr.
25. - - - - - - - Cortez
28. - - - - - Moran
30. Sheds blood
33. - - - - - Gombell
34. Contradiction
35. Consumes
36. Winged parts
38. "- - - - Since Eve"
40. Mar - - - - Dietrich
41. Antitoxins
43. Gift by bequest
45. Exclamations
48. Tear
49. Cliff Edwards is Ukulele - - -
50. Anne - - - rley
53. Film ready to be shown
55. More quiet
57. What Novarro was in "The Sheik Steps Out"
58. English actress, - - - - Ray
59. She was our star's last wife
63. Oriental
66. Printer's measures
67. Mosquito in "Girl of the Golden West"
68. Court of Common Pleas: abbr.
69. Color
70. Star of "The Divorce of Lady X"
73. Great arteries
76. Norse chieftan
79. Flower container
80. Ben Volt in "College Swing"
81. Split
85. Mrs. John Barrymore
87. A gradual passing
89. What Elissa Landi was in "Warrior's Husband"
91. - - - - - MacMahon
92. Flowering tree
94. Article
95. Public notice
96. Heroine of "Reckless Living"
97. Gum
99. - - - ry Crabbe
100. Dwellers
103. Feminine dressing gown
106. Our star's last film was "The - - - - - - - - and the Butler"
108. Tom Logan in "Tip-off Girls"
109. Male lead in "International Settlement"

PAGE

• DOWN

1. "- - - Lord"
2. What our star's recovering from
3. Star of "Professor, Beware!"
4. Ginger Rogers' estranged husband
5. Roman highway
6. "Blondes - - Work"
7. Kindnesses
8. State of our star's birth: abbr.
9. - - - - Kruger
10. "- - - Killed Gail Preston?"
11. Hollywood stars - - - - - to Yuma
12. Director Mervyn - - Roy
13. Star of "It's Love I'm After"
14. One of Fred Stone's actress daughters
15. Core
16. Mickey in "You and Me"
17. Oliver Hardy's nickname
19. King Richard in "The Adventures of Robin Hood"
22. - - - - Talbot
26. Mohammedan priest
27. Selznick's nickname
29. "You - - - - Live Once"
31. And: Fr.
32. Hindu women's garments
34. Heroine of "The Lone Wolf in Paris"
37. Mrs. Johnny Weissmuller
39. Roman shield
42. Epoch
44. Sir - - - ric Hardwicke
45. Oral plate
46. Egret
47. Bangs
50. Spirited horse
51. Male lead in "Jezebel"
52. Star of "The Joy of Living"
54. "- - - Tide"
56. "- - - ists and Models"
60. Priestly vestment
61. Female ruff
62. Maureen O'Sullivan's role in "David Copperfield"
63. Natural color
64. The baneberries
65. Watering place
70. - - - - Howland
71. City of Sonja Henie's birth
72. Star of "The Show Goes On"
73. Sucks up
74. Oil: comb. form
75. Jerry in "Professor, Beware!"
76. Late actress mourned by our star
77. Male lead in "Everybody Sing"
78. She won the Academy Award again this year
82. Judy Garland will make "The Wizard of - -"
83. What the M-G-M lion does
84. Finishes
86. Anneals: dial. Eng.
88. Public Works Administration: abbr.
90. One of Vallee's alma maters
92. Italian: slang
93. Mend
98. Thus
101. Bode: var.
102. S-shaped worm
104. "The - - Getter"
105. Andrea L - - ds
107. Initials of Bruce Cabot's ex-wife

NO DATES IN MARY'S BOOK
NO SONG IN MARY'S HEART

She doesn't dream that underarm odor is the reason men pass her by!

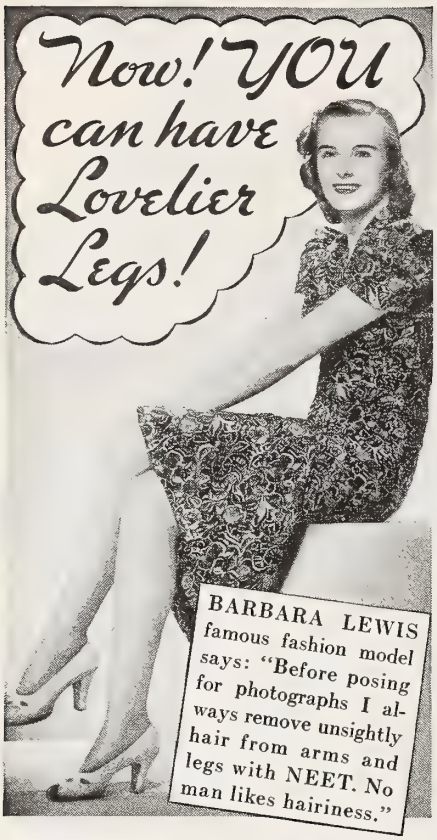
Mary is pretty, vivacious, and young—she should be as popular as any girl around. Yet the men that she meets always seem to avoid her. Through glorious summer evenings she sits home alone, while men take other girls out on good times!

Too bad Mary doesn't realize that it takes more than a bath to prevent underarm odor — that underarms must have special care to keep a girl dainty and fresh, safe from offending.

Wise girls use Mum! They know that a bath takes care only of past perspiration, but Mum prevents odor before it starts. To avoid all risk of offending friends — use Mum every day and after every bath. With Mum, you'll be sure your charm is lasting, you'll be a girl that men always find attractive!

MUM IS QUICK! One-half minute is all it takes to smooth a quick fingertipful of Mum under each arm.

MUM IS SAFE! Mum is soothing to the skin, harmless to every fabric. You can use it right after underarm shaving.



MUM IS SURE! Without stopping perspiration, Mum's sure protection lasts all day or all evening long. No worries, then, about unpleasant odor. For Mum makes underarm odor impossible!

IT TAKES MORE THAN A BATH — IT TAKES MUM

For Sanitary Napkins—
No worries or embarrassment when you use Mum this way. Thousands do, because it's SAFE and SURE.

MUM
TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

UNSIGHTLY HAIR WASHES OFF QUICKLY with New Cream

In a bathing suit... evening gown... even through stockings... unsightly hair spoils your charm and drives away romance.

Now you can easily have lovely legs and arms—free of ugly hair. Just spread on NEET, as you would a cold cream. Then rinse off with water! NEET removes all hair—delays re-growth—leaves your skin petal-soft and satin-smooth.

Avoid Unpleasant Razor-Roughness

Say good-bye to rough skin and sharp, wiry hairs that grow in after shaving. No razor stubble to snag your stockings . . . no danger of cuts when you use the safe and easy NEET method.

Magnified view of sharp bristly hair after shaving. Snags stockings.

NEET removes hair below skin surface — delays re-growth—no razor stubble.

Don't let summer romance pass you by. Shorter skirts, summer dresses and beach wear spotlight arms and legs as never before. See that yours are lovely. Do as millions of women do—remove unsightly hair with NEET. Get it today! At drug and dept. stores. Trial size at 10c stores.

NEET Just Rinse Off Unsightly Hair

BETWEEN YOU'N'ME

A Boston fan loves her history and wants more of it in her movie fare.

$5.00 Prize Letter
Foiled Again

I like music. I like comedy. I like dancing. But I'll be blanked if I'm going to sit through another one of those so-called "musical extravaganzas" again! I'm one of those suckers who get caught by those magnificent advertisements that tell about the girls, laughs, thrills of these musicals that crop up so often to blight the existence of us poor moviegoers.

And what do we get? A mess of songs and dances that barely cling together by means of the most childish imitations of plots imaginable. Every so often a troop of scantily clad beauties dances across the screen for no particular reason. There is usually a comedian or two, perhaps a villain, and so it goes for an hour or so till the hero gets the girl, the villain is foiled, and I once more realize that I've been fooled again, and swear off of musicals forever (or at least till the next one comes along).

Why doesn't someone tell the producers that it takes more than a song and a dance to make a picture? Can't we have a musical comedy that is a musical comedy? Songs and dances are swell in their proper places, but they're never there! As for the plot, why I can tell you the whole story of any musical out, after seeing five minutes of it. So please, producers, let reason temper music and order temper dancing and the result will be really enjoyable entertainment.

—M. Lederman, New Brunswick, N. J.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Glamor's the Bunk

Intelligent fans, who realize that our stars are ordinary human beings, with their respective shares of flesh and blood idiosyncrasies, will glean keen food for thought from MODERN SCREEN'S May article, "Glamor For Rent," wherein the theatricalness of the Great Goddess Glamor is debunked.

When Hollywood was in its formative stage, endeavoring to interest the public in the affairs of its inhabitants, glamor was understandable and forgivable. Today, however, when the people desire their screen favorites as natural as the man next door or Cousin Annie from Milwaukee, glamor is inexcusable, "hammish" and ridiculous. It detracts from whatever histrionic talent an actress may possess. Witness Marlene Dietrich whose career was shattered like a thin-blown glass tumbler hurled against the wall, by the tinsel varnish of seductiveness which her employers wished upon her.

While the majority of our leading female lights might have begun their careers as overdone temptresses, they are now, thanks to their own inherent intelligence, acting and conducting themselves on and off the screen like people, not like gaudy automatons.

—Marice Jacobs, Philadelphia, Pa.

$2.00 Prize Letter
A New High

When I, at the tender age of something-or-other, first saw a moving picture, I was dumbfounded that actual likenesses could be projected on a screen and made to move. When I saw my first talkie, I was amazed. Surely, thought I, when the motion picture has reached the point where it can make itself heard, it has reached the point of perfection!

But, no! Along came wonderful technicolor and I was thrilled even more that the actual flesh-like appearances of the stars could be projected before my very eyes.

Along came Walt Disney's superb "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," a picture that blends all the marvels of the past and yet adds another—drawings that move, talk and have power enough to sway your emotions! A picture that truly tops anything that I have seen in the entertainment world!

"Will Shirley Temple remain unspoiled?" asks a young lady from Ohio.

No doubt the motion picture will go on to still greater heights, just as it did in the past when I doubted that it could go further. But, in spite of that possibility, after seeing "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," I cannot help but say that the film industry has reached perfection.

—Hal David, Hartwell, Ga.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Historical Films

Seeing a picture like "Wells Fargo" is a thrilling experience. As the reels un-

Movie-goers have their say and get cash prizes. Try it—it's grand fun and you can win!

fold, we all share the desire of the people for land and freedom—a desire which drove them ever westward; the building up of the great express company so that contact between the East and West might be assured, and that news of important events might be broadcast as quickly as possible; and, with it all, the plain simplicity and courage of these heroic people. Such a picture, and others depicting the early life of America, make us proud that we, too, are Americans, and leave us eager to make our own lives carry on in the great tradition. With such a background, and with such blood running through our veins, we should seek to be worthy inheritors making our country the ideal place our ancestors dreamed it would be. Such episodes in our history are not rare, and it is to be hoped that the producers will avail themselves of the rich store of Americana still untouched.

—Mary Chace, Boston, Mass.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Shirley's Trip

The plan of Shirley Temple's mother to take her on an extensive personal tour to let the public see that Shirley is real and not a movie make-up expert's dream is very fine as far as the idea is concerned. But, I don't think this trip will do Shirley any good.

One of the radio commentators made an appeal to the public some time ago to treat Shirley as an ordinary child and give her a chance to see the cities she will visit. This is not possible. The minute Shirley appears on the platform of a train or any place, there will be nothing for her to see but bobbing heads and waving arms and people fighting to get in the front line.

I am an ardent Shirley Temple fan, and I think she is a remarkably intelligent child. Her appeal lies in her unassuming charm and sweetness. However, she is fast reaching the age when all little boys and girls begin to have definite ideas of their own and abide by them. Will thousands of people fighting for just a glimpse of her have no effect on her? Will she remain unspoiled and oblivious to fame and fortune? Will this excitement be good for her health—strange people, strange surroundings, and constant commotion?

If I were Mrs. Temple, I would keep Shirley in Hollywood, and not take any chances.

—Dorothy Kushner, Cleveland, Ohio.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Cheers for R. Bellamy

I wonder why it took the role of a dumbell in "The Awful Truth" to make Hollywood re-discover Ralph Bellamy!

Ralph has always been a fine actor. I remember him first, as the judge in "Young America," and although the part was small, he easily stole the picture. Then came "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," in

(Continued on page 84)

WRITE A LETTER—
WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

POND'S SUNLIGHT SHADES

"GLARE-PROOF" powder shades to flatter your skin in hard blazing sun . . .

OUT in the pitiless glare of the sun, skin faults are magnified. Color flattens out. Skin seems coarser. Your face looks harder all over!

But see how "Sunlight" shades flatter you!

"Glare-proof"—Pond's "Sunlight" shades are scientifically blended to reflect only the softer rays of the sun. They soften its glare on your skin . . . make it flattering! Your face has a lovely soft look. Your tan a rich glow.

Try them right now. Two glorious "Sunlight" shades, Light and Dark. Low prices. Decorated screw-top jars, 35¢, 70¢. Big boxes, 10¢, 20¢.

Test them FREE! in glaring Sunlight

Pond's, Clinton, Conn., Dept. 9MS-PU. Please rush me, free, Pond's "Sunlight" shades, enough of each for a 5-day test. (This offer expires Sept. 1, 1938.)

Name_____

Street_____

City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

FROM GREAT STORIES COME THE GREATEST PICTURES!

...and here is the story the author of "Treasure Island" always considered his best!...now on the screen for the first time! ...spectacularly produced by 20th Century-Fox!

Strangely they met...gallantly they risked their lives for each other...a valiant three against a nation's vengeful might!

Robert Louis Stevenson's

Kidnapped

with

WARNER BAXTER in the role you always wanted him to play

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW in his first picture since "Captains Courageous"

ARLEEN WHELAN
the year's emotional discovery in her sensational debut

C. AUBREY SMITH · REGINALD OWEN
JOHN CARRADINE · NIGEL BRUCE · MILES MANDER
RALPH FORBES · H. B. WARNER · ARTHUR HOHL
E. E. CLIVE · HALLIWELL HOBBES · MONTAGU LOVE and a cast of 5,000

Directed by Alfred Werker director of "The House of Rothschild"

Associate Producer Kenneth Macgowan • Screen Play by Sonya Levien, Eleanor Harris, Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum

A 20th Century-Fox Picture
Darryl F Zanuck In Charge of Production

A NEW TRIUMPH IN BIG-PICTURE ENTERTAINMENT!

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

NELSON EDDY

JEANETTE MacDONALD

RANDOLPH SCOTT

OLYMPE BRADNA

ERROL FLYNN

KATHARINE HEPBURN

"Hollywood is not

Here is Sylvia with George Raft in "You and Me." She likes George because he's natural, but she'd love to be on a set with Spencer Tracy!

SYLVIA SIDNEY didn't look like a movie star. She had on slacks, not the well-pressed, natty Hollywood variety, but the kind you wear around the house on a rainy day when you're sure nobody will come to see you. They were rumpled and wine-colored, and the navy blue house-coat-blouse she wore with them was loose and comfortable looking.

She did not sit like a movie star. She had flung herself, utterly relaxed, into an enormous chair, both legs tossed over its arms.

Her hair had lost its Hollywood set. It was carelessly pulled back from her ears, and pinned low, any old way, on her neck. She wore tortoise-shell rimmed eye glasses which accentuated her little features. And her eyes were red and swollen.

No, Sylvia Sidney did not look like a movie star. She looked like a girl, who had been crying all night.

"For twenty-four hours," she admitted.

Hollywood had done this to her, Hollywood that recently criticized Sylvia Sidney for coming out there, taking its money and then rapping the place.

This story is her answer to Hollywood.

"Why am I ungrateful?" she exclaimed, her voice cracking with emotion. "I'll tell you why!

"Here's just one instance. A day last year I had to work so late that I actually grew weak with fatigue. After the scene was over I went to get a massage. On the way, walking up a flight of stairs, I became faint, slipped and fell smack on my nose. Both my eyes turned black and blue. Within an hour, I, a ghastly sight, was lying, terrified, in a hospital bed. I did not know whether my face was ruined for life or whether I'd ever be able to make another picture!

"I know," she went on, "that through the entire night Walter Wanger paced the floor. After all, I was an investment—a Hollywood investment.

"But I also was a girl," she added, "sick in bed, with a busted nose and two black eyes, and feeling as lonely as could be. So lonely and homesick that I telephoned every so-called friend I had in Hollywood and asked each to come to see me. I wanted someone to sympathize, to hold my hand. But nobody came. Not one of them!"

SHE PAUSED. "There's more, yes, a lot more. I'm in a jam now—about Hollywood. That's why I've been crying.

"They want me to do a story I don't like. The part doesn't suit me. I'm not an ingenue. I'm twenty-eight years old. I'm a woman and I want to act one. They've got plenty of young girls for the other type of thing. Anyway, they're insisting I do this picture. So I appealed to the one person who could have helped me, the one person I had looked upon as a prop. He could have come to my assistance by just saying a few words, and it meant no money out of his pocket. But did he? No. My prop fell down." She shrugged her shoulders. "A Hollywood prop.

"They say I grab the money!" She laughed. "Listen, in my contract I'm supposed to be paid between pictures, even when I'm not working. I didn't think that was fair to my employers, so I refused sixteen weeks' salary!

ber me!"

Sylvia Sidney

Accused of being ungrateful, of biting the hand that feeds her, Sylvia Sidney at last tells you her side of the story —and it's certainly enlightening!

by

NANETTE KUTNER

"I'm just like any working girl," says Sylvia Sidney. "If I get sick, there's no money coming in!"

"I'd be much better off if I were contented to be just a movie actress on the coast. But I love the stage. When I do a play, even if it's a bad play, I learn so much about my craft. After every play I'm a better actress. For instance—I take one scene. Each night I try it a different way with different inflections, a piece of business here or there, so that I finally arrive at the most telling effect. And even after a play has closed I think about the scenes and mentally work on them. I find none of that in pictures.

"When I say these things, Hollywood retaliates. They say, 'If you don't like pictures why don't you get out!' Well, to tell the truth, I can't get out!

"That is because Hollywood is not for me! And by Hollywood, I mean the money part. As soon as I began earning that kind of money, those unbelievable telephone number figures, I appeared outwardly a strong, self-reliant person. And the weak automatically lean upon the strong. So, almost immediately, distant relatives, and aunts and uncles, and friends I hadn't seen in years, demanded and needed my help. Why, people with whom I have barely a nodding acquaintance, think nothing of stopping me on the street and asking for money.

"And what are you going to do when a friend says she needs a hundred dollars for her hotel bill? You can't turn her down—not when you're making Hollywood money. So I don't. And so, it keeps on and on." Her voice rose. "Hollywood has given me so many financial responsibilities that I don't dare leave!

"I don't dare call my soul my own. Recently I gave a party for the benefit of Spain, (Continued on page 72)

Charm enough for three men, poise to burn, sex appeal galore—that's Cary Grant.

Randy Scott is Cary's "best friend and severest critic," as Merton used to say.

FOR

And so when Cary Grant

WE HAD a whispering interview, Cary Grant and I. An interview pianissimo. I purled at him. He susurrated at me. (If you don't know what that means look up the noun "whisper" in your dictionary. I just did.)

It was like this: Cary and I were on the set of "Holiday." We repaired to Cary's portable dressing-room. Now, a portable dressing room, in case you don't know, is a sort of box-like oasis put up for the convenience of the stars. And in the portables the stars make changes of costume, repair their make-up, entertain visiting Elks and interviewers, take naps, do whatever they feel like doing between scenes. Now some few portable dressing-rooms are de luxe, and interior-decorated, and steam heated, and a' that.

But the majority of stars, especially "the boys," take their portables as they find them, and the way they find them is the way I found Cary's. It is a place made of compo-board, without a roof. This reduces the visibility, but does nothing about the audibility.

So Cary and I sat in his cracker box and purled. At least, I sat, gingerly, on the edge of my chair. Cary lounged on the couch. I've never seen a loungier lounger than Cary. I kind of hate to say that there is something reminiscent of a panther about Cary, and the way he relaxes, and the way he springs up and at you, it seems such a florid way of putting things. But it's the truth.

Now, this whispering interview would have been much

Doris Nolan found Cary as fatally fascinating as you will in his new picture, "Holiday."

Cary has definite ideas about feminine allure, and finds a lot of "what it takes" in Phyllis Brooks.

HE'S A Serious FELLOW gives you the lowdown on his private life, you can believe every word of it

by GLADYS HALL

simpler if Cary had been a dopey guy. But no. I hissed to Cary, "This is to be about how you are a dopey guy like in 'Bringing Up Baby.' I thought it would make swell copy to tell that you are kinda loony, and what kind of looninesses you do."

"But I'm a serious feller," cooed Cary. "I can't tell you I send elephants to people for their birthdays. I can't think of anything dopey I do, like brushing my teeth with a whisk-broom, and all. You've got the wrong idea about me."

And that ruined everything, and ran into whispers of such long duration as would bring a political whispering campaign to an early grave.

"You've got the wrong idea about me," Cary went on earnestly. "Because I do those comedies, you've got the wrong idea. I mean that comedy is serious business. It's mathematical. It's morbid. Timing comedy is very serious. It is much more difficult, requires more thought, effort, concentration and hard work than any of these 'comedy-dramadys' where you say, 'Yes, Mrs. Jones; no, Mrs. Jones', or die for love with full orchestration.

"Yeah," tinkled Cary in a still, small voice, "you take me for a loony guy just romping through a picture like the fun it looks. You don't know the mental anguish, the silver threads among the black, the furrows on this brow which precede those romps and antics. Why, it's easier to die a dozen screen deaths than to get over one good, well-paced screen laugh. I'm serious about my work, very. I'm a student when I'm working. I pore over my scripts. I'm not one of the boys who takes this business as a racket. I'll bet even Muni doesn't do more research on his Pasteurs and Zolas than I do when I'm helping to 'Bring Up Baby.' I used to go over my scripts with Randy Scott. I've got over that now. But I still work out the character I'm playing the same as if he were Hamlet. I think about him, figure out bits of business for him to do, try to size up his psychology, and what his reactions would be under different circumstances. I observe people in the hope that I'll catch on to some gesture, characteristic, or mannerism that might reasonably belong to the fellow I'm playing.

"When I get all mixed up, too mixed up, I play the piano—anything from swing music to Chopin. I play, and keep on playing. Or I go to the movies. I'm nuts about the movies. Any picture can make me forget the dirty dishes in the sink. I've never seen a picture yet that bored me. Sometimes when I come out of a theatre and hear people say, 'That was awful, that was this or that,' I feel like saying, 'I don't agree with you. And anyway, what do you expect for (Continued on page 78)

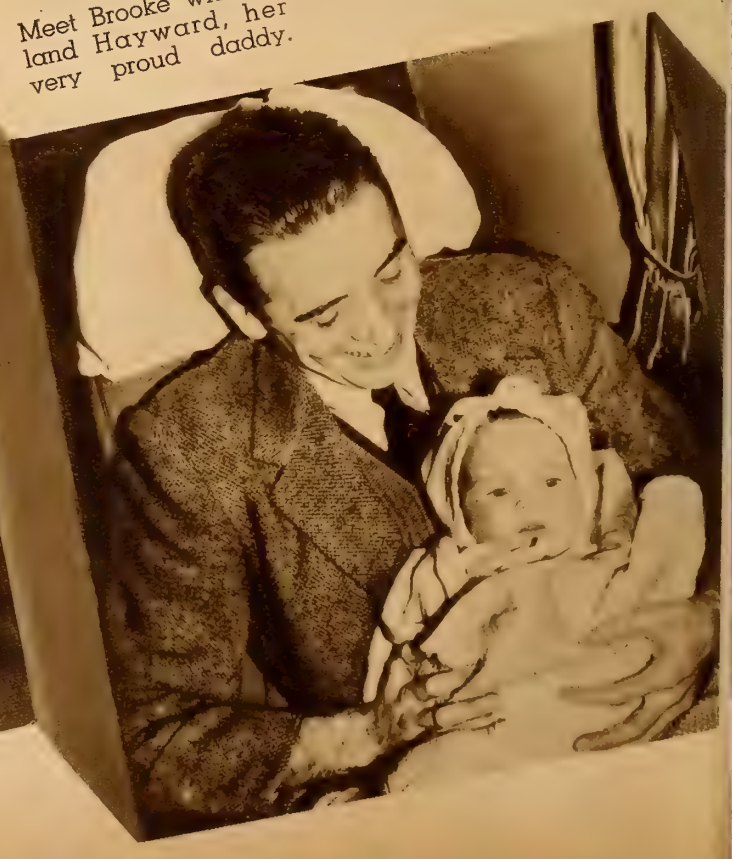
THAT Girl's Here Again!

MARGARET SULLAVAN is one of those around whose name legends have grown.

Unknown to movie audiences, she captured their imagination through her first screen performance in "Only Yesterday." Not beautiful in the conventional movie sense, she gave to the role a shining beauty of spirit unrelated to inch-long eyelashes or sphinx-like smiles which reveal nothing because, like the original sphinx, they have nothing to reveal.

What Sullavan revealed was a gift for honest acting, a blend of emotional power and restraint that could move the heart. The public clamored for more of her.

They didn't get as much as they wanted. Pictures came few and far between. Publicity items were scarce as hens' teeth. Therefore, because movie personalities must be sold on the strength of their individuality as well as of their pictures, what little was known about her was exaggerated. What wasn't known was made up. She became by reputation another of those stormy petrels who flout the rules, make faces at teacher and, in a spirit of general waywardness, raise merry hell.



Like most legends, this one is based on a crumb of fact and a whipped-up meringue of fancy. The fact is that Margaret Sullavan thinks for herself and acts for herself. Black is not black to her because a thousand others see it that way, if she herself sees it as gray or purple. If she does see it as gray or purple, it's not through caprice but through conviction. Sham has no part in her make-up. Indeed, it's her very scorn of that theatrical commodity which has done as much as anything to build up the illusion of perversity. Unconventional Hollywood has its own conventions. You must dress thus-and-so, appear here and there, maintain such-and-such attitudes toward such-and-such aspects of life. Your own feelings and beliefs have little to do with it.

Convention makes cowards of most of us. Sullavan has never let what people think influence her course. Not because she cultivates defiance, and not because she burns to blazon new trails either. But because it would make her acutely miserable to follow any path save the one that seems marked out for her. That she lacks arrogance is indicated by her willingness to recognize her mistakes. What seems right for her today may seem wrong tomorrow. In that case, she breaks clean and starts over. She has a directness in speech and action which may disconcert those of us who take refuge in social evasions against the thrust of truth. Honesty with her is not a high moral resolve. It's something she can't help. If the truth hurts, it's still the truth and must be faced.

DESPITE this straightforwardness, generally regarded as an attribute of the male, she seems wholly feminine. I watched her as she played a scene for "Three Comrades." In a dark blue ski suit, gay mittens and clumping shoes, she walked up a snow-crusted path, arms linked through those of Bob Taylor and Robert Young. Their height emphasized her littleness. At its softly curling edges, her fair hair looked as if the sun had been caught in it. She had the air of a child till she lifted her gray-blue eyes to Taylor, a hint of gentle mockery veiling their tenderness. Their feeling was repeated in the sweet huskiness of her tones. You didn't know what the scene led from or to,

Bob Taylor, Maggie and Robert Young in "Three Comrades."

Meet Brooke with Leland Hayward, her very proud daddy.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

Margaret Sullavan's back—with a brand new contract, a good as new baby, and a will to stay!

but in six light words and a gesture, she'd created a mood there was no mistaking—that of a woman deeply cherished and cherishing.

Later she came over and dropped into a high-backed chair. The woman of the scene you'd just witnessed was gone. With her feet barely grazing the floor, her wide-spaced eyes, the silky texture of her hair, again she suggested the small girl. Nor was it an impression altogether physical. There was something in her manner, too—among other things, perhaps, her faculty of withdrawing like a child into some secret place of the mind, whence she looks out guardedly on a world that can't always be trusted.

Once convinced that no harm is pending, she lowers her guard with disarming humor. "Note the green sickly pallor," she says, lips buttoned over a smile that glimmers through, "the trembling hands, the tongue stuck to the roof of the mouth. All symptoms. Of what? You know. Interviewitis."

Though her tongue be stuck, she manages nicely. She's not voluble. She (Continued on page 85)

"And to think," says Maggie, "I was gonna commit suicide once!"

A MAN

Jimmy Cagney knows what he wants!

What's more, he isn't afraid to take it

by

CAROLINE S. HOYT

Jim got his first job on his nerve, and has been getting things that way ever since. He believes that if you say you can do a thing, and mean it, you can't help succeeding.

FOLKS AROUND town were saying, "Well, I guess Cagney's happy now," or "Jimmy must be feeling pretty swell these days," or "Wonder whether Cagney's changed?"

The folks had reference to the fact that Jimmy and his studio have quit "a-feudin'."

There were portents, hummed Hollywood, that Jimmy has "changed"; indications that he is happy as, perhaps, never before. For Jimmy went to the studio party, and Jimmy never before attended a studio party. He was greeted by loud salvos of, "Hi, Jimmy," "Hi there, Cagney!" by everyone on the lot. And what is more remarkable, Jimmy returned the salvos by calling every one of the greeters by his first name. He hadn't forgotten the name of a single carpenter, electrician or supervisor.

Then, too, Jimmy is reunited with his "Club" again, that unofficial but warmly all-for-one-and-one-for-all club comprised of Irishman Pat O'Brien, Irishman Frank McHugh, Irishman Allen Jenkins, Irishman Ralph Bellamy and Irishman James Cagney. The "boys" are always together off the lot. Now they are together again on the lot. And there's always windy weather when these fellers get together. Tales of their exploits run around the lot now, hand in hand with laughter—how Pat and Jimmy, between scenes of "Boy Meets Girl," would go down to the set of "Four's a Crowd," where Rosalind Russell was working, without FEAR

Jimmy, the boy, meets Marie Wilson, the girl, in "Boy Meets Girl." Result, uproarious comedy.

Jimmy's smart "little woman," "Billie," who knows a thing or three about how to keep a husband happy.

and just stand there staring at Roz, never batting an eyelash, never taking their eyes off her face, just stand there staring, staring, until Roz, with a sense of humor as lusty as theirs, stopped the show by yelling, "I can't do any good work with these "B" picture actors gawking at me!"

They tell how Jimmy and Pat took themselves down to the Anton Litvak set of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," with scripts of "Clitterhouse" projecting from their pockets, and just stood there on the side lines as though patiently awaiting their calls, causing Director Litvak to question his own sanity. What were they doing there? Were there two actors in the cast he didn't know about? Then they'd romp down to the Busby Berkeley set of "Gold Diggers in Paris," and ogle the girls, until one day the female of the species proved itself more deadly than the male, and the girls, dozens and dozens strong (and beautiful), swarmed. They swarmed around Jimmy and Pat, all but crushing the breath out of them, and the "Gold Diggers in Paris" saw James and Patrick no more.

Another day Pat and Ralph Bellamy had time off from the set of "Boy Meets Girl," and went to the races at Santa Anita. It was a five-horse race, and they put their money on four of the horses. And the fifth horse came in. Jimmy loves that one.

So, time marches on. Jimmy is back on the old home lot, and all is forgiven. Jimmy hasn't changed a bit.

Fact is, Cagney is a man who never changes. He never reacts violently to anything. He makes no unnecessary noise. His pet hate is loud voices. His own voice is, as you know, little more than a whisper. He never gets excited. If he does, you would never know it. Even his horseplay goes softly shod. He does what he wants to do, what he believes in doing, and that's that. There is no to-do about it. Come poverty or riches, success or failure, ups or downs, Jimmy moves along his quiet, undeviating course, his voice the purr of a jungle cat, his eyes half veiled, half smiling. Not the zephyrs of spring, nor the catastrophic cyclone can ruffle one red hair of his head.

I WAS LATE for our luncheon date. Jimmy is never late for any date. When I entered the commissary, Jimmy was seated at a corner table, talking with his brother Bill and Dick Powell. Jimmy and Dick were planning a week-end on their boats. The discussion was whether they should go on Dick's boat, or on Jimmy's sixty-six-foot schooner, the "Martha," or take both boats and see which one could circle the other, or whatever boats do. There was no argument about whether they should take one wife, or both. The answer was neither. Jimmy and Dick have the sea in common. Mrs. Jimmy and Mrs. Dick (Joan Blondell) have sea-sickness in common. Result, ancient mariner Cagney and ancient (Continued on page 87)

If this set of studio bracers doesn't save them, it's farewell forever!

FIRST AID FOR Falling Stars

IT IS YOU, the public, who make movie stars rise and fall, and you have a way of doing it with which they can't argue. A star may think she's still tops—she's all but mobbed when she appears in public, her fan mail still comes in in truckloads—but let five little words be spoken and she knows that you no longer care, that you're showing it by staying away from her pictures in droves.

The words? "Poison at the box office." That is the way Katharine Hepburn learned that you'd turned thumbs down on her.

Katie was kidding around one day at the studio with a couple of directors. She said, "I suppose some day I'll have to be in one of your B pictures."

To which one retorted, "Not if I can help it. You're poison at the box office."

They're deadly, those box office figures. So are the film salesmen's reports. Nobody can argue with them. Maybe the man who runs your theatre tells the salesman that he doesn't want to book a certain star's pictures, or perhaps he protested against paying the re-

by VIRGINIA VANCE

quired rental on them. He says they don't do business for him. In that case perhaps he's checked. If you see a man in the lobby of a picture theater, with a thing like a stop-watch in his hand, you may know that he's checking the number of tickets sold, probably to see if the exhibitor was justified in complaining. If he was, it's likely to mean trouble for the star.

Sometimes it's not hard to see why a star falls. With Katharine Hepburn it may have been all those costume pictures; with Marlene Dietrich it probably was her determination to have von Sternberg direct her, and produce all those snail-like close-ups. With Constance Bennett it probably was a feeling that Commodore Vanderbilt was right when he said, "The public be damned," a saying which Miss Hepburn also seemed to be trying to live up to, especially where newspaper reporters were concerned. His studio felt that while Robert Taylor wasn't "fallen," he might be pushed! That was before he did "A Yank at Oxford."

When a star falls, or is likely to, there are certain steps taken almost automatically. If you know that they are happening to a favorite of yours, you may be sure that she's not the favorite of many other people. The studio, in a valiant effort not to lose money on a valuable investment, is administering tried and true hypodermics.

One first aid treatment is to give the star a different type of story, with a good director and a bang-up cast that includes a popular leading man.

Hepburn got "Stage Door." That picture killed two birds with one stone, for Ginger Rogers had been begging for pictures that would give her a chance to prove that she wasn't just Fred Astaire's dancing partner. Too many people had been calling their joint efforts "the new Astaire picture" to suit her.

That picture was perfect first aid. A huge price was paid for the screen rights to a successful stage play, the story of the play was thrown away, and a good writer engaged to do a new one, and the whole thing was handed to a director who had a reputation for turning out hits. The picture did what was needed. It helped Miss Hepburn. It also helped Miss Rogers, as is shown by the fact that, after he saw it, Fred Astaire sent her a telegram containing just one word, "Ouch!"

BUT THE wayward Katie needed more assistance. So she was put into a goofy comedy. That's First Aid Measure Number Two. Ever since "The Thin Man," goofy comedies have been sure-fire, though at the moment their popularity is waning. But nearly all the stars have been pestering their companies to let them have just one chance at cock-eyed humor.

Irene Dunne wanted it; she felt that the public was going to tire of seeing her play nice girls. She'd broken loose a bit in "Show Boat," when she did that hoydenish little dance, but she wanted more. She nailed down her new reputation in "The Awful Truth."

Katharine Hepburn drew "Bringing Up Baby," in which she fell flat on her face, time after time, for belly laughs, and got them.

Marlene Dietrich has been (Continued on page 74)

Would you expect dimpled Sonja to be a business woman? She is!

Before Love did a fade-out, Tyrone Power was Sonja's beau.

Wrecking THOSE RUMORS

Sonja Henie gives the answers to questions people have hitherto answered for her

Between scenes, Mrs. Henie is right there to take care of her famous daughter's every need.

It has been "rumored" that Richard Greene is Sonja's latest. But, it's only rumor, y'know.

by DORA ALBERT

IF YOU read your fan magazines, you already know that the Tyrone Power-Sonja Henie romance is colder than iced tea, and you probably believe that all of Sonja's incredible triumphs, her fantastically brilliant skating exhibitions, and her amazing success at the box-office have not compensated her for the loss of Tyrone.

The newspapers and magazines had a Roman holiday over the death of this romance, and the appearance on Tyrone's horizon of that red-headed stick of dynamite, Janet Gaynor.

They said, "Tyrone must have brought their romance to a close before Sonja was ready. Sonja must still be carrying a flaming torch for the slim dark boy with the irresistible eyes."

They said that when Sonja realized her romance with Tyrone was over, there was a bitter quarrel. "Sonja and Ty," read the columns, "talked it over, not long ago—and did they talk. Why, they almost yelled."

But Sonja's answer to all that was just a knowing smile and a shrug of her pretty shoulders.

Sitting opposite me, curled up like a little girl on a sofa, she said, "Although I have not seen Tyrone lately, we are still good friends. The stories that we quarreled are silly. They are all made up. Tyrone and I never had any discussion whatsoever about his falling in love with Janet Gaynor. The idea of my being broken-hearted is just funny."

Certainly Sonja Henie didn't look broken-hearted as she sat there, radiating warmth and happiness.

To her Tyrone had been a marvelous friend, a charming companion, but he was not the great love of a lifetime. Sonja had realized this from the beginning, so to her there never was any question of heart-break. Something that proves even more surely that Sonja isn't broken-hearted is the tremendous interest she takes in the effect of romance on the box-office. If she were really eating out her heart over Tyrone, she couldn't consider romance quite so dispassionately.

"You know," she said once, "I do not think that romances are very good for the box-office, anyway, particularly romances of long standing. Look how Dick Powell's box-office rating went down when he married Joan Blondell. And Robert Taylor, I think, would be even more popular if he didn't go so steadily with Barbara Stanwyck. If a man is young, handsome and eligible, every woman who sees him on the screen thinks that perhaps she has a chance. But if he becomes engaged, she may lose interest, because she knows she can't have him. If I were to get married tomorrow, my box office would drop right away."

Would that stop Sonja Henie from getting married, if she fell in love?

"No," she said, "but I will not get married for at least a couple of years. I have too much skating to do."

"Someone told me," I ventured, "that the man who really has the inside track to your heart is a Norwegian named Carl Carlson."

This time Sonja exploded in a merry peal of laughter.

"That is so funny," she said. "There isn't a thing to it. He was once my secretary. That is all. No one has the inside track to my heart. Cesar Romero? No. There is nothing to that story."

"Why not? He is young, handsome and romantic."

"Of course he is, and that (Continued on page 90)

DON AMECHE'S

What is the reason for Don Ameche's great faith in people? Has he tested and proven it, or is it a blind illusion?

Don is so happily married that he hates to cross the street without Honore, but he never found that that impaired his "glamor" or hurt his popularity.

secret HAPPINESS

Don never, even in the beginning, was treated like an outsider in Hollywood. He found only warm friendliness.

Simone Simon may say "yes" or she may say "no" to Don Ameche, in "Josette," but Don doesn't look worried.

by

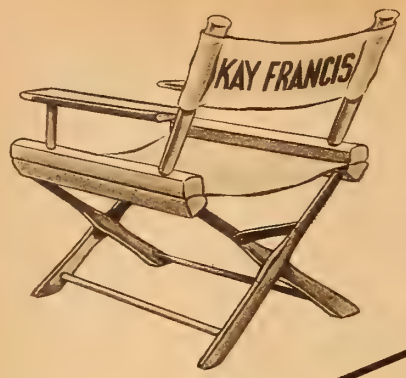
MARY PARKES

IS DON AMECHE disillusioned? After eight years on the air, after nearly three years in Hollywood, has that warm heart of his received a cold check? Has that eagerness, which is reflected in his dark eyes, that spontaneity which makes his laughter so heartening to hear, been dampened and turned back on itself, wormed with doubt and sorry skepticism?

Is Don disillusioned about life, love and friendship? Doing as much for others as he does, is he disillusioned about gratitude, appreciation? Above all, is he disillusioned about work, about Hollywood?

The answer is No. No, no, a million times no! You couldn't disillusion Don Ameche. Not that he believes that Santa Claus comes down the chimney, or that Titania dances on the thin turn of the moon, but he does believe that the spirit of the fat Saint is in the hearts of men, and that the beauty of Titania is in the hearts of women.

No, you couldn't disillusion Don, not even if you tried. It's been tried. But if his best friend knifed him, if jealous rivals beset him, if faiths were broken, and hopes betrayed, he would still believe in the fundamental goodness of mankind. Because he believes in God, and he believes in the life to come. He said to me "I don't just 'believe it.' I know it."



He believes in "doing unto others," believes that you are happiest when you're sacrificing. Men like Lister, men like Semmelweiss, called "the saver of mothers," men who work in laboratories their lives through, trying to isolate a germ, trying to discover a serum which will cure an incurable disease, priests and missionaries, men who are working to benefit mankind—these, Don believes, are the happiest men in all the world, for they are men with vocations, and the courage to follow them.

I said, "But what about your work, then? Feeling as you do, how are you content with being on the screen, and on the air? You can't call pictures a vocation!"

"But I do," said this astonishing young man. "I do." Right then I knew that he was about to tell me something in which he hotly and honestly believes. One might have known that he would feel his work a vocation, this young man who once thought of studying for the priesthood. It's been called a lot of things, this business of being a star. I've heard it called a racket, a form of self expression, a gratification of the ego, a short cut to fame and riches. But this was the first time I'd ever heard it spoken of as a vocation, as self sacrifice.

"It's a sacrifice for me to be in pictures and on the air," said Don. Could I believe my ears? "At least, I can think of half a dozen other businesses that would be easier on me. This work is hard, don't let anyone tell you different. It's nervous work. We're always at high emotional tension. We ourselves don't realize at what a tension we work until we crack up one fine day, and then that's that." (And there came to my mind Jean Harlow, Irving Thalberg, Bill Powell's recent illness, Alice Faye's fainting on the set, Olivia de Havilland on the verge of a nervous breakdown, Bette Davis unable to gain weight, and all those others).

"Honore and I," Don said, "always eat dinner out, you know. Not that I don't like to eat at home, but simply because I've gone at such a tempo all day that I can't relax, can't go where (Continued on page 93)

FAREWELL TO Francis

Marriage or career? Kay's old-fashioned, so she'll put aside stardom

Will Kay's new-found love and leisure make up for glamor and glory, and the satisfaction of personal success?

KAY FRANCIS is saying goodbye!

To put it bluntly, Kay Francis is retiring from the screen. Yes, it's true. She says so. And if there's one outstanding characteristic about Kay it's her sincerity. There's a sort of terrible, uncompromising honesty in everything she says. You always know she means it.

"In September," sighed Kay, ecstatically, "in September of this year, 1938, my contract with pictures is up, and I am retiring from the screen, grateful for many kindnesses, appreciative, and all that. But, barring an Act of God, my retirement will be permanent. I'm through. I'm getting out. It's over. And I can hardly wait for September!"

Can you believe it! It sounds incredible. It's easy to understand a star's ecstacy over the approach of so romantic and important a marriage as Kay is going to make in September. Who wouldn't be ecstatic about marrying a gentleman named Baron Raven Eric Angus Barnekow? But, can it be possible that Kay will never make another picture? Not even after the honeymoon?

"No, there will not even be any 'in between pictures,'" said Kay Francis, "not after September." She will leave the screen, she will be a star no longer. Kay will be ecstatic, because stardom has meant more than a little martyrdom for her, believe it or not.

Kay won't talk much about her Eric (who will be her fifth husband, her first two marriages having occurred before she was twenty-one). Having to discuss her personal affairs is one of the things she most detests about the status of stardom. And oh, how she does detest stardom! Being expected to expose to the public gaze her secret heart and the hearts of those nearest and dearest to her is just too much.

Kay did say, however, that she will be married sometime within the year. Just when, she couldn't tell, because she doesn't know. They will make their home in Hollywood for six months of the year (the Baron has a plant here for the manufacture of aeroplanes), and they will travel the other six months. Kay loves travelling more than anything in the world. You never meet her that she isn't planning "my next trip." When they are in Hollywood, she and the Baron will live in her new home in Cold Water Canyon. The Baron, who is half Scottish and half German, has several homes on the continent, and they will visit his homes when they are abroad.

This much she would tell, and no more, except what one could guess by that glow in her eyes which is there only when a woman is richly happy, in every way content.

"Barring an Act of God," Kay repeated vigorously, "I will never be 'in pictures' again, and I can't wait to be finished. I can't wait to be forgotten."

Did you ever think you'd live to see the day when a star would say, "I can't wait to be forgotten"—and mean it?

"It's stupid to make prophesies," said Kay, "even about one's self. And I'm not making prophesies. I won't say that if, now and again, a specially interesting picture

Meet Baron Raven Erik Angus Barnekow, who wants to be called plain "Mister." He's to be Kay's fifth.

Kay and Pat O'Brien look very much "that way" in "Women Are Like That," but it's for professional purposes!

should come up, I wouldn't do it, if I were asked. I might. But I wouldn't care about being the star. I should prefer not to be the star. I wouldn't care if I had only one scene to do, so long as I liked the story, and the character. But that is problematical. And never again, so long as I live, shall I sign a long-term contract anywhere, for any reason.

"It is not entirely because I'm getting married," said Kay. "It's a combination of everything. Eric dislikes the publicity attached to my work as much as I do, understands it even less than I do, never having experienced anything of the sort. But I disliked it intensely many years before I ever even met him.

by

FAITH SERVICE

I NEVER wanted to be a star," Kay went on, "I have loathed being a star. There's too much heartbreak to it. There's too much strain, too much publicity, which means too little privacy, too much of everything I detest, and far too little of everything I value. Naturally, I didn't anticipate all this before I got into it.

"The money has been nice," said Kay, honestly, "that has been the compensation. But I have invested my money, saved it, taken care of it. I don't need any more. There is no necessity to keep on just for the sake of making more.

"There is too much responsibility attached to being a star. If a picture is bad, every one blames the star. They rarely blame the producer, the director, the scenarist, the cameraman, or the rest of the cast. It is always the star who has failed, the star who is 'slipping.' And when a million dollar production is involved, that is quite a responsibility.

"Non-stars have a much better time of it. Take any well-known character actor. He has a wonderful life. He can have several weeks, even months, off between productions to travel and vacation. He adds immeasurably to any picture he is in, yet if the picture flops no one blames him. Such men are David Niven, for instance, and Frank Morgan, and Alan Mowbray. That's the way to enjoy being in pictures. Those who strive for stardom know not what they do.

"I loathe the business of stardom. I hate planned interviews. I hate being 'snapped' when I'm walking down the street. I hate being stared at when I go to lunch with my friends. I hate taking stills. I hate being mobbed when I go to have my hair done. The old simile about a star's life being comparable to a gold fish in a glass bowl is true.

"The rabid pursuit of stars amounts to persecution. One time on my way to New York, when we stopped in Chicago, I stayed in my drawing-room in lounging pajamas, a net on my hair, cold (Continued on page 92)

Ginger Rogers "works out" religiously and look at the fine results. Jean Parker's another example of streamlined perfection through exercise.

Figure IT OUT THIS WAY

The stars tell you how to do your own individual streamlining

by

MARY MARSHALL

Danielle Darrieux's beautiful legs and fetching figure are limbered up daily with her own special routines.

Dorothy Lamour, of the lovely arms and shoulders, "sets up" regularly, too.

ON THE back of an old shopping list, there are jotted down some notes which nobody could possibly read but myself, and if I leave them till they get cold, I'll not be able to read them either. These notes add up to around two dozen grand exercises, diet hints and defect-disguisers, each one designed to keep American female figures at a streamlined par. Since I don't own the magazine and can't have the whole book to myself, I want to get down to business pretty quickly, and pack as much information as possible into this article.

Let me remind you of some fundamental truths. 1: You diet to lose weight generally, if you're heavy all over. You exercise to lose weight in spots, and to improve the grace, balance and suppleness of your body. Don't ever again be caught saying, "The minute I diet, my face and neck get thin, and I never lose off my hips, where I want to." If you're hippy, bulgy or minus a waistline (so necessary this year with the fitted styles!) you should merely eat sensibly and exercise earnestly and faithfully. If you are really obese, please, please see a physician before you attempt any sort of diet or exercise at all. There may be a glandular disturbance which only a doctor can correct. But you others—the "just plump" folks—you can get thin all right if you use your common sense and your will power.

2: Trick diets and eating stunts are out. They're dangerous, stupid, and as passée as having the vapours. Every diet should include fruit, vegetables, lean meat, eggs, fish, skim milk or buttermilk, a little butter, a very little sugar, and some bread. You can count calories if you want to. Twelve to fifteen hundred a day are the least even the fattest wench should have, unless otherwise advised by a doctor. Personally, I have little patience with calorie-counting. I think anybody with the sense God gave geese ought to be able to stick to medium portions, single helpings, and a balance of the sensible foods given above. But there are plenty of calorie charts available, so go ahead and count if you want to.

3: It is harder, generally, to gain than to lose. Skinny girls are often highly nervous, and do not assimilate food properly, or they have bird-like appetites (in which case, try the system of eating little and often). Or they eat all the wrong things. Thin girls who have tried to gain and cannot should up and away to a medico. Don't think, because you're thin, that you can go in heavily for sweets, if you happen to like them. Sugar satisfies hunger too quickly, fills you up as a gooey sandwich or dessert does, leaving you unsatisfied an hour or two later. Sweets and rich starches dull the appetite for more desirable foods. If you're thin and generally healthy, you need exercises, too—for relaxation, mostly, and a few of these are given below.

4: Everybody who isn't sick abed needs to exercise regularly. And outdoor sports, swell as they are, don't quite fill the bill. You need formal, corrective exercises. But I do not mean strenuous exercises. Start as easy as you like, two or three minutes at a time, if you're quite plump, and have neglected physical exercise for some time. Work up gradually from that modest beginning. Don't bundle up, either, and try to sweat off weight. That doesn't do any good. You lose some weight in water, via the perspiration route, but you put it right back on again with the next beverage you drink. The secret of streamlining your body through exercise is faithfulness, perseverance, and doing exercises correctly and not sloppily. And—here you must use your own head—pick out exercises which will cure your figure faults. Frixample: many a bulging tummy is due to poor muscles, not actual fat. Firm those muscles, and don't give up foods which your body needs, nor bounce (Continued on page 96)

THE Skipper AND HIS LADIES

Yankee sea captains and Tahitian beauties were Jon's forebears.

Frances Langford is only a handful, but is she sweet!

Commander or cook with equal ease, Jon Hall is one versatile guy.

It's all smooth sailing on the sea of romance with Frances and Jon.

Jon tells how many he has loved, and what he thinks of Hollywood girls

by MARTHA KERR

I LIKE women who are well-dressed, have beautiful complexions and plenty of health and vitality," said Jon Hall. "I hate infidelity in women, and I don't like women who argue or try to make you spend more than you can afford. The women I go out with understand that I can spend only about twenty-five dollars a week for entertainment. If a girl insists on going to some expensive, elaborate place, I simply say, 'I'm terribly sorry, but I can't afford to go there. I'm afraid I won't be able to take you. And I won't argue with anyone, man or woman. I never have and I never will."

"You mean you don't even argue with producers?" I asked.

"No," said Jon Hall. "That's why I pay a manager, so he can do my fighting for me, if it's necessary. When I made 'Hurricane,' I didn't have a manager, and I did a lot of things I shouldn't have. I lost thirty pounds making that picture. I did all the diving myself, except the dive from the cliff, for which a double was used. And for one whole morning and afternoon I was horsewhipped." Jon laughed. "It was all worth while, though, every bit of it. I was lucky to get a role like that one in 'Hurricane.'"

The day he was chosen for the role of Terangi stands out as the high point in Jon Hall's life. That and the day he took his father, mother and sister to the premiere of "Hurricane," a premiere that was to make movie history in a town where all openings are spectacular. All night, lights flashed across the sky, and Hawaiian bands played till dawn, while ten thousand fans in the grandstands watched a hurricane so real they were shaken and moved, feeling as though they had really watched a great disaster. And on that day a new star was born, Jon Hall.

Sitting opposite, I stared at him. His physique is magnificent. The chair in which he sat seemed almost too small to hold him. Whether he is sitting or standing, he towers. His light brown hair is slightly wavy, the lines of his face are strong, almost rugged, and his chin, his grayish-blue dreamer's eyes and his well-chiseled features tell you that he has a proud heredity.

His paternal grandfather, Captain Charles Chapman of New England, sailed the seven seas until he reached the harbor of Papeete, then settled there to live. His great-grandmother was Levina, a woman who was almost a legend of the South Seas, famed for her beauty, kindness and her wonderful gifts as a hostess. His mother is one-fourth Tahitian, his father is Swiss. In his own day Jon's father was quite an athlete, so he taught Jon (real name is Charlie Locher) to love the outdoors, and to swim almost as soon as he could walk.

WHEN a man like Jon, handsome, athletic and an excellent dancer, hits Hollywood, the reverberations can be heard all over the continent. You have heard Hollywood characterized as the city of lonely women, and that is quite true. It is a city swarming with women, where every man becomes legitimate prey for the Dianas of the screen. Naturally, Jon Hall was soon in great demand at parties and social functions. A little bewildered by all this adulation, he was fortunate and grateful to be given the friendship of a (Continued on page 99)

THE LOVES OF Lamour

Yes, there is more than one, and yet, you cannot call her fickle

by DOROTHY GULMAN

DOROTHY LAMOUR is one lucky lass who needed no pointers from Miss Beatrice Fairfax to win her man. For the delectable Dottie was wise when it came to the grand emotion. She spotted dear old Dan Cupid practically at the moment he spotted her, and with all the accuracy of a William Tell, she guided the bow, and directed the aim, of that all-important arrow.

Picture a lush southern belle just turned seventeen, fresh from home-town triumphs as "Miss New Orleans." Put that moonlight-and-magnolia vision of loveliness into a drab grey uniform. Imagine her stranded in cold, bleak, mid-winter Chicago, operating an elevator in a busy State Street department store for eighteen dollars a week. It may not be your idea of gay, carefree youth, but it happens to be an unretouched portrait of Dorothy Lamour in 1931, when the late Dorothy Dell introduced her to me.

Dottie and I immediately became friends. Before long we were sharing an apartment at a downtown hotel where I was employed. The poverty which had haunted Dorothy all through her childhood had instilled in her an invincible urge to attain the success that spelled security. On one of the hotel's weekly celebrity nights she cajoled the master of ceremonies into calling her up to sing a number. The crowd had been lavishly entertained by Kate Smith, Harry Richman, Dennis King, Rudy Vallee, Hal Le Roy, and Vincent Lopez. They had rubbed shoulders with such notables as Jack Dempsey and Mayor Cermak. No one paid the slightest attention to the frightened little nobody in ill-fitting clothes, as she struggled (Continued on page 101)

Siren of the sarong. Left, with handsome hubby, Herbie Kay.

Tempestuous TENOR

Allan Jones' path has not always been strewn with songs! He's had to fight his way to favor

by ROBERT McILWAINE

Allan, Irene, and little Gail aboard Smoky.

NO, I DIDN'T wipe coal dust out of my eyes and hastily board a train for Hollywood," Allan Jones began almost apologetically. "I wasn't that lucky or talented or sumpin'. Do you know what it cost me to go into pictures? Well, plenty! And not all in hard work and prayers either! Twenty thousand of hard earned cash! What do you think of that?"

Well, he had me there, for I'm one of the gullible guys who read (and believed) that Jones was picked up by one of that ever-present gentry known as talent scouts. Y'know, they tap you on the shoulder, give you a ticket to the coast, a mansion in Beverly and stardom at the slightest provocation! Oh, they do, do they?

"I'm the kind who has to work like hell for everything I get," Allan continued, "including my break in 'The Firefly.' A friend of mine, who is a producer, had asked me to do some favors. Among them was to dub in my voice for 'A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody' for a scene in 'The Great Zeigfeld.' He promised nothing definite in return for the job, but said some day he would have something for me —he hoped.

"Sure enough, he turned up with 'The Firefly' script and asked me to do it. Even that wasn't a cinch, what with three strikes on me before I began, because the Nelson Eddy fans resented my being in one of his spots. Nevertheless, I worked like a slave and hope I did a good job. I even trained my horse to do a couple of tricks. If you saw 'The Firefly,' you remember when I fell off the horse, he came back and kissed me.

"As a matter of fact, since then, that's all he wants to do. He's spoiled now. Yep, if I don't stop in and see him every day, he raises plenty of cain. You've heard of picture hogs? Well, that's Smoky all over. He loves getting his mug right into the camera. Since the picture, he's become so jealous that if I exercise Irene's horse, it practically throws his nose out of joint."

Just to bring the records up to date, while we are keeping up with the Joneses, there was that little matter of some few words over "Everybody Sing."

"I'll tell you frankly I didn't want to do the picture," Jones began. "In fact, I took a six weeks suspension. This meant (Continued on page 100)

SUIT Yourself

With summer here, get into the swim of things with smart star bathing togs

Sweethearts in swim suits; Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane go to the beach in matching trunks and printed satin lastex maillot, by Catalina.

Marie Wilson wears a two-piece dressmaker suit by Catalina in cotton with Indian motif design.

by ANN WILLS

ASK ANY Hollywood star what her favorite outdoor sport is, and nine times out of ten, the emphatic answer will be, "Swimming!" Very often, it's the only sport she's able to fit into her busy day, for if she's working on a picture, she'll just have time for a quick plunge into her private pool or into the ocean in front of her cottage at Malibu. Many of the stars, as you know, find swimming the best and most pleasant exercise for relaxing taut nerves and for keeping the trim figures you admire on the screen.

Swimming days for all of us are just ahead, vacations are in the offing, and aren't we glad! Seems as though it's been an awfully long time arriving, but summer, sweet summer, is here at last, officially opened by a nice long Memorial Day week-end to give us a taste of the fun that lies before us. Summer, the season of the year when swimming heads everyone's sports list and your bathing suit is your favorite costume, which you don at every opportunity!

Seashore, mountain lake, outdoor pool, or ye olde swimmin' hole—all are calling you to dive into their cool blue waters, to exercise winter-softened muscles by vigorous swimming, to stretch yourself out on their shores and soak up the health-giving rays of the warm summer sun, breathe the good fresh air, and acquire a gorgeous tan on as much of you as possible!

Perhaps you career gals have already made plans for spending the precious weeks of your summer vacation. Or, if you're lucky enough to be in school still, you're looking forward to those glorious months of summer freedom. But, whoever you are, whatever your plans —well, if I could find any takers, I'd put my hard-earned shekels on a sure thing—I'll bet that you're in the market for a new bathing suit! And if you're not, if you had thought you'd make last year's model do, you'll change your mind in a jiffy when you see the entrancing new designs being offered you for summer, 1938. Flattering new necklines with easily adjustable shoulder-strap arrangements that look tricky, but aren't; bright new California hand-blocked prints; beautiful new beach colors that blend perfectly with the seascape—recession or no recession, you cannot resist 'em!

Rochelle Hudson chooses Cherie, smooth fitting because it's made of Jantzen's Wisp-o-weight.

And petite Dixie Dunbar plans to do some serious swimming in the Vee Tuck, also by Jantzen.

While the choice of Eadie Adams is a conservative skirted suit by B. V. D. in dusty pink wool.

Hollywood, of course, swims all year 'round and, consequently, Hollywood demands the best in swim suits, the most practical and "swimable," and at the same time, the smartest. So, if you're the least bit particular about what kind of bathing suit you're going to select for this season, you can't go wrong if you make your choice from the ones that Hollywood has accepted wholeheartedly, can you? And you'd better be particular, for if anything must fit perfectly, be worn easily and nonchalantly, it's certainly your bathing suit. I'm sure you'll agree on that!

The suits you see above are made by three manufacturers who've all been making bathing suits for years and years, each year reaching a new high in perfection of fabric, fit and weave. Each season's models have been styled in tune with the latest fashion mood. With these years of experience behind them, it's only natural that, for ease of fit, for comfort, for sheer beauty of line, design and color, this season's crop will be hard to beat.

Those two up-and-coming young stars, Priscilla Lane and Wayne Morris, are seen everywhere together these days. They're together so much that now they've even started dressing alike in "twin" fashions! For the beach, Wayne wears printed satin lastex swimming trunks that exactly match Priscilla's smooth satin lastex maillot. The seams of all these satin lastex suits are sewed (Continued on page 105)

Funniest GAL IN TOWN

And the funniest part of it is that Marie Wilson does not want to be

by MARY SHARON

THERE ARE a lot of funny people in Hollywood, but Marie Wilson is the funniest of them all.

Noah Webster described her exactly when he wrote that to be funny is to be "laughable, especially from absurdity or oddness." That's Marie all over. Ever since she was a child, Marie has always been funny, but her funniness has been tangled up with purpose and endeavor. As a youngster she was continually up to delightfully mad pranks. Only they weren't pranks to Marie. They were deadly serious episodes.

Her mother tells a rare one. When she was ten years old, Marie decided definitely to become an actress. In order to develop and practise her art, she felt the need of audience appreciation. So she organized a little theatre in the neighborhood. They were a lackadaisical group, however. Nobody but Marie had any deep interest in the Thespian art.

She fixed up drapes and settings, and coaxed her little friends to come and watch her emote, but they were hopelessly bored. Always, she found that her audience slipped quietly out, before she reached the climax of her act. She tried emoting before empty chairs, but that took something away from her performance. After all, it didn't make a bit of difference to the chairs, whether she emoted with feeling or not.

Finally, she took desperate steps. She was a good little cook. She could make frothy puddings and dainty little cookies. So she bribed her audience! If they (Continued on page 103)

Marie and Nick Grinde, who laughed the first time he saw Marie, but later learned to love her.

She's so romantic she's amusing, so no one will take Marie seriously.

OFF THEIR Guard

Carole, the glamor girl, is pitching right into the fan field this season! Yep, the Lombard's had more hits than Joe di Maggio, which, in any language, is a batting average.

Photos by George Strock

THE DAILY Dozen

Some meanies said that Betty Grable married Jackie Coogan for his money, and are their faces red now! The beautiful Betty loves to work—and by all the current news reports it looks as though she'll have to!

While the rest of us bend and stretch and roll to keep in trim, Bet.

Scoop! Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Ilona Massey, Vic Orsatti, Alice Faye and Tony Martin.

Eleanore Whitney took a dare and stole the show, right under Jumbo's nose.

Tch, tch! It may be only forty rooms, but still it's home to them!

Sightseein'

This quaint English cottage, upper left, is Bette Davis' rest-haven. Nature has been allowed to landscape in her own charming fashion. The "Nelson" mailbox, in case you're wondering, belongs to Bette's husband.

From his hill-top "nest," lower left, Warner Baxter's view extends from the Sierra Nevadas to the Pacific Ocean. At night, his terraced garden with its waterfall is lighted by the spotlight you'll find under the eave.

(Upper right) Would you want anything more grand than Paul Muni's choice? Its refreshing Spanish style and large swimming pool make it a cool refuge for a tired actor on hot California days. We like it, Mr. Muni!

(Lower right) Peaked gables, shuttered windows and wide expanse of green lawn make the spot where Dick Powell spends his leisure hours elegant in its simplicity. Such surroundings would inspire any crooner, we think!

THE Daily GRIND

Alas! Even a glamor gal like Olivia De Havilland must live by the clock

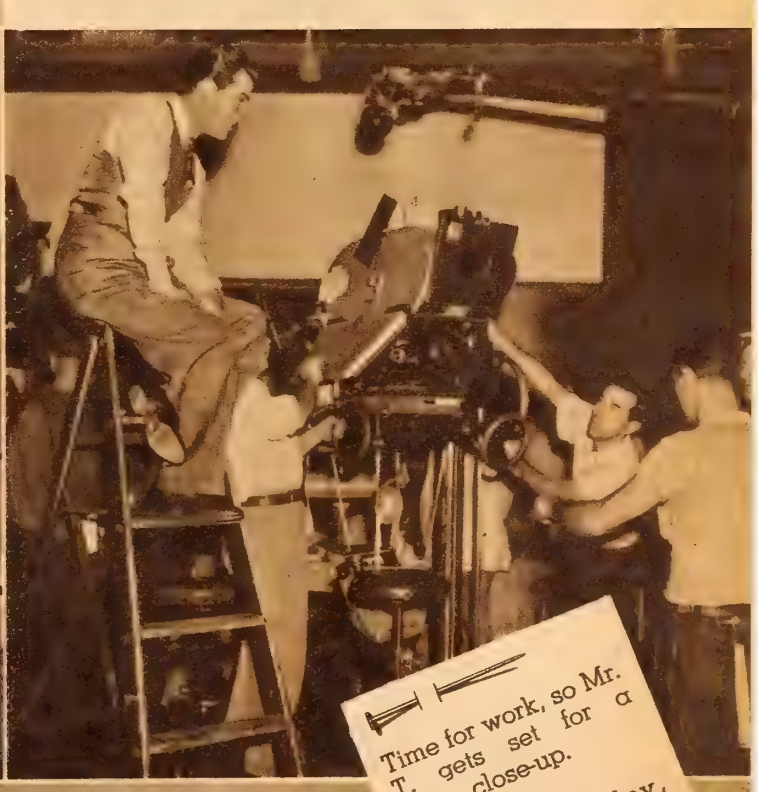
At six a.m. the alarm tingles, waking our sleeping beauty.

In comfortable pajamas, she rushes to the "Robin Hood" set.

Not a moment to waste! Olivia studies her script as she sips.

At nine, made-up and hair done, Olivia is ready to rehearse.

ON THE Lot



Between scenes of "Three Comrades," Bob Taylor does a little cavorting

"Miss Stanwyck? This is Robert Taylor. Remember?"

Bob's favorite luncheon pals—the property men.

Time for work, so Mr. T. gets set for a close-up.

Robert Benchley, book worm, gets the "hot foot."

A thoroughbred takes Marjorie Weaver over the jumps, and, right, Glenda Farrell plays at that rough, rowdy game—croquet!

Olivia de Havilland and Anita Louise run away from the studio in a boat, for the Warner brothers can't swim!

Summer's

THE TIME FOR FUN

Caddying for Deanna Durbin is fun to Peggy Ryan. Right, going swimming? No! Anne Shirley and John Payne play a love match!

"Well, then, let's see you, Doug," says Anita Louise, and Douglass Montgomery has to do or sink.

Vacation's here, so park your books and typewriters and step out with the stars

Good NEWS

BY LEO TOWNSEND

On the set of "Toy Wife", co-starring Luise Rainer and Bob Young, we talked to Bob while he relaxed on the sidelines and watched his stand-in work. "It's a strange business," says Mr. Y. "In this picture, I died two weeks ago. Now I'm working my head off, just as though nothing happened." Incidentally, Bob is a bit worried. He says he played a corpse in two pictures prior to "Toy Wife"—and he's afraid he's being typed.

Margaret Sullavan, for whom Jean Harlow's dressing room was redecorated, turned it down at the last minute and never moved in. No reason was given, but it's understood she was superstitious. So the dressing room is now the permanent studio residence of Luise Rainer, and Miss Sullavan has moved elsewhere. However, she retains Peggy MacDonald, her hairdresser, who was with Jean Harlow until Jean's death.

As we go to press, her studio is planning to send Shirley Temple to New York to attend the premiere of "Little Miss Broadway," her new picture. In the middle of all the fuss about the possible trip, Shirley's teacher said, "Won't it be fun, Shirley, to see your picture in New York?" "Yes," said Miss T., complacently, "if there's a Mickey Mouse."

More Shirley Temple data: For a young lady of such prominence, Shirley is surprisingly modest, which probably accounts for the fact that she's still unspoiled. She seldom looks in the mirror to admire herself, even when they're trying on those "Shirley Temple" dresses. (Her mother tries them all on Shirley, and if a model doesn't become her, it's not allowed to go on sale.) Her studio hopes to continue her career right on through young, womanhood, but her mother isn't so sure. She'd rather give Shirley a rest when she reaches the awkward age. Shirley blew up in her lines recently, the first time in a couple of years, stopped in the middle of a sentence and reached in her mouth. "Almost swallowed this," she announced, pulling out a tooth. Nine more to go, and she'll be a woman. Well, practically.

It Happened in Hollywood: Stand-ins rise in revolt and demand a title change. They want to be "focus artists." . . . A film, budgeted at close to a million dollars, is now shooting, with dialogue furnished scene by scene by a writer who works on the set. While the cameras are turning, the writer is trying to think up an ending for the picture. . . . A theatre marquee on Hollywood Boulevard announces, pretty firmly: "I'll Take Romance" and "Benny Goodman." You will, huh?

Fun and Games Dept.: When we walked on the set of "Three Blind Mice" the other day, Loretta Young, who goes in for such things, handed us a slip of paper on which was written "new door." "Can you make one word out of that, using the same letters?" she asked, in a suspiciously condescending manner. We couldn't, not being quick, so Loretta wrote down the answer for us. It's "one word." Get it?

Flash! If you want to know where Madge Evans has been keeping herself, a dispatch which reached us in today's mail will enlighten you. It reads: "Out of deference to the California citrus industry, Madge Evans is working on a new dance to be called the Big Orange." That's Madge for you—always looking ahead. Some of the rest of us, still working on our Charleston, ought to feel pretty silly.

Does anyone know that Arthur Treacher had to leave Hollywood on account of a woman? Well, this will kill you. The woman in the case is Miss Hannah, and she's a dog. A new Hollywood ordinance forbids any dog to walk the streets unless someone over the age of fifteen is on the other end of a leash. Arthur bought a leash, but Miss Hannah would have nothing to do with it. So he moved from his Hollywood apartment to a home in San Fernando Valley, where a dog's life is her own.

Question Box: What leading lady, now married to a director, has gone grand on the set of her current picture? Once one of the "regulars" at her studio, since her marriage she has acquired a haughty attitude and seems to take pleasure in making life miserable for the poor guy who's directing her present picture.

From all indications, it's still hearts and flowers with Tyrone Power and Janet Gaynor. At a party the other night a box lunch was served, and the men, who were given numbers, ate with the girls whose numbers corresponded to theirs. Tyrone ate with Janet, and the reason was that he had made a deal with the hostess to hand them the same number. In Hollywood, at least, an item like that is filed under L—for Love.

The neighboring communities evidently believe everything they hear about Hollywood. A case in point concerns Hugh Herbert, who was recently invited to be a guest at the San Bernardino Orange Show. Mr. H. checked with his wife, and they decided it would be fun, so he accepted. Next day the Orange Show management phoned, said they'd send a limousine and mentioned something about incidental expenses. Hugh couldn't understand why he'd need "expenses." Later, another phone call came, and a voice asked if five hundred dollars would be all right. Hugh was too surprised to answer, so the voice said, "Well, we'll make it a thousand, then." So Mr. and Mrs. Herbert went to the Orange Show in a nice limousine, enjoyed themselves immensely, and came back with a thousand dollars.

There's a proprietor of a hamburger stand between Hollywood and Santa Barbara who never goes to the movies. Hamburgers are his life, and he's happy that way. So he didn't recognize the young lady who came in with a girl companion and ordered hamburgers and chili. When they finished, the girls told him they were broke, but they would mail him his money. Two days later a check for ten dollars arrived, signed by Katharine Hepburn. He didn't even know who she was, until they told him at the bank, and even then he wasn't excited. The moral of this is that life can be very peaceful if you make it that way.

At the Brown Derby we saw Boxer Max Baer in a serious huddle with Maxie Rosenbloom, the actor. Thinking they were discussing the comparative merits of their professions, we listened in, and discovered Max was lecturing Maxie on the joys of being a father. "It's the only way," he said. Mr. Rosenbloom looked almost convinced.

On a recent Monday morning, Bob Montgomery had one of those scenes he'd been dreaming about for years. The picture was "Yellowjack," and Bob rushed to the studio, put on his make-up, and went to bed. He was supposed to be dying in a hospital ward in Panama, with Virginia Bruce and Lewis Stone doing all the standing-up acting. Montgomery quietly went to sleep, and played the scene beautifully.

If you want to know what became of the Indians, they're all at Universal, helping Johnny Mack Brown make a serial called "Flaming Frontiers." After watching them emote for a while we scanned the cast list and found it most interesting. In addition to the star, there are such names as Chief Thunder Cloud, Shooting Star and Iron Eyes Cody. Hiya, Iron Eyes!

The romantic impasse of the month involves Joan Fontaine and Conrad Nagel. Joan has been, to coin a phrase, linked romantically in the public prints with Mr. Nagel. At the moment, she's playing the lead in "The Muddled Deal," and her leading man, a handsome chap who admits to being Derrick de Marney, has taken considerable interest in her. So Conrad visits the set several days a week, sits on the sidelines, reportedly to see that the romancing sticks to the script.

We've been seeing a lot of Westerns lately, and most of them are swell. But there's one major criticism—they have too much stilted and unnecessary dialogue. For instance, there's no need for a Western hero to announce, "Gal, I'm agoin' to kiss you," before he grabs the fair beauty in his arms. Back in the good old days when the West, like the screen, was silent, he just kissed her, and we all knew what he meant.

Visited the "Hold That Kiss" set and watched Maureen O'Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe and company trying to eat chop suey with chop sticks. Things weren't going so well, and after her fourth or fifth unsuccessful attempt, Maureen put down her chop sticks and sadly announced, "Gosh, I wish I had worn my tweed suit!"

Luise Rainer goes glamorous in "Toy Wife," her latest picture. Recently ("The Good Earth," "Big City," etc.), the budget for her gowns hasn't run much over a few dollars. In this one, however, she has twenty-eight changes, and she's making Adrian the happiest man at Metro.

This is a story of June Lang and the sun, neither of whom needs any further introduction. It seems June took a sun bath on a recent Sunday, and whenever she stays out too long she gets full of electricity. So Monday morning she reported to work, and discovered that the electricity in her body made her clothes cling to her, a situation fraught with peril, what with the Hays office and one thing and another. Everyone went into a huddle, and someone said that a cotton slip would solve everything, since cotton was a non-conductor. It took two hours to dig one up, because cotton slips are hardly the rage in Hollywood this season. They found one on a wardrobe woman—or rather, she told them she had one on—cut it down for June and saved the day for the studio.

Recipe for a Successful Marriage: First, of course, you've got to be a girl. If you've accomplished that, then, if you have what it takes, you get to be a Leroy Prinz Girl. Then go, with the Leroy Prinz Girls, to London, where you appear in the floor show at the Dorchester House. Of the two dozen girls who went over two years ago, we know of eight who married wealthy and, they report, quite charming gentlemen. For instance, one is the bride of a naval lieutenant commander, and others have married the head of an automobile firm, an airplane manufacturer, the manager of a big theatrical agency, and a Greek count. The Greek count isn't head of anything, but he has three million dollars.

Victoria Richard, a wardrobe woman, brought her eighteen-year-old daughter, Kay, to the studio for her first visit a few weeks ago. Kay was excited, because she had never seen a studio or met an actress. First one she met was Mary Maguire, and next day she was called by the studio and asked to go to work. So now she's Mary Maguire's stand-in.

With all the talk of economy, a story is going the rounds concerning a song writer at a major studio. He had a year's contract at one thousand dollars weekly. During that period he wrote one song, after which he was never asked or assigned to do another. Two weeks before the contract was to expire, knowing his option couldn't be taken up, he ducked out of town and sailed for Europe. After six months, he returned and dropped in at his old studio to say hello to friends. First guy he bumped into was the studio cashier, who said: "Say, we've got twenty-four one-thousand-dollar checks waiting for you over in my office. Why don't you ever drop by, or don't you song writers care for salaries?" Seems the studio didn't even miss the guy. Just picked up his option and paid him one thousand dollars a week for staying in Europe!

Gypsy Rose Lee, who insists she's really Louise Hovick, owns one of Hollywood's most elaborate trailers, for it is her hobby, now that she's a local citizen, to spend her week-ends touring California. Recently she visited a swank Beverly Hills shop to discuss a new interior decorating scheme for her wandering home. "What type of room do you have in mind?" asked the gentleman behind the counter. "It's not a room," said Miss H., "it's for my trailer." "Madame," announced the gent, "we do not service trailers."

Virginia Field left for England recently, and she probably had a bit of explaining to do when the customs men looked through her luggage. One of her bags contained a meat grinder and a package of (unheated) hot dogs. These items, she says, are strictly American, and she's going to use them to amaze her friends. The meat grinder, in case you're wondering, is for making hamburgers.

Here's a true story of a side of Hollywood which isn't often publicized. During the making of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," Art Warck, head of the prop men on the picture, died leaving a widow and six children. Cast and crew got together and agreed to put all their earnings

Last minute chatter about the stars brought to you by our reporter

Ozzie Nelson, Bob Hope, Ken Murray and Edgar Bergen hold that note!

Ethel Merman honors Bob Hope at the dinner for America's crooners.

for Sundays and overtime into a fund. When the picture was finished they had enough money to build and furnish a home for the Warck family.

●

Overheard on the Boulevard: "I understand Nelson Eddy is on a concert tour. Wonder where he is now?" "Probably keeping two towns ahead of 'Girl of the Golden West.'" Don't blame us—we're only telling you what we heard.

●

They're boasting three beauties in the cast of "In Every Woman's Life." The three are Kay Francis, Anita Louise and Bonita Granville. Little Miss Granville is actually developing into a very attractive young lady. For proof, you might inquire of Jackie Cooper, who has just gifted her with a bottle of "Moment Supreme."

●

Notice is hereby given that the Bartholomew Printing Company, of this city, has suspended operations. Mr. Freddie Bartholomew, its proprietor and sole owner, had set up his own printing establishment in the basement of his home, and had solicited quite a bit of business from friends and acquaintances. When his aunt discovered he had received payment in advance for all his orders, the president of the concern was forced to shut down and return all the cash to his clients.

●

Danielle Darrieux is probably the most popular foreign actress ever to hit Hollywood. On the set of "Rage of Paris," she exhibits none of the expected mannerisms of the imported darlings. She kids with the director, the cast and the crew, and she tosses in a swell impersonation of Charlie Chaplin when she's in the mood. It must be added, however, that her husband, Henri Decoin, is not so popular with the boys around the lot. He shoots craps in French, and before they know it he has all their dough.

●

On the "Letter of Introduction" set we heard a bit of dialogue between Andrea Leeds and young Mr. Charlie McCarthy. The scene is a room in a boarding house, and Andrea has just returned from her first interview with a big producer noted for his amorous proclivities. She has just told her friends that she's landed a job with him. "Did he get fresh?" asks Edgar Bergen. "No," says Andrea. "Why he wouldn't harm a flea." "Well," says Charlie, "it's nice to know he draws the line somewhere." There's a splintering retort!

Arthur Whelan is a proud gent these days. He's Arleen's father. When she—a barber shop manicurist—was "discovered," he was an electrician; worked for a company which services bill boards and theatre marquees. When Arleen got her contract, Papa hung onto his job, and now he's glad he did. Most of his work lately has been putting his daughter's name up in lights, along with Warner Baxter's, for "Kidnapped."

●

The next picture starring those dazzling Canadians, the Dionne Quints, will be "Five of a Kind," which is now in production. In it the young ladies will speak—intelligibly—for the first time in their screen careers. And they'll speak English, which they're learning for the picture. Also, they'll sing a song, called, appropriately enough, "All Mixed Up."

●

Loretta Young's sixteen-millimeter camera has just completed a strictly home production which features four generations of her family. It all came about when her grandfather, Dr. Robert Royal of Seattle, visited in Hollywood. He, of course, played the first generation in the film. The supporting cast included Loretta's mother, sister Sally Blane and daughter Gretchen Foster, sister Polly Ann Young and son Peter Hermann, and Loretta's adopted daughter, two-year-old Judy.

For the most breath-taking, blood-freezing moment in any picture you've ever witnessed, see "Test Pilot," the Gable-Loy-Tracy air epic. In a scene which seems like hours, but actually takes less than one minute, you see a plane go into a terrific power dive, headed straight for the earth. The tremendous air pressure rips the wings from the fuselage, and a second later the pilot bails out. When his parachute opens, you'll start breathing again.

Did you know that "infidelity" is a horrid word? It is officially horrid because the Hays office has barred its use in pictures. And that's why Joan Crawford's new picture, taken from a story called—ahem!—will come to the screen as "Fidelity."

Anybody want to hear what happened to Claudette Colbert's poodle, Smoky, while Claudette was in Europe? Well, we'll tell you anyway. It seems Smoky just toyed with his food, and showed no interest in anything at all, so he was taken to a veterinarian, who diagnosed the case. Know what the trouble was? He was lonesome! Smoky is Claudette's most respected critic. She takes him to all rushes of her pictures and hopes they will rate "four barks."

Hollywood Oddities: John Barrymore, who has trouble remembering his lines, didn't forget his daughter's birthday. . . . For six years Gail Patrick has been going to a Hollywood fortune teller, and each year he tells her that some day she'll be in pictures. . . . When bees got into W. C. Fields home a few weeks ago, two of them stung W. C. on the nose, but no one could tell the difference. . . . Director Henry Hathaway reversed the usual procedure one afternoon when he walked out on the cast of "Spawn of the North."

Dilemma Dept.: Mack Grey, affectionately known as "the Killer," and renowned as George Raft's constant companion, lost out on a role in "Spawn of the North" because he was ill. Recuperating in Palm Springs, he was called back to Hollywood for a role in "Prison Farm." When he arrived, the director took one look at him and turned him down—said he looked too tan and healthy for a prison inmate.

Bergen's bag of tricks amuses Mary Brian. Presto—a false moustache is a toupee!

Pat Ellis and Martha Raye have a chat at the Big Pineapple Ball.

There's a brand new sixteen thousand dollar organ at the St. Charles Catholic Church in North Hollywood, and the donor is the Crooner, Mr. Bing Crosby. In addition to his gift, Bing also appeared as soloist with the choir on the Sunday they dedicated the organ.

A prominent screen and radio comic (he's not on the air at present) has just emerged from several weeks in a hospital, where he underwent treatment for overindulgence in things alcoholic. Everyone hopes it taught the guy a lesson, because if it didn't his career will be ended within a year. He's a very nice gent when he's away from the bottle, and all his friends are hoping he has really said goodbye to it.

Tch, tch! Joan Bennett has a "mad" on Walter Wanger!

The uppercut's all in fun as Max Baer meets Lana Turner.

Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne at a smart shindig.

La Belle Lamour in "civies." Randy Scott is with her.

Listen, Jack Benny, it's good if Sophie Tucker tells it!

The Cobbs—Bob and Gail (Patrick)—light up after dinner.

MISS JANE ALVA JOHNSON

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson of Saint Louis leads a vivid and interesting life

One of the most attractive post-debutantes in Saint Louis is Jane Alva Johnson. She is wholehearted in her enthusiasms—"loves" horse shows, entertaining, and smoking Camels. "Most of my friends smoke Camels, too," she says, "and they know I smoke nothing else. Even though I smoke quite steadily, I'm always ready for another Camel. Which is one of the nicest things I could ever say about a cigarette!"

She is a distinguished horsewoman

Riding, hunting, and horse shows are "an old story" to Jane Alva Johnson. While at Fermata School, she was a whip in the Aiken drag hunts. Her horses have won many trophies and ribbons. And she has even run off a show of her own! Above, Jane chats with Olive Cawley (left). "I don't have to look to see what cigarette you're smoking, Jane. Camels again! Why is it that you smoke nothing but Camels?" asks Miss Cawley.

Jane's reply is quite emphatic: "Camels are delightfully different. They never tire my taste. I depend upon having healthy nerves—and Camels never jangle my nerves. They are always gentle to my throat too. In fact, in so many ways, Camels agree with me!"

A gracious hostess

...and a charming Veiled Prophet's Queen

Miss Johnson had the exciting experience of being chosen Queen of the Veiled Prophet's Ball—a signal honor in the social life of Saint Louis. Above, a fashionable artist's portrayal of Miss Johnson, regal in her court gown of lamé and sable. Throughout the excitement of parties, travels, and an active sports life, Jane turns to Camels: "When I'm tired, smoking Camels gives me a 'lift'! And that delicate Camel flavor always tastes just right."

Among the many distinguished women who find Camels delightfully different:

Mrs. Nicholas Biddle, Philadelphia • Mrs. Powell Cabot, Boston Mrs. Thomas M. Carnegie, Jr., New York • Mrs. J. Gardner Coolidge 2nd, Boston • Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel 3rd, Philadelphia • Mrs. Chiswell Dabney Langhorne, Virginia • Miss Alicia Rhett, Charleston Miss LeBrun Rhinelander, New York • Mrs. John W. Rockefeller, Jr., New York • Mrs. Rufus Paine Spalding III, Pasadena • Mrs. Louis Swift, Jr., Chicago • Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Jr., Philadelphia

CAMELS ARE A MATCHLESS BLEND OF FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS... TURKISH AND DOMESTIC

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS
IN CAMELS

THEY ARE THE
LARGEST-SELLING
CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

Copyright, 1938, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER "Camels agree with me"

THEIR BEST FRIEND

"A man's best friend is his mother"—and here is Bob Taylor with his.

Anita Louise, now twenty-one, still likes to take orders from her Ma.

The darling of the ice—Sonja Henie—is Mama's darling, too. Yes, indeed.

Jane Withers—a problem child on the screen—but a good child to Mother.

And everywhere that Nelson goes, Mrs. Eddy's sure to be! He wants it so.

"SKIN-VITAMIN" SCORES HIT WITH WOMEN

Scientific findings in different countries awaken interest of leading hospitals. A certain vitamin is found to heal wounds, burns, infections, when applied direct to the skin!

New York! Tested in Pond's Cold Cream, the "skin-vitamin" brings definite results! Slides thrown on screen show skin of animals is rough, scaly, when diet lacks "skin-vitamin"—show skin smooth, healthy again, when Pond's Cold Cream containing "skin-vitamin" is applied daily.

Telephone calls and letters greet the first Pond's advertisement offering Pond's Cold Cream with beauty-giving "skin-vitamin" to women (October, 1937, magazines).

A young wife in Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., writes: "I have never used anything like this cream. It's grand! In two weeks roughness was entirely gone, my skin felt velvety and smooth."

Society beauties tell of greater benefits from Pond's Creams with "skin-vitamin" — (reading down) FREDERICA VANDERBILT WEBB, now Mrs. David S. Gamble, Jr.; WENDY MORGAN, now Mrs. Thomas Rodd, III; MRS. ALEXANDER C. FORBES, grandniece of MRS. JAMES ROOSEVELT—"Texture finer." "Skin softer." "Color better than ever."

Druggists — answering increasing requests from women for Pond's Cold Cream with the "skin-vitamin" in it—explain to them that it comes in the very same jars, with the same labels, at the same price.

Announced nine months ago, the "Skin-Vitamin" was quickly accepted by Thousands of Beauty Seekers

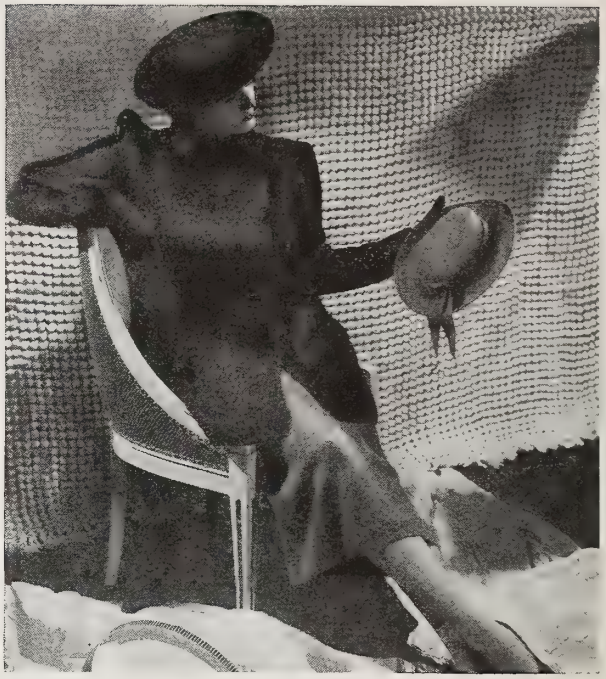
Thousands of women have already tried Pond's Cold Cream containing the "skin-vitamin," special aid in maintaining skin health and beauty. New thousands are constantly learning of its increased benefits.

Women's satisfaction is recorded in the mounting sales of this widely known beauty aid. Today Pond's Creams, long famous as largest selling creams in the world, now with the beauty-giving "skin-vitamin" have reached the largest sales in their entire history!

Tune in on "Those We Love," Mondays, 8:30 P. M., N.Y. Time, N.B.C.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

"SCRAM TO THAT SCOWL"



"FELLA, it's already gone! You see—I found that package of Beeman's you slipped in my pocket! Some flavor, I'll say! I like that luscious smoothness—that clean tang!

Look at the package — see that tight sealed foil? Keeps the air out and the fresh flavor in — no wonder Beeman's has such fresh snap and go! Let's stop in for more Beeman's right now!"

Beeman's
AIDS DIGESTION...

No. 6013 — A stunning all-purpose coat with lots of "umph!"

No. 6025—The knit suit is ideal for the first days of fall.

FALL FORECAST

KNITTERS, look to the future! It's not a bit too early to get ready for the first cool days of fall. While away idle vacation hours with busy needles, and before you know it, you'll have a smart new costume! Here are two brand new designs for you to start on. Unusual sleeve and shoulder treatment of No. 6013 gives you a stunning double-breasted, three-quarter swagger coat that can be worn for any occasion all next fall and right on through the winter on mild days. It looks complicated, but is really quite simple to make. The elementary stockinette stitch is used for No. 6025, a smart suit with distinctive fitted flowered jacket and flattering vestee which can be removed and replaced by a blouse or gilet for variety.

Why buy an expensive fall coat or suit when you can have all the fun of making it yourself, and at a great saving? The directions, of course, are free, but if you want to secure both directions and materials for these attractive designs with a minimum of effort and expenditure, we will send them to you promptly upon receipt of your order. Just check your preference on the coupon below. Send it in today, and knit your way to fall smartness during your vacation!

ANN WILLS, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

☐ Kindly send me, at no cost to me, Knitting Directions for No. 6013 in size .... No. 6025 in size .... I enclose stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

☐ Kindly send to me directions and materials for the design checked below, in size and color specified:

☐ No. 6013, size .... Color: This design in Black only. Total Cost $12.35

☐ No. 6025, size .... Color: Black—Brown—Navy. Total Cost $8.05

I am enclosing check (or money order) for $....., to cover all costs. (No orders will be filled unless accompanied by full payment.)

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State.....

(Check one or both patterns and please print name and address plainly.)

"Don't let Cosmetic Skin develop—rob YOU of love"

Claudette Colbert

LOVELY SKIN WINS ROMANCE. SO WHY TAKE CHANCES WITH UNATTRACTIVE COSMETIC SKIN

COSMETIC SKIN DEVELOPS WHEN PORES ARE CHOKED WITH DUST, DIRT AND STALE COSMETICS. LUX TOILET SOAP'S ACTIVE LATHER GUARDS AGAINST THIS DANGER

I ALWAYS REMOVE COSMETICS THOROUGHLY WITH LUX TOILET SOAP. IT'S THE SAFE, EASY WAY TO KEEP SKIN SOFT AND SMOOTH

LUX TOILET SOAP

STAR OF THE PARAMOUNT PRODUCTION "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"

9 out of 10
Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

You'll find a dash of Magic in CABAÑA!

MAKE your summer nails lovely with CABAÑA, the color men admire. Here is a flattering, tawny red . . . fresh, gay and stimulating . . . a color that throbs with romance!

You'll want CABAÑA in the city to wear with stylish blacks and beiges. You'll need it in the country for your South Sea prints and whites. At the beach CABAÑA suits the scene . . . it makes moonlight dances forever memorable . . . it holds a promise of thrilling things ahead.

Use this striking shade to accent summer highlights in your hair . . . the sunny undertone of your complexion . . . the glamour of your summer self. Get CABAÑA today!

Glazo Is Ideal For Summer!

1. LONGER WEAR — new Glazo lasts days longer without peeling or chipping. Slightly heavier—clings to nails.

2. EASY TO APPLY — goes on evenly. Will not streak or run. Dries quickly.

3. BRILLIANT LUSTRE —won't fade or become dull in sun or water.

Get Glazo's smart new colors — CONGO, SPICE, TROPIC and CABAÑA — at all drug counters. Extra large size, only 25¢

GLAZO
The Smart Manicure

"HOLLYWOOD IS NOT FOR ME!"

(Continued from page 27)

and some of the people whom I support objected. They don't even want me to have my private charities. I can thank Hollywood for that!

"I've bought a farm in New Jersey, a real farm with cows and chickens and things that grow. It's the only thing I've ever done to please myself—and I've worked since I was sixteen. I bought the farm because I long for harmony and peace and rest, and—I can't even get to the place! Hollywood keeps me from it. No sooner do I finish one picture than I'm called back for another."

She sank lower into the chair. She was quite hysterical. There is no doubt about it—Sylvia Sidney is emotionally tearing herself in two.

She would like to be in the East for the East means her native New York and the theatre—and that good actor, Luther Adler. Adler, from a family of actors, has contributed a great deal to Sylvia Sidney's social consciousness, and given her diversified interests.

SHE has never been one to care for parties. She would sit in a corner and feel self-conscious and wish she were home. I'm sure that's one good reason why her marriage to Bennett Cerf failed. Mr. Cerf is a party-going man. And it's another count against Hollywood. All that dot-on-the-map offers as entertainment is parties. And Sylvia is just not that kind of a girl.

Luther Adler has been able to bring her the interests her nature craves—good theatre talk, a cause to help, and, above all, sympathy, that very sympathy she couldn't get when she was ill in Hollywood. For in New York, the night she cried so, the night before I saw her, it was Luther, escorting Sylvia to a benefit for Spain, and noting she was upset, it was he who said, "To hell with Spain!" Then he led her to a quiet restaurant and let her talk it out. And, don't forget, every time Sylvia Sidney makes a moving picture, Hollywood separates her from Luther.

Besides, Hollywood won't let her make the pictures she wants to make, despite the fact she chose "Fury," which was one of the best she ever did.

"I'd take the smallest part to be on the same set with Spencer Tracy. He's such a fine actor. I've just finished 'You and Me' with George Raft. I like George. He's so natural."

She wants to do "Wurthering Heights."

"And Wanger says it's too depressing."

She wants to co-star with someone in "The Old Maid."

"It was all set, but the studio says I can't act restrained. Don't they know it's much more difficult to scream my head off!"

And so it goes. Hollywood is constantly the menace keeping Sylvia Sidney from her goal.

I could not help comparing this wholly frank outburst with a press agent-chaperoned interview I had witnessed her give the previous week, an interview in which Sylvia could not be herself.

THEN, wearing a black accordion pleated dress, and knitting a scarlet sweater, she had sat upon the edge of her chair and talked tensely on trivial topics, for Sylvia Sidney is a good actress. With that emotional voice of hers she can make bilge sound important and dramatic. She sat forward on her big chair, she opened her eyes wide and seemed to force all her energy into listening to the questions, and then all of it into answering them: what she would do if she were somebody else, the advantage of personality versus beauty in getting a job. And she spoke vividly about these things, as if they were her sole interest. She even talked about her high-ceilinged living-room and whatever in the world she would do if a balloon got stuck up there. She talked until her chum dropped in and asked for a piece of gingerbread.

"For Sylvia's cook makes the best in the world."

All this seemed a far cry from what she said to me, from, "It isn't as if I were really rich. I have to make it now. I don't want to hang around Hollywood when I'm thirty-five. I'm like any working girl. If I get sick, there's no money coming in."

And so she keeps fighting within herself. She tries hard, very hard, but as long as she wages these inner battles, I doubt if she can possibly be happy. There's that constant mental turmoil. Perhaps if she became a bit ruthless, perhaps if she kicked over duty, if she really admitted she has but one life to live, and that living is all-important, perhaps, then, everything might straighten out.

Jobyna and Richard Arlen catch their breath after a round of the Big Apple.

Pat Wilder tells Edgar Kennedy's fortune, and what a laugh it's giving him!

HERE'S YOUR Perfect Vacation!

HOW to go

Those long-awaited vacation days are here at last! And New Haven's great, modern fleet of day and night trains await your departure to Southern New England's delightful summer places! Over its network of 1900 miles of steel highways more than 100 trains daily will speed care-free vacationists to mountain, lake, and shore.

Join them! Why spend precious vacation hours crawling over blistering, traffic-laden highways? Instead, enjoy a cool, delightful trip aboard an air-conditioned New Haven train—actually a brief vacation in itself!

Low fares in fine, modern coaches buy luxury and conveniences found in no other popular travel method: deep, lounge-type seats . . . air-conditioning . . . scientific lighting . . . silent, smooth riding . . . beautiful interiors . . . and safety!

Plan your summer vacation and weekends NOW with the help of the free Resort Booklet described at the right . . . then choose a conveniently scheduled New Haven train and your perfect vacation has begun!

WHERE to go

Preview the scenic beauties and delightful experiences that await you in charming old Southern New England. Free 1938 Resort Booklet is profusely illustrated with photographs of scores of vacation places; quaint fishing villages . . . Old Provincetown, the artist's paradise . . . Nantucket . . . Martha's Vineyard . . . Connecticut and Rhode Island's beautiful shores . . . mountains, lakes, and rolling hills . . . and many other glimpses of this ideal vacationland.

You'll find the answer to "where shall we go this summer?" in this handy complete Resort Booklet: lists Hotels, Inns, Boarding Houses, Camps, Golf Clubs, Rod and Reel Clubs, etc. Helps you with your vacation budget problem, too . . . gives resort rates.

Write now for your free copy of the 1938 booklet, "Southern New England Resorts and How to Get There." Address: Room 596, South Station, Boston, Mass.

SAFETY • ECONOMY • COMFORT • SPEED

The New Haven Railroad

Girls who know

—use the lipstick that gives a natural glowing color to their lips...never a "painted greasy look." Whether you are blonde, brunette or red head—Tangee gives your lips the color that best suits your complexion.

Like magic, Tangee changes from orange in the stick to warm blush-rose on your lips. Only Tangee has this famous Tangee color-change principle. Its special cream base keeps lips soft...smooth. Try Tangee. 39¢ and $1.10. For a natural matched make-up use Tangee Face Powder and Tangee Rouge.

THIS SUMMER, use Tangee Creme Rouge, waterproof. Never streaks or fades—even when you're swimming.

Untouched*—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded, parched look.

Greasy, painted lips*— Don't risk that painted look. Men don't like it.

Tangee lovable lips*— Intensifies natural color, ends that painted look.

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES! There is only one Tangee—don't let anyone switch you. Be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. If you prefer more color for evening wear, ask for Tangee Theatrical.

4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET and TANGEE CHARM TEST

The George W. Luft Co., 417 Fifth Ave., N. Y. C.
Please rush "Miracle Make-Up Set" of sample Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.) Also please send Tangee Charm Test.
Check Shade of Powder Desired ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

*Name*_____
Please Print.
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____ MM78

FIRST AID FOR FALLING STARS

(Continued from page 35)

asking for First Aid Number Two, but so far it hasn't been forthcoming. Constance Bennett got it in "Topper."

The publicity staff comes to bat if Aid Number Three is called for. The star, who probably has high-hatted newspaper and magazine writers, has a sudden attack of graciousness and says that she will see interviewers. The publicity men telephone the papers and magazines to that effect, and probably get the reply, "What of it?"

Then the press agents go to work. They beat their breasts and wail, they remind the editors of their own long-standing friendship, they beg for interviews as personal favors. The star doesn't know that. She's quite sure that it is because she is herself that the writers want to see her, and nobody tells her that it's just because the press agent is a good guy and deserves a break.

The falling star grows lenient, usually, about letting people visit her on the set, if they're people who can help her. No longer does she go into a tantrum if an alien face appears while she's giving her all for the cameras.

IF she takes a trip to New York, as she's likely to, she entertains the press. Her company gives a cocktail party for her. Newspaper and magazine people are invited, and a lot of people who are asked because you have to have a lot of people at a party like that, and a lot more come because they always attend such shindigs, though nobody knows just who they are, or why they should be there. They seem to have second sight, when it comes to knowing that such a party is to be held. So everybody goes.

It's given in a hotel or a smart restaurant. Liquor flows freely, and is drunk largely by the people who can't do the star any good. The star is led about by a representative of the company, from one influential person to another, and talks to them, and if she has been very disagreeable in the past they say as little as possible and hope that she will go away soon so that they can continue to talk with their friends. Sometimes, at such enforced exchanges of courtesy, the star and the interviewer remind you of two fighting cats with arched backs, just preparing to unsheath their claws. The anxious representative of the star's company stands by and hopes for the best.

Maybe he gets it, in the form of nice notices about the star. But the cocktail party as first aid isn't sure-fire. Most of the good writers are awfully suspicious of those tactics, and will fall over backward to be no more than fair when they review the star's next picture.

Another hypodermic is radio performances. They give the star an opportunity to reach her public directly, especially if the program on which he or she is a guest is a good one, with a nation-wide hook-up. Marlene Dietrich tried her hand at broadcasting recently, with satisfactory results so far as she was concerned. She signed up for a regular program. Robert Taylor was in danger, his company felt, of being considered too pretty, especially by men. So he was mauled around a bit in "A Yank at Oxford," and made a regular feature of Metro's weekly radio program, where he has a chance to prove that he's another regular guy.

The press agent has another duty service to perform, if it is necessary. He can try to give the star a new personality. If she has been frightfully cold and haughty, he turns out a flock of stories, telling how kind she is to dumb animals, how she loves flowers, how interested she is in her own dear little home, where she does every bit of the housework herself, including the heavy cleaning. He rounds up a lot of her "favorite recipes" that he sends to the women's pages of the newspapers. The theory is that, if Mrs. Blank bakes beans the way the star is said to bake them, and likes the beans, she'll like the star's next picture.

If the star is in New York, she gets a change of heart about appearing at benefits. She'll do her turn on the program anywhere, for anything. She's trying hard to be a likeable human being, you see, and the press agents of her company are trying hard to help her.

She woos you with every trick she knows. She dresses as she thinks you'd like her to dress. She works hard over perfecting a good act, she's sweet to all of you who come back-stage to see her, though she may be almost perishing from fatigue. She tells you that she loves your city, although she may wish that it were at the bottom of the ocean, and that she'd never left her little fifty-room shack, with swimming pool, back in California.

But she'll do anything to cancel that dread verdict, "Poison at the box-office." It's almost as bad as a death sentence. She'll kiss babies, and sign programs till she nearly gets writers' cramp. She'll take every first aid dose that her company prepares for her.

And maybe, in spite of it all, the company will just buy off the rest of her contract, and there's nothing left for her but to go to New York, declaring that she is tired of the movies, that she's yearning to go back to the stage (where she may have been a chorus girl in the back row), that she's looking for a good play.

And you, the powerful public, whose favor she could not win once she'd lost it, blissfully go to the movies to see other stars, and never miss her.

Gene Raymond and Olympe Bradna (pronounced O-lamp) are amused by the script of "Stolen Heaven."

DAINTY golden-voiced DEANNA DURBIN is keen about Lux...

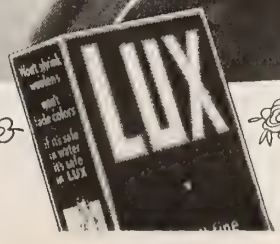
"Deanna is as finicky about the care of her clothes as I am myself," says her mother. "I won't trust silks and woolens (nice cottons, either) to anything but Lux," Mrs. Durbin adds.

LUX keeps washable frocks and blouses charmingly feminine—lingerie fresh and sweet—stockings sleekly smart. All dainty things safe in water alone are safe in gentle Lux. It's easy to get a reputation for exquisite daintiness with Lux. It has no harmful alkali, as harsh soaps have—does away with cake-soap rubbing. This superb care that the screen stars adore costs next to nothing—yet it saves dollars on upkeep!

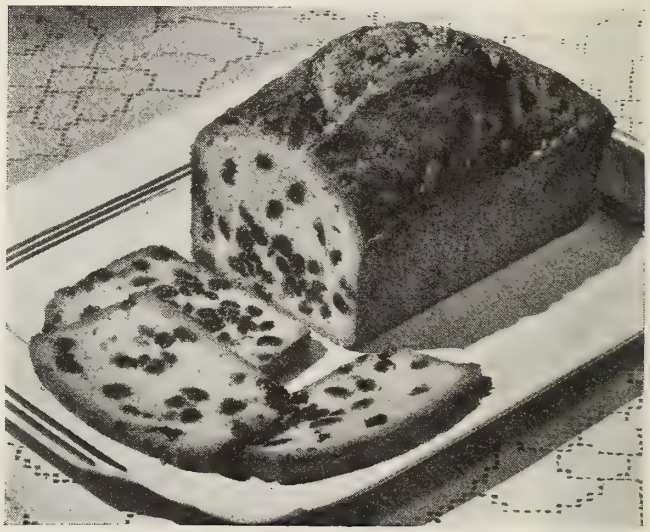
LIKE ALMOST EVERY GIRL of her age, Deanna loves sleek silk stockings. Naturally, they're always Luxed, so she's seldom troubled with annoying runs. Lux saves elasticity!



DEANNA'S FAVORITE COLOR is blue and she likes simple lingerie touches. "It's easy to keep Luxable dresses always spick-and-span," says her mother.

IN HER PICTURES, too, Deanna wears Luxables. See her in Universal's new picture, "That Certain Age."

AT UNIVERSAL, as at other leading Hollywood studios, Lux is specified in the wardrobe department for the care of everything washable. It insures freshness and daintiness... saves thousands of dollars in upkeep and replacements.



Daintiness wins

EXTRA ADDED ATTRACTION!

Such flavors as lemon, molasses, spices and pineapple distinguish Anita Louise's treats. While another of her favored summer sweets is the raisin-filled Pound Cake shown here.

Courtesy Sun-Maid Raisins

BY MARJORIE DEEN

WHEN YOU are considering the bill offered at your neighborhood movie house, have you ever noticed how amazingly often it will not be the announcement of a double feature program that draws you into the theatre but those intriguing words "extra added attraction" appearing on the marquee? No doubt the idea that you are getting something more than the usual entertainment is the thing that intrigues your fancy and adds an element of surprise and interest which gives a possibly mediocre bill greater appeal.

So it is with meals, too, according to Anita Louise, the lovely guest star of our cooking school this month. Yes, claims our fair Anita, the usual common or garden variety, two or three course dinner, far too often appears dull and routine. But provide the meal, she advises, with something special that the family had no real reason to expect, and what a hit that "show" will make!

Yet, where meals are concerned, this happy result can be achieved with the simplest of "added attractions." Hot biscuits with the main course, for instance, or cheese sticks with the salad. Or perhaps best of all, "cake with the last course," suggests our lovely golden-haired "guiding star."

The cakes suggested by Anita are the sort that accompany and complement other forms of dessert such as ice cream, fresh berries and canned fruits.

Anita's cake favorites are the kind that are baked either as cup cakes or in loaves. And these, if they do happen to boast of an icing, generally have one of the simple confectioner's type on the top and not on the sides. With recipes for two or three of these in your files, advised Miss Louise in a little talk we had recently, you can finish off any meal—especially in summer—in the finest style imaginable. Chances are equally strong that that "extra something" will win more acclaim than the culinary main features if you follow Anita's recipes.

For they are oh! so good—every one of them, take it from one who tested them and who passes on the recipes to you, knowing that during the months to come you'll be delighted to have them.

You'll find here, then, Anita's favorite gingerbread, with not too much molasses, since she dislikes a very dark cake.

And what a Pound Cake recipe is hers, filled with plump raisins and ready to attest to your cooking skill.

Then, as these are both of the loaf cake variety, be sure not to overlook the cup cake recipe, for these Summer Spice Cups are pretty special. Actually they are of the fruit cake type; but to assure greater hot weather enjoyment, far lighter both in color and texture than the usual fruit cakes. Maybe it's my own high opinion of their rich pineapple flavor that makes me assert, without fear of contradiction, that these fragrant little treats actually deserve feature billing.

SUMMER SPICE CUPS

1 (No. 2) can crushed pineapple
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ cup butter
¼ cup vegetable shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup chopped nut meats
2 tablespoons flour

Place contents of a No. 2 can of crushed pineapple in a colander over a bowl, to drain. Sift flour, measure; add salt, soda and spices and sift together twice. Cream together butter and vegetable shortening until fluffy. Add sugar gradually, creaming well while adding. Add eggs beaten thoroughly. Beat well. Measure ½ cup of the juice drained from the pineapple. Add the pineapple juice to butter mixture alternately with the flour mixture, a little at a time, stirring until blended after each addition. Fold in the 1 cup of well drained crushed pineapple. Add raisins and nut meats which have been dusted with the 2 tablespoons flour. Blend thoroughly but lightly. Turn into cup cake pans which have been lined with paper baking cups*. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 20-25 minutes.

Delectable desserts like these receive Anita Louise's most enthusiastic praise

As this batter has a tendency to stick to the pan—however well greased—using pan linings is strongly recommended. This cake may also be baked in two loaves—also in lined pans—allowing a longer baking period.*

RAISIN POUND CAKE*

1½ cups seedless raisins
4¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups butter (1 pound)
2 cups granulated sugar
9 average size eggs, separated
1 teaspoon lemon extract
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Rinse raisins in hot water, drain and dry on towel. Sift flour, measure. Add salt and sift three times. Cream butter until very soft and fluffy. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly. (A very thorough blending of sugar and butter is essential.) Add egg yolks which have been beaten with rotary beater until thick and lemon colored. Blend well. Add one half of flour and mix until smooth. Add flavoring extracts and raisins mixed with remaining flour. Beat until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites thoroughly but lightly. Turn into two loaf pans which have been greased, lined with paper and greased again. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 1 hour and 25 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean and cake is firm to the touch.

This recipe may be divided in half and baked in a single pan for a "Half-A-Pound" Cake.*

PECAN GINGERBREAD, ANITA

1½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup light molasses
½ cup butter boiling water
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup chopped pecans

Sift flour, measure. Add salt, soda, baking powder and spices. Sift together twice. Place required amount of sugar in measuring cup; fill cup with molasses. Stir and add to flour mixture. Half fill measuring cup with butter; add boiling water to fill cup. Stir until butter has melted. Add water mixture slowly to flour mixture, stirring vigorously. Add beaten egg; beat together thoroughly. Fold in pecans. Bake in square greased pan in moderate oven (350° F.) 35-40 minutes or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean. Cool on wire cake rack.

AND THEY LIVED HAPPILY EVER AFTER

SO BEGINS the story of many a happy married life. He goes out into the world to earn their living. She does the equally important job of keeping house. It's the world's oldest partnership—and the best.

The wise bride knows how important it is to be able to turn out appetizing and nourishing meals on her limited budget. What shall she do to make that cold meat left over from Sunday dinner into an appetizing dish for Monday night? Often she makes a combination dish with delicious savory Franco-American Spaghetti. Of course it goes big with husband—and her food money stretches just that much further. Franco-American with salad and dessert makes a wonderful quick meal when you want to cut cooking time.

Later, bride will learn that when Junior and Sallie come home ravenous from school, Franco-American Spaghetti with milk and fruit makes an ideal children's meal—and they never tire of it. It's nourishing, savory—and on the table in a jiffy.

Yes, indeed! Franco-American is entirely different from ordinary ready-cooked spaghetti. It usually costs only ten cents for a big 15¾-ounce can—that's less than 3¢ a portion. Get some Franco-American Spaghetti today at your grocer's. Watch your husband's eyes sparkle after the first delicious mouthful!

Franco-American SPAGHETTI

The kind with the Extra Good Sauce—Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

MAY I SEND YOU OUR FREE RECIPE BOOK? SEND THE COUPON PLEASE

CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY, DEPT. 67
Camden, New Jersey
Please send free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."
Name (print)_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

Who tossed that BRIQUE?

Paris tosses us Po-Go, its favorite rouge—in Brique, its favorite shade. And you'll toss your hat in the air when you try it!

Po-Go's so unusual! Has a remarkable, feathery texture, for it's handmade in France. Goes on as evenly as powder, then stays put for hours. And its exclusive Brique shade is the most exciting, most flattering you've ever tried. Perfect for blondes! Perfect for brunettes! Perfect for brick-tops! In fact, Brique tops them all!

Toss down only 55c at your favorite toiletry counter, for Po-Go Rouge, Brique shade. Or send 55c (stamps will do) to Guy T. Gibson, Inc., 565 Fifth Ave., N. Y. C.

The perfect shade, BRIQUE—only in

Po-Go ROUGE

55¢

Copyright, 1938 G. T. G. Inc.

1 —SET YOUR WAVE WITH

Dr. Ellis' Wave Set

Dr. Ellis' Wave Set gives you a soft, beautiful, lasting wave! Quick-drying, non-flaking . . . it's the world's most popular waving lotion!

2 —GIVE IT LUSTRE WITH

Dr. Ellis' Brilliantine

Try the new Dr. Ellis' Brilliantine! It helps hold the wave, gives your hair a silky lustre and a delicate perfume.

EACH 10¢ HIGHER IN CANADA

DR. ELLIS SALES CO., INC.
1125 PENN AVE., PITTSBURGH, PA.

AT ALL 5 & 10's AND DRUG STORES—COAST TO COAST

FOR HE'S A SERIOUS FELLOW

(Continued from page 29)

forty cents?' I am a fan for every star and player. I know how hard their jobs have been, what they've been up against. Sometimes I go to study the performance of this actor or that, but usually I go simply because I get the same kick out of movies that the little maid on the corner gets.

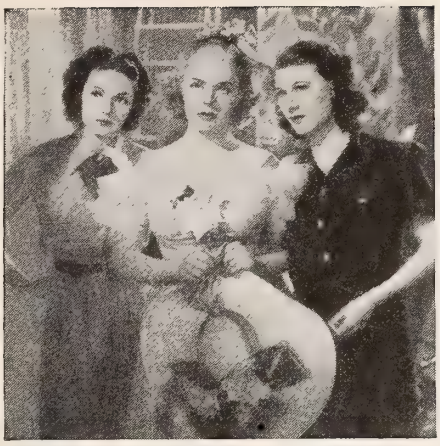
I'M a worrier, I am. I worry about the state of the country, the state of the world. I worry about the future. I worry about my future. When I get a part I like in a slick picture, I no sooner start to work than I begin to worry about my next picture, where it will be, what it will be, if it will be. And all about it. I'm worrying right now. I worry about everything.

"I'm neat, too. Surprise? I'm so neat I drive myself mad. I'm an ash-tray-emptier. Even in strange houses I go about emptying ash trays for people who probably don't want me to empty their ash trays. I've got to have everything around me in apple-pie order. My ties must be hung just so. The browns all together, the greens by themselves, the blues, and so on. I'd kill anyone who put a black tie among the yellows. My clothes closets, my desk, my book-shelves, everything about me and belonging to me must be, not just plain old so-so, but so-so-so. On the other hand, I slide around in any old get-up when I'm not working. Randy and I still have our house at the beach, and when I'm there I spend most of my time in bathing trunks.

"I'm a man of two natures," grinned Cary, mockingly. (He always seems to be mocking himself, even when what he is saying is serious.) "I have my 'light' side and my heavy side, very heavy. I like to go to football games in the afternoon, and to the Philharmonic in the evening; to the Huntington Museum of Art another afternoon, to a burlesque show that evening. When I was in New York I often went to the Symphony at Carnegie, and followed it up with a bust at Coney Island. I like what I like when I want it," said Cary, making one of his sudden springs to a sitting position, his voice husky, but not susurrant. And through the megaphone, in an agonized bellow, came "no off-stage whispers, please. We can hear you. We are catching off-stage noises."

"I am still a man of two natures—and two voices," said Cary, relapsing. "Every morning, for instance, Randy and I run up and down the beach for half an hour, taking deep breaths. I don't know what for, unless it's in the hope of growing three hairs on our chests where only one grew before. Then I drop dead and can't work for the rest of the day. We have a gym in the basement of our beach house, too, with all kinds of dumb-bells (I'll have no punning, please), and yet I'd rather lounge on the back of my spine than anything else I know about.

"Which reminds me of my bed. Have I told you about my bed? I thought not, but I was bound to get around to it. It's the biggest thing in my life. We had to cut down the banisters to get it upstairs. We had men working all over the place for days after it arrived, replacing walls, and chandeliers, and things. For years I've been suffering while I slept. If I turned over I'd fall out. Or I'd crack my big toe. Or I'd lunge around as I do when I'm sleeping, and knock half a dozen gadgets off one of the flimsy little bed-tables people put up with. I'd go to the Troc or somewhere, spend a lot of money having fun, and then couldn't sleep it off.



"So, I had me a bed made, long enough that when my chin is covered, my knees are not exposed to the elements. I'm too long for the average bed, you see, That's the point. And this bed serves, among other and more practical purposes, to prove my point, that I am a man of two natures. It is my one luxury, the only luxury I ever bought for myself. I haven't a tiled bathroom with a built-in shower and all the comforts of a spa. I can bathe in the kitchen sink if it comes to that. I drive an ordinary car. We have an ordinary beach house, rented. I have no hobbies. I don't own a yacht, plane, polo ponies, a home anywhere. I never take holidays, except this one." Cary indicated the set. "And you've noticed the carnival atmosphere here, haven't you? I'll have two weeks' 'vacation' after this picture, and I'll spend it studying my next script, having clothes fitted, having interviews, portrait sittings, dentistry done. No, I don't spend any money on myself at all, but I did have me this bed made, and it may interest those who love me to know that Grant sleeps at long last.

THE bed," beamed Cary, cupping his hands around his mouth, which was the one voice-silencing method we hadn't yet tried, "the bed is so long and so broad that you could mark out a football game on it. I can do seven turn-overs, and never reach either edge. I can lunge, and lunge, to my heart's content. In the headboard I have a built-in radio, a place for my candies, a place for my telephone, a place for ash trays and cigarettes, and indirect lighting which I can control three different ways by the mere flip of a paw. The indirect lighting means that I can now read without eye strain. And I read a great deal. The bed is made of bird's eye maple, with copper fittings, and it's really a beautiful job. It's not as Hollywood as it sounds. It has no Lalique glass inserts, nor a canopy under which the Doges might have slept. It has dignity and decorum, and anyway, I figured that I spend one third of my life in bed (sometimes only one tenth, but who'd waste a whisper on the difference?) and the percentage calls for splurging."

I had one question I wanted to rasp out before I went forth into the world where

By the expression on Gloria Stuart's face, we're sure Michael Whalen is hard to convince.

Marjorie Weaver, Alice Faye and Joan Davis get together to be snapped.

men speak in normal tones, and rasp it out I did.

"Are you going to get married?" I whispered.

"How should I know?" asked Cary, his rasp rising an octave. Whereupon, "No off-stage whisperings. We are catching off-stage noises."

"That 'noise,'" grinned Cary, "will be in the columns tonight."

"But I read in the columns," I persisted, as privily as possible, "that you and Phyllis Brooks . . ."

"Have a lot of laughs together," undertoned Cary. "No, that's not what you read, of course. That's what I'm telling you. That's the truth. We have a lot of laughs, a lot of fun together. We do not, and have not, discussed marriage, mice or men. If ever we do get married you'll know about it when you read the announcement in the papers, after the ceremony. You won't know about it before the ceremony. No one will know about it. I won't know about it.

HOW would I know whether I'm going to get married," whispered Cary wearily, "until I get married? I take romance seriously when I'm being romantic, of course. You can tell that I'd be a cinch whispering sweet nothings in the moonlight."

A little bird told me that Cary likes blondes, especially natural blondes, with as little make-up as a lady can respectably leave off, no red nail goo, no lip goo, no affectations of any kind. The same wise little bird whispered that Phyllis Brooks seems to fill the Grant graph on what a girl should be. The little bird went on to place a very large bet that there will be wedding bells for Phyllis and Cary, whether sooner or later.

"But what's the idea of planning to get married?" Cary was hissing. "What's the idea of 'setting the date' for November 22nd, or January 19th? How the heck do you know whether you'll feel like getting married on November 22nd. The date to get married is when you feel like getting married. That's the way it will be if I am the bridegroom in the case. That's all I can whisper about it, for that's all there is to it at present."

Cary's stand-in, a very personable young man by the name of Mel Merrihue, now thrust his head in at the door. He said, "Mr. Cukor'll be ready for you in a minute."

"I can't," gurgled Cary, desperately. "I can't talk. Get me something to gargle with, will ya? Get me a voice-restorer, a larynx-lubricator."

I tip-toed off the set. Through a megaphone came the dread, stentorian voice "we are catching off-stage tip-toes."

TODAY'S TALKIES

(Continued from page 12)

★★ Battle of Broadway

Shades of the slapstick era—this one. When you consider that the plot centers around an American Legion Convention and that the principal characters involved are Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy and Louise (Gypsy Rose) Hovick, you can figure out for yourself that it doesn't lack robust comedy.

Besides the commendable cast, the plot is good enough to hold you in your seat right through the last black eye. McLaglen and Donlevy, though war-buddies, are mortal enemies when a woman is involved. And when Miss Hovick becomes the femme fatale, there are even hard feelings between the boys and their old friend, Raymond Walburn. The latter is president of the Bundy Steel Works and a man of the highest ideals—until he spots the leading lady. From then on, the trouble begins, winding up with all the Legionnaires pitching in.

It's rip-roaring business from first to last, and guaranteed to produce chuckles and hearty guffaws. For any Legionnaires in the audience, it will prove a rib-wrecker. Though Victor McLaglen steals the show, he gets some stiff competition from Brian Donlevy and Raymond Walburn. We can't dispute that Louise Hovick is an eyeful, but she can still stand a few more lessons on the finer points of a dramatic performance. Directed by George Marshall.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ A Trip to Paris

Pictures may come and go, but the Jones family continues to be the best entertainment in its field. Like its predecessors, "A Trip To Paris" is light comedy, riddled with hokum, and not conspicuous for its plot.

Father Jones, Jed Prouty, is inveigled into taking his wife, Spring Byington, and the entire family to Paris on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The usual Jones-like complications set in. The son becomes involved in a spy plot, while Mr. Jones' cousin takes him for a good-sized financial ride. As usual, everything works out very happy indeed.

"LEO TOWNSEND, winner of the Preview Poll, is Hollywood's outstanding critic. . . ."

—Hollywood Reporter

This last Mr. and Mrs. Average Family picture is even better than the ones which preceded it. The cast again gives consistently good performances. The "bit" parts are exceptionally well done. The hotel detective gives one of the most amusing characterizations, and Joan Valerie, who plays the girl heavy, has much talent.

The writers and director have again shown their complete understanding of the intricacies of family life. The Jones Family is still good, and getting better. Directed by Mal St. Clair.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Bar 20 Justice

With all the present enthusiasm for outdoor dramas (all the major studios are making open air epics with their top stars) it is nice to note that Hopalong Cassidy hasn't changed a bit. A lesser cowpuncher might allow the situation to go to his head, but not Hoppy. His basic qualities—honesty, fortitude and straight shooting—are still evident as he goes about the business of saving helpless women folk and making the West a decent place for right-minded citizens.

Bill Boyd and his familiar company of stock players act out this tense drama of gunplay and quick-trigger action with all their customary enthusiasm. This time Hopalong is about to entrain for the east when word reaches him of dastardly goings on in a nearby mine. Worrying about mines is beneath a cowboy's dignity, but when there's a gal involved—well, you know. In due time the black hearted villains are brought to justice, and Hopalong and the gal are fixin' to do some kissin', although such sissy display of emotions is left entirely to the audience's imagination.

Bill Boyd plays Cassidy as though he really meant it, and there are agreeable performances in supporting roles by Russell Hayden and George Hayes. Directed by Lesley Selander.—Paramount.

★★ Go Chase Yourself

If it's a spring tonic you're needing, "Go Chase Yourself" is just the prescription. It's Joe Penner at his funniest, and this one will please the most particular sense of humor.

The story concerns the hilarious troubles of a brow-beaten gentleman whose wife doesn't credit him with the sense he was born with. The gentleman in question is, of course, Joe, and his spouse, the personable Lucille Ball. Joe may not have brains, but it looks like he has luck when he wins a trailer—though this doesn't turn out so fortunately either, since his wife decides he can sleep in it. This leads to tragedy of sorts. The climax is most hair-raising, with the trailer taking a nose-dive down a mountain, and the occupants headed for certain oblivion.

It's Joe Penner's best screen work, and the rest of the cast furnishes capable support, with a special nod to Lucille Ball. Then there's June Travis, Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy and Arthur Stone. Directed by Edward F. Cline.—RKO.

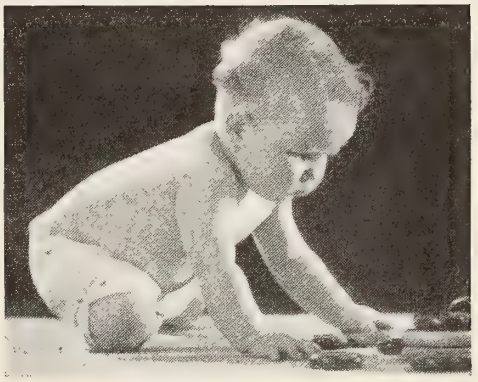
★★ Under Western Stars

Out of the west—or rather, into it—comes a new cowboy hero, whose screen exploits will undoubtedly soon rival the celluloid heroics of Buck Jones and other open-air Romeos to whom the six-shooter is standard equipment. The new Lochinvar of the plains is Roy Rogers, who sits well in the saddle, handles his shooting irons with authority, and possesses the easy manners of a man born to the West.

The plot is built around a fight between cattle men and the water company people. The cow interests claim that their enemies, robbing the soil of the moisture it needs, are the cause of the dust storms. Right or wrong, the cowboys got all the cheering from the preview audience, and the water boys were handed a round of hisses for their dastardly work.

What makes "Under Western Stars" an outstanding western is that it allows the camera to tell most of the story. Dialogue is used only where it is absolutely necessary, a fact which eliminates many a hammy scene usually encountered in dramas of the open spaces. Directed by Joe Kane.—Republic.

★★ Penrod's Double Trouble



Hail, hail, the gang's all here—all those "regular fellers" who made those other Booth Tarkington stories into such picture successes. Again that likable naturalness of the entire cast has been kept intact. There isn't a kid in the neighborhood who won't have the time of his life at this movie. The plot is particularly thrilling this time, concerning Billy Mauch's strange disappearance into the blue after he's hidden in the basket of a balloon. His distraught parents, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, offer a reward for his recovery, and some scalawags in a traveling show decide to put one over by returning to them a member of the show instead. This member, of course, being Bobby Mauch, has everybody fooled. But then the Junior G-Men, Billy's tried and true buddies, get going on the case and—well, we should spoil all the excitement of the chase for you! You'll be glad to see some other favorites in the cast, too. The Lockharts and Mauches do themselves proud, and we think you'll like "Penrod's Double Trouble." Directed by Lew Seiler.—Warner Brothers.

Martha Michener—aged 4 months

Dimpled, roly-poly Martha doesn't know that she's taking part in a study of infant feeding along with other babies near Westfield, N. J. She just knows that life is pretty interesting now—a new Clapp's Strained Vegetable appears on the menu every few days! Clapp's Baby Cereal is an old friend—she's had it for 6 weeks.

Martha creeps at 7 months

Fine straight back, Martha has. Rosy cheeks, firm flesh—you can see that her pressure-cooked Clapp's Foods are giving her an abundance of vitamins and minerals. She gets Clapp's Fruits and Soups now, as well as Vegetables and Cereal. With 16 varieties, there's never a dull meal. And she's gained 4 pounds and 3 ounces in 3 months.

Martha's a bouncing one-year-old

"How about second helps?" wigwags Martha. For like all the Clapp-fed babies in the test, Martha cleans up her dishes as slick as Mr. and Mrs. Spratt were wont to do. Babies love the fresh, good flavors of Clapp's Foods. And doctors approve their well-calculated texture—smooth, finely strained, but not so liquid that a baby marks time, with no training for the handling of grown-up foods.

Here's why Martha prospered so!...

16 Varieties of Clapp's Strained Baby Foods — Baby Soup Strained or Unstrained, Vegetable Soup, Beef Broth, Liver Soup; Apricots, Prunes, Apple Sauce; Tomatoes, Asparagus, Peas, Spinach, Beets, Carrots, Green Beans; Baby Cereal.

FREE BOOKLET! Photographs and records of 12 Clapp-fed babies—and much valuable diet information. Write to Harold H. Clapp, Inc., Dept. QSU, 777 Mount Read Blvd., Rochester, N. Y.

NEW!... for young children

Clapp's Chopped Foods

Doctors asked for them... even-textured foods with all the advantages of Clapp's Strained Foods, but more coarsely divided. At dealers' now. remember them when your baby outgrows Clapp's Strained Foods.

Clapp's Strained Baby Foods

NO MORE TOILET ODORS ON HOT DAYS

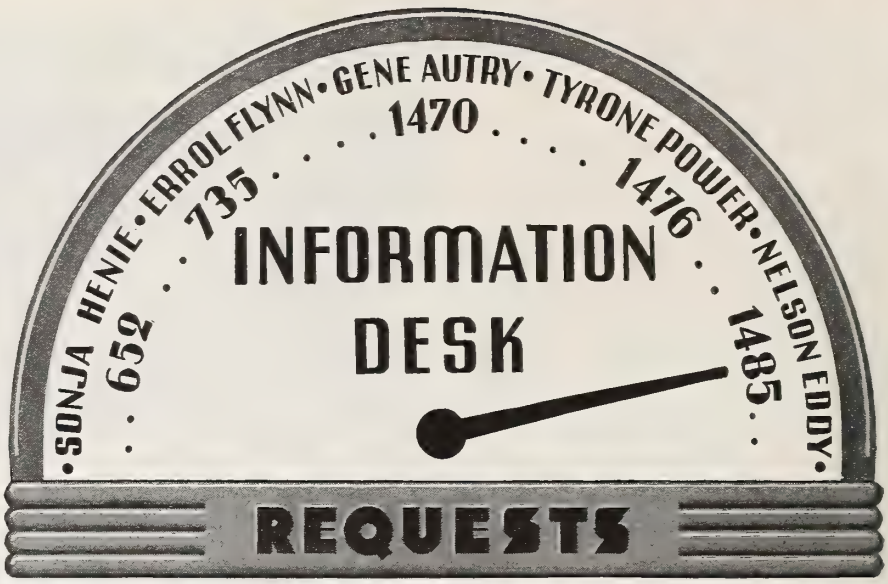
BEWARE of toilet odors during hot weather. Odors are a sign of insanitation. Germs are breeding there. Health is being threatened. Keep toilets spotless and safe—without nasty labor. Just sprinkle a little SANI-FLUSH in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet, and the job is done.

SANI-FLUSH is made scientifically to purify toilets. It purifies the hidden trap that no other method can reach. The bowl glistens. SANI-FLUSH cannot injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

NO MORE EMBARRASSMENT



with Modern Feminine Hygiene

You need no longer be embarrassed with greasy, difficult and annoying ways of feminine hygiene! Thousands of women are singing the praises of the new kind of dainty, greaseless, easy-to-use suppositories, Zonitors. Look into it for yourself! You'll be delighted, too.

The good word spreads! Zonitors are free from harmful drugs, yet they kill germs. They are safe to use, no "burn" danger. They contain no greasy base to melt or run, and wash away completely with plain water. All ready for use, no mixing or applicator. Odorless, the perfect deodorant.

Small, snow-white, in individual glass vials. $1 for box of 12—only 8⅓¢ each. At all drug stores in U. S. and Canada. Full instructions in package. FREE booklet in plain envelope on request. Write Zonitors, 3709 Chrysler Building, New York City.

Questions answered, curiosity satisfied—write us

FRANK MORGAN: Before Frank Morgan went on the stage, his family name was Wupperman. In fact that irrepressible young fellow of forty-eight summers was christened Francis Philip Wupperman soon after arriving on this planet via New York City, on June 1st, 1890. His father was George Wupperman, owner of the famous Angostura Bitters Corporation; his mother was a member of the Hancox family who arrived in these parts via the well-known Mayflower. Frank was one of eleven children. At an early age he was considered the best boy soprano in New York City, where he sang at St. Thomas and All Angels' Churches. His early education led him through public and private schools, and finally to Cornell University. At the time, young Frank wasn't terribly interested in higher education, so after two years he left school, and went into business. First he sold brushes, then he sold advertising for the Boston Traveler. Itchy feet finally got him, and he landed out West near Los Vegas, Nevada, where he became a cowpuncher. When his older brother, Ralph, gave up a flourishing law practice to go on the stage, Frank immediately followed suit, adopting the same name his brother had taken, in admiration for A. E. Morgan, a favorite actor of the time. After several years in vaudeville, followed by other years on the Broadway stage, Frank made his screen debut with Anita Stewart in "The Girl Philipa." For several years longer he mixed stage with movie roles, then signed a contract with M-G-M. Some of his most recent pictures have been "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," "The Emperor's Candlesticks," "Saratoga" and "Rosalie." "Port of Seven Seas" and "Swing Fever" will be his next. Frank Morgan is over six feet tall, weighs one hundred and eighty pounds, has light brown hair and gray-blue eyes. He is an ardent baseball fan, enjoys biographies and popular fiction, and his favorite outdoor sports are tennis, golf and swimming. He has become more popular with each succeeding picture, until he is now firmly established in the hearts of all those who revel in sophisticated comedy.

ROSALIND RUSSELL: Although at one time she sincerely wanted to be a theologian, Rosalind Russell finally decided upon the stage as a career. She was born June 4th in Waterbury, Connecticut. The daughter of a prosperous attorney, she enjoyed many advantages. She attended a private school at Tarrytown-on-Hudson where she was an eager student of literature, journalism and drama, as well as an enthusiastic participant in such sports as riding, swimming, basketball and hockey. She travelled extensively through Europe, South America, Cuba and all over the United States. Being ambitious, and wanting to be independent and earn her own living, she tired of travel, and convinced the manager of a stock company that she had dramatic possibilities. She was given a small role which marked the beginning of a thorough schooling in stock, during which she persistently worked up from the smallest roles to important ones. Finally she appeared on Broadway and attracted the attention of screen talent scouts while she was playing in "The Second Man." Her screen test resulted in a role with Myrna Loy and William Powell in "Evelyn Prentice." Her work pleased the studio so much that since then she has been cast in many other important roles in such pictures as "Craig's Wife" and "Night Must Fall." Under contract to M-G-M, she was last seen in "Man-Proof," has just finished "Four's a Crowd" for Warners, and now is scheduled to make "The Citadel" which will soon start production in England. Tall, slender, brunette, with black eyes, she is considered an excellent screen type both by cameramen and by fashion designers. On the set she relaxes between scenes by chatting with visitors, playing games with her maid or reading the newspapers. One of her pet hobbies is interior decoration. She studies the subject eagerly, and designs all decorations in her own home. She also designs her own wardrobe.

HAVE YOU SENT FOR YOUR LIST OF ADDRESSES?

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking. So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, naming the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing addresses. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

BUCK JONES: This perennial idol of youngsters everywhere has been in pictures for eighteen years as actor, producer and director. He has made over one hundred and thirty pictures, and is president of the Buck Jones Rangers, a group of some three thousand youthful admirers from all over the United States and Europe. He was born December 4, 1889, in Vincennes, Indiana, but when a small boy moved with his family to a three-thousand-acre ranch near Red Rock, Oklahoma, where he learned to ride, rope, and shoot with the skill that later made him famous. From early youth he loved horses, and could do anything with them. After a public school education in Oklahoma, Buck Jones joined the army, saw service in Mexico and the Philippines, later flew airplanes, raced automobiles, rode bucking bronchos and roped steers—all for the thrill of adventure. He spent several years touring the world with Miller's 101 Wild West Show. It was during this time that Buck fell in love with Odelle Osborne, a circus bareback rider, and married her in the center of a circus ring, in front of thousands of spectators, amidst the fanfare of blaring circus bands. Today this same girl is his business manager as well as his wife. They have a daughter named Maxine. After several years under the big top, Buck decided to try Hollywood, and almost immediately he was signed as a cowboy actor. After a few months he was made a Western star, and has been a premier cowboy attraction ever since. Buck's real name is Charles Jones. He weighs one hundred and seventy-eight pounds, has dark blue eyes, brown hair, and stands six feet tall in his socks. Buck recently announced his intention to retire his present horse, "Silver," the third horse by that name to carry him through stellar Western adventure roles. The present "Silver" is sixteen years old, and has been in the movies for five years. A new "Silver" is being trained to take his place. Buck Jones enjoys Hawaiian music, and loves to throw out-door barbecues, dancing fiestas, and other parties for his professional and cowboy friends. He also often entertains groups of young admirers at his San Fernando Valley ranch. His latest pictures are "Hollywood Roundup," "Headin' East" and "Overland Express." His next will be "Sudden Bill Dorn."

Mrs. Berlin Farmer, Amonate, Va. Claude Rains was born in London, England, November 10, 1889. He is five feet ten and a half inches tall, weighs one hundred and sixty-five pounds. His 1937 pictures were "The Prince and the Pauper," and "They Won't Forget." His most recent ones are "Gold Is Where You Find It" and "The Adventures of Robin Hood." Claude Rains is his real name.

Martha Burris, Tyler, Texas. Claudette Colbert was born in Paris, France, September 13, 1905. She is five feet five inches tall, and has brown hair and eyes. She weighs one hundred and seven pounds.

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

.....

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

If you would like our chart with weights, heights, ages, birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.

Wherever you go
BEECH-NUT GUM gives extra pleasure and refreshment

ALWAYS REFRESHING

Beech-Nut Peppermint Gum is so good it's the most popular flavor of gum in America.

Beech-Nut Spearmint has a richness you're sure to enjoy.

WHENEVER YOU PLAY

. . . gum helps keep you "on your game". . . it helps steady your nerves . . . keeps mouth and throat moist.

BEECHIES are the candy-coated individual pieces of gum . . . in three flavors . . . Peppermint, Pepsin or Spearmint . . . select the kind you like best.

"CHEW WITH A PURPOSE"

The use of chewing gum gives your mouth, teeth and gums beneficial exercise. Beech-Nut Oralgene is specially made for this purpose. It's firmer, "chewier". . . helps keep teeth clean and fresh-looking.

Always worth stopping for.

WHY ACTRESSES USE A HOSPITAL-PROVED CLEANSING CREAM!

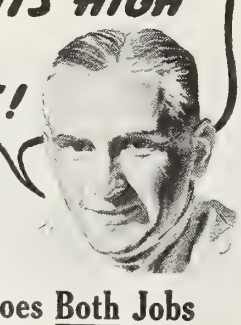
Go into the most famous dressing-rooms of Broadway and Hollywood . . . how often you'll see Albolene Solid used for removing make-up!

Actresses know they can trust Albolene Solid...because it's so pure and efficient that many hospitals have used it for over 20 years!

You'll be simply amazed to see how Albolene spreads and penetrates. Made of pure, bland, delicate oils... it dissolves readily... quickly loosens dirt. Albolene contains no gummy substances—it leaves your pores clean, your skin soft and silky.

ECONOMICAL!

What finer cleanser could you ask than one used both by leading hospitals and actresses? Get Albolene Solid now. Professional pound tin only $1. Big jar, only 50¢.



ALBOLENE SOLID CLEANSING CREAM

Alviene SCHOOL OF THE Theatre

45TH YEAR—Drama, Dance, Vocal for Acting, Teaching, Directing. 3 in 1 Course-Radio, Stage, Screen. Graduates: Lee Tracy, Fred Astaire, Una Merkel, etc. Student Stock Theatre Appearances while learning. Apply Sec'y, 66 W. 85th St., N. Y.

Read about Tyrone Power, Carole Lombard, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy in the August MODERN SCREEN

SOFT, TENDER GUMS MEAN IT'S HIGH TIME TO ACT!

SEE your dentist at once if you have soft, tender bleeding gums. He'll give you expert care. But you must do your job, too.

Forhan's Does Both Jobs

CLEANS TEETH • AIDS GUMS

Help your dentist keep your teeth sound and shining, your gums firm and healthy, by brushing teeth and massaging gums twice-a-day with Forhan's Toothpaste. Forhan's is different. It contains a special ingredient for the gums!

Maud Buck, Marieba, Australia. If you will send twenty-five cents apiece for each star's picture, the studio where they work will be glad to send you photographs suitable for framing. For Shirley Temple and Tyrone Power, address 20th Century-Fox Studios, Hollywood, Cal.; for Robert Taylor, M-G-M Studios, Culver City, Cal.; for Buck Jones, Columbia Studios, Hollywood, Cal.

Gloria Delaney, Detroit, Mich. Spencer Tracy was born in Milwaukee, Wis., April 5, 1900. He is five feet ten inches tall, has brown hair and blue eyes, weighs one hundred and sixty-five pounds. You may write him at M-G-M Studios in Culver City, Cal. The studio will send you a picture for twenty-five cents.

Norma Trease, Irvington, N. J. Frankie Darro was born in Chicago, December 22, 1917. He has been in pictures since 1929, was in vaudeville before that. He is five feet four inches tall, weighs one hundred and twenty pounds, has brown hair and eyes. Write him at Paramount Studio in Hollywood.

William Carlson, St. Paul, Minn. Sonja Henie's next picture will be "My Lucky Star." 20th Century-Fox Studio will send her photograph for twenty-five cents.

Josephine Jordano, Bridgeport, Conn. You can write Phyllis Brooks at 20th Century-Fox Studio, Hollywood, and Danielle Darrieux at Universal Studio, Universal City, Cal. Here are some of the birthdates you requested: Mary Carlisle, February 3, 1912; Una Merkel, December 10, 1903; and Gloria Stuart, July 14, 1911.

Judith Howard, Cleveland, Ohio. Robert Livingston was born December 8, 1908. He is six feet tall, weighs one hundred eighty pounds. His hair is dark, his eyes are green. He is happily married to the former Dorothy Gee, and lives in a Hollywood apartment. He's been in pictures five years.

June Ryan, Lebanon, N. H. Tyrone Power's next pictures will be "Marie Antoinette." and "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Eddie Culley, Chaddesden, Derby, England. Helen Twelvetree's last picture was "Hollywood Roundup." Walter Huston's last was "Of Human Hearts." Lionel Atwill's last pictures were "The Great Garrick," and "Three Comrades." Fay Wray's last was "Murder in Greenwich Village," Constance Cummings' last was "Strangers on a Honeymoon," Dorothy Mackaill's last was "Bulldog Drummond at Bay," May Clark's last was "Outlaws in the Orient." Marion Davies' last was "Ever Since Eve," and Genevieve Tobin's last was "The Duke Comes Back."

Nan Gryalba, Palmerton, Penna. Here are the addresses of some of the cowboys you mention: Ken Maynard, Grand National Studios, Hollywood; Dick Foran, Warner Bros., Burbank, Cal., Gene Autry, Republic Studios, Hollywood; Tim McCoy, Monogram Studios, Hollywood; Johnnie Mack Brown, Universal Studios, Universal City, Cal. and Buck Jones, Columbia Studio, Hollywood.

Hazel Munson, Fort Bragg, Cal. Norma Shearer was born in Montreal, Canada, August 10, 1904. She is five feet one inch tall, weighs one hundred and fifteen pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. was born in New York City, December 9, 1907. He is six feet tall, weighs one hundred eighty pounds, has light brown hair, and gray eyes.

Sylvia Kevel, Brooklyn, N. Y. George Sanders was born of English parents, in 1906, in what was then St. Petersburg, Russia. He has green-gray eyes, light brown hair, is six feet three inches tall, and weighs two hundred and fifteen pounds. He is a bachelor, and is interested in science. His most recent pictures are "Love Is News," "Slave Ship," and "Lancer Spy." Address him in care of 20th Century-Fox Studios, Hollywood.

BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME

(Continued from page 17)

which he gave a sincere performance as a doctor. After that followed "Airmail," "Once to Every Woman," "Second Hand Wife," and a few other good pictures.

Then for some unknown reason Hollywood lost interest in him. He was given colorless stories, or miscast as a heavy. Some times he played roles that were almost bits!

And now came the part of a dumb cluck—and Ralph was once more recognized. In fact, Hollywood liked him so well that they gave him a somewhat similar role in "Fools for Scandal." Are they going to type him in this way, or have they finally awakened to the fact that he would be big box office if given half a chance?

I hope so. He fully deserves a break. No other actor could have existed as long as he has in such mediocre stories.

—Ruth King, Cranford, N. J.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Once Is Not Enough

This may sound like a foolish suggestion, but I can't help wishing that every city would dedicate one movie theatre to our old favorites. Of course, once in a great while an old favorite returns to a neighborhood theatre, but that is so seldom.

We like to re-read certain books over again and again. Why then must such pictures as "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Rose Marie," "Maytime," "The Plainsman," "Top Hat," and "The Prisoner of Zenda" vanish, never to be seen again?

Hollywood has created masterpieces in these pictures, and there is no reason why they wouldn't be enjoyed next year as well as this.

—Margaret Cason, Chicago, Ill.

$1.00 Prize Letter
A Southerner Speaks

I am a southerner and go to the cinema to be amused, but every time a southern character is portrayed on the screen I get burned up!

Is there no one in Hollywood who has been south? We do not say "yo yawl" for "you all" nor do we address one person as "you all." We do not say "suh" for "sir," and talk as though we had marbles in our mouths, or were suffering from sleeping sickness. Of all the "southerners" I have seen on the screen, the women talk like hound dogs whining.

I don't believe the producers are actually that stupid. I think they do it to burlesque the southerner. This thing might have been funny the first, second, or third time, but has grown stale now.

Remember there are box offices down south, too. If their patrons were not such good sports to overlook these tasteless blunders, the joke might not be on them.

—Fred Arnold, Vicksburg, Miss.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Connie's Back Again

At last she's human! Suddenly taken off her high horse by the role given to her in "Topper" (which she did to perfection), our blonde star, Constance Bennett, has aroused new interest in the hearts of her once-admirers. I was getting very bored with her high-hat ways!

A few more comedy roles like "Topper" and "Merrily We Live" and Connie'll be back on top where she belongs.

—D. Seibel, Chicago, Ill.

THAT GIRL'S HERE AGAIN!

(Continued from page 31)

doesn't talk for the love of hearing her own voice. She says what she has to say, and stops.

I'd heard that she loathed Hollywood, that she couldn't abide the screen, that she'd moved heaven and earth to get back to the stage. Yet here she was, not only playing in a movie but sold down the river under a long-term contract. I asked her what it was all about.

Her answer came unhesitatingly. "My early training was on the stage, and I loved it very much. But I'd been in seven flops on Broadway when the movies offered me a job, I couldn't afford not to take it. I didn't like it. If it had been paradise, I wouldn't have liked it. I didn't want paradise, I wanted the stage.

"Then various things happened, and for the first time I was in a position to choose a play without considering the money end. Choose a play, mind you. Not beg for a part. Not even just take a part, so I could eat. But choose a play for no other reason than that I wanted to be in it.

"That was when I began hating the movies—not because they were the movies. I felt they were a person, not a thing, and I hated that person for keeping me from doing what I wanted to do. I'd hold imaginary conversations with it, him, this monster I'd conjured up. 'Well, then, kick me out, why don't you? I never wanted to come in the first place.'" A reflective gleam lit her eye. "Sometimes the conversations weren't imaginary."

How the difficulty was overcome she didn't tell me, nor did I ask her. She returned to Broadway to play in "Stage Door."

It's not the fever of first nights nor audience applause that lures her to the theatre. What she finds most enthralling are rehearsals. "There's something about an empty theatre that's intensely dramatic. I may get arty on you here, but I'll try not to. It's the sense of working with people to give a thing shape and meaning, battling it, making it go the way you want it to go. It's terrific labor and terrific nervous strain. But it's exciting. Once the scenery's up, that excitement goes. Then you get the itch to go, too.

"Of course you don't go. You have a run-of-the-play contract. I stayed for five or six months, and left because of you-know-what."

You-know-what is Brooke, the daughter born to her and Leland Hayward, to whom we'll return later.

BUT it wasn't that alone. I decided California was where I wanted to live. I was disappointed in New York. All the time I'd been here before, New York had been a fetish with me. 'I've got to get back,' I'd rage. 'This is a horrible place to live.' So many have had the same experience. Then when you do get back, New York lets you down. You're irritated by things you never noticed before, the dirt, and the pace, and the clatter. If you want to go down to the corner drugstore, you have to put on a hat and gloves and powder and lipstick and make a ceremonial of it. I don't like ceremony. Slacks are more comfortable. So I came back with my husband.

"I'd always known that if I did come back, and could get a job, I'd go into pictures, because I can't imagine doing nothing. That's the exact opposite of what I

● "Look here, Mr. Bear—I've lived in this climate longer than you have, and believe me, that's not the way to get cool. Why, the minute you get up off that ice, you're going to feel hotter than ever!"

● "My word—you're bundled up for 40 below! Can't peel down?... No, I suppose not. Custom—dear, dear, it makes slaves of us all. But now listen: did you ever hear of Johnson's Baby Powder?"

● "Say, wait till that cool, silky Johnson's Baby Powder gets to work on your rashes and chafes and heat prickles. You'll be so comfortable you wouldn't live at the North Pole if they gave you the place!"

● "Rub a pinch of Johnson's in your fingers—it's as soft as satin! That must be why it keeps babies' skins in such wonderful condition." And perfect condition, Mothers, is the best protection against skin infections. Only the finest imported talc is used in Johnson's Baby Powder—no orrisroot... Ask for Johnson's Baby Soap, too, Baby Cream to prevent windburn, and Johnson's Baby Oil for tiny babies. This new oil cleanses and soothes, and it is stainless, fragrant, and cannot turn rancid.

Johnson & Johnson
NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

Copyright 1938, Johnson & Johnson

USE SAFE NONSPI

Here's a full-strength deodorant that keeps underarms dry and immaculate, 2 to 5 days—yet is non-irritating! Medical authority has pronounced Nonspi entirely safe when properly applied. Now Nonspi goes on more easily . . . dries more quickly. Sold at all drug and department stores—35¢ and 60¢. Slightly higher in Canada.

SAFE Deodorant
—Stops Perspiration

The Nonspi Company
113 West 18th St., N. Y. C.

Please send special trial bottle of Nonspi. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin).

*Name*_____
*Street*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____
MS77

NOW! Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

So natural they even have half-moons.

NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10 stores

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS
NU-NAIL CO., 4042 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Light Blondes! Ash Blondes! Sandy Blondes! Brown Blondes!

AT LAST! A NEW SHAMPOO FOR ALL BLONDES!

A New Easy Way to Bring Out the Full Radiant Loveliness of Blonde Hair . . . Keep It Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous.

Here at last is a shampoo and a special rinse that brings out the lustrous beauty, the alluring sheen and highlights that can make blonde hair so attractive. Whether you are light blonde, ash blonde, sandy or brown blonde, try this amazing Blonde Hair Shampoo and Special Rinse. Costs but a few pennies to use and is absolutely safe. Used regularly, it keeps hair lighter, lovelier, gleaming with fascinating lustre. Get New Blondex today. New combination package, shampoo with separate rinse—for sale at all stores.

said yesterday, when I told someone it was my ambition to do nothing all day long. And it is my ambition. I'm not trying to be whimsical, and I can't explain it, unless I'm lazy in theory but not in practice. Nothing seems more alluring than the thought of an empty day dangling somewhere out of reach. But the minute I have nothing to do, I go crazy.

"Besides, I never hated the movies as movies. It was just that I had another love, the stage, and now I've got the stage out of my system—maybe." Her smile mocked at herself. "When I first came back, I never wanted to hear about another play. Already that's beginning to leave me. Already I'm beginning to say: 'I might go back for three months.' Also I might not. We have a baby now. We're building a house. I've got myself hogtied. And like it."

Her mother refuses to indulge in the parental pastime of raving about the baby. "I'd heard these awful stories about how they look when they're born—wrinkled and spotty, and their heads coming to a point. Leland didn't like babies anyway, and I was terrified for fear he'd never look at her again if her head was pointed. So I made him promise not to see her till I'd seen her first. I don't know what the idea was, whether I thought I could smooth her head out, or what. However, I didn't come to for hours, and he couldn't wait. He thought she was all right," said Mrs. Hayward in a masterpiece of understatement.

THE house they're building is comparatively small, but it's set in two acres of ground to insure privacy. At the moment they're wrestling with items like lighting fixtures and door handles.

"Door handles! That's what you get for building a house. Before, there used to be a handle, and you turned it. Now you have to take courses in it."

They're also wrestling with the architect, whose ideas are somewhat more orthodox than their own.

"He wants us to have a dining-room," the perturbed mistress-to-be informs her husband. "What for?"

"He thinks maybe fourteen years from now we might want to have fourteen people in to dinner."

"What is that?" she inquired on another occasion, indicating a contraption fixed to the curtain rods.

"To pull the curtains."

"But we don't pull curtains."

"You've got to pull curtains at night, or people'll look in."

She burst into helpless giggles. "Look in from where? That's why we got all this ground, so people couldn't look in, and we could look out."

She'd always wanted a glass door. "Fine!" said the long-suffering architect. "And here comes someone Miss Sullavan doesn't want to see. And there stands Miss Sullavan, plain to behold, behind the nice glass door. You can't say you're not in."

"I can," declared Miss Sullavan firmly.

She can do other things, too, not prescribed in the stars' book of etiquette. All togged out in the creation of an ace designer, she can curl up on a dusty box and fall asleep. She can forget herself so completely in a game of tag with a soundman, that she stumbles over a cable, breaking her arm and breaking up a picture. She can disregard the prodding of expert ribbers to come to work day after day in a funny little knitted jacket, such as your grandmother might have worn, because she's conceived a childish attachment to it. She can suppress a wild curiosity to see her own rushes because she thinks she's better off when she doesn't see them.

"Seeing them turns me into a millstone 'round my own neck. This part in 'Three Comrades,' for instance—I love it. I want so much to do it well. Leland bawled me out for not seeing the rushes. He said it was outrageous. 'You're just coddling your vanity instead of taking advantage of your mistakes,' said he. So one day I disciplined my vanity and went, with the result that I was downcast for three weeks. It was awful. I didn't like the way I smiled or said words. I remembered what I'd been thinking and trying to do when I played the scene. None of that seemed to come through. I wanted to beg them to do it all over again. I put my husband, who's also my agent, through days of torture. 'You were right,' he said, 'you should have stayed away.'"

FRANK BORZAGE, her director, says, "Margaret never used to worry about working overtime. One day on this picture I kept her after six, and it was a minor tragedy. Suppose she didn't get home in time to see the infant fed. 'Suppose the heavens fall,' it sounded like. Nowadays when I plan to use her at ten, I don't get her in at nine. I can't stand her reproachful eyes following me around the set, reminding me about all this wasted time she might have been spending at home with the kid.

"When we break, she scoots to her dressing room, scoots out, hops into her car, and zooms home. What's the rush? Leland bought a Tyrolean rig for the child in New York, and this is the big trying-on day. That's the hit picture of the year, if you ask me—Leland Hayward solemnly shopping for a little cherub, and Maggie dashing home to see how the cherub looks in her new outfit. Even they think it's funny. But how they love it!"

She, too, says she's changed. "I never had a plan before. I kicked against plans. Now I know this is what I really want. I like being content—not too content—but more so than I ever dreamed I would be." Her smile glimmered again, half impish, half wistful. "I was going to commit suicide at thirty, now I'll wait till forty."

It was said not altogether flippy, nor altogether seriously. She was voicing that half-formed impulse, common to sensitive youth when, through the mists of childhood, it glimpses a panorama of life and death it's too young to cope with. She's tasting the first good fruits of maturity. She'll find that forty and fifty and sixty have their compensations, too.

Margaret Sullavan enjoys a dance with Frank Borzage, the director of "Three Comrades."

A MAN WITHOUT FEAR

(Continued from page 33)

mariner Powell are lone wolves when they put to sea.

By way of beginning I said, "Happy?"

Jimmy ordered chicken livers and rice, and a pot of tea before he echoed, "Happy? Sure, I'm always happy when I'm going back to the farm. Right now I like everything I'm doing. But then I always like what I'm doing, or I don't do it for very long. Life's too short for that.

LAST time we were on the farm I transplanted twenty-eight trees, good hard work, that, the kind of work I like. I like the house we're building at Cold Water Canyon in Bevery Hills, too. It's a six room house. That's one of the reasons we're building it, because we like small houses. The farmhouse in the East has just six rooms. That's enough for any man and his wife.

"Sure, I'm happy. I'd say that my definition of happiness is being without fear. Fear can eat the vitals out of anyone. When a fellow has to keep a job he hates, or work for a boss he hates, because the alternative is starvation, that's slavery. I hate slavery in any form." He has proven that. Jimmy has always dared to quit.

I said, "Being without fear is a form of self-confidence, isn't it? How did you get this way?"

"When things have been tough for a kid," said Jimmy, "he's never afraid again. I've had so many jobs in my time, and I got 'em all on nerve. When they'd ask me, back in the days when I was first on the stage, 'Can you sing?' I couldn't sing, but I'd answer, 'Sure.' When they'd ask me, 'Can you dance?' I couldn't, but the answer was the same, 'Sure.' 'Can you do dramatic stuff?' Same answer, 'Sure.' So it went. I'd get by with it, too. The same holds good of any job. Just say, 'Sure,' and mean it, and you'll get by. At least, you won't be any worse off than you were before."

"But now," I said, "now that you aren't a 'kid' any longer?"

"Same still holds good," said Jimmy. "If, at any moment the movies should shake a day-day at me, I know exactly what I'd do, got it all planned out. I'd form a repertory company, and tour the country. Matter of fact, Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins and I have plans for such a company all doped out right now. We know just what we'd do, and how. May do it anyway, whether I'm in pictures or not.

"I can't have any fear," grinned Jimmy, "or I'd have taken myself out of Hollywood on the first train that left after mine came in, eight years ago. There wasn't anyone in pictures who looked like me. Where did I get off, and why had I gotten off at Hollywood? Those were the days when Valentino was still hot in peoples' hearts and memories. Those were the days when Buddy Rogers, and Charlie Farrell, and Gary Cooper were the tops. Now where did the Cagney pan fit into that art gallery? But I stayed on. They said, 'Can you be a movie star?' And I said, 'Sure,' and here I am, still the boy meeting the girl."

"But why did you say 'sure' to Hollywood?" I persisted. "What made you sure? What did you think you had to 'sell' to the movies?"

Jimmy has a habit of answering questions by telling you little anecdotes. He

*BY JANTZEN

● Perfectly suited for action—fashionably suited for smartness! With such brilliant styling, precise tailoring, perfection of fit—it is small wonder that Jantzen is the preferred suit in 62 countries around the globe. Triumphs of brevity for supreme comfort as you swim, as you dive, as you bronze in the sun. Quick drying wool fabrics, with interesting new textures, snug to the figure—achieving smooth girdle fit for women, trim athletic smartness for men. Permanent perfect fit, in the water and out. Jantzen Knitting Mills, Portland, Oregon; Vancouver, Canada

Jantzen
MOLDED-FIT SWIM SUITS

VEE MIO—Smartly textured wool fabric in a streamlined maillot $4.95
Other Jantzen creations $4.95 to $12.95

JANTZEN KNITTING MILLS, Dept. 162, Portland, Oregon.
Send me style folder in color featuring new 1938 models. Women's ☐ Men's ☐

Name

Street City

WHAT IS IT? An entirely new rouge whose color changes right on your cheeks . . . to the one warm, natural shade that glamorously flatters your individual complexion.

WHAT IT DOES: Instead of coating your cheeks as ordinary rouges do, White Rouge tints only the oils. Heightens natural skin-tone and gives cheeks a clearer, vibrant color . . . so life-like, it's mysterious!

WHAT IT MEANS: The correct shade of rouge though you are blonde, brunette or red-haired. One exquisite rouge for every costume . . . so amazingly adhering it lasts a full day. Marvelously waterproof, too!

Try White Rouge just once — you'll adore it always! Leading department and drug stores, 50c

10c size at most ten-cent stores

WHITE ROUGE

The Self-Blending Rouge

If unobtainable send 15c (5c added for postage and packing) direct to Clark-Millner Co., 666 St. Clair St., Dept. 30-G, Chicago. Sent only in U. S. A.

Cleans FALSE TEETH

RET Clean!

RET works like magic - soaks teeth pure and clean - no brushing. Get RET today! At all drug and ten cent stores - or send 10c for liberal sample.

RET PRODUCTS CO., Cleveland, Ohio

DO YOUR NAILS SPLIT?

Put a Wax Cushion on Your Nails

Stop polish from splitting and drying your nails. Sav-a-Nail, protective cushion (colorless, not creamy) keeps polish from touching nails. Protects nails from household wear and tear. One minute treatment. Dries instantly. Encourages nail growth. Polish goes on smoother—stays on longer. Makes every manicure a success. End your nail troubles! Brush on nails. Apply polish. Only 10c

A Real Dollar Value for a Dime!
Not A Polish — Not An Oil

AVOID IMITATIONS—DEMAND THE GENUINE SAV-A-NAIL

SAV-A-NAIL

Look For the Brown and Yellow Card

AT 10c STORES EVERYWHERE

NATONE, Inc., 826 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif.

said, "I was looking at one of my first pictures one day with my then leading lady. I said to her, as I looked at myself, 'That guy's nuts. I look a little bit crazy.' The lady said, 'When I watch myself there's nothing going on!' (She is still 'going on,' too, however.) Anyway, maybe that's the answer where I'm concerned. I look nuts. There's something that people like about a guy who looks a little bit crazy. They never know which way he's going to jump, whether he'll turn out to be a poached egg or Napoleon. I guess," said Jimmy, thoughtfully, "that my other selling point would be titled, 'pugnacity.' I look the kind of a guy who's just about to pick a fight."

I remembered then Mae West's famous pronouncement, that of all the men in Hollywood Jimmy Cagney has the most sex appeal for her money. I recalled that someone else—Joan Crawford, wasn't it?—said that Jimmy's sex appeal is due to the fact that he always looks as though he is about to spring. As if taking a cue, just as I was thinking these torrid thoughts, Marie Wilson, who plays the girl to his boy in "Boy Meets Girl," passed our table, paused to give Jimmy a large hug, and exclaimed, "Every chance I get!" then ran off, rather breathless and noticeably blushing. Jimmy remained smiling, but unperturbed. Later the girls in his studio's publicity department told me that every girl and woman on the lot is "crazy about Cagney," that they've never "seen anything like it."

No, he doesn't look like Valentino did, dear knows. He doesn't look like Robert Taylor, Tyrone Power, Clark Gable, or Errol Flynn. But he does look dangerous, in his quiet way. He does look unpredictable. He does look imperturbable. He does hold a challenge. It probably has something to do with the way he stands, this sex appeal of Jimmy's, for he stands as a fighter stands, his arms slightly bowed, his hands drawn up in front of him. Jimmy demonstrated for me that it's really difficult for him to straighten his arms out. Too many boxing matches have given them that pugilistic curve.

IF you will notice, there is also something about the back of his neck. His wife once told me that a woman said to her, "Do you know what I find most attractive about your husband?" "What?" asked Mrs. C. "The back of his neck," replied the admirer. "There's something so purposeful about it." There's something unusual about the set of his head, too. Something about it suggests a battering ram.

Perhaps little Marie Wilson expressed it most aptly when she said, "He looks as though he's going somewhere, and you wonder whether he'll take you with him, or leave you behind."

He appears to be ungettable, this Jimmy. Yet, a fact little known is that a great many people come to Jimmy with their troubles and problems. He could be called The Little Father Confessor of Hollywood, and deserve the title. (But how he would hate it! For Jimmy, a sentimentalist in his heart, detests any of the outward and visible signs of sentimentality.)

Jimmy lives, and lets live too. Now, take his married life, one of the happiest, soundest, and most successful of all the Hollywood marriages. You never hear anything about it. You never hear "rumors." You never see Jimmy with anyone but Billie, his Missus, or with his brother Bill, or some of the boys.

For Jimmy and his Billie do really live and let live. And they go their own ways, when they feel like it, which isn't often.

Occasionally Jimmy invites to the house people in whom Billie is not especially interested. But that's all right. Billie just goes out. She goes to a show, or plays bridge, or drives around until the gang is gone. Sometimes Billie may invite people for whom Jimmy doesn't particularly care. That's all right, too. He just goes out with some of the fellows, goes to the fights, to a show, or just drives around until he sees that the downstairs lights are off. Then he goes home. But for the most part their friends are mutual friends, the O'Briens, the Tracys, the McHughs, and the Jenkinses, the wives as clubby as the husbands.

Warren William, Robert Montgomery and Virginia Bruce seem all set to disagree.

There are no naggings, no orders given, no coercions in the Cagney household. "Marriage," says Jimmy, "can be a form of slavery, too. Ours isn't. Billie doesn't make a slave of me, nor I of her. There's no jealousy. When we were in show business together a few years ago one of the girls asked Billie if she didn't worry about me, always playing with a bunch of beautifuls. Billie said 'No. What good would it do me to worry?' It wouldn't do her any good. And she hasn't any reason. We both know that it's a lot of bunk, all the she-she in this business. She knows that I know it. We both know that when it's all over, when the curtain rings down I won't be of any more interest to people than Mr. Smith of Punkin Center is today.

"We both like to stay home. We sit around and gab about the farm, and about the new place here in Beverly Hills. Billie takes care of all the domestic shenanigans, the furnishings, the servant problems, if any, the planning of meals, etc. I'm not fussy about my food. There are too many important things in life to be finicky about whether you're eating cake or pie. I think I take enough interest in the house to be companionable. I like to fool around arranging furniture. I'm the one who says where to hang the antlers in the den! I take an interest in what Billie wears—isn't that supposed to be a goodly thing in husbands? Especially hats! I'm hat conscious. Oh, am I hat conscious! I hate conspicuous clothes, too much make-up, red nail polish. But especially the wrong kind of hats. Before I was married I'd ask girls for dates, and if they showed up wearing some squirrelly thing that dipped over sidewise, like the prow of a ship in distress—well, I'd dip out. If Billie wanted to buy one of those things, sometimes called hats, she'd buy one. I wouldn't say anything, and she knows it. But she doesn't buy 'em.

"I always go over my scripts with Billie. Like all actors I try out the business on the wife. Pat does the same with Eloise. Allen with Mary. We all do. I act out a bit of business with Billie and she'll say 'I think that's swell,' or 'I think that's pretty bad.' Sometimes that's that, and sometimes I kick it around a bit and try it again until she okays it. We always say, 'I think' to each other. Leaves things open and free, as they should be. But in the essentials we think alike, and take 'em together. The rest doesn't matter."

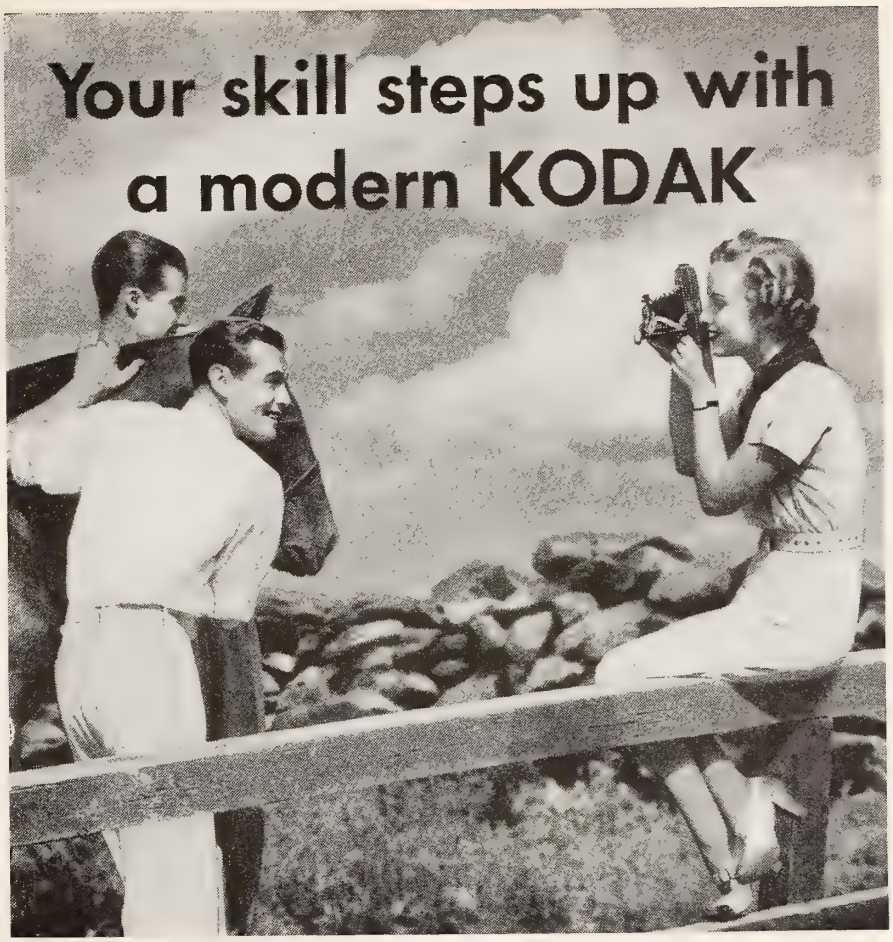
PUGNACIOUS, yes. Imperturbable, yes. But there's another side to Cagney. And he shows that side in the things he notices. He betrays an almost feminine sensibility to the things which effect others. He told me about a party at the home of Allen Jenkins, for instance. And how Allen just up and blurted out the carefully kept secret of the Jenkins' Blessed Event, blurted it out because he just couldn't keep it in one more proud moment. Jimmy told me about the look on Allen's face, that hard-boiled screen face, when he spoke of the baby to come.

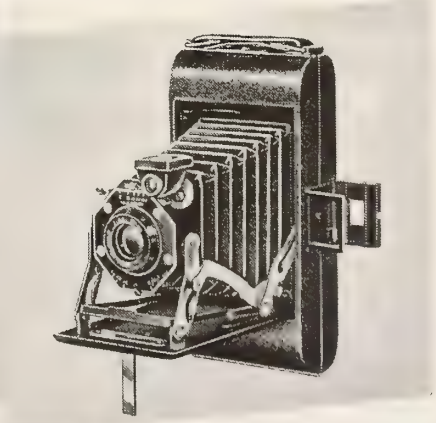


He told me about young Phil Regan, the "Singing Policeman," the young actor you saw in "Stars Over Broadway," "Go Into Your Dance," and so many others. Jimmy said, "that kid has worked ever since he could walk. Father was a truck driver. The kid had job after job after job, any kind of job. When he came to Hollywood he didn't tell anyone he was married, thought it better business not to. He always spoke of Jo as "my girl." But he always spoke of her. I found out that he'd been married at seventeen, that they'd had one kid, then another, then another, until they now have four. And when I found that out my respect for him went up one hundred per cent, and higher."

Yes, these are the kind of things Jimmy notices, the break in a man's voice when he mentions a baby, and the sturdy courage of a man who works for the wife and kids, gives 'em the best he's got of love and loyalty.

No, Jimmy hasn't changed. He'll never change, let contracts come or go, governments rise or fall. He'll never be afraid, either, not for himself. And he'll never be carelessly happy, no matter how things go—because Jimmy has a sense, deep in his Irish heart, of the tragedy of life. There is nothing you can do to him, perhaps, to make him shrink, or wince. But there are many things you can do to yourselves that will matter to him. Because he cares about people. What would an idealist call that? A sort of sense of the brotherhood-of-man?

Betty Compson out with two sailors? No, it's just Milburn Stone and Harry Carey.



PICTURE makers are going out with better cameras this year. Quicker on the trigger. More brilliant action. Dependable to the last degree. Smart to carry. You'll get a lot of satisfaction out of owning one of these Kodaks—and you'll bring back better pictures. Your skill steps up the minute your hands get the "feel" of the new improvements and refinements. Use a camera that's really modern. Bigger values than ever. Your dealer has Kodaks as low as $5; Brownies from $1 . . . Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

Only EASTMAN makes the KODAK

JIFFY KODAK SIX-20, Series II, gives you box-camera simplicity plus the style of the latest folding model. Touch one button—"Pop"—it opens. Touch another—"Click"—it gets the picture. Twindar lens, up-to-the-minute refinements. Pictures, 2¼ x 3¼ inches. Price, $9 . . . Jiffy Kodak Six-16, Series II—2½ x 4¼-inch pictures—$10. $9

KODAK JUNIOR SIX-20, Series II (f.6.3) —opens at the touch of a button—closes at the touch of a one-finger release. Fast Kodak Anastigmat f.6.3 lens lets you make snapshots regardless of most weather conditions. Pictures, 2¼ x 3¼ inches. Price, $14. Kodak Junior Six-16, Series II (f.6.3), 2½ x 4¼-inch pictures, $15.75. $14

Complete every shampoo with Nestle Colorinse, the rinse-tint that is so simple and economical to use. It's pure and harmless — not a dye or a bleach.

Rinse youth into your hair with Colorinse Faded or gray streaks are blended in with the enriched natural color. Waves last longer Colorinse truly glorifies your hair!

There's a shade of Nestle Colorinse for every shade of hair. Consult the Nestle Color Chart at your toilet goods counter -- today!

10c for package of 2 rinses at 10c stores.
25c for 5 rinses at drug and dept. stores.

Nestle COLORINSE

WRECKING THOSE RUMORS

(Continued from page 37)

is all right," said Sonja, dismissing the subject, "if all you want is romancing."

Further proof that Sonja isn't nursing a broken heart is that, while romance rumors seem only to bore or amuse her (you get the feeling that the Tyrone Power romance is ancient history to her), there is another set of rumors about which she feels very differently—the rumors that she has gone temperamental and high-hat.

When she answered questions about romance she was a little reserved, but when she swung into her own defense, she became warm and animated. Her vivid brown eyes, that contrast so oddly with her blond hair, flashed, and she went directly and simply to the point.

THOUGH she laughed about them, she was very much hurt by the cruel and silly stories that circulated during her stay at Miami, where she gave a skating exhibition. As the New York newspapers had made a target of Robert Taylor just before he sailed for England, so the Florida newspapers made a target of Sonja Henie. It all arose through a series of misunderstandings—through stories that had a bit of truth, but were mostly pure fiction.

"When I arrived in Florida," said Sonja, "I found that I was booked for all sorts of affairs, and that every minute of the day was mapped out for me. Every time I opened a newspaper I would find a new announcement that Sonja Henie was going to appear at some affair. Often, the first indication I had that I was expected to attend was the appearance of an advertisement in some newspaper. But I knew that if I stayed away from any of these affairs, after the newspapers had announced that I'd be there, the public, not knowing the circumstances, would think I was becoming temperamental. So I went through with everything that had been arranged for me.

"For example, when I saw the announcement that I would appear at a certain swimming exhibition, I was panicky, for I had another appointment which conflicted with the time set for this exhibition. 'I couldn't possibly stay very long,' I told the people who were managing it, 'for I've got to keep this other appointment.' They told me it would be perfectly all right if I stayed only five minutes, and then left. Instead, I remained an hour and a half, which was all the time I dared take, and then went on to my other appointment. The next day the newspapers criticized me for being so blasé that I couldn't sit through the exhibition.

"One day at the beach someone asked me if I wouldn't like to see the horse races at Hialeah that afternoon.

"Since I was wearing only white slacks and a white coat, and had no time to change, I asked if it was all right to appear at the clubhouse like that, and was assured it would be. Since you can go almost anywhere in slacks in Hollywood, I gave it no further thought.

"Even when we were stopped at the clubhouse, I thought it was because we didn't have any tickets, and that my companion had gone to make arrangements.

"When I learned that my slacks were the real reason we had been stopped I was very uncomfortable, for I didn't want to violate the rules of the place. I decided to sit down as inconspicuously as possible, hoping that my white coat would hide the slacks. But while I was sitting there, word came that the governor of Florida wanted to meet me."

Sonja Henie turned miserably to her companion. If she went down in her slacks to meet the governor, she would have to pass thousands of people, all of whom would notice her informal attire, and possibly criticize her as an exhibitionist.

"Please," she begged, "tell the governor why I cannot go down to meet him. Please explain to him about the slacks."

The next day the newspapers said, "Sonja Henie refused to leave her seat at the races to meet the governor. She said, 'Why should I go down to meet him? I am just as important as he is. Let him come up to meet me.'"

Another story which circulated about Sonja was that a group of youngsters had thrown snowballs at her. The insinuation was that Sonja had made herself disagreeable to them. The truth is very different. On the first day of Sonja Henie's exhibition, a group of youngsters who had never seen snow or ice before went up to the rink just as the exhibition ended.

"I saw one of the youngsters edging toward the artificial ice," Sonja told me, "and I knew right away what was going to happen. I said 'Goodbye' very hastily, and went straight home.

"The youngsters began to throw snowballs at each other, and before long they were involved in a regular snow fight. Trying to stop the fight, one of the workmen threw a snowball at one of the boys. In revenge, they grabbed the doll house from which I had made my entrance in the 'Toyland' scene of my ice ballet, and began tearing it to pieces.

"The next day the newspapers said that the boys had thrown snowballs at me, but I was, of course, safely home when it happened."

DISMAYED by the unfavorable publicity she had received, and growing weary of having every minute of the day charted out for her, Sonja hinted to someone connected with her troupe that she would prefer not to have a press agent follow her around all the time. No doubt this was undiplomatic of her. Someone older and less sincere than Sonja might have found a subtle way of handling the situation, but Sonja is nothing if not direct. Her honesty is her greatest fault, and her greatest charm. After the Florida exhibitions were over, the press agent wrote a vitriolic open letter to Sonja Henie, which was published in a newspaper.

"Her letter was very funny," said Sonja, but there was a hurt look in her brown eyes as she spoke. I later learned that the press agent from Sonja's own studio simply adores her, and finds her the most cooperative star imaginable.

Laughingly, Sonja denied some of the other rumors about herself. There is, for instance, the persistent story that she has "lucky boots" which she always wears. Hollywood even said that when Royer designed a set of gorgeous costumes for her first picture, "One In a Million," she told him regretfully that she could not wear them because they would not go with "lucky boots" which she wears at all important events in her life.

"There are no 'lucky boots,'" said Sonja. "I change to new boots every five months, regularly."

Then there was the story that in "Happy Landing" she wore a beaded cap, beaded bodice, and embroidered skirt three hundred years old, which had been in her family all that time, having been passed down as part of a girl's dowry from one generation to another. According to the story, when Sonja Henie's mother heard that she needed such a costume for her picture, she made the supreme sacrifice of giving it to her daughter. Sonja chuckled merrily.

"How could I wear a dress three hundred years old? The silk would all be torn, wouldn't it?"

But, oddly enough, the story that the most exciting ice skater of our generation has never been on roller skates is true. Sonja is still as modest about her acting as ever.

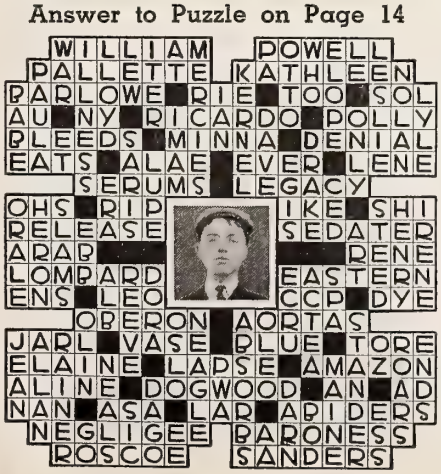
"I do not act," she says. "When you try too hard you are not natural."

Now that she is on top, Sonja has no desire to tell the studio how to handle her. When asked what kind of pictures she would like to make she said, "Just the kind I have been making. Of course, it would be nice if they would film a skating picture in technicolor. But no matter what they do, I shall keep on giving skating exhibitions between pictures."

SONJA added modestly, "I do not think that at first the studio liked my making personal appearances. Perhaps they were afraid I wouldn't look just right, for many people at the studio had never seen me give a skating exhibition, and didn't know what to expect."

Sonja's studio knows now that they need have no fears about her, for the magnificent little lady of the skates will always acquit herself beautifully in anything she tries. Her tour set a new record for repeated triumphs. No other sports figure ever played to such packed houses as greeted Sonja Henie everywhere she performed.

Yet Sonja is as natural and unspoiled as the day she landed in America. Though she has given command performances before King George and Queen Mary of England, before Mussolini, ex-Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany, and King Haakon VII and Queen Maude of Norway, she has none of the airs and ridiculous posturings that you so often see in girls with not one hundredth of her claim to fame.



In the middle of our talk, she had turned to me, with that appealing directnesss of hers, and asked, "Am I bad copy? Someone told me I was bad copy."

Here she was, a world figure, the queen of ice skating, and a sensational success in pictures, and she was worried because someone had told her she was "bad copy." She has the simplicity of the truly great.

"No, I will never change," said Sonja. "I know that fame means very little and goes very quickly."

For some people, fame does go quickly. But not for the Sonja Henies of the world, who wear their crowns, their glories, and their triumphs with such disarming modesty.

Answer to Puzzle on Page 14

NEW-TYPE ICE DEODORANT

Is greaseless and actually cooling —checks perspiration 1 to 3 days

NOW, a deodorant that has everything—an ICE DEODORANT!

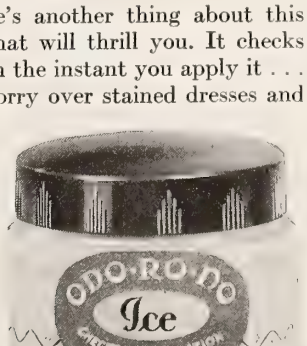
It's easy to put on! It's actually cooling! It's absolutely greaseless! Its own fresh odor evaporates immediately! It checks perspiration!

The wonderful new Odorono ICE is based on a brand-new principle. A gentle, cooling ICE deodorant that goes on like a vanishing cream and disappears completely. It is not greasy or sticky.



And here's another thing about this new ICE that will thrill you. It checks perspiration the instant you apply it . . . banishes worry over stained dresses and offending odors up to three days!

Its texture, too, is delightful. So light and easy to spread. And its clean, wholesome smell of pure alcohol disappears as soon as it's on, leaving you fresh, dainty —cool.

After the first application you'll understand why so many of the women who have tried it prefer the new Odorono ICE. You'll never have another moment's uneasiness about underarm odor or perspiration.

Try this sure, easy way of guarding your charm. Get a jar of the new Odorono ICE tomorrow . . . only 35¢ at all Toilet-Goods Departments.

● "Safe—cuts down clothing damage, when used carefully according to directions," says The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, after making intensive laboratory tests of Odorono Preparations.

*Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

* ODO-RO-NO ICE
COOLING—NON-GREASY

SEND 10¢ FOR INTRODUCTORY JAR

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. 7-E-8*, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 2320, Montreal)

I enclose 10¢ (15¢ in Canada) to cover cost of postage and packing for generous introductory jar of Odorono Ice.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

with Wigder
EYEBROW CONTROL

FOR charm and beauty, it's most important to keep your eyebrows trim and shapely. And it's easy, too. Just "tweeze" away those stray hairs and heavy outlines with Wigder Tweezers — especially constructed with raised shoulders and carefully set jaws for positive grip.

Don't neglect this essential beauty care! Get Wigder Tweezers today at any drug or 10-cent store 10c

ASK for Wigder Tweezers, with the special Lock-Grip that makes eyebrow-grooming quick and agreeable.

Wigder QUALITY COSTS NO MORE
NEWARK NEW JERSEY
NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

ITCH
OF ECZEMA, RASHES AND OTHER EXTERNALLY CAUSED SKIN TROUBLES STOPPED QUICKLY
Use D.D.D. Prescription
AT ALL DRUGGISTS 35c • 60c • $1.00

HOW NERVOUS WOMEN CAN SLEEP EASILY

By Dorothy Blake

Being a woman myself, I know that many women, as well as men, find it extremely difficult to fall asleep for hours after they retire — that others become fully awake after they have slept for just a short time, then find it almost impossible to go back to sleep. The next day they are nervous, unstrung, highly irritable. Before retiring I take one or two TREMS tablets. That's ALL I do. In about 15 minutes, tense nerves are completely relaxed, that taut feeling goes and I get a good night's sleep. All ingredients in TREMS are U. S. P. tested. Why put up with another sleepless night or nerve-wracking day when you can enjoy glorious relaxation with TREMS? If your druggist does not have TREMS, send your name, address and 10c to TREMS, St. Louis, and 25c Introductory Package will be sent postpaid.

FAREWELL TO FRANCIS

(Continued from page 41)

cream on my face, a pretty sight. My door was locked, but reporters and photographers broke it open, and there I was! "I told them," chuckled Kay, with relish, "that I was a strong girl who made a twelve-second mark for the one hundred yard dash in school, and that I would be likely to break their cameras over their heads if they dared take any pictures. They didn't, though one lad observed that there were some ladies who liked 'being photographed in pajamas!' There simply is no privacy for a star.

"I loathe trying to live up to slogans, and I just won't do it. 'The Screen's Most Beautiful Siren,' 'The Screen's Glamor Girl,' 'The Best Dressed Woman in Hollywood,' things like that. Absurd. Fantastic. Untrue. And very uncomfortable when they are pinned to you.

"I abhor having to show off. I detest sycophants. I avoid gossips as I would the plague. And this business is ridden with all three pestilences. I hate all the attention a star is supposed to give her precious self. I do nothing in particular to keep physically 'fit.' I do not diet. I have no beauty secrets. I wash my face with soap and water when it needs washing, and let it go at that. I don't know yet what is meant by 'glamor.' I'll be so glad when September comes, and I won't have to worry about what others think I should or should not do about myself. I want to get fat," declared Kay with feeling. "I want to do nothing. I want to sit on my back porch, in a rocker, and not even think. I can't imagine anything more divine than stepping off a gangplank one of these days, and looking down into a sea of faces to find them all staring blankly away from me, disinterested.

"THIS business of being a star is really spoiling my disposition," sighed Kay. "I used to have a fairly placid temper, but now I lose it every now and then. The strain is too much for my lazy nature. A star is expected to be a social entertainer, besides being an actress. They bring everyone from royalty to Shirley Temple's French 'double' onto the set while a star is working. They bring on the Army, the Navy, football players, basketball players, baseball players—and the star is expected to stop in the middle of a scene, and be gracious to the visitors. They bring on newspaper men, who may grill you for being 'temperamental,' if you refuse to meet them, and will almost certainly grill you for 'slipping' if you do a few bad scenes as a result of the interruptions. Either way you lose.

"I guess I'm just not an exhibitionist," said Kay. "I not only do not enjoy seeing myself on the screen, but I don't even see myself any more when I look in the mirror at home. Even the pleasures of a woman's vanity, the fun of 'prinking' are mine no longer. It has all become mechanical, impersonal, and boring. I look in the mirror, and I know there's a face there. And it's probably mine. I know that I must go through the motions of pulling it together, and I do, but I have no personal pleasure or interest in the process.

"I've only seen one shot of myself on the screen that I really thought beautiful. And even that was more a matter of lighting than of my face. It was a close-up in 'One Way Passage,' the picture Bill Powell and I did together a few years ago. It was beautiful because Bob Kurle, the cameraman, (he's dead now, poor dear) took so much time and trouble shifting his camera fifty different ways, experimenting with light and shadow. When I saw that, I felt the one pang of pure pleasure I've ever experienced when I've looked at myself on the screen.

"Usually I'm afraid to look. When I go to previews of my own pictures I feel like cowering in my chair like a kid afraid of a bogey-man. I'm afraid that I'll see myself walking with a slouch, or that I'll see a run in my stocking, or my clip won't be on straight, or that I'll be running my hand through my hair, or a dozen and one other things.

I KNOW that I've got one special quality to 'sell' on the screen, as most of us have. The fans expect sincerity from me, a certain warmth and 'sympatica.' And if they don't get it they howl. They didn't like me in 'First Lady' worth a cent. They told me so, by the hundreds. They don't want me to be flibberty-gibbetty. And so there is the strain of being sure I have the right character to play. Of course, that's every star's major problem. But it's too major for my shoulders." And Kay wiggled her's as though shaking off the too-heavy burden of stardom.

"I wonder," I said, "whether you'll be able to stand the let-down when the tempo of your life changes, for a star's life is a feverish one, with phones ringing incessantly, conferences, interviews, stories to be read. What will you do with yourself?"

"'Let-down,' what a lovely word," laughed Kay, "lovely and lazy." And she laughed again, so happily, so convincingly that there was not even a wisp of doubt in my mind but what Kay is, indeed, saying goodbye.

"There are so many things I want to do," she said. "So much blessed doing-nothing to catch up with. I won't have 'stories to read,' no, but I can read Hemingway, and Schnitzler, and my 'moider' mysteries in peace. I've always run my own house, pretty competently, if I do say so, but now I'll have time to fool around with the linens, and rearrange the books, and do things with flowers.

"You know," said Kay, "I am the laziest woman in the world. Really. I agree with Alice Brady when she says never to stand up if you can sit down, never to sit down if you can lie down."

I tried to switch around to the subject of love, by asking Kay if she is romantic. I reminded her that psychologists say people who marry more than once are romantics, or they wouldn't. Kay evaded. She saw through my little ruse. She grinned and said, "I know what you want me to say, that I'm 'forever blowing bubbles,' or 'looking for the rainbow,' or something. I'd much rather talk about being lazy. I am energetic when there's a job to do, I'll say that. I attack it with what is known as vim and vigor. I go to bed every night at nine o'clock. I accept almost no social engagements, allow nothing to interfere. But I hate it. I force myself to work. I should have been born in a harem," said Kay, luxuriously, "with slaves to wait on me, even to feed me. Never to raise my little finger again is my idea of heaven."

"But," I gasped, "won't you miss anything of all this, anything at all?"

"Yes," said Kay, and now she was not laughing. "Yes, I'll miss my crew. I'll miss the boys and girls who have been with me on so many pictures, the props, and carpenters, and electricians, my hairdresser, my script girl, all of the people who have been my very good friends. I'll miss them terribly. Perhaps such good-byes would be too painful, if I did not know that I shall see them all again, here in Hollywood. As for my friends among the players, naturally, I'll keep on seeing them, perhaps more often than I do now. But I can't," said Kay, her eyes seeming to look backward now over the nine bright years of her stardom, remembering all the fame and flattery, the tangible rewards, the achievement and acclaim, the glitter and the glory, taking stock of it, and finding it somehow wanting, "I can't," she repeated, "think of any other thing I'll miss. Not one thing."

The woman was saying good-bye to the star. It is we who are left who will have the regrets when, in September, Kay Francis bids us goodbye.

DON AMECHE'S SECRET HAPPINESS

(Continued from page 39)

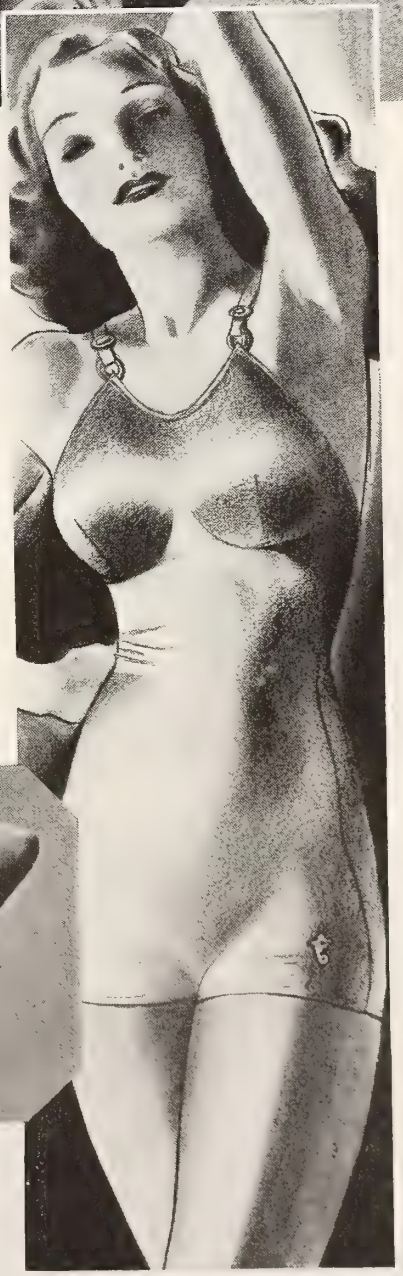
it's quiet, can't go to bed before one or two in the morning, because I'm too keyed up to sleep. It's not exactly soothing syrup, working in pictures.

"And if," he said gravely, "if I did not feel my work to be a vocation, a doing-for-others, as well as for myself, I'd often crack up in the middle of a picture, and just tell them to take it away. There are tremendous compensations and rewards, of course. The money is important, naturally. I know that we couldn't make this money in any other way. But even the money wouldn't keep me going if I didn't believe that what I'm doing really matters.

"I get letters from shut-ins, from children who are crippled, from the blind, telling me how they love our program on the air. I get letters from the old, who tell me that, as they watch pictures, they live their lives over again, find their lost youth, and the dreams that, for them, never did come true. I get letters from married couples telling me how they were on the edge of a nasty battle, then went to a movie, and, when they came out of it, forgot what they were going to fight about.

THE great majority of letters I get are just this kind, from the sick, the discouraged, from those who would have no life at all unless we gave it to them. Out of some 2500 letters, I daresay, there will be only ten which could be classified as 'mash' notes. Why, if it were not for these other letters I wouldn't keep on. I couldn't.



"Because," said Don, "they confirm my belief that entertainment is as necessary as food and drink. There has always been entertainment, of one kind or another, since the world began. There always will be entertainment, because it is an absolute necessity of life. And if I couldn't feel that I am helping to provide one of the absolute necessities I'd feel unnecessary, and that's a very bad state of affairs. Entertainment is food, and drink, and rest for the tired and the sick at heart.

"I consider Charlie McCarthy one of the great benefactors of the human race. Just think of the thousands of people, tired, harassed people, fretting over their problems all week, strained people, who sit down of a Sunday evening and listen to Charlie for an hour. As they listen, the tired lines in their faces smooth out, the dullness of their eyes brightens, they find that they

A more glamorous—YOU..

in a *B.V.D. beauty-line Swim Suit!

● Your new beauty secret—a new B.V.D. Swim Suit! From high line to thigh line, in color and cut, these B.V.D. suits capture your eye and mould your figure divinely!

"Nosegay" maillot (above) comes in an exclusive imported pattern that looks for all the world like hand-knitting. In lovely, flattering shades, and—like all B. V. D. maillots—fully lined (Skirted suits are lined through the bust.) $7.95.

"*Sea Satin by B. V. D." (right) in a classic maillot. This brilliant fabric puts accent on your loveliest lines, curbs those in need of control. Adjustable straps hold the uplift and "evening gown" back to their promise of flattery. $4.95.

Another "*Sea Satin by B.V.D." (below) to hold you entranced with its glamorous bow-print pattern and its silhouetting genius. You'll find it in B.V.D. color combinations that add to the beauty of its gay print. Just one of a glorious parade of B.V.D. suits to make you more goddesslike! $6.95.

B.V.D. Swim Suits

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

The Sea Horse is the sign of beauty, of sculptured lines and exclusive features. Look for this emblem on the smartest swim suit fashions for 1938!

The B. V. D. Corporation, Empire State Building, New York City

I notice the girls with lovely eyes are using Winx Mascara!

Says VIRGINIA JUDD, Recently voted the most beautiful model in America.

Thousands of women every day are changing to this better mascara... because WINX is different! It has a finer texture...clings closer...seems to be part of your lashes. Makes lashes dark, luxuriant, silky... accents the star-like beauty of your eyes in a more natural way. Try WINX today!

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Get WINX mascara, eye shadow and eyebrow pencil—in the GREEN PACKAGES—at all drug, department and ten-cent stores

Change to WINX the Finer Quality MASCARA

REMOVE HAIR without razor, liquid paste or powder 25c

Baby Touch Hair Remover is the new, amazing way to remove hair from arms, legs and face—quickly and safely. Used like a powder puff. Odorless, painless, better than a razor. Baby Touch gives the skin that soft, white appearance of youth and beauty. Satisfaction guaranteed. At drug and department stores or send 25c for one or $1.00 for five of the Baby Touch Pads. Baby Touch Mittens (Two sides) 35c each. 3 for $1.00. Will last about 3 months.

BABY TOUCH HAIR REMOVER CO.
2325 Olive, St. Louis, Mo.

have not forgotten how to laugh. Think of the fun and the forgetting Jack Benny and Mary, Burns and Allen, Harold Lloyd, all of them, give to others. Why, the writers of detective novels and 'moider' mysteries are benefactors. The makers of games and toys, the cartoonists, all are great humanitarians, whether they know it or not. And when the final rewards are handed out, I'll bet that the clown will be there right beside the philosopher.

"I haven't any ambition to make pictures that are 'artistic successes.' I don't want to play in Shakespeare. I don't care whether I make "B" pictures, or "A," or "Z," so long as I play in pictures that have the greatest appeal for the greatest number of people. So I can't be disillusioned about my work," smiled Don, "as long as I feel that I'm giving illusion to others."

I'd never heard the likes of this, but I carried on, and tried again. I said, "How about Hollywood? Hollywood is said to have disillusioned many a strong man, broken many a stout heart?"

"No," said Don emphatically, and he can be very emphatic indeed. "No. I had my notions too about Hollywood, before I came here. Everyone has notions about Hollywood, I'm sure, what with all they hear and read about it. I wondered about this 'playing politics' I'd heard so much about. That didn't sound too good. I'm not a politician. I can't say what I don't mean. I can't scheme and manoeuvre. But I haven't had to. I wondered about the publicity. I wondered about the so-called 'temptations.'"

I said, thinking of all the lithesome beauties I'd seen Don working with, "But how do you keep your feet so squarely on the ground, for there must be plenty of temptations in Hollywood. What is the anchor to windward? Your happy marriage, I suppose?"

"Yes. And my religion," said Don.

He went on, "And so I wondered about all this talk of having to do the 'right things' in Hollywood, if you want to make the grade. Doing the 'right things' seemed to consist in having a palatial estate, giving huge, swank parties, having 'glamor,' even though married, spending money drunkenly. I didn't see where Honore and I, with all of our obligations, would fit into such a pattern. I wondered, too, how people would treat me, an outsider, a newcomer into what I'd heard was a furiously competitive business. I'd read that foreign importations were not exactly given the fatted calf. And while I could not be considered a 'foreign importation' (saving my Italian blood) I was certainly an outsider.

"Well," said Don vigorously, "I've never been an outsider. Not for one single instant. From the very moment I stepped foot on the lot I was made to feel welcome, as much one of the family as any of the old-timers are. It may sound all sweetness and light to say that every one from the producer down was simply swell to me, still are simply swell to me. But I can't help how it sounds. If anything, it's an understatement of fact.

"Honestly, I don't know what people mean when they speak about the 'hard heart of Hollywood.' It's a big country, this California, it's a big industry, this movie business, and the people in it are big, too, big of heart and generous of spirit. I mean every word I say. I'm not theorizing. I can give you facts.

"Take Tyrone Power and me, for instance. Tyrone and I should certainly be rivals if any two men in this business would be. We are on the same lot. We are often tested for the same role in a picture. Sometimes Ty gets it, sometimes I do. But we never get out our Boy Scout knives, whichever way it falls. We play together, our parts fairly comparable in importance, as in "In Old Chicago," and now in "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Yet I feel nothing but friendliness for Tyrone. I'd do anything I could to help if he needed help. I know that he'd do the same for me. We often give each other 'tips,' we think might help one another's performance. We clown together on the set, lunch together, play golf together. We are friends.

I DON'T mean," laughed Don, "that we all are too good to be true, like angels in Arcadia. Certainly not. It's our business to look out for ourselves, and we do. But I mean that we are not forever going about with knives in our make-up kits, just waiting for a fellow actor's back to be turned. You often read that an actor has 'stepped out of a picture' because he didn't get as good a part as some other fellow. The chances are that if you could read the script, you would know why the actor had stepped out. A million to one it had nothing to do with the other actor.

"Bill Powell," said Don, suddenly, and when he said it he sounded like a small, earthbound boy speaking of a Lindbergh, "Bill Powell is one of my screen idols. If I'm a hero-worshipper at all, and I guess I am, then I hero-worship Bill, Ronald Colman and Spencer Tracy, among others. Well, one night not long ago, I was introduced to Bill at a restaurant in Beverly Hills. We both had stopped in for a cup of coffee after work. We started to talk, and we sat there the whole night through, just talking. We talked about our kids. Bill told me his ideas about bringing up his son. I told him what Honore and I try to do with our boys. Now, there's no reason why Bill Powell should take an interest in me. There's nothing I've got that he wants. But the point is that Bill did take an interest in me. And the bigger point is that that's Hollywood, friendly interest, not rivalry, a pat on the back, not a knife. I left Bill that dawning with more respect for him than I'd ever thought possible. I found him to be just as witty, and charming, and polished, and real as I'd thought he would be. Disillusioned?" Don threw back his dark head and laughed, "I'll say I'm not!"

"Jack Benny and Mary are among our best friends out here. And I mean friends. Do you know what Jack did a few weeks ago, when I was ill? He drove out to see me one Sunday morning, a drive of some thirty miles from his house in Beverly Hills to our place in the San Fernando Valley. When he got there I was asleep, and Honore had gone to church. He wouldn't let Annie or Irene, the girls who work with us, disturb me. He said 'I'll just sit in the parlor and wait.' And that's just what he did, for an hour. Then he strolled into the kitchen, asked if he could have a cup of coffee, and sat there at the kitchen table, drinking it. When I finally woke up, an hour and a half later, he came up and sat with me for another hour, and then drove home again. Now, the thing is that Jack had two radio broadcasts to do that day, his own, and a guest appearance he was making. He was also leaving for New York early the next morning. But he took all that time to come out and see me, because he is a friend.

THEN," Don went on, "Jack and Mary, George Burns and Gracie, Lum, of Lum and Abner, and his wife, Harriet, Honey and I, we're all so happily married that we all go places together, talk about our homes and our kids, and are as plain folksy as old shoes. Take Bing and Dixie, and their well-known four boys, or Eloise and Pat O'Brien. They certainly don't hide their family life under any bushel of glamor, and certainly it doesn't decrease their popularity. I've never known people to care so much for children as the folks in Hollywood do. The bigger they are, the more precious they seem to find that 'patter of little feet.' If they haven't children of their own they take children into their hearts and homes, which seems to me to be the height of unselfishness. Hard-hearted, you say?

"Just the other day," said Don, "one of the carpenters on the set died. It was discovered that he had left a widow and seven children. Immediately a collection was taken up, with everyone from the director to the prop boys contributing. There was enough money collected on the set to buy a lot out in the Valley. Then the carpenters and the electricians offered their spare time (for nothing) to build a house on that lot. The result is that soon the widow and her seven children will have a house and lot, all free and clear, thanks to 'hard-hearted Hollywood.'

"Nothing," said Don, "nothing that has ever happened to me has had the power to disillusion me. You really can say that I still believe in Santa Claus, and you won't be so far wrong at that!"

Gloria Faythe would succeed as a "Gold Digger in Paris" or anywhere else as far as we're concerned.

REFRESH the BEAUTY of YOUR HAIR ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"There's nothing like Marchand's to renew the highlights and sheen of your hair. I use Marchand's regularly to keep my hair radiant and lustrous."

says BEVERLY ROBERTS attractive blonde Hollywood Star. Appearing currently in "Call of the Yukon"

60% of all women were born blonde!

DON'T LET TIME DARKEN YOUR HAIR
BRING OUT THE NATURAL HIGHLIGHTS

Marchand's Golden Hair Wash enlivens the hidden beauty of your hair . . . awakening lovely highlights and sunny, fascinating glints . . . refreshing your natural beauty. Marchand's is a scientific preparation that brightens and refines any shade of hair, harmlessly and effectively. It will not interfere with permanents. It's so safe . . . so simple . . . so sensible to use.

Brunettes, too, use Marchand's to rinse lovely, attractive highlights into their hair . . . adding to its charm and beauty.

Marchand's makes excess hair on arms and legs invisible. Stainless, odorless, leaves no stubble. Directions with every bottle.

MARCHAND'S GOLDEN HAIR WASH

AT ALL DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

New beauty for your hair . . . with this new 4 Purpose Rinse

Lovalon, the 4 Purpose Rinse does all these four things for your hair in one quick, easy operation:

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Keeps hair neatly in place.

Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. See the life and sparkle and healthful, youthful glow it gives your hair.

Lovalon comes in 12 different shades. You can match and enrich the natural color of your hair or make it brighter or deeper. Lovalon does not dye or bleach. It's a pure, odorless, vegetable hair rinse—one of the very few hair toiletries approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Package of 5 for 25¢ at drug and dept. stores. Two rinse size at 10¢ stores. (Or, any good beauty shop will Lovalon your hair.)

LOVALON

the 4 purpose hair rinse

BECOME AN EXPERT

ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 16,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U.S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept. 7318-H Chicago

The School That Has In Its Alumni Over 1,450 C.P.A.'s

Sensational FREE Offer!

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous REJUVIA Lipsticks "None Better Made" FREE...each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Day Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks...that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

REJUVIA LIPSTICK

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. WD, 116 W. 14th ST., N.Y.C.
Send me 3 trial size REJUVIA Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs. (15c in Canada).
NAME
ADDRESS

ONLY 10¢ AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

FIGURE IT OUT THIS WAY

(Continued from page 43)

around doing brisk, tissue-busting exercise, when what you need is slow, muscle-strengthening exercise. See what I mean?

All right, then. Here are two good general exercises, all-purpose streamliners which are not difficult. They "get you" at waistline, abdomen and hip, the three spots most popular with fatty tissue.

Lie your little self down on the floor, on your back. Flex the left knee. Bring it up to a right angle, and at the same time twist your body at the waist, and bring the left knee over the right leg. Touch your left knee to the floor. Keep your right leg straight, and, most important of all, try to keep your upper body flat on the floor. Reverse the procedure. Repeat five times with each knee for a starter. Work up to two dozen times. You won't be able to keep your upper body flat at first, but it's the trying that does the good work. When you begin doing this exercise, have your arms over your head, in relaxed position. Later, bring your arms down to shoulder level, bending them at the elbows. This is harder. Do the whole thing slowly.

Another general exercise: lie on your left side on the floor, the under arm extended, the other bracing your body. Legs together. Then swing the legs vigorously in a scissor kick, as wide apart as possible, and bring them together again. Do this five times on your left side, then turn over on your right side, and repeat. Work up to twenty times.

Both these exercises are more for the girl who wants to keep in trim than for the really bulgy miss who needs to correct figure faults.

Here are three exercises which combine good results for posture, gracefulness and a supple body. Do one or all if you stand badly, or are awkward and ill at ease when dancing. The first one isn't so much of an exercise as a check-up on posture, especially helpful to those of you who think you're too large behind, but who are really a wee touch sway-backed.

STAND, in few clothes, or none, sidewise in front of your mirror. Stand the best way you know how. Now, imagine that there are four dots on your body: one each on shoulder bone, hip bone, knee joint and ankle. These four dots should be in a straight line. Are they? If the hip dot is too far forward, you're sagging out in front and your bust line is going to blazes, too. If the hip dot is too far back, that's an indication of sway-back. Tuck your buttocks under, turn the pelvic bones out, tense the muscles of your thighs. Your chest automatically comes up, so does your head. Every time you get a chance at a full length mirror, check up and see if the four dots are in place.

Here is an original exercise for grace and suppleness. The French star, Danielle Darrieux, who, gawd knows, has no figure troubles at all, contributes this. She does it for ten minutes a day, just to keep limber. Kneel on the right knee, and extend the left leg back, and to the side, as straight as you can. Reach as far as you can with the left foot. Place the right hand firmly on the floor, arm stiff. Flop your upper body over, limp and relaxed as you can, left arm swung across your chest. Now slowly, as if you were dragging a great weight, bring your left arm and your body and your head up and back. Return to original position and repeat ten times. Reverse. You can do this exercise vigorously, also flinging your arm, head and torso up and back. But do it slowly at first.

Here's one which is kind of fun. It's very good for balance and posture, and serviceable at keeping hips trim, too. Place a matchbox or something small a good big step in front of you, and a good big step behind you. Stand in correct posture, with the four dots in line. Bend your left knee, and extend your right leg straight forward, touching the match box with your toe. Bring the right leg in circle fashion to the side and back, and touch the matchbox behind you, straightening the left leg as you do so. Reverse. The point is to make as wide a circle as you can with each leg without wobbling, and without losing the upright carriage of the upper body.

Before I come to the more popular subject of reducing derriere, thigh, hip and stummick, let me get a word in edgewise to the thin girls. Ginger Rogers, who isn't what you might call thin, nevertheless is apt to lose eight to ten pounds when she's working on a dancing picture. Going at high tension and working so hard, she used to have trouble getting to sleep. She'd find a certain nervous irritability creeping up on her at the end of the day. She found that the following stunts helped a lot. During the day, whenever she could spare five minutes, she'd get on a bed, knees up under her, and chest down as flat as possible—and just stay there. That's all. At first it seems awkward, but you'll quickly find it restful. And it's a swell cure for small backaches, too. At night Ginger, after a warm bath, religiously does the following exercise: lying flat on the back, without a pillow, raise the left arm. Let it flop. Raise the right arm. Let it flop. Raise the legs, one at a time. Let them flop. Sounds silly, but first thing you know, you begin to feel nice and drowsy.

Now, we come to the hard part. Hips, stummick, fanny, thigh, waistline, diaphragm (oh yeah), fat back, and that wail that's always with us, "What can I do about a sagging buzzoom?"

Hips first. This one isn't so difficult to do, and it's mighty efficient. Lie on the floor, on your back, legs straight and together, arms extended, shoulder height, to the sides. Now, with plenty of "umph" swing your left leg up, over across your body, and up to touch your right hand.

Barbara Read was delighted, too, when Edgar Bergen received a special award for creating Charlie McCarthy.

Return to original position, and do the same thing with the right leg. Keep your upper body as flat on the floor as you can while you do this.

Here's a rather difficult hip reducer. Lie on the bed, with your hips just slightly over the edge—not too far over so that you lose your balance. Your legs are in jack-knife position, knees up against your chest. With plenty of that "umph" again, extend the legs out straight, make a wide circle with each of them at the same time, and return to original position. Start out on this "werry, werry easy."

FOR the derriere and upper thigh, here are variations of the same exercise, not difficult to do, but a bit rough on the friendly old hide. Do them only a few times to begin with, working up when your rear and hip can stand the punishment. Sit on the floor, feet flat and knees up, arms behind to brace yourself. Now, if you'll pardon my plain-spikking, bump the rump on the floor. Not too tenderly, but you needn't kill yourself. For the chunk of fat on the upper thigh, lie down on the floor, turned slightly onto the left side, right leg bent up to brace yourself. With a push up from this right foot, raise your hips up off the floor, and then bump down on the rump. Bump five times, then reverse. Five times will be enough for a starter. Later, do it ten times.

A bulge below the belt is assuredly an unsightly sight in any language, but, believe me, here is the cinchiest figure problem of them all. To iron out a hip takes hard work; large or pendulous buzzooms are difficult to reduce and firm. But if too much tummy is your only trouble, take cheer—and get to work.

Is it excess fat or poor muscles that's the trouble, and how can you tell? This way you can tell: pull in your midriff as flat as you can. If you pull it in nice and flat, but have trouble keeping it so, then it's dollars to doughnuts your muscles are flabby. They need toning and strengthening with exercise. If, after pulling your abdomen in as flat as possible, there is still a bulge forward, then it's excess fat, probably aided and abetted by poor muscles, that you must fight. In the latter case, cut down on your food, but don't starve yourself. Watch your liquids, and never drink anything with a meal. Take coffee, tea or water at the end of the meal. Walk about for half an hour after meals. And roll, sister, roll. Lie on your back, and roll over and over across the floor, and put plenty of energy into this simple exercise if you want to smash off that extra fat.

TO tone abdominal muscles, here is a fine exercise which is not strenuous nor difficult. Lie on the floor, on your back, with your feet raised on a stool or some low piece of furniture. Raise your body up until you are in a straight line from head to toe. Hold the position while you count slowly to five, and return to the first position. Pull as hard as you can on those abdominal muscles while you count. You can do this exercise twenty times right off the bat and you'll have no stiffness or soreness next day.

A more difficult exercise is this one which I've written down several times: lie on your back on the floor, raise both legs, keeping the knees straight, to a right-angle position with your body. Lower the legs slowly, but do not let them quite touch the floor. Lift them slowly up again, and repeat, resting after the fifth time. Take your choice of these two exercises or, better still, do them both, taking it easy on the second one until your body is conditioned to exercising. Wear a good girdle. The best type is one which is quite snug and firm, with some strong material in front but, and this may surprise you, no bones. If you bulge in front, it's almost too much to ask of flabby muscles not to slacken at times, and when they slacken, those bones bend into an ugly curve and stick into you. Don't expect a girdle to do everything. It will help, but you must do the rest.

That first tummy exercise, let me add before I forget it, is also good for slimming the waistline.

A figure problem which isn't as common as the above-mentioned concerns the diaphragm. You know, the territory which lies just north of the waistline and south of the bust. Fat has been known to settle on this spot, thickening the waistline, spoiling the look of tightly fitted dresses and giving that "spare tire" look. Dorothy Lamour, whose figure is perfect, goodness knows, has an unholy horror of the unnecessary padding which might some day—who knows?—settle on this portion of her nifty chassis. Somebody told her once that gals who sing are prone to have this figure problem, and Dottie is taking no chances. She religiously does the following special exercise. It reduces the diaphragm and firms the figure generally.

Kneel on the floor. Bend the upper part of your body over, pulling the tummy in, hanging the head down, and making a hill with your back. Now, put your hands firmly on the floor to brace yourself, bring your head and chest up and pull down with your back muscles—all in one motion. Back up, back down, back up, back down, to a rather slow count.

Lessee now, time is getting short. What have I left out? Ah, to be sure. Bust. The knottiest problem of them all. If

Lucky the Bride

WHO KNOWS THIS CHARM SECRET

Lovely women are like flowers — and flower perfumes are the very essence of feminine appeal. The girl who wins her man — and keeps him! — knows the lure of these odeurs. Park & Tilford presents "Lilac," the breath of fragrant spring; and "Cherish," a new floral odeur as spicy as a coquette's glance. Let blossom-time surround you — always!

Delightful, delicate, lingering — sweet "Lilac" and spicy "Cherish" are now at all ten-cent stores in smart tuckaway sizes 10c

PARK & TILFORD
FINE PERFUMES FOR HALF A CENTURY

Lilac AND Cherish PERFUMES

Stops PERSPIRATION FOR ONE TO THREE DAYS

ZIP CREAM DEODORANT

Destroys body odors. Easy to apply; harmless to clothing; and ideal on sanitary napkins. Just a little under the arm and ZIP!—you're free of perspiration odor.

MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

THE BEST TO BE HAD

10c • 25c • 50c

STOPS PERSPIRATION

ZIP

Cream Deodorant

A PHYSICIAN'S PRESCRIPTION

For unwanted hair—ZIP Depilatory Cream

HAIR ON FACE ARMS, LEGS and BODY REALLY GONE!

ZIP

IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT

EPILATOR

Treatment or Free Demonstration at Madame Berthé, 562 Fifth Ave., New York

Simple. Quick. Leaves no trace of hair. With each package of ZIP Epilator, you get a large bottle of BOUQUET JORDEAU, a refreshing fragrance. This is a double value offer. Do not miss it. All good stores.

THE RING OF ROMANCE

IT'S BEAUTIFUL—IT'S NEW—IT'S DIFFERENT

NO OTHER FOTO RING LIKE IT

We will reproduce any snapshot or photograph and mount it in this new and beautiful adjustable ring. White and yellow gold like finishes. State which you prefer. Send no money. Mail photo or snapshot with name and address. No size necessary as ring is adjustable. When postman delivers same pay him fifty cents plus postage. If you wish to save the cost of postage and C. O. D. charges mail fifty cents with order to the

50c

FOTO ART STUDIOS, Dept. B
P. O. Box 1275 Milwaukee, Wis.

"TRY SITROUX TISSUES They're Softer Stronger!"

BOOTS MALLORY, Grand National Pictures Star....

SITROUX (PRONOUNCED SIT-TRUE) face tissues

SITROUX CLEANSING TISSUES

NEXT TIME TRY . . .

10¢ & 20¢ Boxes

SITROUX

(Pronounced "SIT-TRUE")

AT YOUR 5 and 10 cent STORE!

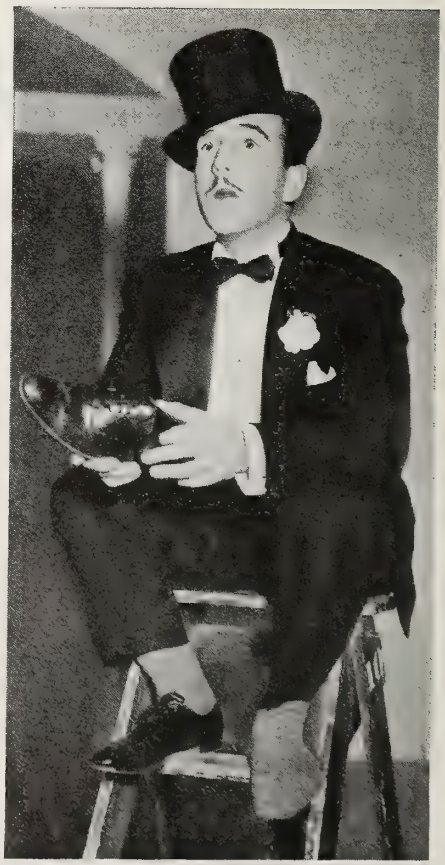
Stars of stage and screen prefer Sitroux Tissues. So soft, yet so much stronger, they hold together! Care for YOUR complexion with Sitroux Tissues. Get a box today!

you're heavy all over and go on a slimming diet, the bust will reduce to some extent along with the rest of your figure. Along with reduction, almost inevitably goes a sagging of the muscles and a spoiling of the youthful contours of the bosom. Sagging muscles also come to the slim and shapely gals who do not maintain correct posture. Having babies and nursing them is looked upon as a sure fire way to ruin youthful contours. That "ain't necessarily so," as is proven by every single movie star who has had a baby. The thing to do about this part of the body is to prevent, rather than to try to cure.

Frankly and honestly, you can't "cure" one hundred percent, though you can do a little to repair the ravages of neglect and self indulgence. The two exercises which follow are dancer's exercises, contributed by Jean Parker. She has one of the prettiest and most feminine figures in Hollywood, and certainly sagging muscles are none of her funeral. She does these stunts simply to keep her graceful and supple body as graceful and supple as it is, but they are stunts which, incidentally, do wonders to keep breast muscles strong, and they will, to some extent, firm muscles which have been neglected.

YOU can stand for the first one. Is that a relief or not? Stand with your weight on the left foot, knee slightly bent, and right leg and foot thrust out to the side. Bend your body to the left, your right arm raised and flung across your face. Now shift your weight onto your right foot, sweep your arm across and up with as fine and graceful a movement as you can, pushing up, up, up, with the right palm. Repeat, five times, then reverse. The amount of good this exercise will do depends upon the vigor and "push" you put into that upward fling of the arm.

This second exercise is more difficult. Take it easy. Sit on the floor, with your feet crossed close in front of you, and your knees extended as far apart as you can get them. Arms are relaxed, with your hands in front of you. Now, bend to the left, letting your left arm rest on the floor. The right arm stretches up over your head, straight, and making a straight line with your body. Keep the arm well back, and close to the side of your head. Come back to the first position and reverse. Do it slowly, and put plenty of "umph" into that uplifted arm.



Here is an exercise for a fat back and fat upper arms. Lie on the floor, your knees bent up under you, arms extended a little way out to the sides. Now lift the friendly old hips up from the floor, and wiggle around on your back and upper arms. Not a very refined looking exercise, but who cares, if it takes the fat off where you want it off?

As usual, umpteen things I wanted to say will have to be left out for that good old editorial excuse, "lack of space." But I do want to add one thing, a caution to "little women" about trying to streamline their figures too much. By "little women" I mean the gals who are five-feet-two or under. To be streamlined in the Hollywood manner, you would really have to be emaciated. Your health would inevitably suffer, and that would be a wicked price to pay for a few pounds. If you have a tendency to be a little "on the plump side" don't, of course, let yourself go and become a little butter ball, but don't on the other hand, sacrifice your health, your disposition, and get that haggard look in the face from lack of food. This goes especially for small women who have passed the first flush of youth. Make it a habit, if you can, to stick to fruit for desserts. Curb yourself with an iron hand when it comes to pie, cake, ice cream and the like. Leave alcohol alone, except for very, very rare "party" indulgence. And learn to be smart about clothes and lines and corsets. If you're not slim, as well as short, beware of the exaggerated boleros which are so popular this season. And wear your skirts a little longer than is currently regarded as fashionable.

Big girls, who run to some "hippiness" and who are told by their pals, "Oh, well, you're tall. You can carry it," should, of course, do their hip exercises and watch their diets, and they can do a lot, too, with proper corsets and clever clothes to conceal their particular figure fault, and play up their good points. Get a girdle that is long enough, big girls, even if it costs a coupla dollars more. Be careful about dresses that have a seam at the waistline. Often as not, these styles are too short in the bodice for you. Similarly, you can't buy cheap blouses and cheap sweaters, since cheap attire of this type is always cut on the skimpy side. A too-short bodice will thicken your waist and add ten pounds to your figure. Avoid too-tight skirts.

And how about a word to the girl who really has a nice figure? Folks are apt to think that she's just too bloomin' lucky to rate any sort of advice. Well, for what it's worth, let me tell this girl not to be afraid of extreme styles. Dramatize your good figure with everything you've got. Beware of only one thing: don't try to over-emphasize your slimness. Up-and-down stripes and too-plain black dresses—no. Play up your slimness in a subtle manner, next time you buy a party dress. Have it full and flowing, full, blousey blouse, and much gathered skirt, all pulled in to a tiny, tiny waistline.

I gotta stop now. Will be doing business at the same stand next month.

A topper and tails may be okay with you, but give Lloyd Nolan the good old days of slouch hats and comfortable cowhides.

THE SKIPPER AND HIS LADIES

(Continued from page 45)

marvelous and cosmopolitan older woman who knows all the ins and outs of Hollywood, and has enough worldly background never to lose her perspective.

Unavoidably, the world being what it is, false and ridiculous rumors got about, attributing Jon's success to his friendship with the Countess di Frasso. The truth is that he never even saw this charming woman until three weeks before "Hurricane" was released. His hair was cut, the picture was in the can before he met her. There was never anything but friendship between them, never the romance that the newspapers tried to imply.

JON HALL has reason to resent this story, for it presents him in a light utterly at variance with his true personality. Jon is not an opportunist. I have never met a man so eager to forge ahead on his own, so determined not to pull those mysterious strings which are supposed to get you places in Hollywood.

Had he wished to pull strings, his life might have been very different; he could have gone to his cousin by marriage, James Norman Hall, who wrote "Hurricane," and ask to be suggested for the part of "Terangi." Instead, he went through almost incredible struggles in Hollywood when his first tiny role in "Charlie Chan in Shanghai" failed to make any dent on the public consciousness. Convinced that he was not the stuff from which film idols are made, the studio let him go, and he started all over again, playing tiny "bit" parts in unimportant "quickies."

Finally, he applied for a technical job on "Hurricane," realizing that his familiarity with the South Seas would qualify him as a technical expert. When he was asked to come to the studio, he thought it was in reference to this job for which he had applied, for he had heard that Joel McCrea had already been chosen to play "Terangi." Even when they screen-tested him, Jon still did not let himself hope too much. He thought perhaps he was being tested to see if he could double for Joel in the diving scenes. Actually, Joel had turned the role down, feeling that he wasn't qualified to play a Tahitian.

The urge to get ahead entirely on his own has dictated Jon Hall's romantic history as well as his career.

"When I was nineteen, and traveling in France, I fell madly in love with a very beautiful girl whose face was framed by soft, prematurely gray hair. In spite of the gray hair, she was young, courageous and gallant, and I knew and adored her for three and a half years. Perhaps we might have married, but she was very wealthy, and I knew that I couldn't be happy unless I could provide beautifully for her," Jon Hall told me.

One day the girl Jon loved, and with whom he had spent some of the happiest and the most miserable moments of his life, because they were so deeply and hopelessly in love, was killed while flying. An aviatrix in the days when flying was far less safe than it is today, she died as gallantly as she had lived, leaving Jon with nothing but a memory.

There followed a long period when it seemed as if icicles had formed in his heart, making it impossible to fall in love again. Then came the struggle to find himself; disillusionment at discovering it would cost more than he could afford to attain the diplomatic career for which he had hoped; after that his return to Tahiti, and finally Hollywood—and Andrea Leeds.

FOR a time they went everywhere together, and were rumored to be madly in love with each other. In a published story he said, "We have such a lot in common. We drive together, swim together, dance together, go to movies, watch 'performances.' We're both here on the Goldwyn lot, you know, both beginning. We have a lot to learn about pictures, and it's fun learning it together."

Now all that is over. He still says of Andrea, "A grand person, and a swell actress." But there's no flame in his eyes as he speaks, and you know that the glory and romance have gone out of their friendship.

There are other rumors now, clustering about his name. For instance, Walter Winchell's girl Friday announced in her column recently, "All those tips you ignored on Jon Hurricane Hall and Dorothy Sperber are correct. They confirmed the news in person at '21' last night."

Vigorously, Jon Hall denies the implication that he is engaged or married to Dorothy Sperber. Emphatically he said,

Tune in the original COURT OF HUMAN RELATIONS—MUTUAL NETWORK every SUNDAY 9 P.M. Eastern Daylight Saving Time

A Big Bottle Costs Little

At Druggists, Barbers And 10¢ Stores

FOR HAIR and SCALP

LUCKY TIGER can be depended upon to do a better job of cleaning up dandruff and checking excessive falling hair. If you are troubled with that miserable scalp itching you will be delighted with the quick relief. Lucky Tiger stops scalp irritations, beautifies the hair and helps you keep it looking its best. Costs little at druggists or barbers. Sold with money-back guarantee.

Lucky Tiger HAIR TONIC For Dandruff

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

KIDNEYS MUST CLEAN OUT ACIDS

Your body cleans out excess Acids and poisonous wastes in your blood thru 9 million tiny delicate Kidney tubes or filters. If functional disorders due to germs in the Kidneys or Bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Backache, Swollen Joints, Acidity, or Burning Passages, don't rely on ordinary medicines. Fight such germs with the doctor's prescription Cystex. Cystex starts working in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Sisstex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co.

MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM

KEEPS YOUR SKIN Young Looking

Mercolized Wax Cream flakes off the surface skin in tiny, invisible particles. Reveals the clear, soft, smooth, young looking underskin. This simple, all-in-one cleansing, softening and beautifying cream has been a favorite for over a quarter century with lovely women the world over. Bring out the hidden beauty of your skin with Mercolized Wax Cream.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily

THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

"It is just Winchell's way of saying that Dorothy Sperber and I were at '21' one night, which is true enough, but doesn't indicate anything serious. As for confirming the 'news,' there was nothing to confirm. There couldn't be, for I am too much attached to Frances Langford."

YOU mean that when you're in Hollywood you see her every night?"

"Well, practically every night. We go to movies, parties and dances together; sometimes I come over to her house and a group of us plays bridge or rummy. When Frances is my partner, you can be quite sure that there are never any arguments over a game of cards."

Frances and Jon met for the first time when he appeared on the "Hollywood Hotel" radio program on which Frances sings regularly. Watching this tiny, half-pint singer, with her brown hair, brown eyes and the shy appeal of her manner, Jon fell in love with her almost at once. Analyzing it now, he says he thinks it's because there is something about Frances that is reminiscent of his mother. Even her mouth has the soft, sweet curve of his mother's mouth.

Because he was so deeply stirred, and going out with Frances would have meant so much to him, Jon was afraid to ask her. In spite of all the beautiful women who must undoubtedly have pursued him, as they pursue every handsome, eligible man in Hollywood, when he found his own affections involved, he hesitated to say anything to Frances, having no reason to believe that she would agree to see him again.

"On one of the few occasions when I did go to the Trocadero," he told me, "we danced together, but I still couldn't summon up the courage to ask if I might see her again. But somehow or other, she struck up an acquaintance with my sister, who invited her to dine at our home one evening. Although I had other engagements, the moment I heard who was coming over, I cancelled everything else.

"Frances is the kindest, most sympathetic girl I have ever met. She has been perfectly wonderful to her family, and I could tell you dozens of grand things she has done, if I didn't know that she would hate to have them publicized. There is no other girl to whom I would rather turn when I am worried or troubled about something. She is so patient, and understanding, and helpful."

"But would you be willing to marry a professional woman?" I asked.

"Why not?" Jon Hall countered. "I think it is good for a woman to have a career. So often it gives her a sense of values, teaches her how to get along with people, and how to live on a given income. Among women who have earned their own way, you are far less likely to find wives who are so wildly extravagant that they drive their husbands to desperation by their unreasonable demands. A woman who has earned her own livelihood knows that money doesn't grow on trees, and that it has to be earned before you can spend it."

NOR would Jon Hall have objections to his wife's continuing her career after they were married, so long as he remained "the man with the long pants."

"Two careers in the home are swell," he said, while I thought of all the people who insist that their marriages had ended because two careers couldn't exist under the same roof. "Many women would be bored to death if they had to give up their careers, and would consequently become very uninteresting and dull marriage partners. As long as a woman is doing something which keeps her interested, she remains interesting."

It's been said that Jon Hall would like to go to Tahiti to live, there to raise a family, and bring up sons and daughters amid the blessed peace of the South Seas. But he denies that such is his idea of the perfect life.

"Tahiti is just like any other place in that, if you spend all your time there, you lose your sense of perspective. For me the ideal existence would be to spend six months a year making pictures, and six in Tahiti, where I am building a home."

"What sort of a picture would you like to make next?" I asked.

"Another adventure picture," Jon said, "but not another 'Hurricane.' Next time I hope I'll have a chance to wear clothes."

TEMPESTUOUS TENOR

(Continued from page 47)

I not only didn't collect salary, but wasn't allowed to do any radio work or make records. Well, finally they changed my part considerably. You know, there is a certain contingent on the coast that feels an actor doesn't know what is good for him, and maybe they're right. They've plenty of proof at that, what with Gable's experience in 'It Happened One Night,' and other shining examples.

"However, I felt the picture was bad for me, and that's one of the reason's I'm doing personal appearances while I'm east. I think the fans should hear me sing, because some of them may think a voice is dubbed in for me. Then, too, if they see me maybe they may like my pictures more. They've been educated to believe that unless you're starred in a picture, you can't be too good. That's one reason 'The Firefly' wasn't such a boost for me. People were used to seeing MacDonald and Eddy starred in all those musicals, so when they saw Jeanette starred, with Jones in the supporting cast, they figured they were being cheated."

Then Allan began reminiscing about his early days. His experiences provide a story the film industry would do well in making.

"You know the way my family discovered I had a voice?" Jones asked, as he fired up his pipe. "I used to imitate my grandfather's voice, and finally Dad, who appreciates music in any form, decided to give me lessons. He was foreman in one of the coal mines in Pennsylvania. After school and summers I worked as a carpenter's helper to make a little extra money. Finally, a few years later, a big strike occurred and I got a job driving the men to work. I picked them up before dawn, and packed a gun I never used, the main reason being I was too darn scared of it!

"One morning the steam shovel operator didn't show up so I took a turn at it, and found I was pretty good. Then I really got into the chips, making about seventy-five bucks a week. Much to my chagrin, the strike was soon settled, and I was out. So, I went back to being a carpenter's helper and worked double shift, sixteen hours a day, to make the extra money. After I tried a couple of schools I was fortunate enough to find a fine teacher.

"Each summer he taught in Paris, so, with the first green sprigs of spring, I'd gather up enough greenbacks to get me across the Atlantic. Once, before departing, I wired Dad to see if he could arrange a concert in my home town. He answered, 'Have two thousand men working for me. Make plans accordingly.' Well, I made money there, and, with what I had saved, hopped a boat for France. With plenty of hard work, and some concerts, I landed a job. You see, I didn't make much money, but it was pretty swell. Maybe that's the reason I accepted an acquaintance's invitation for cocktails one day after a matinee.

"The man was interested in Americans, having married a San Francisco girl. We got to be friends and so he asked me to sing at a party he was giving. There he introduced me to Mrs. Armstrong. Right off the bat she said, 'Young man, what are you going to sing for me?' I told her I hadn't decided. 'Do you mean to say you haven't arranged a program for me?'

"This was getting me down so I excused myself and went over to try the piano. But before the first chord was sounded she told me that the acoustics were bad there, and to move to the other side. I wanted to tell her I knew the room pretty well myself, but instead I changed my place. Later she told me I sang nicely.

"Just before I left, my host brought her over and said, 'Allan, allow me to reintroduce Mrs. Armstrong. She asked that I use her married name so you wouldn't be nervous. I'd like to present Dame Melba!' A good gust of wind, and I'd have been out for the count! She was marvelous, and told me I had a fine future if I'd work hard, always keeping a definite purpose in mind."

I THINK we might venture so far as to remark, en passant, that our tempestuous tenor's career is colorful. At a glance it's easy to see just why Mr. J. is the object of his studio's affections—with plans what am plans! Handsome in a rugged manner, soft spoken and completely charming, he would be valuable to any concern dealing in entertainment. However, as he points out, the talkies have changed the industry from a personality market into one demanding, not only appearance, but talent with opportunity to display it.

"After my return from abroad, I went on the stage. I didn't play Broadway, but I did the sticks in a big way. There wasn't a flop opened on the road that Yours Truly didn't head the cast. We didn't last long, but we returned often, and there wasn't a town boasting a Shubert Theater that didn't know me by sight. It was slowly but surely driving me crazy, so I bought up my contract. It was then I went out to Hollywood and, except for a few uneasy moments, I've been darned happy ever since my movie debut."

THE LOVES OF LAMOUR

(Continued from page 46)

resolutely through two choruses of "Dancing on the Ceiling" in one key, while the orchestra indifferently accompanied her in quite another key. The laughing voices of thoughtless ringsiders completely drowned her timid solo, and continued uninterrupted while she bowed and waited for applause that never came.

Dorothy was in tears as she left the platform. Her humiliation in front of so many stars, her shabby treatment from the audience had crushed all of her hopes and dreams. While a few of us were trying to console her, a young man came over to our table. "I'm afraid I didn't catch your

SMOOTH DRY SKIN NEW HOLLYWOOD WAY

With Same Cream the Stars Use . . .

TAYTON'S CREAM

APPROVED BY Good Housekeeping Bureau

As You Cleanse, It Melts Away Dry, Worn Out Skin Cells That Cause Roughness —Shine

CYNTHIA WESTLAKE ★

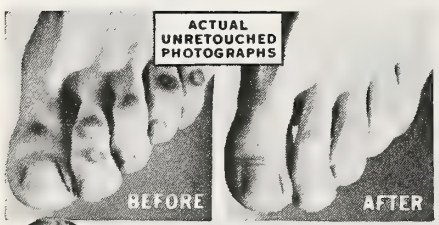
The lovely star playing with Barbara Stanwyck in "A Love Like That," says—"It's Tayton's Cream for me. So wonderful for cleansing and keeping the skin smooth and soft."

Test This Thrilling Beauty Cream UNDER MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Make your skin smoother—more youthful looking like the stars do. Dissolve those dry, rough, powder-catching, scaly skin cells with each cleansing. This wonderful new TAYTON'S CREAM releases precious triple-whipped emollients that not only cleanse deeper, but also lubricate dryness, smooths and softens. Beauty editors are writing about it. Thousands praise it. Get a jar of TAYTON'S CREAM at your 10c store or drug store and make your own dry skin test. Cleanse with it, also use it as a night cream for dryness and roughness. If your skin is not smoother, softer, fresher, younger looking after first application, your money will be refunded. Try it today.

At 10c stores—if your dealer is not yet stocked, ask for manager, or send your order with 25c to us, address below.

FREE New glamour lipstick and face powder the stars use. Send label from 25c jar of Tayton's Cream and 3c stamp with your name and address to Tayton Company, Dept E, 811 West 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif., and generous trial of all five shades of powder and also lipstick will be sent you. State lipstick color.



IMPORTED SIMULATED RING

DIAMOND 15¢

To introduce HOLLYWOOD'S Newest ORIZABA Diamond reproductions. Dazzling, Brilliant. Full of Blazing Fire (worn by Movie Stars). We will send ½ Kt. simulated Brazilian DIAMOND MOUNTED IN SOLID GOLD effect ring as illustrated (looks like $150. gem) for 15c sent postpaid. Money back if not delighted. AGENTS WANTED.

FREE FIELD'S DIAMOND CO.—Dept. MS-510 S. Hill St., Los Angeles, Calif. (2 for 25c.) White "Luck" Elephant. Imported from the Orient, included FREE! Order NOW!

CORNS Here's proof Blue-Jay removes corns Root* and All

Famous model removes painful corns this easy way

IF YOU suffer from painful corns read what Miss Jerry Harding says: "For the past 3 years I have been paring my corns. They always came back bigger, harder, more painful than ever. I decided to try a Bauer & Black Blue-Jay. Blue-Jay was marvelous—the pain stopped instantly and then in just 3 days the corn lifted out Root and All." Blue-Jay is scientific, easy to use. 25¢ for 6. Same price in Canada.

BAUER & BLACK BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

REMOVE CORNS ROOT AND ALL

* A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

name," he said to her, "but Herbie Kay, whose orchestra I manage, wants me to bring you over to his table. He wants to talk to you."

Later that night an exuberant Dorothy burst into our apartment in a frenzy of joy. The words tumbled out excitedly. "I am in love," she said, "gloriously, hopelessly in love, for the first time in my life. His name is Herbie Kay. I think he likes me, too, but if he doesn't now, he soon will." She paused. "He must," she added quietly, earnestly.

Two weeks later the theatrical columns announced that Herbie Kay and his orchestra were featuring a new vocalist by the name of Dorothy Lamour. And when the band departed for engagements in other cities, I lost my room-mate.

For three exciting years Dorothy sang with the orchestra led by the man she loved. She developed poise, learned how to meet people, and to radiate confidence and showmanship in front of an audience. She acquired a wardrobe that was smart and becoming. Occasionally the gossip columns reported that she and Herbie were engaged, even secretly married. I was convinced that Dame Fortune had singled Dorothy out as her particular pet. Here she was, in the constant company of the man she loved, doing the work she had always dreamed of doing, and earning a good salary for the first time in her life.

BUT one night I received a telegram which led me to believe Dorothy had suddenly lost her reason. "Have resigned from orchestra," it read. "Arriving La Salle Street Station eight a. m. tomorrow. Please meet me. Love, Dottie."

That dreary, rainy morning is still fresh in my mind. A red-eyed, unhappy girl greeted me. Over steaming coffee in the the station lunch-room she recited her tale of woe. She knew instinctively that Herbie loved her as deeply as she loved him. But Herbie, manlike, did not know. He didn't even suspect. She had been with him too constantly. She had been too completely at his beck and call. He had never been given the chance to miss her, to realize he would be a lot less happy without her. Working with his orchestra every night, rehearsing every afternoon, she had had no opportunity to keep him guessing. He took her presence and her nearness for granted.

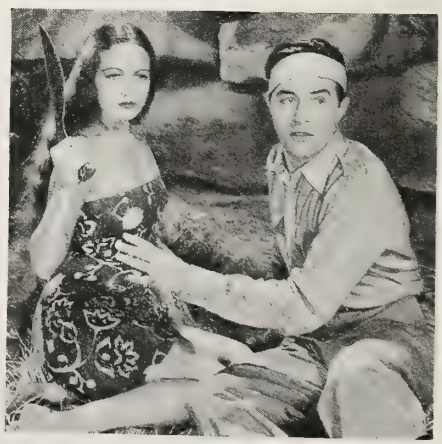
"He was very angry when I gave him notice," she confided, "but I feel I am doing the wise thing. Perhaps it is mad to throw over a good job and a steady income, to return to uncertainty and poverty, but I must make him realize he loves me. Love and marriage are the only vital things in a woman's life, and they are worth enduring hardships for."

Almost a year passed, and Dorothy struggled on, accepting whatever engagements she could get. Finally she drifted to New York. There were days when she actually went hungry, but she was too proud to appeal for help, too stubborn to admit defeat. Occasionally a letter came from Herbie. She always waited several weeks before replying. And she took care that her letters were kind, but cool and impersonal.

Gradually managers began to sit up and take notice of the torch singer with the low, emotional voice and the radiant good looks. The Stork Club signed her for a short engagement. The National Broadcasting Company retained her as featured artist on a small sustaining program. But as the months went by, Dorothy began to think that perhaps Herbie did not love her, after all. She made one last desperate move. Receiving a letter from him, she returned it unopened, together with a brief note saying she felt it would be best to stop their correspondence, and to forget that they had ever known each other.

It took Dorothy Lamour almost four years to prove to Herbie Kay that he really loved her, but it took him exactly two minutes to finally see the light when that fateful letter arrived. He called his first violinist. "Take charge of the orchestra," he ordered. "I have to fly to New York immediately, but I'll be back in a few days."

And that's how it happened that one evening a very gay voice greeted me over the telephone. "Dorothy," I screamed, "are you phoning from New York? What in the world has happened? Are you all right?"



In a confidential whisper, Dorothy first swore me to secrecy, then told me she was in Chicago. I was to hop in a cab at once, and meet her at a certain obscure restaurant. I arrived breathless, and there was Dorothy, in a suit three sizes too big for her, no hose, and evening slippers. Herbie and Roz Metzger, his best friend, were with her, grinning from ear to ear.

Bit by bit I heard the whole story. Herbie had flown to New York, begged Dorothy to marry him. She had been at work in evening clothes, but he had rushed to one of the Broadway dress shops and bought her a travelling suit, so they could leave on the next plane. They eloped to Waukegan that very night, and Roz and I acted as witnesses.

Dorothy intends to keep Herbie's love just as she won it in the first place—by not letting him take her for granted. I sincerely believe that is why she continued to struggle for professional success even after her marriage. It has been almost three years since those "I do's" were spoken, and, despite frequent separations, caused by their careers, they are more in love today than ever. Herbie is "Grandpa" to Dorothy, she is "Dolly Face" to him.

Dorothy's one and only show of temperament at her studio occurred a short time ago when she asked to be allowed to appear with her husband's orchestra at the Cocoanut Grove. Shortly before that the studio had turned down a personal appearance tour for her at $5,000 per week, so she was told kindly but firmly not to go into the Grove. Dorothy pleaded. They remained adamant. Finally they said, "Look here, what means more to you, anyhow, your career or love?" "Love," she answered stormily. She had them there, so they consented to the appearance. She will not be advertised, because she wants Herbie to have all the publicity and advertising.

Dorothy's other consuming love is for her mother, Mrs. Carmen Lamour, who brought her into the world twenty-four

The sultry Dorothy Lamour will fight for "Her Jungle Love"—and no wonder when it's handsome Ray Milland.

Do you get "poodle permanents"? Hair all frizzy? Brittle, dry hair is usually the cause. You can overcome this by a simple home treatment. First, stop using all alkaline, sudsing chemicals. Instead try proved oil and scalp tonic treatment. Try Admiracion Soapless Shampoo. It not only cleans the hair safely and thoroughly but does not steal the natural scalp oils that keep your hair strong, elastic and healthy. Easy to use, Admiracion is a beauty treatment approved by thousands of beauticians. If you'd like to have a sample, send three 3-cent stamps. ADMIRACION LABORATORIES, HARRISON, N. J.

If you have finished with your October 1937 MODERN SCREEN, will you please send it to the New York Public Library, 5th Ave., New York City, in order that they may complete their files?

BACKACHE—
Leg Pains May Be Danger Sign

Of Tired Kidneys—How To Get Happy Relief

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

for your Stockings

To be certain you will continue to look as lovely as the minute you set out—carry RUN-R-STOP in your purse. One drop will stop a run or snag permanently. Once used you will never want to be without it. A HANDSOME RED & BLACK VANITY protects the tube in purse. Ask for it at drug, department, shoe and 5 and 10c stores. 10c

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping as advertised therein

RUN-R-STOP

NEW FREE OFFER Send 10c for BATH-O-MILK. Camille's new real milk beauty bath and we'll also send FREE a purse-size case of Nail White in a new convenient form. Address Dept. M years ago in the charity ward of New Orleans' Touro Infirmary. Their mother and daughter devotion is stronger than most, partly because of the hardships they have weathered together, and partly because Mrs. Lamour is still a young woman, capable of being a good companion as well as a grand mother.

CAMILLE INC. — 49 East 21st Street, N. Y. C.

When Dorothy was just an infant, Mrs. Lamour toiled as a cashier, cook and saleswoman in order to provide her baby with life's barest necessities. Today Dorothy is determined to repay her mother for those early sacrifices. When Dorothy began her first picture, and received a definite contract, she wrote me, "The first thing I'm going to do with my salary is to buy a fur coat for mother. She has never owned one."

Ironically, her salary on that picture, "Jungle Princess," went for no such happy purchase. Before the completion of the film, her mother was rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital for a major operation. The studio was unable to grant Dorothy a leave of absence at that time, and every day she would rush to the hospital for stolen minutes between shots. The money intended for finery just about paid hospital and doctor bills, but Dorothy was more than rewarded by her mother's complete recovery.

Now, when I see Dorothy and Mrs. Lamour, resplendent in mink at an opening night, I feel a tug at my heart-strings. I am so happy for them in their hard-earned glory.

The sultry, primitive Jungle Princess of the Cinema happens to be one of Hollywood's most civilized girls, a wife who loves wisely and well, a loyal and devoted daughter, and a friend who has not changed with the years.

FUNNIEST GAL IN TOWN

(Continued from page 50)

would stay until she finished, she would cook for them. So they stayed, and Marie emoted.

Anticipating what was to come, her audience even gave her applause, sometimes so much of it she couldn't finish. But Marie was content. She was acting. And no star ever took an encore with more gracious ease than Marie took those bribed curtain calls.

The denouement however, was sudden and unexpected. Marie prepared an unusually long repertoire one day, and kept her audience an entire afternoon. They retaliated by making heavy demands. Marie strove to please, but in doing it, stripped her mother's cupboard of everything in sight, and borrowed all she could get from most of the neighbors. That was the end of the Little Theatre Movement for Marie.

From the moment she decided to be an actress, Marie never wavered from her course. She mapped out a plan of action, and stuck to it through everything. There are several highlights in her girlhood that bear the telling.

She was born and reared in the little farming-town of Anaheim, but she was wholly movie-minded. She read avidly all of the fan magazines, and attended the neighborhood theatre regularly. She decided that if she had some sort of a specialty, she would stand a better chance of becoming an actress.

At the ripe age of ten, she became acquainted with a little girl who could dance. Marie's parents could not afford to give

DON'T BE A "MARKED" GIRL!

DISFIGURING BLEMISHES NOW SO EASILY CONCEALED!

SKIN BLEMISHES need no longer be embarrassing. Untold numbers of smart girls have learned this simple secret of always having clear-looking, lovely skin despite unexpected or permanent blemishes. HIDE-IT conceals pimples, birthmarks, freckles, scars and all discolorations. Waterproof—won't easily rub off—lasts all day until removed. Four flesh shades. Cream or Stick $1 at Department and Leading Drug Stores. 10c size at Ten Cent Stores.

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST

Apply HIDE-IT on the blemish. Let dry. Dust with powder, apply usual make-up.

Now! See how completely blemish has been concealed. See how marvelously clear and flawless yourskinlooks. You'll never be without HIDE-IT!

Hide-it
HIDES SKIN BLEMISHES

Clark-Millner Co., Dept. 15-G, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago
Please send me free Story Booklet "Marked Girl." I enclose 10c (Canada 15c) for sample "Hide-it" ☐ Cream ☐ Stick.
Check shade: ☐ Light ☐ Medium ☐ Brunette ☐ Sun Tan.

Name.....Town.....
Address.....State.....

ROUND WATCH INCLUDED FREE WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE. SMART! TINY! RICH!

Simulated diamonds set in Lifetime Sterling (U. S. Govt. Standard) Rich 1/30, 14k Gold.

1939 Queen Quality Watch. Dial small as a Dime. Jeweled. Accuracy Guaranteed.

Watch included FREE with every ring ordered during SALE and paid for on our easy two monthly $2 payment plan (total only $4). No extra charge for the watch. Wear 10 days ON APPROVAL! Send NO Money. Mail postcard now. We pay postage. We trust you. Your package comes at once by RETURN MAIL.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO.
Dept. C-327, Newton, Mass.

after every bath use Hush and be Sure

Your bath is only half of keeping fresh and sweet. To complete your toilette get the HUSH Habit. You'll stay "bath-fresh" for hours longer. Wise girls find uses for all 3 convenient types.

CREAM—Pure, soothing to skin, harmless to dress fabrics.

LIQUID—Instant, protects 24 hours. Regular, for 1 to 3 days.

POWDER — Ideal for Sanitary Napkins. Keeps feet and shoes fresh.

25c 50c—10c size at 10c counters

With
Ginnie-Lou
FACIAL CLEANSING PADS

A tiny beauty shop right in your purse. "Minute facials" ready to cleanse and revive your face whenever, wherever you want them. Compact size—easy to use as a powder puff—and so very beneficial for your skin. Carry Ginnie-Lou Cleansing Facial Pads always for early morning use—throughout the day—at night before retiring. Get Ginnie-Lou Facial Pads today. 10¢ to $1 at cosmetic counters.

Other Products by
Ginnie-Lou
Nail Polish Remover Pads
Bob Pins...Creme Rouge

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

Good For Kidney and Bladder Weakness

LOOK AND FEEL YOUNGER

ALL over America men and women who want to cleanse kidneys of waste matter and irritating acids and poisons and lead a longer, healthier, happier life are turning to GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules.

So now you know the way to help bring about more healthy kidney activity and stop getting up often at night. Other symptoms are backache, irritated bladder—difficult or smarting passage—puffiness under eyes—nervousness and shifting pains.

This harmless yet effective medicine brings results—you'll feel better in a few days. So why not get a 35¢ box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules today—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—Don't accept a counterfeit—Ask for and get GOLD MEDAL.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS
(SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results also FREE.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly, embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. PRINT NAME PLAINLY. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold in Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores.

Lake Laboratories, Box 6, Northwestern Station, Dept. 607, Detroit, Mich.

her lessons so she bargained with her little friend to teach her a routine.

As soon as she had perfected her dance, Marie went to Hollywood, ostensibly to visit a cousin. However, on the second day of her visit, she slipped up the street to the nearest movie studio. She even succeeded in climbing over the fence, but she plopped into the office of an executive who was feeling low.

She closed the door behind her and went into her routine, but the executive was annoyed. He couldn't see any talent in the big-eyed, slim-legged little girl. He saw only an interruption in his busy day. He asked her for her phone number and somewhat irately demanded that her relatives come and get her. It was a cruel ending to her adventure, but it didn't make her relinquish her ambitions.

On the contrary, during that brief moment on the lot, she caught a glimpse of several beautifully gowned girls in make-up, and actor-knights in armor. That was all she needed to crystallize her aims. From that day, she knew beyond the shadow of a doubt that some day she would be a movie actress. The route was the only thing that remained dubious to her.

TWO years later, she discovered that a contest for a Jean Harlow double was being held at Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Marie entered it.

She had white-blonde hair, and a small heart-shaped face, so it was not difficult for her to double for Jean. She wore a slinky, black velvet gown and a heavy necklace of pearls. In approved "vamp" fashion, she started to mince past the row of judges. Right then and there her necklace broke. And every one of those judges got down off the stand and helped her to find her beads.

She won first prize, but it availed her nothing. She had only two days to spend in Hollywood. The prize was a dual affair, being a visit to Jean Harlow's home, and a free trip to Catalina. Nobody seemed to know how to get her out to Jean Harlow's home, so she never went. It rained the next day, so she couldn't avail herself of the free trip to Catalina.

However, she had the satisfaction of knowing that she had won first place in the contest. Although sometimes she wonders if her beads didn't have more to do with it than her beauty.

There is one thing about Marie that stands out. She never fails to achieve her aim, but there is always a note of pathos tangled up in her success. She is very romantic, as comedians usually are, but the great moments in her life, the ones that should have been beautiful, have always been tempered with the ludicrous.

Like the moment she stepped forward with a bouquet of roses in her arms to receive her diploma, when she was graduating from Miss Page's School for Girls. Marie stepped too close to the footlights. When she reached out her hand for the diploma, she tumbled head first down into the orchestra pit.

She met the man she has promised to marry, under the most embarrassing circumstances. She had run out of gas and stalled her car half-way up the hill to her home. Traffic was securely blocked both up and down. While cars were honking to right and left of her, and she was trying to straighten out the tangle, Nick Grinde looked out of the window of his hillside home and saw her. The sight of the slim, big-eyed little blonde, waving her arms and shouting in an approved traffic-cop manner appealed to his sense of humor. She is a funny little thing.

Nick straightened out the traffice jam, and put some gas in the tank of her car. That was the beginning. Marie felt sorry for him, living all alone in that big house of his, so she decided to be neighborly. She began to cook special dishes and take them over to him.

Nick liked everything she brought, and soon he found himself advising her about her career. Before either of them knew it, they had fallen in love. Some fine day, they will be married. And I am sure they will be happy, too.

Sympathy is a strong ingredient in Marie's make-up. She is sorry for everything and everybody, always has been. When she was eleven years old, a gray alley cat had a litter of kittens. Marie felt so sorry for them, when she saw how unkempt and dirty they were that she caught them, took them into the bathroom, and tubbed them all.

The bath almost finished the little kittens, and her mother had to help bring them around with hot toddy and various first aids. But, when they recovered, they were as beautiful as the grandest Angora in the neighborhood.

Marie's constant dream is to be the heroine in the immortal classic, "Camille," and to have a good looking leading man like George Brent. She thinks George is about the grandest, handsomest man on the screen, although she has only a speaking acquaintance with him. If she doesn't get to play "Camille," she hopes some day to be cast as the heroine in a drama, with at least three handsome leading men!

She'll succeed too. She always does win her point in the end. She is studying all the time to make herself ready for more serious work, when it comes her way. Meantime she has won for herself the coveted role opposite Jimmy Cagney in "Boy Meets Girl." And you're going to laugh loud and long at the comedy of this beautiful little blonde, with the dumb baby stare and the long-lashed big, brown eyes.

So much has been said and written about them, it is trite to mention that she has the longest lashes in Hollywood—probably in the world. Truthfully, they are so long she curls them back in order to see clearly. While she is at it, she breaks another record. She has the smallest waist in Hollywood.

You'd like Marie. She is something new under the sun. And although I like to laugh at her on the screen, I honestly hope that some day, she will reach her farthest goal, be "Camille" or some equally tragic lady—and have three handsome leading men!

Ann Dvorak, making a success of her picture come-back, is at home as a gangster's moll, a female horse-trainer, or a lady of quality.

SUIT YOURSELF

(Continued from page 49)

five times so that they can't possibly pull out, the legs are reinforced with gum rubber (more resilient and longer wearing than ordinary elastic), and the gussets are lined with Kleinert's softex to insure longer wear. The print in these suits is one of the gay hand-blocked California souvenir designs so popular this year. Other attractive prints are the Hollywood Studio print (complete with cameras, Kleig lights, camp chairs and other studio impedimenta), a smart fish print, and a variety of colorful floral designs.

AS a change from the maillot type of suit, Marie Wilson has chosen a two-piece dressmaker suit, bra and shorts of cotton, with Indian motif design (also very good this season). The waistband of the flared shorts is lastex gathered. Marie's figure leaves nothing to be desired, but perhaps yours does, and you're not at your best in a snugly fitted maillot. If this is so, then Marie's suit is the best type for you. However, if you simply can't resist the smooth, shining effect of satin lastex, you can have it in a solid color princess style suit, jersey lined. If you have a full figure, you undoubtedly know what wonders the princess line will do for you!

When you shop for your new bathing suit, there are two other Catalina suits (not shown here) that you must see. "Puckerette" is a one-piece shirred cotton lastex in smart diagonally striped designs, more closely gathered round the midriff to give a flattering form-fitting effect. "Miss Ca-ta-lina" is a one-piece model of wool and lastex in gay floral designs, lovely on a youthful figure.

This combining of wool and lastex does away with the old worry of having your suit stretch or sag, particularly when it dries on the figure. Your wool suit now fits you as well as your foundation garment, with the same two-way stretch. Rochelle Hudson's smart wool and lastex maillot fits her lithe lovely figure perfectly. It's made of Jantzen's new Wisp-o-weight fabric, in which soft lightweight wool is combined with lastex yarn. This suit takes its name, "Cherie," from the four red cherry buttons down the front. Dixie Dunbar, the cute little dancing star, sets off her trim little figure with the "Vee Tuck," also made of Wisp-o-weight. There are three different types of this fabric. In addition to wool and lastex in solid colors, you can have either silk worsted or pure silk, and lastex in underwater prints, tropical flowers, or California figures.

If you want to be conservative, you'll like the dusty pink B.V.D. suit that Eadie Adams has chosen. A nice note of contrast is added to the perfectly plain body of the suit by the white knitted straps. On the other hand, if you prefer a suit that's more of a novelty, if you're young and gay, you'll like B.V.D.'s "Fore and Aft," which is made in two contrasting colors, front and back, and is very smart and nautical looking, made up with navy front, red back and white rope halter.

Of course, you'll realize that the suits shown and described for you here are just a few of the many, many new and attractive models available. All these suits are priced to meet the moderate budget and are sold at department stores throughout the country.

Take your choice—skirtless maillot or suit with half, quarter or full skirt; one, two or three-piece suit; satin lastex, plain or printed; silk or wool jersey; shirred cotton lastex; all-wool in brilliant floral or undersea designs; or solid colors in Bahama (royal) blue or aqua, dusty pink or Rio Red, maize or lamplight, white or navy; California, Egyptian, Indian, fishnet or Mickey Mouse prints—the selection is a wide one. Take your choice, suit yourself, get into the swim with fashion and Hollywood in a smart new bathing suit!

MR. B. GOES TO TOWN

(Continued from page 8)

about the worst picture breaks I thought it possible to rate, but felt that before I was entirely washed up, I would like to do one role that I liked. A friend told me about 'The Awful Truth' and said that they were looking for someone off the lot to play a good part in it. I wasn't familiar with the story so I couldn't tell exactly what it was going to be like. Anyway I promised to see Harry Cohen about it at once.

"I've been with him so long that I knew just what to do. In fact, I figured just about what he would say. He had promised me something better than the stiff characters that had been my lot, so I figured that if I told him I knew the story and it was just the sort of part I could do, he'd pick up the phone and tell the director he had a swell idea, and the job would be mine."

Ralph began chuckling as he explained, "I went in the next day and said, 'Mr. Cohen, I hear you're going to do "The Awful Truth" and are looking for someone off the lot to play the part of the westerner. I've done the play and it's just the sort of thing I can do well, and I should have the part, especially since you've promised me a good role. It's just the thing we were talking about so I think it's only fair that you give it to me.' Cohen reached for the phone and said, 'Get me the producer! Hello, there! Say I've got a swell idea.'

"Then I figured, since the job was mine, I should know something about the story, so I asked for a script. They had written the part as an Englishman for Roland Young, but he would have none of it. Once I read it, I tried to do the same thing.

I WAS in a spot. Here I had begged for the role, and now I'd give anything to get out of it. Well, my pride didn't hold out long for I decided it was my career, so at least I should be washed up doing something I liked, which certainly wasn't 'The Awful Truth.' Back to Harry I stalked, but he couldn't and wouldn't understand how I could beg for a role and then turn it down. I was one smart guy, and that was that!

The most EXPENSIVE SHOE IS SOMETIMES BABY'S WORST ENEMY

X-Ray of baby's foot in expensive shoe which mother wouldn't throw away.

The worst enemy of baby's foot is an outgrown shoe. Babies outgrow shoes long before they wear them out. When mothers buy expensive shoes and then make baby wear them long after they are too short, baby's precious feet are RUINED.

Buy inexpensive Wee Walkers and change to new ones often. They have every practical feature you find in expensive shoes. Full-sized, roomy, correctly proportioned. Live-model lasts give real barefoot freedom. Soft, pliable leathers—good-looking styles. Distributed at low cost through nation-wide stores maintaining a small profit policy. The stores listed have or will gladly get the size and style you want. See them—compare them—in the Infant's Wear Department. For baby's sake accept no substitutes.

ACCEPTED by PARENTS MAGAZINES

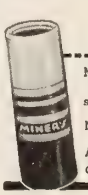
W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co
H. L. Green Co., Inc., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Charles Stores
Isaac Silver & Bros. Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.
F. & W. Grand Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.
Schulte-United Stores

NIL

SAFELY CHECKS PERSPIRATION ODORS

Keep yourself dainty and fresh at all times with a tiny dab of NIL. You'll prefer NIL for six good reasons:

1. Large generous jar costs only 10c.
2. Safely checks perspiration odors. Carries the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval.
3. Will not rub off or harm delicate fabric.
4. Soft, greaseless; dries instantly.
5. Non-irritating even after shaving.
6. Ideal for sanitary napkin use.



10c AT LEADING 10c STORES
NIL LABS., Toledo, Ohio

That 'come hither' complexion, irresistible to men . . . envied by all girls . . . heretofore exclusive with screen stars, can be yours with the new MINER'S THEATRICAL MAKE-UP. A startling new make-up that imparts natural satin-smoothness to your skin . . . velvety . . . luminous . . . lasts hours. Use it and have a "star's" complexion of your own.

HANDY STICK (3 shades) at all 10¢ stores . . . or mail coupon

MINER'S Theatrical MAKE-UP FOR STREET WEAR

MINER'S, 40 E. 20th St., Dept. MD-7, New York, N. Y.
Enclosed find 10¢ for Miner's Theatrical Make-up for street wear.
Name_____
Address_____
Check shade desired: PEACH ☐ RACHEL ☐ BRUNETTE ☐

LESS WORK ON WASHDAY with Staley's STARCH CUBES

Fine laundry starch in exact-measure CUBES. No guess. No chance of clothes being too stiff, too flimsy. No sticking iron. No spots or scorched streaks. Saves ⅓ ironing time. Next washday, use Staley's Starch CUBES—avoid needless fatigue and vexation.

A. E. Staley Mfg. Co.
Decatur, Ill.

REPAIR THINGS!

Toys, Books
Furniture
China, Wood
Glassware
Paper, Tile
Porcelain

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores

Free for Asthma During Summer

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is hot and sultry; if heat, dust and general mugginess make you wheeze and choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a life-time and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co. 207-C Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara St. Buffalo, N. Y.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

"Finally Leo McCary called me for work. 'Bring a lot of clothes as we don't know how we'll dress this fellow.' Oh incidentally, 'Can you sing?' Nope. 'Can you carry a tune?' Never have. 'Good. You'll sing "On the Lone Prairie" with Irene Dunne.' So we took that scene first.

"By the end of the day I found Irene even unhappier than I was, and doing her best to get out of the picture. At that, Cary Grant's feelings made us both look like a couple of overjoyed kids. He had tried every way possible to leave, even offering to do a picture free if they'd let him out of this one.

"Cary stopped me and said, 'I'll tell you what, Ralph, let's get them to let me do your role and you play mine!' But, I wouldn't go for that!

"Each day Leo came on the set, with a little brown paper up his sleeve—the day's shooting! We worked it out later. It got to be a gag after the first day or so. Irene was completely miserable, saying, 'But, I've never worked this way before and I don't know what to do.' But, Leo knew, and after about four days, the story suddenly came to life. We three began apologizing, first to the producer, then, the director and so on to the grips and props. As things turned out, it was my lucky break, and it certainly taught me a lesson.

"Another arrangement Harry and I have is that I'm to direct some day. Recently, Jack Cohen told me they were doing a test of some youngster for the part of the xylophone player in 'You Can't Take It With You.' Here, I figured, was a good opportunity to begin directing. I wouldn't have the responsibility of a production on my shoulders and could try out some things I theorized upon. He agreed. I met the youngster, and found his wife was to assist him in the test.

"I don't know whether you're familiar with the usual procedure of a test? Usually they sit you on a stool, have you say something and move in for a close-up and it's finished. None of this for me! No, mine was to be a miniature production. I combined some of the scenes from the play. The day of the test I talked with the kid only to find him so nervous that none of his readings made sense. I told them to get the set ready while we went over to the make-up department.

AFTER about an hour with him, I realized it was all pretty futile, as the boy had no experience and was so anxious to make good that he was defeating himself. Then I did a thing all actors resent—told him how to read his lines. Suddenly I realized in doing this I wasn't fair to the kid, nor to the company. For, once he was on the set, Frank Capra, who is to direct the picture, would surely send him home.

"Well, we spent five hours making that test. I didn't feel too encouraged. After it was cut we went to the projection room where Jack asked me what I thought of his possibilities. Needless to say, I spoke frankly, told him my honest opinion, and then the lights were lowered and we saw that test. When it was over, Jack cried, 'What are you worried about? Why, it's marvelous! He's a natural and worth a seven year contract!'

"Well, he was right. It was a knockout. The kid was a wow. He looked up at just the right times, lighted his cigarette at the right moment, and everything was perfect. That boy certainly went to town! What a break for him, for now he'll have confidence and deliver," Bellamy continued with a chuckle.

All of which goes to show that you can never tell how far a frog can jump by looking at him. Neither can you tell when your worst assignment may turn out to be your best break. For, in the case of Mr. Bellamy, the one film he felt would finish his picture life gave him a new lease, and such a boost that, in the last few months he's chalked up three good ones, yet to be released.

"They can't stop me now—if it's hard work that counts! I'm all set for it, and happy as a kid with his first jack knife," Ralph Bellamy concluded with a smile.

The Coogans before being presented at court! At Jackie's wedding, to be exact. Brother Robert and Mrs. Arthur Bernstein, the groom's Ma, congratulate him and his bride, Betty Grable.

UNSIGHTLY HAIR WASHED AWAY

with

X-BAZIN

Cream

No more hair on legs or under arms. Leaves skin smooth and lovely. Giant size tube at drug and department stores. Trial size at all 10¢ stores.

OVER 10 MILLION TUBES SOLD!

IN EYE MAKE-UP WHEN NEW LOTION CLEARS EYES

Eye make-up beauty is doubled when you change dull, red, veined eyes (due to fatigue, late hours, exposure, etc.) to clear, white, sparkling loveliness with just two drops of Eye-Gene. Formula of two eye specialists. Approved by Good Housekeeping. Soothing . . . refreshing! Purse size at all 10c stores. Economy size at all drug stores. EYE-GENE

THE PRINCE DEMANDS HIS PRICE

"I shall marry a man I loathe." Beautiful Diana Lord told her social-climber mother. "I shall become the Princess Faria, and you will be happy."

Her promise was given —her doom was sealed! Nothing would ever matter again! And then . . . out of the exquisite Venetian night, a mysterious stranger appeared upon her balcony. In an instant Diana knew the very reason for her being . . .

Don't miss "The Prince Demands His Price," a complete, book-length novel, in the July issue of

SWEETHEART STORIES • 10c

July issue — On Sale Now

HIZZONER THE MAYOR

(Continued from page 6)

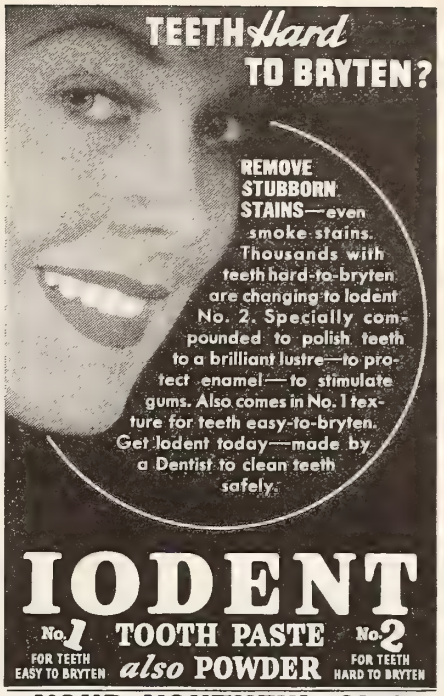
who died in a psycopathic ward! Another asked if I could possibly be Dogface Nelson, her long last brother! Then there was the time some lady came up to me on a set, looked at me carefully and asked, 'Aren't you Hugh Herbert?' I confessed, and she exclaimed, 'Oh! my heavens,' and, rushed away."

A wise man once said, "All big men are essentially simple." We feel Hugh Herbert should have a front seat in this class. Not merely because he's one of our foremost comedians, but, in the words of his fellow actors, "He's one of the best." Even that villainous Basil Rathbone won't pass him without stopping for a kidding remark.



"One day Olivia De Havilland and I were sitting on the set swapping a few when Basil came over. You know how lovely Olivia is, and just as sweet as she is pretty, too. Well, along comes this Rathbone and says, 'Olivia, I'm surprised and disappointed to find you in such low company.' I sniffed around both sides of my chair, then looked up and said, 'I thought I smelled ham, woo-woo!' That started things!"

Yes, our Mr. Herbert is snappy on the comeback and has a way of winning the argument with a good-natured wisecrack. He's a philosopher—knows people as he knows his job.

So, you see why Hugh Herbert is one of those ever-in-demand thespians, for he does what he does better than anyone else. Lack of jobs will never be the cause of his giving a lusty "Woo-Woo!"

And, what's more, they say she can act! We're speaking of luscious Harriet Haddon.

YOUR YOUTHFUL SKIN A MASS OF PIMPLES?

Take steps now to help keep your blood free of skin-defiling poisons

Stop being an object of shame and scorn among your friends. Find out what often causes those repulsive-looking pimples . . . and get rid of them.

Between the ages of 13 and 25 your body is changing rapidly. Important glands develop. These gland changes upset your system. Waste poisons from the intestines are often thrown into the blood stream and are carried to your skin, where they may bubble out in ugly, shameful hickies.

You must help keep your blood free of these skin-irritating poisons. Thousands have done so, just by eating Fleischmann's Yeast. The millions of tiny, living plants in each cake of this fresh food act to help you fight pimple-making poisons at their source—in the intestines, before they can get into the blood. Many get amazing results in 30 days or even less! Get Fleischmann's Yeast now. Eat 3 cakes a day—one before each meal—until your skin is clear and fresh again.

CORNS REMOVED WITH CASTOR OIL PREPARATION

Say goodbye to clumsy corn-pads and dangerous razors. A new liquid, NOXACORN, relieves pain fast and dries up the pestiest corns, callus and warts. Contains six ingredients including pure castor oil, iodine, and the substance from which aspirin is made. Absolutely safe. Easy directions in package. 35c bottle saves untold misery. Druggist returns money if it fails to remove corn. NOXACORN

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home, not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. $1.35, for sale everywhere

FREE SAMPLE

BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. Dept. M78
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.

Name .....
Street .....
City ..... State .....

GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

THE TRI-GUILD BALL

Writers, directors and players at their colorful, annual get-together

Producer Darryl Zanuck between two pretty players—Dolores Del Rio and Virginia Bruce.

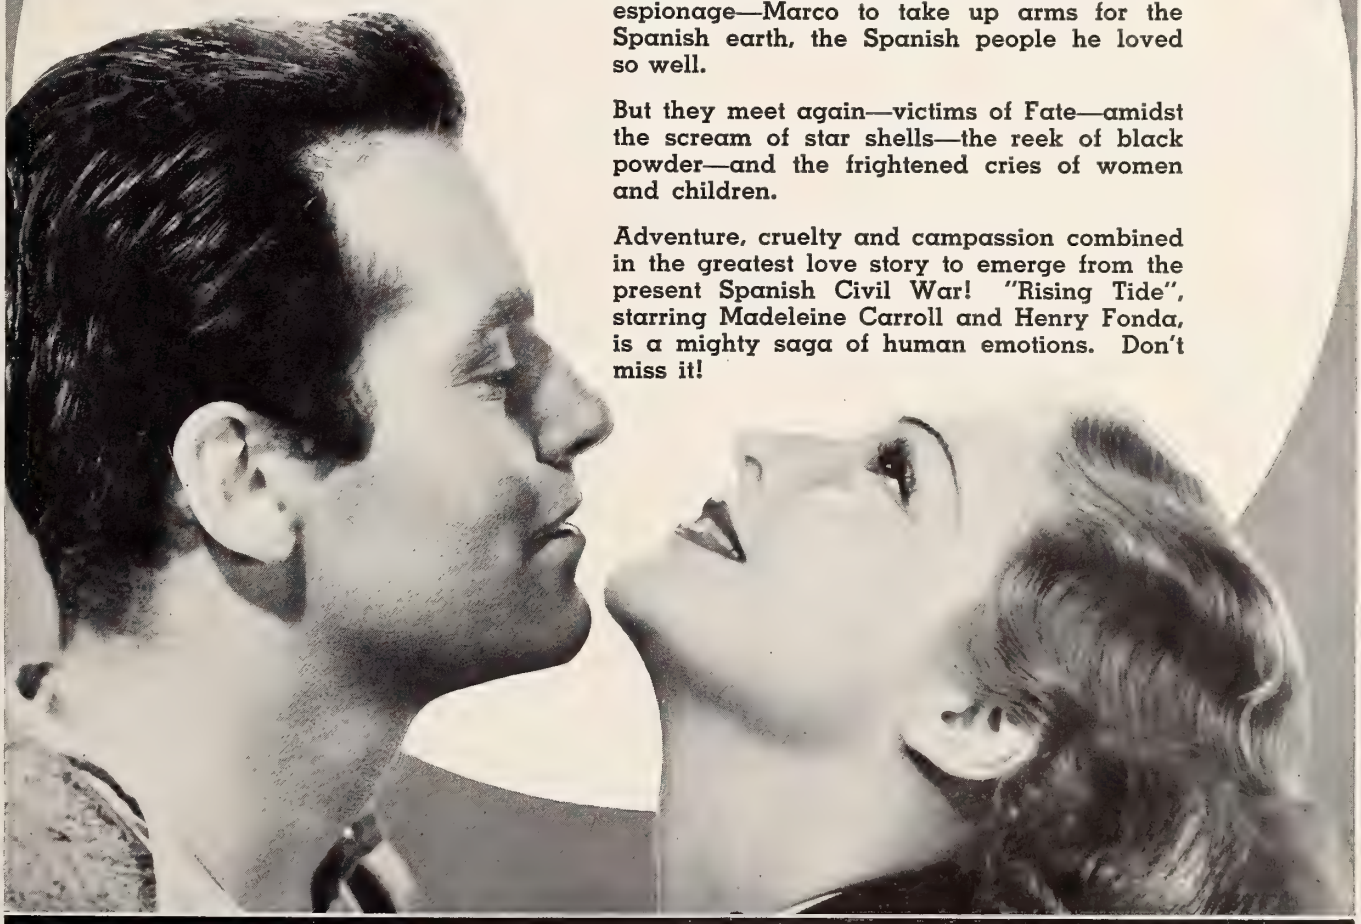
Troupers tried and true—Edward Everett Horton and lovely Irene Rich.

Bob Montgomery and his pretty Missus, Betty, with Walter Connolly.

Miriam Hopkins talks things over with your old favorite, Dick Barthelmess.

Comedians all—Gracie Allen, Mary Livingstone, Bob Burns and Jack Benny.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.



The Rising Tide

A furious drama of two young lovers . . . torn apart by the seething cross-currents of war!

Recklessly they went their separate ways. Norma to absorb the sordid drabness of her life in the dangerous paths of espionage—Marco to take up arms for the Spanish earth, the Spanish people he loved so well.

But they meet again—victims of Fate—amidst the scream of star shells—the reek of black powder—and the frightened cries of women and children.

Adventure, cruelty and campassion combined in the greatest love story to emerge from the present Spanish Civil War! "Rising Tide", starring Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, is a mighty saga of human emotions. Don't miss it!

Screen Romances

JULY ISSUE -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- 16 STORIES OF MOVIE HITS

Copyright 1938, LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

HUNDREDS OF INTIMATE PICTURES!

Modern Screen

AUGUST 10
CENTS

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

JUL 1 1938
PERIODICAL DIVISION

BETTE DAVIS

JACKIE COOGAN'S OWN STORY "I WANT MY MONEY!"

When the Music throbs with Love

...BE SURE

You are Alluring and Refined with Lander's Blended-Flower Talc

Put yourself in this picture. Dancing with the one man in the world . . . to music that throbs with love . . . he will hold you tighter and steal a kiss — if you thrill him with the perfume of Nature's flowers.

And Lander's Blended-Flower Talc will give you this tempting, exciting perfume that absolutely captivates a man. Try the Gardenia and Sweet Pea Blend. It's a glorious combination — the voluptuous perfume of gardenias and the languorous, romantic perfume of sweet peas!

And these two exotic perfumes are blended in such exquisitely fine, soft talc! For Lander's Blended-Flower Talc spreads on your skin like a caress. Every morning, dust your whole body with this luxurious talc . . . smell sweet all over . . . feel flower-fresh, glorified, inspired!

You know that you're utterly thrilling — and that you can win love. Lander's Blended-Flower Talc does this for you . . .

. . . and more! It guards your refinement. When a man takes you in his arms, you're sweet as a flower . . . and he knows you are refined. There may be madness in his heart but there'll be worship in his soul. His love for you is sacred . . . and he longs to make you his wife to protect and adore forever. Get Lander's Blended-Flower Talc today. The large can only 10¢ at your 10¢ store.

LANDER'S BLENDED FLOWER TALCS

LILACS AND ROSES • GARDENIA AND SWEET PEA • CARNATION AND LILY OF THE VALLEY • LAVENDER AND PINE • ORCHID AND ORANGE BLOSSOM

10¢

SOLD ONLY AT ALL 10¢ STORES

THE WORD THAT CAROL NEVER HEARS IS . . . "DARLING"

No woman who offends with underarm odor can ever win out with men

SHE MEETS NICE MEN—plenty of them. And she still dreams that some day one of them will fall in love with her. For she's a charming girl—Carol!

She does worry, though. It seems odd that men so seldom ask her for a second date. It isn't as if she weren't pretty enough—or easy to talk to. And she thinks she's careful about her person. After all, doesn't she bathe each day?

Foolish Carol! Like so many girls, she trusts her bath alone to keep her sweet! She fails to realize that baths take care only of past perspiration...that they can't prevent odor to come...that underarms must have special care.

Smart girls, popular girls, use Mum. Mum is a gentle, pleasant cream that prevents underarm odor before it ever starts. With Mum you never, never risk offending those you want for friends.

MUM IS QUICK! A half minute is enough to smooth Mum into each underarm.

MUM IS SAFE! Gentle Mum is actually soothing to the skin—you can use it immediately after shaving the underarms. And Mum is harmless to every kind of fabric.

MUM IS SURE! Without stopping perspiration, Mum banishes every trace of odor for a full day or a full evening. To be a girl men ask for dates, a girl who wins and holds romance, always use Mum!

ANOTHER IMPORTANT USE FOR MUM
—Thousands of women use Mum for Sanitary Napkins because they know it's safe, sure. No worries, when you use Mum this way, too!

A TIP TO GIRLS WITH A DATE TONIGHT

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

©CIB 384114
JUL -1 1938

Eleanor Fisher
"Miss Typical America"
appearing in Paramount's
"True Confession"

Glamour WITH Maybelline

EYE BEAUTY AIDS

GLAMOUR!—elusive enchantment—did you know that "your eyes have It" more than any other feature? Don't let it slumber there—touch Maybelline Mascara to those neglected lashes with a few simple upward strokes of the dainty Maybelline brush. Deepen the mascara at the outer edges to make your eyes appear larger, farther apart, more expressive. Then see what long, dark, silky, luxuriant lashes you have. Maybelline is harmless, tear-proof and non-smarting.

● Next—eyebrows. They hold the secret to your individual expression and charm. So be sure you accent them—use the smooth-marking Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil.

● Then—a bit of creamy Maybelline Eye Shadow on your upper lids—blend it from the center outwards toward your temples for the most delightful effect.

● At night—gently smooth a bit of Maybelline Eye Cream into the sensitive, tender skin around your eyes. It will help ward off those persistent little crowsfeet and eye wrinkles that mar one's beauty.

● Discriminating women all over the world rely on these exquisite Maybelline aids to glamour. You, too, will be delighted with the added charm, beauty and expression they will give you.

● Maybelline Solid-form Mascara in gold metal vanity . . . 75c. Refills . . . 35c. Maybelline Cream-form Mascara in dainty zipper case . . . 75c. Both come in Black, Brown, Blue. Maybelline Eye-brow Pencil, in Black, Brown, Blue (blue used as eye-liner), Maybelline Eye Shadow, in Blue, Blue-gray, Brown, Green, Violet. Maybelline Special Eye Cream. Purse sizes of Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids at 10c stores. Insist on Maybelline!

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Modern Screen

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co., Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor

NOW SHOWING

DUAL PERSONALITY	9	MACK HUGHES
WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD SCOUT?	26	KATHARINE HARTLEY
"WHY SHOULD I MARRY?"	28	GLADYS HALL
SHE WANTS TO BE MARRIED	30	MARY MAYES
BECAUSE SHE LOVED HIM SO MUCH	32	KAY FRINGS
RUGGED INDIVIDUALIST	34	JAMES REID
TO BE OR NOT TO BE	36	CAROLINE S. HOYT
BUBBLING BILLIE	38	DORA ALBERT
SPLINTERED ROMANCE	40	JAMES REID
EVERYTHING'S UNDER THE SUN	42	MARY MARSHALL
WHAT MAKES A MAN FALL IN LOVE?	44	LILLIAN GENN
MEMO ON MILLAND	46	BEN MADDOX
GET IT WHILE YOU CAN, GIRLS	47	ROBERT McILWAINE
IT'S FASHIONABLE TO BE FEMININE	48	MARIAN SQUIRE
CALAMITY JANE	50	GEORGE BENJAMIN
I WANT MY MONEY	52	JACKIE COOGAN
JACKIE SHOULD HAVE HIS MONEY	54	BETTY GRABLE
"MY SON HAS MONEY"	56	RUTH RENICK

SHORT SUBJECTS

MOVIE REVIEWS	6	WHAT TO SEE
TWO LANES TO FOLLOW	10	NEW RECIPES
OUR PUZZLE PAGE	12	MOVIE X-WORD
INFORMATION DESK	14	THE BAROMETER
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME	16	PRIZE LETTERS
PORTRAIT GALLERY	19	FOR YOUR ALBUM
GOOD NEWS	62	LATEST GOSSIP
HEAD OF THE CLASS	68	KNITS FOR SCHOOL

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 3, August, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post-office, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington; San Francisco, California; and Houston, Texas. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E.C. 4, England. Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semifictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

BOB TAYLOR

gets a telegram from his fans...

...and his fans get their kind of picture!

THE CROWD ROARS

Edward ARNOLD · with Frank MORGAN

Maureen O'SULLIVAN · William GARGAN

LIONEL STANDER · JANE WYMAN

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

Directed by Richard Thorpe

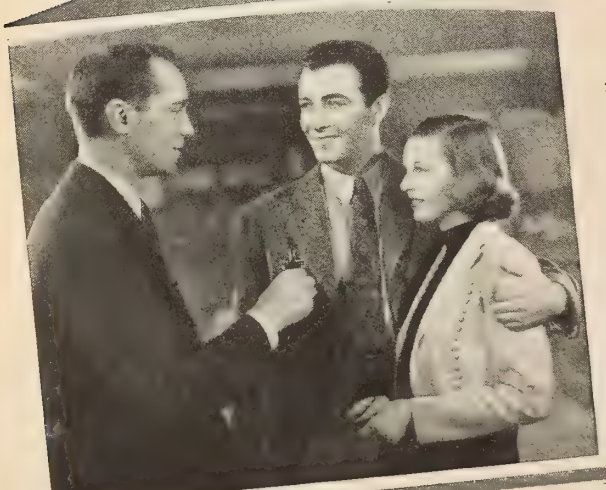
Produced by Sam Zimbalist

MOVIE REVIEWS

★★★★ Vivacious Lady

"Vivacious Lady" is Ginger Rogers' first solo starring picture. She sings one song, and the little dancing she does is incidental to the plot, all of which gives her an opportunity to prove she can carry a picture on her dramatics alone. And "Vivacious Lady" is one of the most enjoyable films of the season. Intelligently written and directed, and played with quiet humor, it is a definite improvement over the recent barrage of screwball comedies.

Story has Jimmy Stewart, an associate professor at a small college where his father is president, going to New York and returning with a Broadway song-and-dance girl as his wife. He is forced to conceal the marriage until he can win over his parents and pacify the home-town girl to whom he has been engaged. It's a mighty task, but Stewart, with the aid of a bibulous cousin (Jimmy Ellison) manages to make the proceedings highly entertaining.



Miss Rogers and Stewart play their roles expertly, both of them turning in their best screen performances. Acting honors go to Beulah Bondi and Charles Coburn, who play Stewart's parents. Funniest scene in the picture has Ginger Rogers and Jimmy Ellison teaching Miss Bondi the Big Apple. The supporting cast is excellent. George Stevens directed.—RKO-Radio.

★★★★ Holiday

"Holiday," one of the memorable films of the early days of talking pictures, returns in a streamlined 1938 version and scores a solid hit. Starring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant, this new treatment of Philip Barry's play compares favorably to the earlier version, and can stand on its own merits as first-rate film entertainment.

Audiences who recall the Ann Harding "Holiday" will find this one slow in spots because of the familiarity of the story. However, it has all the power and punch of the original, plus a brace of top-notch performances. Cary Grant is splendid as Johnny Case, the young man about to marry into the wealthy Seton family. His role takes him away from his usual screwball comedy antics and definitely establishes him as one of Hollywood's leading male players. Katharine Hepburn, as the renegade Linda Seton, slaps back at her detractors with the best performance she's given since "Bill of Divorcement." Doris Nolan plays the haughty Julia Seton with a finesse she has never before shown in her screen career. In the role of the drunken, defeatist brother, Lew Ayres makes a brilliant screen comeback and almost steals the picture. George Cukor directed.—Columbia.

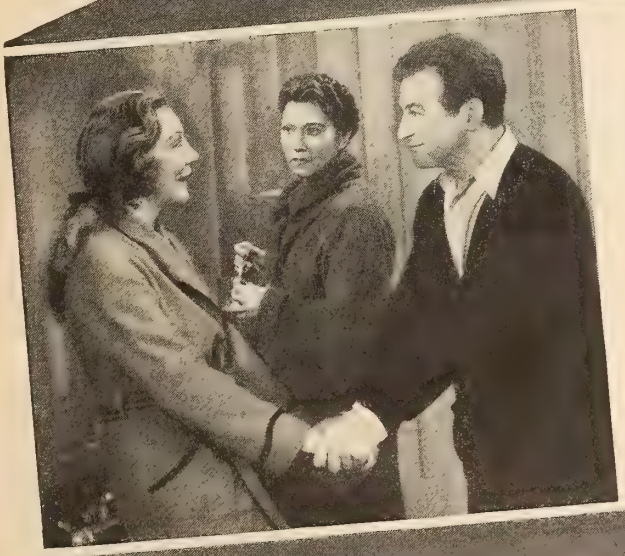
★★★ Three Comrades

An honest translation of Erich Maria Remarque's story of Germany after the World War, "Three Comrades" is stirring screen fare. Rich in social consciousness, tragic and bitter in theme, it is one of those rare pictures you can feel as well as see. As adult entertainment, it is one of the most satisfying pictures of the year.

The three comrades—Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young—are discharged from the German army at the conclusion of the war. They have no place in post-war society, for their only taste of life has been at the battlefront. Disillusioned by attempts to adjust themselves to their new world, they set up an auto repair shop and resign themselves to their fate. A pitifully tragic love story is introduced when Taylor marries Margaret Sullavan, a young woman from whom the war has taken her money and health. Soon Young dies from a storm trooper's bullet and Miss Sullavan is claimed by tuberculosis, leaving the two remaining comrades trudging off into nowhere, with the rumblings of a new war already in their ears. Margaret Sullavan's performance is brilliant and marks a welcome return to the screen for this fine actress. All of the men are excellent, with Franchot Tone's portrayal the best of the three. Frank Borzage directed.—M-G-M.

BY LEO TOWNSEND

TODAY'S TALKIES



★★★ Alexander's Ragtime Band

Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche are listed as the stars of this "super-colossal" musical show, but the real hero is Irving Berlin. A cavalcade of his songs, from "Alexander's Ragtime Band" up to the present time, high-lights the picture and is responsible for almost every one of the film's better moments.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" is first rate entertainment. The fact that it could have been better is probably unimportant. There is still the feeling, however, that the story gets in the way of Berlin's grand music.

There are too many good things in the film to list them all here. Musical numbers done most effectively are "This Is the Life," sung by Wally Vernon, "Everybody's Doin' It" (Vernon and Dixie Dunbar), "That International Rag" (Jack Haley, Alice Faye and Chick Chandler) and Berlin's new hit tune, "Now it Can Be Told."

Performances by the three principals are routine, and in addition there is the disturbing thought that while the picture covers a period of over twenty years, none of the stars ages more than ten minutes. In the supporting cast, Jack Haley, Wally Vernon, Eddie Collins, Paul Hurst and Ethel Merman all furnish bright moments. Henry King directed.—20th Century-Fox.

★★★ White Banners

Here is a great audience picture, full of the platitudes and the philosophies of Lloyd Douglas, whose two previous film stories, "Magnificent Obsession" and "Green Light," have brought joy and happiness to millions, including their respective producers. Anyone who enjoyed those two films will find "White Banners" just as good, and perhaps a little better, since its performances are all top-notch in such expert hands as those of Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper.

Mr. Douglas preaches a sort of reverse Dale Carnegie Technique. Where Mr. Carnegie tells his followers that a dominant personality is a winning one, Mr. Douglas mildly insists that the meek will inherit the earth, or a reasonably accurate facsimile. As is his custom, Mr. Douglas projects his philosophy through the medium of one of the characters. In this case it is Fay Bainter, who wanders into the household and the lives of Claude Rains and his family and remains to show them the light.

All the principals perform expertly, with honors going to Miss Bainter and Mr. Rains. Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville, who were kids last time we saw them, carry on a puppy love affair with proper earnestness and a dignity befitting their years. Directed by Edmund Goulding.—Warner Brothers.

★★ Yellow Jack

Sidney Howard's drama of the fight against yellow fever during the Spanish-American War, which ran as a play on Broadway several season's ago, comes to the screen as an interesting, if not too exciting, chronicle of the heroism and eventual victory of a group of men who volunteered their lives to aid in the advance of medical science.

The film is almost a photographed stage play, for it employs only two or three sets. It is concerned entirely with the fight to discover a cure for the dreaded yellow fever, a fact which sometimes tends to make it slow and tedious. It is, however, a valiant effort to turn out serious drama, and as such it deserves praise.

Robert Montgomery has another opportunity to deviate from his usual assignments, and in the role of the Irish sergeant in charge of the volunteer squad he assumes a brogue and manages, after a dubious start, to make you believe sincerely in the character he plays. Virginia Bruce has little to do in the feminine lead, but her performance is satisfactory. The entire cast is good. Directed by George Seitz.—M-G-M.

More Reviews on page 84

Pick your pictures by our reviews and you will enjoy them so much more

TOGETHER again!

Cagney meets O'Brien for the first time since "Ceiling Zero."... And the stage hit that tickled the nation slaphappy for over two years, now floods the screen in a deluge of joyous laughter!

Starring

STAGE PLAY PRODUCED BY GEORGE ABBOTT

JAMES CAGNEY and PAT O'BRIEN

WITH

MARIE WILSON RALPH BELLAMY

FRANK McHUGH • DICK FORAN

Directed by LLOYD BACON

SCREEN PLAY BY BELLA AND SAMUEL SPEWACK

MAKE A DATE FOR "BOY MEETS GIRL" AT YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE

DUAL PERSONALITY

BY MACK HUGHES

A laugh-getter on the screen, a worrier, off, Joe, of the Park Avenue Penners, is ever the philosopher

Joe and his pretty missus tear off a tune.

A TRAGEDIAN'S ambition is invariably to play comedy, and the clown always has a burning desire to do Hamlet. Life's real tragedy seems to be that us mortals are never satisfied when we do a good job. Oh, no, there's always just the thing, we think, we're best suited for, to be accomplished somewhere in the future.

Joe Penner, however, is the exception that proves the rule. A veritable Pagliacci, he goes to work when the camera grinds and makes us laugh no matter how many nip-ups that heart o' his is doing. However, Penner does not want to play tragedy. In fact, he knows his forte, is comedy, even though it's on the hokum side.

"I'm strictly a Chaplin comedian," Joe began in a whisper. "The difference is that Chaplin doesn't work with his voice, and I talk. But, no cracks about the way I'm talking now! You see, I've been under the weather for a few days. I took Red Sharkey and some of his friends to the ball game the other day and of course it would rain. My box was in the open so we had to scamper to the grandstand. The result was that when I got the kids under shelter there wasn't room for me, so I sat on a damp cement step. Well, I've been in bed for the past two days, and I've got to leave for the coast tomorrow. With my first day taken up with a business conference at the office here, and the next two in bed, about the only thing I've seen of New York is that ball game that did me in. Oh, yes, the setting is all right if you've got to stay- (Continued on page 84)

Mr. P. takes everything big—including his ice cream!

TWO LANES TO FOLLOW

Priscilla and Rosemary Lane enjoy some pineapple treats.

BY MARJORIE DEEN

WITH SUMMER at hand you'll be glad to hear that pineapple—most cooling and taste-tempting of fruits—engages our attention. It also interests Priscilla and Rosemary Lane in our illustration, which shows these two charming members of that delightful Lane "foursome" of sisters, lunching in the studio Green Room.

Their choice of foods is no surprise. In fact we could all profit by following their example frequently. Especially during the hot weather, for I can think of no dishes more zestful, more welcome on a warm summer day, than those which feature perennially popular pineapple in any one of the many styles in which it is canned.

This golden fruit certainly can boast not only of its ability to travel along in fine fettle on its own merits, but also of its happy faculty of combining so beautifully with other foods. With diverse fruits in beverages and other summertime treats, for instance; with salad greens; in gelatin and milk desserts; with cream and cottage cheese, etc. Also, its unmistakable and welcome flavor adds greatly to the appeal of seasonable sherbets and ice creams.

Excellent examples of pineapple dishes at their best are those that Priscilla and Rosemary were so obviously enjoying when we calmly interrupted their midday repast to take pictures! Priscilla—like so many Hollywood beauties—was "watching her calories" (without in any way cutting down on her food enjoyment) by eating a most appetizing, yet thinning summer salad. This consisted of a slice of canned pineapple topped with a generous mound of cottage cheese. Surrounding this luscious combination were thin slices of peaches which had been dipped in pineapple juice to retard discoloration. (Remember this one!) Generous wedges of lemon were served with this salad, in lieu of a dressing. However, for those less concerned about their "figgers" a mayonnaise or even a French dressing could be used.

As a welcome change, and as an even more partified version of this well-liked cheese-pineapple combination, you can have the "Bridge Party Salad" pictured here.

Rosemary's choice—and a mighty refreshing one, too—had both an intriguing "title" and "make-up." "Coupe Hawaiian" it was called, and I insisted then and there upon knowing how it was made. You, too, after trying it, will agree with Shakespeare's statement that "Rosemary's for remembrance!"

Courtesy Dole

This Bridge Party Salad is as good as it looks!

BRIDGE PARTY SALAD

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 (14 oz.) can pineapple "gems"
½ pound cottage cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup cream, whipped
½ cup diced celery
Maraschino cherries for garnishing

Soak gelatin 5 minutes in cold water. Drain pineapple, reserving the fruit. Add enough water to pineapple liquid to make ¾ cup juice in all. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat, add soaked gelatin; stir until dissolved. Mash cheese through a food mill or sieve; add salt, mayonnaise and lemon juice. Beat until blended; add to hot gelatin mixture. Chill. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in whipped cream, celery and ¾ cup of the pineapple gems. Turn into individual molds. Chill in refrigerator until firm. To serve: Place remaining gems on large serving dish. Unmold and arrange gelatin salad around them (see illustration). Decorate each serving with sliced maraschino cherries. Garnish platter with salad greens (lettuce, romaine, endive or watercress). Pass mayonnaise, which has been

And you won't go far wrong when those peppy Lane gals lead the way to thinned to the desired consistency with cream or a little pineapple juice.

PINEAPPLE CREAM SHERBET
(for Coupe Hawaiian)

1 (no. 2) can crushed pineapple
¾ cup powdered sugar
½ cup water
2 teaspoons gelatin
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup cream, whipped
¼ cup granulated sugar
2 egg whites, beaten stiff
⅓ teaspoon salt

Drain pineapple, reserving fruit. Combine pineapple juice with the powdered sugar and ¼ cup of the water, in a saucepan. Boil slowly for 10 minutes; remove from heat. Meanwhile soak gelatin in remaining ¼ cup water for 5 minutes, then dissolve in the hot pineapple liquid. Add pineapple pulp and lemon juice. Cool. Place in freezing tray and freeze until consistency of mayonnaise. Whip cream, gradually adding the granulated sugar. Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff. Combine beaten egg whites and cream. Remove slightly frozen pineapple mixture from freezing tray to an ice-cold bowl and beat with a rotary beater until it it full of air bubbles. Fold in cream and egg white mixture, gently but thoroughly. Return to freezing tray and finish freezing.

COUPE HAWAIIAN

1 (no. 2 Tall) can pineapple "spears"
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup sugar
1 peach, fresh or canned, sliced thin
½ cup sliced berries
1 tablespoon sugar
1 small bottle maraschino cherries whipped cream, sherbet

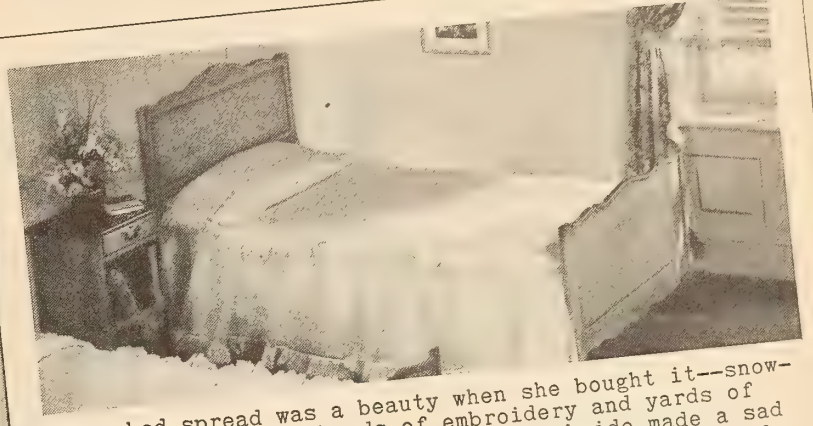
Drain pineapple, reserving fruit. To pineapple juice add lemon juice and sugar. Boil together 7 minutes. Chill. In each of 4 tall dessert glasses place 3 pineapple "spears" standing upright around the edge of the glass. Combine sliced peach, berries and the tablespoon of sugar. Sprinkle with the juice drained from maraschino cherries. Place an equal amount of this fruit mixture in bottom of each dessert glass. Place in refrigerator until serving time. Fill glasses three-quarters full with Pineapple Cream Sherbet. Pour over each serving a little of the chilled pineapple syrup. Top with whipped cream, garnish with maraschino cherries and serve immediately.

In Hollywood, as elsewhere, iced fruit beverages receive their share of attention as a change from the usual iced tea or coffee. The following is an excellent example, and incorporates a sugar syrup suggestion that you will want to remember.



PINK PINEAPPLEADE

1 cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
1½ cups pineapple juice
¾ cup raspberry juice (drained from canned raspberries)
2 cups cold water juice of 2 lemons
fresh mint

Make sugar syrup by combining boiling water with the sugar and boiling together for 5 minutes. Pour into a jar, cover and keep in refrigerator for sweetening this and other cold drinks—without leaving a wasteful deposit of sugar in the bottom of the glass. Combine pineapple juice and raspberry juice. Add cold water and lemon juice. Sweeten to taste with sugar syrup (approximately ½ cup). Chill. To serve: Place a sprig of mint and ice cubes in each glass before pouring in beverage. (Ginger-ale ice cubes are a delicious addition.) cool summer tempters!

Three mistakes ...in the bride's house!

The bed spread was a beauty when she bought it--snow-white muslin with bands of embroidery and yards of perky flounce! But the poor little bride made a sad mistake! She washed her spread with lazy soap--and left it full of tattle-tale gray.

Spic-and-span new, the vanity skirt was something to make friends chirp with delight. But not after the little bride tubbed it. Her lazy soap just couldn't wash clean. And nobody had the courage to tell her--"Change to Fels-Naptha Soap. It gets all the dirt!"

Tattle-tale gray spoiled this slip-cover, too--and all the bride's wash--until Aunt Ruth got her Fels-Naptha. Thanks to its richer golden soap and lots of naptha, that stuck-fast dirt had to let go! Now the bride's washes sparkle like snow! And everybody raves about her home!

Banish "Tattle-Tale Gray" with FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

NEW! Great for washing machines! Try Fels-Naptha Soap Chips, too!

COPR. 1938, FELS & CO.

—are soft . . . natural!

Men detest that ugly "painted look". Only Tangee can give your lips this lovely natural glow—it's the only lipstick with the famous Tangee color-change principle.

Orange in the stick, Tangee actually changes on your lips to a warm blush-rose—exactly your shade whether you're a blonde, brunette or red head. Won't smear or leave red marks on teeth or handkerchiefs. Special cream base keeps it on...hours longer. Get Tangee. 39¢ and $1.10. Try Tangee Rouge and Powder, too, for a natural matched make-up.

THIS SUMMER, use Tangee Creme Rouge, waterproof. Never streaks or fades—even when you're swimming.

Untouched—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded, parched look.

Greasy, painted lips—Don't risk that painted look. Men don't like it.

Tangee lovable lips—Intensifies natural color, ends that painted look.

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES! There is only one Tangee—don't let anyone switch you. Be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. If you prefer more color for evening wear, ask for Tangee Theatrical.

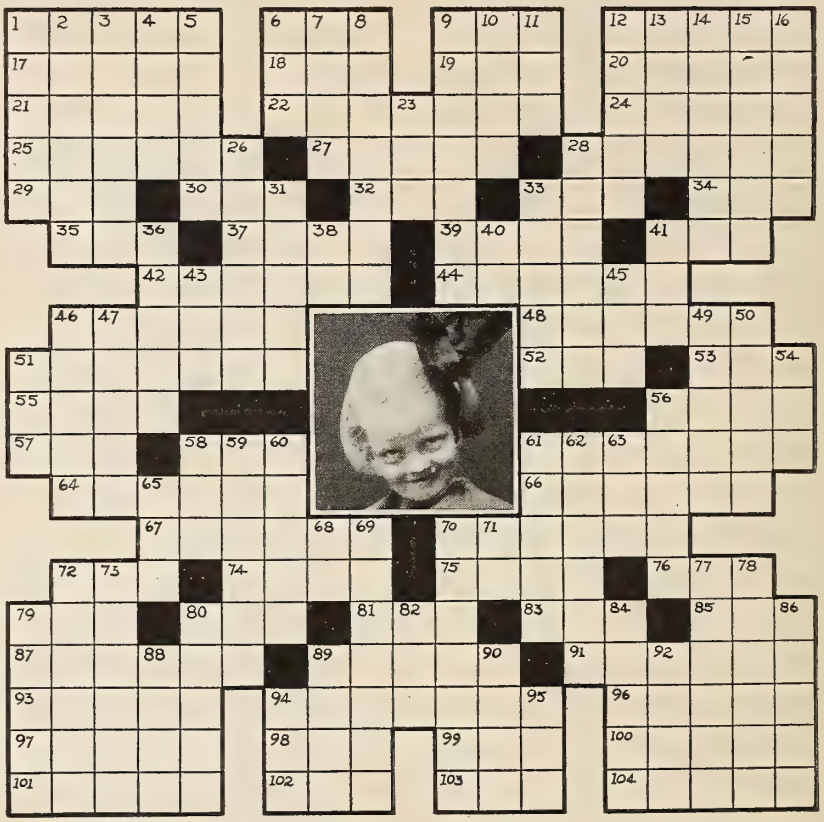
4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET and TANGEE CHARM TEST

The George W. Luft Co., 417 Fifth Ave., N. Y. C. Please rush "Miracle Make-Up Set" of sample Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.) Also please send Tangee Charm Test.



Check Shade of Powder Desired ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name _____
(Please Print)

Address _____

City _____ State _____ MM88

OUR PUZZLE

Puzzle Solution on Page 75

ACROSS

1. First name of star pictured
6. "Gift of - - -"
9. Middle
12. Last name of 1 across
17. Star of "The Adventures of Robin Hood"
18. Past
19. Hail!
20. Open to view
21. Princess de Lamballe in "Marie Antoinette"
22. Fonda's wife in 70 down
24. What film stunt men require
25. That which is retained
27. Odeum
28. Beatrice Harris in "Men Are Such Fools"
29. Ilona Ma - - - y
30. Color
32. Madge in "Little Miss Thoroughbred"
33. Veterinary: coll.
34. "Dead - - -"
35. Prefix meaning three
37. Reverberated
39. Heroine of "Law of the Plains"
41. Limb
42. Male star of "You and Me"
44. Hillbilly comedienne in "Thrill of a Lifetime"
46. Mrs. Dan Topping, Jr.
48. James Flowers in "Hunted Men"
51. Made love
52. K - - - i Gallian
53. Me - - - Oberon
55. The Ordinal
56. Vat for storing green fodder
57. Falsehood
58. Lowing of a cow
61. Our star was in "That - - - - - - - Woman"
64. Massachusetts city of our star's birth
66. Pungent garden vegetables
67. Nora in "King of the Newsboys"
70. Opera star in "The Goldwyn Follies"
72. "- - - Stop New York"
74. - - - - Ann Borg
75. Mrs. Charles Laughton's first name
76. Compass point
79. Wallace B - - - y
80. "The - - - of Madelon Claudet"
81. Ricardo Cor - - -
83. Greek letter
85. Make a choice: rare
87. Joan Blondell's sister
89. - - - - - Morley
91. More weird
93. Pertaining to the largest continent
94. Beat soundly
96. The Princess in "The Adventures of Marco Polo"
97. Evade
98. B - - - ta Granville
99. - - - le Gallienne
100. Roman highways
101. Dirks
102. Consumed
103. Deposit
104. Mandingo palm nuts

PAGE

DOWN

1. Wild animals
2. Marco Polo's companion in that film
3. More hackneyed
4. Transport
5. South African antelope
6. Girl: slang
7. Premium paid for exchange of one currency for another
8. Our star was in "Of Human - - - - - - -"
9. Pertaining to Freemasons
10. His last name is Lebedeff
11. 16th century ruler of Tunis
12. Hero of "Knight Without Armor"
13. Assert
14. Mrs. Adolphe Menjou
15. Norma Shearer's late husband
16. Spirited horse
23. Cave
26. Louis XVI in "Marie Antoinette"
28. Become: obs.
31. Having organs of hearing
33. Comedian Barnett's first name
36. Eskimo dwelling
38. No good: abbr.
40. Egyptian sun god
41. Laboratory: coll.
43. German article
45. Large vessel
46. Month of our star's birth
47. Contest of horsemanship
49. Hero in "Merrily We Live"
50. Heroine of "The Lady in the Morgue"
51. Producer Lesser's first name
54. Age
56. Judge Hardy
58. - - - vyn Douglas
59. Maid Marian in "The Adventures of Robin Hood"
60. Douglas in "Kidnapped"
61. Growth of small trees
62. Ensiform
63. "Rose of the - - - Grande"
65. Pale
68. An alleged force
69. First name of Mrs. Kalmus of Technicolor
70. Our star's most recent film
71. Ole in "Little Miss Broadway"
72. Our star's married name
73. Alloy resembling gold
77. An evening party
78. Genus of spiders
79. Interjections
80. Trigonometrical functions
82. Epoch
84. Shield
86. Lock of hair
88. "The - - - - of Paris"
89. Marty Weston in "Mr. Moto Takes a Chance"
90. Star of "The Girl Was Young"
92. Our star's real first name
94. Large snake
95. Hero in "Her Jungle Love"

Riding Waikiki Waves

• Lithograph by ROBERT RIGGS

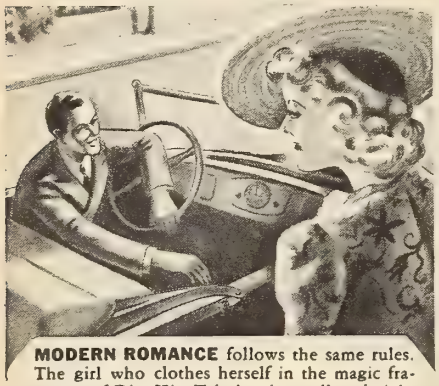
Truly Hawaiian

A thrill from Hawaii is Dole Pineapple Juice. Pure, natural, unsweetened—its exciting flavor is ideally protected by the exclusive Dole Fast-Seal Vacuum-Packing Process.



Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., also packers of Dole Pineapple "Gems," Sliced, Crushed, Tidbits, and the new "Royal Spears." Honolulu, Hawaii, U.S.A. Sales Offices: San Francisco, California.

Do You Dream of a KNIGHT OF ROMANCE?

FAIR DAMSELS knew that the bravest knight could be a willing slave to an alluring perfume...

MODERN ROMANCE follows the same rules. The girl who clothes herself in the magic fragrance of Djer-Kiss Talc has her gallant knight always at her beck and call.

START your day the Djer-Kiss way! Bathe your entire body with this delightful talc each morning. Djer-Kiss keeps you dainty and refreshed all day . . . Helps you stay cool, for it actually lowers body temperature. Clothes feel more comfortable . . . Makes you alluringly fragrant. Use Djer-Kiss generously, for the cost is surprisingly small. Buy it today at drug and toilet goods counters—25c and 75c sizes. Liberal 10c size at all 10c stores.

The same delightful fragrance in Djer-Kiss Sachet, Eau de Toilette and Face Powder.

YOURS FREE—the exciting new book, "Women Men Love—Which Type Are You?"

—full of valuable hints on how to make yourself more alluring. Just send a post card with your name and address to Parfums Kerkoff, Inc., Dept. D, New York.

. . . genuine imported talc scented with Djer-Kiss perfume by Kerkoff, Paris.

DJER-KISS (Pronounced "Dear Kiss") TALC By KERKOFF · PARIS

You ask the questions—we'll answer them

NELSON EDDY: A glance at the barometer that tops this page will tell you without further ado why this blonde giant rates a word from this department right here and now. So here are the statistics. Nelson Eddy was born in Providence, Rhode Island, June 29, 1901. Among his ancestors were President Martin Van Buren, and Caroline Kendrick (his grandmother, and a famous singer of her day.) Both his father and mother were also excellent singers, and young Nelson made his vocal debut early as a boy soprano for All Saint's and Grace Churches in Providence. He was educated at Rhode Island Normal School. For five years he was a reporter and copy reader on Philadelphia newspapers. Later he wrote advertising for two large agencies. He studied with several Philadelphia teachers, and learned operatic arias from phonograph records. His first stage appearance was in 1922. He made his New York debut in 1924 as "Pagliacci." Several years later he sang at a concert in Los Angeles, and made such a brilliant success that within a week he was signed to a long-term motion picture contract. Nelson Eddy's first movie was with Joan Crawford in "Dancing Lady." But picture success came slowly at first. It was two years after "Dancing Lady" that the "right" picture came along. Then, opposite Jeanette MacDonald, he was given the male lead in "Naughty Marietta," and practically over night he became a screen sensation. There followed "Rose Marie," "Maytime," "Rosalie," and "Girl of the Golden West." His next pictures will be "Balalaika," and "Adventure for Three." Nelson Eddy is six feet tall, weighs one hundred seventy-three pounds, has blonde hair and blue eyes. His favorite sports are swimming, riding and tennis. Eddy sings thirty-two operatic roles. Besides English he sings in French, Italian, Spanish, Russian and Yiddish. He prefers Wagnerian opera. He has made many successful national concert tours, has appeared as guest soloist with several choral organizations, and has been in Europe three times where he was invited to sing in opera, though he never accepted. His fans hope he'll stay right here for a long time to come.

GRACE MOORE: This golden voiced, golden haired, vivacious lady of a dozen different careers believes that every one should hitch his wagon to a star, then reach for it through personal effort. She evidently practises what she preaches too, for we can't think of anyone who has achieved outstanding success in so many varied fields. She is not only a grand opera prima donna, a musical comedy star, a concert singer and a radio entertainer; she is also a perfect cook, expert sportswoman, a charming hostess, a happy wife, and the idol of countless thousands of admirers from kings and queens to the humblest of us movie-goers. Born in Jellico, Tennessee, December 5, 1901, she was one of five children, and originally wanted to be a missionary to China. But while in school at Ward Belmont in Nashville, she heard Mary Garden sing, and immediately changed her ambitions. She persuaded her parents to send her to a music school near Washington, D. C., but they still disapproved of her operatic ambitions, so she ran away to New York. She lived in Greenwich Village, and for six months Grace Moore sang in a restaurant for her suppers. Then she lost her voice and had to rest for six more months before it returned. After that she sang in musical comedy to get money to study opera, and in 1928 she made her Metropolitan Opera debut in "La Boheme." She sang there for three seasons, then tried her hand at the movies. Her first two pictures flopped, partly because sound recording devices were imperfect, partly because she herself probably wasn't ready for pictures.

HUNDREDS OF ADDRESSES FOR A STAMPED ENVELOPE!

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking. So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, naming the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing addresses. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

So she continued to study and sing. In 1931, in Cannes, France, she married Valentin Parera, the Ronald Colman of Spain, with whom she is still very much in love. In 1934 Grace Moore returned to Hollywood to make the picture "One Night of Love." This time it was a complete and glorious success, and the four pictures which followed have added to her tremendous popularity. These were "Love Me Forever," "The King Steps Out," "When You're in Love" and "I'll Take Romance." Grace Moore collects prize cooking recipes, etchings and prints. She loves emeralds and is interested in public events. She swims and rides expertly. She also plays a good game of poker, but doesn't drink or smoke. She adores riding on Fifth Avenue buses, and still considers a chocolate ice cream soda a grand way to make "whoopee." She once was selected by the late Florenz Ziegfeld as one of the ten most beautiful women in the world, and by a famous international photographer as one of the thirteen supreme beauties. Miss Moore's superb voice, and her great charm, born of radiant health and inspired vitality, have made her one of the screen's truly great personalities.

GENE AUTRY: 'Tis said that this public cowboy number one recently received 40,000 fan letters in one month, and by the number of inquiries directed to this desk we aren't surprised. Gene himself just can't figure out all this popularity. "Maybe it's 'Champ' they like instead of me," he suggests modestly. ("Champ" is his thoroughbred black and white Oklahoma horse.) But our guess is that his popularity has something to do with his good humored, unaffected charm, and that mellow tenor voice of his. Gene Autry is his real name, and he was born in Tioga, Texas, September 29, 1908. He is five feet, ten and a half inches tall, weighs one hundred seventy pounds, has reddish brown hair and blue eyes. His parents still live on a cattle ranch in Oklahoma. His father is a minister in the little town of Ravina. Gene has been warbling ever since he can remember. He started out by singing in the choir of his grandfather's Baptist church. When he was fourteen he bought a steel guitar and learned to accompany himself. At eighteen Gene became a railroad telegraph operator, and together with Jimmy Long, another singing railroader, he wrote "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine," one of the most popular songs of its kind. Since then he has written both words and music for over two hundred cowboy and hillbilly ditties. His voice has been recorded by practically every big recording company, and since 1930 he has sung on many big radio programs. Since he began making pictures in 1934 he has starred in some thirty popular "Westerns." He is happily married and lives on a ranch in San Fernando Valley, near Hollywood. His hobby is raising and training thoroughbred Western horses. "Champion," his favorite mount, is considered one of the finest horses in pictures. "Champ's" saddle, bridle and breast-piece are trimmed with sterling silver. Gene's own cowboy raiment is elaborate and authentic, because, as Gene says, when he appears in public, "the kids expect you to look like a cowboy, and you can't let them down." Gene Autry's next two pictures will be "Gold Mine in the Sky" and "Old Faithful."

(Continued on page 96)

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

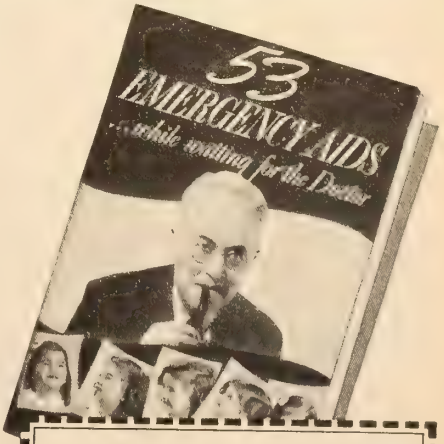
.....

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State .....

If you would like our chart with weights, heights, age, and birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.



MOTHER:

When your baby is suffering KNOW what to do!

DON'T be helpless when an emergency arises! Every mother should know what to do. Don't trust to luck that your household will escape emergencies. You may be next. Be prepared!

At your drug store you can now get (while they last) a copy of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's new book—free with a purchase of "Lysol" disinfectant. Few doctors have had to deal with home emergencies as Dr. Dafoe has. Great distances, hard travel, in the Canadian back country forced him to teach his people what to do in emergencies till he got there. Now the benefit of this experience is yours, free! Accept "Lysol's" offer of first-aid facts. Ask, when you buy "Lysol", for your copy of Dr. Dafoe's book.

FREE! Dr. Dafoe's Book on Home Emergencies, 32 pages, 53 sections.
Do you know how to . . . Dress a wound? Treat animal bites? Give artificial respiration? Relieve sudden illness? Stop hiccups? Revive an asphyxiated person? These are just a few of many subjects this book covers, in clear, simple language anyone can understand. Free with any purchase of "Lysol", for a limited time.

Used in the care of the Quintuplets since the day they were born . . .

Lysol Disinfectant

If your drug store cannot supply you—mail this to LYSOL, Bloomfield, N. J. Dept. 8-M.S.
(Enclose "Lysol" carton front. Dr. Dafoe's book will be sent at once, free and post-paid.)

Name _____

Address _____

Copyright 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

RINSE OFF UNWANTED HAIR

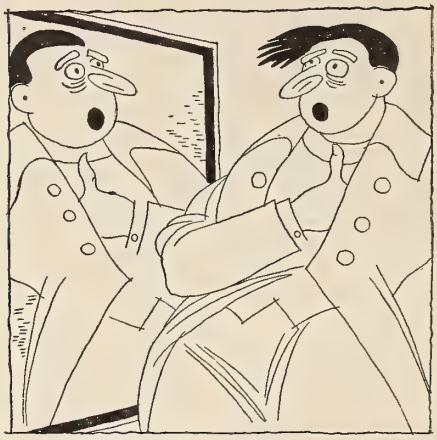
This Quick, Easy Way!

Legs are in the spotlight! And men just won't forgive the girl whose legs bristle with untidy hair. So— whether at the beach or clad in sheer silk stockings—be sure your legs are smooth and feminine!

Just spread NEET (like a cold cream in texture) on unwanted hair. Then rinse off with water. That's all! NEET removes all hair . . . leaves your skin satin-smooth.

Avoid Unpleasant Razor-Roughness

Say good-bye to rough skin and sharp, wiry hairs that grow in after shaving. There is no razor stubble to snag your stockings and cause runs—and no danger of cuts—when you use the safe and convenient NEET way.



Beach wear, shorter skirts and summer dresses call for smoother, hair-free arms and legs. Do as millions of women do—remove unsightly hair with NEET. Get it today. At drug and dept. stores. Generous 10¢ size at all ten-cent stores.

NEET Just Rinse Off Unsightly Hair

BETWEEN YOU'N'ME

A fan from Detroit declares that Napoleon's hair did a flip-flop act in "Conquest."

$5.00 Prize Poem
Ode to Jean Harlow

As falls the fragment of some bright star
Into the night, where all was dark before,
A brilliant flash attracting fans afar,
Seen but a short time, to be seen no more,
So, on the screen, this lovely lady bold
Outlined a course before she fell.
Turning a silver star to one of gold,
A star to be remembered long and well.
What matters that her bright career was brief
And vanished swiftly in eternal night?
In such a fall there is no cause for grief,
For stars like these leave paths of brilliant light.
She spread the glory of her short-lived fame
And added lustre to a much loved name.

—Opal Wadman, Dublin, Ind.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Youth Speaks

Why not have more movies with youthful appeal in them? It seems that the stars between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five are doomed to destruction. Every picture is made either for juveniles or adults. We of the younger generation want to see pictures that depict our own everyday experiences. We aren't interested in torrid love scenes; we want good, clean, wholesome, realistic pictures.

How about some high school and college pictures? And then, for pity's sakes, don't star Fredric March or Clark Gable as a couple of all American full-backs. While I consider them superior stars, I believe there is a limit to all good things. Give the stars like Frankie Darro a chance. For years I've waited for his stardom, and I know he's just as good as the other box office attractions. He looks, acts, talks like and is the ideal American youth. Let's have more of his pictures. Give the younger generation a chance. Up with Darro and Youth!

—Lavergne Gebhardt, Chicago, Ill.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Middle Age Jitters

Ever since those two pixilated sisters made their hilarious hit in "Mr. Deeds," the movies have been pushing middle age around, and I protest. I haven't seen a picture in a long time now that didn't cause some individual of middle age, either a man or woman, to appear as a complete nitwit. When not cast as simpletons or morons they're malicious and meddlesome. In real life if all people between forty-five and sixty acted as they're made to on the screen—well, just try and imagine the world!

There is but one middle-aged person left with a shred of dignity—the banker. Is this significant? Somehow or other, our movie bankers are still depicted as people with sufficient brains and common sense to guard our money.

Let me assure producers that for one giddy matron like Billie Burke or Alice Brady we've got ninety-nine mothers of gracious manners, dignity, and charm. But in films all mothers are dames with muscle-bound brains and cigarette jitters. How about that realism which Hollywood boasts?

—J. W. Bayne, Vancouver, Canada.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Hurrah For Ma O'Leary

To our city came the picture "In Old Chicago," and, so help me, you couldn't see the name of Alice Brady on the billing with a pair of high-powered binoculars. Yet Miss Brady dominated the entire production and was the one player over which everyone enthused. Without her the picture would have been just another insipid historical romance, pepped up at the finish by a snappy fire sequence.

Another fan resents having to look with binoculars for the name of a picture's real star.

With Miss Brady, however, it became a splendidly human story, infused with the heroic personality of a wife and mother of the fine pioneer type that made America what it is today. Her glowing ideals made Molly O'Leary a sturdy heroine who couldn't be corrupted by easy money and smooth politics, and whose courage and spirit survived a holocaust. If Miss Brady isn't the Star of "In Old Chicago," I'm a cross-eyed pelican.

—Winnifred Davies, Vancouver, Can.

$1.00 Prize Letter
An Explanation's Due

Napoleon's hair did a flip-flop in "Conquest!" Came the last scene. Napoleon's Write us your frank opinions about anything concerning the movies. You may win a cash prize!

hair, one of his most distinguishing features, was combed forward in a point. All through the picture it had been thus.

The scene shifted for an instant to the Countess, then back to Napoleon. His hair! An instant before, it was short and lay toward the front. Now it had grown an inch or more and was combed back! The scene shifted again and Napoleon arose and turned, and lo! his hair was back to its original length and pointing forward again.

I gritted my teeth. Darn the producer, anyway. Why did he want to spoil my picture like that? I sat there foaming around the gills. Instead of feeling the sad farewell of those two great lovers, I was gnashing my teeth in anger. How could Napoleon be so romantic while his hair was doing flip-flops?

Then I began to doubt. Had I really seen Napoleon's hair cut capers, or did I just think I had? I determined to stay and see "Conquest" over again. I did. Then, as the last scenes began, I sat waiting breathlessly, tensely, and hopefully. But it was no use. Napoleon's hair again grew and swapped directions. My fond hopes were dashed to the ground and my evening was definitely ruined. Oh, Napoleon, Napoleon, why did you do it?

—S. J. Underwood, Detroit, Mich.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Bigger Roles For Nolan

May I say just a word for a grand actor whose name is Lloyd Nolan? Realizing that every picture must have a good supporting cast in order to be a good picture, I still wonder why producers pay extraordinary sums of money to bring fine actors from leading roles on Broadway to second leads and mediocre parts in Hollywood.

In 1932 or 1933 Lloyd Nolan was playing the lead in "One Sunday Afternoon" on Broadway, and playing it very well too, according to the reviews. Now, in Hollywood, he has been relegated to playing secondary parts; the villain and bad man or once in a while a detective. While I will gladly admit that each part he has played on the screen has been played so well that you feel after seeing it that no one else could possibly have taken that role, I am afraid that continued casting in such parts will send him out of pictures.

He is young and good looking, and if he could play leading roles on Broadway, why not in Hollywood? He has a sense of humor and definite dramatic ability and I, for one, would like to see him in bigger and better parts.

—Jean E. Kreps, Evansville, Ind.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Praises For Bette

The plaudits that have rained down on Bette Davis for her brilliant acting in "It's Love I'm After," and "Jezebel" have been well deserved.

Bette Davis is Hollywood's most outstanding younger actress. She has not only

(Continued on page 97)

WRITE A LETTER—
WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

POND'S SUNLIGHT SHADES

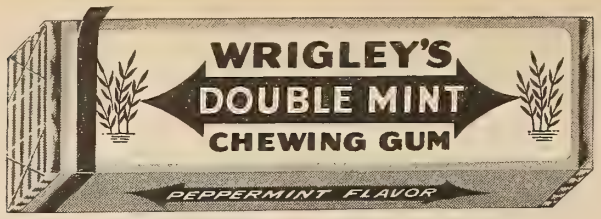
"GLARE-PROOF" powder flatters your skin in the hardest light

STRONG sunlight is hard on your looks. It sharpens every little fault . . . and casts dark, unbecoming shadows where it is not lighting up your weak points.

But you can make that hard, bright light actually flattering to you! Pond's "Sunlight" Powder shades are "glare-proof"! They reflect only the softer rays of the sun. Give a clear glow to your tan!

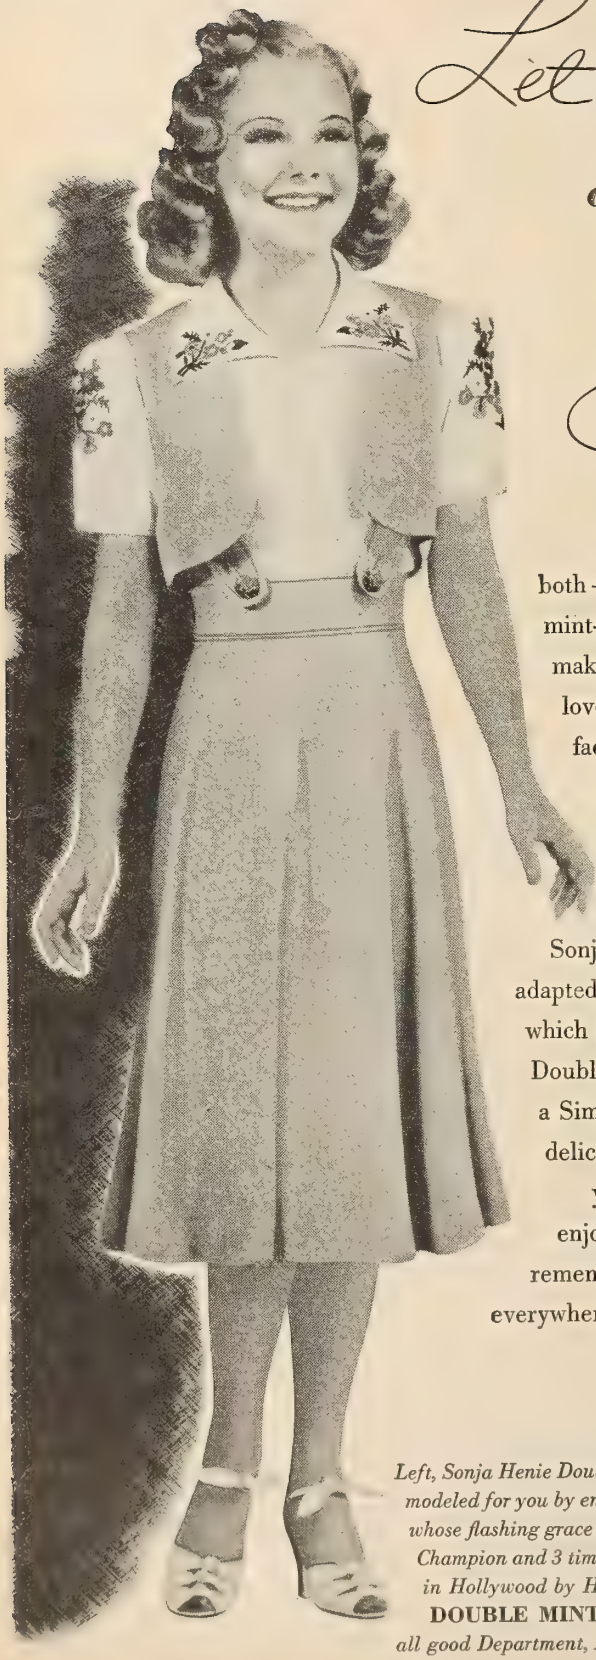
Two glorious "Sunlight" shades, Light and Dark. Flattering to any shade of tan. Low prices. Decorated screw-top jars, 35¢, 70¢. Big boxes, 10¢, 20¢.

Test them FREE! in glaring Sunlight



Pond's, Clinton, Conn., Dept. 9MS PV
Please rush me, free, Pond's "Sunlight" shades, enough of each for a 5-day test.
(This offer expires Oct. 1, 1938)

Name_____



Street_____

City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

Let refreshing Double Mint gum keep you cool and doubly lovely

The fickle male has an eye for girls who are not only good dressers but who have a taking smile as well. And now healthful Double Mint gum gives you both — style and smile. Millions enjoy this double-lasting mint-flavored gum. It helps assure sweet breath, relaxes tense nerves, makes your mouth feel cool and refreshed—whereby your whole self seems lovelier. Then too, chewing is nature's way to wake up sleepy face muscles (promoting young contours) and to brighten your teeth so that your smile reflects a new loveliness to attract friends.

However, it is smile plus style that wins. A perfect example is lovely Sonja Henie, acclaimed world famous artistic skater and distinguished Hollywood star. Asked by Double Mint gum Sonja Henie has designed for you this delightful, cool looking dress, left—adapted from her applause-getting Norwegian skating costume which she also designed. Smart. Becoming. And by Double Mint made available to you in a Simplicity Pattern. SO, you see how delicious Double Mint gum keeps you cool and doubly lovely. Daily enjoy this non-fattening sweet. Also remember it aids digestion. Sold everywhere. Buy several packages today.

Left, Sonja Henie Double Mint gum dress. Designed and modeled for you by enchanting, lovely SONJA HENIE whose flashing grace made her 10 times World Champion and 3 times Olympic Champion. Photographed in Hollywood by Hurrell. Made available to you by DOUBLE MINT gum in SIMPLICITY Pattern 2849. At nearly all good Department, Dry Goods or Variety stores you can buy this pattern. Or, write DOUBLE MINT Dress Pattern Department, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

S-128

NORMA SHEARER

CARY GRANT

GINGER ROGERS

ROBERT TAYLOR

HOPE HAMPTON

RICHARD GREENE

ANDREA LEEDS

Today our glamor girl would rather ride a hoss than be a hostess.

Carole and Clark Gable used to brighten the night spots, but no more!

What's become of the good

WHERE, OH where, has the Carole of yesterday gone? Lombard, the actress, is more predominant on the screen than ever before, but the Carole of the press gatherings, the portrait galleries, the Venice Pier, the Carole who was Hollywood's favorite Party Girl—what has happened to her? Days past you never had to look twice to find her. In headlines, at preview microphones, in most anyone's front parlor. She was always there, and conspicuously.

But now Carole is the needle in the Hollywood haystack, and press, public and photographers all find her hard to track down. What's happened to that good scout who was always available for a laugh, a picture, a gag or a cocktail? That's what everyone is asking now. And not only us get-arounds in Hollywood, but fans write and want to know, too. "What about Carole? Why no interviews? Has she gone high hat? Where is she? What is she doing?"

Well, here it is finally, not the awful truth, but the very acceptable truth which explains briefly, but conclusively, all those harassing questions. Carole, as you shall soon see, is, in many ways, still the old Carole, only, whereas she used to be "anybody's copy," the Carole of today is strictly "not for publication." And that brings us to the first "why" of the story.

For the answer to that most repeated question of why this sudden desire for personal oblivion and Garboian solitude we must first cherchez l'homme, because there is usually a man behind most female plots, though the reverse has been more often publicized. And in this case we don't have to look very far, for he is usually right there by her side, a certain Mr. Gable. Gable is responsible for at least eighty per cent of her withdrawals from fanfare, and his responsibility may even be divided into two parts: forty per cent direct influence, forty indirect. Let's take the indirect first, because at the moment it seems to be the most prevailing. When you ask Carole why she has suddenly adopted this words-off and camera-away policy as far as Clark is concerned, she just closes her lips tight, and for the moment you think she isn't going to answer you at all. Then the old Carole smile shimmers through and she says, not harshly, but gently, "Well, considering everything, wouldn't you?"

And because we, eventually, saw what she meant, and saw that she was right, we redirect the question to you. In other words, we'll try to squeeze you into her shoes (size four and a half A) and then you'll see it, too. So now, let's suppose.

You are a famous movie star. You meet and fall in love with another movie star. You begin going places together. The world takes you up, plasters you all over its pages. Glamorous couple, so delightfully suited to each other. Real love at last. And the inevitable speculation—how soon will you say "I do?" In the meantime the world forgets that there is still such a little thing as the movie man's wife (oh, isn't he divorced yet?) to be reckoned with.

You haven't forgotten though. There is talk about a property settlement—that seems to be holding up the parade to the altar, by detour of the divorce courts, but how can that drag out so long? You know that the other woman is a fine woman, beloved by all who know her, but you also know that love turns funny tricks sometimes. If she loves him enough there may be jealousy, for jealousy is the first flower of heartbreak, and jealousy often produces a little bud of its own, a not so fragrant one, a bud with thorns—or as (Continued on page 86)

Scout?

by Katharine Hartley

She used to be the life of the party, but now she's the needle in the Hollywood haystack

Once upon a time Carole Lombard took great pride in being dubbed Moviedom's most dazzling damsel.

"Why Should"

by

Gladys Hall

"Ty" wishes he were at least triplets to get around everywhere he's invited.

I ASKED Tyrone, "Are you going to get married?"

"No," said Tyrone, "why should I?"

This revelation, this good news of 1938, burst upon a waiting world just the other day, while Tyrone and I were lunching together on the studio lot. I arrived first, and waited for him, as what member of my sex wouldn't? Tyrone, commonly and affectionately called "Ty," dashed in breathlessly, peeling off a dinner jacket, and shrugging into a sports coat as he advanced. "Lightning change act?" I queried. "I wish I were three people!" he laughed. I seconded the motion. One of Tyrone is, obviously, not enough. Ask Mr. Zanuck. Ask his fans. Ask the girls. If only his family name had been Dionne now.

Still breathless, he declared that he didn't feel like eating, then proceeded to order a man-sized beef stew, and a beaker of buttermilk. Ty had been to the dentist's that morning, had just come off the set of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and was on his way to the desert for a three weeks' vacation before starting in "Suez." No wonder he felt it would come in handy to be like the amazing little amoeba, capable of endless dividings and subdividings.

It was then that I asked him, "Are you going to get married?" And it was then that Tyrone came back at me with, "Why should I?" He added, "Can you think of ten good reasons why I should?"

I told him that, without thinking, I could give him ten excellent reasons why he should not, why it seemed absurd for him even to consider it. At his age, with all that he is doing, and still has to do, with the world an open treasure chest, his for the reach of a finger, why should he marry? Of course, if he fell hopelessly in love, really hopelessly, so that love and a marriage license were one and indivisible, why, then . . .

Tyrone laughed. I needn't go on, he said. He'd thought it all out for himself. For one thing, he doesn't believe that any normal, up and doing young man, in these days of getting around a lot, and meeting all kinds of people, falls in love only once, or even only twice. He knows better. He illustrated by showing me an amusing cartoon recently published in one of the sophisticated "slick"

I Marry?"

Tyrone Power, who has fame and fortune, puts this personal question up to you

Tyrone Power and Janet Gaynor were as inseparable as ham and eggs. What happened?

magazines. The gist of it was that a Freshman says, "Mary is the only girl, the most wonderful in the world;" a Sophomore says, "Mary is the most wonderful girl in the world;" a Junior says, "Mary is a wonderful girl" and a Senior says, "The girl's name was Mary!"

"You're apt to fall in love a good many more times, aren't you?" I asked. "Both in and out?"

"Of course," smiled Tyrone.

So now you know.

I asked Tyrone the pertinent (and impertinent) question, "Are you going to get married?" because he is twenty-three, because he is a treat to the eyes, and because he is one of the pathetically few young eligibles left in man-starved Hollywood. I asked him because he "went with" Sonja Henie, and "goes with" Janet Gaynor, and incorrigibly match-making Hollywood has rumored and rumored and rumored that, first with Sonja, and then with Janet, Tyrone would soon be "twoing" it. Hollywood is probably the only place in the world where a boy and a girl cannot go out together, have fun together, even be romantic together without every one shouting the Mendelssohn wedding march.

The real facts of the matter are that Sonja and Tyrone were mutually attracted, of course. Why not? They had a lot of fun together, a lot in common, but they were never matrimonially inclined, either one of them. And when they realized that their fans were believing all of the publicity, were taking their "romance" much more seriously than they themselves were taking it, they decided to stop seeing each other, and put an end to rumors which were not fair to either their fans or to themselves.

Janet and Tyrone are good friends, too. Naturally there is an attraction between them. There usually is an attraction between any young man and young woman who are together a lot, but not an attraction which is likely to lead to the altar. Certainly not now. Not yet. Nor ever, I'd prophesy. Tyrone looks and acts quite heart-whole, quite fancy free. I think that all of the rumors have been magnifications, intensifications of the same old story which we inevitably (Continued on page 98)

"The reason my romances break up," sadly states Merle, "is because I'm jealous." Now — that's being candid for you!

She Wants to be Married

Yes, Merle Oberon frankly admits the altar is her goal

DO YOU want to get married?" I asked Merle Oberon. I was never any good at beating around the bush.

"Well, I'd like to be married, but I'm in no hurry to get married," she answered.

There's a difference. Between the passive, ladylike verb "to be" and the active, aggressive verb "to get" lies the story of wisdom which the lovely Britisher has gleaned in recent years from recent romances—her own and others'.

She regards the married state as the goal of every sane and normal woman. But, like the man who preferred the old-fashioned buggy to the aeroplane, she is in no rush. She's biding her time. We think her last romance, her gossiped-about romance with David Niven was marking time. Pleasantly, but not seriously. There is no romance at present. There are beaux, but no lover. In her middle twenties, she has passed the stage when girls fall in love with love. She is waiting to fall in love with a man.

When she first went out to Hollywood a few years ago —young, beautiful, luscious, with the romantic background of a youth which had taken her around the world —all the men who threw themselves at her feet kind of swept her off her feet, but only temporarily. It was wonderful to have one's phone ringing constantly, to have roses and orchids continually arriving. To be sure, being beautiful, Merle had always received plenty of male attention, but here was Big Time attention, from gents with famous names. But now—she wants something else.

She definitely does not want a marriage that is merely a stopover between Yuma and Reno. She doesn't hold with the Hollywood theory on marriage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." We had the feeling, while talking with her, that she regards her career as a very nice job, but only a job. She would want to keep her job after marriage—she said so—but she would not wish to become so bound around with it that, shortly after her wedding date, you'd be reading in the papers: "Marriage Conflicts with Career, says Merle Oberon." She says she doesn't see why there should be such a conflict, if both parties use their common sense. Adjustments will have to be made, yes; intelligent planning will be necessary to smooth out inevitable difficulties which must come up when the little woman works and, like as not, drags down a salary twice as big as hubby's.

IT'S ALL very well, of course, to say 'I'll do this, and I'll not do that,'" she told me. "The fact remains that we don't know what we'll do under circumstances we haven't yet experienced. I only know what I think I'll do, and what I shall try to do. When I get married, I want to stay in pictures. But I don't want to make more than two pictures a year. You've got to be good to do that, and I hope to be that good. I want them to be good pictures, and while I'm working in them I shall work just as hard as I possibly can. I love working in pictures. Every day I regard myself as a very lucky girl for landing in a medium which rewards a reasonable outlay of hard work with fame and glory—and such attractive cheques. All this is very pleasant, and I shan't want to give it up.

"We don't exactly choose the men with whom we'll fall in love, to be certain, but I doubt if I could fall for the old-fashioned sort who pounds the table and states that no wife of his shall be a breadwinner—or even a mink-coat winner. I'm sure I don't see why my future husband shouldn't be proud of me for my little spot of glory in the sun, delight in my triumphs, be pleased as punch that other people admire me. Well, at any rate, I hope it will be like that."

"What do you want from marriage—and your man?" I asked.

"A lot—from both," she answered.

Well, then, of course, that led to the old, old question of whether a wife is right in demanding absolute, unswerving fidelity from her husband. How did she feel about that—would she feel that everything was over if her husband was temporarily and, let us say, casually,

(Continued on page 76)

by Mary Mayes

"With a wife like Louise—loving, confident and always proud of me—I just have to make good," says Spencer Tracy very earnestly.

Because She Loved Him So Much

by Kay Frings

EXCEPT FOR the faith and foresight of one Louise Treadwell Tracy, Spencer Tracy would not be a movie star today.

Yet today, or at least not so many todays ago, Spencer has been awarded one of the greatest tributes the people of the screen world have to give. And never was an award made more fittingly, or with a more poignant story behind it. Spencer was ill in the hospital, unable to attend the famous yearly banquet at the Biltmore Bowl, and so it happened that it was Mrs. Tracy who reached with trembling hands to receive the gold statuette presented by The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best actor performance of 1937.

Not until the actual moment of the presentation did anyone know who had won the award. Still Mrs. Tracy, with the innate sense of premonition

If it weren't for the Spencer and Louise Tracy, to whom he gives his affection and all the credit for his success.

Susy snaps a candid picture of her famous daddy.

that has guided Spencer all through his career, must have felt something. She is not a woman to go to banquets just for the fun of it, especially not when her husband is ill in the hospital and she must leave her two children, Johnny and Susy, at home alone. But on that evening she did go, and in a very strange and dramatic way.

Unaccustomed to the Hollywood way of party-going, always arriving late, she was the first guest there. There she stood, alone in that vast ballroom where thirteen hundred people were presently to gather, no one to greet her, no friends with whom to chat. But she was not embarrassed or upset. She was buoyed by the love and confidence she has borne for fourteen years.

In that overwhelming emptiness, she moved simply about the tables, found her place and sat down. There she was sitting, a silent, thoughtful figure, when the first photographer found her. He grabbed a picture, one of the most significant pictures that has ever been taken. Empty rows of chairs stretching endlessly on either side of her, Mrs. Tracy sat alone, hands quietly folded, a soft smile on her lips. So they found her, the wife of Spencer Tracy, quietly waiting for the event of events, the event which would symbolize success in their chosen lives.

Eventually she was called downstairs where a pre-official ceremony of the presentation would be held for the benefit of the newsreel and radio, and there she received the news. It was typical of her that she did not stand around to be congratulated and fawned over, but that her first thought was for a telephone, and Spencer. He answered from his bedside and she told him, "Darling, you won it!" That was all she said, but his answer was more emotional. To say that sobs of joy came chokingly from his lips may not sound quite in the Tracy character—the hard-boiled Portuguese fisherman of "Captains Courageous," on which he won the award—but he did cry, and those sobs were very expressive of his feelings at that moment.

Ill and harassed, just over an operation, sobs of gratitude and relief came all too quickly, and it was some little while before Mrs. Tracy could help him compose himself. Calm, courage and steadiness—these have been her gifts to him for many years, and she gave freely of them again in that moment. "One thing I'm glad of, Louise," he said finally, "I'm glad I'm not there, because it's right you should receive the award, and not me. It was all your doing anyway."

Mrs. Tracy's speech later, at the banquet, has since become the most talked of speech in Hollywood, not because of any aptness or cuteness, but because of its overwhelming simplicity. Reluctantly she stepped into the spotlight, with genuine humility she faced the microphone. "I thank you," she said, "for Spencer, Johnny, Susy and myself." It was a brief message, a simple one. But it put a lump in thirteen hundred throats.

Louise Tracy has always had a lot of empty chairs to the right and the left of her in her life, and always she has sat in the midst of them, confident and sure, not of herself, but of her husband and his right to become a great actor. Those empty chairs were theatre seats, when Louise sat in the midst of them during rehearsals, watching her husband struggle with his career on the stage before her.

It was a struggle, not only from the bread and butter point of view, but because Spencer has always been beset with melancholy and moroseness. One minute he can be gay and full of delightful madnesses, as they'll tell you around the sets today; the next you'll see him sad and long-faced, some evil banshee working its dark magic in his brain. It's all part of his Irish temperament perhaps, and another part of it, too, is his nervousness and restlessness.

To be a man with moods—that has always been the bad luck in his life. But he has had good luck, too, in having a wife who knows how to get him over those moods, and that good luck has made up for all the rest. Today she is not the movie wife who dogs her husband's steps on the set. She has never been on a Tracy set, but she is there in spirit just as she was there actually in the old days, "out front" where he could call to her when he (Continued on page 88)

grace and grit of his wife, Spencer Tracy might be driving a bus today

Luise Rainer shows no interest in Life's Little Luxuries. Her surroundings are simple.

Meet the Clifford Odets. "Cliff and I," says Luise sagely, "are civilized people."

Rugged Individualist

by James Reid

Luise and Robert Young go sentimental in "The Toy Wife."

Luise tackles her movies and her marriage with originality

FOR A YEAR and a half, Luise Rainer has been married. Yet she still is the most singular girl in Hollywood.

You never will mistake Luise for anyone else, even at first glance.

There is something "different" about her small, oval face; something difficult to define. It is not a trick of make-up or hairdress. (Off the screen, she wears no make-up, and is indifferent about her hair.) The "difference" is an inner quality—a strange, intense sensitiveness.

Once you see her face, you don't forget it. Just as, once you hear her low, throaty, expressive voice with its trace of accent, you do not forget that, either. She is individual.

Yet—when you see her on the screen, you do not think of her in terms of Luise Rainer. You accept her as the wistful Viennese of "Escapade," or as temperamental Anna Held in "The Great Ziegfeld," or as inarticulate O-lan in "The Good Earth," or as rebellious Frou-Frou in "The Toy Wife." Always she is human and real and understandable. But never twice is she the same. Never once does she play herself.

Everybody knows what she is like as an actress. (Hasn't she won two Academy Awards in her three years in Hollywood?) But very few people know what she is like as a person. All that Hollywood knows is that she leads an exceptional existence—especially for a star.

She shows no interest whatsoever in Life's Little Luxuries. She has neither a house, a swimming pool, nor a retinue of deferential vassals. Her private life is private—and simple. She lives in an apartment too small to accommodate even one full-time servant. A colored woman comes in, afternoons, to clean and to cook dinner, and then leaves. The rest of the time, Luise is alone, unless her playwright-husband, Clifford Odets, is in Hollywood.

She never shows up glamorously at parties or premieres, even "the right ones." When she is working, Hollywood never sees her. She never goes out socially. When she isn't working, Hollywood doesn't see her, either. She is away somewhere, goodness knows where. Between pictures, she just vanishes.

No director or fellow-player has ever called her "difficult to work with." Yet there are constant rumors of her battling with her studio over scheduled roles. She is head over heels in love with her husband, and her husband is head over heels in love with Luise. No one who has ever seen them together can doubt that. Yet, a large part of the time, they live a continent apart. This is definitely baffling.

In short, she is something more than a movie star. Something more, even, than a winner of two Academy Awards. Something more than the brilliant actress-wife of a brilliant playwright. She is also an individualist.

If Luise were anyone else, you might cynically suppose that all this is an act, all part of a careful campaign to be "different." But, Luise being Luise, you cannot suppose any such thing. She is too forthright a person, too honest, too natural. Poseurs study their every action and word in advance. Luise is nothing if not impulsive.

Consider, for example, her decision to fly to New York on a few hours' notice after finishing (Continued on page 73)

John Barrymore combines the manners of Hamlet, the madness of Mercutio, and the unpredictable qualities of a baddie partially reformed

John often goes home from the studio with his grease paint on, and experts aver that he wears the same grease paint back in the morning.

by Caroline S. Hoyt

FOR A LONG time now, pens have been dipped in heart's blood for writing about John Barrymore. Strings on tear ducts have been tugged and tugged, and the story has reached a new sentimental high, all about a man's reform, and the miracle that love has worked in his life. We have all been led to believe that the man is no longer what he was. Gone his showmanship, his Rabelaisian humor, his abounding extravagances (not only of yachts and cars, but of pranks and moods), and forever relegated to the past his brilliant nonsensities. A new picture is painted: a Barrymore walking in sobriety, cloaked drearily in dignity. But all this is absurd. Very definite and delightful remnants of the man who has fascinated the public for years still remain, and don't let any one tell you otherwise.

True, John Barrymore's marriage is a success. True also, he no longer misbehaves in the old bottle way. But that he is a bore, in the way that most reformed men are bores, all peaches and cream, that is impossible to John Barrymore. He's still the old John, in the most delightful ways. There is still his great fund of stories, his capacity for outlandishness, his vacillations from moments of rage to those of the most devastating sweetness, and there is still his keen showmanship. He is still standing in the center of the stage, with the gleaming spotlight turned full on him, and he is still claiming "To be or not to be." In other words, John is still carrying on in the old Barrymore tradition. And those who like their heroes to carry on all shout a Halleluiah!

THERE WAS, for example, that incident recently when John, Elaine, and Elaine's mother were all having dinner downtown in a Los Angeles restaurant. An hour hence they were to appear on a national radio program, and there wasn't much time to dawdle over coffee. Then, as they were leaving the restaurant, hurrying to their car, John suddenly stood still, stared dramatically at a little hunchback who was selling newspapers on the corner, then quickly bounded toward him. That memory of his, which is a card index file for everything that happened in the before-yesterday past, but which is strangely incompetent when yesterday's events need to be recalled, had suddenly offered up a buried treasure. In one great leap John was at the little man's side, clutching him around the shoulders, calling him loudly by name, delving at once into "the old days" when these two had worked in the same picture together.

To say that it was a meeting of old friends doesn't do the scene justice. It was a show, the noisiest, most ecstatic meeting that had ever been witnessed there on one of the town's busiest four corners. Forgotten were Elaine and Mrs. Jacobs, who looked at their watches anxiously, and whose hurry-persuasions were completely drowned out by the noisy excitement. Ignored were the dozens of people who began to gather around. A policeman edged in, and soon John was telling him about it too. They hadn't seen each other for years, and here was "one of the greatest little fellows who had ever lived," and the precious minutes flew. Finally Elaine tugged at the policeman's coat, and the policeman tugged at John's, "The lady says you will have to hurry."

Finally they dragged him off, the policeman clearing the way, leaving the hunchback a little flabbergasted by it all. At the radio station John told the doorman about it. In front of the microphone, just before he went on, he told the announcer about it. Three days later he was still talking about "the greatest little fellow on earth." It was only a meeting between two old friends, but it had all the qualities of a great play scene, and there had been crowds, too, to give it applause. His abundance of emotional energy, his extravagant use of voice, words and gestures had turned it into something which the strollers of downtown Los Angeles on that particular evening will never forget. No, reformed or not reformed, John does not go around meeting old friends, and saying, "How are you, old man?" and letting it go at that.

John still has his moments of ill humor, but, as in the old days, they have their (Continued on page 90)

Everywhere that John Barrymore goes, Elaine is sure to be, with Ma Jacobs bringing up the not-too-distant rear.

Bubbling Billie

I SAT in Billie Burke's drawing room while her secretary, a plain, middle-aged woman with a sweet smile, bustled around the room. Every few minutes the phone would ring, and the maid would rush in and say to the secretary, "Miss D—, the phone is ringing."

She couldn't hear it. "Poor Miss D—," Billie sighed later, "she was with Mr. Ziegfeld for twenty years, and so many people kept shouting at her that she has grown hard of hearing."

Even before Billie Burke came in, I marveled at how, in the few days she had been in this hotel, her personality seemed to have pervaded the room. It was easily the most feminine room I have ever seen, with its flowered chintz draperies, white lamps with dainty flower designs, and vases filled with jonquils, tulips and lilacs, spilling their fragrance everywhere. There are nearly always three or four vases of flowers in every star's room, but I counted ten in Billie Burke's.

Her secretary stooped to pick up a petal that had fallen to the floor. "Every time I do this," she said, "I remember 'Craig's Wife,' the woman who would have no flowers around because the petals fell off and marred the perfection of her rooms. In that picture Miss Burke portrayed Mrs. Craig's neighbor, who had a beautiful flower garden, and was always trying to give some of her flowers away to the neighbors. That's just the sort of thing Miss Burke would do, too."

Suddenly the door flew open, and a slim young person cascaded into the room. There was such youth and impetuosity in her movements that I thought, "This must be Billie Burke's daughter, Patricia." I caught a glimpse of red-gold hair and a tiny jacketed figure. Then she fairly flew to a closet. A moment later she sank down on the rose-colored couch.

"I'm so sorry to be late," she said breathlessly. "I had no idea what time it was."

This was Billie Burke!

Billie Burke is one of the most feminine stars I have ever met. Even in the tailored suit she wore, she looked as frilly and frivolous as a lace handkerchief. She wore a strand of pearls around her neck, and a miniature of Patricia as a baby, which seemed to say, "See, I am not ashamed of being sentimental."

"You manage to look about twenty years old," I sighed. "How do you do it?"

"Oh, but I don't," she said, and smiled that shy smile that made her the idol of matinee girls twenty-five years ago.

"To keep young," Billie continued, "live normally and don't mind getting old. Never think about the fact that some day you are going to look old—and it will never happen to you. Keep your body limber, and don't let yourself get old under the knees. Walk every day, keep your tummy in, your posture right, your muscles taut. I always exercise in the morning for twenty minutes, and take cold showers and salt rubs.

Billie Burke and Brian Aherne kept the audience in constant gaiety in "Merrily We Live."

"Patricia is her own mistress," says Billie of her talented daughter.

by Dora Albert

Underneath those frills and foibles, there beats a big, bright brain

Sometimes women let themselves get fat, and when you're fat, you're poisoned, and must try twice as hard to reduce, for the poison in your body makes you lazy."

There is something amazing in the way Billie Burke's career has gone on and on. A generation ago, when candies and hats and coiffures were being named after her, the word "Billieburkishness" was coined to express her peculiar charm. Twenty years ago an interviewer wrote, " 'Billieburkishness' signifies demure sauciness, immature coquetry, irresistible grace, fatal wounds inflicted by angel eyes."

WHEN THIS sheltered girl fell in love with Florenz Ziegfeld, known for his gay recklessness, everyone felt sorry for Billie Burke. Fearing that marriage would ruin her career, the theatrical producer for whom she worked did everything he could to end the romance, even to the point of confiscating Flo's letters to Billie. But Ziegfeld simply hired Victor Kiraly, the manager of Billie's show, to manage a show for him, and persuaded Victor to smuggle his letters to Billie. Then he and Billie would meet secretly. When interviewers questioned her, she would say, "I have no intention of marrying Mr. Ziegfeld or anyone else, although Mr. Ziegfeld is a very charming man." One hectic April day they were married.

All Broadway predicted that the marriage would never last. If Anna Held, famed on two continents for her provocative manner, her large limpid eyes, and her glorious figure, had not been able to hold Florenz Ziegfeld, what chance did this naive girl have?

"Never pursue a man," Billie says. "Always let him pursue you. And never let him be too sure of you. For eighteen years I held the most difficult man in the world." It was not a boast. It was a simple statement of fact.

"The open hand is the only way to hold a man. I think the most stultifying thing in the world is (Continued on page 83)

"A woman is smart to play dumb," Billie Burke confides.

Edgar Bergen hasn't come as close to marriage as Charlie has!

"Well, mow me down, if Andrea Leeds hasn't fallen for me!"

Girls seldom get the idea that Charlie's crushes

EDGAR BERGEN may have less on top of his head than Charlie McCarthy, but he has more inside it. And, despite the fact that recession has hit his hairline, you can still call Edgar handsome. Handsomer than Charlie, certainly. Yet, to hear Edgar tell it, he hasn't come half as close to marriage as Charlie has.

"He's the one who mows 'em down," Edgar says, wryly. "I get the left-over glances. I'm sort of tolerated, as a friend of Charlie's."

Practically from the beginning, it has been that way. Time after time, Charlie has kept girls from taking Edgar seriously—when Charlie has given him a chance to meet them. Year after year, Charlie has reduced Edgar's possible love-life to splinters.

There was that pretty history teacher in high school, for example. Edgar was inclined to be enamored of her. But he never would have passed history, never would have graduated, never would have become what he is today, if she hadn't met Charlie. Edgar himself hadn't known Charlie very long at that time. He didn't sense Charlie's potentialities. He didn't realize that women could fall in love with dummies. Even wooden dummies. He got around to that discovery later. At the moment, he was absorbed only with the discovery that he could "throw" his voice.

"I didn't know I could until I had unconsciously done it. I didn't get the idea from an ad, or a book, or even an urge. I stumbled into it. You know the funny yells that kids have, cat-calling to each other. Well, one day I was calling to one of my classmates in the school corridor. He looked for me in the opposite direction. I thought it was because of the echoes in the hall. But the same thing happened other places. After a while, I began to think that maybe I had something.

"One night, at home, I was studying. To keep myself amused, I was imitating an old man in the distance, calling. My mother was in the next room. Finally, she couldn't stand it any longer. She went to the door, to see where the old man might be, and what ailed him.

"That decided me. I invested in the 'Wizards' Manual —or How to Be a Magician, a Hypnotist and a Ventriloquist.' All for twenty-five cents. I was about thirteen or

by James Reid

Bergen feels that it's much better to be Charlie's friend than not.

might really be Bergen's!

fourteen. Anyway, too young to wonder how a girl could ever sit on my lap, with a dummy there. If I'd thought of that angle, I suppose I'd have planned to take care of it with hypnotism."

Also, if he hadn't acquired Charlie, he might never have had to endure romantic frustration. Any other dummy might have been persuaded to hide in a suitcase after working hours, and give Edgar a chance to put across his own personality. But not Charlie.

"My first dummy was an ordinary papier-maché one. He was like a million other dummies, and that gave him a negative personality, to begin with. On top of that, he was blackface—and I wasn't so good at colored dialect. Between his blank face and my hammy dialect, people watched me, instead of him. They never seemed to get the idea that he was supposed to be talking.

"So I went down to an old woodcarver and told him I wanted a dummy that was 'different.' I wanted one with character in his face. One that looked wide-awake. One that looked as if he could talk by himself.

"I took along some sketches (Continued on page 81)

Cute Marjorie Weaver feels her net profit will be high when she goes fishing for long hours under the summer sun.

When aplayin' she does go, Arleen Whelan, right, wears wool, for she realizes it is cooler than you'd think.

Believe it or not, there are ways and means of getting the best of a high temperature

by
Mary Marshall

THERE ARE those who love hot weather and those who hate hot weather, but the fact remains that, with the exception of a fortunate few who own slices of mountain tops, we all have to cope with hot weather problems in one way or another. The girls who simply adore the heat, my dear, are apt to go to extremes in taking advantage of summer's health-giving and beauty-giving properties; and those who hate heat with an unholy hate are apt to sit down limply and give up all effort to feel good and look nice until comes the first of October. There is a happy medium, and there are ways and means of getting the best of a high temperature. Give me your attention and I'll tell you a few things.

The psychological effect of looking nice is wunnerful. "Oh, how cool you look!" Do folks say that to you? Cool, and fresh, and fragrant—that's summer sex appeal. Well, begin from the skin out. Take luke-cold baths and showers. Put a pine essence, which has some zing to it, into your tub. Blot yourself dry, don't rub. My pet lazy stunt is to let myself evaporate—takes a little time, but mmm, it does feel good. Then pat on cologne or toilet water instead of using a bath powder, which is inclined to roll up into heating and chafing particles when it's been on a little while. Use a

Everything's Under the Sun

A permanent with a soft wave like Anita Louise's is most comforting on hot days.

Olivia De Havilland basks with the greatest of ease.

deodorant which tends to stop perspiration.

Wear a shirt or chemise under your girdle. And don't leave off that girdle if you need one, and practically everybody does, even the thin gals. The idea of the shirt is—well, haven't you all gone thru the business of tugging on a girdle after a shower, and getting hot and cross all over again? Remember that cotton is a durn sight cooler than silk, and that old things are cooler than new things. I buy gent's cheap woven undershirts to wear under everything that isn't transparent. You can find cotton pants and slips if you shop around for them. Pack away your lace-trimmed lingerie for winter. Sitting on a lace-trimmed pantie and getting stencilled does not make for that fresh and cool appearance.

I don't need to remind you of the value of washable things over clothing that must be dry cleaned. But there, too, I should give a thought to the gal who must work in an office except for that cherished two weeks' vacation. She is faced with choosing between a laundry bill that staggers, or standing over the ironing board. In which case, may I remind her of the blessing of seersucker? And howz about a thin dark or printed suit, with which thin, inexpensive blouses can be worn? Alpaca is nice and cool, too. Save your white linen or sharkskin suit for gala occasions and make up your mind that you can squeeze only two wearings out of it at the outside, and then it's off to the laundry. White suits look cool, but they ain't. And may I remind you that wool is a heap cooler than it's given credit for being? This is a tip passed along by Arleen Whelan who practically lives all summer in short-sleeved wool tops, plus shorts, slacks or skirts, as occasions demand.

Do you dote upon going without stockings whenever you can? Okay, but kindly wear something between your feet and your shoes. Thin wool, again. is best. Do you want to know (Continued on page 70)

What Makes A Man Fall In Love?

Interest, but not aggressiveness, wins men like Gene Raymond, left. Appearance and disposition count a lot with Dick Powell.

Five Hollywood heroes list the wiles that snare the unfair sex

by Lillian Genn

WHAT MAKES a man fall in love? What particular appeal makes a woman attractive to him? What qualities capture his heart?

Many a girl with charm, looks, and intelligence never succeeds in winning a Prince Charming, and would give a pretty penny to know why she fails.

We thought it would be interesting to have the men themselves shed some light on the subject, so we hunted down five of Hollywood's most attractive males, and put the problem to them. What advice could they give a girl who would find love, and, through it, happiness? Also what might she unconsciously do that would chill love?

The first object of our research was the idol-of-the-hour, Robert Taylor. He thinks that the answer to a girl's chance at romance lies in her general genius for making herself attractive.

"I don't mean by that physical attractiveness. I am taking it for granted that she has made herself as lovely as possible, and that she dresses smartly," he explained as he relaxed his stalwart six feet in an easy chair.

"What I mean is that she should cultivate the qualities which make people vote her a 'grand person.' Geniality, tact, and poise are far more powerful drawing cards than a pretty face.

"I believe that nothing is so effective as the vivid and radiant quality which is reflected through a good disposition. Men don't enjoy the company of a girl who is pessimistic, or cynical, or who complains.

"She must acquire confidence, if she doesn't already possess it. Without the feeling that she's equal to any situation, and has something to offer, the girl probably wouldn't be able to do anything about it if romance did come her way. Her frame of mind has a great deal to do with how she impresses others.

"She should be friendly. Let her go out of her way to be nice to people, to meet them more than 'half way.' She should give of her time and energy to help them, and to understand them.

Wayne Morris likes intelligence, sophistication and a sense of humor.

James Stewart, right, looks for naturalness and companionship in his girls.

"The greatest single reason why many girls are lonely and don't win their Prince Charming, is because they don't try to understand other human beings. Their point of view is out of joint with their fellows', and they are unwilling to admit it or believe it.

"When a girl takes an interest in people, and her sympathies expand, she plants the seed of popularity. She finds that people begin to be interested in her.

"In the story books, the girl who found her Prince Charming was always feminine. The same thing is quite true in real life. This doesn't mean that a girl should be a clinging vine. But it is fatal for her to toss away her greatest charm.

"I think, too, that very often a girl would be lots more attractive to men if she didn't try so hard to be. If she could just forget whether her nose was shiny, and not bring out the compact and lipstick every five minutes, it would make a man feel more at ease.

"If I ever marry, I'll take my wife on a camping trip with me for about two weeks out of every year," said Bob, shrewdly. "She won't have any occasion for make-up and will have to be as nature made her. It will do her no end of good."

WE NEXT asked the enormously attractive Dick Powell for his opinions on the subject. He depreciated his abilities as a love-expert, but after a little urging, he broke down and gave us some valuable pointers.

"If a girl isn't getting the right sort of breaks from Cupid, I don't think it's anything to develop an inferiority complex about. No, finding your true love is largely a matter of luck. If you don't believe me, just take a look at all the plain girls and homely men who have done all right for themselves," beamed Dick.

"But such a girl certainly ought to walk firmly up to a mirror, take a good long look at herself in a bright light and say, 'What's wrong with me?' Perhaps she'll find some little matter of make-up, hair comb, or dress that needs changing. More probably, she'll notice some little detail she's been missing, such as a discontented droop to her mouth, or an unfriendly expression about the eyes, that's been making all the difference in the world."

Then Dick disclosed what he believed to be the most potent secret of all in this extremely interesting business of romance: Don't be obvious.

"A girl who makes her intent to charm too evident, sets the tide of popularity flowing away from instead of toward her. Give the poor male his rightful chance to exert his own powers of fascination. The one thing he'll run from quicker than anything else is even the faintest suggestion of a trap to catch him off guard. He must be free from that suspicion.

"To try to attack man's psychological fortress with the weapons of 'See-how-charming-I-am' is fatal from the first onslaught.

"Be charming, but let him find out for himself just how charming you are," smiled Dick. "He'll do it, never fear! But he'll do it a whole lot faster and more surely if you leave your signboards at home."

Many a man, according to James Stewart, falls in love with a woman just because of her smile.

"A woman's smile can change her entire face," explained this likable young man, in that slow drawl of his. "So much so, that I really believe it is in a smile that a woman is or is not charming. Women who haven't beauty, have supplied themselves with magnetism, and have added to the attractiveness of their personality, merely by knowing how and when to smile.

"The faculty of knowing what to say and when to say it is second only to the ability to say nothing at the right time. This is very important," stressed young Stewart. "Ask any man, and, if he's (Continued on page 95)

"Yes, I've certainly been affected by success," confides Ray Milland.

Ray's conceited, extravagant, important—and admits it—but he's way up there just the same, and here are the real reasons

by Ben Maddox

RAY MILLAND strode into the studio café.

He was late, an unpardonable sin with him. "I can't stand anyone who's late," he declared emphatically, and waved impatiently for a waitress. "There's no excuse for it!" Definite he was, just like that. He does nothing by halves.

There didn't seem to be a waitress—things like this happen even to movie stars! So he groaned and, momentarily stalled, presented his own alibi. "We had a party last night and one of our guests went home leaving his car behind him. He came for it this noon and apologized for an hour. I couldn't stop him!" Apologies, you gather, must be brief to win Ray. He can get a point immediately, and prolonging the obvious is the fastest way to bore him.

A fleeting year ago this dark and handsome fellow who looks like Prince Charming and is, literally, more fascinating than that legendary gent, was merely a promising leading man. Now, however, his rating is entirely different. His charm packed so undeniable a punch that, at last, he has been rewarded. Having proved he has what it takes, he is busily heroing in million-dollar supers, his studio's best efforts. He is, finally, an important one.

So now, you fans are clamoring for an up-to-the-minute memo on Milland. What's happened to him, as a person, while he's been making all this progress professionally? Has becoming a big shot changed him? Is he happier bedecked with his Hollywood halo? Is his personal life the life of Riley, now that he's "arrived?" In short, what is success doing to him?

"When I woke up this morning," said Ray, despairing of ever catching a waitress' eye, "I had an impulse to pack a suitcase and head straight for Switzerland. It's too late for the skiing, but at least I could see St. Moritz, and feel its spell again. This afternoon's airliner east would be the thing. I like to get places in a hurry. I'd take the Normandie for the Atlantic."

"A nice steak, Mr. Milland?" chirruped the blonde delaying the lunch.

"I could pack in five minutes!" retorted Ray. "All right, steak—before I starve to death."

He is, he asserted, a very impatient fellow. "You can have excitement if you go after it," Ray informed me. You can mix with glamorous people if you want to. I speak from experience. I hate to be stuck with mediocrity. It isn't necessary. One of the advantages of success is that you can be more honest as to how you feel. You can speak your mind more freely. I'll admit that certain behavior antagonizes me. I am bored to the extreme by people who try for an effect. I can sense sham instantly. In fact, I can see through people, even tell their next move. That's why I have only three close friends. I'm not being inconsistent, either. Being cosmopolitan isn't a sham when in your heart you want to escape from the ordinary."

A film idol rarely admits to (Continued on page 80)

by Robert McIlwaine

Glenda may not practice what she preaches, but she has the idea!

GET IT while you can, and all you can!" Glenda Farrell speaking, and as the screen's ace portrayer of gold-diggers, she should know the answers! "Never try to save a man's money for him, or you'll get it in the neck. I know, for that's what happens to me. The best plan is to spend till it hurts. But—never let it hurt you! The more you make a man spend, the more he will earn for you to spend."

The ironic part of it is that vivacious Glenda, on the screen, can take a guy for his last match box. But in real life, she can't get today's cocktail—yep, it may be cocktails, but they're on Miss F! However, yesterday's beau is today's friend with Glenda. So—

"I'm Irish and romantic, so I just can't seem to use my head. That's why I end up saving some man's money and a blonde cutie spends it for him. I don't go to the Troc or the races! Oh no, I even wait for movies to come to neighborhood houses where it's a quarter instead of fifty cents. But, along comes a brainless wonder and she's at the races, the Troc and all the swank previews.

"I invariably pick the wrong man. Do you know, for two long years I went with one lad and saved his pennies. He was struggling to get ahead and I was in love. My first thought wasn't where we would go. Never! How could we spend an inexpensive evening?. We dined in, listened to the radio and on rare occasions (after pay day) went to the neighborhood movie. I was looking out for his future!

"And what happened to yours truly? Got it right in the neck! A contract player from another lot, more lush than flush, saw this swell accumulating bankroll and decided to adopt it. You can bet there are no quiet evenings by the fire for him now. Oh no, it's the races and a new club each night. She has to be seen! Not me! That air around Santa Anita way might give me a cold!

"I stood this just as long as I could and pushed off for New York. It worked. Yes, it's my turn now! Why, I've broken five dates in a row with him, and I'm thoroughly enjoying it, too. A lot of people would think I'm an awful lot in love to take the trouble to break those dates—and maybe an awful lot of people are right.

THE SAME thing, figuratively, goes for the studio. I work like a Trojan, think I'm doing a good job and when I expect a raise, what do I get? 'Everyone's letting players go, so take this or else.' Well, I took the 'or else' and it turned out to be pretty darn good. It was in the nature of a mild triumph when I went to another studio, getting as much for three days work as I had gotten for three months. The picture wasn't very good, but they knew I was in demand. Then along came an offer for as much money for two pictures as my home studio offered me for four. Well, they finally came to giving me as much for three as I was offered for the two. You know where my old studio's got me? I've been with them so long I wouldn't be happy anywhere else. So I'm going back home and do Torchy Blanes again and I'll love it."

Glenda is residing in that California town boasting as its mayor none other than Hugh Herbert. And, Miss F. is the Mayor's favorite citizen. Maybe it's only an idea, but we'll bet leading citizens of Studio City will be gathering out Farrell way once her chintzes are hung and that old Sheffield feels at home. (Continued on page 75)

IT'S FASHIONABLE TO BE feminine

by Marian Squire

THE CURRENT cinema clearly indicates the trend for feminine furbelows, and both male and female juries unanimously convict them of charm, allure and flattery. Don't go overboard with ruffles, however, for a truly smart get-up is never fussy. Rustle delicately, and ruffle with discretion. Be as girlish as you like, but don't let your clothes give the impression that you've dressed in a high wind.

Virginia Bruce, in "The First Hundred Years" has a series of business frocks which illustrate the point neatly —with one sartorial exception to prove the rule.

There are delicate touches of frou-frou, but "touches," remember. One slim black coat dress has wide revers of stiffened white piqué. A soft chiffon ruffle outlines the neckline close to the throat, relieving what might otherwise have been too-tailored severity. It blends the clinging vine with efficiency, something all business girls could use to advantage. A soft bosomed black frock, fitted through waist and hips, has a huge rhinestone clip as sole decoration. This is worn with a tiny cone hat, erupting at the top in small curled ostrich tips. Another cone crowned hat has a heart shaped brim, and accompanies a waist-length silver fox cape.

In one of designer Dolly Tree's costumes for Virginia Bruce her imagination goes a bit out of bounds. Her travelling outfit is no help, either to Miss Bruce's face or figure. The jacket is too long for symmetry, and the suit's lines are destroyed by too much swirl of material, and burden of wide fluffy fur collar. This is a lesson to tuck away for future reference. However slim you may be, silhouette is sacrificed when a swing skirt is combined with swing jacket or tunic. There are too many lines

In "Four Men and a Prayer" Loretta Young, left, wears a dramatic evening gown of white chantilly lace with sequins. Irene Dunne's broad-shouldered white bengaline coat tops a pencil slim black crepe skirt and a jabot blouse of rich silver lamé.

The stars show you how to combine glamor with smartness in new costumes for morning, noon and night going in too many directions. It's all right to maintain the pencil line in both, but a wide skirt required a fitted jacket —and vice versa. Miss Bruce is further handicapped in this sequence, by a bonnet whose brim shoots out in front, with a crown that projects rearward, in a flat line across the top. A novelty, no doubt, but most unbecoming.

Miss Tree redeems herself, however, with two beautifully simple evening gowns whose interest centers in accessories. Quite similar, both have Grecian ancestry, carried out in soft white material. In one, small rhinestone birds perch on the shoulder, where the wide folds of the bodice are tightly shirred—an intriguing touch you might remember as a builder-upper for any evening gown of your own that has lost its appeal. Even the "five and dimes" now abound with butterflys, bugs, and other interesting clips which add a dash to your shoulder straps.

The second "formal" is in the same spirit, with yards and yards of skirt clinging to the figure when not in motion. Variation is in the bodice. One shoulder strap lies flat, and the other is a twisted (Continued on page 79)

The elegant simplicity of shimmering gold lamé fashions another of Loretta Young's long-sleeved dinner gowns in "Four Men and a Prayer." Irene Dunne's clothes in "Joy of Living" prove the bolero to be universally becoming and always popular.

by George Benjamin

She may only be eleven, but little Withers can troupe with the best of 'em

Calamity Jane

DESPITE OPINION in some certain quarters, Jane Withers is not a precocious little girl. She is not, offscreen, the young Indian she portrays when the cameras are grinding. To be sure, she is as bright and noisy as Fourth of July, but there the "brat" in young lady Withers ends. No, Janey is not a problem child. She is not, her mother tells you, a wonder child either. She is just a normal, healthy youngster with an abundance of talent and pep.

When it comes to mimicry, she has a parrot backed off the boards. Her imitations are devastating. One of them was so penetrating that it was deleted from her personal appearance tour by request—the request of an executive in her organization. No tribute for accuracy could be higher, you're bound to agree.

Jane is an indefatigable worker. She will give full measure on whatever the script calls for—and the script usually has a way of calling for taking a header down a flight of stairs or a sock on the jaw or an equally strenuous bit of business which requires liniment and bandages once the scene is shot to satisfaction. Since calamities invariably punctuate the Withers' pictures, the young star has come to be known as Calamity Jane. She doesn't mind it at all. In fact, the appellation sort of gives her an added importance and lustre.

Jane will never have to learn how to win friends etc., etc. She knows instinc- (Continued on page 97)

JACKIE AND HIS BRIDE TELL ALL

Here, at last, are the inside facts of the Coogan story told to you by those who really know it—the Coogans!

A poignant scene from Jackie's greatest success, "The Kid," with Charlie Chaplin.

I WANT MY MONEY

BY JACKIE COOGAN

I'M BROKE.

For most of my childhood years I worked—hard work, too—and I have nothing to show for it. Acting before the cameras means unceasing concentration, a constant grind. Most men have their fortunes made, their careers behind them, after as many years of labor. I have little or nothing. I shall have to begin all over again . . . at twenty-three.

This wasn't what my father, a real pal, intended. He always had my best interests at heart. I know that sounds trite as I say it, but it is what he used to tell me time and again—and after all, he would have had no motive in lying. He knew that I would always share

Jackie, looking pretty slick with a "topper" and walking stick.

Charlie Chaplin and Jackie—fast friends since "The Kid."

The child star of more than a decade ago gives the inside, intimate facts of his quest for justice in the courts everything I had with my dad, that I would never let him down. I had a right to expect as much of him. He wouldn't have failed me.

When I was a kid—"The Kid," as they called me in the picture of that name, produced and starred in by Mr. Chaplin—Dad used to say, "Come on, Jackie, let's get going. The $4,000. you earn this week is yours." For years he put me on a petty allowance of six dollars and twenty-five cents a week, reminding me, "You're going to be a rich man when you grow up. I want you to learn the value of money. I don't want you to be like most of the other Hollywood actors who leave the screen broke and disheartened."

But all that I earned in those years has been taken from me. It is in the hands of my mother, Mrs. Bernstein, and my stepfather, Arthur L. Bernstein. (My mother claims now that I knew all along that none of the millions I earned belonged to me. In her court deposition she stated that she never intended that I should have any portion of them.)

What was that income? When I was six, income taxes of $53,000. a year were paid for me. When I was thirteen, my father bought a number of lots in the Wilshire-Fairfax section of Los Angeles. That is the swank residential part of town. The lots cost a great deal of money; they are worth nearly a million dollars today. Dad—and I offer this as typical proof of the unselfishness of his attitude—placed the check for the property in my hands, so that I might turn it over to the seller. "Here, Jackie—it's your land. You pay for it," he said.

Those lots have since been sold.

A year or so later, Dad purchased a business block for $300,000. And much earlier he had bought at least $500,000. worth of other real estate. Then there were the oil wells at Huntington Beach—still producing so far as I know.

In January, 1923, seven companies were competing for my services. Mr. Joseph Schenck of Metro outbid the others. I received a $500,000. bonus on a contract which called for four pictures at a sixty-forty cut. Dad was to be paid sixty per cent of the net—for me. I remember that we signed with Mr. Schenck instead of with Mr. Sol Lesser, who had helped further my career, because Mr. Lesser was unwilling to let Dad act in a supervisory capacity over my productions, whereas Mr. Schenck had agreed. Dad was also given a salary (Continued on page 92)

Jackie's favorite and most recent portrait of himself.

Here he greets Betty Grable at the airport.

orbids Eviction of Fam

alts Seizure of Cars nd Mansion
Receiver

OLLYWOOD, April 21 (U
ie Coogan today prevente er and stepfather from b ssessed of the mansion Rolls-Royces bought with y he earned as a movie sta made his gesture amid med reports that his his mother, Mrs. Lill
Bernstein, and her hus
L. Bernstein, for an he $4,000,000
childhoo out of co nsteins w

ng that the be forced kie hurrie stopped it. had been the court to ogan proper the suit.
l indicated ying out the extent of ta l ousting the San Fernand

o contends tha o leave the ho
he had demand his lawyers permitting the ne and continue after making

Kid, now marrie said that Bernst nt him off without he had ordered h
t the Brown Derb

H. Wilson an-would open hearin the case of tein.
has asked the h

S 'KID'
,300,000

enies $4,000,000
oogan Admits Wild Oat

GELES, April 20 (AP).—
oogan, highest-salaried of the silent movies, was d today by his mother, lian Coogan Bernstein, on that he earned $4,000,000
he reached legal age two ago.
Bernstein, resisting her son's or an accounting of his estat he ground no such estate exist l an affidavit stating Jackie nings amounted to only $1,300,0 e contends that whatever mon d property remain are hers un he California law that gives minor's salary to his parents.

Claims Trust Fund
Marshaling evidence for claim that a trust fund was cre him by his father, the Coogan, Jackie disc ttorneys had found o nts in the Hall o purportedly s contempla kie's c ip

Jackie Coogan
Halts Eviction
Of His Mother
e Kid' Re

Coogans May Bu

Hollywood Hears Rumo
Settlement Are

HOLLYWOOD, April 21 (U

Jackie Accepts Mother's Challenge, but He Can't Remember Anything Serious.

HOLLYWOOD, April 19 (U. P.).—Jackie Coogan expressed willingness today to accept his mother's invitation and state the nature of the "particularly bad thing" he did when he was 20 years old.

Unfortunately, he continued, he couldn't remember ever having been "particularly bad." In his adolescent years, he said, he hadn't been exactly a perfect boy, but " been "just kid stuff" really

Bernstein, a dapper little man, tried to comfort his wife testified in the
Ruben

earing had refused to
of the $4,000,000 he id because he was a bad boy—he was bad boy."
as opposed as Jackie any part rned, will give on as Jackie's estioning Mrs.
day.

con
His talk with just aft
age.
bad thing
"What
"Let Jack self," she

JACKIE SHOULD HAVE

Before the young Coogans took out their marriage license, Jackie's mother warned Betty that he was a poor boy.

"When we were married, Mr. Bernstein, Jackie's stepfather, didn't even come into the church. He stood outside."

OF COURSE Jackie should have his money. Not only because he worked eighteen years for it, worked his whole childhood away, and earned it, but also because he's the kind of a boy who lives the Golden Rule, who always gives other people their just dues, and more.

I don't mean that Jack is generous only with money. Goodness knows he hasn't had much of that. I mean that he gives everything in kindness, and thoughtfulness and consideration. I never knew a boy so sweet to his mother as Jackie was. He always called her "Moodie dear." He was always affectionate with her, or tried to be. And his affection was never returned. People who have known him all his life tell me this.

Jackie is the most unselfish person I ever knew. And because he is that way it never occurs to him that others won't be the same. Any other boy would have realized that something was very wrong when his estate, the trust fund he, and everyone else, believed was there for him, was not turned over to him on his twenty-first birthday. Instead, he was given a "present" of a thousand dollars. And even that had a string to it. He would be given this gift, he was told, on condition that he sign certain papers which, it turns out, signed away just about everything he had. He signed them. It's hard to believe, but he did, because he is, or was, entirely without suspicion. It just wasn't in Jackie to believe that a fellow's mother would keep from him what was his. He trusted his mother. And even now though he is sensitive enough to realize that this is a bitter thing he has had to face and to do, even now he isn't bitter about it. He realizes that it had to be done, but he says, "I'd rather not talk about it."

I know Jackie well enough to swear that if hi

Mrs. Jackie Coogan tells you the intimate details that led to Press Agent Quits Coogan Cas

Hired Saturday by Mrs. Bernste
Needs Help Badly.

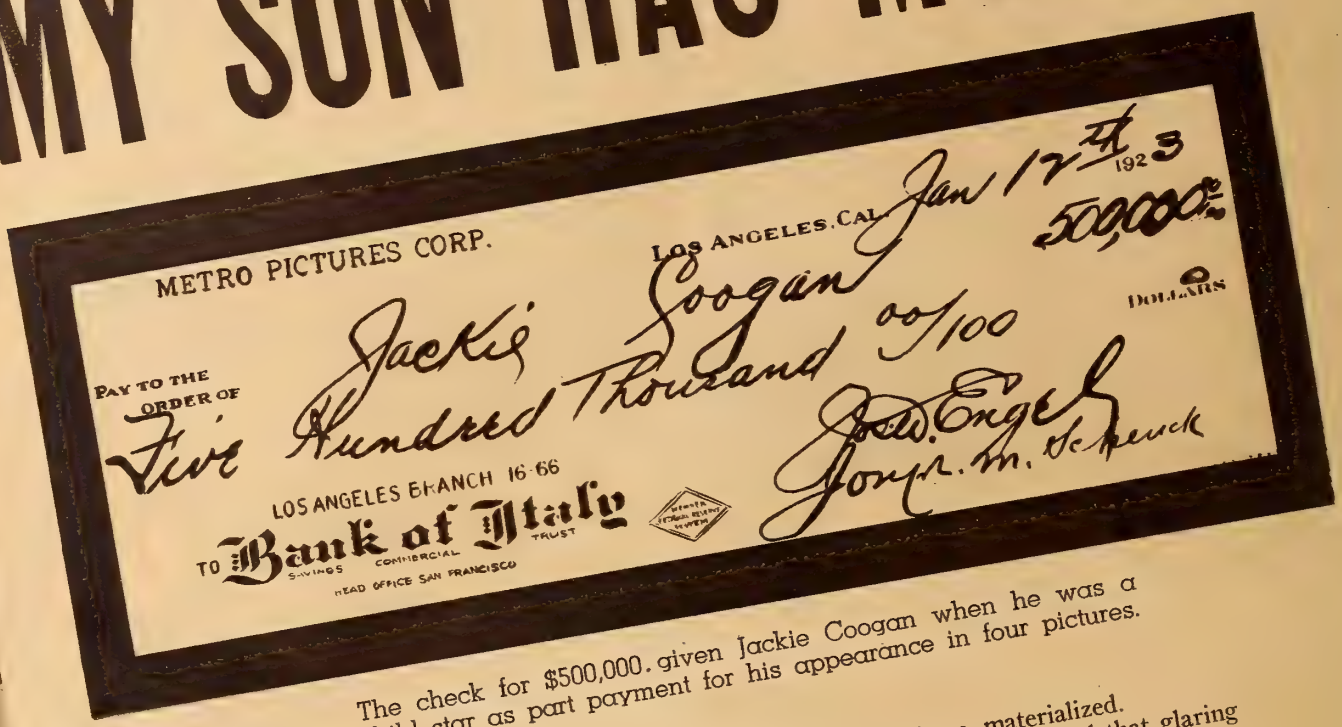
Dave A. E

HIS MONEY

BY BETTY GRABLE

"After our marriage, Jackie realized that he had responsibilities to meet and not one cent to meet them with."

"Jackie has never lived on my money. He had an orchestra before we were married, and saved from that."



family had handed his estate over to him on his twenty-first birthday, or at any time thereafter, he would have more than provided for them for the rest of their lives. He would have done everything in the world for his little brother Robert. Jackie feels simply terrible about Robert, worse about him than about anything or anyone else. He would love to be able to take Robert and keep him with us. He wants Robert to understand why this had to be done, and is so afraid he'll be given the wrong impression, for Robert is only thirteen and too young to grasp the whole situation. Jack is really suffering over Robert.

If Jack has any fault at all it is that he isn't aggressive enough. Perhaps he had to "give out" so much when he was a child that a lot of it was taken out of him. I only know he hates to fight, detests arguments or friction of any kind. I can't have an argument with Jack, because he won't argue, that's all. He gets up and goes away and stays away until any possibility of an argument has blown over. Then he comes back and acts as if nothing has happened. He never would have taken the stand if it weren't that when we were married he realized he had responsibilities to meet and not one cent to meet them with. With all that he had earned, with a childhood of work behind him, with all the talk of the trust fund created for him, the "Millionaire Kid" didn't have enough to take me out dancing, let alone get married.

It's all the more shameful because Jack is so unselfish and self-sacrificing. As his wife, I know. He "does unto others" in every little way he can think of. He always brings me my breakfast in bed, on a tray. When it is our maid's night off, it is Jackie who gets the (Continued on page 93) her husband's predicament and the reasons for his suit against his mother

"MY SON HAS MONEY,"

The check for $500,000. given Jackie Coogan when he was a child star as part payment for his appearance in four pictures.

BY RUTH RENICK

JACKIE COOGAN Charges Mother Deprives Him Of $3,000,000. Earnings!" That screaming headline in a Los Angeles newspaper recently, struck me squarely between the eyes.

Dazedly, I read the story, the strange, and somehow sad and almost incredible tale of the lawsuit brought by Jackie, "The Kid" of tender memory, a grown man, now, against his mother, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, demanding an accounting of the $3,000,000. he earned as a child star.

I reeled from that news as I had from another story, a few years ago, the story of the automobile accident in which Jack Coogan, Sr., was killed.

I lost a friend the day Jackie Coogan's father died. That kindly, understanding Irishman, with the Celtic gift for making other people's burdens his own, was one of the most genuine persons I have met in my two decades in Hollywood.

But, of course, my loss was as nothing compared to Jackie's. His father was truly his best friend. They were pals in the most profound sense of the word. And if Jack Coogan, Sr., had lived, I know that this ugly matter figuring so sensationally in the public prints never would have—never could have materialized.

It was only natural, when I read that glaring headline about Jackie's lawsuit against his mother and her husband, Arthur Bernstein, one-time general manager of Jackie Coogan Productions, that I should dwell, in memory, on a May day in 1923, when Jackie Coogan was a wistful, happy-but-pensive boy of eight.

It was then that Jack Coogan, Sr., with a note of unwonted seriousness in his voice, said to me, "Ruth, Jackie never will have to worry about his financial future. He's going to have all the things I didn't have when I was a kid. I had to hustle out and sell papers when I was his age. And when I was older, I had to eke out a living as a vaudeville hoofer.

"Well, those are hardships Jackie will never know. And I'll tell you why. Because I'm going to see to it, through ironclad investment of his earnings, that my boy will receive from me exactly $1,000,000. on his twenty-first birthday. Yes, indeed.

"And later, he will get as much more as there is to get. His mother and I don't want to grow rich at Jackie's expense. What we want to do, on the other hand, is to conserve, and, if possible, increase, the money he makes, taking for ourselves only enough to assure comfort."

Jack Coogan, Sr. confided to "The Kid's" leading woman, and revealed his plans for Jackie's financially secure future

Ruth Renick, Jackie's leading woman, and Jack Coogan, Sr.'s confidante.

Nobody could possibly doubt that the young Coogans are very happy.

LILLIAN COOGAN—Jackie's mother—a plump, easygoing woman, sat beside Jack Coogan and nodded assent. I was to have other conversations with Jackie's father about Jackie's future, but that was the first. This is how it came about.

After Jackie's magnificent success with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid," the picture which started him tugging on the heartstrings of the world, Coogan, Senior, a good business man, realized that in the person of that lovable boy there was a real gold mine.

So, the Jackie Coogan Productions came into being. A contract was signed with the old Metro Company. Jack Coogan sought a suitable, heart-warming story for the first production under that then colossal agreement.

He found that story in Mary Roberts Rinehart's charming chronicle, "Long Live the King." He wanted a leading woman, and I was chosen for the part of Princess Hedwig. I was in New York at the time, and received word from Jack Coogan to hurry back to Hollywood. Jackie himself had had a hand in selecting me for Princess Hedwig.

"It seems," his father told me, "that Jackie is a fan of yours. He saw you with Douglas Fairbanks in 'The Mollycoddle,' and insists that you play the part."

So Jackie and I went to work. In the cast, I remember, were Alan Hale, Rosemary Theby, Vera Lewis and Robert Brower. The director was Victor Schertzinger, whose name then, as now, was one to conjure with in Hollywood. One day we worked on one of the most spectacular sets ever constructed in Hollywood up to that time, the Lavonian castle. Jackie, as the boy king, proudly reviewed his gorgeously-uniformed troops. As he faced the cameras, there was a gallant smile on his appealing face.

Truly, it was a brave smile. For Jackie's feet hurt. His shiny, patent leather boots were too tight for him, and he confided to me, "They're killin' me, but I won't say anything about it. I don't want to hold up the production."

Jackie's proudest possessions at that time were a handful of bright marbles which Charlie Chaplin had given him. During a long interval, when camera angles were being changed, he tugged at his mother's dress and begged,

"Mother, won't you play marbles with me?"

Busy, Mrs. Coogan said, in a manner not unkindly, "No, Jackie, Mother hasn't time now."

The youngster hobbled in those torturing boots across the courtyard to his father.

"Daddy," he pleaded, "won't you play with me?"

"Can't do it now, Jackie," Coogan told him briskly. You'll have to find someone else."

(Continued on page 78)

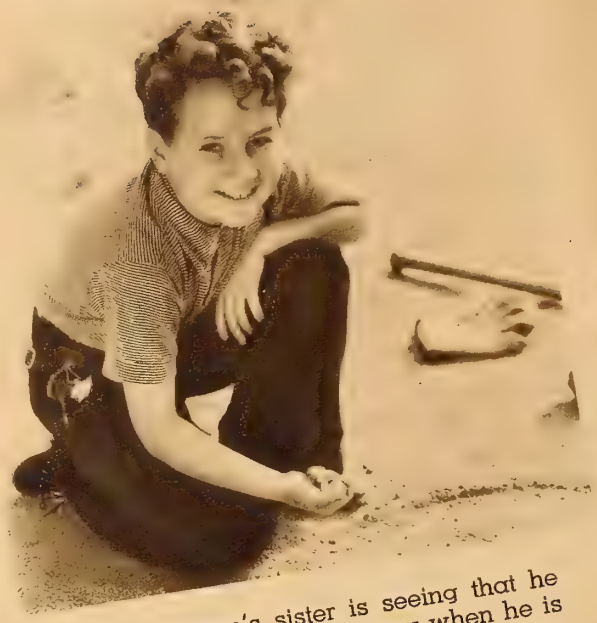
other Offers 'Kid' Share of His Cash



HOLLYWOOD, May 3 (UP).—Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, vanquis er first court encounter with her son, Jackie Coogan, tonight offered to g childhood screen earnings as a "reasonable settlement," if t

NO FUTURE MONEY

HOLLYWOOD, April
Shirley Temple will not to court when she comes obtain the fortune she a child movie star.
Neither will Deanna
Mickey Roo any

Whose Is Mo
Film Tot

WHERE IS THEIR

Bobby Breen's sister is seeing that he will receive half his money when he is twenty-one and half nine years later.

The $500,000 Shirley Temple is said to receive a year is put in trust both by her father and her studio.

Deanna Durbin's fortune is put in a trust fund payable when Deanna reaches maturity. Judy Garland, right, endorses her checks to her mother who safeguards the money for her.

to Ji er' Ki
s Wif

ble Tells of pogan's ning

April 22 (AP).
500-a-week film y of ignoring a other-in-law that a pauper, if she pgan.
ea what
Nothing,
Says.

NS?

November. 1929, Mitzi, her ther, Rosie Green, and Superior dge Elliott Craig signed a mo ture contract which paid
This was

those days it was unhea a star to tie up with a ercial product. Therefore moters promised her an in long as they

Coogan Ca
Move to S

MONEY ?

Is the financial future of these starlets secure?

The Mauch twins' mother has fine plans for the future—plans which star the Mauch twins alone.

Virginia Weidler will always be able to make money, and her mother will make sure it is saved for the child.

Mickey Rooney's checks are sent directly to a trust company which sends him only living expenses. Freddie Bartholomew, right, has Aunt Millicent to watch out for his finances.

1

2

1. Q. When did you first go before the camera? A. In Salt Lake City, when I was four weeks old. Mother held me and I was quite unhappy about the whole thing.

2. Q. Didn't you ever have your picture taken alone? A. I was four when I posed for my first solo starring picture. Everyone says I don't look a day over three in this one.

ILLUSTRATED INTERVIEW in which the lovely Loretta Young delves into the old family album

5

6

5. Q. Have you ever been married? A. Yes, when I was seventeen and to Grant Withers. It didn't "take" however, and we were divorced a year later.

6. Q. Have you ever posed for "leg art?" A. Digging through the files, the only answer I can find is this little number. It was taken just four years ago.

3

4

3. Q. Were you considered a "party girl" in your youth? A. Indeed! I'm the one with the smile at the left, and the young ladies on either side of me are my cousins. It was their joint birthday.

4. Q. What about your picture debut? A. I worked in pictures for two days when I was five. At fourteen, I got my first big part—the lead with Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

7. Q. Is there a man in your life? A. Haven't a single one at the moment. I've been out a few times recently with David Niven, and I've gone to a party or two with Cesar Romero.

8. Q. What are you doing now? A. I'm working in "Suez" with Tyrone Power. I'm playing the Empress Eugenie, and I'm also discovering she did something besides wear those funny little hats.

7

8

It looks like Richard Greene still cuts plenty of ice with that little queen of the silver blades, Sonja Henie.

Right Walter Wanger definitely prefers blondes—like Joan Bennett, but Reginald Gardiner votes Hedy La Marr!

Who's the pretty girl, George? "That's no . . . ," etc., says Mr. Murphy, a bit blithely. That's my wife.

Lovely Norma Shearer and her good friend, Merle Oberon, squired by Jimmy Stewart and Doug Fairbanks.

GOOD NEWS

BY LEO TOWNSEND

Come on behind the Hollywood scene with our intrepid reporter, who sees all, hears all and—tells all

Clark Gable has a chance to become a Flathead! The Flatheads (with an "l," please) are a tribe of Indians living on a reservation in Montana, and they have offered to make Gable a chief if he wants to come and settle down with them. Among the attractions offered are plenty of hunting, life in the open, and good fishing. But Gable turned them down. You can't have Carole Lombard and be a Flathead, too, or something like that.

●

Want to know what a star keeps on her dressing-room table? We made a list the other day, on the set of "Always Goodbye," of the items we saw on the table in Barbara Stanwyck's dressing room. Here's the inventory: a hair brush, a copy of "Remembering Laughter," a pack of cigarettes, two sticks of gum, a picture of her son, a box of matches, a towel, a box of hairpins and the top of a cold cream jar.

●

They were telling stories about John Barrymore the other day. The one we liked best was this: In New York, about ten years ago, Barrymore was visiting friends in an unfamiliar part of town. He suddenly decided he wanted a haircut, even though he feared the barbers in the neighborhood were the type who didn't spare the shears. Wandering around, he found a small shop, majestically beckoned to the head barber, and said: "Sir, I want a haircut. And I want such a haircut that only you and I will know I've had a haircut."

●

Latest of the Barrymore stories happened on the set of "Spawn of the North," his current picture. Players were seated at a table, and Barrymore was preparing a "Coffee Royale," for which a spoonful of sugar and brandy is lighted and poured into the coffee. Benzine was being used instead of brandy, because it would make a brighter flame. A match was applied to the benzine, and the sudden burst of flame startled everyone but Barrymore, who gazed at it fondly. "Ah," he said, "The nectar of my youth!"

●

Talking to May Robson on the set of "Sister Act," we asked her what kind of a part she had. "It's what we used to call a 'Come along, Jessie' role on the stage," said Miss Robson. "There were hundreds of plays where one of the featured characters announced she was about to leave, walked to the door and said, 'Come along, Jessie.' Well, I'm Jessie in this one."

●

Miss Robson also told us a story about her one and only airplane flight—a twenty minute trip from Paris to London. She was accompanied by her niece, a companion, some smelling salts and a crucifix which a friend had given her. After the plane took off, she shut her eyes and alternately kissed the crucifix and sniffed the smelling salts. After ten minutes her companions started nudging her, but she refused to open her eyes until the plane landed—when she discovered she'd spent the entire trip smelling the crucifix and kissing the smelling salts!

●

Talked to John Payne on the set of "Garden of the Moon." He has worked at several studios, but he's getting his first real break in this picture, but he's he plays the male lead. "I'm not sore at the other studios," he said. "I got something from each of them." What he got, he told us, was a pair of bedroom slippers from one wardrobe department, shorts from another, and three shirts from still another.

●

Edward G. Robinson did a "Little Caesar" in person the other day when a gal driver creased one of his fenders. He was using a lot of his favorite film dialogue on the frightened young lady when his young son, Manny, broke in with, "I think you ought to be arrested, lady." Papa tried to shush him, but it was no use. "I'll arrest you myself," said Manny, "see my badge?" He whipped out a tin policeman's badge, and succeeded in completely breaking up his father's act. Robinson laughed, and the young lady sped on her way.

●

Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce were the center of attraction on the set of "One Woman's Answer." It was late afternoon, and there had been many takes of the same scene. Virginia is in bed, and Marshall, her husband, comes in, sits on the bed and talks to her. After several more takes, the scene is okayed, and Virginia crawls out from under the covers. "Boy, am I tired!" she says to no one in particular. "I've been in this darn bed all day!"

●

Do you know about Shirley Temple's new hobby? Her mother knows about it, but there's nothing much she can do to stop it. Seems when there's no one around the house Shirley picks a number at random out of the phone book and enjoys a long talk with a total stranger. The only hitch in her fun is that when she tells people it's Shirley Temple she sometimes gets very strange—and unconventional—answers.

●

On the "Valley of the Giants" set, Wayne Morris and a gang of huskies were doing a mob fight scene

At the director's order, the boys all leaped into action, and fists flew all over the set. When the scene ended, Morris pulled himself out of the center of the mêlée, looked around and said, "Did I hit anybody?"

●

Bob Taylor probably gets more gifts from fans than any star in the business. He'd have a house full if he kept them all, but most of them are donated to local charities. For instance, in the past six months he has received sixteen sweaters. A woman in Albany, N. Y., has knitted nine for him in the past two years. Men's sportswear manufacturers send him hundreds of items, hoping he'll wear them in his pictures. And since he bought a ranch, he's received a shipment of alfalfa seed from Nebraska. He skipped charity on this gift, and planted the seed.

●

Marion Davies, they say, hasn't been on speaking terms with Norma Shearer since Marion's recent birthday party for William Randolph Hearst. Guests were asked to come as American colonials, and Norma added a touch of surprise to the occasion when she came in her "Marie Antoinette" costume, accompanied by sixteen ladies-in-waiting. Since "Marie Antoinette" was the picture Marion wanted very much to make, you can imagine the chilly reception Miss Shearer received.

●

Flash! Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck, in their new pictures, wear bathing suits for the first time in their screen careers. In "Three Comrades" Mr. T. swims intentionally for the first time (remember his ducking in "A Yank at Oxford?") and Miss Stanwyck appears in a bathing suit in "Always Goodbye," marking her screen debut as a bathing beauty. There's no particular significance in this news—we just wanted you to know.

●

Any of you girls know a sure way to put on a little weight? If you do, Jimmy Stewart would be glad to get the recipe, for all the methods he's tried so far have failed. He's six feet two and a half inches tall, and he would like to add about thirty pounds to his present weight of one hundred and fifty-five.

●

Most of the locals who attend previews go hoping they're going to see a swell picture—and sometimes they do. But when the picture's a flop they sit silently through it and suffer along until the lights go up. Joan Crawford, on the other hand, takes no chances. She brings her knitting. If the picture is good she watches it. If it's bad she knits. Producers are beginning to regard her as a modern day Madame De Farge, her busy needles clicking out doom for their epics.

●

Add a new name to your list of Hollywood men-about-town. The latest entry is Mickey Rooney, who has just acquired a swank apartment at the Montecito—and a valet! Young Mr. R., according to reports, out-Powells William when he turns his roadster over to the uniformed doorman and makes his entrance.

●

Hollywood incidentals: When Margaret Sullavan and Leland Hayward dine out, he reads a newspaper throughout the entire meal, and she doesn't mind. . . . Dorothy Comingore, the eighteen-year-old actress discovered by Charlie Chaplin, is now under contract to one of the studios. . . . Tom Beck owns one hundred and twelve trees. He keeps them all in nurseries, because he hasn't any land to plant them on.

●

Imagine the lovely Loretta Young hanging a haymaker on anyone? Neither could Loretta—but that's what the script called for. So Fidel La Barba, former flyweight champ, was called in to give her the low-down on knockouts. "Sure, I see," said

Frank Morgan, above, looks more distinguished every day. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Oakie do all right by themselves, too.

Just a cool million in talent, personality and umph—Myrna Loy, Bob Taylor and Clark Gable—or do you know them?

If you're married to a lovely like Virginia Bruce, right, you can't be camera shy, so J. Walter Ruben takes it all in stride.

That luscious Hedy La Marr gets around, and no wonder. Reggie Gardiner and Dick Barthelmess are the lucky lads.

Loretta, after Fidel's first demonstration. "Not so complicated, is it?" She took a big swing at her instructor, missed by some ten inches and ended up with a thud on the floor. "Not so complicated, maybe, but rough," she admitted ruefully.

●

In a court action over an automobile accident in London last year, Merle Oberon was given a $25,000. judgment. The court found Merle's own chauffeur responsible for the accident, and ordered him to pay the $25,000. Miss Oberon laughed it off, for both she and the chauffeur knew he didn't have the money. After her return to this country, though, she received a cable from her London solicitors. It seems that in London all chauffeurs must be bonded before they can obtain drivers' licenses, and the insurance company handling the bond will pay Merle the $25,000.

●

We've been trying for an hour to make an item out of the fact that Pat O'Brien raises dahlias, and we're ready to give up. We even asked Pat why he raises dahlias and his reply covers the subject very simply. He said, "Because I like to raise dahlias."

●

Neatest trick of the month was staged by a theatre owner in San Diego, California. During the run of "Kentucky Moonshine," anyone who came to the theatre barefoot got in free!

●

Newest twosome around town is Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres. Had their first date together the other evening—dined and went roller skating. The Gaynor-Power romance is definitely on the wane, and Tyrone is concentrating his attentions on a bit player at his own studio.

●

Jackie Moran's beginning to have girl trouble. All of which is very funny to everyone but Jackie. The girls from Hollywood High, near where Jackie lives, have taken to standing around his house and waiting for him to show up on his way to the studio, to his lessons or to the corner for a coke. Now he's taken to using the back alley and complains that being the dream of a sub-deb is certainly confining.

●

We were talking to Ruby Keeler on the set of "Mother Carey's Chickens" and asked how she felt about being back at work. "Just scared to death," said Ruby. This role, incidentally, is her first picture in over fourteen months, her first costume picture and the first role in which she doesn't dance a step.

●

Luise Rainer might have been put down as one of the most opinionated stars in town when she first came to Hollywood. She would not dress, even under the studio's direct threats, in anything but slacks. But now there's a sudden change of heart. You couldn't hire her at any sum to put on slacks —Mama and Papa Rainer are in town.

●

On the "Too Hot to Handle" set the other day, Clark Gable had to take a nose-dive into a mud puddle. There were elaborate rehearsals so the "take" would be good the first time he really dived in. Everything was in readiness. Clark took a deep breath and dived in head first, and Walter Pidgeon got so excited that he blew up in his lines. They had to postpone the next take until the following day, in order to rehabilitate the Gable wardrobe.

●

Donnie Donahue out on the "Mother Carey's Chickens" set is proving too precocious for everyone's comfort. At first afraid the three-year-old Donnie wouldn't be able to grasp the meaning of his own role, the cast now finds that he's getting everyone else's down pat, besides. The other day, Ralph Morgan slipped up in a line, but covered it so quickly that it would have been a take except for Donnie's piping up: "Spoilt again, Mr. Morgan."

Eddie (Little Caesar) Robinson stole forty winks on us here, but the "little woman" stayed as fresh as a daisy.

Loretta Young's swell sister, Sally Blane, steps out with her handsome hubby, Norman Foster.

The newest wrinkle of the movie stars seems to be taking a Hollywood wardrobe to Paris. Dannielle Darrieux, when she left for France, had seven trunks full of clothes—and all from local shops, except for those copied from her clothes in "The Rage of Paris" and designed by Vera West. And Marlene Dietrich, believe it or not, isn't planning to purchase a stitch in Paris on this trip. She loaded up with gowns here and bought some thirty hats just before boarding the boat in New York.

●

On the "Letter of Introduction" set, we watched actresses acting as actresses. It was a stage scene with Kathleen Howard, Doris Lloyd and Andrea Leeds. Director Stahl was buzzing around like a nervous bumble-bee and giving everyone the jitters. Both Miss Howard and Miss Lloyd blew up once or twice, and only Andrea Leeds kept her composure and her lines intact. They're calling it the "Letter of Introduc-shhhh-un" set around the studio, because everyone's walking around on tiptoes.

●

The table was bending under birthday cakes the other night at the Café LaMaze. Tony Martin had taken Alice Faye there to celebrate her birthday and there ran into Janet Gaynor giving Tyrone Power a tête-à-tête celebration in honor of his. They joined parties and three-tiered cakes.

●

They're calling Bing Crosby the "rainmaker" down at Rancho Santa Fe, California. For every time in the past several years that Bing's staged a golf tournament there, the skies have opened and the deluge has fallen.

●

Frank Morgan owes his reputation to Clark Gable since a broadcast a few weeks ago. Morgan had lapsed into a coma, entirely missing his cue, when Clark gave him such a violent nudge in the ribs that he jumped some three feet, then caught himself up and went into the dialogue, looking pretty sheepish.

●

In case you missed it on the financial page, Jane Withers' weekly allowance has hit a new high—five bucks a week. "I'm going to try to spend it wisely," Jane told her mother, "though some of my extravagances have me frankly worried." Mrs. Withers' worst fears were confirmed a few days later when the trainer of "Darwin," the chimpanzee being used on "The Three Blind Mice" set, called her up. He wondered if she approved of her daughter's deal on Darwin. Jane was purchasing him on the installment plan, one dollar down and fifty cents every Monday.

Myrna Loy's the perfect off-screen wife, too, according to Arthur Hornblow, Jr.

●

Alan Dwan, on the "Suez" picture just celebrated his thirtieth year of directing—and Loretta Young and Tyrone Power presented him with a fancy plaque. Dwan started out making pictures for the "Flying A" company way back when. They made three a week—with Wallace Reid the star and an extremely slim and youthful Eugene Pallette as the juvenile.

●

Studio call sheets, which announce the daily working schedule of pictures, sometimes make good items. For instance, one studio sheet recently read, "Weather permitting, if sun shining, no clouds, and not too windy—on location. Leave studio at six a.m. In event of bad weather, stage eight—dust storm."

●

Item on the universal appeal of Bobby Breen: Discussing young master Breen's radio popularity, Eddie Cantor said, "The Irish think he's Irish, the Jews think he's Jewish, and when he sings 'La Donna Mobile' the Italians go crazy!"

●

They hung a "For Men Only" sign on stage twelve at one of the studios, so we went in to investigate. The set was full of guys with cauliflower ears, and in the foreground a husky gent was playing a tune on a punching bag. A closer look revealed that the husky gent was Bob Taylor, and the punching bag routine was part of his new picture, "Give and Take," in which he plays a prizefighter. Taylor, who's been taking boxing lessons for this role, was actually doing a first-class job on the punching bag. He's glad they're casting him in strictly he-man roles, but he denies they're grooming him for a new Tarzan series.

"LUX was my stand-by at college"

says Andrea Leeds–

"still is, now that I'm in pictures. It's so important for daintiness"

A college moving picture won this dainty star a contract with Samuel Goldwyn! She's charming—here's one of her secrets . . .

"I Luxed all my own things at college—even sweaters," she says. "It saved a lot on upkeep. And when I visited my family in Mexico, I'd take Lux along with me. It saved my stockings and lingerie from ruin!"

Smart young girls keep personal things dainty the way famous movie stars do—with Lux. Lux removes every trace of perspiration odor, yet keeps colors and fabrics new looking longer. Lux has no harmful alkali—safe in water, safe in Lux!

Andrea feels it's part of her job always to "look like a million dollars." "So I stick to Lux," she says. "It's wonderful for colors!"

The appealing daintiness of this lovely co-ed has already won her millions of fans. Don't miss her in the new Universal picture, "Letter of Introduction."

"At school, I always 'kept up' with the movie stars. When I found they used Lux—nothing else for me! I was thrilled at how Lux cut down stocking runs!"

for daintiness . . .

Leading Hollywood Studios

specify Lux in their wardrobe departments to keep costumes and all washable properties fresh and sparkling. It insures daintiness—saves dollars on upkeep, their wardrobe directors tell you.

So THAT you wouldn't have to bend over a hot stove this summer, skilled Franco-American chefs spent many long hours cooking to just the right delicate consistency delicious strands of Franco-American Spaghetti.

So that you wouldn't have to bother getting together and cooking all the ingredients for a delicious sauce, Franco-American chefs have turned out a sauce for you which is simply a marvel.

So why do hot summer hours of work when this has already been done for you? Especially when you can get this most delicious prepared spaghetti for so little—it costs only ten cents for a big 15¾-ounce can—enough for 3 portions.

Husbands and children who have once tasted Franco-American get pretty pernickety when you try to feed them any other prepared spaghetti. Franco-American is grand for children's lunches—hot and nourishing and tempting—and on the table in a jiffy. It combines wonderfully with left-overs, thanks to that marvelous sauce. It's always a hit for Sunday night supper. It's a life-saver when people drop in unexpectedly and it's marvelous for outings and picnics. Let Franco-American help keep you cool and rested this summer! Better lay in a few cans right now!

Franco-American SPAGHETTI

Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY, Dept. 68
Camden, New Jersey. Please send me your free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."

Name (print)_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

HEAD OF THE CLASS

No. 2637—Above, the "triplet set," first choice of smart school girls.

No. 1323—Colorful sweater in four-tone stripe to go with your skirts.

SMART for the classroom, indispensable as your fountain pen, are these two new designs to send you off to school in style in September and keep you at the head of your class all year. Never done any knitting? Then start on this three-piece suit, elementary as ABC! Paris says raglan sleeves, collarless, high necklines, fitted waists. They're all here in the "triplet set." There's good news for real knitting fans in the knitted sweater, for it has the new four-tone stripe, colorful and flattering, to blend in with all your skirts. Make the suit in a rich brown, evergreen, or deep plum, the sweater in a combination of bright autumn woodland shades. Send in today for your free instructions.

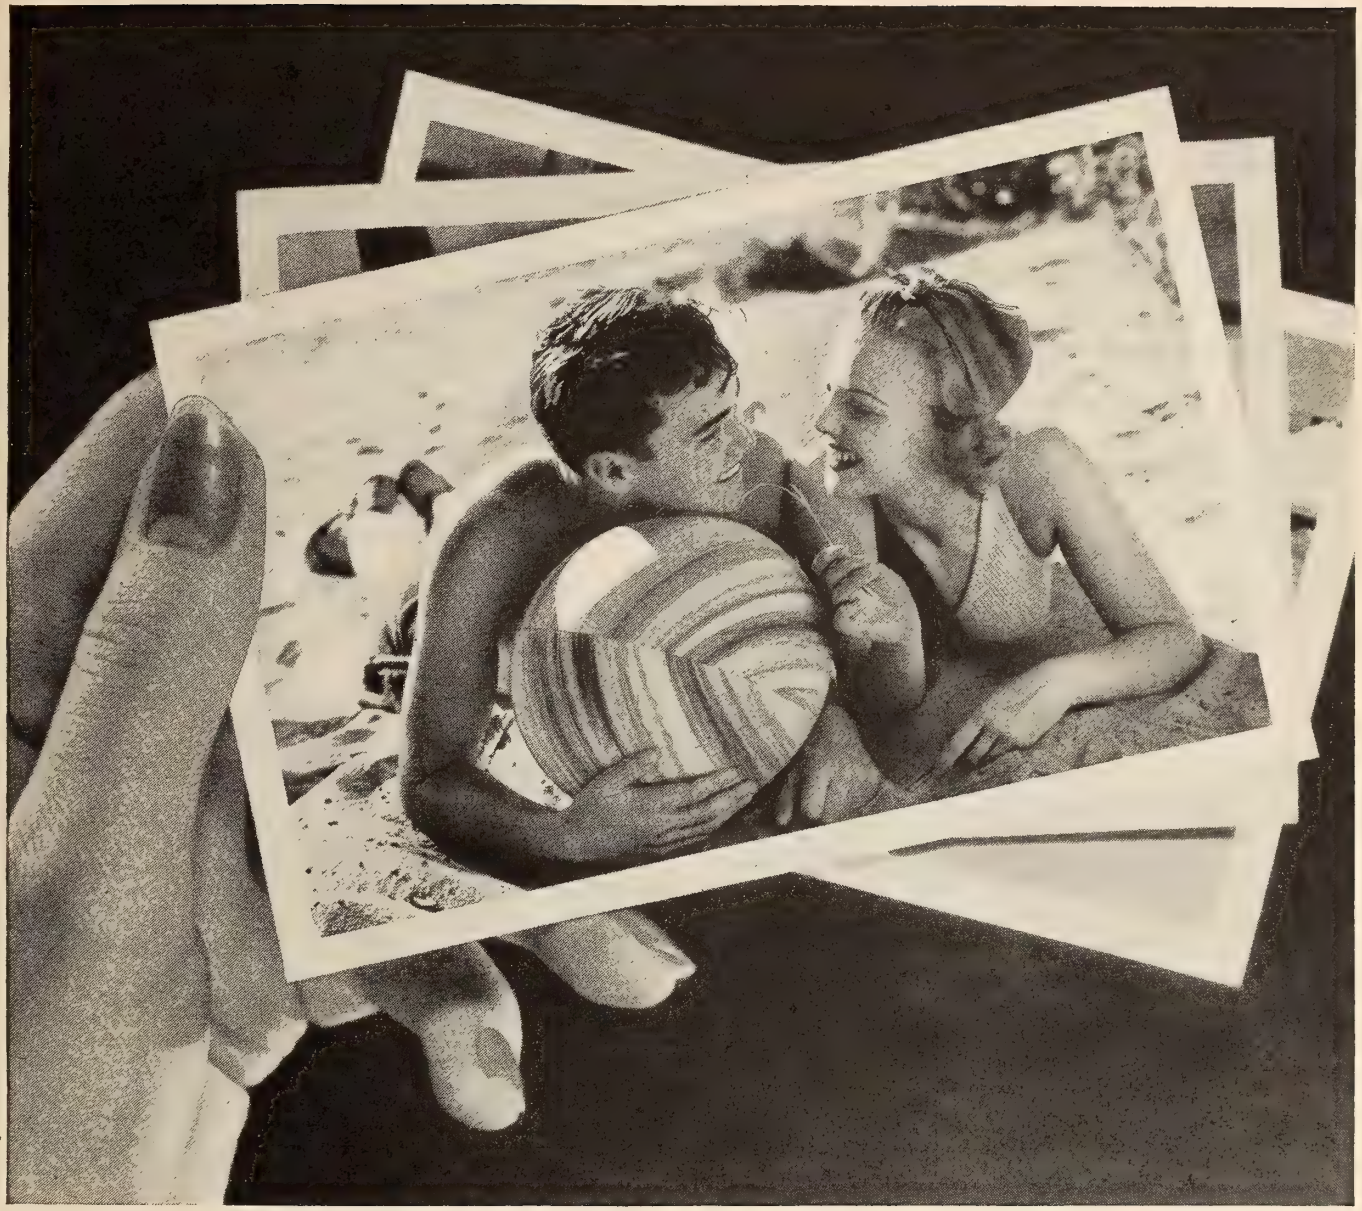
ANN WILLS, Modern Screen,
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Knitting directions for No. 2637.....

Knitting directions for No. 1323.....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.



Name .....

Address .....

City..... State.....

Check one or both designs and please print name and address plainly.

"I'd get snapshots of every boy I really liked"

says DOROTHY DIX, famous adviser on life and marriage

"I CAN'T see why girls don't use more system in their search for the one-and-only man. Every big business uses system, and love-and-marriage is the biggest, most important of all . . .

"When you meet a boy you like, get some snapshots of him. Keep these. Save the snapshots of all the boys you like. Then, when a newcomer appears and tries to rush you off your feet, look at the snapshots of the others . . .

"Nothing awakens memories like a snapshot. As you see the faces of good old Tom, good old Dick and good old Harry, you may find that one of them really means more to you than your new friend. If so—you're saved from making the wrong choice in the most important decision of your life!"

* * *

Whether you're expert or inexperienced —for day-in and day-out picture making —use Kodak Verichrome Film for surer results. Double-coated by a special process—it takes care of reasonable exposure errors—increases your ability to get clear, satisfying pictures. Nothing else is "just as good." And certainly there is nothing better. Play safe. Use it always . . . Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Scholl's Gives You Quick, Safe Relief

Hardly a single part of your body escapes the ill-effects of painful feet. They make you hurt all over. Relief can be yours at very small cost—for there is a Dr. Scholl Remedy, Appliance or Arch Support for every foot trouble—made under the personal supervision of Dr. Wm. M. Scholl, the famous foot authority. Sold by Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ Stores everywhere.

CORNS—SORE TOES
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads instantly relieve pain and remove corns. Thin, soothing, healing. End cause—shoe friction and pressure—prevent corns, sore toes, blisters and tender spots.

CALLOUSES
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads, special size for callouses, relieve pain quickly, safely loosen and remove the hard, dead skin. Stop pressure on the sore spot; soothe and heal.

BUNIONS
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads, special size for bunions, give instant relief to tender or enlarged joints; remove shoe pressure on the sore spot. Thin, protective, healing.

SOFT CORNS
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads, special size for corns between toes, relieve pain in one minute; take pressure off the sore spot; quickly, safely remove soft corns.

ACHING, TIRED FEET
Dr. Scholl's Foot Balm is a soothing application for tired, aching feet, muscular soreness, tenderness and burning sensation caused by exertion and fatigue. Analgesic and counter-irritant.

EASES FEET
Dr. Scholl's Kurotex, a velvety-soft, cushioning plaster; relieves corns, callouses, bunions, tender spots; prevents blisters. Flesh color. Easily cut to any size or shape.

TENDER FEET
Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder relieves sore, tender, hot, tired, chafed or perspiring feet. Soothing, healing, comforting to skin irritations. Eases new or tight shoes.

Dr Scholl's
FOR ALL FOOT TROUBLES
REMEDIES—PADS—PLASTERS—ARCH SUPPORTS

Mail Coupon in Envelope or Paste on Penny Postcard
FREE Foot Book, also sample of Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads for Corns. Address Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Chicago, Ill.

Name .....
Address ..... (12)

EVERYTHING'S UNDER THE SUN

(Continued from page 43)

something? Wool socks, worn consistently, will help to banish corns, callouses and other superficial foot ailments. Or you can wear those separate foot things to be had in every department store. If your feet swell in hot weather, stay away from pumps and high heels, and immerse the tootsies every day in cold water, into which you have thrown a handful of table salt. Use a foot powder every day, and a foot balm or ointment every once in a while.

Going from your feet to your heads in my usual abrupt fashion, I trust you have your summer permanents already. No? Well, then, unless you're handy at fixing your hair yourself, just grit your teeth and devote an afternoon soon to getting the best, the most expert, and the most becoming permanent you can afford. A simple one, please—like Anita Louise's soft wave. Not too long, hanging around in the back of your neck and driving you crazy. The up-on-the-head arrangements look mighty pretty and cool, and if your hair is "adaptable" and you are skillful at keeping it in order, go ahead and have one of the simpler up-swept coiffures. Otherwise, an easy nape-of-the-neck curl. Sun in moderation is a wonderful hair tonic, so shampoo your locks yourself and dry them outdoors, brushing while they dry. It would be nice if you could keep your hair pretty dry while swimming, but don't let it spoil your fun. Rinse your hair, though, in clear water after the swim, and once every couple of weeks, do the necessary business with olive oil or a good oily tonic. Not a very attractive idea, but it will pay dividends at the end of the summer.

AND now, dears, your faces, and the cosmetic problem. How can a gal add a spot of glamor to her personality when powder runs right off as fast as it's put on? Well, now . . . have you a nice bottle of astringent in your ice box? That's a very good idea. Pat it on, ice cold, with cotton, and don't be stingy with it. Fan your face for a few minutes afterwards. If your skin is nice and clear, for daytime, you can go powderless, wearing lipstick by all means, and eye make-up if you need it.

A great aid to summer-time allure is a good foundation cream. In a shade a little darker than your skin. Get a good one—there are several on the market. Last summer I laid a buck and a half on the line for a container two-by-four-by-one inch, and it lasted me thru the season. This little gift of the cosmetic industry serves many purposes. It gives powder and rouge a firm staying basis, for one thing. You should use cream rouge with it. Used alone, with no powder and bright lipstick and the least touch of eye make-up, it gives excellent protection from too much sun, looks elegant and natural at the same time. It gives a little shine to the face, very fetching on certain occasions, and very much in the Hollywood manner. The movie stars go in a great deal for this type of make-up. And worth noting: for those summer snapshots of you and the boy friend on the beach at Little Codfish Cake by the Sea, your face will come out ever so much prettier for a little shine.

Use these foundation creams sparingly, and blend the cream down into your neck. When applying the cream, have the hair bound up in a towel or something, for these creams do not enhance the beauty of the hair. Let the cream "set" a few minutes—it goes down into the skin and does it good, too—and then blot very lightly with tissue. If you're going to put powder on over it, press the powder gently onto your face after the cream has set, and remove excess powder with clean cotton or brush. The powder will stay on very well, in spite of the heat.

AN indispensable, as well as an inexpensive, aid to summer comfort and summer good looks is the compact freshener-upper, to be carried in the purse. When you have taken a long motor ride to the friend's place in the country and, frankly, look like heck upon arrival, and do not wish to be considered a very vain and fussy person because you take hours to "fix up"; when you must work in a city office and have a divil of a time keeping your face on during the hot, perspiring day; when you go dancing on a summer evening and do not wish to get all drippy after one turn around the floor—on any number of occasions, in fact, these clean, refreshing little gadgets will do wonders for you. You can't miss 'em, even if I can't offer you their trade name. Cheap and handy—on drugstore, five and dime, or department store counters.

Ah, me, I suppose I should mention that problem that is always with us: namely, to tan or not to tan. Also how much to tan. Seems to me we should all have acquired some sense about it by this time. And I think most of us have. Well, then, the sensible and chic thing to do nowadays is to get a suntan only if it's extremely becoming; to get it slowly, by the two-minute-a-day-on-up exposure method; not to get as bronze as an Indian in any case, but only a nice feminine, golden shade.

If your skin fries to a crisp in the sun, if you freckle horribly along with the tanning process, and if you are the type who tans very, very quickly—if you are any of these three types—stay out of the sun when it is broiling hot. And wear sun-protection creams, big hats, goggles, and other protective coverings when you must be in the sun. Pink and white skins are again fashionable. The "new" make-ups tend toward shades of red which have a lot of mauve and blue casts in them, and these very chic and alluring shades in rouge and lipstick look like the old Ned with very tan skins.

Another point—a strong tanning is bad for most skins. It has been for most skins all these years that copper-colored pelts have been fashionable. It makes the skin leathery in texture and, come winter, it is impossible to get rid of the spotty, dirty look which an extreme coat of tan leaves behind. Out in Hollywood, the stars are taking sun baths very, very cautiously. Why? Because Technicolor will have no truck with a dark coat of tan. Bottles of sunproof oil, cream and lotion adorn the dressing tables of cinemaland, and the cinema belles go down to the sea in big hats and terry-cloth cover-uppers.

There's a minor summer phobia of the younger fry I want to bring up. I've had letters about it in the past, and I remember when I was very young (gawsh, what a memory!) how I used to lie awake nights wondering what I could do to prevent the boy friend from finding out that I had freckles on my arms. Of course, you thin-skinned lassies who freckle should endeavor not to add to the permanent freckles with temporary freckles. There are those two kinds, you know. The permanent ones, acquired in childhood, likely, stay on your skin in varying shades of intensity all your life. With each summer's sun, you can get a crop of temporary

About face!

That battle-ax expression is more often caused by nervous tension than by temper! There are unnecessary tension-makers in every busy day that can steal your youth and charm! Learn to recognize them —discover how to correct them. You can out-wit those beauty robbers . . . if you'll be on your guard!

By their frantic frowns—you can spot women who are always late . . . always hurrying! Avoid that rushing habit if you value your good looks!

A new wrinkle has been put in many a pretty face by shoes that pinch, a too-tight girdle, or shoulder-straps that bind! Comfort is important to beauty!

That martyr look often comes from a sanitary napkin that rubs and chafes! But—there's a downy-soft napkin that doesn't chafe. It's Modess . . . and it's made differently from ordinary napkins.

Worry furrows that come from fear of an embarrassing accident are unnecessary, too. Insist on Modess . . . for Modess has a special moisture-resistant backing that will end that worry.

See the difference! Cut a Modess pad in two and look at the filler! It's fluffy and soft . . . different from pads made of close-packed layers. It's this fluffy filler that makes Modess so comfortable.

Test it! Remove the moisture-resistant backing inside a Modess pad and drop water on it. See for yourself that not a drop "strikes through." Think what this special kind of protection means to you!

Beauty secret worth trying! You can look younger and prettier (and keep your looks longer) if you'll get rid of unnecessary tension, discomfort, and worry! Modess can help you do this on days when nerves are particularly tense . . . and endurance lower. Get Modess today and experience the comfort and peace of mind this different kind of napkin brings. Modess costs no more than other nationally known napkins.

Get in the habit of saying "Modess"!

IF YOU PREFER A SMALLER, SLIGHTLY NARROWER PAD, SAY "JUNIOR MODESS" freckles, and if you are very susceptible to this freckling business you should stock up with a good freckle cream and further hoodwink Old Sol with a good protection cream. A few freckles, in my opinion, are never unattractive. Men do not consider them unattractive, either. Not that one wants to be absolutely peppered with 'em. And try to protect the back of your neck, if you can. That's one place where the large, splotchy freckles are apt to come.

AND now I must say a few words about eating and exercising and dieting and not dieting, dreary as those topics may seem at this time of the year. Summer is the season to be moderate. I'm sure I don't need to tell you not to eat too much. I may need to tell some of you not to eat too little. You all need breakfast, lunch and dinner, according to your diet routine and your figure problems. Beware that oft repeated saying, "It's too hot to eat." Don't go thru the dog days on sandwiches, stingy salads and glasses of iced tea. You may cut almost all sweets, starches and fats out of your diet if you like, and if you are overweight. But proteins you need, for in proteins there is strength.

Proteins, dears, are contained in meat, fish and eggs. In the summer time, there is a tendency to cut down too far on meat. Cut down on it some—yes—for it's a chore to cook it and too much isn't necessary. But you should have a liberal serving of lean meat daily—or fish or chicken—and even the fat girls should go in for an egg a couple of times a week. I know I've said before in these articles that, in extreme cases of overweight, sometimes it's a good idea to cut out meat from the diet entirely. I'm not contradicting myself. Remember, I said "extreme cases of overweight," and even then, meat should be eliminated from the diet only for a short while. Generally speaking, fat or thin, we all need a daily serving of some sort of meat.

For other diet advice, you know as well as I do that leafy green vegetables, fresh green salads, tomatoes, fresh fruit, tomato juice, fruit juice and milk are the foods to choose from for the bulk of your eating. Beware of the snack habit—eat at mealtimes, and you fat girls try to acquire that ability to get up from the table just a little bit hungry. Thin girls, drink plenty of milk, go in luxuriously for ice cream if you like it, and have a malted milk in mid-morning or mid-afternoon if you can—especially if you're a summer office slave. Delicious ice box desserts are blurbed over the radio constantly and adorn the women's pages of the newspapers, and no doubt our own Modern Hostess can tell you a thing or two about 'em, also. Fine for thin girls, when not too rich and gooey. Fat girls, stick to gelatine desserts, water ices, and fresh fruits—plenty of the latter—and watch your complexions bloom while your figures slim.

It's not too hot to exercise! You'll feel ever so much better if you stick to an exercise routine, even if you do per-sweat a little while exercising. Don't kid yourself, however, that, if you perspire a great deal, you're losing tons in the process. You do lose in the sweating—yeah—but you put that weight right back on again with your next drink of water. Just go on exercising moderately, systematically and faithfully—but never strenuously. Summer sports—swimming and tennis and all—will keep a figure trim, but not necessarily reduce it. Swimming will develop a thin girl—legs and chest particularly—but won't reduce a fat girl a particle.

Next on the list of summer beauty aids is the special sample offer I have for you this month. Just fill out the coupon with your name and address and begin watching for this grand gift in the mail. It is a combination sample offer that includes a special formula cream and a new "light-proof" face powder. The cream has a "reversible action" that cleans the pores, softens the skin and furnishes a powder base every time you use it. When you smooth the cream over your skin, it seems to disappear. Then, as you massage gently, the action is reversed—the cream reappears loaded with impurities and dirt from the pore openings. The cream is wax-free. The face powder that you will also receive in this free offer claims two new discoveries to eliminate the problem of shiny skin. It is light-proof and moisture-proof.

Next month I'll be back at the same old stand with a little article about extra beauty for fall and winter. When you return to school or the office, or when you go back to the home town, or everybody else comes back to the home town, I want you all to be groomed and ready for heaps of dates and scores of boy friends so watch for it. I'll be seeing yuh!

Mary Marshall
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue
New York, N. Y.

Please send me the free combination sample offer of cream and face powder.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

RUGGED INDIVIDUALIST

(Continued from page 35)

"The Toy Wife"—to see her husband, to see spring in Manhattan, to see two or three plays. She not only had the impulse. She also carried it out.

She flew, despite a weather report of bumpy air, despite studio objections, despite an expectation that she would find a wire waiting for her in New York, telling her, "Return immediately."

She flew despite the fact that her husband has a horror of airplanes, and won't fly, himself. If this isn't individuality, then crabapples grow on gooseberry bushes.

Two days after her short, sudden visit to New York—she was there only three days when the studio recalled her—I saw Luise. Knowing Clifford Odets' aversion to air travel, I wondered (out loud) how he had faced the idea of Mrs. Clifford Odets' flying, when even the studio found objections.

The answer was simple, so far as Luise was concerned. She wouldn't object to his smoking a pipe on the grounds that, if she smoked a pipe, she would become violently ill.

"We are civilized people," she said simply, as if that explained everything. And perhaps it did.

I had just puffed to the topmost tier of a modernistic apartment building stacked against a hillside in Westwood, to find her in slacks in a living room whose walls were mostly windows, with a large view of sky, white houses on distant knobby hills ("like Egypt," Luise said), and, far away, the Sierra Madre Mountains. Even when she is on the ground, Luise likes altitude. And, in this small apartment, she has altitude.

SHE lazily considered some billowy white clouds scudding across the blue sky. Perhaps they inspired sharp memories of her own recent flight. Abruptly, impulsively, she said, "Oh, I had such a goot time in New York! You cannot think what it is like, spring in New York. Every day, Cliff and I went walking in the Park. The young ducklings bobbing in the water, the young blossoms on the trees, the bright green grass. Everything, everything said, 'Winter is past. Life begins again!' Sometimes, I feel I get more out of these so-brief trips than if I stayed for long times. I get the whipped cream of everything. I crowd so much into so little time."

I asked her if she often indulged these mad impulses, like flying to New York for three days, or (as once happened) fourteen hours.

"'Mad impulses?'" she repeated, puzzled. "I don't think they're mad. Do you know how many times I have flown across America? Thirty times! If I can go, I should go. That is terribly natural.

"I don't like staying in Hollywood if I am not working. I have to get away. Life is so full of great, wonderful things, of more things than moving pictures. I fill myself up with this new freedom and other things, with new thoughts, new experiences, new sights, new people. Before I was married, I went away, went exploring. I must admit even if I hadn't Cliff in New York, still I would go there many times."

She smiled persuasively, as if I must understand. She explained, "For every role I would like to be a new person. And so I try to renew myself between every role. My way is to travel.

"Always, it has been like this. I don't believe that this is restlessness. It is much more a yearning to take in new things, to learn. In Europe, even when I didn't have much money, still I went on trips. I would rather save my money to travel than to eat. I wanted to go to far away places, where I knew no one, and no one knew me, to be a

NEW ICE DEODORANT
is cooling, vanishes completely, checks perspiration instantly

HERE'S the last word in underarm daintiness made to order for busy, fastidious moderns! The new Odorono ICE meets all the requirements . . . quick application, greaseless, cooling, checks perspiration!

Based on an entirely new principle—this new ICE deodorant disappears as you put it on. Leaves your underarm cool and refreshed, yet checks perspiration instantly! You can forget about offending odors and embarrassing stains for as much as three whole days. Use Odorono ICE according to directions on the label of the jar.

Protect your feminine charm—the friendships that are your natural right! Get a jar of Odorono ICE today! Only 35¢ at all toilet-goods departments.

"SAFE—cuts down clothing damage, when carefully used according to directions," says The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, after making intensive laboratory tests of Odorono Preparations.

*Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

* ODO-RO-NO ICE
COOLING—NON-GREASY

SEND 10¢ FOR INTRODUCTORY JAR

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. 8-E-8*, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 427, Montreal)
I enclose 10¢ (15¢ in Canada) to cover cost of postage and packing for generous introductory jar of Odorono Ice.

Name_____
Address_____
City State

stranger among strangers, study new people. I would rather see, watch and meet people than read books. I can learn more from them, watching their faces, their gestures, hearing them talk. People fascinate me. All kinds of people, the big and little ones, the grown up ones, and the ones who never grow up.

"Here in Hollywood I seldom go out. If I do, people often look at me as if they expect something, I don't know what. It does harm to me inside. I must admit I hate people staring at me. It gives me a very lonely feeling."

YET she cultivates aloneness. Consider this modernistic eyrie of an apartment. When her husband is not in Hollywood, she lives here alone except for a part-time servant. She must like to be alone.

"I do," Luise admitted, candidly. "I would lie if I do not say so. When I am working, I need to be alone. A character is not created in front of a camera. A character is created, first, in the mind. I must be alone, to think things clearly, to see what I must do to make a character live and breathe. I like to be alone with her, until I am part of her, and she is part of me."

Moodily, she watched the scudding clouds a moment.

"When I am sad, I like to be alone, also. Do you know what it is like to be sick to your soul, so sick that you become sick physically?" she asked. "I found out last year. When I first came to Hollywood, I had one great wish: to become a very good actress. Still I have that wish. But now I feel that I will never get it here.

"I did not feel so at first, in 'Escapade,' or in 'The Great Ziegfeld,' or even in 'The Good Earth.' No one could ask more opportunity than those. I was grateful. I tried to show it. I worked, worked so hard. I begged for more opportunity like those. And what happened? They wanted me to do pictures with stories that were weak, and roles I could not believe in. One was a gangster picture. If I had done that, I probably would have no audience left by now.

"The studio was asking, 'Will this role harm her?' not, 'Will this role do her very goot?' I was sick. The only cure for my sickness was to change everything. I had so tremendous a feeling of being crushed, chained, helpless, with no chance to show what I could do. I was to be made to fit a pattern. I had to be free. I am passionate about freedom. When I saw I couldn't go on in my work, I wrote five letters, asking for my release from pictures. I wanted to go back to the stage. But they didn't let me go. Then I fought to change my contract. Finally, at least I got permission to spend every year a few months on the stage. I will be here six months. The other six months I will be free for the stage.

"I was so happy after they change my contract—so happy, so interested in my work, so glad when I win the second Academy Award. 'Now I will mean more to the studio,' I said. That was what the Award meant most to me. But a few weeks later, everything was the same again. I feel that the improvement of my work means nothing to the studio.

"Maybe I should feel, 'If I make money, what should I care?' But I can't. Sometimes I wish I could. But I don't have an urge for money. I do have an urge to do creative work. I have never fought with them over money. Only work. But isn't it terrible that one has to fight to do good work!

"Why, why? I'm young, I'm not ugly, I'm eager to do good work, so able to do good work, if only I have the chance. Why must I beg them to have trust in me, as they demand that I have trust in them?

"I have nothing against Hollywood, nothing against pictures. On the contrary, I think they are the biggest medium any actress can have. The whole world is her audience. I would be a fool not to recognize that. And I want to work in pictures so badly, give pictures the best that is in me. But I don't feel that I can function right in pictures, and it is sad if a person can't fulfill herself in what she wants to do, and has to seek other outlets.

"All the time now I think of fall, of going back to the stage. This should not be. One should not live in the future. One should live in the present. But if I live in the present, and take serious the work I am here to do, I'd feel so unhappy, I would beat my head against the walls. I have to live in the future.

AM I always true to myself? Yes! It is my greatest fault, and my greatest asset. It makes my biggest enemies, and my biggest friends."

For a moment, Luise was silent. Then suddenly, spontaneously, she said, "Have I sound as if I think of nothing but my work? It is the very outlet of my being. Yes. But I am not blind. It is not the most important thing in life. I would hang my career on a nail, the second my husband asked me."

Her smile was back now. "If that is the right thing to say, I don't know, but it is true. Rumors that Cliff and I are parting because we work so far apart? They do not bother me. Cliff and I know better!"

I had gone to Luise Rainer, expecting a temperamental close-up of Hollywood's finest actress. But, somehow, I came away with an impression, instead, of a human being, a very civilized human being, very much in love, but also very much an individualist, because she is an idealist.

GET IT WHILE YOU CAN, GIRLS

(Continued from page 47)

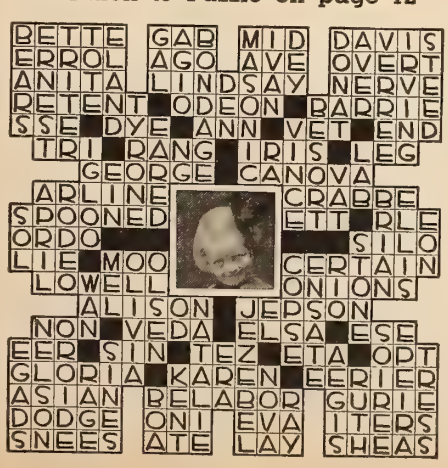
In case you don't know, and you certainly should, Miss Farrell is a gal with a brain. She may play, and convincingly, those dizzy dames on the screen, but once the grease paint is off, she's out of character and is herself again. While in New York, she spent her few short days, not only shopping and seeing all the good plays, but looking to her radio future.

For, as she said, "You know, I want to do radio and be so good that they will want me even if I don't continue in pictures. I know I can last in radio—at least until television.

"Another little matter which caused a slight altercation was the studio's wanting me to play the mother of a nineteen-year-old girl. I don't mind being a mother, but I feel that if, as they said, I'm to be a young Gertrude Lawrence, then I want to be a young woman for at least a couple more years, and not become old immediately. I'm a mother, you know, but my son's not nineteen. I expect to grow old, but not before my time."



On her return, Miss Farrell goes into the Torchy Blane series, in which she became so successful recently. However, she has quite a trip mapped out for herself en route.

"I'm going directly to Oklahoma for a little hunting. I love to shoot, but imagine me bagging a buffalo! That's just what I'm to do! It's all arranged. Besides owning half the state of Oklahoma, my friends have a game preserve. It seems Elliot Roosevelt shot the first buffalo of the season and when I get there I'm to shoot the second. It's nice publicity anyway, and they're mounting the head and skin for my lodge in Arrowhead. They'll fly it out to me along with the meat.

"You know, everyone has an idea that buffalo is becoming extinct, or do you care? As a matter of fact, they have to kill off a certain number each year so they won't overrun the place. I guess that's why I'm to be honored by bagging the second of the season. Anyway, it'll make a good barbecue, although I'm not so keen about either buffalo or venison. I'll take a hamburger any time.

"To get back to where we started—all I have to say in parting is, 'Get all you can while you can, because if you don't some acquisitive amateur will!' I think I've learned a lesson in love! And, those boys out west had better look to their laurels—and bankrolls—they're meeting a new Farrell, and a smartie this time!"

Solution to Puzzle on page 12

Active days are here again

SO WOMEN NATURALLY WANT A SANITARY NAPKIN THAT STAYS WONDERSOFT

When you buy Kotex* you can be sure that:

★ Kotex stays Wondersoft--for it's cushioned in cotton.

★ Kotex can be worn on either side--both sides are fully absorbent.

★ Kotex can't chafe, can't fail, can't show.

★ Only Kotex offers three types--Regular, Junior and Super--for different women on different days.

★ You get full value for your money . . . the most efficient, comfortable sanitary service that 18 years of experience can produce.

KOTEX* SANITARY NAPKINS

(Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Patent Office*)

Use Quest* with Kotex... the new positive deodorant powder developed especially for sanitary napkins—soothing, completely effective. Only 35c for large 2-ounce size.

FROM HOLLYWOOD ...Sanitary Protection without pads, pins, belts

From Hollywood, world style center, comes the modern method of sanitary protection! Holly-Pax affords invisible sanitary protection, eliminating pads and belts. A highly absorbent cotton tampon worn internally, Holly-Pax can't chafe and is so comfortable its presence is not felt. Because it absorbs internally, there is no possibility of odor. Its low cost of 25c for a complete month's supply makes it the most economical form of protection. Ask for Holly-Pax at department, drug and five and ten cent stores. Or send coupon for introductory package.

NO DANGER OF ODOR

UTTERLY INVISIBLE

NO CHAFING

holly-Pax

THE WIX COMPANY M88
Minneapolis, Minnesota, or Hollywood, California
For the enclosed 10c (stamps or coin) send me regular size package of Holly-Pax under your special offer.
Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

romance and body odors don't mix!

use Hush and be Sure

Men love personal daintiness in girls . . . so don't risk offending. After every bath HUSH will keep you sweet and fresh for hours longer. You'll use all 3 types:
CREAM—Pure, soothing to skin, harmless to dress fabrics.
LIQUID—Instant, protects 24 hours. Regular, for 1 to 3 days.
POWDER—Ideal for Sanitary Napkins. Keeps feet and shoes fresh.

25c 50c—10c size at 10c counters

SHE WANTS TO BE MARRIED

(Continued from page 31)

unfaithful? At first Merle answered, "Oh, I should be so terribly, terribly hurt! I really do think I should feel that everything was over." And then she thought a moment, and said, "I don't know—it would depend on how much I really loved him. If I really and truly loved him, I believe I should try to shut my eyes and pretend that nothing had happened. If I was sure that he really and truly loved me, and that this thing which had happened was a madness of the moment, I should try to make every effort to hold us together. I hope I'd do that. It would be the right thing to do, wouldn't it? But when one is hurt—even if only the vanity is hurt—it doesn't make a great deal of difference when you're suffering, does it? There is another angle to that, too—the man's angle. I saw a play while I was abroad which made a wonderful impression on me . . ."

SHE went on to tell briefly about this play, which she had seen in Paris. "Un Homme Comme Les Autres"—"A Man Like Any Other." The husband, an incorrigible philanderer. The wife, idealistically in love with him, very innocent, very true. A gay party, attended by a baker's dozen of beautiful and glamorous women, each one a cooperative leading lady in the husband's affaires du coeur—rough translation, "bedroom farce." In a fine burst of emotion, the husband tells the wife all about his extra-marital episodes. He insists he truly loves his wife, but confesses that he is incapable of fidelity. The wife is heartbroken—tears stream down her face. What shall she do, what shall she do? The rest of the play tells what she does do, and it all ends very unhappily, but that is beside our point.

"The fool, the stupid, blundering, selfish male fool!" cried Merle, her big dark eyes flashing. "I suppose it made such an impression on me because it was so finely acted. But I also felt that it had so much in it of real life. Why couldn't he have kept silent? Why couldn't he have fought his weakness himself? Why did he have to tell his wife this sob story, this true confession? What is it in men which makes them want to spill over like that, putting the burden of forgiveness on women?"

"Then you wouldn't want your husband to be so all-fired truthful that it would make life uncomfortable?"

"That's right. Somewhere or other, I read about a man who persisted in regarding the world as a sort of 'moral gymnasium.' He would do his average, human number of sinful and hurtful actions and then, not caring so much about repairing the damage he had done, but rather seeking to exonerate himself, he would figuratively beat his chest and tear his hair—delighting in a maudlin recital of his misdeeds. I think that's weak and wrong and wicked. Where love is concerned, especially. Men are different animals from women, we might as well admit it. A man will be fleetingly intrigued by a lovely face or an alluring figure. It isn't always flattering, but there you are. If—I say if—these attractions are a thing of the moment, the least he can do is keep quiet about them. And when I become a wife, I hope I will bring enough good sense and sophistication to my marriage to pretend not to 'notice anything'—enough strength to kill petty jealousy.

"Mind you—if anything important and real should come between my love and me, I should want him to tell me about it. Quickly and honestly. And I hope I should be intelligent and decent about it and say, 'Well, my dear, there it is, and thank you for telling me.' Then I should go into my room and cry into my pillow, but I pray to heaven the pillow would be the only witness to any scenes I might make. Oh, dear—I sound too, too utterly brave and wonderful, don't I? I'd probably throw chairs and lamps, and behave like a perfect vixen. But I hope I wouldn't, and I'd honestly try to be decent."

"What kept you from marrying the very first object of your affections?" we inquired nosily.

"I was lucky," she answered and giggled—the famous Oberon giggle, admired on two continents.

"And since then?"

"My luck has held."

"What has usually been the reason for the break-up of your romances?"

"My jealousy," she answered honestly. "I'm jealous. Everybody who is capable of loving is capable of jealousy. But we women should try to stifle petty jealousy, as I said, and your humble servant thinks she has learned a thing or two."

"Well, what are you waiting for now? What kind of a man do you want?"

"Can't tell. But I'll know him when I see him." Her eyes were dreamy. Then they stopped being dreamy, and twinkled. "I say, I hope I don't wait too long. I'd be frightfully disconcerted if I remained Merle Oberon, spinster, all my life."

I HAD a quick, incongruous picture of the slim and lovely person sitting opposite me in the heavenly white satin housecoat—very tailored, and fitting perfectly, and probably quite expensive—an utterly incongruous picture of spectacles and knitting and cat and parrot. It was my turn to giggle.

"What's the joke?"

"I can see you looking under the bed for burglars already," I said.

"I hope he's a good-looking burglar."

"Oh, he's the spit and image of Robert Taylor. And he's never too truthful. When he winks at blondes, he always pretends he's got something in his eye."

"Now you're pulling my leg," she said.

She feels rather "half way between," generally speaking. Half way between England's and Hollywood's studios. Half way between the successful "Divorce of Lady X" and the almost-sure-to-be-successful "Graustark," with Gary Cooper. Half way between Technicolor and black and white, which reminds us of the Oberon hair. It's half way between, too. She was sick about it, and with quite un-starlike candor, confessed that she had had to dye for her art, to pull a very old gag. In Technicolor, it seems, her dark hair with the lovely red lights in it had been too dark—had cast shadows on her pretty face. They tried wigs. Wigs looked all wrong, somehow. I asked about this new gold powder that some stars use when they want to highlight their locks.

"I'm always the one that some perfectly wonderful discovery won't work on," she declared bitterly. "It seems that that new gold powder is only practical for (a) light brownettes and (b) every other type except me. Me, I'm too brunette. So—" with a philosophical sigh—"I dyed the hair, and now I'm letting it grow out."

And Merle is "half way between" in another sense, too. She is half way between the gay, exciting romances which inevitably come a-paying tribute to her dark beauty, her very appealing femininity—half way between all that, which she enjoys no end, and the more real happiness which she feels sure she'll find soon. An enduring love, a love that will be more than a quick flame that bursts up and dies down, but which will have the element of fire in it, nevertheless—that's what she wants.

"You want quite a lot," I said. "You want to continue with your career. You want just such and such a man, and no substitute. And a real marriage, not just a legalized romance."

"And children," she added. "You forgot children."

"You hadn't said anything about children."

"I know—because it always sounds so silly and cheap and everything when an actress says how she adores the dear little babies. But I can't help how it sounds. I want two—two at least."

"That's quite a lot for any woman to manage. Career, children, home, husband."

"Quite. But I have told you I expect a lot from marriage, and from the man I marry. I didn't tell you that I also expect to give a lot to marriage and the man I marry."

BUT wait . . . this having children . . . it's a hazardous undertaking for a screen star."

"It has been done, hasn't it?"

"Yes, but the instances where a star has had babies, kept her home and husband, and managed a successful career, too—they're very rare, Miss Oberon, very rare."

"I don't care," stoutly. "If it has been done—and it has—then I can do it, too. And I shall. Why should it be so hazardous?"

"Well, for one obvious reason, there's your figure. A slim figure—part of your stock in trade."

"Look at my friend Norma Shearer. Then there's Marlene, Joan Bennett, and Virginia Bruce. And Gloria Swanson, whose star is in an eclipse today, though why it should be, I don't know, for she looks as lovely as ever, and why one of those idiotic producers don't do something about her I don't know. And she never did better work than she did right before and after the first two children arrived."

"Well, there's the time all that takes. And for an actress to be off the screen for any length of time is supposed to be dangerous."

"I told you I shall only want to make two pictures a year when I'm an old married lady. And I'm working hard toward that desirable two-good-pictures-a-year goal."

She is, too. She attends strictly to business. That's one reason she's had no time for romance lately. She made two pictures in England. Came hurriedly to New York. Went on to Hollywood to do "Graustark" and another as yet untitled film there. In New York, she attended necessary parties, luncheons, and did interviews. She was never too busy to see any reporter. No fuss. No temperament. As a matter of fact, there is never any temperament as it is generally understood. She has never thrown a shoe at a maid, prop man, hairdresser, nor even sassed a director. When she has a scrap in her system, she marches right into the producer's office and has her scrap with 'im as can take it. When she's nervous and tired, she takes it out in giggling.

"This giggle has seen me through many a trying situation," she said. "Let's hope I don't up and marry a man who can't abide a giggler."

Don't give it another thought, Merle. He'll adore you, giggle and all. And he's a lucky chap, whoever he may be.

SWING TO Youth

Scintillating MARY RUSSELL of cinema fame suggests — ". . . use Marchand's as I do to make your hair a radiant blonde shade and protect its loveliness."

SHE STAYS BLONDE WITH MARCHAND'S

60% OF ALL WOMEN WERE BORN BLONDE!

Don't Let Time Darken Your Hair

Tantalizing highlights and sunny tints in your hair mean youth. It's easy to keep that attractive "joy of living" look. Marchand's Golden Hair Wash restores the natural radiant shades to your hair that were yours when you were a little girl. This natural loveliness is easy to acquire at home. Marchand's is a scientific preparation designed solely to lighten and beautify all shades of hair...important and true—it will not interfere with permanents.

New Beauty for Brunettes. Brunettes everywhere are finding new lustre and light in their hair through use of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash.

A New Summer Suggestion. Arm and leg hair can be made invisible with Marchand's, lightened so that it blends with the color of the skin. It's odorless — and leaves no stubble.

MARCHAND'S GOLDEN HAIR WASH

AT ALL DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

A CLEAN TOILET IS NO HEALTH HAZARD

HOT weather helps to breed germs in toilets. Don't risk insanitation. SANI-FLUSH was originated to clean toilets. And you don't have to rub and scrub, either.

Just sprinkle a little of this odorless powder in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet. SANI-FLUSH removes stains. It purifies the hidden trap that no other method can reach. It banishes the cause of toilet odors. SANI-FLUSH cannot injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, O.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

Blondes! Avoid Sun "Tarnished" Hair

A vacation's no fun without a good coat of tan. But don't let your hair get that dried-out, "tarnished" look from salt water and excessive exposure to sun. Because most shampoos are too drying, some 987 beauty editors suggest Admiracion Olive Oil Shampoo. It is easier to use than ordinary shampoos. Admiracion cleanses each hair fibre . . . but it does not rob hair and scalp of the essential natural oils that keep your hair healthy. Come back home with that burnished beauty look in your hair . . . use Admiracion Olive Oil Shampoo. Sold with a money-back guarantee. For a trial sample send three 3-cent stamps—Dept. 21, Admiracion, Harrison, N. J.

"MY SON HAS MONEY"

(Continued from page 57)

And Jackie came to me. I'll never forget the look in those child-eyes, with the tears perilously near, as he said,

"Nobody wants to play with me, Miss Ruth. Will you?"

"Of course I will, Jackie," I said.

He ran and got a pillow for me, and placed it in the dusty courtyard so that I might sit down without ruining my coronation gown. And there we sat, shooting agates and "commies" until the director called Jackie. Then Jackie's father called and asked me to chat with him and his wife on the porch of their bungalow on the lot.

"I've been watching you two, Ruth," Coogan said. "You're just like a couple of kids. You don't act any more like a grown-up than Jackie does."

His Irish eyes misted a bit I thought.

"Sometimes," he went on, "I feel badly when I think that Jackie is missing the regular boyhood he should have. But I'm going to see to it that it's made up to him in other ways."

IT was then that he told me of his plan to make Jackie's future as secure as it could possibly be made.

"Already," Jack Coogan said, "my son is rich. He'll never have to worry. When he's grown up, and ready to marry, he'll have a million dollars as a bulwark. As long as I live, he'll have nothing to worry about."

"As long as I live!"

Afterward, I thought there must have been a somber prophecy in those words.

"It is my dream," Jackie's father told me, "that Jackie and I will be partners, always. I feel that we are partners, now, Jackie and his mother and me, all for one and one for all.

"I want to do what's best for him, and, with God's help, I will. You know, Ruth, Chaplin is very anxious to make another picture with Jackie, just now. Charlie has offered me a lot of money. But I've turned it down. It's Jackie's own future I'm thinking of, and I believe I can do better by that future this way."

"What are you going to do?" I asked him. "Create a trust fund for Jackie?"

"Yes," he said, meditatively, "Lillian and I are going to put his money in trust for him so that while he is young, his earnings will continue to draw interest for the future."

"Yes," I volunteered, "old man Interest works day and night." And even while he sleeps, I thought, as I watched the little fellow rehearsing his scene like a veteran, even though his boots were too tight.

"We will always look after Jackie's interests," beamed Lillian Coogan as she gazed upon the huge diamond that Jack had just given her.

"And there is one thing more I am going to do. I want to keep Jackie Coogan Productions alive. Then, you see, if Jackie, after he's been to college, and married, and is ready to settle down, wants to go into the production end of the business on his own, he can do so."

We talked often along similar lines while "Long Live the King" was being filmed. During the three months we were on that picture, I formed an affection for Jackie Coogan which made him as close to me as though he were my younger brother. And, of course, I didn't feel any the less kindly toward Jackie when, very gravely, he presented me with a miniature chair he had made for me in his own workshop, and said, "Miss Ruth, I want you to have this chair because you're my favorite leading lady."

Even at that time, Arthur Bernstein, the man who later was to become Jackie Coogan's stepfather, was an important member of the Coogan menage. He had drifted into the organization casually enough, and very quickly had won the confidence of both Mr. and Mrs. Coogan. They decided to make Mr. Bernstein general manager of the Coogan Productions. I do not recall that Jackie ever showed much affection for Bernstein, but that, of course, was natural, since he was so close to his own father.

I have often thought what a poignant situation existed between father and son, loving each other so deeply, yet, somehow, kept apart by the strangeness of circumstances.

Jack Coogan, Sr. was working so hard to build a fortune through his son for his son, that he had no time for those informal father-and-son relationships that dads and boys in ordinary walks of life may have. And Jackie, of course, was, as an international idol, denied all the joys of boyhood.

I believe that in the close companionship that was theirs in later years, both of them were trying to make up for the denials of the past. Jack and Jackie, in the few years preceding Jack's death, were more like chums than anything else. And the instant that Jackie, as a pre-adolescent lad, retired from the screen, his father began devoting himself whole-heartedly to seeing to it that Jackie got all the things he had missed during his interlude of fame and hard work before the cameras.

A FEW years ago, I formed a corporation and organized a repertory theater in Los Angeles. I was very anxious to produce the English success, "Young Woodley," on the Los Angeles stage, and Jackie, then a tall, handsome lad in his teens, seemed ideal for the title role. But Jack, senior vetoed the idea.

"No, Ruth," he said. "Not now. Jackie's doing what I want him to do. He's a student at Santa Clara College, and he's having the time of his life. I don't care if you could pay him $10,000. a week. He has all the money he'll ever need.

"I wouldn't want him to miss even one week of his life at college. When he's twenty-one, he'll be a free agent, with money to do with as he pleases. I, personally, am going to turn over that million to him."

I saw Jackie, not long after that, with a merrymaking throng of college kids, dining and dancing in San Francisco's St. Francis Hotel, celebrating a football victory. He was, indeed, having the time of his life.

Then came the day when I read of Jack Coogan's death in an auto crash. I knew what the tragedy must have meant to Jackie. I knew it even more vividly, when, a week after his father's funeral, I saw Jackie at the studio.

Man-tall, broad-shouldered, he had the same wistful look in his eyes that he had when he made millions laugh and cry in "The Kid" and his other successes. I groped for words with which to tell him how deeply I sympathized with him. He looked at me strangely, and said:

"Nobody knows how I feel unless they know how it feels to lose your best friend."

Yes, Jackie Coogan lost his best friend when Jack Coogan catapulted from a speeding automobile as it overturned in a terrible twist of Fate.

If Jack Coogan were alive today, there would have been no sensational headlines. But the channels of life are devious, indeed, as Jackie Coogan has discovered.

IT'S FASHIONABLE TO BE FEMININE

(Continued from page 49)

roll of the same material as the gown.

A black picture gown has a "poured-in" basque, and its skirt sweeps the floor in regal folds. Her favored birds, this time in the form of flat clips, alight on either side of the deep scalloped neck line.

Binnie Barnes, in the same picture, plays a lady bent on acquiring all available men. To assist in this enterprise, she wears two slinky black cocktail gowns, almost identical in cut. Both are siren effects, exposing a considerable portion of Miss Barnes' northerly regions. Bodices are extremely low, and cut straight across, with narrow shoulder straps. On one, the straps are single, and a short necklace gives the glitter touch. The other has double straps, joining at the shoulder, and separated at the bottom with huge rhinestone clips. A flowing cape, fashioned entirely of black sequins accompanies this gown.

As Loretta Young goes on a Continental tour in "Four Men and a Prayer," her wardrobe is adjusted to all climates from furs in London, to tropical selections for South America.

Miss Young is one of the most veil-conscious of Hollywood stars, having been in the vanguard with the sweeping waist-length showers of veiling. In this picture, Royer gives the veil a novel treatment. It serves as flattery without getting underfoot. On a small roll brim sailor, white veiling is caught in a huge chou in front, and falls down the back to the waist. This is worn with a trim black suit and a bit of lamé vest showing. Hats of the haywire school, you will notice, are always accompanied by the simplest of frocks—otherwise there's a rummage sale effect.

A casual wool frock has a tiny beret with an enormous silk flower perched directly in front.

A most attractive summer outfit is an all white tailored suit worn with a draped Roman striped turban, the Roman stripes repeated in gloves and slippers. This is an indication that the turban will take its place in summer life, and good news for out-doorsey girls who can't keep their hair perfectly groomed while vacationing.

ANOTHER of Loretta's simple sports frocks is topped by a becoming small hat shaped exactly like half of a cantaloup, made of white crepe.

Three evening gowns are outstanding. Two are black, and one white. One has long sheer sleeves and an enormously full skirt patterned in sequin flowers. The other black combines coy exposure with modesty. It has a long slim skirt, swirling at the ankles. The top is backless and practically frontless, draped with a long sheer scarf of matching chiffon.

Most dramatic of the evening things is a white gown with a Grecian flavor. Its skirt falls in graceful folds. The bodice consists of two wide bands, fastened at the waist, and intricately draped and twisted across the back to end in a rolled belt.

For chillier climes, Loretta wears a princess coat with a huge face-framing fur collar which continues in wide revers to the hem. Her tiny hat consists of three fur pom poms. Sounds like a lot of stuff, but Miss Young has the "slimth" and grace to handle it.

Irene Dunne has a series of brilliant costume changes in "Joy of Living." As Miss Dunne is supposed to be a most successful actress, designers Halloch and Edward Stephenson were allowed to go to town on her wardrobe. The "stage" costume for her first song is a period eye-filler. There is a minimum of bodice, with a huge silver lamé hoop skirt bordered in white fur, and a white fur scarf draped across the top.

She leaves the theatre in a gown fashioned of silver sequins and topped by a full length white fur wrap. Since she is only going home, there is no particular reason for the sartorial hoop-la, except to look showy while being besieged for autographs, in the picture.

Miss Dunne's street clothes leave no doubt that the bolero is a very definite part of feminine America's wardrobe. It's a touch too universally becoming to be soon discarded.

One deceptively simple black frock has a flattering bolero, made entirely of narrow white fringe. Another trim bolero suit is brightened by a sequin vest. A black coachman coat has leopard fur revers and leopard gauntlets on black gloves. A fan-shaped fur collar rising high in the back makes a show piece of another plain tailored coat.

To follow fashion dictates according to current films (and you can't have a better guide, followed with discretion) ruffle and swing for daytime, glitter, slink or be bouffant for evening, and wear boleros for everything from beach to ballroom.

Lovely Patricia Ellis protects the freshness that first won her a successful screen test. She's 5 feet 5; weighs 115; loves to swim and ride horseback. (See her in Republic's "Romance On The Run."

Freshness wins Fans for young star...and Old Gold

STARS have risen, gleamed brilliantly for a time—and faded out of popular sight. Why? Their talent was no less. Their looks were not lost. Yet something was lacking; something that makes the difference between greatness and mediocrity. Freshness. In a star or a cigarette, freshness gives you an extra thrill that no other quality provides!

Old Gold spends a fortune to bring you the flavor-thrill of prize crop tobaccos at the peak of appealing freshness; each pack protected against dampness, dryness, dust, by two jackets of moisture-proof Cellophane—double assurance of the utmost pleasure and satisfaction a cigarette can give.

TRY a pack of Double-Mellow Old Golds! Discover what real freshness means—in richer flavor, smoother throat-ease!

• • •

TUNE IN on Old Gold's Hollywood Screenscoops, Tuesday and Thursday nights. Columbia Network, Coast-to-Coast.

Every pack wrapped in 2 jackets of Cellophane; the OUTER jacket opens from the BOTTOM.

Copyright, 1938, by P. Lorillard Co., Inc.

HERE'S an innovation to change your whole outlook on that matter of "tweezing." An eyebrow tweezer with scissor-handles! Ingeniously curved to let you see what you're doing! TWISSORS, made by Kurlash, costs only 25 cents. . . . So why use the old-fashioned kind!

Learn what shades of eye make-up are becoming to you—how to apply them skilfully! Send your name, address and coloring to Jane Heath, Dept. E-8; receive—free—a personal color-chart and full instructions in eye make-up!

THE KURLASH COMPANY, Inc.
Rochester, New York
Canada: Toronto, 3

Kurlash

COPYRIGHT 1936, THE KURLASH CO., INC.

Alviene SCHOOL OF THE Theatre
45TH YEAR—Drama, Dance, Vocal for Acting, Teaching, Directing. 3 in 1 Course-Radio, Stage, Screen. Graduates: Lee Tracy, Fred Astaire, Una Merkel, etc. Student Stock Theatre Appearances while learning. Apply Sec'y, Teller, 66 W. 85th St., N. Y.

DO YOUR NAILS SPLIT?

Put a Wax Cushion on Your Nails

Stop polish from splitting and drying your nails. Sav-a-Nail, protective cushion (colorless, not creamy) keeps polish from touching nails. Protects nails from household wear and tear. One minute treatment. Dries instantly. Encourages nail growth. Polish goes on smoother—stays on longer. Makes every manicure a success. End your nail troubles! Brush on nails. Apply polish. Only 10c

A Real Dollar Value for a Dime!
Not A Polish—Not An Oil
Look For the Brown and Yellow Card
AVOID IMITATIONS—DEMAND THE GENUINE
SAV-A-NAIL
AT 10c STORES EVERYWHERE

If not obtainable, send 10c to NATONE, Inc., 826 S. Flower Street, Los Angeles, California.

MEMO ON MILLAND

(Continued from page 46)

faults. I decided to test Ray, take him up on his statement that success enables him to be more frank.

"All right, name one of your pet peeves," I challenged.

He didn't squirm out of it.

"For one thing," said Ray, "I don't like to go to parties where everything's planned. You can't relax if you have to pitch into every game, and can't choose what you want to do. When I entertain, my company can fold up in easy chairs with newspapers, if they want to. I don't herd people. Anyway, my home isn't a Hollywood mansion. We've just built it, but we've remembered the future. It's modest enough so that when my day in pictures is done we can still afford to live in it. It's compact enough so that my wife and I can eventually take care of it by ourselves."

RAY as conservative as that? Then, indeed, he has been changed by success! He has always lived to the hilt. He has been extravagant, and impractical, and a daredevil if ever there was one. Opportunities and invitations had always rained upon him, and so why shouldn't he be gay?

"Yes," he confessed, "I have been affected by my recent success. I've settled down, to an extent. I used to contend I couldn't save. I realize now that I owe it to my wife to provide security for her. I have been so broke that I've had to eat at drug stores, on credit, for months. I didn't mind so much. But I don't want that ever to happen to her. So I am starting to save for the future.

"But," he added quickly, "I haven't changed at heart. I still enjoy being extravagant. I buy cheap cars instead of the best now, but I don't like them as well! I attempt to keep to a budget, but it's no fun! On the surface, during this past year, I have altered considerably. I'm more business-like. I conform to Hollywood traditions as much as I can. I try to play ball as it's supposed to be done here. And I've had to pay for my advancing.

"It isn't the work I begrudge. I didn't begin to be any good on the screen until I stopped kidding myself, of course. Originally I got into pictures by just being on the spot when someone was wanted. I imagined all I had to do was to shave and be photographed. Then I suddenly heard my voice. It was horrible! I'd been inflicting that chatter! I couldn't afford any dramatic coaching, so I dove into reading Shakespeare—whom I'd blithly passed by theretofore. I had been rattling on at break-neck speed. I read aloud to myself for hours, for months, until I could express myself better. I still have to deliberately think of my voice when I enter each scene.

"This past year I've worked so steadily I haven't been able to do many of the things I like. There's your answer. You trade success for satisfaction of your whims. I have to live on a schedule now. I have to—or should—think of every move I make, before I make it, weigh every remark. This caution is an essential, they tell me. I have never been tied down before. It's foreign to me. I don't like it. I'm not free any more." He winked at the waitress, returned from distant shores to minister to us. Surprised at his more cheerful mood, she straightway forgave him for having been impatient. Women forgive Ray anything.

Debonaire and clever, he loves the brilliance of the world's smartest cities. He has known Paris and Rome and London, can guide you to the only hotel worthwhile in Budapest, and the perfect resort on the Riviera. He has laughed and loved and adventured until these exciting tendencies are his dominating traits.

But in Hollywood there is, despite the illusion of a fast tempo, no such life as Ray has led. For awhile he believed he could go on the same way. He wouldn't suppress his innate instincts. He learned that he'd have to concentrate, deny himself. He learned that pictures are, primarily, a business. So he had to become fairly practical. For his crack at success, as the world describes it, he has made a determined campaign to comply with what, to his nature, are strange rules.

"It's not for the money, though I like money so I can live spontaneously well. I'm squelching a lot of my habits so that I can deserve acting success. I want to earn some honor in my profession. When I walk down the street I want people to say, "There's Ray Milland." I don't want them to add, 'He's in the movies,' as though I were merely a freak. I want them to say, 'He's a good actor!' I realize that acting is the only job I can make good at. I'm in no way equipped for anything else. So far I think I've done a lot of filling-in, as it were. Now I'm tackling these real roles with a vow to make the Academy Award come within reach!

"If I should fail as an actor I'd have no self-respect left. So success, even on such stern terms, is what means most to me now. Even," he laughed, "if once in a while I still get the old urge to go after adventure, as I've had it today. I think I can become a good actor. I'm very adaptable. Furthermore, I'm quite sophisticated. I don't mean that I favor carousing or blockheaded behavior. I mean that I have been lots of places, have done most everything, and, consequently, am very tolerant. I have a mellow outlook towards the troubles of others. I can understand the reasons behind their moves. There aren't many real sophisticates. Paul Bern was the most sophisticated person I ever met in Hollywood. He had such an understanding of everything which goes to make up life. Don't," he warned, "confuse sophistication with being blasé. I hate blasé people!

"I AM still romantic. I have pipe dreams about saving the country. I'm extravagant, but in a new way. Now it's with my time. Often when I come home at night I'll watch the sunset for forty-five minutes, when there are a million Hollywood duties I ought to be attending to. So-called inconsequential things like that have always intrigued me!

"I still read a great deal, and my taste is quite varied. I like astronomy, love to ponder on the composition and possibilities of the planets. My favorite book now is one on plant life as it's supposed to be on the moon. It's keen. Besides that, right now I'm wading through twenty-four volumes of the Encyclopedia Brittanica!

"I am not gullible, but I can be sold because I hate to hurt anyone's feelings. I hate to demand, to take advantage of another's situation. I'm only blunt when I know it won't harm others."

Ray Milland enjoys all artistic triumphs. Until Hollywood he was exceptionally athletic, crazy about all sports, and pretty good at them. He still has the urge, but no time to relax leisurely. He misses that too.

He says that he is not easy to get along with, that he has "a flair for moodiness," and also a bad temper—which he knows how to use. All right, a man as magnetic as Ray Milland has a right to explode once in a while! Most people find him a very exciting fellow.

SPLINTERED ROMANCE

(Continued from page 41)

I had made, to show him exactly what I wanted. The sketches were of an Irish kid I knew in school, a newsboy. I wanted Charlie to be the same kind of kid—always cocky, always baiting somebody, and always covering his tracks by being whimsical. He was always fighting with himself. In spite of the mean things he'd do, his goodness was forever cropping out. And that's how Charlie turned out to be. He hasn't changed a bit since the first day I knew him. Even his voice is the same.

NOT that he's completely the same Charlie he was then. He's worn out hands and bodies and clothes. But his head's still the same. I've had six woodcarvers and a modeler try to make me a duplicate—just in case anything ever happened to Charlie. Anything like termites or a fire, say. They've got the shape and the form and the color of his head. But they can't get that spark of life, that soul.

"Whatever that Certain Something is—maybe it's sex appeal—it made him a social success right from the beginning. People reacted to Charlie. They kept their eyes on him. I was just 'the guy with Charlie McCarthy.' That was the smart thing to do—fade into the background. The better I could create the illusion that Charlie was alive, and doing his own talking, the better the act would be."

But when that started happening, Edgar's life stopped being the same.

"I had never been 'one of the gang.' Other kids had never exactly accepted me as one of them. I was eccentric—unpredictable. For one thing, I was always drawing. And now it was even worse. I had a dummy I could make 'talk.'

"In school I had my mind on other things, things like the 'Wizards' Manual,' ideas for gags. I got such low marks that I had to build up a defense mechanism. I used to say to myself, 'Look at Thomas Edison. He wasn't bright in school, either.' I just got by until I ran into history. I was flunking that—flunking right out of school—when my teacher saw Charlie.

"There was an entertainment at school. They asked me to appear. I put on a little act about Charlie skipping school. The principal's name was Ralph Brown. I warned Charlie that, if he didn't watch his step, he'd end up in Mr. Brown's office, on the carpet. 'Brown's office?' Charlie asked. 'Ralph Brown's office,' I said, severely. 'Oh, you mean Ralphie,' Charlie chortled. 'You call him Ralphie?' I demanded. 'Ralphie—Brownie—what difference does it make? We're like that.' He raved on, to my embarrassment, about how 'palsie-walsie' he and 'Ralphie' were. Finally, I thought he ought to know that Mr. Brown was sitting right in the front row. 'Aw, who you trying to scare?' he chirped. But he looked at the front row. 'Oh, my God!' he said and fell over backward.

"Even Brown laughed. And my history teacher—who had always thought of me as a dummy—marvelled at Charlie. After seeing Charlie, she never called on me again, and she saw to it that I passed history without trying the final examination. That was Charlie's first triumph. His kidding that principal, and getting away with it, was the first tip-off that he could do daring things that I couldn't do, myself.

"I had my quota of suppressed desires. And, between you and me, that's one reason for Charlie's success. He's spent most of his life helping me get rid of suppressed desires. Like talking back to big, tough guys. And heckling my betters. And flirting with pretty girls.

"Charlie always was a ladies' man. I wanted to be, but couldn't, because I didn't have the nerve. But Charlie wasn't troubled with bashfulness. At first sight, he could flatter a pretty girl brazenly. If I'd tried the same thing, I'd have been hauled off to court as a masher—and got thirty extra days if I'd said it was 'all in fun.'

THE funny thing was, girls never seemed to get the idea that these sudden crushes of Charlie's might really be sudden crushes of mine. They always acted as if he was talking for himself. If I ever did get acquainted with a girl without any help from Charlie, she wasn't happy until she had met him. And once Charlie had told her what he thought of her—well, anything I myself could find nerve to say was pretty tame. That happened all through high school and college. It still happens."

Edgar went to Northwestern University, famous for its beautiful co-eds. If he had had half of Charlie's flair for blarney, he would have been the Don Juan of the campus. As it was, practically the only

NOW BRINGS YOU VITAMIN A

THE "Skin-Vitamin"

FOR YEARS girls have used Pond's Vanishing Cream to smooth their skin for powder—in one application! Powder goes on divinely, stays. Today this famous cream also brings you Vitamin A, the "skin-vitamin."

When the skin lacks this vitamin, it becomes rough and dry. Our experiments on animals indicate that the use of Pond's Vanishing Cream in cases where there is a deficiency of this vitamin in the skin puts this vitamin back—makes the skin smooth again. If there is no deficiency of this vitamin in the skin, the experiments indicate that the skin can store some of it against a possible future need.

Use Pond's before powder—and overnight. Not drying. It does not come out in a "goo"! And now it brings to the skin a daily supply of the active "skin-vitamin."

Same jars, same labels, same price—Now every jar of Pond's Vanishing Cream contains the active "skin-vitamin." In the same jars, same labels, same price.

SEND FOR YOUR SAMPLE TEST IT IN 9 TREATMENTS

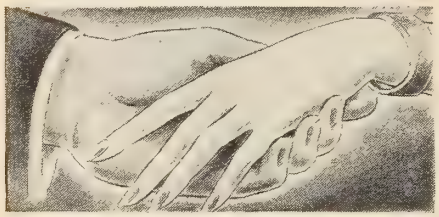
Pond's, Dept. 9MS-VV, Clinton, Conn.
Rush 9-treatment tube of Pond's Vanishing Cream containing "skin-vitamin" (Vitamin A), with samples of 2 other Pond's Creams containing "skin-vitamin" and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

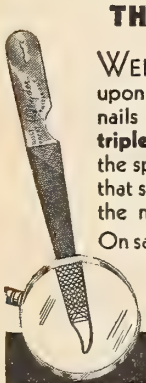
Name_____

Street_____



City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company



Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P. M., N. Y. Time, N. B. C.

YOUR FINGER NAILS WORK HARD ALL DAY...

SO KEEP THEM NICE THE Wigder WAY

WELL-GROOMED women insist upon the Wigder Nail File to keep nails smooth and shapely. Note the triple-cut teeth for fast, even filing; the special Improved Cleaner Point that safeguards the tender skin under the nail. Ask for the Wigder File!

On sale at all drug and 10-cent stores

10¢ Wigder

NEWARK NEW JERSEY

quality costs no more

NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

Help Kidneys

Don't Take Drastic Drugs

Your Kidneys contain 9 million tiny tubes or filters which may be endangered by neglect or drastic irritating drugs. Be careful. If functional disorders of the Kidneys or Bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Backache, Swollen Joints, Excess Acidity, or Burning Passages, don't rely on ordinary medicines. Fight such troubles with the doctor's prescription Cystex. Cystex starts working in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week, and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Siss-tex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co.

Say Goodbye to Dull, Drab Hair

In one, simple, quick operation, Lovalon the 4 purpose rinse, does all these 4 important things to your hair. 1. Gives lustrous highlights. 2. Rinses away shampoo film. 3. Tints the hair as it rinses. 4. Helps keep hair neatly in place. Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. It does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, made in 12 different shades. Try Lovalon. You will be amazed at the results.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. 5 rinses 25 cents at drug and department stores. 2 rinse size at ten cent stores.

LOVALON

—the 4 purpose vegetable HAIR RINSE

dainty hand he could hold, and call his, was Charlie's. He didn't hold Charlie's hand from choice. Ah, no. There was a bit of necessity attached to it. He was working his way through college by appearing at entertainments with Charlie on his lap.

"Charlie didn't give me many chances to have dates. When I wasn't studying, I was working. And when I wasn't doing either, I had to be rehearsing. There are three things that make you a ventriloquist. First, an unusual formation of the roof of your mouth. Then a little manipulation of your tongue against the back of your upper teeth. And practise. You can never stop practising.

AFTER college, Charlie made it even more impossible for romance to come into my life. He took me over a lyceum circuit up in the Dakotas and Minnesota and Northern Michigan, in a series of one-night stands—in an act that consisted of ventriloquism, magic, quick sketching and, once in a while, hypnotism.

"My first appearance was in the town of Velma, South Dakota. My audience was mostly Indians in blankets. They never moved a muscle all during my act. It was like playing to a rock-pile. I played town after town with two hundred population. When I hit a town with five hundred population, I felt as if I was in the Big Time. A fine chance for romance I had!

"If I wanted companionship evenings, I had Charlie or the owner of the local hotel. I spent an evening once with a hotel owner who told me the world was flat. He knew. He'd traveled. Another time I pulled into a hamlet where I was going to put on my act in a church. The preacher told me beforehand he didn't know whether anybody would turn out. People might be afraid the church would fall in, with me performing magic there, toying with the supernatural, as it were. About thirty people finally showed up—all in the back of the church. They were afraid to come up front.

"After that I played the hill country of Tennessee and Kentucky, where hill-billies would come to the shows carrying rifles, and the rifles had nicks in them. I wasn't able to fall in love with anybody on that trip, either.

"It was on that trip I nearly lost Charlie. The Chautauqua tent caught fire, but I got there just in time. I lost everything else, but I saved Charlie. And Charlie's been saving me ever since. We do a scene like that in this new picture, 'Letter of Introduction.' Only this time it's a theatrical boarding house that catches on fire.

"I often wonder what would have happened to me, if I hadn't managed to save Charlie that day. No other dummy would have been the same. I'd probably never have gone on with ventriloquism. I might even have quit show business. I might even have married.

"I went into vaudeville after that. I started in a tough section of Chicago, in a theatre where the audience heckled every performer who stepped on the stage. Some loud-mouthed so-and-so kept giving me the works. Finally, Charlie piped up, 'Hold on now—one dummy at a time.' That squelched the so-and-so. It was the first time Charlie ever squelched anybody except me. That gave him ideas. He'll tackle anybody now.

"Vaudeville was tough. I was in it for three years and I know. Romance was impossible. I never met any girls but showgirls. And what showgirl could get excited about a dummy's assistant, in a ventriloquist act, that 'went on' right after the animal act or the acrobats? What future did I have?

"I didn't really have a chance to fall in love till I was in the Big Time, and could afford to expand the act, and have a girl in it. I worked up a skit about a tonsil operation—with Charlie the patient, me the doctor, and a girl the nurse. I played it for years. During that time, I had three different girls in the act. Two of them worked in it for three years each. And I fell in love with all of them, in turn. And each of them married somebody else (before long).

"One of them married a stock broker, another a lawyer, and the third one married a doctor. Oh, yes, they had good taste. But so did I. They were beautiful girls, all three of them. I lost the last one when vaudeville started dying, and there was a stock market crash on top of that. I not only didn't have a future, I didn't have a dime. My presents couldn't compete with the presents the doctor sent around. But the worst part was—I couldn't say anything. The doctor was a swell fellow. I still think so. I don't dare go through the city where they live, without stopping off to see them."

Losing the girl, he lost all interest in trying to keep the act going. He stopped kidding himself that movies and radio weren't killing vaudeville. He went into night-club work. He and Charlie put on top hats, white ties and tails, and went sophisticated. ("The depression was the best thing that ever happened to us," he says.)

Night-clubs led to radio, and radio led to movies. Now he's so busy that he has no time for romance. At the moment, he is working eight hours a day in pictures, two evenings a week at the Cocoanut Grove, and doing a weekly radio program, for which he has to write all his material. The rest of the time he has to look over contracts for new Charlie McCarthy products, dictate letters to his secretary, give interviews, talk to publicity men, eat and sleep. He says, whimsically, of his lack of free time, "The nicest thing about being famous is that now somebody will listen to me."

SOMEWHERE, now, there must be some girl who will eagerly listen to him—when he has time to talk. But Edgar isn't so sure. He still thinks there are very few girls who would be interested in him.

"Charlie seems to rate with all kinds of girls. As for myself, if I rate at all, it's with girls of an intellectual type. It has to be that way—some girl who's smart enough to know I don't want to sit and listen to her rave about Charlie. Some girl who's smart enough to talk about ancient Aztec civilization, or the rate of rainfall in Tibet—anything, anything except Charlie.

"I like intelligent women. When a girl reaches thirty-five she has to have something besides a face that once was pretty, and a figure that once was trim. If she hasn't anything but a make-up box, a diet and a patter to rely on, she'll be fighting a losing battle from thirty-five on. If she has brains, she's in the running as much as ever.

"I don't know about Charlie—but that's the kind of girl I like. Not too beautiful, but easy to look at. A girl with the courage to be herself, who takes time to think, and can express herself. A girl like Andrea Leeds. She's the perfect example of the type I mean."

Now, there have been romance rumors about Andrea Leeds, and none of them has mentioned Edgar Bergen. I asked Charlie McCarthy if there might be an unsuspected romance here. Frankly, Charlie was surprised and disconcerted. "Well, mow me down!" he gasped, and I was left to wonder.

Could Bergen have a secret from that splinter of a McCarthy?

BUBBLING BILLIE

(Continued from page 39)

for a woman to act as if she owns a man, as if she can order him about, tell him what to do and what not to do. You can never hold a man by trying to possess him, by dogging his every movement, by questioning him about where he has gone and whom he has seen. If a man has done something you don't like, if you suspect him of being infatuated with another woman, don't make a scene about it."

"That must take a terrific amount of self-control," I said.

"I know," Billie Burke sighed.

"Men, you know, are like little boys," Billie said. "When they've done something that will hurt you, they brace themselves and fight back if you begin to hammer at them, but, if you say nothing, they become ashamed of themselves, if you give them time."

When Flo Ziegfeld died a few years ago, leaving Billie penniless, there were few who didn't pity Billie and ask, "What will she do now?"

Flo Ziegfeld's wife. A helpless woman who depended completely upon Flo's kindness and his strength. That was the picture she had allowed the world to see, knowing that her seeming weakness was the source of Flo's greatest strength, that it was the thought of the helplessness of his tiny, auburn-haired wife that gave him the courage to go on when things looked blackest.

TODAY Billy Burke has proven how idiotic was that picture of herself as a clinging vine, for she is more successful than ever, and goes into one picture after another, playing all kinds of roles, from the twittery, nit-wit, chattering, hopelessly dumb mother in "Merrily We Live," to the bossy, possessive woman who tries to dictate every moment of her husband's life in "Topper" and its sequel, "Topper Takes a Trip." But no matter what type of women she plays, there is never any maliciousness in the portraits, but always a sort of tender, gay humor.

I asked what she thought of the type of woman she plays—whether such women get more or less out of life than the smart ones. Her hand fluttered to her throat and briefly touched the miniature of Patricia as a baby.

"Oh, they get more, much more out of life. Often they're not as dumb as we think, for they don't take on the worries that other people do. They don't want to be bothered with bothersome things. Men look upon them as children, baby them a lot and usually encourage them. In some ways they make more desirable wives than obviously clever women, for they don't try to run their husbands.

"When I began to play scatter-brained women, I hated it, for I was afraid that I would have to play women who were cruel and selfish, women who sacrificed their families to their own whims. But I loved playing the type of scatter-brain I had to portray in 'Everybody Sing' and 'Merrily We Live,' for those women were essentially kind-hearted. Both pictures were made at the same time, and it was fun trying to show two different kinds of women with the same type of mind. I've known women of this type and liked them a lot."

"Don't such women," I asked, "bring a great deal of woe to their families?"

"Oh, no," said Miss Burke, "they usually bring happiness. In fact, the smarter women are, the dumber they'll play, if they're really clever. It takes a doubly clever woman to hide her cleverness. Look at Eleanor Roosevelt, for example. She is a brilliant woman who manages to conceal the fact that she is so clever."

"Eleanor Roosevelt!" I exclaimed. "I can't think of her that way. It seems to me she's such a super-woman."

"That's your reaction to her," Billie explained, "but it's not her reaction to herself. When you hear her talk you realize that she doesn't think of herself as outstandingly clever, that she doesn't feel she knows it all, but that she is just going around trying to help people with their problems. And she never interferes in President Roosevelt's business. She sees to it that he is the head of the house."

I asked Billie Burke what she considers her own greatest faults.

"I'm a little vague," she said, "I'm not apt to act on my first instinct, which is usually the right one, and I worry Patricia too much and try to force my ideas on her before she is ready for them."

At one time Billie hoped that her daughter, who is now twenty-one, would be interested in the stage, and even wrote an article in which she answered those people who asked her if she would let her daughter go

(Continued on page 96)

Tune in the original COURT OF HUMAN RELATIONS—MUTUAL NETWORK every SUNDAY 9 P. M. Eastern Daylight Saving Time

P.O. is worse than BODY ODOR

The worst body odor comes from P. O.—perspiration odor under the arms.

Take 1 minute to use Yodora—new, amazing deodorant cream that works directly on underarm excretions. Normally stops odor 1 to 3 days. Yodora also reduces amount of perspiration.

Yodora is made differently. It actually has a cosmetic base. That is why it is (1) soft—smooth as your face cream; (2) not sticky—extremely easy to apply; (3) has a clean delicate fragrance. 25¢—60¢. Get it today—money back if not delighted. Trial size FREE. Send coupon.

YODORA

DEODORANT CREAM

FREE! Send coupon for trial size to McKesson & Robbins, Fairfield, Conn. Dept. M-1.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

WATCH included FREE of extra charge

Guaranteed Jeweled 1939 WATCH included FREE of extra charge with every Ring ordered during this SALE and paid for on two easy monthly $2 payments. ACCURATE. Simulated diamond ring looks like $200. Solid Sterling Silver setting decorated in GOLD. Watches guaranteed by $1,000,000 FACTORY.

We Trust You Send NO Money!

We ship at once—postage paid!

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO. Dept. C-328, Newton, Mass.

No charge for credit.

Blonde Haired Girls!

Get Back the Lovely, Radiant Lightness of Childhood

Try this fascinating new shampoo, which in a few minutes and at the cost of but a few cents, leaves your hair lighter and lovelier. Safely, too. A single wash with this amazing, new-type shampoo—called New Blondex—instantly removes the dull, dingy, oil and dust laden film that leaves blonde hair lifeless, mouse colored and "old" looking. You will be delighted with the new shimmering highlights and lustre of your hair, the glorious radiance that usually comes only in childhood. Start Blondex today. New combination package—shampoo with separate rinse—at all stores.

New BLONDEX THE BLONDE HAIR SHAMPOO & RINSE

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 7)

★★ Crime School

This is a compact, rapidly-paced picture which pulls few punches, and which should interest and entertain any audience. Main reason is that the "Dead End" kids moved to the Warner lot in a body for this production, and the tough, glib-tongued characters they've already established remain as true to life and almost as forceful as they were in "Dead End."

The picture hits at the reform school system in no uncertain terms, blaming their mismanagement on the brutality and cruelty of the men in charge of them. When the gang of kids is sent up to the school this type of warden is in charge. His methods are compared to the more human treatment administered by Humphrey Bogart, who succeeds him and sincerely tries to teach his charges how to become good citizens.

There's plenty of excitement in "Crime School," and a brace of good performances by the kids—Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Leo Gorcey, Bernard Punsley and Gabriel Dell—as well as outstanding work by Humphrey Bogart and a newcomer, Gale Page, in the romantic leads. Directed by Lew Seiler.—Warner Brothers.

★★ Cocoanut Grove

You'll probably gather from the title that this is a story of the well-known dine-and-dance room in Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel. It's a "Band makes good" tale, with Fred MacMurray as the band leader whose goal is the Grove, where he hopes to start himself and his orchestra on the road to fame.

"Cocoanut Grove" is spotty—entertaining in some sequences and dull in others—and adds up to average entertainment. It has good music and some pleasant performances, but it has nothing to rank it with the year's top musicals.

Romance is built around MacMurray and Harriet Hilliard, tutor for his adopted boy (Billy Lee). The three of them, with the rest of the troupe, trek across country in a trailer, and eventually land at the Grove. Among the performers are the Yacht Club Boys, who contribute several of their typical song numbers, Ben Blue and Eve Arden, who furnish a very funny Russian dance, Rufe Davis, the rural comic, and Harry Owens, the band leader and song writer. MacMurray's performance is up to his standard, and Miss Hilliard does well with a pair of songs. Directed by Al Santell.—Paramount.

★★ Kentucky Moonshine

The raucous Ritzes are at it again—and this time, happily, with more to do. In a picture full of insane situations, the brothers top their own record for lunacy.

The story, while well constructed and original, is incidental. It concerns the efforts of the Ritzes, championed by Marjorie Weaver, to get a break in radio. It also concerns the efforts of a painfully sincere Tony Martin to win back his popularity with a bored radio audience. Miss Weaver hears that he is looking for a set of talented hillbillies from Kentucky. She herds the friends into a cabin in Kentucky, and from behind assorted sets of false whiskers the friends intrigue our Tony, and are escorted to New York with much ado about a lot of things.

The picture stars the Ritz Brothers—and they justify Mr. Zanuck's faith. There are two particularly clever Ritz sequences: a take-off on The March of Time and a satirization of "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs." There is an aimless romance between Marjorie Weaver and Tony Martin. Miss Weaver is attractive—but extremely awkward in a silly part, and Tony Martin has done better things. Directed by David Butler.—20th Century-Fox.

DUAL PERSONALITY

(Continued from page 9)

in. It's a cozy little place, my suite! Doesn't that sound elegant?"

As a matter of fact it didn't sound nearly as ostentatious as it looked to an outsider—what with a living room, sun room and terrace high up in one of the swankier hotels. You see, the Park Avenue Penners are living on Fifth! It was plain to see the Penners were in the chips. We leveled a stern gaze on Mrs. P.'s son Joseph and inquired just why he had been so disloyal as to abandon his celebrated duck once it had skyrocketed him to fame and fortune.

"It's like this. You see, I'd used 'wanna buy a duck,' 'You nasty man,' and 'Don't ever do that' so long that people were beginning to hate me for it. For instance, when I played Newark in the dead of winter, they were lined up for a block. Imagine taking your four kids to Jersey on a snowy day to see Joe Penner when you could be nice and comfortable at home. I broke records, but not because the old man wanted to be there! Oh no, it was because Junior had to see Penner.

"One fellow did have four kids in line, but no sooner did he get them all in one spot than Junior would run back and forth looking for Penner. When his Dad called him, all he got was, 'Oh, you nasty man!' At one and the same moment Junior got a swat in the pants and Penner lost a fan. Can you blame that man for wanting to murder me?

"And so, I was playing to kids and losing my adult audience. Don't get me wrong, I like having kid fans, but I like entertaining grownups too. So, I saw the handwriting on the wall and knew the duck business would act like a boomerang. The thing that made me famous was just the thing that would kill me if I wasn't careful. Believe me," Joe continued sadly, "there's enough things to kill you in this business without lettin' a quackin' fool do it."

The Beverly Hills Penner was certainly in a reminiscent mood. Indeed, he seemed bluer than an Ethel Merman torch song!

"I realize the difference between earning a salary and getting one!" he continued. "Somehow, even when you get a thing it's not always what you think it will be. I know, because years ago when I was playing tab shows and carnivals, my greatest ambition was to meet Adolph Zukor. You know, he's Hungarian and I'm Hungarian, so I knew if I could only meet him—well, something was bound to happen! I had my speech all figured out, 'Mr. Zukor, did you know I was born in Hungary?' From then on my future would be a cinch.

"I was tickled when I got an offer to do a picture for his company. Even the fact that they'd only use me for one in order to cash in on that 'Wanna buy a duck' business didn't matter much. Of course they went through the motions of having options for two more at enormous salaries. I knew I was getting a big amount for the first, and couldn't be worth the increased price for the next two.

"After the first was released it grossed an enormous profit. The next thing I knew my wife and I were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Zukor, in their home. I was on, even then, for I knew it was option time and they wanted me for the second. I liked Mr. Zukor, not only because he has good judgment and an eighteen hole golf course, but well, because he's so fair and talks no double talk. I told him about the way I used to dream of meeting him, but never did I dream of being his guest. Well, there was a frog in my throat, and a big black cigar in his mouth, and he was grand about never mentioning business all during our stay.

"I went into his office the following Monday with everything all figured out. I asked him not to say a thing and spoil everything until I was finished. I knew they wanted to shave my salary and told him I'd like to knock off some if they'd put the money into production. Why, he was that grateful! So, we made the second picture, and everybody was happy. If he was still supervising, I'd probably be there now, and not here worrying my head off."

WITH the figurative cares of Atlas on his shoulders, and not a wrinkle on his boyish face—woe was certainly Joe!

"We talked things over at my present studio and decided to replace the duck with a black sheep—anything to counteract the disfavor my old lines were incurring. The black sheep never quite got started, but I did get away from my old stuff.

"My new contract for movies called for three a year, so with my usual luck I began by taking a twelve week layoff. They didn't have a story ready for me! Finally, I was going crazy doing nothing. I began begging for something to do—anything! They gave it to me. Spotted me in a picture with a lot of comedians! I was lost, but at least I was busy. I began my new radio series, and before long they gave me a script.

"I took it home and my wife and I looked it over and I decided to do it. It was a Class B, but the director was good and, although the producer didn't spend as much money as the big shots, he turned out good entertainment. We worked for three weeks, and the picture was in the bag. I took an awful chance on doing it, because it's something entirely new. I figured I might just as well take a long chance as sit around and worry. Then, too, there's always the Park Avenue Penners, so what've I got to lose. We went to a preview of 'Go Chase Yourself,' on the coast, and I think it's pretty good. The papers all went to town on the reviews, so I feel encouraged.

"When I came east, I talked to the office about getting behind the picture with a little publicity to make it really big box office.

"Finally I offered to buy an ad myself, quoting some of the reviews on my picture. Anything to give it a plug and a chance. I even offered to do two days personal appearances gratis, if they'd only open it in a good house on Broadway. They couldn't hear me for talking about how great number three was going to be, not this one or the next—but that stupendous colossal third!"

So here you see Joseph, of the Park Avenue Penners, with a cold in his head, a Martini in his fist, and his picture playing in a second run house. With his ticket bought to go back to the Coast, he can continue to be miserable amid the flowers and sunshine of California.

Gives a "new shoe" finish because it cleans as it whitens . . . whitens whiter and will not rub off. Absolutely neutral . . . safe and easy to apply.

Gene Autry, the singing cowboy, and his famous horse, "Champion," salute you!

Intimate stories about
GENE AUTRY
BETTE DAVIS
JANET GAYNOR
RICHARD GREENE
and many others in
September MODERN SCREEN

LONG LASTING • FAST DRYING CURLS

Now! A special lotion for use with any hair curler, bobby pin, or clip. Easy to use, not sticky or greasy. Makes long lasting, fast-drying curls even in damp weather. Get Wildroot Curling Lotion Today!

10¢ at all drug counters

NEW WILDROOT CURLING LOTION

When Excitement Makes You Perspire

dew

WILL KEEP YOUR SECRET

Careful women avoid underarm odor with DEW, the easy deodorant

Hot weather and exercise are not the only things that increase perspiration. When you are excited, you perspire. And it is in exciting, intimate moments that you want to be sure underarm odor does not offend. The other person will never mention it. You must be on guard in advance. Use DEW.

DEW is kind to your skin and easy to use. DEW is the choice of smart women who want the poise, the charm, the assurance that come from freedom from perspiration odor. Ask for DEW today at drug stores, toilet goods counters, 10¢ stores. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 50¢. DEW will keep your secret.

INSTANT dew DEODORANT Stops Perspiration

IF WE SEND YOU THIS GOLD FINISHED SLAVE LINK BRACELET FREE will you help introduce a beautiful, scintillating, facsimile diamond richly mounted in 1/30 14 Kt. Yel. Gold ring? Looks worth $300. Send strip of paper showing ring size and $1.00. We ship ring and bracelet promptly. Wear ring 10 day free trial. Pay balance in two easy monthly dollar payments (total price $3.00 in all). Money Back Guarantee. If not satisfied in trial period, return ring and bracelet. Your money refunded.

D. M. Kimberly Co., Box 43, Dept. A, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Hundreds of candid pictures of your favorites in September MODERN SCREEN.

Many Never Suspect Cause of BACKACHE

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD SCOUT?

(Continued from page 26)

some people call it, scandal. Under the circumstances then, as Carole herself has suggested, what would you do?

There is only one answer, if you're a wise girl: put on the soft pedal. No more gadding around night clubs, no more even sitting at the tennis matches with the best beau beside you, and the flashlights popping all around. No more being conspicuous, no more calling attention to the fact that where you go he goes, too—and no more, especially no more giving of little white Fords with little red hearts painted all over them, red hearts which mean little enough themselves, but which might be interpreted as flagging semaphores, with an "I love you" message. No more of what was gay and glorious and giddy, at least not where the Cyclopean eye of the public can see.

THAT you would have come to the same decision that Carole did is most certain. It was the only reasonable and right decision she could come to. Also there is more than a modicum of good taste to be perceived in it, too. Regardless of what unpleasant reverberations her publicized association with Gable might cause, there is another little point which only those who know Carole intimately know that she has carefully considered. Carole, unlike many another star in the same situation, is in no way anxious to flaunt her catch in the face of other female fishers. And that Gable is a prize catch, still Mr. Box Office Number One, and personally one of the finest fellows who ever flashed across the Hollywood scene, is something that no one, anywhere, at any time, will ever doubt.

For a lot of us it would be kinda hard to keep it quiet, but Carole has never done any flaunting or rubbing-in. Her big heart is too sensitive to other people's feelings for that, and that includes Mrs. Gable's. Carole is, in some ways, the greatest Embarrasser of all—though that not-so-dummy Charlie McCarthy is running her a close second these days—but that's only when it comes to gags and pranks, and then the redder the other person's face is, the more shrill and delighted her laughter. When hearts or sentimental feelings are concerned, that is another matter. Carole treads on toes, and cripples funny-bones, but hearts never.

But this sudden hauling in, this sudden desertion of Hollywood's fun lanes, when Carole used to so obviously enjoy interviews, antics and fashion parading, and every hilarious hullabaloo connected with her fame—hasn't that cramped her style, put a dent in her life? That's the next question that anyone asks, and the answer for that one, too, is Mr. Gable, the other forty per cent of the influence that he has brought to bear on her personality, the direct influence that his particular likes and dislikes have had on her. For example, Miss Carole Lombard, recently of the Salon, has become one of Hollywood's most ardent and most expert devotees of that hitherto masculine art, skeet shooting.

When the "True Confession" troupe went to Lake Arrowhead on location not so many months ago, Carole said "Goody!" or something to that effect, "we'll set up a shooting range, I'll take along my trusty little shotgun, and we'll pop off a few clay pigeons, eh what?" The boys she said it to happened to be Claude Binyon, script writer, and Fred MacMurray, struggling hero of said script, and, as it happened, she was saying it to two of the best skeet shooters in town, as they not modestly informed her themselves.

From then on the only ones who did any talking about the coming recreational event were Binyon and MacMurray, and when they mentioned Carole as a participator, it was always, "Oh yes, Carole's going to try, too." They were, and they were later to rue it, just too, too patronizing. It was their surmisal that Carole went in for the sport just for the excitement of hearing the gun go off. That she would do anything but wave her gun at the blue sky, and wonder afterwards why she hadn't hit anything—that never, for a moment, occurred to them. Movie actress goes in for skeet shooting, ha, ha! Well, they can be excused for their attitude, because it's safe to say that most anyone, even you and I, would have felt the same.

But came the dawn, and we mean really the dawn. They had tried several times to get to the shooting range, after picture shooting, but the day and the light was always too far gone by then, so Carole, with her usual exuberance said, "All right, boys, tomorrow morning. I'll have my maid phone you at five, and we'll try it then. And you be here, too!" noting the already sleepy look in their eyes.

So there she was, fresher and brighter than anyone has a right to look at that hour of the morning, and there they were, straggling out, trying to look happy. There too were a couple of policemen from Arrowhead, who, hearing reports, had come over to see what all the shooting was about.

They soon saw. There was Binyon and MacMurray, hemming and hawing, and trying to make excuses, and Carole, copping all honors, one right after another. "Deadeye Dick herself," one of the policemen marveled, openly and loudly. This same policeman, whose astounding name is Mickey Finn, finding a new shrine at which to worship, afterwards spent an hour every morning shooting with Carole (Binyon and MacMurray had given up after the first day). "Say," said Mickey once, unable to contain his admiration any longer, "you sure have had a good teacher!"

"I'll tell him that," Carole answered. "He'll get a kick out of it, coming from you." And no doubt Gable did.

THERE are other things, too, which have taken the place of night clubs, soirées, and gala Hollywood events. Clark always did prefer horses to hors d'oeuvres, and farming to flattery, and these are two things to which he has won Carole whole heartedly. There's that ranch of his out Valley way, where they ride and hunt, and where the conversation has nothing to do with parts, parties, or personalities, but which is singularly full of such words as crops, fertilizer, alfalfa and gophers.

It's a place where "swing" is something that applies only to the way you hurl an axe at wood, not something that sends you cavorting over a dance floor. It's a place where clothes are worn with an eye to their resistance against saddle leather, and not for what they might do toward creating new fashions. It's a place where other Valley farmers come and go, not to get a look at that "moom pitcher fella," but to find out how in the divil he's going to turn that clover patch into something profitable, because he's got good ideas, that one, and the ideas he's got maybe they can use sometime, too. Sundays Clark and Carole usually return the calls. Up and down, back and forth, the length and breadth of the valley, they make the rounds. "Boy, has Mrs. Ellsworth got some chickens! Clark, did you see those cute little Japanese bantams? Why can't you get some of those?"

Now, Carole's going into ecstasies over chickens is something that some people don't like, and in a way we don't blame them. Carole was much too much of an ecstasy incarnate in the old days for us to get used to her new farm-and-fowl fancies of today. Right now I'm looking at a picture of Carole at her most Caroluscious best, wearing a satin dinner frock, a white fox clinging to her shoulders, and in her eyes, and in the lines of her whole body, that one indefinable something which we, for lack of a better word, call glamor.

She had it once, but where is it now? When Carole used to make her twice-a-month appearance at the studio portrait gallery, the photographers always knocked off pictures of her like that, one after another. But they don't even get her in there anymore. (True, the studio did get her in for some very romantic ones with Gravet while she was making "Fools for Scandal," but that was a special gesture on her part, and one not likely to be repeated soon.)

NO, she's a catch-as-catch-can subject for the publicity cameras these days, and that, of course, means that only the candid cameras catch her—with entirely different results. Carole making faces, Carole with her mouth wide open, screeching at the top of her lungs. Carole shaking her finger at a director, Carole biting her tongue. Carole sprawled on the floor, shapely legs twisted under, playing mumblety-peg with a prop boy. Carole in overalls, rumpled riding trousers, and cotton house frocks. They snap these pictures of her, and then take them to her for an okay. Instead of being alarmed, instead of shouting that she'll sue if those get into print, she does just the opposite.

A new candid cameraman recently took her such a batch to okay, and, in fear and trembling, backed twenty paces away while she looked them over. Then he heard her shout, saw her throw her arms about. That settled it. He beat it back to the safe ground of the publicity department. A few minutes later the phone rang. It was Miss Lombard.

"Yes?" said the new young man, trembling.

"Marvelous! Marvelous! Got any more?"

How could he have known that she was just shouting for joy, that the waving arms were meant only to call everyone around so they could enjoy a laugh, too? "Look, gang, don't I look aw-ful! Isn't it won-derful!"

Nowadays, it's the publicity department which has to say, "But don't you think, Miss Lombard, don't you think that this is a little too—well, candid, shall we say?"

Candid! Why it's the very stuff she's made of. Painfully frank all her life, conscientiously brutal, especially where she herself is concerned, it's only natural that unflattering candid shots receive no taboo from her, though they may be the vainbane existence to others.

But there is still another reason for this sudden letdown where beauty, posing and fashions are concerned, and that brings us to the other twenty per cent of the cause of it all. It is Carole's own personal reason, which, though last, is not least, and deserves some consideration. She has been in this business about a decade now, deep in it, and all this time she has been just about all that anyone could ask of her.

When it was important for her career, Carole let herself be a clotheshorse. She introduced countless screwy fashions, and got away with them. When it was important, she let them line up the interviewers, and she gave story after story, and no writer ever went away unsatisfied. When it was all part of the game, she went to parties and gave parties—skating parties, hospital parties, jungle parties, and so on—the kind that got talked about, not only from mouth to mouth, but paper to paper, magazine to magazine. Her parties were like a trademark. She was known for them, as Elsa Maxwell is known for hers.

THEN came the gag-gift era, Carole sending people white elephants, whole hot houses, museum relics, and what not. All this took time and money and energy, because these weren't things that other people thought up for her, and mapped out like a blue print. They were Carole's own ideas, carried along on the strong wave of her own spontaneity. She put everything she had into it, and got a lot of fun out of it, too. But after so many years of putting in like that there is the inevitable result—you're bound to grow tired. You're bound to find that it has demanded high taxes, and that's what Carole has discovered. She just finally got fed up with it, and having reached a point in her career where she doesn't have to play those parlor games any more, she has just plainly side-stepped them for other more vital and interesting things.

Her career today stands on its own. There is no longer any life cord between it and her personal doings, so at last Carole can afford to let down on the latter. What it amounts to is almost a relaxation from relaxation, because Carole once worked harder at entertainment than anyone can realize. Now she deserves a change, and it's only a meanie who would begrudge it to her.

Let's not be meanies then about the turn the Carole tide has taken. The good scout is still there, only there are no microphones to broadcast it. She still sees her friends, says hello to the press boys, even has her small parties, but it's all behind scenes. Not so long ago a cameraman at the studio happened to say that he was getting hold of the uncensored newsreel of one of the Shanghai bombings, and was going to look at it in the projection room. "What?" shouted Carole. "Wait for me. I want to see it, too! Only I have to make some phone calls first."

Twenty minutes later Clark Gable drove in through the gate in that station wagon of his which proudly wears a plate marked "Press." With him were several of his cronies, Fieldsie, and others of Carole's friends. Carole, with the Good Humor man at her side, met them at the door of the projection room. "Come on, gang, hurry up! In here!" and she handed each of them a chocolate covered ice cream stick as they filed by. That's Carole's idea of a party now, 1938 style. Nothing planned in advance, no invitations sent out, only a hurry-up "bring along whomever you can get, and get here quick."

What? No fancy dress costumes, no ice skating rink to be rented at an exorbitant expense? What's there about it, then, for the wire release, to be dot-dashed across the country to a hundred different newspapers? Nothing. Simply nothing, and that's as Carole wants it to be.

So let's let her have it her way. She's given us fun and excitement enough so that we have no right to be greedy and ask for still more. Besides, it isn't as though she had retired completely, as she once threatened to do. The screen may be up as far as her private doings are concerned, but there is still, and thank goodness, another screen across which she prances in full view—the hearty, hilarious, happy-go-lucky Lombard of Celluloid!

WOMEN'S LIVES Made Easier —every month

BY THIS time, practically all women are curious about Tampax. But those who actually use it are crazy about it... Housewives, office workers, college girls, sports lovers—all are adopting this neat, hygienic, unbulky method of sanitary protection. Investigate Tampax now!

● Perfected by a physician for all women's use

Tampax is designed for all classes of women, not for any special class...The principle is internal absorption...No belts, pins or pads. And no odor!

● College girls find athletics possible at all times

Old restrictions are out of date ... You can golf, ride, tennis, swim, bathe—be free to follow your normal activities. No bulk. Nothing can show.

● A month's supply will go into an ordinary purse

Hygienic, highly compressed, each in patented applicator. 35¢ for full month's supply. Smaller introductory size now available at 20 cents.

● In any costume—complete daintiness and protection

NO BELTS
NO PINS
NO PADS

Odor banished ... Sold at drug and notion counters (if not by your dealer, use coupon below).

Accepted for Advertising by The Journal of the American Medical Association

TAMPAX Incorporated
New Brunswick, N. J.

Please send me introductory size package of Tampax. Enclosed is 20c (stamps or coins). MM-88

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

The most expensive Shoes may RUIN BABY'S FEET

X-Ray of baby foot in a properly fitted Wee Walker Shoe.

X-Ray of baby foot in an expensive shoe that has been outgrown.

The X-Ray shows that you may RUIN your baby's feet by buying expensive shoes and then failing to discard them when they are outgrown.

It's better to buy inexpensive Wee Walker Shoes and change to new ones often. Wee Walkers have every feature baby needs. They are made over live-model lasts, are correctly proportioned, full-sized, flexible, roomy shoes that give real barefoot freedom. They are distributed at low cost through nation-wide shops maintaining a low profit policy. The stores listed have or will gladly get the size and style you want. See them—compare them—in the infants' wear department. For baby's sake accept no substitutes.

ACCEPTED BY PARENTS MAGAZINE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co., J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck & Co. Charles Stores
Isaac Silver & Bros. Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.
F. & W. Grand Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.
Schulte-United Stores

NOW, at home—you can easily, quickly and safely tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural-appearing color. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

NEURITIS Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the Doctor's formula. No opiates, no narcotics. Does the work quickly—must relieve worst pain to your satisfaction in few minutes or money back at Druggist's. Don't suffer. Get trustworthy NURITO today on this guarantee.

OLD LEG TROUBLE

Easy to use Viscose Home Method heals many old leg sores caused by leg congestion, varicose veins, swollen legs and injuries or no cost for trial if it fails to show results in 10 days. Describe the cause of your trouble and get a FREE BOOK.

M. D. VISCOSE COMPANY
140 N. Dearborn Street. Chicago, Illinois

STOP Scratching

RELIEVE Itching of Insect Bites

Even the most stubborn itching of insect bites, athlete's foot, hives, scales, eczema, and other externally caused skin afflictions quickly yields to cooling, antiseptic, liquid D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION. Easy to use. Dries fast. Clear, greaseless and stainless. Soothes the irritation and quickly stops the most intense itching. A 35c trial bottle, at all drug stores, proves it —or money back. Ask for D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION.

BECAUSE SHE LOVED HIM SO MUCH

(Continued from page 33)

needed inspiration and encouragement.

The miracle to Spencer is that at one time it was she who was the star and he the beginner. "Yes," as he will tell you today, gruffly, because he is always gruff when he is trying to hide a too-sentimental emotion, "she was the one who had the head start on me when it came to acting. Yet she gave it all up, for me. I met her in a stock company in White Plains. I was the bit player, making twenty dollars a week, and she was the leading lady. She had been in one play in New York, and thought she had a chance at another one, coming up in the Fall. But from the minute we were married that was never again mentioned. She said ours wasn't going to be just another stage marriage, just a marriage of convenience like a lot of actors and actresses go in for. We would go on working in stock together until we had enough money so she could quit, and from then on we were to be a family, with me at the head of it, and whatever my fortune was, that was to be hers too.

"Gee, what a poor fortune it sometimes was," mused Spencer, "but she never was sorry, never seemed to care, always stuck to her ideal. We worked together only about a year after our marriage, first in Pittsburgh, later in Winnipeg, and then Louise found out that Johnny was on the way. She left the stage then, and has never been back. Poor darling, Louise had thought she would stay on until we had money. Only Johnny didn't wait for the money, but that didn't seem to make any difference to her."

It was in Winnipeg that Louise made that first courageous decision of their lives. They were practically stranded. They had been working on a percentage basis, but they hadn't been paid off at the end, and they had only a few dollars, with no prospects for the future, except Johnny. "Now you know, and everyone does," Spencer said, "how a woman likes to have her husband with her when her first baby is born, but Louise's courage surmounted even that. The only thing to do, she said, was for me to go back to New York to hunt for work, and she'd go to Milwaukee to my family, and have the baby there. And that's the way it was." Spencer paused for a moment, his rugged mug-face showing its great, simple Irish appeal. "Now you can see, can't you, why I can't take full credit for anything I've done? It was her courage and decision that helped me to win."

IT WAS like that, Spencer went on, all down the line. Eventually they were together again in New York, living in a little rented walk-up, scarcely more than "light housekeeping rooms," and Spencer got jobs now and then, off and on, but pay days were so few and far between that they could pay grocery bills and that was about all.

"I'd see her trying to avoid looking in the shop windows when we'd take walks sometimes. She'd never stop and say, 'Oh, if I could only have a dress or furs like that! I just don't have a thing to wear!' like a lot of women would have. She never seemed to see all those beautiful things that you just ached to buy. It was hard, too, living in the city, with no car, and no chance to get away for some fresh air.

"And there were, oh, so many little things to contend with, like, for instance, no icebox in the apartment. We had to rig up a little one of our own, and it was an awful nuisance, keeping it lined with dry newspapers all the time. It would have been so much easier if we'd had even the handy, simple things that we needed. But we never seemed to have anything, nothing except Louise's optimism, and came a time when I couldn't see that even that helped any more.

"That was the time when I decided to drive a bus for the Fifth Avenue Coach Company. For four weeks I had been rehearsing in a play that didn't even open, and I didn't even get my Equity pay, and when I had this bus job offered me through a friend, I grabbed it at once. But needless to say I never turned a wheel. I guess maybe we argued about that for three days and nights. I brought up all the arguments I could think of, even brought out my press clippings, one in which a critic writing about the Ethel Barrymore play, 'Royal Fandango,' had said, 'This chap Tracy looks like something the prop man picked up.'

I KEPT telling her that there was no future for me with my peculiar type of beauty. They wanted dandies on the stage, not mugs. But she said my looks didn't make any difference! She begged me. She'd rather go without furs and fancies, and even ice boxes, just to have me what she thought I ought to be. And of course in the end she had her way. I did go on, and I did get breaks. Three years in a row in Cohan shows, and then finally Killer Mears in 'The Last Mile.'

"Louise had switched all the ambition and energy she once had for her own career, over to my side, and when my own ambition gave out, there was always hers, in reserve, to push me on. She even pushed me into things that I was sure were going to be flops, but they eventually turned into successes, just as she said they would. I'm always kicking and balking, still do today. That's why she calls me 'The Donkey' sometimes. But it's funny how she has a nose for what's right—why Louise can just sense a success a mile away!"

It's true. It would be impossible to overestimate the value of Louise's own sense of values in this important connection. There are a lot of women in this town who think they know all there is to know about their husband's business, and who try to run it, often with dire results. But Louise, due to the diligence and the heart she has put into it for fourteen years, and because of her own early experience, is really a very wise judge of acting material. When a certain part is suggested to Spencer, and the script is handed to him, he sticks it in his pocket, takes it home unopened, so that Louise can be the first to lay eyes on it. She takes it into her room, and settles down to it, while he perhaps settles down to his horses out back.

Out on that ranch where they live there is an amusing and interesting "dividing line." Louise loves her garden and her flowers, Spence dotes on horses and dogs, so there must be some provision made to keep the latter from ever-running the former. That's where the dividing line comes in. It's an imaginary one, but it's there just the same, and Spence has trained his animals (including twelve Irish setters), not to take one step over the boundary between front and back. So, also, Louise has trained her trailing arbutus that it doesn't over-trail its bounds, either! In the house, in their own compartment, there is also a dividing line. On one side there are closets and space for all of Spence's hunting and fishing clothes, and his other he-man paraphernalia. And on Louise's side, there's a special space for lavender-scented femininity. So it's to her side, in peace and quiet, that she retires to read over Spencer's prospective script.

At the dinner table Spence, with searching eyes, reads on her face the verdict. Quite often when she says, "I think it's fine, it will make a good picture," he lets it go at that, and there is no further discussion. But, as he has already intimated, there are also occasional balkings. Two of the parts he fought against during the last few years were the two which were eventually to bring him his greatest picture fame. First there was the role of Father Tim in "San Francisco." Being Catholic himself he had a certain complex about enacting the character of a priest. He felt himself unworthy of it. It has been said that Van Dyke, the director, talked him into it, but the talking that he did came after days of persuasion on Louise's part. The battle was half won when Van Dyke got to him.

AGAIN, in connection with "Captains Courageous," Spencer felt that he was not equipped to do Portuguese dialect. We remember talking to him at the time, and he said lightly, in an effort to laugh at his discouragement, "Why, they'll have to have a foreward to the darn thing, saying that this particular Portuguese fisherman was born in the north of Ireland!" That was his complex on that, which Mrs. Tracy had to help him overcome.

If you are at all familiar with movie complexes, then perhaps you already realize how exceptional these are. Most dinner table conversations between actor and actor's wife have quite a different flavor to them. The actor is invariably complaining that "the part just isn't up to me!" And probably, in Spencer's early movie days, he felt the same himself. That was when he was in mediocre pictures, and mediocre parts were the usual thing with him.

But even way back then, Louise knew that this kind of an attitude would eventually have a deadly effect. An actor who goes through life thinking that way is doomed. So she used to say, "Never mind whether the part is good enough for you. Are you good enough for the part?" That, more than anything, as Spencer admits today, made an actor of him. It gave him an incentive to try, and try hard, at any part that came along. Today perhaps he has gone to the other extreme in always feeling that the task is bigger than he is, but of the two extremes this is by far the better. It allows him to approach everything with a bit of fear and trembling, a sense of awe.

Pat O'Brien and Bill Powell at the Inglewood races check up on the tips they got from Clem McCarthy, famous sports announcer. It's good to see Bill around again after his recent serious illness.

This is the feeling that inspires a performance.

In the other, more personal ways that Louise has helped him there is a story that no one can really write, because it is so much their own personal story. But perhaps just to mention it will suffice to show how the love of one woman brought a man to happiness, as well as an actor to his goal. A number of years ago, for some unfortunate reason, Spence attracted to himself the title of "Hollywood's Bad Boy." At that time, the marriage did go awry. The Tracy's separated. Divorce rumors spread.

But far worse, and more fearful than that, Spence seemed to suddenly grow indifferent about his career. He played polo recklessly, paid little attention to his health, or to picture shooting schedules either, and Hollywood began to think of him as irresponsible. No one knows the courage and the calm, and the understanding with which Mrs. Tracy again set herself down alone at her table, with that empty chair at the head of it. The patience with which she waited. And then finally, after many months, the return of love with which she was rewarded.

That last part, at least, is obvious. The bad boy became a new man after that, and as everyone had talked about the first change, the return to the old Spencer was just as widely heralded. Mrs. Tracy could have turned into a shrew during that time, into a bitter disillusioned woman. Or worse, she could have emerged as a martyr. But she stayed herself, the same loving, adoring helpmate that she had always been, still confident in him, still proud of him. It was that which opened his eyes in the end, and made him suddenly reach for the very thing he had come so close to throwing away.

PERHAPS the whole thing may be more easily understood when you know the awful sorrow that touched the Tracys' lives almost thirteen years ago. It was when the Johnny of whom Spencer speaks so adoringly, so glowingly, was born deaf. Although his condition has greatly improved, and today he is learning to talk, it's a tragedy that plays constantly on Spencer's mind. When you understand that, it's easy to understand how a man can go berserk now and then, break loose, try to forget. Only Spencer found that to escape was the misery, and that coming back was a greater release and a greater happiness than he had ever thought.

It has been a new kind of life and a new kind of success, ever since that return to the hearthside a few years ago. It was then that they moved to the ranch, then that Mrs. Tracy took up polo so she might share one of his many interests (and is today considered one of the country's finest woman polo players, as a result). It was then that she urged him to buy a boat, his first, and in that way to find some outlet for his restlessness and his depressions.

Her job is not an easy one, as jobs go. A lot of people think what a cinch it must be to be the wife of a movie star, but the story of Louise Tracy seems to prove otherwise. Yet in a way it is easy for her, because her love is so great. Hers, too, is that wonderful rare quality of minimizing herself and making her desires his, of adjusting herself to his needs. Without these qualities, these gifts, she might never have been able to do what she has done.

Yet her rewards are worth it. There is his love, above all. Here is one case in which reflected glory is not an idle, empty, false glow, but a glory which has, in its reflection, an equal amount of sharing. Not only did all Hollywood know that it was fitting that Louise Tracy should accept the Academy Trophy for her husband, but the honor to her was that Spencer knew it too, and told her so!

DO AS ACTRESSES DO TO KEEP SKIN CLEAN

"One of the first beauty tricks I learned as a professional actress was Albolene Solid for cleansing."—VIRGINIA COPELAND.

Why do so many actresses use Albolene Solid? Because they know it is a special kind of cleansing cream. Extra pure. Extra efficient... because it was originally made for hospitals.

Made of delicate oils, Albolene spreads easily, penetrates quickly. Loosens even heavy stage make-up amazingly fast. Leaves pores clear as a baby's. Your skin feels gloriously refreshed—silky and soft.

HOSPITAL PROVED. Remember—this is the same Albolene Solid that has actually been used in many hospitals for over 20 years! Jar, 50¢. Professional pound tin, only $1.

ALBOLENE SOLID CLEANSING CREAM

LAW STUDY AT HOME

Win greater respect and success. Learn more, earn more. We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Degree of LL. B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Training for Leadership" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept. 83 18L, Chicago

Sensational FREE Offer!

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous FLAME-GLO Triple Indelible Lipsticks FREE . . each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks... that stays on because it clings! Just send 10¢ in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

Flame-Glo TRIPLE INDELIBLE

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. GN, 116 W. 14th St., N.Y.C.
Send me 3 trial size FLAME-GLO Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts, enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs (15c in Canada).

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

10c, 20c and 25c AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

YOU'LL LOVE THIS CREME ROUGE IT'S "NATURAL BLENDING"

A STA-RITE PRODUCT

Ginnie-Lou
CREME ROUGE

For the Active Woman • Stays on Day and Night

Here's the rouge which keeps you looking your best. Ginnie-Lou Creme Rouge is self-blending—it harmonizes magically with the delicate tones of your own complexion, and looks natural through every minute of these busy summer days and evenings. 10c and 50c at cosmetic counters.

Other Products by Ginnie-Lou
Facial Pads . . . Bob Pins
Nail Polish Remover Pads

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

THE RING OF ROMANCE
IT'S BEAUTIFUL—IT'S NEW—IT'S DIFFERENT
NO OTHER FOTO RING LIKE IT

We will reproduce any snapshot or photograph and mount it in this new and beautiful adjustable ring. White and yellow gold like finishes. State which you prefer. Send no money. Mail photo or snapshot with name and address. No size necessary as ring is adjustable. When postman delivers same pay him fifty cents plus postage. If you wish to save the cost of postage and C. O. D. charges mail fifty cents with order to the

50c

FOTO ART STUDIOS, Dept. B
P. O. Box 1275 Milwaukee, Wis.

"The People's Choice!"
He's Gene Autry! See
September MODERN SCREEN.

SERGEANT'S SKIP-FLEA SOAP AND POWDER KEEP DOGS CLEAN, AND KILL EVERY FLEA.

There are 23 tested "Sergeant's" Dog Medicines. Trusted since 1879. Constantly improved. Made of finest drugs. Sold under money-back Guarantee by drug and pet shops. Ask them for a FREE copy of "Sergeant's" Dog Book, or write:
POLK MILLER PRODUCTS CORP.
508 W. Broad Street • Richmond, Va.
Copr. 1938, Polk Miller Products Corp.

Sergeant's
DOG MEDICINES

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

(Continued from page 37)

amusing outcome, and such an incident happened not so long ago when he was on location. John was staying at a hotel near the company's camp, and one morning he went into the hotel's barber shop to get a shave. John told the barber to put it on his bill, and the barber asked what name.

"Barrymore," John said, already a little annoyed that he hadn't been recognized.

The barber never batted an eyelash. "And the initials, sir?" he asked.

At this Barrymore exploded. He strode to the door, turned around and shouted a name. It was not an uncouth one, just the name of his sister. "Ethel!" he bellowed. To make it worse, the barber answered, "Thank you, sir," and wrote on the check, "Mr. Ethel Barrymore."

The point lies not so much in the story, but in the fact that John told it around afterwards, and thought it a great joke on himself, that here was some delightfully naïve somebody who had never heard of him—or of any of the Barrymores. "Great, isn't it?" he kept saying, and we had to admit that it was, only not in the way he meant. It was great to know that the new John has still kept his old sense of humor.

ONE thing always leads to another about John, and speaking of that particular shave reminds us that in the respect of his grooming, or, shall we say lack of it, he is still quite the same John. He just doesn't give an ejaculation about it! Elaine manages to get him into a clean shirt, now and then, for a preview or some function like that, but, when left to himself, he goes on and on in the same clothes every day, and, except for a director's pleadings, it is safe to assume that he would never shave.

It's also a well-known story around town that John always goes home with his grease paint on, and some keen-eyed experts have avowed that it's the same make-up which he wears in again the next morning. John himself gives credence to the fact by announcing that he has discovered a certain electric razor which will shave without removing his make-up!

"I owe that discovery to my good friend Reginald Denny," he admitted. "Reggie came on the set one day and demonstrated how it could be done. I don't think he was selling the razors. It couldn't have been that—he just knew that I'd be interested. Why, I have never before been so impressed by the marvels of electricity! I was flabbergasted. In a word, I was convinced. And what the razor cost I can now save on grease paint!"

When you see him as he is today, with his once famous profile now changed somewhat because of the increasing chin of middle age, you can't help wondering if he is at all sensitive about the loss of his once so-handsome looks. But even as you broach the question you feel absurd, for the expression on his face is entirely a scoffing one. It tells you, and plainly, that he never was vain, not even in the Don Juan days, and, suddenly remembering stories, you know that it is so. "Didn't you ever hear," he asked quietly, "of that time a man was ejected from a theatre in New York for booing John Barrymore?" And briefly, this was the story.

It was at the opening of one of the early Barrymore pictures. John himself had made a personal appearance on the stage first, just to send the thing off to a good start. Later, when the picture began to unroll on the screen, every time Barrymore appeared in a scene a man from the back row of the theatre emitted unmistakable jeers, the kind of jeers which since have become known as raspberries. This went on, even after the usher and numerous "sh's" from the audience had urged him to stop, and eventually the jeerer was ejected bodily from the theatre. Some crank, they thought, envious of the screen's great idol. "But it was I," John revealed in winding up the story. "And it wasn't envy. I meant every juicy syllable of those blah's. I hated me, especially when I was all dollied up."

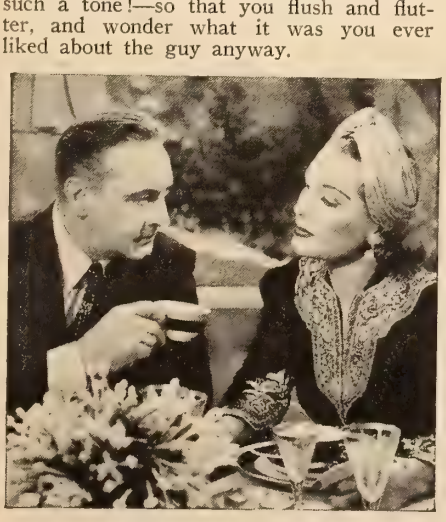
PERHAPS that accounts for his recent contentment with the new kind of old-scapegrace roles that he has been playing. There was the wrinkled white suit in which he strutted through "True Confession," all but stealing the picture out from under the nose of Miss Lombard, so that even her tongue in her cheek didn't quite outbalance the Barrymore prowess. And there is his current role of a sloppy newspaperman in "Spawn of the North," which he is making with George Raft and Dorothy Lamour. In this he wears a coat too short for him, and the seat of his trousers all but skirts his knees, yet John in such an outfit, and playing such a part, looks completely happy and at home.

He likes these parts because they are homey down to earth parts, and because, being at heart lazy, he can literally amble through them. He does nothing, makes no move, which isn't vitally necessary. We saw them making one scene where John and George Raft were at a bar. Before them were glasses, filled with dark sweetened water. George sipped his during the dialogue. John let his stand. Director Henry Hathaway filmed the scene several times, each time letting it run long, hoping that John would relent and take a drink from the glass. But John was on to him. After the last take John said mildly, and triumphantly, "You thought you'd make me drink the slop, didn't you?" Maybe John has developed an antipathy for liquid of any sort. Or, maybe, he's just lazy.

But lazy or not, it's true that he does have a keener, more steadied interest in his work than ever before, and for this he gives Elaine Barrymore credit. "She's the only woman I've ever known," he said calmly, "who knows the combination to keep me interested, to keep me going, and that's all there is to it." And after you know Elaine you understand why.

It's rather an amazing thing about Elaine, the change in the attitude about her that has taken place around the studio. No woman ever came to Hollywood with a greater prejudice to batter down. People, before meeting her, had their minds made up that she was a scheming idol-chaser, and they were prepared to give her the cold shoulder.

But nowadays—and every one is slightly abashed about it—the shoulder is no longer even cool, and she has numerous staunch admirers, especially at the studio. Even the unbelievers have finally come to see that she has managed John Barrymore, and won his complete love, as none of his other three wives had even succeeded in doing. The only way it can be explained is that the girl has character, and she also has graciousness.



Elaine has the character that demands steadiness of John, and she has the graciousness to persuade him to achieve it. Her manner is never bossy, never ostentatious. There is no discord when they are together, as there sometimes is with Barrymore alone, when he is often impatient with delays, easily irritated by too many suggestions. You know, innately, that she is managing him, but on the surface you are never conscious of it. You can find no definite examples of "how."

It has been discovered that Mrs. Barrymore is always more easily reached than John, so now it's to her that most everyone goes with business matters which involve him. Not only because it saves time and trouble, but because it's a pleasure. As one male member of the publicity department put it, "It's just a small thing, but she has one of the most charming voices on the phone that I've ever heard. And, because I like her voice, I like her." It's true, sometimes you can tell as much about a person on the telephone as you can after several meetings. And Mrs. Barrymore has won numerous friends that way.

Speaking of telephone calls, it's apparent that Mr. Barrymore phones Elaine many times during the day. Nobody else may know where he is, but she always does. After trying to locate John on his set and in the dressing room one day, the script department called his home. Mrs. Barrymore said he wasn't there, but that he was in projection room B, and that at a quarter of twelve he would be back in his dressing room. At a quarter of twelve the script department, being curious, called the dressing room. John was breathless. The phone had been ringing just as he put his key in the door and he had hurried to answer it. The past Mrs. Barrymores lost track of John sometimes for days at a time. The present Mrs. Barrymore seems to know where he is at intervals of every thirty minutes.

BUT Elaine is the only one who can be sure of him. As far as others are concerned he still has his erratic moments, and most of these may be accredited (discredited is perhaps the better word) to that peculiar freakish memory of his. He can remember what happened exactly sixteen years ago, come Fourth of July, when he turned handsprings down the main hallway in Buckingham Palace, or something equally fantastic, but walk up to him and ask him about that little matter you spoke to him about yesterday, and he is quite likely to be completely baffled. Very likely he'll go into his dignity act, too. "Come, come, be specific," he may say—and in such a tone!—so that you flush and flutter, and wonder what it was you ever liked about the guy anyway.

John Barrymore has been getting grand reviews on all of his recent pictures. Here he is with the dark-eyed song-bird Gladys Swarthout.

But happily these are only moments, and they pass quickly, and the next time you see him he has failed to remember them too, and so in the end you get along quite famously. He is telling you about that new boat he is shopping around for to replace the most recent, very expensive one which he has sold. "It's going to be a much smaller one, this time," he says. "Just a little thing to roam about in," and he is so anxious to let you know that he's no longer going in for showy things, that bye and bye he has you believing that what he really wants is a plain ordinary scow. And you do believe him because, judging from the rattling old Ford in which he always arrives at the studio, his tastes have indeed changed. The Barrymores also have a Packard phaeton, but that is reserved for "public appearances."

IN spite of his talk about contracted expenditures, in his speech you find the same Barrymore profanity as of old. The kind of profanity which is strictly Barrymore, and highly excusable inasmuch as it is amusing, the kind of profanity which only a delightful rogue such as he is, could ever get away with. It makes him a joy to the crew workers on the set, who never swear at him, but would love to swear with him, if they thought they could compete. Incidentally he is always good for at least one round of beer and cokes every day, and that also adds to his popularity. Then, too, they have to admire his strength, which, in spite of the punishment he has given himself in past years, is still something to be marveled at.

Recently he had ptomaine poisoning, and had to be sent to the hospital. They scheduled him for the usual time that it takes serious cases to recover, but John was out 'way ahead of time, said he could recuperate much better while working, and that's just what he did. He's quick on recovery, like he is on answers. To the boys around the place he's some kind of a bold, bad, beloved god. They wouldn't like him if he were reformed too much, and neither would you. Reform, like everything else, in moderation, please, and John has achieved it that way.

A happy medium has been exactly what it took to put John back on the Hollywood map. It's been quite a road, and he went down it for a long way. When he left the studio a year or so ago he was out, everyone said, out of all pictures, for all time. Then he started free-lancing. Free lancing at $6000. a week doesn't sound like much of a comedown, but it was a comedown when you think of the parts he had to play.

One studio used him for admittedly B pictures. Then Carole Lombard suggested him for "True Confession," and he came out of his decline (or his B-cline, to be more exact) and ever since the A pictures on his schedule have been piling up terrifically. He was signed on a long-term contract, then his old studio hired him for "Marie Antoinette"—for which they paid a pretty pile of pennies—and John went back with every right to feel like the cock of the walk, but never once crowing about it. Next he'll do the "Gracie Allen Murder Mystery," then a co-starring one with W. C. Fields, and later, "Four Leaf Clover."

John found his four leaf clover all right, and her name is spelled in six letters, but contrary to all reports, he didn't let it throw him. It changed him for the best in many ways, but he still has, and thank goodness, the manners of Hamlet, the madness of Mercutio, and he's still somewhat of a baddie. From Hollywood's bad boy to good boy—to be or not to be—that, in John's quixotic mind, is still a much-mooted question.

IF you're "blue," no pep, out of sorts due to constipation, don't risk making matters worse. Win back normal energy and pep the way millions of others do — with FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing gum laxative! It gives you all three of these great benefits:

1. NO STOMACH UPSET — With FEEN-A-MINT you don't swallow a heavy, bulky dose; there's nothing to burden digestion.
2. CHEWING AIDS DIGESTION—The chewing stimulates the flow of the same natural alkaline fluids that help food digest.
3. ACTS WHERE YOU NEED IT — FEEN-A-MINT's tasteless laxative ingredient does not interfere with stomach action but passes to the intestine and does its work where it should—easily, pleasantly, comfortably.

You'll bless FEEN-A-MINT's gentle, thorough, dependable results. FEEN-A-MINT is marvelous for children too. They love the taste. Won't gripe, nauseate, or disturb sleep. Get a package today at your druggists, or write for generous FREE trial package. Dept. 17, FEEN-A-MINT, Newark, N. J.

Feen-a-mint
The Chewing-Gum LAXATIVE

"The Mystery of Janet Gaynor" in September MODERN SCREEN.

Free for Asthma During Summer

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is hot and sultry; if heat, dust and general mugginess make you wheeze and choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a life-time and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co. 207-C Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara St. Buffalo, N. Y.

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK
Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy, will not rub off nor interfere with curling. $1.35, for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. Dept. M88
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Name .....
Street .....
City ..... State .....
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

Teeth hard to Bryten?

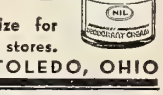
Here's News! Iodent No. 2 toothpaste and powder is scientifically compounded by a Dentist and guaranteed to SAFELY remove most stubborn stains—even smoke stains—from hard-to-bryten teeth, or money back. Have bright, sparkling teeth like millions do. Get refreshing Iodent today.



IODENT

NO. 1 FOR TEETH EASY TO BRYTEN — TOOTH PASTE also POWDER — NO. 2 FOR TEETH HARD TO BRYTEN

ABSOLUTELY SAFE DEODORANT CREAM

◆ Safe for skin and fabrics—non-irritating even after shaving—approved by Good Housekeeping...Just dab it on—NON-GREASY—dries instantly—no dusting powder necessary—will not rub off...Ideal for sanitary napkins... Largest size for only ten cents. At leading ten cent stores.

NIL LABORATORIES • TOLEDO, OHIO

MEND THINGS!

China
Glassware
Leather
Toys
Furniture
Books

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores

SNUBBED BECAUSE OF "ADOLESCENT SKIN"?

Act now to help keep your blood free of pimple-making poisons

Don't go on being cursed by loathsome pimples. Don't make others feel ashamed of you or shun you. Find out what's the matter and correct it.

During the period of adolescence, in the years between 13 and 25, important glands are developing. This causes disturbances throughout your body. Waste poisons from the intestines often find their way into the blood . . . and may break out in ugly skin eruptions. You must help free your system of these intestinal poisons.

Thousands of young people have solved this problem—simply by eating Fleischmann's Yeast. Each cake of this fresh food contains millions of tiny, living plants that act to help you eliminate waste poisons from the body—before they can get into the blood. Your skin becomes clearer and fresher again. Many get remarkable results in 30 days or less. Don't lose time. Start eating Fleischmann's Yeast now . . . 3 cakes daily, one before each meal.

I WANT MY MONEY

(Continued from page 53)

of his own during this period.

It is difficult to reprint the exact figures on my earnings. I can safely say, however, that after "The Kid" my value to the movies was universally conceded to be $4000. a week. For personal appearances I received more—$5000. from the London Palladium, for instance. I was getting five dollars every seven days for myself then! A writer in the London Daily Mirror commented at the time, "What becomes of the other $4995. I don't know." He was voicing my own thoughts—ten years ahead.

Then George Bernard Shaw, whom I met while over there, told me, "In your short career you've made more money than I have in my seventy-two years of creditable service to the stage." But Mr. Shaw was never a child playwright!

I tell all this to show you how the money rolled in. Too much for a punk kid my age? Maybe. But I earned it. It was mine. After all, I had paid a heavy price for it, the price of a normal childhood. Other youngsters are making big money today, right here in the same Hollywood. It is because I feel that my story may just possibly be of some help to them—because there is a crying need for change in the "child labor" laws of California—that I tell it now.

Naturally, in the beginning, I dreaded going to court, dreaded making my personal problems public. But now I have a wife and home of my own. I must protect my interests—and theirs.

I never had any real fun while I was a kid, in the sense that other boys do. For me there were no hours of play after school—almost no school, in the ordinary meaning—no letting-down-my-hair as we know it today, until I went to college. Athletics were taboo. I might mar my pretty face or, worse yet, "hold up production." My idea of a big time was to visit my aunt and uncle. They let me put on overalls and go out and play with some of the neighborhood kids. Boy, was that a treat!

THE first time I ever roller-skated was with Betty Grable, soon after I started going with her. The closest I ever came to rolling a hoop was when the studio made some publicity stills of Betty "at play," and I sneaked one for a little private experimenting. I had sailed on many yachts and big ships, but the first time I was ever allowed to roam a deck unmolested was at the harbor recently, when a bunch of us went down to Preston Foster's boat.

It wasn't anybody's fault, really. Even if my parents—and my employers—had been willing to let me "relax" after the day's grind, the endless demands made on a "celebrity" would have queered that. Interviews—music, dancing and riding lessons—personal appearances—portrait sittings—all the hundred-and-one requirements of publicity and exploitation kept me busy long after the cameras had stopped rolling. It was all part of "being famous," the continuous manufacture of "glamor."

What of 1938's juvenile stars? They are taking the same kind of "punishment." They can't escape it. If their futures were left solely to the laws of the State, they might easily wind up behind the eight-ball, as I did. But I understand most of the fathers and mothers of today are exhibiting more generosity—or at least greater foresight—in providing for their children's tomorrows.

I say this not from a newly-found optimism or because I feel it is the tactful thing to do, but as a result of numerous inquiries directed toward the present status of the child stars of Hollywood.

Shirley Temple probably draws higher wages than any other youngster. That's only fair. Shirley is, after all, the number one box-office attraction. But kids don't derive all their income from the screen alone. Radio and commercial tie-ups mean a lot more to their bank accounts than they did when I was a star. It would be impossible for me to estimate Shirley's total earnings, but I'm told they're around $500,000. per year.

Shirley's money is said to be invested three ways: in paid-up annuities, government bonds, and guaranteed trust funds in several banks. It is all in her name, and Mr. and Mrs. George Temple have absolutely no access to it. The investments will not all mature at the same time—that is, when Shirley reaches twenty-one—but will be paid to her at ten-year intervals. That's what I call good sense.

JANE WITHERS, who is now twelve and has been working five years, also should have a considerable amount stored away. Every week, I hear, her parents deposit $1000. to her credit in a trust fund. The rest goes into Jane's regular account. She has to sign every check that is written, for her parents believe firmly in impressing her with the value of dollars and cents.

Bobby Breen's income stems from five sources: motion pictures, radio, commercial tie-ups, personal appearances, and recordings. His money is placed in a trust fund controlled by the family. Bobby gets sixty cents a week for spending—which made me, I suppose, a bloated plutocrat by comparison, and my weekly six twenty-five a tidy fortune!

Like Bobby, Deanna Durbin has a five-way income. It is supposed to add up to $100,000. a year. Deanna is fifteen, and has been performing two and a half years. A trust fund has been established for her, payable when she attains her majority.

From all this, it would seem that today's youthful favorites have comparatively smooth sailing ahead. No thanks, however, to existing laws! The parents of those kids are simply doing the decent thing.

My attorneys tell me that the particular California law to which I have reference was handed down in England more than one hundred years ago. It stipulates that all the earnings of a minor child belong to his parents, and in just so many words. This is the code which impelled my mother and stepfather to act as they did. Yet in the period for which it was written, a child's earnings were probably mere pittances, a few pennies for chasing errands, herding sheep to pasture, snaring rabbits, catching and peddling fish, and the like. Naturally the real burden of feeding, housing and clothing such a child had to be borne by the parents!

It was borne by my parents, too. Besides my $6.25 allowance, they provided food, clothing, transportation, a place to live, a college education, and an eight hundred dollar automobile when I was old enough to drive one. Otherwise, during all these years, I received $1500. in gifts, fifty dollars at a time, on birthdays and at Christmases, and $1000. on the day before I became twenty-one.

But what had I done for them? My father and mother were on the vaudeville stage. After I rose to fame in "The Kid," my mother quit work and my father became a production manager. They were enabled to bask in luxurious surroundings, employ numerous servants, drive expensive cars, in short, to live off the fat of the land.

Dad always intended that I should share in all this. If he had lived I'd have had no fears for the future. I know, in my own mind, that he at least was sincere when both he and Mother went before the court in July, 1922, and requested that guardianship papers be issued to her, "to allay malicious gossip and rumors as to what was becoming of Jackie's money."

In January, 1923, they asked that these guardianship papers be dissolved, stating it was anticipated that a trust fund arrangement would be completed. Four days later I received the bonus check from Mr. Schenck — $500,000. — the largest single amount ever written up to then in the motion picture industry.

WHAT became of it? This is one of the many unanswered questions which has led me, at last, to seek justice in a court of law. And why was that trust fund arrangement never completed? Had it been, the whole story of my life would have been altered.

Three years ago I lost Dad. After the acccident, while I was lying in bed with a broken rib, serious bruises and nervous shock, they told me I would not be allowed to get up to attend the funeral service.

As if they could stop me! "I'm going to Dad's funeral," I said. "I'll walk out of here just as I am if you don't give me my clothes. He was always my best pal."

My mother was a wonderful woman. I adored her, and she was devoted to me, so long as my father lived. But today she has found new interests. I am no longer the chief attraction in her life. And she has said that it is Betty, my wife, who is urging and advising me in the action I am taking!

Betty has nothing to do with it. I've been in love with her as long as I can remember. We've always been in love with one another. Neither of us could ever see any other person. I've had more fun since I've known Betty and gone around with her than I ever had in my childhood.

But I can't let my wife support me. True, both of us could live on what she receives from the studio. But no man likes to be supported by his wife. And I don't see why I should be dependent on her after having earned $3,000,000., the sum computed by my attorneys.

Three million dollars before I was twenty-one, and $13,000. since! For my two weeks in "College Swing," I was paid $1000. It wasn't much, but I hoped and prayed it would pave the way for a comeback. After all, acting, the screen, is my work. It is the only work I know, the only "business" for which "The Kid" was trained.

The law says it's right for parents to take all of a child's earnings, but already there are signs that that law is about to be changed, to some extent, at least. Only recently, Judge Emmett H. Wilson announced from the bench that hereafter he will approve only those contracts which provide for placing at least one half a minor's earnings in a trust fund payable to that minor at or after majority. Since all contracts involving minors must be approved by the Superior Court, it may be that improvements will be made, and that the children now employed in pictures will not be sold into slavery as I was.

For their sakes, I'm pulling for that day to arrive.

JACKIE SHOULD HAVE HIS MONEY

(Continued from page 55)

dinner, and washes up afterwards. He gets up at five o'clock every morning to drive me to the studio. He almost always comes to the studio to have lunch with me in the commissary. He calls for me and drives me home every night. It is because he is the kind of person who does so much for others that it hurts to think that the people who should have loved him the most have tried to keep from him what he himself has earned.

Right now I want to correct one very false impression. Jackie has never lived on my money. That idea is absolutely untrue. Jack had an orchestra before we were married. Mr. Bernstein travelled with them, of course, and most of the quite considerable money the orchestra made went, so Jackie was told, into the Jackie Coogan Corporation, there to be "saved" for him. Jack was given fifty dollars a week out of the earnings. He sent most of that back here to me to bank for him, so he had some of that left when we were married. Then we made our personal appearance tour together, before we were married, and that paid quite well. He has done a couple of broadcasts, and he was in the picture, "College Swing" with me.

We have been married only six months so it is easy to see that so far he has earned enough money to pay our expenses out of his own pocket. On one or two occasions he has had to borrow from me, but he has always paid it back. Jackie wouldn't keep a cent that didn't belong to him, or that he didn't earn. He isn't the kind to live on a woman's money. He has supported a family all his life. It isn't likely that he would go into reverse now, and allow his wife to support him. If there is anything to this theory of "conditioning" children to certain reactions, then Jackie was certainly conditioned to being a breadwinner!

Jack and I first met on the boat to Catalina. My mother and I were on our way to the Island for a few days vacation. Jack was on the boat with a boy I knew, so that boy introduced us. It wasn't love at first sight. I liked Jack, because he was quiet and unassuming and yet such good fun. He has the grandest sense of humor in the world. It's a good thing he has. He's needed it. He is the life of every party we go to. People who see him at parties often think he is drinking, because he is the gayest one there. But they are wrong. Jack hasn't taken a single drink for five years. Five years ago he signed the pledge, and he has kept that pledge to the letter. He is rather old-fashioned in certain respects. In the ways that make a man respect a woman, salute the American flag, and believe that motherhood is sacred. My poor Jack.

Well, anyway, it wasn't one of those spontaneous combustion romances. I came to love Jack slowly, as I came to know his character, and realize his qualities. We danced together the night we met, at our hotel in Catalina. We had a lot of fun. But I didn't see or hear from him again for two months. Then one night he called me for a date. Ordinarily I would have turned down an eleventh hour date like that. For all I knew he had tried seven other girls before he got around to thinking of me. But I had been "stood up" that night myself, and I was good and mad, so I went. Well, it was a last-minute date, all right, and I guess it's going to last till

TRIPLE WHIPPED CREAM
AIDS DRY SKIN

★BOOTS MALLORY

PRAISED BY MOVIE STARS

If your skin is dry and therefore rough you owe it to yourself to try the new triple-whipped cream, called TAYTON'S CREAM. Modern electric production methods and triple-whipping make TAYTON'S CREAM so soft, light and fine in texture, that it spreads evenly and thoroughly, resulting in true cleansing, lubrication, freshening and softening.

And equally important, modern high speed machinery produces a sterilized glass jar for Tayton's at a saving of one-half compared with most cosmetic jars. This saving is passed on to you in two ways: the purest and most expensive ingredients that money can buy and double the quantity. The 10c jar contains one ounce, while most others contain only one-half ounce. Compare these facts for yourself.

TAYTON'S is tops in quality. It has been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. And the glamorous movie stars also praise Tayton's—for instance lovely Boots Mallory says: "I use Tayton's Cream to cleanse and keep my skin smooth and youthful looking."

You can't know the joy that Tayton's can bring until you try it. Get a jar of Tayton's Cream at your 10c store today. Put it to the test. See how it cleanses, softens and lubricates dryness. If your dealer is out ask manager to order for you or send 10c to Tayton's, Dept. F., 811 W. 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Tested Approved 5016 Good Housekeeping Bureau

FREE POWDER SAMPLE COUPON

Take this coupon to any 10c store for free generous trial packets of Tayton's new, no-shine, silk-sifted Face Powder with purchase of 10c jar of Tayton's Cream. See the new colors. How fine it is. How it stays on—will not cake. If store is out of samples send coupon to us with 3c stamp to cover mailing cost. Tayton Co.

Bad days
Reduce the pain
Save your nerves
No narcotics
Salicon TABLETS

DROP THAT KNIFE!

Corns come back
BIGGER—UGLIER
unless removed Root* and All

DON'T take the risk of home paring or other old-fashioned methods—don't suffer needlessly from painful corns that keep coming back bigger and uglier. Now you can remove them quickly—safely—easily—root and all! Blue-Jay, the modern double-action corn plaster stops pain instantly, by removing pressure, then in 3 short days the corn lifts out root and all (exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application). Blue-Jay is tiny. Easy to use. 25¢ for a package of 6. Same price in Canada. At all drug and department stores.

BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

* A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

Easy to Beautify Skin with
MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM

Make your skin young looking. Flake off the stale, surface skin. Reveal the clear, beautiful underskin by using Mercolized Wax Cream regularly. Give your skin the combined benefits of cleansing, clearing, softening, smoothing and beautifying in every application of this single cream. Mercolized Wax Cream brings out the hidden beauty of the skin.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily

THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

VEG-E-LAY PREVENTS "SUMMER HAIR"

The Perfect Hair Groom

HOT winds and broiling sun take the life out of hair unless you use a fine hair dressing like Lucky Tiger Veg-E-Lay. A few drops twice a week keep your hair perfectly dressed and perfectly kept. At your druggist, barber or 10¢ store.

Hundreds of candid pictures of your favorites in September MODERN SCREEN.

FREE MASTER NATURAL COLOR PHOTO ENLARGEMENT or Two Beautiful Enlargements With ROLL DEVELOPED 25¢ and 8 High Gloss Lifetime Prints—All

Camera fans! Send us your rolls and receive professional artistic work at money-saving prices. Overnight service. Most modern plant in U. S. Reprints 3c each. Satisfaction or money back guaranteed. Coupon sent with prints lets you make own choice free enlargements. A trial will delight you!

SUNSET SERVICE, 295 Sunset Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

UNSIGHTLY HAIR WASHED AWAY with X-BAZIN Cream

No more hair on legs or under arms. Leaves skin smooth and lovely. Giant size tube at drug and department stores. Smaller size at all 10¢ stores.

OVER 10 MILLION TUBES SOLD!

the last minute of our lives, for after that evening neither of us ever made a date with anyone else.

It has been hinted, and none too subtly, that I married Jack for his money. That's a laugh! I knew right from the start that Jackie had no money. His mother saw to that. For as soon as Jack and I began to go together his mother 'phoned and told me that if I thought I was marrying a wealthy boy I was sadly mistaken, that Jackie was a pauper, didn't have a penny to his name. Just to make it doubly sure and doubly unpleasant she called my mother and told her the same thing. And she wasn't any too sweet about it, either.

I FELL in love with Jack for his gentleness and kindliness, for his lack of egotism. I've never once heard Jack talk about his fame as a child star. He has never volunteered any information about the pictures he made, the experiences he had. I always have had to say, "Tell me about this picture, Jack," or, "what happened when you made that picture?" If you met Jack today, and didn't recognize him, you'd never know from him that he was one of the most famous children in the world. I liked his modesty in a town where modesty is not exactly given away as a premium.

I liked him because of his adoration of Charlie Chaplin. He still adores Charlie. A couple of months ago we met Mr. Chaplin at the Trocadero, and he and Jackie had a long talk about the good old days when Jackie was the beloved "Kid." I never saw Jack's eyes shine as they did that night.

While we were going together before our marriage I would occasionally have dinner with Jack and his family. I'd go to please Jack, not myself, for it was the very reverse of pleasure for me. Mrs. Coogan was never nice to me. Quite the opposite. She always made me feel that I wasn't wanted. Her whole attitude and manner spoke louder than words. As for Mr. Bernstein, he just didn't speak to me. Mrs. Coogan resented me, and resented our marriage.

It was always embarrassing for me to go there, painfully embarrassing, in many ways. Jack and I would sometimes want to go out after dinner, dancing or to a movie. And his mother would always say, right in front of me, "All right, but what are you going to do for money?" That kid didn't even have pocket money. He'd made millions, and half the time he didn't have enough loose change to take a girl to the movies. But he'd just say, "All right then, we'll just ride around in the car." And we would.

Every time he made a little money he would buy me a present. I'd try to stop him. I'd say, "Save your money, Jack. We're going to be married, and we'll want it then." But Jack has the giving complex, and you couldn't stop him. But every time he bought me anything his mother would raise cain.

It seemed to me that Jackie's home life was all but unendurable. Only because he was used to it, only because he has the sweetest, most passive disposition in the world could he have stood it. There he was in that mansion, with all the de luxe trimmings, the palatial estate he, when a tiny child, had bought and paid for, and I'm telling you that he was not only treated as a stranger within those gates, but as a very unwelcome stranger at that. There were, and are at this writing, two Rolls Royces standing in the garage. But when Jackie and I went driving we didn't use a Rolls! Jackie didn't even have the right clothes when I first met him. I've had to make him go out and get things for himself. I guess he got out of the habit of believing he was entitled to anything.

I remember being at the house one night, looking over some old albums and press books Jackie's father had kept. I'd exclaim over some picture of Jackie as a small child and Mrs. Coogan would brush the book aside and say, "Let me show you some baby pictures of Robert!" She made absolutely no bones about the fact that Robert is, and always has been, her favorite. I give her this much credit, I think she really does love Robert.

The very fact that she came out in court as she did, and called Jackie, her own son, a "bad boy"—well, that's enough, isn't it? It makes you think of those mothers whose sons have been murderers and thieves, ingrates and wastrels, all kinds of beastly things, and of how those mothers have stood by their sons to the very last. It makes you think of that story of the mother whose son cut out her heart, and as he was running to give his mother's heart to his wicked sweetheart, who had demanded it, the heart cried out, "Be careful, don't stumble and hurt yourself, my son."

Jackie "bad!" It's so preposterous it would be funny, if it weren't so sad. I suppose she was referring to the fact that Jack flunked college, that he got a little tight once or twice when he was in his teens, just trying out his oats. Well, what of it? Jack's father only laughed when he flunked. He realized that Jack's childhood schooling had not trained him for academic life. He knew that boys will be boys, for at least a little while, and no harm done. Those few poor, feeble little "oats" are the only ones he ever sowed.

OF COURSE Jack didn't have any money to buy me an engagement ring. But the Jackie Coogan Corporation had taken a ring for a bad debt at one time, and Jack managed to get that. It was a beautiful square cut diamond, really gorgeous. It was, I say, because, as you may remember reading, it was stolen from me in Chicago when Jackie and I were making our personal appearance tour.

When we were married (we had a big church wedding and a reception at my home afterwards) Mrs. Coogan came to the wedding, but Mr. Bernstein didn't even come into the church to see us get married. He waited on the steps outside. Mrs. Coogan wanted us to live in a sort of run-down little house on the trolley tracks. She said that Jack was a poor boy and that was where he should live. I insisted on our cute little house in Westwood. When I think of all the money Jackie has made, all the comforts and advantages and luxuries he has given to his family—well, these things are just hard to believe.

I think that Jack had a fairly happy childhood, even without a mother's love. He loved working in pictures, because everyone was so wonderful to him, loved him so much. Jackie then, as now, thrived on warmth and affection. Perhaps he didn't realize that his mother was indifferent, was only affectionate when they appeared together in public. And he did have his father's love. His father adored him, and it was mutual. If his father were living now none of this could have happened. Of course I never met Mr. Coogan Senior. But I know how he loved Jack, what he had planned for him. I know that he often spoke about the trust fund, about how all of Jack's money would be his when he was twenty-one. But he never lived to see that pathetic twenty-first birthday.

I am sure, too, that Jack's father was very unhappy before he died. Things were happening in the family which must have given him premonitions of what might become of Jack if anything happened to him.

It was Mr. Coogan who bought the ranch property for Jack in San Diego County. He told Jack it was to be a place where he could spend his week-ends, where he could relax and have fun. After Mr. Coogan's death Mrs. Coogan and Mr. Bernstein sold the ranch, right over Jack's head.

Well, by the time this is printed the court proceedings may be all over. If Jack wins he will win everything—everything that is left, or that comes to light. I don't know what it will amount to. I do know that Mr. Bernstein laughs about how he lost a million dollars on the stock exchange. It's easy to joke, I guess, about losing a million dollars someone else, a kid, has made.

No matter how it all comes out we will go on with our own plans. Jack wants to do radio work. He has a beautiful speaking voice, and he should be on the air. He'd like to do pictures, too, although I don't think he is as interested in pictures as he might have been had he not spent a young life-time making them. He'd like to do character juveniles if he does pictures at all. He knows he doesn't look like a Robert Taylor or a Tyrone Power. But he would like to do the kind of things Tom Brown sometimes does.

I want to keep on working, too. I started out as a member of a studio dancing chorus. Then I played the lead in a Wheeler and Woolsey comedy, "Hold 'Em Jail." I also made a lot of shorts, and played in the Fred Astaire picture, "Gay Divorcee," later in "This Way, Please," with Buddy Rogers, then in "College Swing," and now in "Give Me A Sailor." I'd like to develop into doing the kind of comedy-drama things Ginger Rogers does so well, like "Vivacious Lady," and "Stage Door." I do want to keep on in pictures, and whatever I want to do is okay with Jack.

I haven't tried here to go into any of the legal aspects of Jack's case. I've just tried to tell why, apart from the plain ordinary fairness of it, Jackie should have his money, because he is the kind of a boy you don't treat as he has been treated. Jack is getting thousands and thousands of letters. They've been pouring in ever since the case began. Some of them are from mothers who feel that all motherhood is sort of hurt because of this. I'd like them to know that Jack was hurt, too, and why. I'd like the whole world to know that "The Kid" they used to love is today the same sweet kid he always was.

WHAT MAKES A MAN FALL IN LOVE?

(Continued from page 45)

honest, you'll see that he agrees with me.

"Naturalness is one of the important things a girl should strive for. Many girls seem to think we fellows expect them to 'put on an act.' So they dramatize themselves. I have seen girls dramatize opening a door, stepping out of a car, ordering a dinner, anything for a chance to appear other than what they are. I believe they are under the impression that men want them to be story-book or screen heroines.

"Dream girls are fine in fiction, and lovely as dreams, but personally, I'd prefer something more substantial in real life. Companionship, for instance. And that's not a small order, either," he added.

WAYNE MORRIS, another one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, has squired some of the most glamorous girls in the world, at one time or another. Here are his interesting observations on this absorbing subject.

"Whenever I meet a girl," he said, "I involuntarily ask myself, 'Is she the sort of person I could live happily with on a desert island?' If she isn't, that puts a time limit on my interest in her. But if she is, then I know she's the kind you can sit and talk with, exchange ideas with, and have for a companion.

"No man wants to have a choice between taking a girl to a night club or a theatre every night, or being bored.

"There are two prime requisites that every girl must have, if a man is to enjoy being with her for any length of time. They must always be first in importance, all others taking secondary place. I refer to intelligence and a sense of humor."

Narrowing your chances with Wayne Morris down still further, he likes a girl who gets a kick out of life, who is a good dancer, who is musically inclined, and who likes to read.

"And," he suggested, "a girl should stop fretting if she isn't a raving beauty. Beautiful girls aren't always the most interesting. Charm is so much better. But she should learn to wear clothes well, so that the man who takes her out may have that proud feeling of 'showing her off.'"

Here are three particular rules Wayne gave for the girl who wants to have masculine admirers: "Give a man his own way in little things. Learn to be broad-minded without throwing away any of your good principles. Get yourself a thorough understanding of masculine psychology."

It is Gene Raymond's opinion that if a girl is standing on the sidelines while romance passes by, then it's time she looked into her own personality.

"Perhaps she's too aggressive," pointed out Gene. "I've never once seen an aggressive, domineering girl and a popular girl rolled into one. No matter how much anyone tries, he can't run away from the fact that men have always been the leaders, at least outwardly, and they still like to feel that they are.

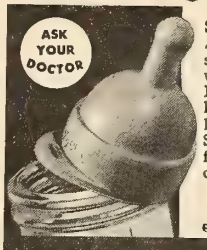
"Although it's true that every eligible man a girl meets may be a potential husband, she should never let him know she looks at him in such a light. When the time comes to get serious, let the man do it.

"Sometimes it looks as if certain girls do get away with active pursuing, but I don't think you'll see such tactics working in most cases. However, there is something to be said along the same line, and it's this: some girls, in their zeal not to pursue, lean over too far the other way.

"For generations mothers and other female relatives have dinned into girls the belief that the more reticent the girl, the more interested the man. I differ with this. If a girl wants to gain a man's interest, she's got to show that she's interested in him, not necessarily as a man, but as a person. Very few women can successfully pursue the policy of extreme aloofness.

"One of the first things a girl should figure out, upon meeting a man she likes, is whether he appeals to her as a future husband, or just as an amusing playmate. If the latter is the case, she can use all the wit and pep at her command, and if she keeps him in gales of laughter, all well and good. She can impress him with her tireless energy for play, and he'll love it. But, more often than not, he'll lead her more quiet, more sensible sister down the middle aisle.

"If a man's in a marrying mood, he will generally look for qualities of sweetness, a sensible nature, and a quiet restful personality. A man will look at such a girl and say, 'That's the type of girl I'd like to marry'—and he usually does."



EXPERIENCED Mothers know that summer teething must not be trifled with—that summer upsets due to teething may seriously interfere with Baby's progress.

Relieve your Baby's teething pains this summer by rubbing on Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion. It is the actual prescription of a famous Baby specialist, contains no narcotics, and has been used and recommended by millions of Mothers. Your druggist has it.

"I found Dr. Hand's such relief to my Baby that I never needed to worry on the hottest summer day".
—Mrs. Wm. H. Kempf, Williamsport, Pa.

DR. HAND'S Teething Lotion

BABY COMING?

See your doctor regularly. Ask him about breast-shaped Hygeia Nipples and wide mouth Hygeia Bottles. New valve inside nipple helps prevent collapse. Tab keeps nipple germ-free. Smooth, rounded inner surface and wide mouth make cleaning bottle easy.

SAFEST
BECAUSE EASIEST TO CLEAN

HYGEIA
NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE

BECOME AN EXPERT
ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 16,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U.S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."
LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept. 8318-H Chicago
The School That Has In Its Alumni Over 1,450 C.P.A.'s

NEVER OFFEND!
BE "SURE" OF YOUR BREATH

Use "Sure" the amazing new breath purifier that helps in romance, social contacts, business. Removes offensive breath odors from onions, garlic, tobacco, cocktails, etc. Just use one drop on the tongue and your breath will be sweet. Also removes odors from hands. Fits purse or pocket—sold everywhere on money-back guarantee.

GET YOURS FREE. WRITE SURE LABORATORIES
Dept. M1-847 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

THERE IS ONLY ONE
"Sure"
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
BREATH PURIFIER

ONE DROP DOES THE TRICK!
10¢
WEEK'S SUPPLY

On Sale at Good 10¢ Stores

SITROUX

(Pronounced "SIT-TRUE")

AT YOUR 5 and 10 cent STORE!

Stars of stage and screen prefer Sitroux Tissues. So soft, yet so much stronger, they hold together! Care for YOUR complexion with Sitroux Tissues. Get a box today!

CLEAN UP DANDRUFF

Lucky Tiger

"HAIR'S BEST FRIEND"

DANDRUFF is a menace to hair growth. Lucky Tiger cleans it up and stops that miserable scalp itching. Costs little at druggists, barbers or 10¢ stores.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

Cleans FALSE TEETH

RET Clean!

RET works like magic - soaks teeth pure and clean - no brushing. Get RET today! At all drug and ten cent stores - or send 10c for liberal sample.

RET PRODUCTS CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Don't handicap your Summer Romance—

USE Tabex

1. Facial Cleanser Tabs . . . will not dry the skin.
2. Nail Polish RemoverTabs . . . restore natural oils.
3. Deodorant Tabs . . . safe for delicate fabrics.

Stay fresh and sweet the modern way, no matter how far you are from home conveniences, with a TABex Vacation Kit. Nothing to spill.

Sensational summertime offer! Three modern beauty aids—Facial Cleanser, Nail Polish Remover and Deodorant—all in convenient tab form, in smart individual metal compacts. Don't take a chance—stay fresh and sweet with TABex. Solves vacation problems of packing messy bottles. If your dealer hasn't it, mail the coupon at once. Get your supply now.

TABex CORP., Dept. A, 737 No. Michigan Ave. Chicago, Illinois

☐ I enclose 35 cents in coin, for which please send, postpaid, one TABex Vacation Kit, consisting of one compact each of Tabex Facial Cleanser, Tabex Nail Polish Remover, Tabex Deodorant.

☐ If you prefer Bakelite compacts, enclose $1.00.

*Name*_____ *Address*_____

BUBBLING BILLIE

(Continued from page 83)

on the stage. "Let her?" she wrote. "I would urge her."

"She doesn't want to go on the stage," Billie told me. "She has seen too much of the struggle for success, the rocky road to the theatre, the terror of first nights; and the stage has no glamor for her. Had her father lived, I think he would have gotten her interested in the production end. Now she doesn't know exactly what she wants to do. She is trying out different things, among them a column which she writes once a week for the 'Beverly Hills Citizen.'"

ASKED what ideas she had tried to pass on to her daughter, Miss Burke said, "You can't pass much on to this modern generation. Their view is clear and clean-cut, and they are not hampered by a lot of sentimental—" she left the sentence half finished, while her hand made an incomplete gesture. "I don't know the exact word for it. They are brave little people, all wanting to do something with their lives. You rarely hear of women today who are content just to stay home and do nothing. I think parents make a mistake in trying to force their ideas on younger people."

Billie admires Dale Carnegie, and thinks he gives excellent advice in "How To Win Friends and Influence People."

"He tells you that you can't force people to do what you want them to. You must try to make them want to do things. That's a wonderful idea, if one were clever enough to know how to apply it, but I'm not. My daughter is her own mistress," she said. "She can do anything she wants to do, live and work as she pleases. I am happy that she chooses to stay with me."

There is something very sweet and deprecating about Billie Burke. She very obviously applies her own advice, and has learned the cleverness which conceals cleverness.

Never have I heard Billie Burke say an unkind word about anyone. Of Katharine Hepburn, with whom she appeared in "Bill of Divorcement," she said, "She is so definite and clean-cut, like a blade of green grass. She has the terrific courage of not caring what other people think about her. She has the most beautiful hair in Hollywood. On the set she cuts up continually, and her antics are terribly funny, but they have the virtue of never hurting anyone." (This strange way of mixing physical characteristics with praise of Katharine Hepburn's character is another Billieburkish trait. For to her, bodily beauty and beauty of the soul are inextricably mixed up.

Few people watching Billie Burke on the screen today, remembering how far she has come, and over what obstacles she has triumphed, recall the fact that she was born in humble obscurity, the daughter of a clown. Yet if it had not been for her father, William Ethelbert Burke, I doubt if Billie would ever have gone on the stage. For little red-headed Ethelbert (named after her father) worshipped him and his fanatical devotion to his work. And clowns in those days were much greater artists than they are expected to be today. In addition to all the fantastic things they did to amuse people, they also sang, and William Burke had a voice that was strong and true and fine.

Billie's mother came from a fine southern family, and her maternal grandmother, Cecilia Flood, a southern writer, had been deeply shocked when Billie's mother married a circus clown. Hoping that she might at least save little Billie from ever following a career in the circus, and that she might be able to turn the small child into a writer of respectable literature like herself, she sent Billie books, and encouraged her to write long letters.

But it didn't work. Billie's father went abroad and established himself in English vaudeville, and more than ever Billie was fascinated by the life her father led. Because he sang, she wanted to sing, and while she was still very young, she started taking singing lessons from Louise Douste in London. Billie made her first important professional appearance at eighteen in an English musical comedy, in which she sang the hit song of the year, "My Little Canoe." Impressed by her work in England, Charles Frohman brought her to the United States, where she became John Drew's leading lady. From that time on she played romantic roles. She has made the transition from a romantic heroine to a comedienne gracefully. But then Billie Burke always does everything gracefully.

THE INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 15)

Charles Smith, Terral, Okla. Lily Pons had a French father and an Italian mother. She studied in Europe, made her Metropolitan Opera debut in 1931, and her motion picture debut in 1935. She is just five feet tall, weighs one hundred and four pounds, has dark hair and eyes. At this writing she is planning to marry Andre Kostelanetz, music director, in June. Her last picture was "That Girl from Paris."

Wm. Schupp, Louisville, Ky. Bobby Breen has brown hair and eyes. He was born in Toronto, Canada, November 4, 1927. He sang in night clubs, on the stage, and for the radio before going into pictures.

Miss G. Resnick, Brooklyn, N. Y. If you will write Mr. Kenneth Clark, Information Department, Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, 28 W. 44th Street, New York City, you can get all the information you need regarding censorship, codes, etc.

Kay Nelson, Edmonton, Can. C. Aubrey Smith was born in London, England, July 21, 1863. He attended Cambridge University, then toured South Africa and Australia with championship cricket teams. He went on the stage in 1892. He is six feet two inches tall, weighs one hundred eighty-four pounds, has gray hair and blue eyes. He played in "Hurricane," and "Four Men and a Prayer."

H. L. Luke, Honolulu, Hawaii. Simone Simon is French. She was born in Marseilles, France, April 23, 1914. Her hair is brown, her eyes are blue. She is five feet three inches tall, weighs one hundred fourteen pounds. She played in many European films before coming to America.

L. Allan Smith, Lawrence, Mass. We have discontinued our fan club directory service.

Harold Babcock, Butte, Mont. We can't attempt to advise you, but if you are serious about it you must work hard. Get all the general education you can. Besides that study people and plays, and learn how to act. Join a local theatre group, either amateur or professional, and study hard. Acting requires much work as well as unusual talent.

CALAMITY JANE

(Continued from page 50)

tively how to get you interested and how to hold your attention. She'll never be a wallflower, either, for the boys at the studio buzz around like bees. She's full of pep and fun, and keeps 'em entertained, and that is what young gentlemen seem to dote on. Mickey Rooney and Jackie Searle are Miss Withers' favorite gen'men. They're no sissies, you can bet, and when they're playing a good game of catch-and-pitch, Janey's right in the middle of it.

Yes, this starlet is right there when it comes to games. She always wins at them, too. "I just can't seem to help it," she says candidly. "I guess maybe I'm just lucky. I have a magic set and can do most of the tricks right off. Then of course, I have dolls—lots of 'em. There can never be enough dolls, can there?"

We allowed as how maybe there couldn't where any normal little girl is concerned. "I have all kinds," Janey boasted just a little. "French, Chinese, Indian, well, you know, just about everything. I have a Jane Withers doll, too, but she's not my favorite. Maybe that's because she's too much like me," and Jane gave a big wink.

Here is a young lady who will never be off the screen because of the "awkward age." She'll bridge the gap between little girl and ingenue because of her ability and personality. Not that Jane will ever be an ingenue in the saccharine sense of the word. She has too much intelligence and humor for that. She nicely combines southern charm with Yankee pep. If you saw "Rascals," you'll know just how much brains and wit she combines. Little Withers is very much in the picture even when she isn't even on the screen at all.

The Withers have a new ranch house smack in the middle of a two-acre tract, one acre of which is to be devoted entirely to Jane's menagerie.

"It's so nice for Jane," Mrs. Withers explained. "We have the entire top of the hill and our view isn't obstructed at all. The place is so healthy for Janey, as she spends a lot of time outdoors."

"You see I have my chickens to take care of," Jane broke in, "and they certainly are lucky, too. I had a house built for them especially with upper and lower beds. I guess they are about the luckiest chickens I know of, with their home and the view and all. There's twenty-seven of them, and do they lay! Why, we're 'most stuffed with eggs, 'cause they give about twelve a day now!

"They have a bath house, too, but they don't take a real bath." Janey laughed. "They come out and stick one toe in and jerk it right back. Then they put in a little more until finally they have it all in. Next they do the same thing all over with the other foot and then they just hop out. That's all there is to it."

After we heard about the poultry situation out Withers Way, our young hostess let us in on a secret. She has a real car. It'll go like a whiz up to 35 miles an hour and she's to drive it all by herself. Her father is having a track made on her acre, and then she may have a race a day all her own. This Janey tells us is just what the doctor ordered for her.

You're right, there's never a dull moment with a Withers!

BETWEEN YOU'N'ME

(Continued from page 17)

beauty and ability, but has always displayed a rare judgment in the selection of her roles.

Her vivid personality is so real on the screen. You have heard the expression "The eyes are the windows of the soul," and that expression always comes to my mind when I watch Bette's eyes flash and register the emotion she feels. The eye of the camera registers every little mood, and even the thought behind the mood. Consequently, false thinking is false acting. Bette Davis is so imbued with her part, lives it so completely, that her sincerity is beyond doubt.

The only thing I can say against this clever little actress is—we cannot get enough of her.

—Mabel McCown, Englewood, Col.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Those Musicals Again

"You can't see the wood for the trees." I heard that phrase as I left a cinema after the showing of one of those tremendous, spectacular musicals that seem so dear to the hearts of film producers today. In this particular picture, "The Goldwyn Follies," we were given ballet dancers, accordion players, opera singers, dramatic actresses, ventriloquists and crazy comedians.

I have no doubt that all are talented in their own way, but their disjointed series of vaudeville acts successfully destroyed any prospect of a coherent picture. Even this might not be any great loss in some cases, but we know that Goldwyn can produce strong, sane film masterpieces, and it is difficult not to feel disappointed when we are given crooning hot-dog salesmen from the man who made "Dead End."

—Peter Gordon, London, Eng.

$1.00 Prize Letter
It's Not Fair

I have just returned home from seeing "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," if it can be called that, for a more mutilated version of this wonderful book I have never seen. We had eagerly awaited the picture, thinking it would follow the original story as did "Heidi." Were we disappointed!

There is nothing of Kate Douglas Wiggin's homey, old-fashioned action, for all this has been changed into a too-modern plot that is disgusting in that it is made to suit the star and not to please the audience.

Mind you, I'm not complaining about Shirley. She is still the perfect actress and did her part amazingly well. But, how on earth the title was chosen, I cannot understand. Why did they not call it something like "Rebecca of Singing Brook Farm" or "Rebecca of Radio Land," either of which would suggest "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and yet not be disappointing in its new plot.

Please don't fool us any more, producers—be honest with your titles!

—Mrs. F. E. Willis, Hagerstown, Md.

Stops PERSPIRATION FOR ONE TO THREE DAYS.
ZIP CREAM DEODORANT
Destroys body odors. Easy to apply; harmless to clothing; and ideal on sanitary napkins. Just a little under the arm and ZIP!—you're free of perspiration odor.
MORE FOR YOUR MONEY
THE BEST TO BE HAD
10c • 25c • 50c
STOPS PERSPIRATION
ZIP
Cream Deodorant
A PHYSICIAN'S PRESCRIPTION
For unwanted hair—ZIP Depilatory Cream

HAIR ON FACE
ARMS, LEGS and BODY
REALLY GONE!
ZIP
IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT
EPILATOR
Simple. Quick. Leaves no trace of hair. With each package of ZIP Epilator, you get a dollar bottle of BOUQUET JORDEAU—a refreshing fragrance. A $2.00 value for only $1.00. Good stores or send $1.00 to Madame Berthé, 562 Fifth Ave., New York

In September MODERN SCREEN
Bette Davis says, "I have the homeliest face I've ever seen!"

NOW! Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE
So natural they even have half-moons.
NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10 stores.
NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS
NU-NAIL CO., 4042 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

"WHY SHOULD I MARRY?"

(Continued from page 29)

hear when a movie man and a movie maid go dancing with fair regularity. In Hollywood a boy can't date a girl more than three times without other folks collecting their old shoes, saving up their old rice and keeping their eyes glued on all outgoing planes to Yuma.

Tyrone talked to me matter-of-factly, frankly. That is Ty's way. There is nothing evasive, or coy, or reluctant about Tyrone. He cooperates with everyone in the business from his producer, in whose superior judgment he trusts, to the prop boy, who knows more about props than Ty does. He makes himself attractive to everyone from the least to the greatest because he is, naturally, a friendly, likable and very intelligent chap.

He went on, "I have no intention of marrying for at least five years. If something, someone, changes my intention—that will be that. But to remain single for five years is my present intention. In five years I will be twenty-eight, and that will be time enough for marriage. I hope then that I'll find the girl who will want to share my life with me, all of the rest of my life. And I hope, by that time, to have some time and some life to give the girl I marry. But now, and for the next five years, all I want to do is work. All I want to think about is work. All I dream about is my work. It's my 'grand passion,' an exacting and also a beloved mistress who takes everything I have to give, and who is welcome to it. I want to work furiously. I want to give my work every bit of concentration of which I'm capable. I actually have no time for anything else, except my hobbies. And you can hardly call marriage a 'hobby.'

NOW, honestly, what kind of a husband would I make? When I get through the day's work I'm so tired I want to go right home and go to bed. When I do go out—and I do go out some, of course—I find myself thinking of what I've done today, how I might have done it better; thinking of what I'm to do tomorrow, of changes in the script, of my lines, and whether I know them. I am more apt to get ideas about bits of business for the character I'm playing to do than ideas about what night club to hit next, or how well I'm dancing.

"My days on the set are days of steady work, work that absorbs every ounce of thought, emotion, and energy I've got to give. Beside the actual work itself there are conferences about the next picture, there is my wardrobe to be attended to, there are interviews and photographic sittings, and visits to the dentist. There are rehearsals for my radio program, and then the broadcast itself. I'm young and healthy," laughed Tyrone, "but, after all, I'm only human, and there are only twenty-four hours in any man's day.

I haven't time to know how I feel. I haven't time to analyze my own emotions. I have time only to know how the character I'm playing feels; whether he, my shadow self, is in love, or not in love; what his reactions would be, or should be. No girl would want to marry a succession of shadows which are more real than the man who projects them.

"You see, everything has happened to me so suddenly, with such sensational, indigestible speed. I must have time to absorb it all, to learn how to take it in my stride. I can't take on another career until I have reached a point in this career where I am not eating and breathing it."

Yes, "sudden"—and "enormous"—are the words. For when you consider what this boy of twenty-three has done in Hollywood, in a scant two years, you feel a little breathless yourself. When you realize that in the one year of 1938 he will have "done" over nine million dollars worth of productions, you will agree that that's preposterously more than any one pair of young shoulders is usually called upon to carry. You can see that he could not, either wisely or well, add matrimony to the burdens he now carries, however pleasant it might be.

Tyrone is amazingly wise. You wonder how so much maturity of viewpoint, so much clarity of thought, so much poise of mind as well as of manner could be concentrated in one boy of twenty-three. When you talk with him you forget how young he is. It is significant, too, that for all his handsomeness (which really quite takes the breath out of you) he never has been accused of being "beautiful," his surpassing good looks have never been stressed. That's because you just don't think of his looks when you are with Tyrone for any length of time. There is too much back of the looks, character, determination, steel, fire, books read, philosophies worked out, interests which extend beyond himself.

Anyway, by the end of 1938 Tyrone will have finished "Alexander's Ragtime Band," a little job that cost two million and seventy-five thousand dollars to make, "Suez," which will make two million dollars wish it had never been born, and "Jesse James," which is to follow "Suez," and will also cost high over the two million mark. This latter will be Tyrone's first Technicolor production. In between whiles he played Count Fersen to Norma Shearer's Marie Antoinette in the picture of the same name, and what that cost is something I don't like to even think about. So, a little addition, a little playing about with these six-digit figures will give you some idea of the expensive schedule with which Ty is involved for 1938.

"Too many problems, too," Ty commented over the dessert. "Marriage would present too many problems, I mean. Not the customary, understandable problems of Joe Doakes marrying Mary, and the two of them struggling and saving and skimping to make ends meet, having kids, working and growing together. I can understand their problems. But the problems I would have to face, if I married now, I don't understand at all. I don't even know what they'd be. Obviously, they wouldn't be matters of working and struggling together. Secretaries and studio departments can do for me, for all of us in the picture business, what a wife would do for the average business man. I think it's pretty sad if a man and wife can't feel necessary to each other.

BUT why even think about all that now? I'm not contemplating matrimony. I want my career more than I want anything else in the world, and I know it. I'm in love with it. It's all the romance I need. It's adventure. It's experience, all kinds of experience. It's excitement. It's keen fun. Like a much-advertised brand of cigarettes, 'it satisfies.'"

"What's such fun about it?"

"It's fun because I get to do and be all the things I've always dreamed of doing and being, all those things that most fellows dream of doing and being. Say, show me the boy who hasn't dreamed of standing up there and conducting an orchestra. Well, I get to do just that in Alexander's Ragtime Band. The studio engaged a noted conductor to coach me, and then I had the kick of standing up there with the old baton, and conducting—and Irving Berlin's music, at that. Tell me that isn't fun! We did some rain scenes the other day on the sound stage. Of course, we all bleated about getting soaked to the skin and catching our 'deaths of pneumonia,' but actually I loved it, sloshing around in water-logged boots, feeling the water splashing on my face, drenching me to the skin. What kid doesn't get a kick out of an experience like that, but doesn't get a chance at it because his folks are afraid he will catch cold!

"I got a big wam out of the fire stuff in 'In Old Chicago.' What fellow wouldn't want to have seen the famous Chicago fire, to have been in it! I saw it. I was in it. What fellow hasn't read about Suez, and wished he could have witnessed the thrilling linking together of the Mediterranean and the Red Sea? That's adventure! And when we make Jesse James (what boy on earth wouldn't want to play Jesse James?), we're going to do the big train robbery right in Kansas, where it actually happened. And 'Lloyd's of London,' and 'Marie Antoinette!' I'm still fan enough to have gotten a big kick out of working with Norma Shearer. A short while ago that would have seemed incredible."

Right here this young man who hasn't time to think about marriage, let alone time to get married, was summoned to the set. He said goodbye, then called back, "If I change my mind I'll let you know!"

So, he isn't going to get married, girls! Now, for at least five more years anyway, you can watch young Ty on the screen, and dream that heavenly dream, that somehow, some way, "it might be me!"

Norma Shearer likes Tyrone Power, too. She insisted on him for "Marie Antoinette."

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

Come on and read, Come on and read,

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND

Reckless rhythm throbbed crazily. Maddening melody stabbed the night, surged giddily through the blood of all who listened. But for two young people it was a sacred song of love . . . and the harbinger of tears.

They met on San Francisco's Barbary Coast; Stella, blatant, flashy, yet curiously beautiful; Roger, darkly handsome, scion of culture and wealth. And, in a mist made of dreams, they pledged their hearts and lives to their newly-discovered glory.

But Life had much to teach them. The Fate that brought them together, tore them apart . . . each to reach the highest pinnacle of success, the lowest depths of defeat . . . before they meet again!

As mighty as the song classic whose name it bears, the poignant story of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" will possess your memory as long as love and music live. Read this complete book-length novel in the August issue of SCREEN ROMANCES. You'll find it lavishly illustrated with scenes from the 20th Century-Fox picture, starring Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche. Discover the absorbing entertainment of SCREEN ROMANCES fiction for yourself—today!

Look for the complete stories of these pictures in the AUGUST SCREEN ROMANCES

THREE BLIND MICE . . . . . Loretta Young and Joel McCrea
ALWAYS GOODBYE . . Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall
WIVES UNDER SUSPICION . . Gail Patrick and Warren William VALLEY OF THE GIANTS . . . Wayne Morris and Claire Trevor

Screen Romances

16 stories of movie hits in every issue

Copyright 1938, The American Tobacco Company

RAY OGLESBY, Independent Tobacco Expert, Says: "At Every Auction, Luckies Buy the Same Fine Leaf"

FOR YOUR TASTE . . . think over the cigarette preference of America's independent tobacco experts. These experts—like Ray Oglesby—are not connected with any cigarette maker. They are skilled auctioneers, buyers and warehouse operators.

Sworn records show that among these men, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes combined.

FOR YOUR THROAT . . . keep in mind that only Luckies give you the throat protection of the "Toasting" process. This process takes out certain harsh throat irritants found in all tobacco.

So next time try Luckies . . . try them for a week, and see.

Sworn Records Show That— WITH MEN WHO KNOW TOBACCO BEST— IT'S LUCKIES 2 TO

"AM I HOMELY!"—Bette Davis

Modern Screen

SEPTEMBER
10
CENTS

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

JEANETTE MacDONALD

A YEAR WITHOUT MY JEAN

By Jean Harlow's Mother

JUL 30 1938

Does Your Charm Thrill MEN'S HEARTS?

SHE KNEW THE SECRET of allure—a pulse-stirring fragrance to weave on those around her, a spell of thrilling delight . . .

NOW IT'S YOURS—the secret of how to be utterly adorable always, with the romantic, lingering scent of Djer-Kiss Talc.

START your day the Djer-Kiss way! Bathe your entire body with this delightful talc each morning. Djer-Kiss keeps you dainty and refreshed all day . . . Helps you stay cool, for it actually lowers body temperature. Clothes feel more comfortable . . . Makes you alluringly fragrant. Use Djer-Kiss generously, for the cost is surprisingly small. Buy it today at drug and toilet goods counters—25c and 75c sizes. Liberal 10c size at all 10c stores.

The same delightful fragrance in Djer-Kiss Sachet, Eau de Toilette and Face Powder.

YOURS FREE—the exciting new book, "Women Men Love—Which Type Are You?"

—full of valuable hints on how to make yourself more alluring. Just send a post card with your name and address to Parfums Kerkoff, Inc., Dept. G, New York.

. . . genuine imported talc scented with Djer-Kiss perfume by Kerkoff, Paris.

DJER-KISS
(Pronounced "Dear Kiss")
TALC
By KERKOFF · PARIS

MODERN Screen

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co., Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor

NOW SHOWING

GOINGS-ON IN GOTHAM	6	MACK HUGHES
SHE'S NOT AFRAID	8	FRANC DILLON
A YEAR WITHOUT MY JEAN	26	JEAN HARLOW'S MOTHER
KEEPING TABS ON TAYLOR	28	ROBERT JAMES
"AM I HOMELY!"	30	GLADYS HALL
THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE!	32	JAMES REID
LOVE COMES ONCE	34	GLADYS HALL
WATCH OUT, WAYNE!	36	KATHARINE HARTLEY
THE MYSTERY OF MISS GAYNOR	38	IDA ZEITLIN
AFTER DIVORCE—WHAT?	40	FAITH SERVICE
HE'D RATHER BE HIMSELF	42	CHARLES DARNTON
'TISN'T SO!	43	ROBERT McILWAINE
PUT YOUR BEST FACE FORWARD	44	MARY MARSHALL
HE WANTS TO DISAPPEAR	46	MARTHA KERR
SHE'S A SOFTIE	47	CHARLES GEORGE
WARDROBE WEAPONS	48	MARIAN SQUIRE
HIGHLIGHTING HERSHOLT	50	GEORGE BENJAMIN

SHORT SUBJECTS

STARRING SALADS	12	RECIPES OF A FAMOUS CHEF
OUR PUZZLE PAGE	14	MOVIE X-WORD
PORTRAIT GALLERY	19	OF YOUR FAVORITES
OFF THEIR GUARD	51	CANDID SHOTS
GOOD NEWS	62	MOVIE TOWN CHATTER
MOVIE REVIEWS	68	FILM GUIDE
SMART SPECTATORS	84	NEW KNITS
INFORMATION DESK	86	QUESTION-ANSWER DEPARTMENT
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME	94	PRIZE LETTERS

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 4, September, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Postoffice, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington; San Francisco, California; and Houston, Texas. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England. Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semifictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

CLARK GABLE

"TOO HOT TO HANDLE"

MYRNA LOY

The best news since "Test Pilot" with that rare pair of romancers, M-G-M's tantalizing twosome. Clark's a daredevil newsreel man—Myrna's an airdevil aviatrix... Action! Heart-pumping paradise for thrill and fun-loving picture fans!

with WALTER PIDGEON · WALTER CONNOLLY
LEO CARRILLO · Screen Play by John Lee Mahin and Laurence Stallings Directed by Jack Conway · Produced by Lawrence Weingarten · A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

GOINGS-ON IN GOTHAM

The movie stars take in New York — the place they go to see and be seen

BY MACK HUGHES

PUBLIC RENDEZVOUS No. 1 for Hollywood's scintillating personalities is good ole Gotham—New York City to us. They trek from far and near for a glimpse of the nation's glamor town, where prince and pauper rub shoulders on a social equality basis.

Did you ever see a dream walking? Well, I did!—and in New York, too. Loretta Young was the dream, but, oh, that hat! A slight matter of a nightmare! They say designers have it in for tha gals this season. I was never more certain than when Loretta came into the cocktail lounge with a bib tied round her head, and, monkey fur cascading from her shoulders, to top things off.

It brought to mind a little confab she had with Lilly Daché before she embarked for Hollywood. Spake Miss Young, "Darling, if you find any things, hats or dresses, that no one else can possibly wear, send them to me. I always look my best in clothes everyone else finds it impossible to put on."

The Stuart Erwins dine at "21," rendezvous of the smart set—hangout of top flight celebs to us.

Hope Hampton temporarily leaves her house on Park Avenue for a bigger one in Beverly Hills.

When in New York, Claire Trevor dwells on the twenty-ninth floor of the Sherry-Netherlands.

Now you must admit that after hearing this, it was no real surprise when Miss Young hove into view at that swanky spot known as "21," making the patrons feel as if perhaps the hangover came with the drink.

In fact, it was at this same place where Stu Erwin and his beautiful wife, June Collyer, entertained at cocktails. Stu, it seems, is just a bit fed up on ga-ga interviews.

"I'm darn sick of being the dumb country boy," Stu began. "It's about time the worm turned and some of my fans found out I really know the answers. I'm the father of two fine kids and I don't want them to think their Pa's a blithering idiot. Once these publicity folks type you, it's hard to break away."

Olivia De Havilland, here for a few days on her return from a vacation in England, was tendered a cocktail party atop the Radio City Music Hall, where her film "Robin Hood" was breaking records.

Seems the publicity gents didn't want Olivia to take anything stronger than tea, and that, just to keep in the spirit of things! Annahoo, as one of the waiters passed her by with a tray of TNT, Olivia managed to snag one, to the chagrin of her body-guards. It appears their idea was to present (Continued on page 16)

IT ROCKED BROADWAY FOR 82 WEEKS!
NOW IT'S THE LOUDEST LAUGH ON THE SCREEN!

Boy meets girl! . . . Cagney meets O'Brien! . . . And the great stage triumph that panicked New York and swept the whole nation from coast to coast, becomes the love-and-laughter picture of a decade!

Bella & Samuel Spewack's

BOY MEETS GIRL

FROM THE STAGE PLAY PRODUCED BY GEORGE ABBOTT

Starring

JAMES CAGNEY
PAT O'BRIEN

MARIE WILSON · RALPH BELLAMY

FRANK McHUGH · DICK FORAN

Directed by LLOYD BACON

SCREEN PLAY BY BELLA AND SAMUEL SPEWACK

Presented by WARNER BROS.

Gloria Dickson and George Brent are together in "Secrets of an Actress."

Next stop, stardom and Gloria has won it for very good reasons.

SHE'S NOT AFRAID

BY FRANC DILLON

"SHE'S JUST a little girl from the cow country," said one producer after he'd met Gloria Dixon for the first time. Well, she may hail from Pocatello, Idaho, but there are no alfalfa seeds in that smooth head of shining blonde hair. And if there are any other gals back home as smart and talented as Gloria—well, Hollywood wouldn't mind knowing about them too.

She was born Thais Dickerson in Pocatello, Idaho, where she lived, rode horseback, spent vacations in the mountains with her father, attended grammar school and acted every time she got a chance. She is her father's daughter in every respect. They were always very close and when he died after Gloria's twelfth birthday she lost a chum, a confidant and a pal.

Although a successful banker, Mr. Dickerson was a dreamer and a deep student. He taught Gloria to read good books, he took her on long fishing trips to the mountains. There they waded up trout streams in the day time, and in the long evenings sat before the big open fireplace where her father read aloud to her—biographies of famous people, histories, the classics and good plays.

From the time she was a very small girl he instilled in her mind the fact that she was going to "be someone." There was never any doubt about it. It was simply a question of when. He told her over and over, "If you retain your ideals of good theatre, and keep your feet on the ground, you will go far." For of course she was to be an actress. The thought of her future career inspired her very name, Thais Alalia.

"But don't write down Alalia," she begged. "No one can pronounce that. No one could ever pronounce Thais either. In school I answered to any name that began with a T."

Of course a name like Thais wouldn't do for pictures, and Dickerson is too long, so it was shortened to Dickson and Gloria was substituted for Thais. And now everyone who has seen her act knows that her father's prediction of stardom for her was right, for already she has been assigned a leading role opposite the popular George Brent in "Racket Busters."

It was after her father's death and there was nothing to keep them in Idaho, that Mrs. Dickerson brought Gloria and her sister, Doris, to Long Beach, California. There Gloria attended high school and graduated in June, 1932. Although she was a good student, her mind was on acting more than anything else. She studied everything that pertained to it. She took an active part in all school theatricals. As a small child she had already organized the neighbor children and produced shows in the Dickerson home basement.

After her graduation Gloria joined the Wayside Colony Players in Long Beach, and there learned the rudiments of professional acting. With this group she played everything from Shakespeare to modern plays. She did everything she could think of to enlarge her experience. She gave dramatic readings. She did readings before groups of club women. She went on the radio and read poetry to the accompaniment of an organ.

She joined a tent show, the Hart Players, where she made from seventy-five cents to three dollars a week, depending on the current business. And although money was none too plentiful in the Dickerson exchequer, the salary didn't matter to Gloria (Continued on page 17)

How one girl scaled the Hollywood heights and hung up a new record

Worlds of Exotic Women!

Women beyond the law's reach ...living their own lives, fighting their own game... each for HER MAN... dark, romantic Charles Boyer in the year's most intriguing melodrama.

WALTER WANGER
presents
CHARLES BOYER
in
"ALGIERS"
with SIGRID GURIE
HEDY LAMARR*
JOSEPH CALLEIA · ALAN HALE
GENE LOCKHART · NINA KOSHETZ
Directed by John Cromwell • Screen play by John Howard Lawson • Additional Dialogue by James M. Cain
Released thru United Artists

Tip from Ed Sullivan, famous Hollywood correspondent... "Most gorgeous item to come to the films in the past year is Hedy Lamarr... Wait until you get a load of this lovely number in Wanger's 'Algiers'... She'll create more talk than any performer in seasons... TERRIFIC!"

GREAT AS THE ACCLAIM THAT HAS GREETED IT!
Irving Berlin
ALEXAN
RAGTIM
An American
TYRONE POWER · ALIC

GREATER THAN YOUR GREATEST EXPECTATIONS!

Against the background of our turbulent times ...the story of headstrong young sweethearts who find love, lose it, find it again—through the music that is their life! Rich with the Irving Berlin melodies that have kept hearts singing ...glamorous with the dramatic panorama from ragtime to swing...here is entertainment triumphant from 20th Century-Fox, makers of "In Old Chicago"!

...DER'S ...E BAND

Cavalcade

...E FAYE • DON AMECHE

ETHEL MERMAN • JACK HALEY

JEAN HERSHOLT • HELEN WESTLEY
JOHN CARRADINE • PAUL HURST
WALLY VERNON • RUTH TERRY
DOUGLAS FOWLEY • EDDIE COLLINS
CHICK CHANDLER

Directed by Henry King

Associate Producer Harry Joe Brown • Screen Play by Kathryn Scola and Lamar Trotti • Adaptation by Richard Sherman

Featuring a pageant of Irving Berlin songs including 26 favorites of yesteryear and 2 hits of tomorrow

Darryl F. Zanuck in Charge of Production

A 20th Century-Fox Picture

STARRING SALADS

BY MARJORIE DEEN

Lure your family's jaded appetite with these prize recipes from a famous restaurant chef

Norwegian Salad with Deviled Eggs Runic, is really a glorified potato salad.

Cary Grant says men like substantial, filling salads with plenty of tangy flavor.

OUTSIDE one of Hollywood's most popular restaurants, the Vendome, a huge crowd gathers daily to glimpse their film favorites. Nor are they ever disappointed, for the place is overrun with stars. There are no "star-days" or special inducements. No, the Vendome simply goes in for awfully good food in a distinctly masculine atmosphere of heavy dark woodwork, quantities of edibles on display, a bar on one side, booths and tables on the other, and everything together in one large room where all can see and be seen.

So, everyone who is anyone in the cinema citadel stops in frequently. And all, on hot days, order salads! The men too? But definitely, yes! For when you serve salads as hearty and delicious as theirs, even the menfolk will go for them.

Of course we'd all love our own home-made salads to succeed like those at the Vendome. And why shouldn't they! For here are recipes from the Vendome's very own chef, together with some pretty obvious, but frequently neglected salad tips.

To begin with, according to none other than Cary Grant, men by and large abhor, despise and even resent sweet, bland salads of what they call "sample" size. When the charming Mr. Grant orders a luncheon salad, for instance, you can bet your bottom dollar it will be filling, and have a snappy flavor too. Such a salad is cole slaw with vegetables which he's enjoying here in the studio commissary. Or the Vendome's "Salad Bowl" of greens with a cheese dressing, or their specialties made with meat or fish. These are the kind that appeal to men, says Cary. So save your "pretty pretty" salads, your airy, creamy, decorative trifles for the bridge club girls, and give the menfolk something tangy and substantial. And here are a few pointers to remember:

A contrast of texture adds to salad enjoyment. So add such things as crisp celery to a smooth mixture, avocado to a crunchy one, and so on.

Appearances go a long way in assuring salad success. The salad plate should frame as pretty a picture as culinary art can produce.

Experiment with your own combinations. Each chef prides himself on his "Chef's Special Salad." Why not evolve one yourself?

A good salad can be ruined by a poor dressing. And the dressing of course is never added to salad greens until just before serving, or better still, right at the table, as the French do.

Occasionally a salad is "marinated" in advance, however. One such recipe is included here. To "marinate" simply means allowing the ingredients to stand in the dressing a specified length of time to bring out the flavor of some foods.

Suit the dressing, the garnishes and the service to the salad. Remember that, as with clothes, you must not "overdress" if you seek masculine approval.

In restaurants like the Vendome lettuce is allowed to stand fifteen minutes in a sink partially filled with cold water and ice, after the coarse outer leaves, core and any discolored spots have been removed. The heads are then thoroughly drained in baskets or colanders before being placed in the refrigerator. Whether or not you follow this excellent procedure be sure your salad greens are crisp, cold and absolutely devoid of moisture before the dressing is added.

With these suggestions and recipes to guide you, why not plan to "star" salads this summer? Then watch your friends and family come to the table with the same keen anticipation with which the glamor boys and girls flock to the Vendome for dishes like these.

"STAR" MAYONNAISE MIX

To each cupful of mayonnaise add 2 tablespoons each of chopped chives, chopped stuffed olives and chopped dill pickles. Just before serving fold in ¼ cup chopped hard-cooked eggs and ¼ cup very crisp chopped celery.

The Vendome's fish salads are made this way:

SEA FOOD SALAD, DE LUXE

Such fish as lobster, crab, salmon, tuna and shrimp, singly or in combination, may be used. Marinate the fish in a little French dressing for fifteen minutes. Drain thoroughly. Excellent to add to the fish at this point are such things as chopped celery, chopped watercress, endive, lettuce or chicory. Also diced cucumber. Moisten salad well with "Star" Mayonnaise. Place individual servings in lettuce cups. Garnish attractively with quartered hard-cooked eggs, minced sweet pickle and sliced stuffed olives.

NORWEGIAN SALAD WITH DEVILLED EGGS RUNIC

6 hard-cooked eggs
2 cans (3¾ ounces each) smoked Norwegian sardines
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
salt and pepper, to taste

Cut hard-cooked eggs in halves, crosswise. Remove and mash yolks. Drain oil from 1 can sardines. Add drained sardines, mustard and mayonnaise to mashed yolks. Mash thoroughly. Add salt and pepper. Stuff egg whites with this mixture and cut into thick slices, crosswise. Place slices, in "twos", on top of potato salad. Drain oil from second can of sardines. Arrange three of these sardines on egg slice "pairs" in fanwise fashion (see illustration). Garnish with sliced stuffed olives.

ROQUEFORT DRESSING, VENDOME

½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon cayenne
3 tablespoons mild vinegar
⅔ cup salad oil
6 tablespoons crumbled Roquefort cheese
2 teaspoons anchovy paste
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce
3 tablespoons lemon juice
(1 small garlic clove, finely chopped, if desired.)

Mix together the first six (dry) ingredients. Then add vinegar and oil alternately. Place in a jar or bottle which has a tight-fitting cover. Crumble cheese with a fork. Beat in anchovy paste. Add Worcestershire and lemon juice. Add to ingredients in jar or bottle. Shake well. Taste and add more salt and pepper, if needed. Finely chopped garlic may be added if desired. Always shake dressing before using.

This dressing is particularly good with any Salad Bowl of mixed greens such as endive, watercress, crisp lettuce and romaine. Using these greens as a basis one can exercise originality through various additions such as minced chives, sliced radishes, "Julienne" strips of raw carrots, cooked peas, sliced green onions, pearl onions, chopped celery, hard-cooked eggs, pimiento and others too numerous to mention. Particularly recommended by the Vendome chef is the addition of whole anchovies to the salad bowl.

Gossip at the beach!

JUDY: "He nagged and acted so terribly mean, it sure looked like a bust-up for a while. I really felt sorry for Jane."

ALICE: "Aw, be fair! Tom raised cain—but so would you if you always had to go around in tattle-tale gray. Jane was to blame for using lazy soap. It left dirt behind! Tom's shirts and her whole wash showed it."

SALLY: "Well, I'm glad the fuss has all blown over! If we'd only told Jane sooner how Fels-Naptha's richer golden soap and lots of naptha hustle out every last speck of dirt—the whole mess wouldn't have happened."

MARY: "Better late than never! Since she listened to us and switched to Fels-Naptha Soap, everything's peaches again and they're off for a second honeymoon!"

COPR. 1938, FELS & CO.

BANISH "TATTLE-TALE GRAY" WITH FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

NEW! Great for washing machines! Try Fels-Naptha Soap Chips, too!

DANDRUFF?

4 Minute Treatment Stops Dandruff Itch

And Kills Nasty Scalp Odor

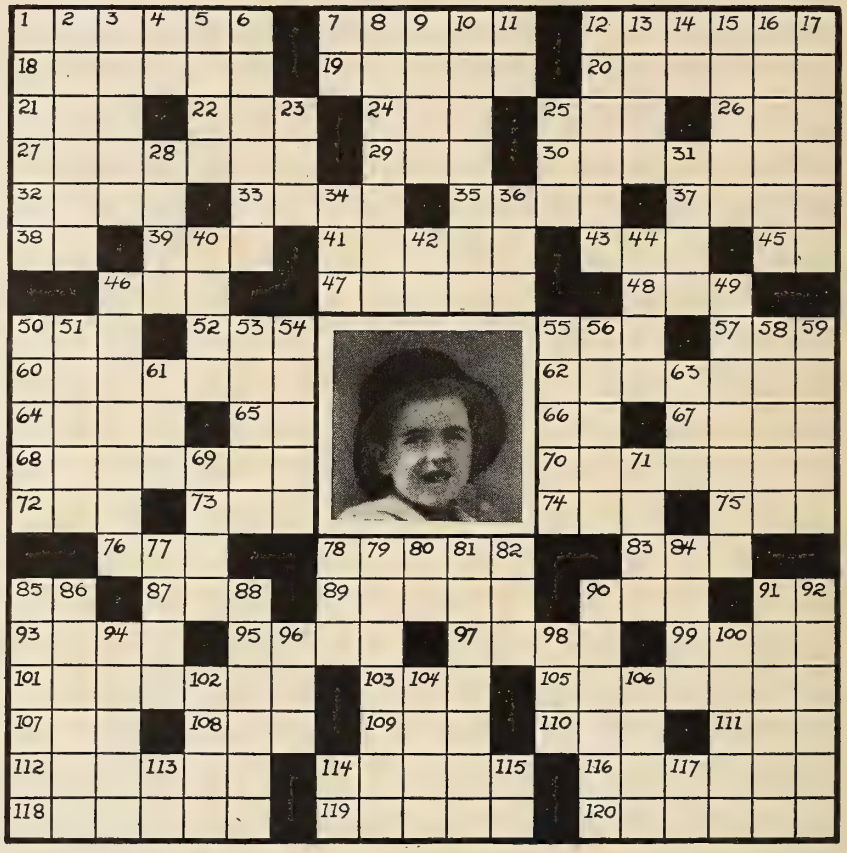
Dandruff is the sign of a diseased, unclean scalp. Through neglect, the tiny sebaceous glands (oil glands) fail to work as they should and become clogged with scales and dirt. The scalp becomes infected by germs and fungi, and the condition spreads.

Skin specialists generally agree that effective treatment for dandruff must include (1) regular cleansing of scalp; (2) killing the germs that spread infection; (3) stimulating circulation of the scalp; (4) lubrication of scalp to prevent dryness.

The Zonite Antiseptic Scalp Treatment Does These 4 Things

WHAT TO DO: Massage head for 3 minutes with this Zonite solution — 2 tablespoons Zonite to 1 quart of water. Use this same solution for shampoo with any good soap. Rinse very thoroughly. If scalp is dry, massage in any preferred scalp oil. (For complete details of treatment, read folder in Zonite package.)

It is vitally important to use this treatment regularly (twice every week at first) to keep dandruff under control and keep germs from spreading. Because reinfection constantly takes place from hats, bed-pillows, combs and brushes.



If you're faithful, you'll be delighted with the way this treatment leaves your scalp clean and healthy—free from itch and nasty scalp odor.

At all U. S. and Canadian drug stores.

TRIAL OFFER—For a real trial bottle of Zonite, mailed to you postpaid, send 10¢ to Zonite 910 New Brunswick, New Jersey U. S. A.

OUR PUZZLE

• ACROSS

Answer to Puzzle on Page 82

1. First name of star pictured
7. Jellybean in "Yellow Jack"
12. Last name of 1 Across and star of "The Crowd Roars"
18. Heroine in "Four's A Crowd"
19. Loretta Young's sister
20. Mrs. John Barrymore
21. Ignited
22. Gene Au - - -
24. Fish eggs
25. "Women - - - Like That"
26. Studio stage
27. Usual
29. - - - trice Lillie
30. - - - - - - - Parker
32. "Meet - - - - Wolfe"
33. Anglo-Saxon slave
35. Require
37. Fish roe: dial. Eng.
38. "The Crime of - -. Hallet"
39. Remained seated
41. Star of "The Adventures of Robin Hood"
43. Exclamation
45. Mervyn - - Roy
46. Spider's insect trap
47. Former Russian rulers
48. Printer's measures
50. Kind of tree
52. "- - - Tide"
55. "- - - No. 99"
57. Greek letter
60. Movie "palace"
62. Jean in "Four's a Crowd"
64. National theatre chain
65. - - a Merkel
66. Edward - - nold
67. The captain in "Kidnapped"
68. John - - - - - - -
70. Our star's favorite actress
72. Witness a film
73. Exclamations
74. "Souls at - - -"
75. Beverly Robe - - -
76. Tattered cloth
78. Our star played with her in "Camille"
83. However
85. Italian river
87. Our: Fr.
89. Worship
90. It is: contr.
91. Glenda - - rrell
93. Death notice
95. Bustle
97. Wing-like parts
99. Anne - - - - ley
101. Opposite of mermaid: Var.
103. Young boy
105. Heroine in "Blockade"
107. Native metal
108. "That Certain - - -" is Deanna's next
109. Nova - - - beam
110. Aunt: Sp.
111. "- - - Baba Goes to Town"
112. Minority
114. Our star was in "- - - - - Comrades"
116. Treats with nitric acid
118. Anoints
119. Ethal
120. Mme. du Barry in "Marie Antoinette"

PAGE

• DOWN

1. - - - - - - Young
2. Sarah in "Little Miss Broadway"
3. One who bites
4. - - elyn Venable
5. - - - - Hayworth
6. Mark to shoot at
7. - - ther Muir
8. Those who cut hair
9. American black plum
10. Our star played with her in "Broadway Melody of 1938"
11. Jack Ben - -
12. Shipworm
13. Joseph in "Vivacious Lady"
14. Jane Br - - n
15. Hard, twisted cotton thread
16. Henry - ' - - - - -
17. Film scene made again
23. "She Had To Say - - -"
25. High card
28. "- - - - of the Rio Grande"
31. Icon: var.
34. Snare
36. Bebe Dani - - -
40. Encourage
42. - - y Milland
44. Possessive pronoun
46. Woolsey's team-mate
49. Hero of "Shopworn Angel"
50. Volume of maps
51. Coastline
53. Our star's real name
54. Wild hogs of New Guinea
55. Shell fish
56. Subtle emanations
58. Vigilant
59. Bones of the forearms
61. Reverence
63. Weep convulsively
69. Person of Italian descent: slang
71. Most important harvest of India
77. Poker stake
78. Mining chisel
79. John Mannering in "Letter of Introduction"
80. Cesar - - mero
81. Grace - - - - - - -
82. N - - - Madison
84. Russia: abbr.
85. Our star's alma mater
86. Star of "Over the Moon"
88. Places on which movie sets are built
90. Partaking of tea: coll.
91. Nebraska town of our star's birth
92. George - - - - - -
94. Star of "The Joy of Living"
96. "- - - Woman's Answer"
98. Perform
100. Hidden supply
102. Magician: poet.
104. Scotch direction
106. Steel track
113. Ruby Keeler's husband
114. Tony in "The Show Goes On": init.
115. Ole in "Little Miss Broadway"
117. Kent - - ylor

MUM'S THE WORD FOR CHARM IT'S QUICK, SAFE, SURE!

More Screen Stars, Housewives, Nurses, Business Girls, School Girls use Mum than any other deodorant

GIRLS in love, girls who are married, girls whose goal is business success—they all use Mum to protect their charm! They're smart about this matter of perfect daintiness—they have to be. For they know that just a hint of odor can make you lose out with friends.

Even a fastidious girl risks offending if she trusts a bath alone to keep her sweet. A bath takes care only of past perspiration, it can't prevent odor to come. Mum can! Underarms always need Mum's sure care, to give you the all-day freshness that makes a girl click in business or in love.

Mum is so easy, so pleasant to use! In Hollywood, where charm is all-important, Mum plays the lead with stars and featured players. On duty or off, Mum is the favorite with nurses. They like Mum's effectiveness, its gentleness, its speed. You'll like Mum, too! Buy Mum at your drug store today—this pleasant cream deodorant has all the things you're looking for to help you keep your charm.

ONLY 30 SECONDS TO USE. Two quick touches of Mum and you're through.

HARMLESS TO FABRICS. Mum's possession of the Textile Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering means Mum is harmless to any kind of fabric. You can put Mum on even after you're dressed!

ACTUALLY SOOTHES THE SKIN. Apply Mum immediately after underarm shaving and you'll notice its soothing touch.

MUM IS SURE. Mum simply stops every trace of odor—it does not stop perspiration. Smart girls use Mum after every bath and before every date. Then they never risk offending friends!

For Sanitary Napkins, too!
Thousands of women always use Mum for Sanitary Napkins because they know Mum is gentle, SURE. Don't risk embarrassment. Always use Mum!

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

Women everywhere are telling other women about Tampax, the new form of sanitary protection for monthly use. Tampax is worn internally. You can do your household work or office work or take part in outdoor sports without even remembering you are wearing it. You can wear the sheerest gown or a modern swim suit—no bulk, so nothing can show. Use Tampax this summer; a month's supply can be carried in your purse.

Tampax was perfected by a physician for all normal women. It is neatly and efficiently absorbent, doing away with pins, pads and belts. It will not come apart and so fail in its protection. No odor. Disposed of easily. Made of absorbent surgical cotton, greatly compressed, hygienically sealed in patented applicator. Endorsed by gynecologists. Sold at drug stores and notion counters—month's supply, 35c. Introductory package, 20c. If your dealer has not stocked, please use coupon.

"YOU ACTUALLY DON'T KNOW YOU'RE WEARING IT!"

Accepted for advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

TAMPAX INCORPORATED MM-98
New Brunswick, New Jersey

Please send me introductory size package of Tampax with full directions. Enclosed is 20¢ (stamps or coins).

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

GOINGS-ON IN GOTHAM

(Continued from page 6)

Miss De Havilland as sweet and saccharine as some of the roles she had appeared in.

"What I have put up with!" Olivia began. "Why, do you know, with a good old Shakespearean name like Olivia, everyone on the lot calls me 'Liver'! And when I stepped off the boat in England, what am I confronted with? 'De Havilland to wed title!' Do I look like a girl who wants to spend her days in a drafty castle, with a cold in the doze, to say nothing of no good ole American plumbing? Nope, I'm strictly 'Buy American'. I do love the English country though, but strictly as a vacation land—not for a permanent home."

Hope Hampton has left New York and ensconced herself in a little shack of forty rooms, out in Beverly Hills. Hope, as you know, is working on "A Trip to Reno." She leaves the house each morning by six and returns by ten at night—sometimes by nine-thirty, if she hurries! Before she leaves California, on completion of her picture, Hope hopes to get a day off so that she can go through that house of hers and see just what it looks like.

STOPPING away up on Fifth Avenue —'way up on floor twenty-nine—we found Claire Trevor. Claire seems in a mood to finally appreciate F. D.'s urge for a New Deal. As a matter of fact, she's by way of getting a new deal for herself! What with a new contract with Warners, a new radio spot and a brand new hubby to boot! Now you must admit that this is quite a lot for a little gal to land in one fell swoop, but not when it's so well-earned as by the deserving Miss Trevor. Claire, as you probably know, received honorable mention by the Academy of Motion Picture Awards for her grand job in "Dead End." So now, with a new lease on movie life, you can look forward to seeing her become the pride of all those Warner Brothers out yonder!

Sheila Barrett, the inimitable mimic, has finally been corralled by the flickers. Yes, Sheila's to make a series of short subjects on her return from London. Miss Barrett is to be somewhat of a female Bob Benchley. Now that in itself warrants three rousing cheers, but when you hear what Sheila has decided to do, you'll realize just what a treat's in store for you.

"I've always liked pictures, but they were not for me until I found the right sort of role," Sheila admitted. "I'm no Harlett O'Scara and certainly I don't intend to be a threat to Martha Raye! That's why I haven't taken advantage of offers before.

"Now that we've hit on this new idea for a series, I'm pretty pleased, and right anxious to get started.

"You know, Adela Rogers St. John and I are working together on the scripts and we've tried out the first already. They're all character studies of women you meet. You know, the gal who says she wants to reduce, but gets cold feet the minute she sets eyes on the steam room. Then, there's the one who shows up for a week-end believing her hostess really expected her to come just because she was invited. After spending the week-end, she discovers she's in the wrong house and doesn't know the people after all. And, of course, there's the girl who goes to buy a new hat and, after trying on everything in the shop, picks up her own and decides that is the one she will buy!"

To be amusing these characters have to be accurately drawn and Sheila's certainly the one to do it. Why, she's been doing it for years, in the town's swankiest night spots!

She knows all kinds of people and her insight and observations are keen.

It's to Franciska Gaal, this petite Hungarian star, that Bing Crosby will croon in "Paris Honeymoon," their next picture.

SHE'S NOT AFRAID

(Continued from page 8)

as long as she was gaining dramatic experience.

Then Gloria learned that she didn't have to be on relief to work on the Federal Theatre Project. Immediately she applied for a job with the Los Angeles group, was given a try-out and cast as Diane in "Seventh Heaven." This play ran four weeks at the Mason Theater in Los Angeles. Next she played Moonyean in "Smilin' Through" which ran more than a month. One thing led to another and then came the role of Paul Robinson in "The Devil Passes." Her performance in that play did the trick.

Casting directors and talent scouts haunt amateur as well as professional theatres around Los Angeles in search of new faces, and a casting director from one of the big studios saw Gloria in this play. He was so attracted by her charm and ability that before the third act he was backstage making an appointment for her to have a screen test.

She arrived at the studio late, "because everything had happened to delay me that morning," she explained. "And maybe it's because I'm from Idaho, but I never hurry." She presented herself at the casting director's office and before she could say a word, he sang out, "Hello, Gloria!"

She was somewhat taken aback by the sudden familiarity, but if that was the studio way then that should be her way too, so, with an assumed bravado, she called back, as pert as you please, "Hello, Max. How are you?"

That pleased him. Accustomed to interviewing dozens of girls every week, and able to read beneath the surface, he recognized her sincerity and appreciated the attempt to meet him on his own terms. He arranged for her screen test, and two days later Gloria Dixon signed a long-term contract with that studio.

HER first role in "They Won't Forget" was a difficult characterization calling for a Southern accent and an actress thirty years of age, but Gloria came through with flying colors. It was a great break for a young, inexperienced girl. Also it was a task that would have intimidated many a more experienced actress, but Gloria is never daunted by difficulties. They seem to spur her on.

During the months she had appeared in the Los Angeles Federal Theatre Project plays she had continued to live in Long Beach, an hour's ride from the city. Rehearsals were called at eight-thirty in the morning, so Gloria used to rise at six and was on her way by seven in order to arrive on time. After rehearsing all day she appeared in the evening performance, and never got home before midnight. So Gloria knew the meaning of hard work before she ever started in pictures.

She has a tremendous respect for accomplishment and a terrific urge to do things herself. She has mastered the violin, writes poetry on occasion, enjoys wood carving and models with clay. She believes that everyone should have a hobby and thinks an actress, whose work is largely mental, should try to create artistic things with her hands, as a stimulating outlet. She works incessantly and isn't afraid to tackle anything.

Gloria isn't nervous when making pictures, even though she has stiff competition. She admits she might be, sometimes, if she weren't so lucky in having such understanding directors.

"I've never been afraid of any part," she confides. "I feel that if the people who give me these roles didn't believe I could do them, I wouldn't have gotten them in the first place."

"I'm not afraid of anything, really, except of being afraid. And when I feel fear coming on you can bet I take steps to do something about it."

Gloria has just married Perc Westmore, famous Hollywood makeup man, whom she met her first day on the lot. They are terribly in love, and very happy, because they have so many tastes and ideals in common.

Both Perc and Gloria love to go deep-sea fishing. They will spend excited hours playing huge Marlin, Bonita sharks and other sporting fish. What's more, they catch them—great big ones. When these two work they work hard. They play the same way.

Gloria is only twenty-one but she's already heading for big roles. And with her looks, talent and capacity for hard work we won't be surprised to see this ambitious girl go far.

HAIR THAT THRILLS!

Here's the Hollywood* Way to Beautiful Hair

WHAT a thrilling surprise awaits you the first time you use Drene—Procter & Gamble's amazing shampoo discovery. For you will find, as millions of women already have, that Drene leaves hair manageable, radiant, beautiful beyond your fondest dreams. Drene performs this beauty miracle because it magically removes dulling film left on hair by previous shampoos. Drene is not a soap—not an oil. Contains no harmful chemicals. It cannot leave a beauty-clouding film on hair to dull natural lustre; nor a greasy oil film to catch dust. Drene actually makes 5 times more lather than soap in hardest water. Lather so gentle, yet so active, that dirt, grease, perspiration—even loose dandruff flakes—are washed away with a single sudsing and thorough rinsing. Hair is left sparkling clean this mild, safe way. Gloriously brilliant without the need of lemon, vinegar, or special after-rinses. Today, you can give your hair a shampoo specifically designed to bring out its full individual beauty. For there are now two kinds of Drene; Special Drene for Dry Hair—Regular Drene for normal and oily hair. Get Drene from drug, department or 10c stores. Better beauty shops everywhere feature this shampoo marvel. A single shampoo will both amaze and thrill you.

To Remove Dulling Film That Clouds Hair Beauty—

drene

Shampoo

SPECIAL for Dry Hair
REGULAR for Normal or Oily Hair

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Five whole years of your life...

HERE's an astonishing fact... the days in an average woman's life when she needs sanitary protection, add up to five whole years or more!

That's a lot of days. Every woman ought to learn to make them easier, more comfortable days. So—if you are still buying the same brand of sanitary napkins you started buying years ago—here's news you ought to hear...

There's something better now! Modess—a napkin so much softer and safer that it is bringing new comfort and peace of mind to millions of women!

Cut a Modess pad in two and examine the filler. It's fluffy, soft as down—entirely different from the close-packed layers found in so many other napkins. That's why Modess doesn't become stiff and rasping in use—doesn't chafe.

Now remove the moisture-resistant backing inside a Modess pad and test it. Pour water on it—and you'll see how completely you can rely on Modess!

Yet for all its greater comfort and safety, Modess costs no more than any other nationally known napkin. So—when you buy napkins—insist upon Modess.

Get in the habit of saying "Modess"!

IF YOU PREFER A SMALLER, SLIGHTLY NARROWER PAD, SAY "JUNIOR MODESS"

Anita Louise

Franchot Tone

Loretta Young

Lloyd Nolan

Mary Carlisle

THE CANDID CAMERA PREVIEWS

SPAWN of the NORTH

Paramount's Roaring Drama of America's Last Frontier . . . .

George and Dorothy caught in a clinch.

IT'S a busy day on the big Paramount lot in Hollywood. Director Henry Hathaway, famous for his ability to bring the drama of primitive emotional conflict, of thundering action, to the screen, is guiding Paramount's "Spawn of the North" through the final stages of production. On the set are such famous players as George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore, Louise Platt and Lynne Overman. Beautiful Dorothy Lamour has forsaken her famous tropic sarong for the rough dress, the laced boots of a daughter of the northern wilds. Raft and Fonda are wearing oilskins. For "Spawn of the North" is set in Alaska of 1908, when feud law ruled as brother fought brother, friend fought friend for the priceless rights to the silver horde . . . King Salmon.

We ask permission to take a few candid camera shots to show you picture fans. Permission is granted and we snap away. The results speak for themselves. You can see Henry Hathaway has a

(Continued on next page)

George Raft mans the harpoon gun, on the prow of his seal boat, transformed into a fighting ship for the battle of the salmon grounds.

As the opposing craft comes into range, its decks lined with gun-toting battlers, George lets drive with his deadly missile, foundering the enemy ship.

The candid camera catches George and Dorothy doing the 1908 Alaskan version of the Big Apple.

It's a waltz now with these two hardboiled youngsters refusing to admit that love really calls the tune.

Alaskan Indians playing the ancient festival music, tribute to King Salmon who gives them life.

Just a glimpse of the thrilling battle of the salmon traps. Notice John Barrymore, standing at the right of the sailor with the searchlight. Henry Fonda at left.

picture to rank with his "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," his "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." But Paramount Producer Albert Lewin insists we visit a projection room to see the "rushes" as they come from the big cameras on the set. And we agree with him that no still shots can half do justice to "Spawn of the North." For candid camera shots can't give the thundering action. They can't give the breadth and the sweep of this story of America's last frontier of romance. They can't give the emotional impact of this drama of two men whose devotion to each other is greater than the fear of death itself. Nor can they reveal the poignant beauty of the romance which we believe makes "Spawn of the North" one of the great women's pictures of the year.

The luckiest shot of all. George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, and Henry Fonda pose for us between scenes.

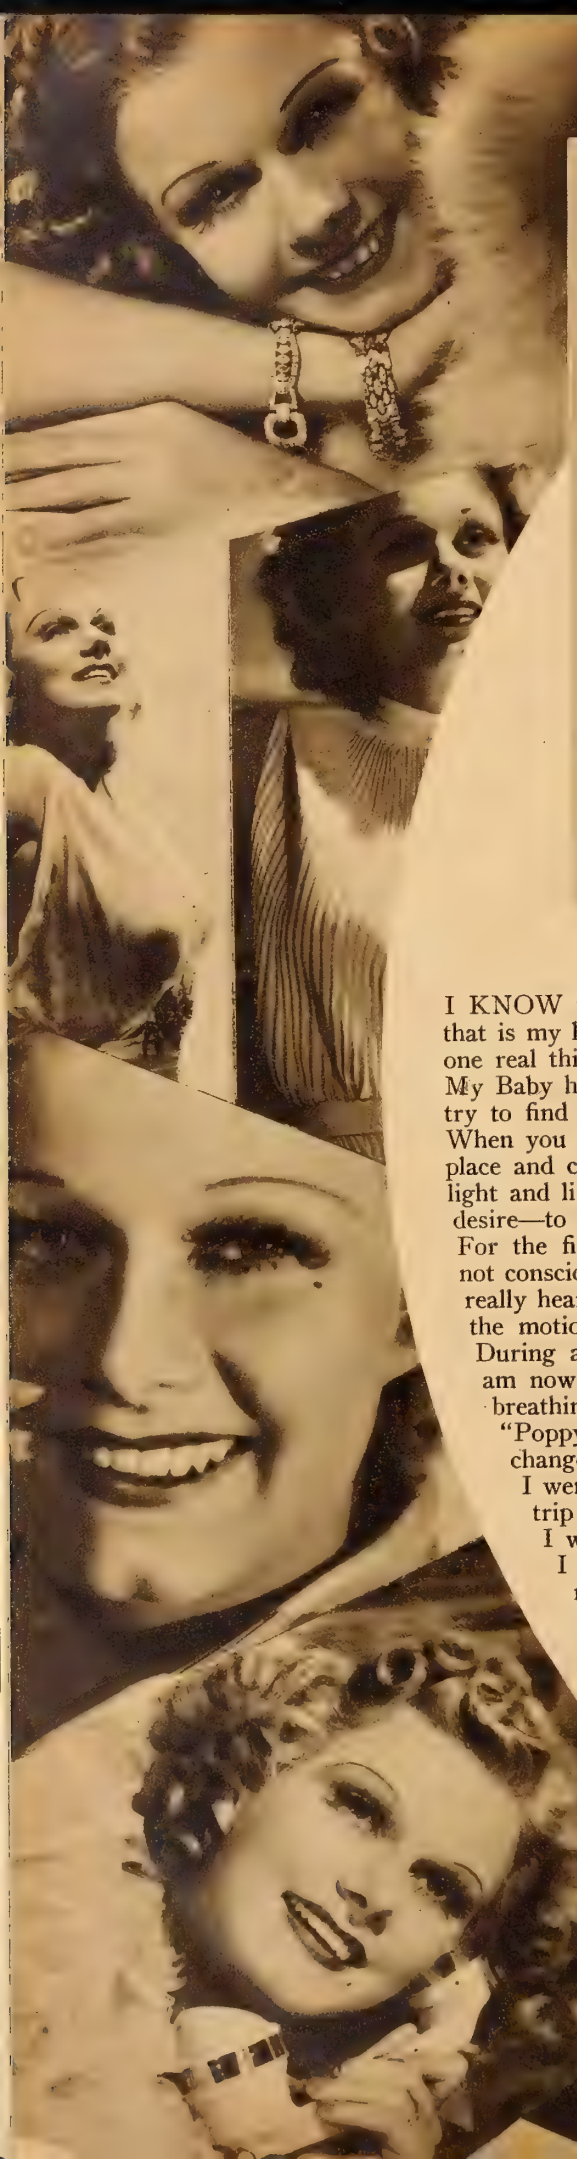
The candid camera snaps a shot of George and his pal, Skipper, the smartest seal in all the Pribilofs.

ADOLPH ZUKOR presents

SPAWN of the NORTH

STARRING George RAFT

Henry FONDA • Dorothy LAMOUR



AND FEATURING Akim Tamiroff • John Barrymore

Louise Platt • Lynne Overman

DIRECTED BY HENRY HATHAWAY • PRODUCED BY ALBERT LEWIN

Screen Play by Jules Furthman • Based on a Story by Barrett Willoughby

A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

A Year Without My Jean

by Jean Harlow's Mother

I KNOW that there is no death. There is only one other thing I know as well, and that is my love for my Baby. The only death is in the cutting yourself off from the one real thing, which is life—and light. There is no death. This year has proven that. My Baby has shown me that. She came back to prove it to me. A little later I shall try to find words to tell you how she proved it to me.

When you have been so hurt all the way through, it is very easy to go into a dark place and close the windows and doors and just efface yourself, turning your back on light and life and people—the things the Baby loves. That is, at first, the one great desire—to hide.

For the first eleven months after the Baby went away, I was not really here either, not consciously. I sensed what people said to me and answered them. But I didn't really hear what they said. I didn't really realize what I said. I went through all of the motions of living like an automaton. I was in a state of trance.

During all these past months I have stayed here in my little house, the house I am now leaving, the Baby's pictures all around me, the flowers she loved the best breathing their love of her. I saw almost no one except Bill Powell, the Baby's "Poppy," whom she loves so very dearly. I went nowhere. Bill, hoping that a change might help me, persuaded me to take a sea trip, to go on to New York. I went to please him, in appreciation of his thoughtfulness and his gift. For my trip was his Christmas gift to me. But I took my grief with me and found that I was more desolate away than I was at home.

I know that my Baby was with me. She had always told me that she would never leave me, that we had been together many lives before this one and could never be separated. I felt it. I know it now. But I am still flesh and blood, still on this plane of consciousness, where the loss of the little human things, the sight of her, the touch of her, the sound of her voice, the ability to do the little every day things for her mean so deeply, terribly much to me.

When my Baby was here, every day was a new, a thrilling experience to me. Every day, when the Baby was here, I would think, "Well, hurray, here's another day I can do something for my Baby." You see, there wasn't a moment of her life that I didn't know that she was my sunshine, my life, my world; not an hour that I wasn't actually throbbing with joy that I had that Baby. No human being ever got more joy out of doing just the every day things than I got out of doing them for the Bunny. I loved taking care of her personal things, keeping every littlest thing of hers exquisite and fresh and dainty. Marketing was l ki

I

re an I h thin night take exquis
Now
I knew she has for her of the wo
And I
MODERN S felt gratitu been directe shall (Contr

n ill ay ast nts, my auli-pugrds or were oars."

e five of t picture out actors rd in my every other round. One ho had done

w Bob would

. "They're all

Bob doesn't know the meaning of temperament or self-pity. And he has no illusions about fame, either.

Maureen O'Sullivan furnishes plenty of love interest in Bob's fight picture, "The Crowd Roars."

right at rough-and-tumble stuff, but they'd be sunk up against a boxer. Why, they wouldn't last three rounds with Taylor. He's the best amateur boxer this town has ever turned out."

I repeat, if I hadn't heard it myself, I wouldn't have believed it. These weren't press-agents. They weren't critics, neither were they connoisseurs of acting. They were prize-fighters, experts in boxing. And Taylor not only rated with them, he rated tops.

They fell to talking about what actors might give him some competition in the ring. The last I heard, just before Bob arrived and got a big greeting from the boys, they had agreed that the only three capable of giving him a boxing bout were (surprise!) Chester Morris, George O'Brien and Pat O'Brien.

Except for the fact that he was a bit browner, Bob didn't look any different from what he had the last time we met, during "Three Comrades."

"Why? Should I look different?" he inquired, in the next breath asking the waitress, "What's good to-day?"

She answered, "Well, there's corned beef hash on the menu, Mr. Taylor." I said, "I hear you're not only playing a boxer but that you actually are one."

He grinned sardonically, as much as to say, "The press-agents have got to you, too, poor guy." What he actually said was, "I'll take corned beef hash, with a side dish of mashed potatoes and gravy. How about you?"

The waitress departed and I continued, "Did you ever do any boxing before; in college, or anywhere?"

"Nope," he said, reaching for a hard roll. "They didn't have any boxing coach at Pomona when I was there."

"Then how did you pick it up so fast?"

He swallowed a chunk of roll and said, "I had to. This picture's an exposé of the fight game, behind-the-scenes stuff. I couldn't just go through the motions, just do the old left-right. I had to know something about the tricks of boxing. And I had to pick 'em up fast.

"Johnny Indrisano coached me. Johnny used to be a very good fighter. He was never a champ, but he's beaten champs in non-title matches. He knows his stuff, and how to put it across. He gave me plenty, working from nine to six, fourteen days in a row."

"After those fourteen days, did you feel more like making a picture or taking a rest cure?"

Bob grinned. "After the training for 'A Yank at Oxford,' this wasn't so bad. This was concentrated on just one thing. And I was in condition to start with, thank Heaven, from gym work and horseback riding.

At that moment, I noticed his right thumb, twice the size of the other and as rigid (Continued on page 81)

"My eyes bulge like a bull frog's!" storms Bette. "And my mouth is—ugh—like a small rose-bud!"

by Gladys Hall

THE PROJECTION room was plushy dark. A handful of us were watching the rushes of "Jezebel." Bette Davis and Director Willy Wyler sat in the front row. And Bette, as Jezebel, insinuated herself across the screen, as subtle as sin. Suddenly Bette let out a yelp that splintered the silence. She shrieked, "The homeliest face—I have the homeliest face I've ever seen!" Director Wyler whispered fiercely, "I'll never let you see the rushes again, young woman, never!"

The rushes over, Bette walked across the lot to the Green Room in sullen silence. She looked as though she had just witnessed a major catastrophe and might never recover from the effects.

At luncheon I said, "You didn't really mean it?"

"I did too," snapped Bette. "I can't bear my face. I can't stand it!"

"Oh, come," I said, considering the blue of the Davis eyes, the fine-textured skin, the mobile mouth, the pale gold hair, "oh, come off it. Your eyes are . . ."

"They are vile," stormed Bette. "They bulge like a bull-frogs. I detest them. My neck is long, like an ostrich's. I am the living image of the original drawings of Alice

"Am I Homely!"

—Bette Davis

Do you like "confession" stories? Well—here's one for the book!

A "glamorized" Bette with Henry Fonda in "Jezebel."

Bette with her adored husband, Harmon Nelson—"Ham" to her.

in 'Alice in Wonderland.' If you want to know what I look like to myself, think of the drawings of Alice with the telescope neck and the bulging eyes and the long, limp light hair, and you'll see Davis as she sees herself. When they were preparing to make 'Alice in Wonderland' a few years ago, I wrote letters pleading with them to let me play Alice. I went into details about my bulgy eyes, my long neck. I told them they couldn't miss on me. They thought I was being funny.

"If I could only look in the mirror one fine day and find something else reflected there! I know that's impossible, and so," said Bette, "I ignore the whole thing. I never look in the mirror except when I am on the set and one of the things is stuck under my nose every half hour and I think, ohmigod, do I have to look at that again! Otherwise, I never look at myself, but never. I've never owned a compact. I do my hair without looking in the mirror. I put on lipstick without looking in a mirror. Funny thing, it's a family trait. My grandmother did her long hair for fifty years without ever using a mirror. My mother does the same thing. So do I, but with me it's more than a family trait. It's also the instinct of self-preservation. I am entirely serious when I say that I have one of the homeliest faces I have ever seen. I can't bear it."

"Your mouth," I suggested, "your figure?"

"I loathe my mouth," wailed Bette. "My mouth," she continued scornfully, twisting it into such contortions as made it look as though she would twist it right off her face, "my mouth is horrible. It resembles, of all despicable things, a small rosebud. It is ineffectual, meaningless, skimpy. You should see it without lipstick! You couldn't see it. I simply daub it with lipstick to make it look larger. I never look at it until after I've put the lipstick on. I hate my mouth. My figure? Well, I'll never understand how I'm on the screen at all. I have about as much sex appeal as a pelican!"

"You must hand yourself something," I said. "You can't be so completely biased or no one will believe what you say. You must like something about yourself."

"I can't help whether anyone believes me or not," said Bette, a little less violently, "though why people shouldn't believe me, I don't know. I always tell the truth and shame every devil. And I am entirely honest when I tell you that I have one of the homeliest (Continued on page 92)

The People's Choice!

Yes, it's Caballero Gene Autry by a landslide—and here's why

Ina, Champ and Gene, above. Below, Gene takes over Smiley Burnette, left, and Ken Cooper at checkers.

by James Reid

'WAY BACK in his Oklahoma days, Gene Autry wrote a song called "Cowboy's Heaven" with a pal, Frankie Marvin. Maybe you've heard it. It's a cowboy classic. The first four lines go:

"Tonight I'm a tired, weary cowboy—
I've been in the saddle all day—
Searching the hills and the valleys
For cattle that strayed away . . . "

Gene still sings it that way. But if he weren't so gosh-darned modest, he could sing it something like this:

"Tonight I'm a tired, weary cowboy—
I've been in the saddle all day—
Riding some scenic locations
For movies that pay and pay . . . "

He wouldn't be human if he weren't "tired" and "weary" at the end of one of his working days. I know. I've just been on location with him.

He's human, all right. Samuel Goldwyn recently said, "judging by the popularity of Snow White and Charlie McCarthy, people are tired of looking at people." But Sam overlooked Gene Autry. Gene receives forty thousand fan letters a month—an all-time Hollywood record for any player. And his pictures pay and pay—everybody except Gene.

He was making only $5,000 per picture, on a contract that called for eight a year, when last winter he asked for a new arrangement. $40,000 a year doesn't go very far when you spend $2,000 a month just answering fan mail, and sending out photographs that have been asked for. Besides all that, Gene has a stable to keep up, you know.

Another studio offered Gene $100,000 to make a dude-ranch picture with Shirley Temple, but his own studio wouldn't let him do it. Neither would they give him a raise, so Gene calmly boarded a train and set out on a personal appearance tour.

Everywhere he went he was mobbed. He broke theatre records. He was earning better than $3,000 a week. At that rate, his studio had visions of never getting him back They got an injunction, halting his tour.

That, however, didn't bring Gene to his knees. He still said, "No raise, no work." Desperately, his studio tried to replace him. They pushed a former bit player into a picture which Gene had been scheduled to make. (Meanwhile, amazed congressmen were receiving letters, urging them to pass a law to keep Gene in pictures! They forwarded the letters to him.) En masse exhibitors demanded Autry pictures. He and the studio had to call a truce. He agreed to do two more pictures at the old salary, after which, the studio agreed, his contract would be rewritten.

So here I found him, back at work after five months, making a picture called "Gold Mine in the Sky."

To celebrate his return, his studio was spending two weeks on the picture—with ten days on location. (Once upon a time, Gene made whole pictures in less than ten days.) The setting for this one was a wooded, lush-green valley, 7800 feet up Tahquitz Mountain in the San Jacinto range, a hundred and fifty miles from Hollywood. There's scenic mountain country nearer Hollywood, but, as Gene says, "it's wore out from too much use."

The company operated out of Tahquitz Lodge, a big log lodge, surrounded by smaller cabins, all in a grove of tall pines, looking out over a vast mountain meadow where deer graze and wild creatures prowl at night.

GENE'S TWO-ROOM, two-bed cabin was atop some big stones up which steps had been chiseled. Theoretically, he had stellar isolation. Actually, he hadn't. With the camp crowded, the star was sharing not only his cabin, but also his bed, with some of the hired hands. The pal who shared his bed complained, "Gene's like a pinto that ain't been broke yet. He like to kicked me to death last night."

Even when he's asleep, apparently, Gene is a man of action. Awake, there's no doubt about it. On location he's up at four-thirty a. m., is eating breakfast at five, on his way to the day's film site by six, and making his first scene by six-thirty. He works till the light begins to fade, around five-thirty p. m., with only an hour out for noonday mess. He's in practically every scene, and "take" follows "take" in rapid-fire order.

At seven a. m., he may be stunting on his dark-chestnut horse, Champion. (And, as a stunt rider, he's practically four horsemen in one.) At eight a. m., he may be strumming a guitar, singing a love song to the heroine (the closest he comes, usually, to a love scene). At nine he may be bantering with Smiley Burnette, his comical two-hundred and fifty pound side-kick. Whatever the scene, at any hour of the day Gene is ready for it. That's why he's a hero even to the men who work with him.

He eats a man-size dinner, then (Continued on page 74)

Love Comes Once

by Gladys Hall

WHEN, IN "Marie Antoinette," Norma Shearer returned to the screen, she came from a far place.

I didn't know how far a place until I talked with her the other day in her dressing-room, a dressing-room all gold and cream, with one framed photograph of Irving Thalberg, on the desk, facing Norma as she talked. For then, for the first time since her husband's death, Norma talked of the long journey she has been on. For the first time she talked of Irving Thalberg, of the children, of her home and her work.

And, as she talked, I thought how beautifully true Norma runs to her type, how, honest in everything, she is honest also in grief. For Norma has the courage to look pain in the face and call it by name.

She said, "There were a couple of stories written about me while I was away from the screen, stories that spoke of my return to the screen as a problem I must be facing. I didn't give the stories, of course. I talked to no one for publication until I was well along with "Marie Antoinette." I had no photographs made in that year and a half. There was no problem, because everything seemed so very unimportant. I had first to know whether I was going to live, whether I would or could live.

"Grief does very strange things to you—not the things, I've found, that we are led to expect. I had heard of people who almost died from shock immediately following the death of a loved one. I didn't seem to feel that shock for two weeks afterwards. On the contrary, I felt terribly wide-awake. So wide-awake that I couldn't close my eyes. I seemed to be possessed of an incredible energy and activity. I didn't want to sit down, to be still. I talked all the while. Then, at the end of two weeks, I collapsed. When they told me I had pneumonia I was delighted.

"That sounds morbid. I don't mean it to sound that way. It was simply that I didn't want to live. But how do you stop living when you want to? You don't know what to do, or how. There are no ways out. That was why I was delighted when I knew that I was very ill. I thought that Someone merciful was opening the door for me.

"After I recovered from that illness, I went to Arizona for a while. Then I went to New York. I was told that it would help to travel. It did the opposite. There is something lonely about traveling, even under happy circumstances. When you are really traveling alone it is intolerable. Perhaps it did help me to rid myself of habits. It is dangerous to form habits when one is ill. I had a nurse sleeping in the room with me. I knew that wouldn't do. So I made the first move by having her sleep in the adjoining room, the door opened. Then I had her close the door. Then I had her sleep in another room. And finally I sent her away. Now I am used to being alone and it is less difficult.

"People have asked me what I did all that first year at home, away from the screen, without all the activities I knew when Irving was here.

"That is another curious thing about grief. I'd been told that time drags when one is in sorrow. It wasn't so with me. I think it was because I was so dazed. There was no time, as we know it, no time marked out into weeks, days, hours. In a state of trance there is no time. That's how I found it. Something just passes over you and the first thing you know it is six months, then it is a year, and there you are, having done nothing that you can remember. I am honest when I say that I don't know what I did that year and a half at home. Somehow, it slipped away. When Irving was here I was so conscious of time, because then every minute together was precious.

PEOPLE SAY, too, that children are the one great consolation in grief. I did not find that to be true. I went on living for the children's sakes, of course, but they did not help me in sorrow. They hurt me. They were like scourges to sorrow because I felt their loss as well as mine. The baby, of course, was too young to have a consciousness of what she had lost. But little Irving knew. I had to tell him. He stayed with my sister for ten days afterwards. It has taken him over a year to come back to his usual self again. Now he is going to a military school here in Hollywood, and I think that is helping him. There is something about the wearing of his uniform, or perhaps it is the routine and discipline, which acts as a challenge to him.

"There is no consolation," Norma went on. And, as she spoke, she looked up at the blue sky shining down on her through the wide dressing-room window. "I don't look for solace, knowing how futile it would be to seek for what isn't there. I can not salve the wound by repeating the old formulas, 'there was some reason for it,' or 'such things have to be.' It was not all for the best. No reason is good enough. Such things should not have to be. I don't believe that anything so cruel as separating two people who loved each other as Irving and I did is anything but wrong and unnecessary and wasteful. I haven't tried to turn to people for advice and solace. I know what it is I am facing, and I (Continued on page 72)

She has known "the real thing," that's why Norma will never re-marry

Norma Shearer as Marie Antoinette, in her first picture for over two years.

Watch Out, Wayne!

by Katharine Hartley

NOTHING SUCCEEDS like success, and nothing flops like it, either. And that's the thing that Wayne (Kid Galahad) Morris is afraid of. Wayne has been called one of the overnight successes of the last few years, but he has too often heard of what happens to overnight successes on that dreary morning after, to think that it is all just one glorious fun-spree. At hale and hearty twenty-three his inclinations are naturally to the fun side. "But darn it all," as he himself has said, gazing six feet and two inches away at the second largest pair of feet in Hollywood, propped up on a chair in front of him, "a fellow's got to say 'whoa' sometime, and I guess it's about time I said it! Being an actor is a responsibility, and I'm just now beginning to realize it."

The realization came not so many weeks ago when Wayne was assigned to do the young lead in the Technicolor "Valley of the Giants." In the beginning Wayne had the vague idea that he had probably been chosen for the "Giant" picture because of his aforementioned six-feet-two. But then he learned that the "Giants" were the giant red-woods of California's northern forests, and that the story was no hastily cooked up dish, either. He also discovered that this story had been filmed twice before, once in 1919 with the great Wally Reid, and again in 1927 with Milton Sills. Now here was he, a "punk," as he calls himself, about to embark in the same role, and expected—yea, ordered—to follow in such glorious footsteps.

"That buffaloed me, and on top of it I learned that the studio was prepared to spend over a million dollars on the production. Now when nobody expects you to amount to anything, and by some strange twist it turns out that the fans like you, then that's one thing. But when they expect you to do something, and then you don't! Well, you can see why I haven't been sleeping quite as peacefully as I used to."

But before insomnia takes too much of a toll, we have something to say to you, Mr. Wayne Morris—a warning. The question is, should you change, and go from a light-hearted boy to a serious actor? An actor has to keep on studying, that's true. There are some actors, like Paul Muni, whose forte lies in studied acting, but there are others, like you, whose greatest charm lies in their own very natural personalities. If you do begin to take this business seriously, and suddenly find yourself with great ambitions, at least we hope you'll keep a charming balance between your serious side and the effervescent twenty-three-year-old youth who is such a great part of your appeal. We have seen some of that youth in action, and we know how it clicks with the public.

Does Morris realize that a career easily gained may be just as easily lost?

There were several very vital and refreshing scenes which occurred while Wayne was on location with the "Valley of the Giants" company in the timber country near Eureka, California, recently. A day after he arrived there, Wayne, the collegiate part of him, was standing in the middle of a junk yard, looking around for a car. He spied a 1923 sedan that still had all wheels intact, and he thought that would do. The junk dealer wanted twenty dollars, so Wayne bought it at once. At that point the junk dealer didn't know who Wayne was, nor that he also had a powerful big roadster at home in Hollywood. He thought Wayne was just one of the local poor boys. He still thought so days later when he saw Wayne, with about fifteen others in the sedan, tearing around the town. Brakes screaming, dust flying, they skidded to a stop at first one drug store, then another, piling out each time to refresh themselves at the soda fountain. They honked the horn incessantly and then drowned its aged sound with their own very boyish and hilarious laughter.

IT WASN'T until the second week that someone tipped off the junk dealer as to who Wayne really was. It was a delightful surprise. The junk dealer told his young son, who told his buddies, and from then on Wayne was hounded by kids screaming for autographs. He gave them too—by the hundreds. The kids followed him everywhere, even to work. At noontime, the wisest of them stood close behind in the studio lunch wagon and the man in charge of the counter never could understand where so many of his sandwiches disappeared to. Heck, Wayne could conceal three sandwiches in those oversized paws of his, and in this way they were passed along to the lunchtime kid-kibitzers.

All this wasn't exactly what you would call dignified star-behavior, but its very spontaneity was exactly what made it so delightful. In everything that Wayne does there is this quality, accompanied by that impetuous boyish grin. It's because he has put this into his screen roles that he has been such an instant success. Yet while his success has seemed instant to us, it wasn't quite that simple for him. Nor was "Kid Galahad" Wayne's first picture, as many people suppose. Wayne tells it this way:

"While I was studying at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, a Hollywood casting director spotted me and gave me a fifty-dollar-a-week contract with a three months' option. My first role was a bit in 'China Clipper.' I had a close-up, and I was supposed to have one speaking line, which I worked on for days, but they cut that out! 'Polo Joe' was the next. In it I had another line, and fortunately that one stayed. And that was my talking debut on the screen. Later I heard that the studio had bought 'Kid Galahad.'

"I had read the story and was crazy to do it. So right then and there I did a little press-agenting for myself. The first person I went to see was the writer who was working on the script. I gave him a sales talk, but he looked as though he thought I was crazy. So then I went to the producer. I told him, too, that I was the fellow who could do it. He didn't know me either, wouldn't even believe I was a contract player until he called the front office to check up. They all thought I was nuts, but I kept after it. Then, more to shut me up than anything, they gave me a test. Well, I looked all right as a prize-fighter, it seems, but they still didn't want to take a chance on me in such a big picture, so they put me in another one, 'The Kid Comes Back.' Only the kid was just starting then. I was awfully green, but they liked it anyway, so they decided to let me do 'Kid Galahad,' and hold the first picture until later. In between those two I also made a couple of other pictures, and in both of those I was supposed to be the comedian. So you see it wasn't quite such a Cinderella success as some people think. I had had a little

(Cont'd on page 76)

His mother is mighty proud of Wayne's fast rise to the top of the ladder.

Left, Wayne makes love to Priscilla Lane in "Men Are Such Fools."

Janet, her mother and "a friend" doing the beach at Waikiki. Everybody happy? Well, yes!

Janet's success hasn't been accidental. It's been carefully planned.

THE ONLY thing in this world you're sure of is what's inside yourself. That's what you have to live with. So why not make the best of it?"

It was Janet Gaynor talking. Not preaching. Not leaning from a height to proffer gobbets of wisdom. The words had been drawn from her by persistent questioning. Hearing them, I felt that they held the heart of her mystery.

For her mystery is a legend. "Talk about glamor girls," says Hollywood. "They're transparent compared with little Gaynor. What does she like? How does she spend her time? Whom does she see? Tyrone Power and Margaret Lindsay. Yes, we know they're her friends. But that's all we do know."

I learned a little more when I went to see her—not much. I'd heard a story, for example, of the night she went to the preview of "A Star is Born." Her mother had elected to stay at home and listen to the broadcast. Janet came down in a black chiffon dress and a white corded silk jacket. She touched the orchid in her hair. Like a girl going to her first dance, she pirouetted for the approval of the company, then came to a graceful halt.

"Look, kids. See anything different about me? Don't you see *any*thing?" Sorry, not a thing. She fluttered her lashes at them. "Well, of course, for the first time in my life I wear false eyelashes, and I don't get a tumble. Never mind. I'll make an impression yet. I'll blink them at the first producer I meet in the lobby—and they'll fall right off."

Then there was her trip east to attend the President's Birthday Ball. Her studio's publicity director presented various schemes by which they might grab space in the newspapers.

The Mystery of Miss Gaynor

by Ida Zeitlin

"Glamor girls," says Hollywood, "are transparent compared with Janet!" And Hollywood isn't easily fooled that way

He hoped she might agree to one of his milder ideas. "For instance, you could auction off your dances. That would be dignified, wouldn't it—with the money going to the President's Birthday Fund?"

"Yes," chuckled Janet. "And I could also turn somersaults. But you know perfectly well I won't do either."

She'd agreed to go to the ball as a guest, not a publicity-seeker. As a guest she went. That the President of the United States should have smiled as she danced by, should have murmured, "She's cute as a button," was just her publicity agent's good luck. The story hit every front page in the country. But that didn't in any way alter Janet's position in the situation.

She lives in a rented house, which alone provides food for speculation. Moreover, the house lies not in the hills of Beverly or Bel-air, but in the heart of town. Unless you were looking for it, you wouldn't see it, hidden behind a mass of tangled greenery.

You follow a drive to a rambling structure of gray shingles and dormer windows, nestled under sweeping pepper branches. So dense is the foliage that your first impression is one of undisciplined profusion. There's no landscaped formality to trees or shrubs, yet a second glance reveals how cunningly they've been trained to keep all their own beauty without shutting out the beauty of sunlight and shadows.

You enter a room that presents no striking effects. It's the kind of room you might have grown up in, if your background was one of middle class comfort. Nothing obtrudes itself. You're aware only that the chairs invite you to sit in them, that the pictures were hung, not by decree of an interior decorator, but because of dear associations, that the fire on the hearth strikes dancing lights and shadows from a burnished brass wood scuttle. It's a welcoming room. It seems to bid you relax.

SO DOES its mistress. She comes in, a slight, redheaded figure in slacks. Her brown eyes, clear as a brook, are both frank and kindly. Her manner is unaffectedly simple. Her smallness, her heart-shaped face, her dimpled chin, a gentleness about her, suggest the childish and the clinging. As she talks, that impression vanishes. Little by little, it's borne in upon you that Janet stands securely on her own feet, that she's achieved a maturity of outlook which has nothing to do with years.

She's apart from Hollywood only in that she doesn't follow the pattern. She doesn't feel superior to it. She lives her life in greater material comfort, but otherwise as she would have lived it if she'd never seen Hollywood. She spends her time seeing people she likes, doing things she enjoys. It's as simple as that.

She laughed at the notion of herself as a woman of mystery. "I know. Everyone thinks I'm remote. And it's funny, because I love Hollywood so. I'd rather live here than any place else in the world. If I'm not seen about much with movie people, (Continued on page 97)

by
Faith Service

Joan now rules the Bennett roost alone—and loves it! Yes, she's the modern matriarch

The youngest Bennett is a dictator in crêpe de chine —and admits it. Right, with her daughter, Diana.

After Divorce—What?

IN MY HOUSE," said Joan, "we are women without men. We are, literally, eight women without men—and it's wonderful! There is myself, the two children, the children's nurse, my house guest, the three maids. Eight women and—a super-efficient burglar alarm! I haven't even a butler in the house. I do have a chauffeur but he is 'outside help.' I found that when I had a butler, there was always trouble in the house. Either one or more of the maids would fall in love with him and there would be trouble. Or they wouldn't fall in love with him, and then there would be another kind of trouble.

"And so now, except for dates and guests, we are women without men, and it works like a charm. Life is as peaceful as a perpetual Armistice Day. I feel relaxed for the first time in my life. I am completely content.

"I have two supreme ambitions. The first is my hope that I may bring the children up to be nice young women, charming mentally, physically, socially. If I fail in this, I will indeed have failed. If I succeed, I shall have achieved the success I care about the most. My other ambition centers in my work. And I think that if I give all of myself to these ambitions which are, in a way, one, I will be giving just about all that I have to give."

I said then, more bluntly than tactfully, I fear, "Well, but you'll be getting married again one of these days, surely?"

"I will not," said Joan firmly. "Not for a great many years." She added, "Why should I?"

Joan was saying, "I have my children. I have my home. I have my work. I have my friends. I can see no earthly reason why I should marry again. Love? Possibly. But I am out of my teens. I have been married twice. Both times for 'love.' And so love is not likely to come to me like a storm again, sweeping me off my feet. I have been married twice and unsuccessfully. You can't go on interminably playing with trial and error, cause and effect. That's stupid.

"I like working out my own life. I believe that marriage is wrong for women who are economically independent. At best, it is difficult. For, when a woman has a career of her own, earns her own money, the balance of power is upset. The very fact that she is such a woman makes her think like a man, gives her the dictator complex.

"I have the dictator complex," smiled Joan. "I've often been told that I'm a dictator in crêpe de chine, but I never would admit it before. I didn't like the taste of it. Now I do admit it. Now I am free. Now I can be a dictator, comfortably, without stepping on anyone's toes, offending anyone's pride. Now I am the head of my own household, the arbiter of my own destiny, my own woman. And I love it. Now I am a matriarch."

I LAUGHED. A figure less like the popular conception of a matriarch could not possibly be imagined. This youngest of the Bennetts is so gentle, everything about her so fastidious, so almost excessively feminine that she deceives you. You have to look closely to perceive that there is a small steel hand beneath the lace mitt, a masterful meticulous brain beneath that cap of shining gold hair. You have to remember that the Joan who adores perfumes and jewels and furs is also competent to balance household budgets and business ledgers (and does), loves to fly, goes to the races, disciplines her children as a Spartan mother must have done.

"You know," Joan was saying, "the definition of a matriach reads: 'A woman holding a position analogous to that of a patriarch in a family or tribe.' The definition of a matriarchy reads: 'The (Continued on page 88)

Joan is with Randolph Scott in "The Texans" and, right, with her "ex," Gene Markey.

He'd Rather Be Himself

by Charles Darnton

Is that Bob Taylor? Or is it Ty Power? No, it's Richard Greene himself, thank you!

HE'D RATHER be himself than a couple of other fellows, even if those two were that madly adored and highly pictorial pair, Robert Taylor and Tyrone Power.

Not that Hollywood's brand-new Britisher, Richard Greene, feels a bit above 'imself, as they sniff at 'ome. Lawks, no! Nor is he that affectedly casual English actor who might airily remark, "I'd heard about Hollywood, so I thought I'd just pop over and see what it was all about, y'know."

This ever-Greene boy (woodman, spare that pun!) who went right to work here making love to Loretta Young in "Four Men and a Prayer" —if you can call that work—is refreshingly simple and modest, especially for a young stranger heralded as Taylor and Power rolled into one.

"It is a great compliment," he graciously acknowledged, "but I'd rather be myself, thank you."

He is. For this handsome six-footer from over the sea is definitely an individual. As regards his double façade he is far more like Taylor than Power, and huskier than the two of them together. Indeed, he is the one English importation since Ronald Colman to bring virility to the American screen, so much so that he promises one day to step into the seven-league boots of that admirable and enduring veteran.

Surely the British picture producers must have been dozing over their afternoon tea when they let this strapping lad get away from them. Aside from his own no mean charm, this lusty newcomer has the charm of novelty. He is more than welcome, if only by way of contrast to the English actors, narrow of shoulder, flat of chest, and spindly of shank, we've been getting these many long-suffering years. It is not too much to say, perhaps, that American audiences want something more than cup-and-saucer balancers.

Then there's the appalling situation in which our more or less healthy actresses find themselves with these ethereal drawing-room performers. Milady of Hollywood no sooner risks physical comparison with one of them in a scene than she remembers lines which have nothing whatever to do with the script, whereupon she despairingly rushes home and hits the old diet a new wallop.

BUT IN Mr. Greene, a sound piece of British young manhood put soundly together, there is hope for the starving. The hope might upon occasion even assume the proportions of a square meal. Playing opposite him should be gratefully reassuring to the Hollywood actress who has not completely lost her taste for food. For once she could be herself, just as he prefers to be himself.

"So far as I can see," he protested, "my only resemblance to Taylor is that I've got a 'widow's peak.' Taylor has darker eyes than my greeny-gray ones. Of course, we both have dimples, but I can't do anything about my face. Until I came over here, I wasn't even conscious that I had the damn things." (Cont'd on page 90)

Richard likes American girls, movies and motor cars, and hopes he can spend the rest of his life with all of them.

'Tisn't So!

by Robert McIlwaine

'It's for amateurs to be bashful, not for me!" states Olympe, who's been acting since she was a year and a half old.

Olympe Bradna's never been kissed?

Well, don't you believe it!

OF COURSE it isn't so," Olympe Bradna stated emphatically. "I have been many times kissed! Why, it's part of my job of acting. I think it's all so silly. As if anyone cares whether I've been kissed, or ever will be! Someone in the publicity started it and they should have told me first, then I would have said, 'I have many times kissed.' You know, they asked me to cooperate, but how can I when every time I get off the train newsmen ask that same silly question. 'Is it true, Miss Bradna, that your first and only kiss was in "Stolen Heaven?"' I am sick of it I tell you!

"And, do you know what some writer said? That I was so temperamental I wouldn't do the kissing scene till everyone left the set. How ridiculous! Would a prize fighter refuse to knock out his opponent until nobody looked? Of course not! It's his job. Mine is to act, so I do whatever the part calls for.

"As for temperamental people, I hate them. Another thing, it's for amateurs to be bashful, not for me. I've been acting since I was a year and a half old. My family were professional people long before my time, even back to when the Louis' ruled France, so there's nothing strange about it to me. I am very much at home on the stage."

All this in one burst of good ole Americanese, too. In case you're under the impression that Olympe Bradna, charming Frenchie, has trouble with her languages, calm your fears. She's as adept as you or I when it comes to English—never at a loss for words. In fact, she's quite an opinionated young lady!

It took only one routine question to get her going! When we inquired if she sang in 'Stolen Heaven,' or had a voice dubbed in for her, she was off to a flying start—though definitely evasive.

"Well, I can sing, but I don't like it. What I want to do is dance. Ballet and lots of it! I love dancing," Olympe exclaimed, brown eyes sparkling. "You know, I've studied dancing since I was so big. I studied singing, too, for three years. Of all my teachers I think I like my latest best of all. He's John McCormick. He is so sweet and we get along fine, but even so, I like ballet better. Some day I'll do all ballet and be very happy, just you wait and see," she added mischievously.

We'll wait to see, but certainly not as a member of the Doubting Thomas Club! For if (Continued on page 89)

Put Your Best Face Forward

A candid shot of Loretta Young, voted the most beautiful actress. Looks like a "snap" of you, perhaps?

Ginger Rogers caught in an off moment. Most of her features are really undistinguished.

Natural shots of herself are Carole Lombard's delight. In fact, the wilder they are the better she likes them!

Even Greta Garbo relaxes once in awhile, and shows us her bad points. Now will you believe there's hope for everyone?

I WOULD BE willing to wager a small sum that the most frequently-asked question about the movie belles is this: are they as beautiful off the screen as they are on? The answer can't be one simple unadorned yes or no. Most of them are not as gudgeous when you meet them on the street as they are when you see them on the screen. With very few exceptions, that is true. However, that's all beside our pernt. Our pernt is that these movie stars —most of them just average, good-looking gals, with personality and allure eking out their modicum of beauty—have learned to utilize their best points so that you are never conscious of their bad ones. Never, that is, until the candid camera fiend catches them in an off moment.

As you can see for yourself by ye candids on this page, movie stars can look silly, unglamorous or tacky as the case may be, even as you and I, when they're caught in these unposed off moments. Of course, we all know that these candid camera enthusiasts spend their lives hiding in trees and things solely for the purpose of catching the famous when the famous ain't looking their best. We're not meaning to be nasty in contrasting the funny pictures of your favorites with the pretty ones. We jus' wanna show yuh, that's all.

"Well, how am I going to make the most of my good points?" you ask. "How am I going to minimize my bad points? Maybe I haven't a good point!" To the last, I say phooey. Everyone has at least one good point. Even if you haven't one single good feature to your name, you can manufacture a "good point" out of personality, out of freshness, neatness, sweetness and chic. And then, of course, there's make-up, that blessing of disguise for modern womanhood.

Loretta with glamor—hair perfectly groomed and every feature showing to greatest advantage.

Ginger's eyes are her good feature. Simple but effective make-up accentuates them.

Carole knows she can look this way when she wants to just by using a few tried and true beauty tricks.

The extraordinarily clever eye make-up used by Garbo emphasizes the beautiful structure of her expressive face.

Take lessons from the stars, who know how to make the most of their own good points

by Mary Marshall

Sit down and consider your eyes and mouth. The eyes or the mouth—or both—are the best places to start when you wish to glamorize a face. Ginger Rogers' eyes are her one good—really good—feature. For the rest, Ginger is pert and cute and she has a darling figure, but her other features are undistinguished, even as yours and yours and yours. Garbo's extraordinarily clever eye make-up is what really sets her face apart.

Look yourself right in the eye and consider what you can do to make those eyes more lovely. First, the brows—how are they? If they're heavy, that's fine, provided there are no stray hairs giving the brow line an untidy look. Are your eyes a little too close together? There are all kinds of fancy measurements for determining whether eyes are too close together or not; but you know perfectly well you can tell by simply looking in the mirror. Well, if they are, go ahead and pluck a few hairs, very carefully, from the inner side of the eyebrows. Take some shadow—brown if your skin is dark, blue or gray if your skin is fair—and blend it into the outer side of the eyelid. Take a soft eyebrow pencil and lengthen your brows at the outer side less than an eighth of an inch—no more, for more will look artificial. These tricks will make your eyes look bigger and brighter.

Do your brows grow too close to your eyes? Wash your face with warm water and soap and rinse with plenty of water, and while the brows are damp, brush them up vigorously with a small brush. Line them up, top-side, with the little brush so that they don't look shaggy. Then brush a little oil or cream onto them while they're raised so, and take some mascara—not a pencil—and make them up a little if (Continued on page 103)

He Wants to Disappear

by Martha Kerr

"I want to put away enough money," says Slim, "so that I can loaf and be unknown."

Here is Slim and his new bride, "Brownie." She was once his nurse, and now—

IN AN EXTRAORDINARILY tall, thin house by the sea lives an extraordinarily tall, thin man by the name of George Somerville. You know him as "Slim" Summerville. Only you don't know him at all. You just think you do.

He lives, George Somerville, not Slim Summerville, all the year 'round in this house by the sea, wedged in between other seashore houses, at Hermosa Beach. Most of the time his five-year-old adopted son, Elliott, is with him. Also, his dog, "Troubles." He never goes anywhere. Except for his original trek around the country when he was in his teens, he never has been anywhere. He has lived in Hollywood for twenty-four years, and has never been to the Troc' in his life, never to the Brown Derby, never attended a premiere, nor even a party. He has never been to New York in his life. Nor to Europe. Doesn't want to go. Doesn't want to do anything, not even think, more than is literally necessary.

He seldom goes to the movies, George Somerville. He hasn't seen even his own latest pictures. He's never heard Garbo talk. The last time he saw her was when she made a picture with John Gilbert. The only recent pictures he has seen are those starring Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy. He likes Gable and Tracy, thinks he must "make an effort" to see "Test Pilot" pretty soon because of Clark and Spence. There is a neighborhood theatre less than three blocks away from Slim's tall, thin house with the pea-green painted door. His pictures are shown there, but, "I'm too lazy to go," says Slim. His dad goes, and tells Slim how he did.

He reads murder mysteries. They require the minimum of mental effort. He's never opened a volume of Shakespeare or Dickens, a tome of philosophy or psychology in his life, and never will. He listens to the radio, because it doesn't require any exertion. His dad turns the dials for him. And Slim can doze without being rude to the invisible entertainers. He fishes. His huge living room is stacked with fishing rods of all sorts. There are, also, large trays of cigarettes and huge dishes of salt water taffy strewn about, but no books. There is a framed photograph of the boy, Elliott.

Slim fishes for days on end. He doesn't swim. "Too lazy to swim," he says, "but I wade around quite fancy." He has no pals among the picture people. He plays golf occasionally with Bing Crosby, Andy Devine and Dick Arlen. They are silent men, like himself. When a picture is finished he has his own unique method of relaxation. He charters (Continued on page 99)

Slim advocates the "making oneself scarce" theory

"I'd like to be gay and witty in pictures, but they always hand me an old hyena role, and I keep right on barking," says Miss Oliver.

"I've been stage-struck ever since I was your size," confides Miss Oliver to Miss Temple. "I bet you could act, too," Shirley admires.

She's a Softie

by Charles George

IT TAKES nerve to call on her. First of all, she lives miles away in the country. Then, reaching the little white house on the hill, with its green lawn climbing up from a white picket fence, you face barred gates, and are confronted with a sign reading, "Beware Police Dog!"

That stops you. What to do? You, an utter stranger, don't like to stand in the middle of the road and yell, "Edna! Edna May! Oh, Edna May Oliver!"

Perish the thought! So you survey the hazardous situation. What might have been taken for rural peace now strikes you as ominous silence. The detective in you, without stirring a foot, discovers that beside the closed garage stands a car. And under its rumble seat undoubtedly there crouches a bloodthirsty beast, ready to leap out and tear you coat from pants.

Come, come, man! That yard must be crossed, even as the Rubicon. But your tortured imagination conjures up still another vision, that of a Betsey Trotwood in sports clothes, flying out at you and beating you off as she would those luckless donkey-boys in "David Copperfield." Drat the thing! Manfully you unbar the gates and stride through with all the outward assurance of an irrepressible Armenian rug-pedler.

Quaint. On the door, and polished right up to its handle, is a brass knocker vaguely reminiscent of dear old New England. You lift it—not without the lurking dread of a swift and savage rear attack. Knock, knock. The door is opened by a smiling housekeeper. Hers is the most beautiful face you could ever wish to gaze upon, serene and aglow with welcome. "Miss Oliver," her voice as lovely as herself, "is expecting you. Come in."

Yet, left cringing on the edge of your chair in the living-room, you again give way to that helpless feeling of not knowing what may come on four feet before your hostess arrives. From where you sit you glimpse the music-room and cast a furtive glance at the grand piano lest it be a dog-house in disguise.

Presently your twitching ear catches a nameless rustle in the hall. Thank heaven! It is Edna May Oliver in the flesh—what there is of it. Tall, gracious, distinguished in black and white kimono and silver and black slippers, Hollywood's finest character actress stands before you. But she is not in character. Unlike her brusque screen image, she is all kindliness, (Continued on page 101)

Edna May Oliver reluctantly admits that her bark is worse than her bite

Green satin leaves are appliqued on the skirt and shoulder straps of this delectable dance frock worn by Simone Simon in "Josette." Its skirt is of white silk net, the bodice of soft green satin. Always right for the ingenue type.

Lightweight wool tweed fashions Ginger Rogers' practical two-piece suit of burgandy flecked with the same blue that is inset in the broad shouldered jacket. Its sleeves and back are cut on the bias. The smart hat is a black sailor.

TO SPARKLE in sleek sophistication, or to ingenue in wide-eyed ruffles! That is the sartorial question, answered, at least cinematically, in the current crop of pictures. Apparently each type is devastating to the susceptible male, so decide on your own particular aura, and choose your wardrobe weapons accordingly.

Both sides of the debate are effectively presented in Warner's "Gold Diggers in Paris." Rosemary Lane confines her wardrobe to girlish simplicity to win Rudy Vallee, and Gloria Dickson does all right with various other gentlemen, in exaggerated slinky gowns.

Nearly all of Miss Lane's evening things bow to young modesty with some sort of shoulder swathing. One has a swirling skirt and fitted sparkling bodice cut rather low, but draped with a cowled sheer cape. A diagonally striped chiffon has shoulder strap clips for its only decoration. A white satin with built up skirt and inverted "v" bodice has a chiffon scarf caught with a clip at the throat. A floor length matching satin cape, square shouldered, tops this gown.

For the street, Miss Lane wears a trim bell boy top coat buttoned tightly to the waist, and falling free to reveal a slim skirt in redingote effect. A military looking visor hat completes the picture. Miss Lane chooses a peasant print dirndl with high waisted skirt and full sleeved guimpe for a backstage scene. The dirndl, that boon to the young and slim (but very trying to ladies whose only lines are in their faces) has made a permanent place for itself in the fashion firmament.

Miss Dickson wears a spectacular cross two-skin scarf on two occasions. Once, the scarf tops a long sleeved black gown shirred from the high neck to well below the waist, where the skirt is released in front fulness. Accessories for this outfit are a wide belt with huge metal buckle and a tiny pill box hat.

Another shirred bodice gown for Miss Dickson has a wide lamé belt and high cone turban crushed in at the top. A huge rhinestone clip and flower corsage at the high neck are effective accents on a black sequin gown.

Royer has cunningly combined the little girl with the "going places" effect in Simone Simon's "Josette" wardrobe. Boxy jacketed pajamas with a round necked black Basque sweater, very young, serve as a boating outfit. Still in the girlish division are a box jacket suit with white vest and wide white revers, and a white swing skirt frock with black vest and a slim coat worn with plaid ascot and the merest dot of a beret.

At which point Miss Simon becomes a night club entertainer and she and her wardrobe both go to town. However, this young star combines a childish quality with a serene poise, making her adaptable to either type of gown.

Tiny leaves form the drop (Continued on page 85)

Wardrobe Weapons

by Marian Squire

Richness of material combines with demure youthful flattery in Margaret Sullavan's silver gown with its uneven cape. She wore this one in "Three Comrades."

Perfect for travel, business or general wear is this three-piece suit worn by Ginger Rogers in "Vivacious Lady." The fitted jacket and Chesterfield coat top a gracefully flared skirt.

Know your type, dress your lines, and get your man!

Jean Hersholt and Marjorie Weaver in "I'll Give a Million."

Highlighting Hersholt

by George Benjamin

ASK ANY Hollywood star what the average life of a player in the movies is and he'll answer, "About five years; ten, with luck!"

Jean Hersholt is proof perfect that they're all fibbing! That is, fibbing in a way! For, Jean Hersholt has been under contract for twenty-five years out thar, with only a three-week lay off in all that time. Now you must admit that that is somewhat of a record.

Another little item in the way of records is his collection of Hans Christian Andersen works. Recently Hersholt unearthed eleven unpublished manuscripts which make his collection the finest in the world. Prior to this discovery, the National Danish Museum had the edge on everybody, but with this new find, Hersholt's tops them all.

Among Jean Hersholt's several claims to fame is that he is probably the only male star to play with five leading ladies at one and the same time, none of whom fight over billing! Yes, and what's more, he has rated two return engagements with a possible third before school's called. We refer to those five famous Frenchies—the Dionne Quintuplets.

"This time I go to Callander with real excitement," Hersholt began. "You see, the last time I worked with the Quints, they were not yet what you might call average children. That is, with babies born as they were, it takes time to catch up with the ordinary child of their own age. I saw them a couple of weeks ago and you'd hardly believe they were the same little tots of two years ago. Why, they're as smart as whips and every one of them is just as bright as a dollar.

"They know how alike they are, and try to fool you. I asked them which was Marie and with a mischievous twinkle in their eyes, each one said, 'Me!' When they get a new nurse, they try to fool her by mixing their things up a bit. All their clothes are initialed, so when the nurse comes in, Marie or Emilie or Annette (Continued on page 102)

Did you say an actor can't last? Jean's celebrating his silver jubilee!

Off Their Guard

Meet the cham-peen tennis player among women movie stars—Miss Ginger Rogers! Here you see her going after a fast one.

Photos by George Strock

Ginger Rogers and Gilbert Roland sit this match out to watch that cute little Sonja Henie perform.

Wham goes the first ball. With Sonja showing such speed and form how can anyone watch that pellet?

With all the grace and confidence you'd expect of a champ, Sonja trips airily onto the court ready for action.

Tennis Time

Alice Marble and all others had better look to their laurels now that Sonja's entered the field—for this gal has a way with her.

Remember Valentino?

After twelve years, The Sheik comes back, as beloved as always. Here are the highlights in his career. 1. Rudy with Nita Naldi in "Blood and Sand." 2. With Ian McLaren in "Monsieur Beaucaire." 3. With Vilma Banky in "Son of the Sheik." 4. With Gloria Swanson in "Beyond the Rocks." 5. Modern Screen pays tribute to a great artist.

Lily Pons says "yes" to Andre Kostelanetz, orchestra leader, in a surprise summer wedding at her Connecticut estate.

Not Juliet but Lily looking over the small group of guests for a special "catch" to receive her coveted bridal muff.

Wedding Bells

Gladys Swarthout, left, and Grace Moore get in a few hasty good wishes before the famous bride and groom take off.

Away they go with all the tell-tale trimmings! Notice Andre's license plates with his initials and Lily's lucky "12."

The Robert Youngs arrive at the famed Trocadero.

Here they are seated with Irene Hervey and Allan Jones who are married—or did you know?

Helen Hayes Night

Norma Shearer, who gave the party, talks it over with guest of honor, Helen Hayes, Jimmy Stewart and Charlie MacArthur.

This time that popular gal, Merle Oberon, arrived with George Brent.

Believe it or not the brunette with Buddy Adler is Anita Louise.

What goes on here? Margaret Sullavan hugs John Swope, her hubby's pal.

Claudette Colbert must have told a very funny one to Spencer Tracy.

Hollywood honors Helen Hayes for her stage portrayal of "Victoria Regina"

Tch, tch! His Operation

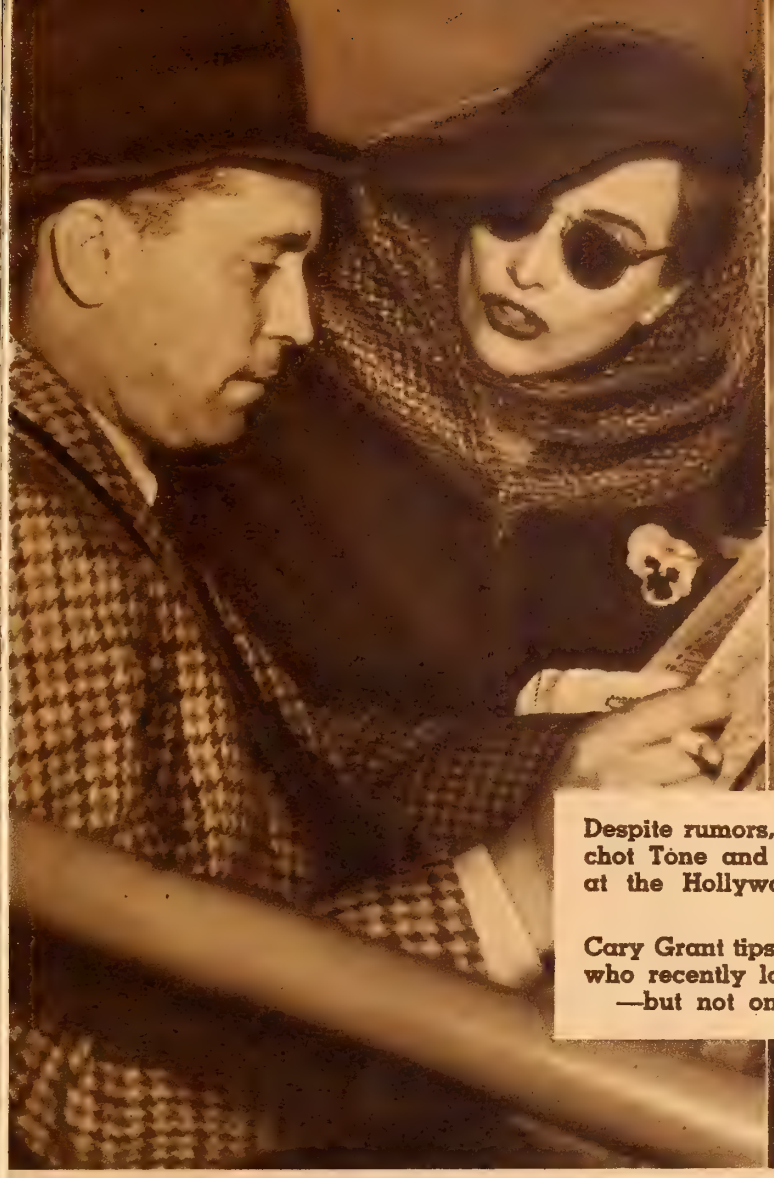
"Bergen, I'm in misery—but I'm not sick enough for this!" Charlie McCarthy protests as Edgar takes him to the hospital.

"We'll soon see what's eating you," the surgeon assures McCarthy as he probes under Charlie's bark to see what pains him.

During the operation, Edgar Bergen, Charlie's best friend and severest critic, paces the floor, anxiously awaiting news.

Baffled by the strange ailment, the surgeon says, "Your pulse is 104!" "That's good," says McCarthy. "When it hits 105, sell!"

Now, with squeaks and termites removed, and a few gadgets grafted on his limbs, Charlie receives floral greetings.



Bob Taylor, Babs Stanwyck and her adopted son, Dion, at the Horseshow. Ranchers Bob and Babs both exhibited horses.

Watching the Horses

Is the stars' favorite pastime—especially when their own perform

A couple of bookies? No, my pets, it's Harold Lloyd and Pat O'Brien picking the winners—they hope!

Despite rumors, here are Franchot Tone and Joan Crawford at the Hollywood Turf Club.

Cary Grant tips off Jack Oakie who recently lost fifty pounds —but not on the horses!

Gentleman farmer Clark Gable initiates Carole Lombard into some of the joys and problems of being a horse breeder.

Good News

by Leo Townsend

Step out with the stars—and our inquisitive reporter—and see what goes on in Movie Town

The Hollywood Turf Club, the town's newest racing plant, opened recently with everyone present but Bing Crosby and the sun. Bing had to work, and the sun was evidently spending the day in Florida. The track, bigger than Santa Anita but not as beautiful, took in $500,000 from 40,000 customers on opening day, and this is considered good, even in Hollywood. Main feature is an indoor paddock and thirty-six bars, where winners can celebrate, and the other 39,000 can work out their alibis.

●

The indoor paddock is an innovation with a real Hollywood touch. Located in the grand stand, it is surrounded by several tiers of standing room, where the celebrities can watch the horses before they go to the track, and vice versa. On opening day the following conversation, not verified, was reported. Seabiscuit: "Isn't that Carole Lombard up there in the third row?" War Admiral: "Yes, and I just saw Claudette Colbert and Barbara Stanwyck. You may not believe it, but I'm as nervous as a colt!"

●

Gene Autry is the most up-to-date cowboy in all Hollywood. Reason is that he now possesses a "saddle radio." The thing was designed by Gene's cousin, Raymond Priddy. The set fits in one saddle bag, and the batteries in another. And they say Gene's horse, Champion, is quite fond of the new contraption, and enjoys every program—with the possible exception of "The Lone Ranger."

The J. W. Rubenses (she's Virginia Bruce) and the John Barrymores, right, see "Alexander."

Newest romance in town is the George Brent-Merle Oberon twosome. They made their first public appearance at the "Victoria Regina" opening, in company with Jimmy Stewart and Norma Shearer. The Shearer-Stewart combination has no romantic leanings. They've been good friends for some time.

●

On the set of "Josette" Director Allan Dwan halted proceedings, turned to Joan Davis and said, "You know, it would help considerably if you read your script." "I know," said Davis, "but if I read the script it spoils everything for me when I go to see the picture."

●

With a convention in town and Helen Hayes opening in "Victoria Regina," mobs of people showed up outside the Biltmore Theatre to watch the stars. Many of the minor players in "Victoria Regina" stood out front until the last minute just to get a glimpse of the stars who were coming to watch them. When Janet Gaynor arrived with Tyrone Power the crowd closed in on them, and Mr. P. and an unidentified stranger had to hold them off until Gaynor rushed inside the theatre.

●

Our More-Darn-Fun editor, just back from a scurry through the society columns of a Hollywood paper, reports the high times and gay goings-on at a party given by the Gene Raymonds. The evening ended, according to the paper, with everyone "trying to whistle a tune after eating soda crackers." That's a dandy way to end almost any party.

●

Can anyone tie Don Ameche's record? He spent his college career in four colleges, and wound up a junior! The four schools are Columbus College in Iowa, Marquette in Milwaukee, George Washington in Washington, D. C., and the University of Wisconsin at Madison. And Don insists he left each one of them of his own accord—no special requests.

●

Kay Francis and Humphrey Bogart have struck up a close friendship on the set of their picture. "Just a nice family feeling," Humphrey explained, for one of Kay's exes, Kenneth McKenna, and Humphrey's ex, Mary Phillips, have just been married. A romance between Kay and Humphrey would make things even cosier, but Kay's still got the baron on her mind and Humphrey's marrying Mayo Methot in August, just as soon as her divorce becomes final.

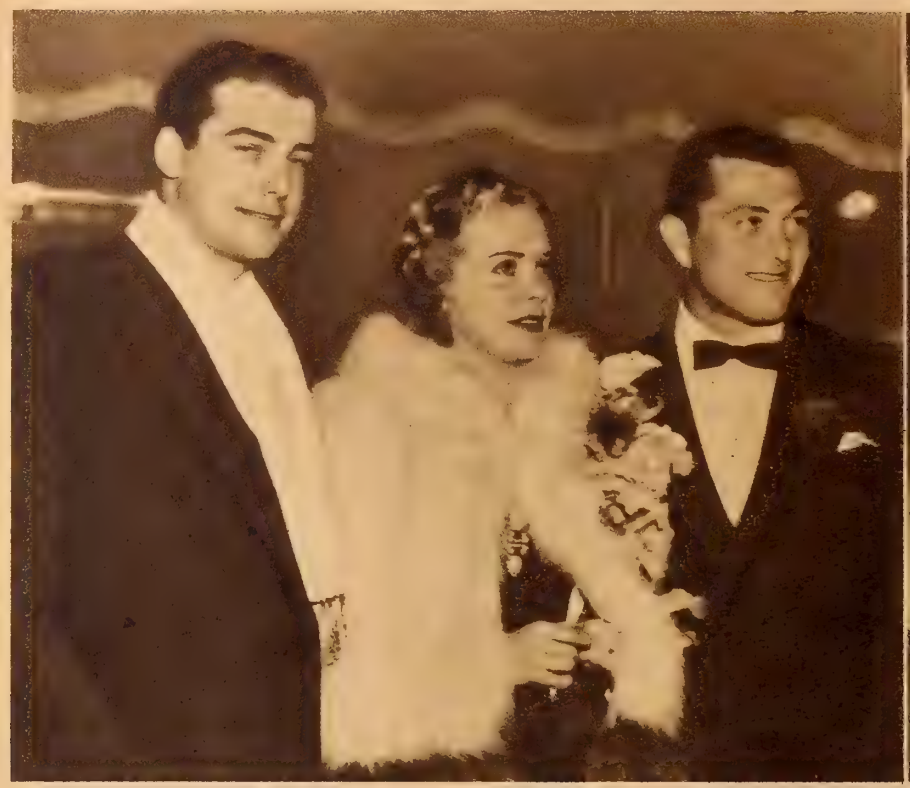
●

Out on "The Sisters" set, Anita Louise was having a terrific time. It was in a scene with Bette Davis, and Anita kept blowing up on her lines. At first it was thought that a crowd of visiting Shriners was the cause, but later Anita said she didn't even notice the fezes. Being in a scene with Bette, whom she ardently admires, was causing all the jitters.

●

Johnny Weissmuller reached the semi-finals in the golf tournament out at Lakeside. Ruby Keeler's at it again out there, too, after a year's vacation from golf. And Clark Gable's taking lessons every day—this being a sport he hasn't tackled with much interest heretofore. The reason seems to be that Carole Lombard can't see it for dust. Many of the stars are expert at more than one outdoor sport. Tennis, golf, riding and swimming top the list of favorites, with polo a close runner-up. They're a clever lot—these players.

The lady in the Hungarian wrap is Ilona Massey; the gent in the tux, Michael Whalen.



Here is Joe Penner with wife, but without duck, at the premiere.

Franchot Tone doesn't forget the little woman when away on a fishing jaunt. While on that trip with his father and brother back in the White Mountains he took time out to express a mess of trout, on dry ice, to his hard-working Hollywood wife. Each fish was named after a character she's played in pictures.

●

Out on the "Head Over Heels" set, Olivia de Havilland was Alice Faye, "Alexander's" heroine, rates both Richard Greene and hubby, Tony Martin.

Constance Bennett featuring a bird of paradise feather and Gilbert Roland.

having the time of her life. All mussed up, with stockings down, smudges on her clothes and face, hair snarled up, she told us she was never happier than looking like this, and hoped the script would call for a few more fights with Dick Powell. Dick is still wondering just how she meant that statement.

●

Two years ago when an ice carnival played Hollywood its co-stars were Jack Dunn and Sonja Henie. Dunn, the hit of the show, was immediately signed by one studio. Miss Henie was placed under contract by another one, and you know what happened to her. Dunn stayed for a year, drew a salary, and never got before a camera. Then he left that studio, went to a new one, and the same story repeated itself. At the moment, however, he's actually working. The picture, "The Duke of West Point," will be released soon, and if it's successful they'll follow it by starring young Mr. Dunn in "The Life of Rudolph Valentino," a story based on the career of the Great Lover of the silent screen.

●

Hollywood's a strange town! Bob Taylor, who only a year ago was billed as "beautiful" by his studio, is now a prize-fighter in "The Crowd Roars." Sigrid Gurie, the alleged Fjlash from the Fjords of Norway, admits that Brooklyn is dearer to her heart than Oslo. Luise Rainer, who has played a wife in every picture she has made, thinks the role is out of character in real life. And Mike Romanoff, the phoney prince, was jerked out of the cast of "Ellis Island," where he was portraying himself, because Darryl Zanuck didn't think he looked phoney enough.

●

Max Baer is back at Metro, but this time he's making a short. The other day a friend asked him whom he was going to battle in the picture. Said Max, "A couple of guys Bob Taylor softened up for me in 'The Crowd Roars.'"

●

Good Deed Dept.: When Joan Crawford appeared on a recent radio show she received a $5,000 check for her work. Instead of banking it, she turned the money over to the Motion Picture Relief Fund, where it will be used to help needy extras.

Una Merkel was pleasantly surprised the other night at the Ice Follies when a group of kids surrounded her and demanded her autograph. She was all set to sign when one of the youngsters said, "Gee, I wish we could see you skate sometime, Miss Henie." Una, who has never been closer to ice than a good cold lemonade, signed anyway.

●

Jane Withers is wearing makeup for the first time. In her recent picture it fell to the lot of Carmencita Johnson, Jane's long and true friend, to haul off and sock her. All for art, figured Carmencita, and she did a good job of it. The shiner was so glossy that the next day make-up men had to do a little retouching on it.

●

Bazooka Boy Makes Good: Bob Burns, reporting his income in court recently, revealed that in 1937 he made $400,000. He also revealed that in 1934, only three years before, his total take was $1500. Quite a difference, you must admit.

●

Maybe Charlie Middleton isn't too familiar to you as a name, but every kid in the neighborhood knows him. He plays that meanie dog-catcher in all the "Penrod and Sam" films. Other day he got out of his car on Hollywood Boulevard and was surrounded by jeering youngsters. Charlie thought he'd prove his heart of gold and his good intentions by taking them into a corner drugstore for sodas. They stopped hissing long enough to gulp the sodas, then took off. When Charlie came out he found all the air gone from his tires.

●

Jean Hersholt is considering the possibility of suing Shirley Temple for alienation of affections. Arriving in Callander this time for "Five of a Kind," he found conditions changed from his last visit.

Simone Simon combines business with social life—Gregory Bautzer, best beau and legal adviser.

A new romance? Well, Owen Davis, Jr., and Virginia Field, anyway.

Before, he was the movie star whose pictures always hung on the nursery walls, and the quints gave him their undivided attention besides. Now he says Shirley's pictures adorn the walls and the quints can be found gazing at her likeness right in the middle of a conversation with him.

●

On the set of "Suez" we joined a group talking to Tyrone Power between "takes." Tyrone was showing everyone a picture he had just received from a fan. It showed Tyrone Power, Sr., at the height of his stage career, with Mrs. Power and Tyrone, Jr. Power, Sr., had written across it, "This is my finest production."

●

Evidently the studio plans to make a dude out of Wayne Morris—or perhaps it's a direct reverse of the technique once used with Bob Taylor. At any rate, Morris, who usually plays he-mannish roles on the screen, has been ordered by his studio to spruce up a bit when he's not working. Studio executive eyebrows have been raised several times when Wayne showed up at previews sporting a sweat shirt.

Freddie Bartholomew is taller than Aunt Cissie these nights—a good excuse to step out.

●

They are searching for a young man to play the lead in "Golden Boy," and have just issued the requirements. The eventual Golden Boy, according to the studio, must have a head like Tyrone Power or Errol Flynn, eyes like Tyrone Power or Charles Boyer, a nose like Cary Grant or Wayne Morris, a chin and mouth like Robert Taylor or Franchot Tone, the courage of a prize-fighter and the soul of a violinist. Note to the studio: You're looking for Maxie Rosenbloom.

●

The lady and gentlemen farmers of San Fernando Valley all turned out for the recent Valley Fiesta and Horseshow. Among the proud owners and exhibitors were Clark Gable, Carole Lombard, Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck. Taylor's and Gable's horses each won several events, but the item of the day was that Barbara Stanwyck's adopted son, Dion, appeared in public for the first time with his mother and Bob Taylor.

●

Questions-Without-Answers Department: What prominent male star is a regular patron at a Hollywood beauty shop? He goes there because the locks women movie patrons swoon over need a twice-monthly marcel.

Our youngest diva, Deanna Durbin, attends with the Jimmy Wallingtons, of radio fame.

●

If you don't think picture dialogue has improved in the last few years take a look at the revival of "The Sheik," one of Rudolph Valentino's most successful films. In one scene, after Valentino has kidnapped Agnes Ayres and brought her to his boudoir, she asks, "Why did you bring me here?" Valentino replies, "Are you not woman enough to know?" And when Walter Long, the villain, has captured Miss Ayres, he orders one of his men to bring her to him, and to see that his current mistress is kept out of the way. Says Long: "Fetch me the white gazelle—and guard closely the jealous one."

●

That house Jimmy Stewart and John Swope just finished building cost them $5,000 apiece. It's strictly bachelor's quarters, but they have an agreement. First one to get married has an option on the other's half of the house. If the little woman likes the place, the unwed co-owner takes his $5,000 and moves out.

●

There was much hemming and hawing on opening day of the Hollywood Turf Club when people noticed Bruce Cabot with Barbara Stanwyck. One local columnist even announced a rift in the Taylor-Stanwyck romance. What happened was that Taylor had to work and couldn't go to the track that day, so Barbara and Zeppo Marx, who share a box at the Club, asked Cabot to join them.

Claudette Colbert, back from Europe and lovelier than ever, with hubby, Dr. Joel Pressman.

Now—Apply Vitamin A the "Skin-Vitamin" Right on Your Skin

FOR YEARS we have been learning about the importance of the various vitamins to our health. A-B-C-D-E-G—who hasn't heard of them?

Now comes the exciting news that one of these is related in particular to the skin! Lack of this "skin-vitamin" in the skin produces roughness, dryness, scaliness. Restore it to the diet, or now apply it right on the skin, and our experiments indicate that the skin becomes smooth and healthy again!

That's all any woman wants to know. Immediately you ask, "Where can I get some of that 'skin-vitamin' to put on my skin?"

Pond's Cold Cream now contains this Vitamin

Pond's Cold Cream now contains this "skin-vitamin." Its formula has not been changed in any way apart from the addition of this vitamin. It's the same grand cleanser. It softens and smooths for powder as divinely as ever.

But now, in addition, it brings to the skin a daily supply of the active "skin-vitamin."

Use Pond's Cold Cream in your usual way. If there is no lack of "skin-vitamin" in the skin, our experiments described in the next column show that the skin is capable of storing some of it against a possible future need. If there is a lack of this vitamin in the skin, these experiments indicate that the use of Pond's Cold Cream puts the needed "skin-vitamin" back into it.

Begin today. Get a jar of Pond's, and see what it will do for your skin.

Same Jars, same Labels, same Price

Pond's Cold Cream comes in the same jars, with the same labels, at the same price. Now every jar of Pond's contains the active "skin-vitamin"—Vitamin A.

MRS. ALEXANDER C. FORBES, young New York society woman, grandniece of MRS. JAMES ROOSEVELT: "With Pond's Cold Cream, my skin looks soft—not rough or dry."

MRS. WILLIAM RHINELANDER STEWART, beautiful as when she came out: "The use of Pond's Cold Cream has helped me to keep my skin fresh and bright and smooth."

Most People don't know these Facts about Vitamin A and the Skin...

First Published Reports

In 1931 and 1933, deficiency of Vitamin A ("skin-vitamin") was first recognized as the cause of specific skin disorders. In the cases reported, a liberal Vitamin A diet made the dry, roughened skin smooth and healthy again. Later reports confirmed and extended the evidence of this.

In hospitals, other scientists found that Vitamin A ("skin-vitamin") applied to the skin healed wounds and burns quicker.

Tests with Pond's Creams

Experiments were made concerning possible causes of deficiency of "skin-vitamin" in the skin.

I. Dietary—The skin may lose "skin-vitamin" from deficiency of it in the diet. In our tests, skin faults were produced by a diet deficient in "skin-vitamin." Without any change in the diet, these faults were then treated by applying "skin-vitamin" to the skin. They were corrected promptly.

II. Local—Our experiments also indicated that even when the diet contains enough "skin-vitamin," the stores of this vitamin in the skin may be reduced by exposure to sun, and also by exposure to warm, dry air together with frequent washing. In further tests, marked irritation resulted from repeated use of harsh soap and water. This irritation was then treated by applying the "skin-vitamin." The skin became smooth and healthy again. It improved more rapidly than in cases treated with the plain cold cream or with no cream at all. The experiments furnished evidence that the local treatment with "skin-vitamin" actually put the "skin-vitamin" back into the skin!

All of these tests were carried out on the skin of animals, following the accepted laboratory method of reaching findings which can be properly applied to human skin.

Even today it is not commonly known that the skin does absorb and make use of certain substances applied to it. Our experiments indicated not only that the skin absorbs "skin-vitamin" when applied to it, but that when "skin-vitamin" is applied to skin which already has enough of it, the skin can store some of it against a possible future need.

The Role of the "Skin-Vitamin"

The "skin-vitamin" functions like an architect in regulating the structure of the skin. It is necessary for the maintenance of skin health. When the skin is seriously deficient in the supply of this vitamin, the skin suffers.

Signs which may indicate "Skin-Vitamin" deficiency

Dryness, Roughness, Scaliness resulting in a Dull Appearance.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

MOVIE REVIEWS

★★★ The Rage of Paris

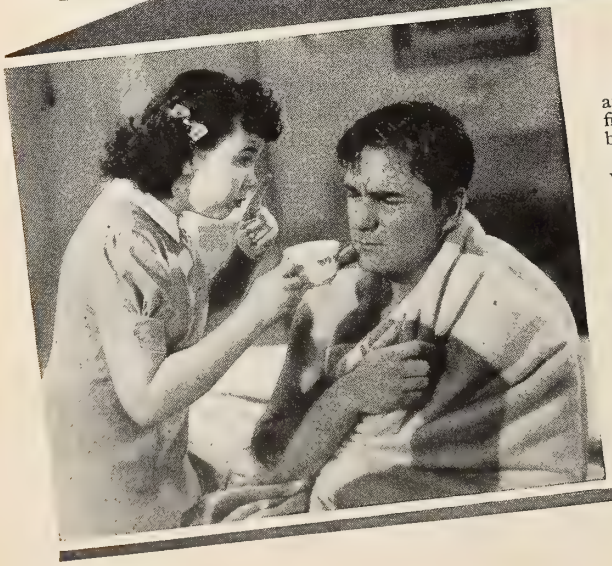
Universal and everyone else has been waiting for some time to get a look at Danielle Darrieux's first American picture. Well, it's here, and the little French miss seems to have everything. She has looks and personality, is adept at either comedy or drama, and, to top it all, she positively does not sing. And when Washington sees her they'll probably cancel the French war debt.

The story contains nothing startling, but the dialogue sparkles, and Miss Darrieux, assisted by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Helen Broderick, Louis Hayward, Mischa Auer and others, keeps things moving at a merry pace.

An impoverished model looking for work, Miss D. goes by mistake to the offices of Mr. Fairbanks, and starts to remove her clothes. Mr. Fairbanks, being a movie gentleman, is horrified, thinking she's trying to compromise him and grab some of his money. Situations get more complicated from there on, and the result is a sleek and streamlined modern comedy which will win Miss Darrieux a large American audience.

Most of the footage goes to La Darrieux, who scores tremendously in every scene. Fairbanks, Jr., is splendid as the bewildered young executive. Directed by Henry Koster.—Universal.

★★★ Blockade



A good picture which should have been a great one, "Blockade" offers first-class melodrama, even though it fails to be an outspoken and fearless denunciation of the Spanish Insurgents. In many ways, however, it is a brave and courageous film, and one which will be talked about.

Its story, for the most part, is formula stuff about the beautiful spy (Madeleine Carroll) and the honest soldier (Henry Fonda), and only in its closing moments does it attain the stature it should have had throughout.

Both Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda are competent, although Miss Carroll's screen personality still lacks warmth. Fonda's closing scene, in which he denounces war as murder, is the picture's most effective moment.

War scenes are typically present-day. No soldier-to-soldier fighting is shown. Instead, the Japanese and Italian method of killing non-combatants is depicted. Best scene shows the people's faces as they watch a relief ship, loaded with precious food and supplies, being sunk by the enemy.

The supporting cast also is outstanding. Director William Dieterle does a masterful job with the material at hand, and Werner Janssen's musical score is a decided asset.—United Artists.

★★★ Keep Smiling

Jane Withers is at it again—and with redoubled energy. Spinach and red meat must be this little star's beauty secret. Here she fights her way in Hollywood and comes out on top. It's all believable and highly entertaining too.

The story this time is an improvement upon the last few Withers' vehicles, with a soft-pedal on the leading lady's boisterous spirits, and the excellent supporting cast, principally Gloria Stuart, Henry Wilcoxon and Helen Westley, given a chance. Henry Wilcoxon is the uncle who plants Jane in an exclusive eastern boarding-school so he can go about his business unmolested—his business being the very lucrative one of a Hollywood movie director. Jane gets considerably miffed at her schoolmates when they tease her about being an orphan, so she hocks her wardrobe and hies herself to California. The sight of Mr. Wilcoxon in the midst of bankruptcy and d.t.'s would have discouraged any ordinary niece, but Jane plunges right in to restore fame, fortune and Gloria Stuart to her adored uncle. The two gals get their heads together, and from then on Demon Rum hasn't a chance with Uncle Henry. Directed by Herbert Leeds.—20th Century-Fox.

More Reviews on page 70

BY LEO TOWNSEND

Schiaparelli Alix Lanvin Lelong

• LANVIN'S breath-taking evening frock—pleated flattery in brown net. "For added drama," Lanvin says, "wear Cutex HEATHER nails."

• Afternoon suavity in dark-green jersey with silvered ornament—by LELONG. For finger-tip finesse he recommends delicate Cutex LAUREL.

• SCHIAPARELLI'S sleek sophistication in prune crepe. For a final dramatic touch she sponsors winy Cutex HEATHER nails.

• ALIX'S artfully simple pink and gray tweed coat. Box-pleated and bound in black suede. For finger-tip charm Alix suggests Cutex LAUREL.

sponsor Cutex Laurel and Cutex Heather

YOU'RE headed straight for a glamorous Fall with either of the two new Cutex nail tones sponsored by Schiaparelli, Alix, Lanvin, Lelong!

They have Swish and Swing . . .

The new Cutex LAUREL is a romantic, cyclamen pink—for rose, beige, green, brown, gray, blue and all the new raisin shades.

The new Cutex HEATHER is deeper, with a strong hint of purple. Wear it dramatically with gray, brown, green—the new red-wine shades—blue, pink, yellow.

Add a giddy Parisian touch to your finger tips this Fall—with Cutex LAUREL and Cutex HEATHER. See the other chic, new Cutex colors, too: Clover, Thistle, Tulip and Robin Red!

THE NEWS IS: All twelve smart Cutex colors are now available in the new Cutex Salon Type Polish . . . a new polish which takes a little longer to dry than Cutex Crème Polish, but wears days longer! Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris.

Send for Complete Home-Manicure Set Special Value . . . Only 25 Cents

Northam Warren Corporation, Dept. 8-M-9, 191 Hudson St., New York (In Canada, P. O. Box 427, Montreal)

I enclose 25¢ to help cover postage and packing for handsome Cutex Set, including Cutex Oily Polish Remover, Oily Cuticle Remover, Cotton, Orangewood Stick, 4 Emery Boards and a choice of Cutex LAUREL ☐ or Cutex HEATHER ☐ Salon Type Nail Polish. (Check shade desired.)

Name_____

Address_____

City State

CUTEX Polish

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 68)

★★ Josette

This is one of those light and frothy numbers, the enjoyment of which depends entirely on your mood. On the credit side it has two first-rate performances by Bob Young and Don Ameche, and it presents Simone Simon in a role more suitable to her own particular talent—the ability to look and act extremely unsophisticated.

Ameche and Young, partners in a fish cannery, are trying to save their frivolous father from the clutches of a singer, whom they know only as Josette. The old reliable mistaken identity theme is introduced, and they are given to believe Simone is the villainness of the piece. The mademoiselle, not knowing this, falls in love with Ameche, and he, of course, thinks she's after him for his money. In the course of all this, there are several bright moments and enough good gags to make the picture fairly entertaining and amusing.

Gordon and Revel have written two songs, both of which are probably much better than the treatment Simone gives them. Her voice is small but adequate, but her accent is still so unruly that it's impossible to understand the lyrics. Evidently they were about love. Joan Davis, Bert Lahr, Paul Hurst and William Collier, Sr., turn in able performances in the supporting cast. Allan Dwan directed.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Cowboy From Brooklyn

Full of "Yippees" and a "Howdy, stranger" or two, this film capitalizes on the current vogue for Westerns by offering a broad burlesque of all that's generally held sacred in the average horse opera. The hero, for instance, is Dick Powell, a maverick if the West ever saw one. To make matters worse, he's a crooner from Brooklyn, in the cow country only because he's stranded there on his way to Hollywood. Landing a job at a dude ranch, he is "discovered" by a New York theatrical agent who changes his name to Wyoming Steve Gibson and whisks him back to dear old Broadway.

Some audiences will find "Cowboy From Brooklyn" overboard on farce, while those who expect nothing subtle will enjoy it immensely. Funniest sequence is the one in which Wyoming Steve, who is allergic to animals, is hypnotized into winning a bulldogging contest in a Madison Square Garden rodeo.

Dick Powell's role is a stretch on the imagination, but the rest of the cast fares better. Priscilla Lane is excellent as the dude rancher's daughter, Pat O'Brien furnishes top-notch comedy as the theatrical agent, and Dick Foran gets laughs as the Western heavy. The supporting cast is also very good. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.—Warner Brothers.

★★ You and Me

A "Crime Doesn't Pay" story told by unusual methods, "You and Me" is an interesting picture, but its sombre theme will keep it from winning much audience favor. There are no long stretches of dialogue, for the camera tells as much of the story as possible, and the film moves along with speed and punch.

Background of the picture is a department store, where George Raft and Sylvia Sidney are clerks. Both are paroled convicts. They fall in love and marry. Raft's old gang wants him to return to crime, but he refuses. Later he learns about his wife's past, and in a blind rage gives up all his good intentions and rejoins the gang. They're caught in an attempted robbery and given a graphic lesson on why crime pays no dividends.

Director Lang employs off-stage voices and other unusual devices to hammer over his point, but there are spots in the picture where audiences will doubt the effectiveness of his methods, especially in the scene where Raft's gang speaks in chorus. Performances by Raft and Miss Sidney are expert, and there are fine supporting roles by Harry Carey, Barton MacLane and Vera Gordon. "You and Me" was directed by Fritz Lang.—Paramount.

★★ Three Blind Mice

When three sisters, one in search of a millionaire and the other two simply looking for good husbands, leave their Kansas chicken farm to try their luck you can be reasonably certain that the fortune hunter marries a poor but handsome collar ad, and her two sisters wind up with millionaires. It's all supposed to prove that life is a pretty funny proposition, and that what Loretta Young really wanted was not money but love.

The sisters (Loretta Young, Pauline Moore and Marjorie Weaver) pool $5,000 and go to Santa Barbara, where Loretta poses as a wealthy society girl, with Miss Moore and Miss Weaver as her secretary and her maid. When it turns out that Joel McCrea, with whom she has fallen in love, has no money she promptly gets herself engaged to David Niven, who has. True love conquers her lust for gold in the last reel and she marries McCrea, turning Niven over to Pauline Moore. Marjorie Weaver, in the meantime, has married a bartender (Stuart Erwin) who turns out—surprise!—to be a millionaire.

"Three Blind Mice" is acceptable entertainment, but suffers because its characters are all so phoney. Only exception is Binnie Barnes, who plays Niven's sister. She is an amiable toper who wanders through the picture contributing many of its brightest and funniest moments. William Seiter directed.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Lord Jeff

There's nothing new or startling in this one. It's hokum, and it's all been done before, but it has lots of audience appeal. The story follows the pattern laid down by "Captains Courageous." This time Freddie Bartholomew is once more a snob, and a pain in the neck to most of his young colleagues at a British nautical school. To make matters worse, young Mr. Bartholomew is also a member of a gang of jewel thieves. But a year at school and association with such guys as Mickey Rooney bring out the good in the villainous young man, and everything ends up happily.

Performances are splendid throughout. Freddie Bartholomew, considerably taller than when you last saw him, proves he is still one of the best juvenile actors in the business, and Mickey Rooney turns in another of his finished and very professional performances. A new youngster named Terry Kilburn, however, walks off with most of the acting honors, and starts off on what will surely be an auspicious screen career. Charles Coburn, Herbert Mundin and Gale Sondergaard head a competent cast of supporting players. Sam Wood directed.—M-G-M.

★★ Having Wonderful Time

On the stage, "Having Wonderful Time" was a smash hit, a tragi-comedy about the Bronx, and a tired little stenographer who spent her two-week vacation at Kamp Karefree in the Catskills, hoping to get away from the drab pattern of every-day life. In the picture version they've taken the Bronx out of it, and judging from the result, the Bronx must have been the heart and soul of the play.

As Teddy Shaw, the stenographer, Ginger Rogers is as plausible as the script allows her to be. She handles expertly both her dramatic and comedy moments. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as a waiter at Kamp Karefree, also struggles valiantly against bad casting, but his clipped English accent belies the picture's supposition that he is a young lawyer from the Bronx.

Lucille Ball is excellent. So is Lee Bowman, and in fact all of the supporting cast. Alfred Santell directed.—RKO-Radio.

David Niven, Loretta Young and Joel McCrea supply plenty of triangle situations in "Three Blind Mice."

Extra! Mickey Rooney saves Freddie Bartholomew from being a snob—in their new movie, "Lord Jeff."

"Don't tear up the snapshots of that boy you're mad at"—

says DOROTHY DIX, famous adviser on life and marriage

"YOUTH AND LOVE are both impulsive. How many times I have heard the story of a sudden lovers' quarrel, marriage to someone else—and then regret.

"It needn't happen. Suppose you do have a quarrel. Instead of rushing home and destroying the mementos of your association together, save these reminders. Be sure to save the snapshots you have made of your young man. This is most important, for nothing else will so rekindle your lost feeling.

"You may start going with someone else. But before you decide to marry, take out the snapshots of the one from whom you parted in anger, and look at them earnestly. They may save you from a decision that would bring sorrow all through life."

* * *

Whether you're expert or inexperienced—for day-in and day-out picture making—use Kodak Verichrome Film for surer results. Double-coated by a special process—it takes care of reasonable exposure errors—increases your ability to get clear, satisfying pictures. Nothing else is "just as good." And certainly there is nothing better. Play safe. Use it always . . . Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

LOVE COMES ONCE

(Continued from page 34)

know that I have got to face it alone.

"Perhaps I am not spiritual enough to be willing to wait for a reunion in the other world. I want Irving here, with me, as he was. I know that we will meet again in the other world. I do have that belief. But it does not console me for the years we have lost together here on earth.

"It is because I think the world is such a beautiful place," Norma said gently, "that I want him here to share it with me. When the one you love is with you the world is beautiful and kind. When that one is gone the world should stop being beautiful, because its very beauties make your heart ache.

"People say that it is the ones who are left we should be sorry for, not the ones who are gone. That isn't true for me, either. It is not for myself that I grieve, but for him. Perhaps I feel this so keenly because he loved life so. Knowing how he loved it, how can I help but suffer for him who has so early been taken away from everything that he loved?"

THIS very honesty, I thought, may be Norma's healing in the end.

"I don't want to sound morbid," Norma repeated, "nor dramatic. And yet how can anyone be anything but dramatic about the three great arteries of life, birth, love and death? How else can I tell the truth of what I feel? And I think it is right for me to tell it now. For months, I couldn't tell people. Stories were written. I didn't bother to contradict them.

"Irving taught me," Norma said, "to let the little things slide. He taught me to care only for the big things. Sorrow is one of the big things."

I said, then, "But you are young. Life flows into emptied channels, don't you think so? Love again, perhaps, another kind of love will surely come to you."

"No," said Norma.

"Do you, then," I asked, "believe that there is only one love in a lifetime?"

"I do," said Norma, gravely. "I do believe that there is only one really great love. I know you are thinking about the people who marry three and four times in one lifetime. But that, I think, must be because they have never found the one real love. But you see I did find it."

"Then surely you have had the best life has to offer?"

"Yes, I have," Norma said simply, "and if I can find any trace of comfort in anything, it is that I knew it. There are people who only realize how deeply they loved someone after he is gone. I have been spared that, thank God. There wasn't an instant of our time together that I didn't know it, and so there wasn't a minute wasted.

"It isn't the length of time that matters, it's the loveliness. That's true, I know. It is youth that matters most, I'm sure of that, too. It is when you are young and with the one you love that you are really living the most keenly. We had that, Irving and I. And I am grateful for it. But it is also true that when you are with the one you love, every age is sweet. It would have been sweet to us to have gone down the years together. There was so much for us still to do.

"I know," said Norma, her eyes holding now the trace of a smile, "that there was a story written about the probability of my marrying again, as well as speculation about whether I would return to the screen. Well, that was only natural. I can only say that there have been no such problems because everything else was so very unimportant. I do not believe that I shall ever marry again. I like the idea of having one love in my life. I am afraid I am a terrific and incurable sentimentalist. For, if ever I should marry again, which seems unthinkable now," Norma was saying, "I imagine it could only be a compromise, and I dislike compromises. Many women, after all, lead very full lives alone.

"As to my working again, that came about gradually. There was no one moment of illumination in which I made a decision to return to the screen. Sidney Franklin came to talk to me about doing 'Marie Antoinette.' I will never forget how kind he was. He talked to me about the script, about all the work Irving had done on it, Irving's ambition for it, his hopes of it. I felt that I couldn't bear to do it, but that I couldn't bear to have anyone else do it either, then that I couldn't bear not to have it done at all. It was the last picture Irving worked on, the last picture plan he worked out for me. We couldn't let that go for nothing.

"I don't like to say that I did it for Irving. That sounds too trite, somehow. I don't like to say that I am 'carrying on' for Irving. But I think that is what it amounts to. You know, Irving was so proud of my being an actress," Norma's laugh was tender. "He was so proud of my being on the screen. However trite it may sound, I do know that, in returning to the screen, I am doing what he would want me to do.

"Not," said Norma, "that he would have allowed his pride in me to cloud his judgment. That was still another of all the uncounted reasons why his faith was so valuable to me. I know how honest it was. When I was working I never bothered Irving with details. But sometimes, if I didn't feel a big scene was going the way it should, I would slip to a phone on the set and ask him if he would just stroll down, sort of casually, and tell me what he thought.

"The first time I came back to the studio was the hardest thing I had to do. It was when they had the Convention and Exhibitors' luncheon. I had always attended those luncheons with Irving. And Mr. Mayer felt that I should attend this one. I felt that I should, too. I made up my mind to be so very adequate," Norma laughed a little, at herself. "I dressed so carefully. You should have seen how carefully I made up! I even determined to make a little speech. Thank goodness, I did take the precaution of wearing a large hat which shaded my eyes. Because that was the only time when I have disgraced myself publicly. I think it was because, when I faced all those men, I knew that their thoughts were with me. I wasn't able to carry it off as I had wished to. But they were so very understanding.

"It is the kindness of people," Norma told me, "which has given me the realest warmth I have known. When Irving was here I don't think I knew many people very well. I often feel that they didn't know me. That was because all the emotion in me went to Irving. I have always thought of myself as quite a devoted mother. Certainly I love the children dearly. But I did not give them what I am giving them now. And I realize it."

"I wonder why you really came back to work. Fame means nothing to you."

"Oh, but it does!" said Norma sitting erect. "It means a great deal to me. I love it. I am just as ambitious as I ever was, and for the same reason—for Irving, for those who believe in me. There is a certain pride and excitement, too, in keeping something you have worked hard for and achieved.

Can this poised young lady be that little harum-scarum Bonita Granville! Believe it or not, she's all but grown up!

AND habit is very strong. I found that to be true when I came back, when I realized how effortlessly I slipped into working again. I don't believe in people's throwing over jobs they have begun. I have a feeling, too, that the screen is my destiny and that while I live, I must follow it. And there is another thing—it helps time pass quickly. I just don't want there to be too much time, that's all.

"It is when the day's work is over that it is hard, the going home."

"You don't mean," I said, "that you go home alone, have dinner alone?"

"'Yes,' to both questions," smiled Norma, "I want it that way. When I am working I go home, play with the children for awhile, then have my dinner in bed on a tray. That makes it easier for me than sitting alone in the dining room. Then I do a little studying, and go to sleep. I find that I am sleeping better, too, now that I am working again.

"I shall continue to live in our house by the sea. I have been advised to leave it because of the associations. But that is exactly why I shall continue to stay there, because of the memories. Why should I run away from the memories which are the most beautiful things in my life? I want to be in the home Irving and I shared so happily together. It is the nearest I can come to having things the way they were."

Norma walked to the door with me when I left, after we had talked about the children and how she thinks it quite probable that little Irving may follow in his father's footsteps.

I tried to thank her for the time she had given me, the confidence given us all, and she said, "I think those who have been interested in me have a right to know how things were with me, how they are with me now, and I am happy to tell them."

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD . . .

where a Complexion Care has to work—

—and in your own home town—

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE

(Continued from page 33)

relaxes by harmonizing with the boys, swapping jokes, or playing a little poker. The boys, Gene included, don't head for bed till after midnight. And then they're up again at four-thirty. It's a he-man life, I'm telling you. City slickers just couldn't take it.

I asked him about his health. He grinned and said, in that soft Oklahoma drawl of his, "I can't remember ever bein' sick." Having knocked on the nearest piece of wood, he added, "I've been banged up a bit, takin' falls off horses, and things like that, but that's all."

"How come you don't get a little more sleep?" I wanted to know.

Gene grinned again. "I'm a restless hombre, I reckon. Sleep seems a waste of time if there's anything else to do."

Yet he has none of the vices associated with late hours. Song may keep him up, but not wine or women. He doesn't drink. His kind of work demands steady nerves. For the same reason, he doesn't smoke. As for women, "I'm happily married," he says simply. He's too thrifty to have any interest in night-clubbing or gambling. He doesn't play poker except on location, and then the stakes are too small to matter. Bridge is his favorite card game.

GENE used to be a telegrapher on the Frisco Railroad, and, as he says, he "took to singing" to keep himself awake. First, he had a saxophone. "But I couldn't sing and play the saxophone, too, so I started whangin' a guitar." Again Gene grinned. "It gives me the shudders to think what might have happened if I hadn't got rid of that saxophone. I probably wouldn't have had a friend for fifty miles around. But that guitar made me all kinds of friends. I wouldn't have got anywhere in this singing business without it.

"Jimmy Long and I—he worked for the Frisco, too—we used to get together and sing till all hours, all the old cowboy tunes. Finally, we got tired of the same old repertory all the time, and started makin' up new songs of our own. That's how we happened to write 'That Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine,' which was a hit almost right away. I guess people sort of liked the change from Mammy songs.

"That started everything. Jimmy said I ought to go to New York on my vacation and sing it for the recording companies. I went—just a green kid from the sticks—but I couldn't get to anyone important. After hangin' around one office for three days, I decided I'd give up. But, before I went back home, I was goin' to sing just once, if it was only to a reception girl. So I took out my guitar there in that waitin' room, and sang real soft. Nathaniel Shilkret, the conductor, happened to go through while I was singin'. He told some executive inside about me, and I got an audition. But they advised me to go back to Oklahoma, get on some local radio station, practice up a bit and come back in a year or so.

"I got on a station in Tulsa, as 'Oklahoma's Yodelin' Cowboy.' That was how I met George Goodale. He was a newspaper reporter. He wrote a little story boostin' me, and I was mighty grateful. After I came out here to Hollywood, I saw this fellow in a restaurant one night. He was workin' on a Los Angeles paper. I asked how he'd like to be my press agent and he's been with me ever since. Now he's my manager. I can tend to my work and let George do my business worryin'. He's the most expert worrier you ever saw.

That Tulsa program led to making recordings. The recordings led to a radio program in Chicago, which led to personal appearances, which led to my findin' Smiley Burnette, which led to a better radio program, which led to Hollywood. In Chicago, I met Nat Levine, who was producin' Westerns. He was lookin' for 'something different.' He thought maybe a singin' cowboy was the answer. He had the courage to try it out. And—well, here I am."

How does it happen that he always plays a character named Gene Autry? "Don't look at me—I didn't start it. In my first picture, they billed me under my own name because I had been in radio. And, somehow, they've just kept on."

Ask him to explain his phenomenal success, and he answers, "You've got me stumped there, pardner. I'm no Adonis, and I'm no actor, and I don't aim to pretend to be. I guess I've just been plumb lucky. Lucky to be able to sing a little, and to have Smiley with me. I wouldn't make a picture without him."

Where did he find Smiley?

"Well, I was doin' a show in Rockford, Illinois, and I needed an accordion player in the act. The theatre manager said there was one on a little radio station down in Tuscola, Illinois, named Smiley Burnette. I called Smiley on the phone, and asked how much he was gettin' a week. 'Seventeen dollars,' he said. 'I'll give you thirty-five to join my act. Think it over and let me know.' He said, quick as a flash, 'I've done my thinkin', brother. When do I start?'

"My first glimpse of Smiley was gettin' out of a little Austin, piece by piece. Just lookin' at him set me to laughin'. I figured audiences would react the same way. And I wasn't wrong. Smiley's a born clown. And a whiz on any one of fifty-two different musical instruments without ever havin' had a lesson. We're a good team. I've never had a singin' lesson."

Gene has nerves of iron, which helps to explain his easy-going naturalness. But there have been a couple of times when he hasn't been so easy-going. Once was in a dance pavilion in St. Paul. One of the local boys, a big bruiser, kept passing close to Gene, making audible cracks about "that drugstore cowboy and his masquerade clothes." Gene stood it for a while. He didn't want to start any trouble. But, finally, his patience wore through. He told his heckler, "All right, you asked for it"—and let him have it. The fellow woke up sometime the next week.

But he has never been annoyed by youngsters pestering him for autographs or words. "If they've got time for me, I've got time for them," he says simply. And that one remark tells a whole story about Gene Autry.

He reckons that the worst experience of his Hollywood career happened last year, when two twelve-year-old Oklahoma boys, one a cripple, hopped a freight train for California "to work on Gene Autry's ranch." The police picked them up, of course, and sent them home. But Gene felt pretty badly that "a couple of kids got a wild idea on account of me." Letters that tickle him are those from mothers who testify that Johnny washes his neck now, since being assured that Gene Autry positively lathers his.

(Continued on page 76)

Diane Rochelle, Hal Roach's talented chee-ild, made her screen debut in "Swiss Miss." Pasha, of the exotic name, is the four-footed gent with her.

Margaret Sullavan

STAR OF METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S "SHOPWORN ANGEL," REMARKS...

"Hollywood's Make-Up will accent Your Beauty"

THERE'S something different about the make-up created for the stars of motion pictures by Max Factor, Hollywood's make-up genius. The secret is color harmony shades of powder, rouge and lipstick to harmonize with your individual complexion. Once you try it, you'll be amazed that make-up could make you look so much more attractive. Note coupon for special make-up test.

Satin-Smooth
POWDER

Choose your color harmony shade in Max Factor's Powder...then note how perfectly flattering the color is to your skin. Smooth and soft, too...hours later your make-up will still look lovely...$1.

Lifelike
ROUGE

Harmonize rouge with powder. Max Factor's Rouge will give your cheeks the charm of natural beauty, and also blend perfectly with your Max Factor powder. Creamy-smooth, it blends easily... 50¢.

Super-Indelible
LIPSTICK

For lasting lip color, apply lipstick to inner, as well as outer surface of lips. You can do this with Max Factor's Super-Indelible Lipstick because it's moisture-proof. Color harmony shades...$1.

NEW! Max Factor's Normalizing Cleansing Cream

★ ★ ★ Here's a sensational new kind of cleansing cream originated by Hollywood's make-up genius that will "agree" with your skin whether it is dry, oily or normal. 55¢

Max Factor ★ Hollywood

"COSMETICS OF THE STARS"

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR, Max Factor's Make-Up Studio, Hollywood:
Send Purse-Size Box of Powder and Rouge Sampler in my color harmony shade; also Lipstick Color Sampler, four shades. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and 48-page Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Society Make-Up".....FREE 24-9-45

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BROWNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BRUNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	REDHEAD Light ☐ Dark ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color) Light ☐
Olive ☐	Dark ☐
SKIN Dry ☐ Oily ☐ Normal ☐	AGE	If Hair is Gray check type above and here ☐

Lynn Roberts Featured in Republic Pictures

BEAUTIFUL EYES

Yours for the Asking with MAYBELLINE Eye Beauty Aids

Pale, dull, scraggly lashes simply ruin every chance to possess that "loveliness complete" which we all aim for in our make-up.

What can you do to make your lashes, brows and eyes just as beautiful as the rest of your make-up? Try this delightful, easy method:

First—form graceful eyebrows with Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. Next—touch a bit of Maybelline Eye Shadow to your upper lids, blending it lightly outward toward your temples, concentrating it near the lash line. Third—and most enchanting of all—darken your lashes with your Maybelline Mascara, beginning lightly at the inner corners of your eyes, and deepening the mascara at the outer corners. Maybelline is harmless, tear-proof, non-smarting.

Now glance into your mirror! You'll be delighted with the pleasing charm and added beauty which Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids give you.

Nightly—smooth a bit of Maybelline Eye Cream into the sensitive skin area around eyes—to guard against those persistent little crowsfeet and eye wrinkles. It helps marvelously. For eye make-up in good taste—insist on Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids.

Maybelline

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Maybelline Solid-form Mascara in gold metal vanity, 75c. Refills 35c. Maybelline Cream-form Mascara in dainty zipper case, 75c. Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. All in Black, Brown, Blue. Maybelline Eye Shadow, in Blue, Blue-gray, Brown, Green, Violet. Maybelline Special Eye Cream. Purse sizes of all Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids at all 10c stores.

When Gene went to the Academy dinner this year, he wore a tux—which he had to borrow from a pal. He didn't own one. He owns only one business suit, and hasn't worn it in years. He wears cowboy clothes off-screen as well as on. "I don't feel comfortable in anything else. And," he adds frankly, "I figure it's good showmanship."

In "Gold Mine in the Sky," you'll see him wearing what he wears in private life, a white sombrero, a dark open-neck gabardine shirt with a small scarf knotted around his throat, grayish-tan jodhpurs, a figured jacket, and figured cowboy boots. For the picture he used just a touch of grease-paint. Not for glamor's sake ("Heaven forbid!"), but for protection. Gene is so fair complexioned that he sunburns violently. "Wouldn't I look good in close-ups, blistered and peelin'?" he demands, sardonically.

OFF screen, as on, he has a cowboy vocabulary. And he has a cowboy sense of humor, not a Hollywood sense of humor. His idea of something funny is an ingenious prank, not a well-turned wisecrack. And, working with cowboys, he's in prankish company. "They've got to be doing something for laughs," Gene says, "to forget how hard they work."

On this trip, the boys brought along a man-size dummy, pilfered from the prop department, dressed it up in men's clothes, and sneaked it into the script girl's bed while she was at dinner. Her bedtime scream scared mountain lions five miles away, and gave the boys a laugh for a week. But the gag that all of the boys, Gene included, chuckled about most in reminiscence is the one pulled on one of his leading ladies. Never mind her name; maybe she's reformed now. But she didn't like the idea of playing heroine in a Western and went around with her nose up in the air. So the boys gave her a real reason for elevating her nostrils. They spread limburger cheese on the back of her bed.

Mrs. Autry visited the location one day during this trip. Like Gene, she is blue-eyed and fair, with a friendly smile. She is younger than Gene, who is twenty-nine. She was going to Drury College in Springfield, Missouri, when he met her. Unlike Gene, Ina doesn't go in for Western garb. She likes horses—she is the only one besides Gene who can persuade Champion to do his finest tricks—but confesses she doesn't ride a great deal. She makes no attempt to share Gene's limelight. Sharing his private life is enough for her. And they're devoted to each other. When Ina is around, Gene has no time for anyone else.

Gene's hobbies are horse-raising, books on the old West, and song-writing. "If you can call what I do writin'. I can make 'em up, but somebody who knows music has to set 'em down."

Either by himself, or in collaboration with Smiley Burnette and other harmonizing cronies, Gene turns out between twenty-five and thirty songs a year, most of which find their way into Gene Autry song books.

His favorite cowboy song is "The Last Round-Up." He admits that its sentimental melancholy "gets him every time." It makes him homesick.

That homesick note creeps into his own compositions constantly. For all the attractions of Hollywood success, he still can see the attractions of riding herd on the plains, under a wide dome of sky. But, as a composer, Gene is versatile. Nostalgia isn't his only theme. Sometimes he indulges in picture-painting with words and music, other times, in homely philosophy, still other times, in humor.

But his song that best sums up Gene, himself, is probably "Money Ain't No Use, Anyway." The chorus goes:

"When hard luck o'ertakes me,
And everything goes wrong,
I bear my burden with a smile
And I sing my little song.
I laugh at all my troubles,
And never wear a frown—
And that's the way
I'm always gay
And make the world go 'round."

WATCH OUT, WAYNE!

(Continued from page 37)

experience, and a lot of work, and at least I knew what it was about. But even then I didn't feel that acting was anything to get too serious about. Not as I do now.

"Perhaps I was kind of fresh and giddy about it all, because acting had just never been one of my ambitions. I didn't go to the Pasadena Community Theatre school to study acting. I was interested in directing and I still want to be a director some day. Acting was only a sideline. I never played leading parts or anything like that. Over a period of three years I appeared in forty-two plays and in forty-one of them I played old men with beards and aches in their backs. Naturally roles like that don't give anyone movie-hero complexes. I never cared two hoots about being in the movies. I had never even been inside a studio. When I finally did come out from behind my beard in one play, a casting director happened to be in the audience—so here I am, and now that I'm here I guess maybe I'd better do some worrying about it. Naturally any man, after he gets into a thing, wants to go to the top—for his pride's sake. Only that's not so easy to accomplish. There aren't as many tricks, as there are in college, for example.

"In college the trick I used was the best old trick in the world. In high school I had learned that if you held some student body office, the teachers just naturally supposed you must be a leader in your studies, too, and they always gave you the benefit of the doubt. That's how I got by, anyway. I tried to work the same thing at the Los Angeles Junior College.

WHEN the freshman president was to be elected I had about fifty fellows planted in the audience to nominate me, and I prepared a whopping speech, memorized every word of it. But unfortunately the chairman called on everyone else first, and my friends didn't have a chance until the very end. Out of seven I was the last to be nominated, so I was the last to speak, too. Well, the other speeches were so long-winded that after about an hour and a half, I caught myself going to sleep. I figured the audience must be about asleep, too, so when it came my turn I decided not to make my speech at all. Roosevelt had just been elected, so I just got up and said, 'Well, kids, I hope we have beer by fall'—and sat down. They loved it. They elected me. After that, studies were a cinch!" Incidentally, when you ask Wayne what reforms he accomplished during his presidency, he answers quickly, "Oh, up to then they had had only one class dance a year—I had three!"

You see, this six-foot-two youngster is more than just brawn and muscle. There is a good sized brain clicking away under that shock of blond hair. When Wayne first began making seventy-five dollars a week, he took out an annuity which required him to sock away fifty out of every seventy-five. That's not only good saving, but quick thinking. He let the insurance salesman get him before any of the town's glamor salesmen did.

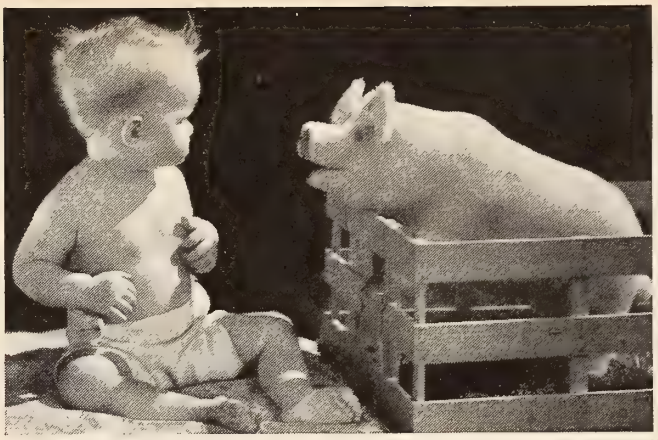
And Wayne Morris has never yet fallen for any of the town's usual pastimes. He has been in a night club only three times in six months. And he still sticks to dollar-ninety-five cent sport shirts. He still lives with his family, and does not have a swimming pool. And he has no personal publicity agent. In fact, the only extravagance he has allowed himself is his big car.

When you remember Wayne's youth and all the temptations that beset a Hollywood star in his position, the wonder is that he has kept his head at all. When you mention that, Wayne gives his mother credit for whatever sagacity he has shown.

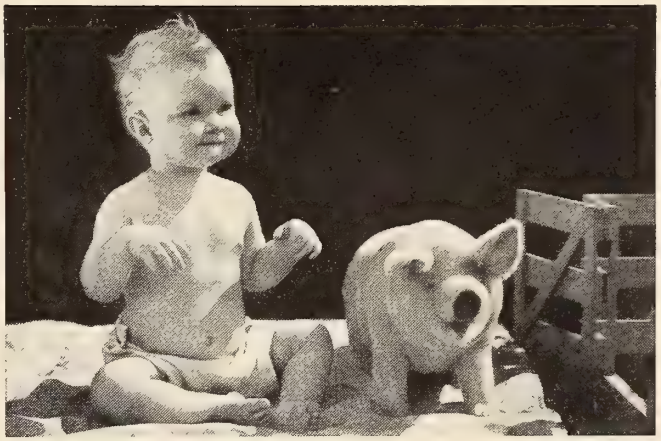
What we hope is that Wayne Morris will not become so serious that he'll sacrifice any of these refreshing qualities. We can, however, see his problem. All about him, and especially on his own lot, he sees stars like Paul Muni and Bette Davis who attempt to live their roles, who spend weeks and months on research before ever starting a characterization, and he knows that if he is ever to be an actor of this calibre, he must hurry to catch up on his preparatory work.

HE has tried to spend some time with the studio dramatic coach, and the coach says that he's a hard worker when he gets down to it, but often other lures break in. Perhaps Clark Gable calls him for a round of golf at Lakeside. His long legs ache to start out on a golf march, and he has difficulty concentrating on how Mr. Ibsen meant a particular line to be delivered. Or perhaps a dozen other things, and Wayne can scarcely be blamed for putting off till tomorrow what he might better be doing today.



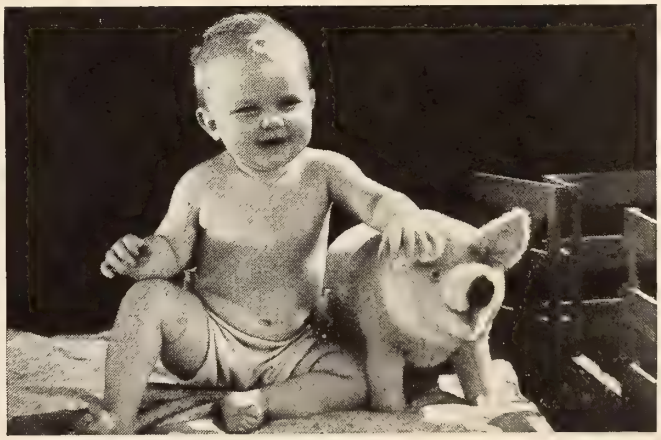
There is one thing on which he is very definite, however, and this is very significant in his character. Ask him who he admires above everyone else in Hollywood and he will tell you, "Harry Carey. Not only because he's been such a fine actor all these years—he's been a star since 1908 and he's still making $2,500 a week—but because he's stayed such a grand fellow. And I especially admire him for the way he lives. He has a ranch, and lots of friends, and he and his wife live so simply. That's the kind of life I'd like.

"There was a time when I used to think that adventure was the only thing, but I found that this adventure stuff is a lot of baloney. I thought it would be romantic to be a forest ranger for a year, so I became one, but the only fires I ever put out were the ones I started myself in the kitchen stove.



"Once I shipped as a waiter, too, on a two months' cruise to Australia and the South Seas. That was a crazy kind of a trip. There were fifty college fellows working on that boat, and I'll bet we had more fun than the passengers. They used to ask us to sit at their tables, so what kind of a trip was it? An adventure? No. It was the same kind of a pink tea party you could have anywhere.

"No, what I like and what I aim at is a steady kind of contentment, having fun as I go along and always working in a little progress. But I'll never have a ranch like Mr. Carey's unless I get busy right quick and put my shoulder to the wheel first, will I?"



Well, it's a hefty shoulder, anyway, and with the pep and vigor that this young Adonis has to put behind it, the wheel ought to start spinning any day now. Only be careful, Wayne Morris. In reaching for something new, don't lose what you already have. An odd hundred thousand of your most devoted admirers might be awfully disappointed!

• "Why, Mr. Pig, I think that's downright shocking! Really? You don't believe in bathing?... Merciful goodness, I didn't suppose there was anybody left with such old-fashioned, moss-grown ideas!

• "Something's got to be done about this!...Let's see...what's been wrong with the baths you've had? Soap in the eye? Or...Wait—I see it all now! You've never had Johnson's Baby Powder afterward!

• "Hold on—don't run away! You're going to have a brand-new thrill! Soft silky Johnson's Baby Powder to make you feel cool as a breeze and happy as a pig in clover. Now...who's afraid of the big bad bath?"

• "Wouldn't you like to feel a pinch of my Johnson's? It's so lovely and smooth!"...Made of fine imported talc—no orrisroot—Johnson's Baby Powder helps to keep babies' skins unchafed, free from prickly heat, and in good general condition. Try Johnson's Baby Soap, Baby Cream, and Baby Oil, too. This new oil is cleansing, soothing, stainless, and will not turn rancid.

Johnson & Johnson
NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

JOHNSON'S BABY POWDER

Copyright 1938, Johnson & Johnson

"HURRY UP WITH THAT TEABERRY BEFORE THE BOSS RINGS" . . .

Hours of dictation can't outlast that extra-tasty flavor of Clark's! It's genuine teaberry, fresh as sunshine after rain . . . smoothest-chewing gum you ever knew. ●Get to know Clark's Teaberry—reach for that familiar red package on the stands, everywhere!

Reach for the Bright Red Package!

You'll like CLARK'S TEABERRY GUM

A YEAR WITHOUT MY JEAN

(Continued from page 27)

answer all of the letters, give my thanks for all of the gifts and thoughts, personally. So far it's been the one thing that has been impossible to me, to really answer those letters. The time will come when I will be able to answer every one of them, will be able to tell the dear writers what they have meant to me. I have kept them, every single one. But the appreciation I have felt for all the letters, telegrams, cables, the thoughts of me because of my Baby, have been so close to me that I have not been able to answer them individually.

On last Mothers' Day I had some 250 wires and cables from all over the world. And not less than 3000 letters. On the Baby's birthday I had, I suspect, at least 100 telegrams and cables and well over 500 letters. Even on my birthday, there were wires and letters. How they knew it was my birthday, I cannot imagine. And the great majority of the letters said this one thing, "I know that your Baby would have wished me to remember you today." Thank you, thank you, every one.

People who have had illnesses or trouble have written me that they really and sincerely believe that the Baby helps them. They feel, I know, how she really loves humanity, how she wishes them well. She loves people so truly, that Bunny. I don't know why, but a line the Baby used often and often to repeat to me comes to my mind now. It was, "A heart set on love can do no wrong." A line from Confucius. The Baby's heart was "set on love." And now the love of her comes to me, in full measure.

HOW I wish that I could tell you how much the great loving kindness of the people who love my Baby has meant to me during this first long year. It is the love of her friends all over the world that has helped me more than anything else, excepting the Baby herself. That and the gifts they have sent. One dear soul who loved the Baby, someone neither she nor I have ever met, made the most exquisite miniature of the baby. It is done on paraffin, done in delicate pastels, a different likeness of the Baby on each side. And it is hung like a pendent watch, framed in the most delicate gold filigree.

Not long ago Bill had a letter from the Captain of one of our big steamships. He wanted to get in touch with me and didn't know how. He thought that if he addressed Bill at the studio, Bill would tell him. It was a fine letter, with such beautiful tributes to the Baby. He came to Hollywood, called the studio, was transferred to Bill, who gave him my number. His boat was leaving that same day. He told me that all he wanted was to go over to the Baby. She had been, he said, the greatest inspiration in his life. She had sailed through the Panama Canal with him on one of his ships before she went into pictures. And he has never forgotten her.

He told me he has lost not only a friend, but the livest, most pulsing thing in his life. She was so vibrant, so alive, and at the same time so kind. When she became Jean Harlow, he realized that Jean Harlow and the lovely child who had sailed with him were one and the same. I told him to go to the Baby, of course. His ship sailed for San Francisco that night, to be in port for two days. He flew down from San Francisco, stayed near the Baby for four hours, so they told me, and then flew back again to his ship. Such loyalty and devotion continually touch and warm my heart.

Time and again people come to my door, people I have never met, nor heard their names, many of them. They tell me some loving little thing the Baby did for them, some service she rendered. Or they tell me how much happier they are for having watched her as she passed by, never forgetting the smile, the wave of the hand, the friendly greeting.

I haven't been able to let these dear people know of my gratitude as I should have liked to do. I am trying to do so now, however feebly, because the Baby was so grateful for every favor, for every act of service done for her. Never did Brown, our houseman and our loyal friend, bring her anything, a tray in bed, a parasol, a handkerchief that she didn't have a brilliant smile for him, that she didn't make him feel as if he was doing her a very great favor. She was like that. I must try to be like that, too.

So, through this long year, I have been working for a greater realization, a greater consciousness. And my Baby has helped me. She was always wiser than I. She is so much wiser than I now.

And I have held fast to the certainty that my Baby is safe. It may seem curious that when the Baby went away, loving her as we did, it never occurred to Bill or to me to worry that she would be taken care of. When she traveled here, on the few occasions when she went away from me, I was so concerned about her. I worried about whether she would reach her destination safely, whether she had warm enough clothes with her, whether she would eat properly. Yet when she went away this last time I didn't worry about whether she would be cared for. I knew.

And always I remember the words she said to me, just two short weeks before she went away, "The greatest experience I have ever had is just around the corner, darling, and oh, I wish that I could tell you how happy I am!"

Then she came back to tell me about it.

Some days are harder to bear than others, of course. There come days when the human part of you aches and is desolate with an unbearable poignancy and pain.

One such day came to me five weeks ago last Sunday. I do not know how to translate this experience into words. There are no words to use, really. But I feel that for those others who are bowed down beneath their pain, who cannot get on top of it, I should speak of it. Mind you, I want to speak of it. It was so joyous, so bright, so beautiful. It has given me such an uplift of life and light that I would do anything in my power to share it. It is only that words are so capable of misinterpretation, are so faulty to express facts when facts are not common human experience. I can only try.

Bill Powell is still far from well, as you can see. Here he is with George Raft at a recent prize-fight.

This day was a Sunday—a beautiful, sunny day. The house was quiet and I was alone. Alone and so bowed down beneath my sorrow that I felt I simply could not raise my head above it. I could not get on top of it. Everything that had sustained me seemed to have fallen away from me. I could not bear it.

I SAT alone in my living-room here and leaned my head against the back of the chair and just said aloud, "Oh, Baby, Baby, Baby!" And she came to me. I do not mean as a vision made manifest out of my bitter need. There is a difference. I mean that she walked into the room, her footsteps light and soft because she was wearing the little white rubber-soled sneakers she always wore around the house. She was wearing her white slacks, one of the white fuzzy sweaters she loved to wear, and in her hand she carried one of her large white silk handkerchiefs, polka-dotted in red.

She was there with me, warm and breathing and real. I saw her with my eyes. I felt her. She came to me and took me in her arms and just held me there. I can't say for how long. I just know that I felt such a sense of joyousness and brightness and light as had not been mine since she went away. All at once I was healed and at peace. I was on top again.

Then my Baby turned and walked out of the room, into my bedroom. I could hear her moving around in there, humming to herself. I knew what she meant. She meant what she always meant when everything was all right, when everything was beautiful and serene, when she would say, "Isn't this swell? Isn't everything great?" That's what she said then.

I told you I could not find words. Nor can I. I only know that she was here with me. I only know that she left me, if not with a song in my heart, at least with a consciousness of song again.

And I know that if the Baby made that effort to get to me with joyousness and light, I would be selfish, morbid, I would dishonor her memory if I turned my back on the gift of joy she brought me. For those who love her, I tell this.

She used to say, laughingly, "My Old Lady can do anything!"

And I said to her, that morning, whether with words or only with my heart, I don't know, but I said, "All right, Baby, your Mommie will come through."

After she left me I began to think. All right, I want to do everything the Baby wants. That has always been my endeavor. Now I can keep on doing what she wants.

Ever since that bright morning I have had such a sense of uplift as I cannot possibly describe. And I know that she is saying to me, as she used to say when I had done something she considered worth the doing, a deed she thought unselfish or strong, she would say, "Well, General, I'm proud of you!"

Now I honestly feel that I am doing something for the Baby again, something that will make her stand at salute the way she used to do and say, "Well, General, I'm proud of you!"

Now again I can feel, "Here is another day in which I am able to do something for the Baby." Every time now that I

MARVELOUS FOR COMPLEXIONS, TOO!

You'll want to use this pure, creamy-white soap for both face and bath.

Cashmere Bouquet's lather is so gentle and caressing. Yet it removes dirt and cosmetics so thoroughly, leaving your skin clearer, softer... more radiant and alluring!

NOW ONLY 10¢
at drug, department, ten-cent stores

TO KEEP Fragrantly Dainty—BATHE WITH PERFUMED

CASHMERE BOUQUET SOAP

can smile, every time I can be kind, every time I can go out and be myself again, I hear the Baby saying, "Oh, darling, I am so very proud of you."

So every day I'm trying to do the things that will make her still prouder of me. And when you are trying to please someone you love, there is solace in that.

I couldn't fail my Baby. I just couldn't. If I did, if I hid away in the dark, let myself be submerged for lack of the touch and sight and sound of her, after she made the ultimate effort to give me proof of what, in my human weakness, I asked proof of . . . if I failed now to wear the joyousness and brightness she brought me, then I would so definitely prove that I am not what she thought I was.

She wanted people happy. She used to say, "If Mother's happy, there's nothing the matter with the world." So what can Mother do but be happy? She shed happiness. Why shouldn't I shed it for her now? And that's what I'm going to do.

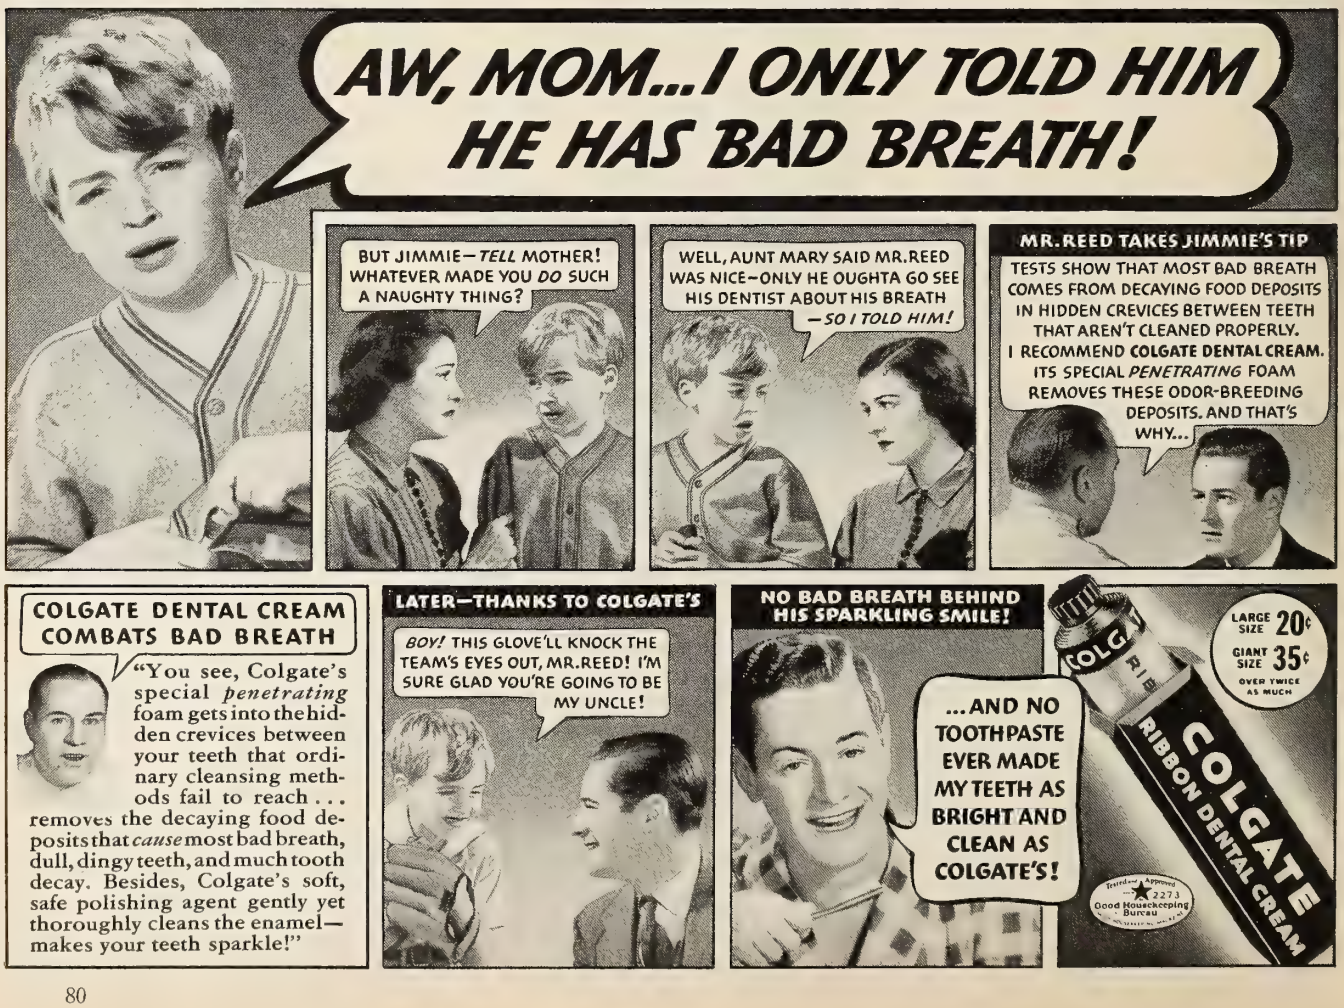
Since that day I have never gone under again. I am all right now. I have not lost, and will not lose, that sense of uplift she brought me with her own hands, when she held me in her arms. I am on top of it. And every day of my life now I work, I hunger, I dig and delve to have the understanding that the Baby has.

I do not feel separated from her, so the word "reunion" has no meaning for me. But I believe that we must make a conscious effort to reach the higher states of consciousness. That is why I am working, so that when it is my time to go I can go at once to the plane of consciousness where she is. I don't want to have any more delays. I must waste as little time as possible away from my Baby. That's why I'm striving so very hard now.

Until the Baby helped me as she did, it didn't come easily. It meant work. It still means work. You don't begin to read Shakespeare in kindergarten. But when you are ready for the greater understanding, when, through a natural inclination or through something that bows you so low there is nothing here to turn to, then if you seek diligently and humbly, you will find what you seek.

I FIND my help in the Bible as, for countless centuries, others who have been weary and heavy laden have found help. I have no creed, no denominational religion. But I read the Bible. And there, I believe, we learn what Life is—what all of life is, not merely this classroom we are attending now. I take one verse at a time and, if it takes me ten days, I study it until I get to the bottom of it, learn what it really means.

There is the tenth verse of the thirty-third Chapter of Isaiah, "Now will I rise, saith the Lord; now will I be exalted, now will I lift up Myself." That is such a definite promise. It just is. I have found the Bible to be a definite, material prop, one on which I can lean, one which strengthens and colors and inspires everything I think and feel and do.



As the end of the first year came to a close, I realized that I should leave the little house where I lived after the Baby went away. I took a small apartment. I had to let Brown go, loath as I was to part with him. I felt that I must live even less expensively. I cannot let Bill do for me the things he would do so gladly. I'm simply not made so that I can accept favors, however eagerly offered.

For the first time in my life I am going to do my own cooking! I'm ashamed to say that I don't know how. It's just been one of the things I've never been called upon to do. Now that I am called upon to do it, I know that I can.

The only real loss I feel in leaving the house is that I cannot take my Baby's portrait with me. I searched everywhere hoping to find a room large enough to hold it. I couldn't. And so Bill is taking her. He wants her in his house so much. Bill has most of her clothes in his home, too. He can care for them better, more safely, than I can. I have a little bed-jacket she loved, the lovely robe she wore when she went to the hospital, all of her toilet articles and accessories, all of her pictures, from the first darling baby ones to the last darling baby ones. For the rest, things do not matter very much to me any more. I shall live nicely. Dainty things will always be important to me, of course. The Baby would expect that of me. But material possessions are unimportant to me now that the Baby is not here every day to enjoy them with me.

I shall go out more now than I did. I have my few dear friends around me. I spent a week with my Mommie and Daddy a few months ago. Bill and I are together a great deal. There is never a day when he doesn't phone me, talk to me for an hour or more. We spent the anniversary of the day the Baby went away together, there where she is resting.

I am all right now. I am my old self again. And I don't want people to dread to see me, fearful of my grief. I don't want to dampen their glowing thoughts of the Baby who was so vibrantly alive. The love they gave that Baby with a joyous gratitude, I want to repay with a gratitude that is also joyous. Now, thanks to her, I have found the way to do that.

KEEPING TABS ON TAYLOR

(Continued from page 29)

as concrete. "How did that happen?" I asked curiously.

"That was funny," to hear Bob tell it. "According to the script, I was supposed to break my right hand in a bout with Bill Gargan. But this happened before I got to Gargan—in a fight with Mickey McAvoy. His head got in the way of my thumb, or vice versa, I don't know which. I thought it was only sprained, and kept on fighting. But that night the doc insisted on taking x-rays, and the x-rays said it was broken. He had me bandaged up in splints till today."

AND there you have an interesting little foot-note on the life of an actor. A prize-fighter with a broken thumb would refuse to fight. An actor playing a prize-fighter won't let a broken thumb keep him from working. The show goes on. It goes on, that is, if the actor is a Robert Taylor. Bob hasn't yet picked up those two Hollywood weaknesses, temperament and self-pity. And, I venture to say, he never will. He isn't the type.

I asked him if the new and sudden change from romantic roles to athletic roles was his idea, something he had demanded.

"I don't have anything at all to say about what I will or won't do. The studio decides that. And that's all right with me. They know more about this business than I do. Whatever they want me to play, I play, and that's that."

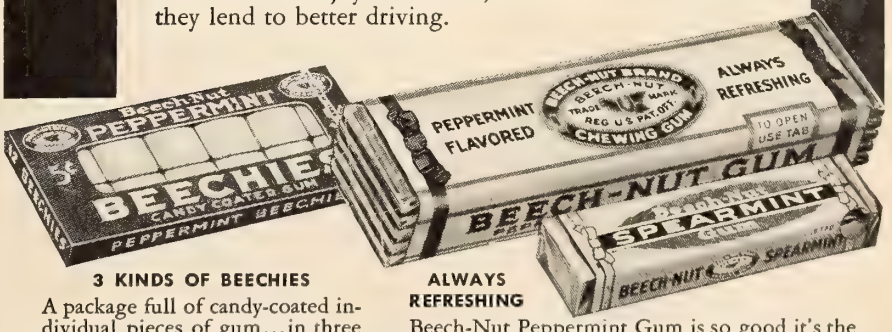
All right, he hadn't had anything to do with his kissing scenes becoming fewer and fewer. (The script of "The Crowd Roars" had nary a one for him.) But how did he feel about it? Was he glad to escape from young-lover roles into young he-man roles?

It was a blunt question. Bob answered it bluntly. "There isn't any 'escape' about it. I'm enjoying this prize-fighter role, sure. But I enjoyed the role I had in 'Camille,' too, and that was all love story. When you get right down to it, that's the only real love story I've done. All that matters to me is whether a role is good or not. That's more important than what type of role it is."

How did he feel about the new emphasis on the fact that he has a physique, as well as a face? That got a laugh out of him. "I don't read my publicity," he quipped.

Bob puts it thus, "The good things they might say about you would make you feel better. But the bad things would make you feel worse. Either way, if you believed your publicity, you'd work up complexes. And, boy, I want to stay normal."

There is a story going the Hollywood rounds that, after Bob's late lamented verbal mauling by the New York press, Clark Gable told him, "Don't let it get you down. As long as they put your name in headlines, and spell it right, and you keep on turning out good pictures, you don't have to worry." I told Bob the story, asked him if it were true.



"It's a new one to me," Bob grinned, looking up from the tasty business of dunking a bit of hash in a pool of ketchup. "When Gable and I get together, we talk about anything but pictures or careers. And I mean anything but."

We both concentrated on food for a few moments. Then I asked him if he is happier today than when he was a struggling newcomer, or if happiness is still just a bit elusive.

Have you tried chewing gum while you're driving?

Many drivers tell us—and many laboratory tests explain why—chewing gum helps ease nervous tension under pressure, aids in reducing your feeling of fatigue. Just as gum helps an athlete keep "on his game," so it helps a driver keep on the job, alert and yet relaxed. On long trips chewing gum helps to relieve driving drowsiness. Keep a package of Beech-Nut Gum or a box of candy-coated Beechies always handy in the pocket of your car. You will enjoy their fresh, rich flavor . . . and the aid they lend to better driving.

3 KINDS OF BEECHIES

A package full of candy-coated individual pieces of gum...in three flavors...Peppermint, Pepsin and Spearmint. Select the kind you like.

ALWAYS REFRESHING

Beech-Nut Peppermint Gum is so good it's the most popular flavor of gum in America. Beech-Nut Spearmint has a richness you're sure to enjoy.

BEECH-NUT GUM
is always refreshing

P.S. Have you tried RUMMIES, the new Beech-Nut Candy with the different and delicious flavor?

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON FOOD

This Millionaire's Dish at 3¢ a portion does wonders for budgets!

IT'S grand to be able to save money on food and still give your family meals that are both delicious and nourishing!

Imagine a ready-cooked, savory and appetizing dish you can put on the table in ten minutes, which all your family will enjoy, and which costs less than 3 cents a portion!

Serve Franco-American as a main dish whenever you want an appetizing spaghetti meal. Give it to the children for lunch, with milk and fruit. They love it! Whenever you have meat or fish left-overs, just combine these with tasty Franco-American Spaghetti, and you'll have a dish that will bring your husband back for more.

Delicious Franco-American certainly saves work. And how it does save money! The big 15¾-ounce can usually costs only ten cents.

Franco-American is not just an ordinary ready-cooked spaghetti. That extra-good sauce —made with eleven savory ingredients—with selected cheddar cheese and fine, sun-ripened tomatoes—makes Franco-American stand alone! Why not order several cans of Franco-American Spaghetti from your grocer today?

Franco-American SPAGHETTI

Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY, Dept. 69
Camden, New Jersey. Please send me your free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."

Name (print)_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

"A bit elusive," he said, chipperly. Then, more seriously, he explained, "No, I don't think I'm quite as happy as when I started out. I don't have the anticipations I had then. Everything was new to me then. Life was less cluttered up. I had just one worry—whether or not anyone would ever notice me.

"When you start out you think, 'If I could just get started, if I could only make a thousand dollars a week, if somebody would just send me a fan letter, or ask me for an autograph!' You think that then you'd never have another worry. Then you suddenly realize that your worries are only beginning.

"When you start out, your one ambition is to make good. You try hard. You fight for recognition. But suppose you get more than you bargained for? It's a thrill, yes. But it's a little disillusioning, too. The recognition isn't based on as concrete a foundation as you'd like. Luck has entered into it—plenty.

"You're on a spot when that happens. You have to work five times harder than you ever worked before, pray five times harder to get good pictures and give good performances. You've got to pour an awful lot of concrete to prop up that recognition. Luck doesn't last forever."

THAT was a long speech for Bob—and one of the frankest, most self-revealing that he has ever made. It explained, for the first time, why he has gone from one picture right into another for three solid years without once complaining, "Hold on here! I'm being overworked!"

I asked him how many pictures a year his contract now called for.

"As many as there's time for," was his answer. An amazing answer, from a top flight star. Most of the top flighters make as few as possible, to whet public curiosity about those few. Bob feels that the more he makes, the more experience he'll get, and the more he'll have to offer as a star.

If the script is ready in time, he will do another picture before starting "Northwest Passage" in August, a picture with Wallace Beery tentatively entitled "Stand Up and Fight." (It isn't a fight picture. It is an outdoor story with a Western setting.)

Bob doesn't have the common star-attitude that a star is an artist who has to be in the mood, inspired, to do his best work. "If doctors had to be in the mood to do successful operations, the morgues would be full. When doctors can't be temperamental, where do actors get that stuff? Acting is a job, the same as doctoring, only less important."

He had said that he found happiness "a bit elusive." But wasn't his life becoming a bit easier?

He pursed his lips. "No, I wouldn't say that. I'd say, the older you get, the more complicated your life becomes, no matter who or where you are. The older you get, the more you think, and the more confused you get about how to stay away from behind the eight-ball. Yet, it's fun."

When Bob was first becoming famous, his mother told me that the biggest change she had noticed in him was that he was moodier, worried more. Did that still hold true?

Reluctantly, he nodded. "Probably more so. Only," he grinned, "I don't show it. I can't afford to. People would think I was mad about something. It's silly to worry about things when one can't do anything about them. But," he grinned again, "if I feel like worrying, I just sit down and worry awhile."

Was he "all set" for the future, financially, no matter what happened?

"No, I haven't got enough yet to feel 'set.' I've got a little real estate, some government bonds, some annuities. I haven't thrown my money away or been reckless with it. But I haven't been 'in the money' very long. Not," he quipped, "long enough."

DID he think his recent radio stint as master-of-ceremonies had done anything for his popularity, given fans a new idea of his personality?

"I don't know whether it has or not. I didn't try to be different, or to become a radio personality, a Jack Benny or a Don Ameche. Going on the air has never seemed part of my work. It's been something incidental, like a personal appearance. I've never had any urges for a radio career. I'm concentrating on my screen job."

What would he say have been the biggest changes in his life, the past year?

"Well, on the screen, the biggest change is they've stopped putting me opposite big feminine names. I'm more or less on my own now. And I've got out of dress clothes, which is a relief. No man ever feels normal or natural in a starched shirt.

"Off the screen I'm edging more and more toward the quiet life. I don't go dancing more than once or twice a month. I very, very seldom go to a preview. When I get out to the ranch at night, the temptation is to stay there and just whiff that alfalfa. In England, I didn't go anywhere. I've taken to relaxing. I've had to. I've found out that I can't bat around and work, too."

But, being Bob Taylor, doesn't he get a little restless in all that quiet?

"A little, sometimes," he admitted. "But I work it out of my system with long walks, or horseback-riding, or frog-hunting. I've got a frog problem out there. All the frogs in the San Fernando Valley get together on my place for nightly choral work. And I've got an alfalfa problem, too. I have thirty acres, ten of them for the house, lawn and paddocks, the rest in alfalfa. There's been one cutting already, with five more to go this year and I already have more alfalfa than I can use. Now I'm trying to figure out whether to spend a thousand bucks, put up a storage barn, and get twenty dollars a ton, selling it later, or take the twelve-fifty a ton I can get now."

Is he sold on the rustic life for keeps? "I've always had a farm urge, ever since I was a kid. And it's going to take me a long while to get enough of it. I'd like to be able to buy a ranch I came across up in the hills, eight hundred acres, with a year-round stream flowing through a beautiful valley they call Barley Flats, with oaks and sycamores all over the place. I showed it to Gable last Sunday. Now he'd like to buy it too. But there isn't a chance

Solution to Puzzle on page 14

R	O	B	E	R	T	■	E	B	S	E	N	■	T	A	Y	L	O	R
O	L	I	V	I	A	■	S	A	L	L	Y	■	E	L	A	I	N	E
L	I	T	■	T	R	Y	■	R	O	E	■	A	R	E	■	S	E	T
A	V	E	R	A	G	E	■	B	E	A	■	C	E	C	I	L	I	A
N	E	R	O	■	E	S	N	E	■	N	E	E	D	■	K	E	L	K
D	R	■	S	A	T	■	E	R	R	O	L	■	O	H	O	■	L	E
■	■	W	E	B	■	T	S	A	R	S	■	■	E	N	S	■	■	■
A	S	H	■	E	B	B	■	■	■	■	■	C	A	R	■	T	A	U
T	H	E	A	T	R	E	■	■	■	■	■	R	U	S	S	E	L	L
L	O	E	W	■	U	N	■	■	■	■	■	A	R	■	O	W	E	N
A	R	L	E	D	G	E	■	■	■	■	■	B	A	R	B	A	R	A
S	E	E	■	A	H	S	■	■	■	■	■	S	E	A	■	R	T	S
■	■	R	A	G	■	■	G	A	R	B	O	■	■	B	U	T	■	■
P	O	■	N	O	S	■	A	D	O	R	E	■	T	I	S	■	F	A
O	B	I	T	■	T	O	D	O	■	A	L	A	E	■	S	H	I	R
M	E	R	E	M	A	N	■	L	A	D	■	C	A	R	R	O	L	L
O	R	E	■	A	G	E	■	P	I	L	■	T	I	A	■	A	L	I
N	O	N	A	G	E	■	T	H	R	E	E	■	N	I	T	R	E	S
A	N	E	L	E	S	■	C	E	T	Y	L	■	G	L	A	D	Y	S

either of us will get it. The two of us together haven't got the kind of cash it would take.

"The place I've got now is a gentleman's ranch. What I'd like to have is a real cattle ranch. Maybe I don't know anything about cattle now. But I didn't know anything about acting, either, when I started.

"Maybe," he added quickly, with a grin, "I still don't. Anyway, you won't catch me going into any philosophic discourse about that."

Besides the urge for a bigger, better ranch, what other suppressed desires did he have?

"Well, I want to travel. I'd like to go back to Europe, really look it over. I still haven't seen that blue Mediterranean. But the next time I go, I'd like to take a year, so I guess I won't be going right away."

He has no urge to make the trip in a boat of his own. That would "involve too many headaches, cost too much." He has no urge for the stage either. He's the one and only star I've ever heard disclaim that urge. He has no urge to be the best-dressed man in Hollywood. He hasn't bought a new suit in a year. He has no urge to own the fanciest car in filmdom. He's still driving the same one he had two and half years ago.

I ASKED if he was any nearer some wedding plans.

"No nearer, and no farther away," he said. "Everything is in status quo."

What was there to the story that columnist printed, to the effect that the Taylor-Stanwyck romance must be over, because Bob had been seen with "other girls."

"Stories like that hand me a laugh," said Bob. "Do you know how that particular story started? I stopped in a drug store one night for a sandwich and a cup of coffee. The counter was crowded. I sat in a solid row of people. There was a girl on my right. In walked this columnist, added up two and two and got five for an answer."

No, Bob and Barbara still are in love. But neither is in a hurry for marriage. Their careers aren't standing in the way. Both just want to be mighty, mighty sure of permanent happiness ahead. Barbara's first marriage was bitterly unhappy. And in the back of Bob's mind, always, is the memory of his parents' love for each other. He wants a married life as completely happy as theirs has been.

If Bob and Barbara do have any wedding plans, they are being held in abeyance, pending the outcome of her court fight with her divorced husband over the custody of their young son, Dion. Barbara doesn't want in any way to involve Bob in that disagreeable fight.

Because Bob and Barbara are seldom seen about town nowadays, columnists, always eagerly sniffing for trouble, may leap to the hasty conclusion that the romance is waning. Nothing is waning but Bob's and Barbara's interest in town night-life. Both have simply become addicts of ranch life.

And don't think for a moment that this mutual addiction is tearing them apart. If anything it is bringing them closer and closer. It might interest you to know this fact, untold till now, that Bob took some of his boxing lessons in a ring set up on Barbara's ranch, two miles from his own. He hasn't a swimming pool on his place, and Barbara has one. And, after his workouts, he could use a little swimming.

Does that sound as if Bob and Barbara are on the outs? And hearing Bob's answers to the questions about what he is like today, does he sound any less likable than when you first knew him?

It was Seb* that spoiled the Deb!

New Germ-Free Face Powder Helps to end Shiny Nose

FATHER came through with a coming-out party that ran into thousands. Mother invited every eligible male. Everybody had "a wonderful time" . . . everybody, that is, but the nose-dabbing Deb.

Deb or no Deb, what girl can exercise feminine charm with powder puff in hand and shine on her nose? Yet Shiny Nose is a beauty fault that germ-free face powder, like Woodbury, can easily subdue!

Oily film on the nose, which causes shine, is aggravated by germs. Woodbury Facial Powder, being germ-free, can convey no harmful germ-life to your skin.

Try this exquisite powder, and notice how smoothly it goes on, how reliably it clings! See the lovely life-like shades of Woodbury Facial Powder today. All seven have fashion approval. Windsor Rose is divinely flattering to "summery" complexions. $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢.

Try, too, Woodbury Germ-proof Rouge and Lipstick in matching shades.

Send for 7 Thrilling Youth-Blend Shades

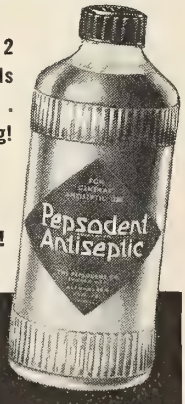
John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9193 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario

Please send me 7 shades of Woodbury Facial Powder; trial tubes of two Woodbury Beauty Creams; guest-size Woodbury Facial Soap. I enclose 10c to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____



In Germ-killing power...

1 BOTTLE PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC EQUALS 3 BOTTLES OF ORDINARY KINDS

Even when diluted with 2 parts water, still kills germs in seconds . . . Lasts 3 times as long!

MAKES YOUR MONEY GO 3 TIMES AS FAR!

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC for LOOSE DANDRUFF

P. S. Don't forget Pepsodent Antiseptic for BAD BREATH, too!

SMART SPECTATORS

No. 6043—The three-piece spectator suit combines checked coat and jacket with a slim tweed skirt.

No. 6029—Below, the two-piece knit dress with star-studded blouse will see you smartly through fall.

FALL MEANS football. Football to you means a smart knit suit for the big games. And these two costumes will make you a success in any grandstand, besides being ideal for office, school or shopping. The three-piece ensemble will hold its own against the most expensive imported tweed suit. And you won't have to buy a fall coat either, as the good-looking checked three-quarter coat can be worn over your other fall things. The becoming two-piece dress, its blouse sprinkled with gay stars, has definitely slimming lines, will keep you warm at the game and go merrily on to the tea dance afterward.

P.S. While their unusual detail makes them outstanding, you don't have to be a fancy knitter to make these, for there are no intricate stitches to hold you back, as you'll see from a glance at the free instructions. Send for them today!

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Kindly send, at no cost to me:
Knitting directions for No. 6043.....
Knitting directions for No. 6029.....
I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name .....

Address .....

City..... State.....
Check one or both designs and please print name and address plainly.

WARDROBE WEAPONS

(Continued from page 48)

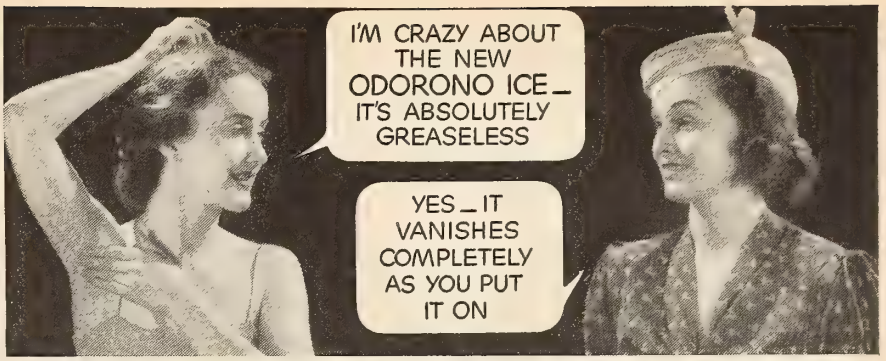
shoulder straps of one bouffant gown, and glittering vines of the same leaves stripe the enormously full tulle skirt. A long sleeved lamé has yards of skirt, and dark fur outlines the deep dropped shoulder bodice. Her last gown is slimly fitted to well below the hips. Bunchy ruching finishes the long basque and then the skirt springs out into yards and yards of stiffened net. A rhinestone clip holds a fly away sheer scarf at the base of the throat. That bunchy ruching below the hips is all right for Miss Simon but fatal to anyone who does her shopping any size above the Junior Miss Department.

Comedienne Joan Davis, usually a sartorial step-child, gets to dress up once, in her vain pursuit of gentlemen discarded by the popular heroine. The circular skirt is built up to a high waistline effect, and has a gathered bosom topped with a paillette embroidered bolero. The bolero, far from being on the way out, is just getting comfortably established in smart wardrobes. The "little jacket" is too useful and too universally becoming not to have a faithful following for some time to come.

GINGER ROGERS is a "Vivacious Lady" with lots of snappy clothes. As a night club singer she wears a white gown featuring the poured-in silhouette to just above the knee where it proceeds to flare out in pailletted rhumba ruffles. A wide net scarf, with no noticeable anchorage, floats gracefully across the top. Over this, she dons a finger length jacket, fitted through the waist and flaring at the bottom.



For daytime, Ginger Rogers wears two suits that would fit perfectly into any early fall wardrobe. The first, made of light weight burgandy tweed, is flecked with the same cool blue that is inset in the broad shouldered jacket. Its sleeves and back are cut on the bias. With this suit Ginger wears a black sailor with a coarse veil.

A three-piece suit worn by Ginger in the same picture has a fitted jacket and Chesterfield coat deftly striped in light gray, Oxford gray, and a dash of bright red. Its slightly flared skirt is Oxford gray, as is the draped blouse caught high at the throat with a bright clip.

One of Ginger Rogers' most effective gowns is worn for a hair-pulling, eye-gouging battle with brunette Frances Mercer. This is fashioned of black net, backless and very nearly frontless, a huge rhinestone buckle holding a narrow belt about the slim waist. That modern version of the mantilla—a shower of net caught at the top of her blonde curls—makes a graceful and becoming headdress.

The post war tale of "Three Comrades" is too concerned with serious matters to stress clothes, but Margaret Sullavan is allowed one glamour gown. It is carefully designed to fit the period without looking dated. Made of silver lamé, it has a shirred bodice, short puffed sleeves, and the skirt falls in heavy folds. A circular cut, floor length cape, also of lamé, accompanies the gown.

Hollywood is for the most part an excellent fashion guide, though there are occasional slight exceptions to this rule. For example, almost every hat you see in pictures is off the face. This doesn't mean that "no one" is wearing dipping brims. Camera men moan loudly about the difficulty of getting angle shots when they have a wide shadow-casting hat brim to contend with. That's why you rarely see that type of chapeau in pictures of your flicker favorites.

NEW-TYPE ICE DEODORANT
is greaseless, actually cooling and checks perspiration 1 to 3 days

YOU don't know the meaning of "perfection" till you try Odorono ICE—the new non-greasy, non-sticky ICE deodorant that disappears as you pat it on, leaves your skin feeling cool and refreshed, and checks perspiration instantly!

The new Odorono ICE keeps your underarm completely dry for as much as three whole days. Yet it takes only a few seconds to apply. Light and delicate in texture, Odorono ICE is greaseless and non-sticky. And there is nothing but its own fresh odor of pure alcohol which evaporates immediately.

Here is a satisfactory answer to the appeals of fastidious women for an effective, greaseless underarm deodorant. A really pleasant, quick way to put an end to offensive odors and embarrassing and costly perspiration stains.

Why risk offending the very people you want most to impress? Start today to enjoy the sure protection of Odorono ICE! Use Odorono ICE according to the directions on the label of the jar. Only 35¢ at all toilet-goods departments.

*Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

* ODO-RO-NO ICE
COOLING — NON-GREASY

SEND 10¢ FOR INTRODUCTORY JAR

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. 9-E-8*, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 427, Montreal)

I enclose 10¢ (15¢ in Canada) to cover cost of postage and packing for generous introductory jar of Odorono Ice.

Name_____

Address_____

City State

Worse than BODY ODOR-
P.O.

The worst body odor comes from P. O.—perspiration odor under the arms.

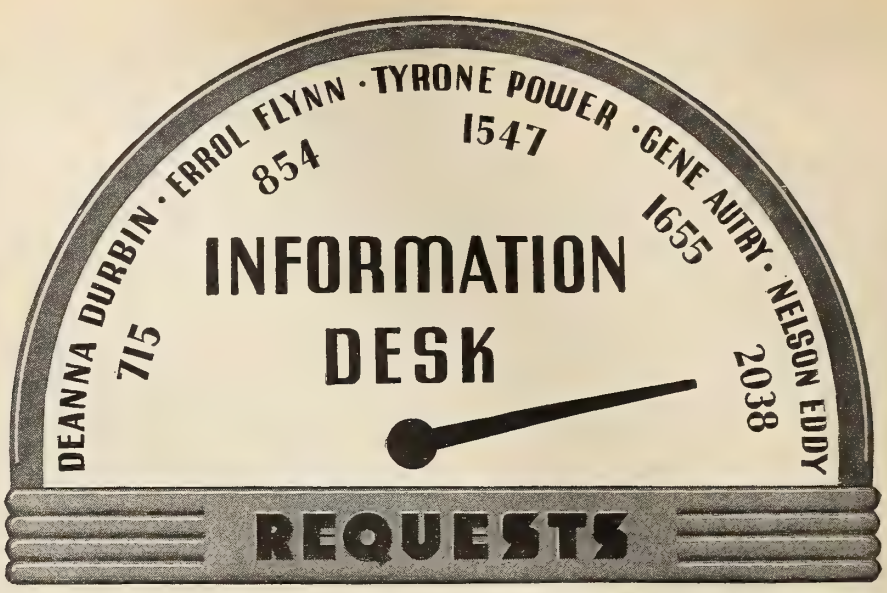
Take 1 minute to use Yodora—new, amazing deodorant cream that works directly on underarm excretions. Normally stops odor 1 to 3 days. Yodora also reduces amount of perspiration.

Yodora is made differently. It actually has a cosmetic base. That is why it is (1) soft—smooth as your face cream; (2) not sticky—extremely easy to apply; (3) has a clean delicate fragrance. 25¢—60¢. Get it today—money back if not delighted. Trial size FREE. Send coupon.

YODORA
DEODORANT CREAM
FREE! Send coupon for trial size to McKesson & Robbins, Fairfield, Conn. Dept. M-2.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____



Allviene SCHOOL OF THE Theatre
45TH YEAR—Drama, Dance, Vocal for Acting, Teaching, Directing. 3 in 1 Course-Radio, Stage, Screen. Graduates: Lee Tracy, Fred Astaire, Una Merkel, etc. Student Stock Theatre Appearances while learning. Apply Sec'y, Teller, 66 W. 85th St., N. Y.

when corns go Root* and All

NO MORE painful corns! No more dangerous old-fashioned paring, that only affects the surface of a corn, leaves the root to come back bigger and more painful than ever! Now it s easy to remove corns quickly—safely—root and all! The new double-action Blue-Jay method ends pain by removing pressure, then in a few days the corn lifts out root and all (exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application). Blue-Jay is a tiny medicated plaster. Easy to use. Safe—quick-acting—painless. 25¢ for a package of 6. Same price in Canada. At all drug and department stores.

BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS
* A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

Cast your vote and boost your favorite player

JACKIE COOPER: Sixteen years old, and now nearly six feet tall, this young veteran is still a favorite after eleven years in pictures. Born in Los Angeles, Cal., September 15, 1922, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bigelow, and nephew of the famous director Norman Taurog, Jackie entered pictures at the ripe old age of five. At eight he became a star in "Skippy," and the biggest hit of his entire career was with Wallace Beery in "The Champ." Jackie is now a student at Beverly Hills High School, when he isn't working. He has grown up to be poised, quiet almost to the point of shyness, and a very likable young fellow. Jackie loves swimming, football, dancing and driving. He also enjoys boxing and tennis. He is a swing enthusiast, and the proud owner of an elaborate set of traps and drums on which he delights to accompany phonograph records of leading swing orchestras. He does not, however, like to sing. He is very fond of dogs. But more than anything else Jackie Cooper loves to act. He guesses it's just "in his blood," and he hopes he can act for many years to come. He modestly avers he wouldn't make such a fine matinée idol, but he'd like to be a good character actor. If he couldn't be that he'd want to be a director or a movie photographer. Jackie has curly blonde hair and blue eyes. His next picture will be "That Certain Age" with Deanna Durbin. After that he will Make "Gangster's Boy" and "Streets of New York." You can address him in care of Monogram Studios, Hollywood, Cal.

ERROL FLYNN: Here is one actor who is as handsome, dashing and daring off screen as he is on. A direct descendant of Fletcher Christian, who led the famous mutiny on the Bounty, Errol Flynn was born in the north of old Ireland on June 20, 1909. His father was a professor of biology at Queen's University in Belfast, later at Cambridge. Errol was educated in Paris and London, and was an Olympic boxing contestant in 1928. He has traveled on every continent, speaks many languages, including Chinese and several native South Sea dialects. He has fished for pearls in Tahiti and prospected for gold in New Guinea. He once owned and sailed a coast-wise schooner on an inter-island freight service, and he ended up in movies quite by accident. Errol was pearl-fishing off Tahiti when an English movie company came upon him and offered him a role in "Mutiny on the Bounty." He accepted and the experience so intrigued him that he decided to go on the stage and make a career of acting. It was while he was playing in London that an American motion picture executive saw him and signed him to a Hollywood contract. On the boat coming to America he met the fascinating Lili Damita whom he later married. Errol calls her Damita, and she calls him Flynn. His definite ambition now is to succeed in American movies, and by all indications he certainly is realizing his ambition. Errol Flynn's favorite outdoor diversion is sailing. He also swims, rides and plays tennis. He has ambitious literary tendencies too, has now written several books, plays, short stories and even verse. He is an avid editorial reader, and often writes "letters to the editor." Also an excellent cook, Errol sometimes treats his friends to delicious home-cooked meals. Errol Flynn doesn't like alarm clocks, spiders, or weddings (except his own), but he does like thunder storms, and the sound of wind and rain. He lives in a modest home. There is one room, his den, that no one else—not even his wife—is allowed to enter without permission. Errol is six feet two inches tall, weighs one hundred eighty pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes. His last two pictures were "Robin Hood" and "Four's a Crowd." His next will be "The Sisters." You can reach him in care of Warner Bros. Studio, Burbank, Cal.

HUNDREDS OF ADDRESSES FOR A STAMPED ENVELOPE!

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking. So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, naming the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing addresses. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

BARBARA STANWYCK: This auburn haired lass of Scotch-Irish descent was born and raised in Brooklyn, N. Y. She was first heard from on July 16, 1907 and shortly thereafter was christened Ruby Stevens. Ruby was quite an athletic youngster, and a serious one too. She played on the school basketball team, and figured prominently in school dramatics. She once taught Sunday school, even wanted to be a missionary, but she had to go to work too soon to realize that ambition. At thirteen she was working with the telephone company. At fifteen she was a Vogue pattern cutter. However, when she was fired for lack of previous experience this ambitious girl remembered how much she liked to dance, and got herself a job in the Zeigfeld Follies chorus. Later she danced in George White's Scandals. Her first chance at a dramatic role came in the Broadway play "The Noose." It was while working in this that she took her new name—Barbara Stanwyck. Her next dramatic role, in the highly successful play, "Burlesque," established her as a leading Broadway actress. She took a screen test and promptly received a contract. She had a lot to learn, however, and did not succeed immediately. But she kept on working, and the picture "Ladies of Leisure" rewarded her talents and established her popularity. She loves to work and prefers pictures to plays because they allow her to have a home life. She hasn't permitted success to change her. She is easy to get along with, and is not temperamental. She likes good plain food, too—no fancy diets. Her tastes are consistently simple. She prefers tailored clothes, though she likes trailing negligées. Barbara is a good listener, but she can hold her own in telling someone off when she has too. Her greatest joy is her little adopted son, Dion. Babs is interested in writing. She plays tennis and swims a lot too. Together with Zeppo Marx she owns a stud ranch, "Marwyck," and has been highly successful with breeding thoroughbred horses. Barbara Stanwyck is five feet four inches tall, weighs one hundred twenty pounds. She has auburn hair and dark blue eyes. Her last two pictures were "Stella Dallas" and "Breakfast for Two." Her next two will be "Always Goodbye" and "The Mad Miss Manton." You can reach her in care of 20th Century-Fox Studio, Hollywood, Cal.

Charles Huffman, Esmont, Va. Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall, Beatrice Lillie, Binnie Barnes, and Reginald Owen are English. Charles Boyer is French, and Luise Rainer is Austrian.

Audria Fluke, Altoona, Pa. John Beal's real name is Alexander Bliedung. He was born in Joplin, Missouri, August 13, 1909. He is five feet ten inches tall, weighs one hundred fifty pounds, has brown hair and eyes. He is a graduate of Wharton School, U. of Penna. He is married, and has been in the movies since 1913.

Mary Duval, Erie, Kansas. Kenny Baker is six feet tall, weighs one hundred sixty-one pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. He was born in Monrovia, Cal., September 30, 1912. Before entering the movies in 1936 he sang in cabarets and on the radio.

(Continued on page 96)

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

.....

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

If you would like our chart with weights, heights, ages, birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.

AN EXPERIENCED WOMAN

could have told her!

Neglect of intimate cleanliness may rob the loveliest woman of her charm... Use "Lysol" for feminine hygiene

ONE lesson life teaches a woman is the need for complete intimate daintiness.

A man wants to think of the woman whose love and companionship he seeks as his dream of feminine loveliness . . . fresh and exquisite at all times. But, without realizing it, there are times when even perfumes, baths and beauty aids may fail to make you attractive—if you neglect the practice of feminine hygiene. Many experienced family doctors know that this neglect has wrecked the happiness of countless marriages.

Don't risk offending in this most personal way. Be sure of complete exquisiteness. Follow the "Lysol" method of efficient feminine hygiene.

Ask your own doctor about "Lysol" disinfectant. He will tell you "Lysol" has been used in many hospitals and clinics for years as an effective antiseptic douche. Directions for use are on each bottle.

Six reasons for using "Lysol" for feminine hygiene—

1—Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in the proper dilution, is gentle and efficient, contains no harmful free caustic alkali.

2—Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions, effective in the presence of organic matter (such as dirt, mucus, serum, etc.).

3—Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension, and thus virtually search out germs.

4—Economy... "Lysol" is concentrated, costs only about one cent an application in the proper dilution for feminine hygiene.

5—Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use.

6—Stability... "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, how often it is uncorked.

•

Also, try Lysol Hygienic Soap for bath, hands and complexion. It's cleansing, deodorant.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND THIS COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK Products Corp.,
Dept. 9-M. S., Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet "Lysol vs. Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol."

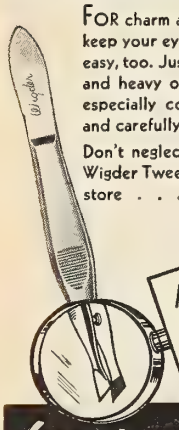
*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____



Copyright 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

with Wigder
EYEBROW CONTROL

FOR charm and beauty, it's most important to keep your eyebrows trim and shapely. And it's easy, too. Just "tweeze" away those stray hairs and heavy outlines with Wigder Tweezers — especially constructed with raised shoulders and carefully set jaws for positive grip.

Don't neglect this essential beauty care! Get Wigder Tweezers today at any drug or 10-cent store 10c

ASK for Wigder Tweezers, with the special Lock-Grip that makes eyebrow-grooming quick and agreeable.

Wigder QUALITY COSTS NO MORE
NEWARK, NEW JERSEY
NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

Quickly Tint GRAY HAIR and Look 10 Years Younger

● At home—quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural appearing color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

FACE MARRED BY UGLY SCHOOL-AGE PIMPLES?

Help keep your blood free of waste poisons that may irritate your skin

Don't let ugly hickies make you look ridiculous. Stop being shunned and laughed at. Find out what may cause your pimples and take steps to get rid of them.

Between 13 and 25, your body is growing rapidly. Important gland changes may upset your system. Intestinal poisons are often thrown into the blood stream and carried to the skin . . . where they may bubble out in pimples.

Let Fleischmann's Yeast help you as it has helped so many others. Millions of tiny, live plants in each cake of this fresh food help keep your blood free of intestinal poisons. When this is done, resulting pimples begin to go. Your skin becomes clearer, smoother, more attractive. Many get amazing results in 30 days or less! Start eating Fleischmann's Yeast today. Eat 3 cakes daily—one cake ½ hour before meals.

AFTER DIVORCE—WHAT?

(Continued from page 41)

matriarchal system is a form of social organization as in certain primitive tribes in which the mother is head of the family, and in which descent is reckoned in the female line, the children belonging to the mother's clan.'

"That's us," laughed Joan delightedly. "I am now a matriarch. My household is a matriarchy. There is but one exception, in my case, to the definition given in the dictionary: that is, the business about the children reckoning their descent from the female line. Melinda is Melinda Markey, of course. Ditty is Dianna Bennett Markey. When Gene and I were married he gave Ditty his name. It seemed absurd to us for sisters to bear different names, so we made them alike.

Gene comes to see Melinda twice every day. He takes both of the children out with him frequently. Ditty is as crazy about him as Melinda is. We are all completely friendly. Gene and I have dates quite often. I think that the only way divorce can be ugly for children is when the parents make it so by being ugly about it themselves, by indulging in a mental tug of war, with the children between them. Nothing of the sort is the case with us. We have departed thus far from the primitive.

IT was, and is, simply that a woman with a career has a dictator complex and you can't conceive of a dictator who would 'share and share alike' even so much as the morning paper, now can you?"

"That's the way it is with me," said Joan. "Including the morning paper. I like to get it first. I don't like it when someone else gets it and musses it up and then passes it on to me. That's sort of symbolic of the whole. I like to have my meals when I like to have them. If I don't want luncheon at one and dinner at eight, I don't want to have to have them at those hours. When there is a man in the house there must also be a routine.

"I want to be able to come and go as I please. Last year I did 'Stage Door' on tour. I was gone about six months. I took the children with me. Ditty went to school in Connecticut, Melinda traveled with me and thrived on it. And it is certainly beneficial to adults. I was getting into a rut before I did that play. I never intend to be in a rut again. I want to do a play every year. Now, when you have a husband to consider, you can't just pick up and go off for months at a time, even when it is good for your career. And I feel that to do that play was necessary to my career. It happened to go very well and that gave me a self-confidence I very much needed.

"When I come home from the studio now and feel tired and want to go to bed and read, I don't have the uneasy feeling that my husband is dining alone, listening to the radio alone, probably wondering who ever thought up this idea of the emancipation of women anyway! It's an unnatural state of affairs, a career woman and marriage under the same roof.

"I like to do everything I do well," said Joan seriously, "or not at all. I much prefer trying to make a success of my life as a mother and as an actress, than trying to make a semi-success of marriage, too. I detest half loaves."

We were talking, Joan and I, in the living room of her new house in Holmby Hills. This house that Joan built is a house so femininely lovely, so comfortably, unmovie-starishly lovely.

And yet, as we talked, I began going over in my mind some of the things I know about Joan. Contradictory things, at first thought, but working together to make a composite picture of this Lady Alone.

Joan, the youngest of the Bennetts. Yes, but whenever the girl's mother has a problem to solve, it is to Joan she turns. Whenever Richard Bennett is ill or in doubt about something, it is to Joan he wires or cables.

Joan was once shy, self-conscious, timid. This came about because she is the youngest sister of Connie, strong-willed and definite, of Barbara who is vital and vigorous. She's the youngest in a family who were, all of them, famous and colorful, so that the young Joan found it all too easy to take the well known "back seat."

Then, Joan is near-sighted. Time was when this made her self-conscious, when she tried to conceal the fact by various pitiful little subterfuges. She has to wear glasses for reading. She can't recognize people when they are seated across a room from her.

Only a short time ago Joan would hastily whip off her glasses before she entered a public place. She would have run rather than be photographed wearing them. Joan has worked out of all this. And when, recently, a smart magazine asked her to sit for her portrait, wearing her glasses, she sat for it without a quaver, the picture turning out to be as distingué as the subject.

THERE is not a lazy bone in Joan's slender body. Even when she is not working, she is up every morning at nine. She then goes through a routine of posture exercises because she feels that she tends to be round-shouldered. Three times a week she goes to the public ice-skating rink and skates, because she feels that nothing gives you the poise and grace that skating does.

She makes out the menus at home. A splendid housekeeper, she is also a thrifty one. If she has a very expensive dinner one night, she will plan an inexpensive one the next night. Lamb stew. Meat loaf. She makes out the children's menus. When they were traveling East last year she spent her time on the train planning the children's menus for three weeks in advance. As there is a difference of five years in their ages, she had to make out two complete sets of menus, one for each little girl.

When she entertains at dinner—she never has large parties, usually dinner for six—she knows exactly what each guest had to eat when he or she dined with her six weeks or six months previously. And she sees to it that that guest does not have the same menu again.

Joan always has her evenings planned far in advance when she entertains. Because she herself plays neither Bridge nor any other parlor games, she usually has tickets for the theater, takes her guests to a night club or provides entertainers for them at home. Whatever is decided on, is planned, right down to the last detail.

And so, as my thoughts of her took shape, I began to see Joan as the matriarch she says she is, in spite of her delectable femininity; a new kind of matriarch, young and beautiful, not full of years and stern, as one formerly imagined a matriarch to be.

Now I wondered whether the answer to "After Divorce—What?" might not be Joan's answer—a matriarch, women without men, women alone? It seems that Joan is making a happy—nay, brilliant—success of it.

'TISN'T SO!

(Continued from page 43)

you consider Olympe's background there's not a doubt in a carload she will do just what her little heart desires.

Her advent into this world, just two years after the World War, created a crisis. Momsie and Pop Bradna were the featured act in a Paris theatre and the management feared the act couldn't go on for days. Papa fooled them. He went on solo and did things up brown. In fact, so loyal to the management was he that his offspring was named after the theatre—called Olympic. At the ripe old age of eighteen months, little Olympe made her debut, carrying a flag twice her size. She did her task so well that hope was held out for her future and the Bradnas began training their tiny daughter.

BEFORE I came to America, I worked many years throughout Europe," Olympe modestly reported. "I even did some pictures in France, Yes, three, but I never thought at the time I would become a picture player. I was used to working in the circus and touring shows. The only thing I didn't like about that was touring forever. In pictures, you have a home and live in it. But, when you tour you have a trunk and live in it!

"When I was eight, Mama and Papa decided that I could do an act alone. By then I could dance and sing some. So I went into a small theatre for a time and was lucky enough to get into the 'Folies Bergere.' I was quite successful in this and made Mama and Papa quit working. They had supported me long enough. It was my turn now! They criticized and taught me everything. After doing 'Hit the Deck' for some time it was decided to send a company to America and they chose me. We went to Chicago and played eight months. After that I came to the French Casino in New York and stayed six months. My act was mostly acrobatic dancing with a little ballet.

"While there Mr. Serlin gave me a test and signed me to do dancing specialties. They didn't know I could act and I didn't tell them. I got a part in 'Souls At Sea,' and a chance to act. I think I was good, but I've lots to learn or I wouldn't have to go to school. I finish this month though, so maybe I'm learning. What you think, no?

"It was very hard, at first, for me to learn these English, but now that I can speak it, I like it better than ever. I will be American soon, in 1940 Mama says! But, I want to go back to France! Oh, only to see my friends, not for good. It's over here I will stay, for in California we have a home. It's out from Hollywood and we love it. I don't know many people out there. When you have to get up at seven o'clock and go to work you're in bed by ten so there isn't much time left in which to meet people.

"You know, after I finish 'Souls At Sea' they think I can act, but they are not too sure. So, for three pictures they give me small parts till they make up their mind. Finally they have decide and I go to work in 'Stolen Heaven.'

"I've been making personal appearances since I left California. Finally, when I got here in New York they wanted me to go on with Gene Raymond the first day. I did and had such fun with him. In the dressing-room after the show I said, 'Gene, there's a girl who wants your picture autographed. Will you give it to her?' He said of course he would and

Make Arm and Leg Hair
INVISIBLE
Now . . . with Marchand's

It's summer costume time — it's the season when hair on arms and legs becomes most conspicuous. Smart women avoid this unsightliness quickly and easily with Marchand's — for Marchand's lightens the color of the hair making it blend with the very color of the skin. It is odorless, does not stain, and best of all leaves no hair stubble.

MARCHAND'S
GOLDEN HAIR WASH
AT ALL DRUG AND DEPARTMENT STORES

A Big Bottle Costs Little

WON BY A HEAD (Of Attractive Hair)

IN BUSINESS or social affairs, winning success depends a great deal on appearance. That's why it's good business to keep a bottle of Lucky Tiger handy.

Lucky Tiger eliminates clinging dandruff. No more "snowy" coat collars. It checks excessive falling hair and relieves that miserable itching—and it adds beauty to any head of hair. You can keep your hair young-looking by using Lucky Tiger two or three times weekly.

Costs little at good druggists, barber shops and 10¢ stores.

Lucky Tiger HAIR TONIC For Dandruff

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Included FREE of extra charge

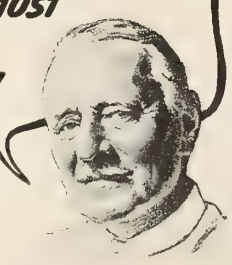
Your choice of Man's or Lady's Wrist Watch FREE of extra charge with every Ring ordered during this SALE and paid for on our easy monthly plan. Lady's or Man's Ring, with simulated diamond that you'd think cost many times the price. Nothing extra for the watch. It's included FREE. Ladies' 1939 dainty model. Men's "Shockproof" military wrist watch—gold plate front—with all the color and charm of natural yellow gold; Jeweled; Guarantee by $1,000,000 FACTORY enclosed. Send NO Money, make only two monthly $2 payments (total $4). WE TRUST YOU—your package comes AT ONCE by Return mail.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO.
Dept. 329-B, Newton, Mass.



Rush offer by RETURN MAIL—all postage paid to my door.

☐ Ladies' Model ☐ Men's Model

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

SOFT, TENDER GUMS? YES I CAN HELP YOU— BUT YOU MUST DO YOUR JOB, TOO!

START NOW to cooperate with your dentist at home. Massage your gums twice every day with Forhan's.

Forhan's Does Both Jobs

CLEANS TEETH • AIDS GUMS

Dentists know that when gums are healthy, your teeth will be BRIGHTER—noticeably more attractive. Use Forhan's gum massage regularly. Forhan's Toothpaste is different—because it contains a special ingredient for your gums.

sat down to write it, then stopped and said, 'Who shall I autograph it to?' I said, 'To Olympe Bradna' and we had a big laugh. But, I got the picture!

"He has a very nice wife, Jeanette MacDonald, and every week on the day they were married he gives her an anniversary present. She must be an awful expensive wife to get a present every week! Gene says that after this time, he's going to do it only once a year."

Olympe Bradna's career is in Hollywood. These appearances throughout the country have shown her boss just what a puller this young Miss is at the box office. And, Olympe's enjoying every minute of it, too, from the time she met Mrs. Roosevelt to that memorable occasion when a cocktail party was given in her very own honor at the famous Waldorf.

"You know the funniest thing happened," exclaimed Olympe. "They gave a party for me in the Blue Room. We sat and sat, but no one arrived. Finally, they said I could go for a walk till they arrived. Over here you're not supposed to be on time to your own party. We came back and still no one had come in, so out we went for another walk to Fifth Avenue this time. I was glad because I saw some more of New York. Anyway, when I got back the second time we discovered there were two Blue Rooms and everyone had been waiting in the one downstairs, finally leaving. Only a few—about four or five—had found out and come up. I didn't mind and we had lots of fun. Ernst Lubitch was there and I drank so much orange juice I nearly turned into a grove."

Just then the press agent from her studio arrived. "Olympe, we have to hurry! You know, they have a photographer waiting to take pictures of you," and so the French lass departed.

HE'D RATHER BE HIMSELF

(Continued from page 42)

His awareness came about, it seems, when a lady columnist unfeelingly dubbed him "Richard Dimples Greene." Made him sensitive, that's what it did. And let him in for no end of ragging at the studio. Poor Greene was "dimpled" all over the lot. But he took it like a good sport—and there's none better than the English brand.

"It hadn't occurred to me that I looked at all like Power," said the two-faced truth-teller. "Met him the other day, and had a drink with him. Fine chap. Saw Taylor at the Trocadero one night, though I wasn't introduced to him. Just as well. I daresay it might have embarrassed him. I know I'd have felt a bit silly."

It was only natural to think his must be an embarrassment of riches. But he went on quite irrelevantly, or not, as you please, "But I did meet Barbara Stanwyck in the wardrobe department the other day, and she is a delightful person."

HE and Taylor both are of one mind in this respect, at least. But Mr. Greene's own true love, let it be known, is the American automobile. He's quite mad about it. In his romantic bursts of speed anything less than eighty miles an hour means merely idling along the primrose path. Meanwhile the studio has picked one of its fairest flowers for him to wear upon his arm of nights in the sweet uses of advertisement. Yes, the old familiar publicity gag. Not that he isn't capable of picking his own, for no girl is apt to keep Richard Greene on the cold side of her door.

"The night spots here," he glowed, "are the most attractive I've ever seen. Gorgeous! I suppose it's the exotic tropical influence. There are so many foreign influences at work that their effect is seductive. Yet Hollywood as a whole is amazingly moral. I didn't realize that the movie citadel could possibly be so completely and uninterestingly respectable."

Shades of Victoria! There spoke the wisdom of age in the voice of youth. On the sunny side of twenty-four, Mr. Greene was, of all things, a philosopher of morals. Was it that, after New York, he had found Hollywood wanting?

"I had no means of judging New York morally," he was frank to say, "as I was there only two hours. I felt like a real hick. The studio gentleman who met me at the dock semed to think I'd never been in a big city before. He held me on a corner explaining the traffic lights, which I perfectly understood, then shepherded me across the street like a small child. It was good of him, but not necessary. From what little I saw of it New York was exactly as I'd imagined—crowds, noise, and skyscrapers. I got a crick in my neck looking up at them. Everything looked just as I'd seen it on the screen at home. But Hollywood wasn't at all as I'd expected. I had pictured it as the movie capital of the world, with actors in make-up rushing through the streets, and glamor hitting you in the eye at every turn. But to my surprise and disappointment it turned out to be a most orderly and well-behaved suburban city.

"But my ambition as an adventurer was realized when I saw my first palm tree. It made me feel really traveled. And the thing that impressed me most of all was the desert—lonely yet beautiful."

It crossed my vagrant mind that the impressionable stranger might have found Hollywood girls likewise beautiful, though not so lonely.

"I suppose," he reflected, "there are more pretty girls here than anywhere else in the world, and when lovely they are really lovelier. But I can't stand a dull girl, no matter how beautiful she may be. I like a girl I can talk to, and you can't talk to a face, can you? When it comes to that, you can't talk to an English girl at all unless you know her really well. It's far easier to get on with an American girl. Her naivete is very appealing. This is especially true in the daytime. That's because she looks best in tailored things—no one else can wear them so well. Then, too, the American girl seems to have such a good figure."

Seems! No matter. He was saying, "Knowing American slang has helped me enormously in getting on with the girls here. I'd heard so much of it in American films at home that it really wasn't new. The only thing that bothered me was my English accent. I was afraid it would be laughed at. But I've already got rid of most of it, wouldn't you say?" I would, and did, to his evident relief. "I don't mean the affected English accent. No good actor has that. My family never had, and it represents three generations of English actors.

"My first ambition was to be a veterinary, as I'm very fond of animals. But, somehow, I went the way of the rest of the family. What's really strange is that I'm now in Hollywood. I'd done practically nothing but crowd work in English pictures and only repertory work in the provinces until they put me on the London stage in 'French Without Tears.' Then, to my great astonishment, I had three offers from Hollywood. When I finally worked up courage enough to take the plunge I first thought I'd buy a car in Hollywood and have other things I wanted. Then suddenly I got scared. If someone had come along and offered me five pounds a week I'd have stayed right there in England. What did I know about pictures?"

EVEN now, after staking his future on the turn of the camera, the engaging tyro knew nothing of the results of his work, had seen none of the "rushes." But studio enthusiasts who did look at them had gone to such lengths of language as to declare, "He'll knock 'em dead!" One fellow actor did nearly that for him. It happened in a fight scene, with various huskies mixing it up and a yacht-depth tank of water to make the brawl still more ambidextrous. A fist swung out and caught the innocent from abroad on the point of his chin.

Now that incident might have been part of the directorial purpose of John Ford, who has his full share of an Irishman's love of fight. Possibly, but be that as it may, young Greene went down with great success. But he picked himself up, weaved forward, and dived into the tank. Mr. Ford nodded his head in serene approval. The kid could take it.

"My grandfather, Wallace Davidson, was the one to buck me up," said Richard Greene. "'God bless you, my boy, and keep you on the front side of the screen.' My grandfather was the first to exhibit films in England at a time when they were shown on both sides of the screen. Spectators at the rear saw the picture in reverse for a smaller fee than was paid by those sitting in front. He added the advice, 'Keep your head and save your money.' Secretly, I swore I'd spend my first American money for a car. I have a small one, and with it I've found something I like best of all here—the drive-in restaurants. I've gone to every one in Hollywood and Beverly Hills. It's great fun sitting in a car and eating one's meals. We don't have 'em over there. If ever I make enough money to do it I'm going to open a drive-in place in London."

In "My Lucky Star" Sonja Henie and Richard Greene make a comely couple.

That sounded as though he were already planning to return to roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. I looked disappointed.

"As far as I'm concerned," was his instant reply, "they can keep me out here for the rest of my life. I've been so bitten by California that it seems like my second home. All I ask is that they let me be myself. I want to be judged by my work, not by any accidental resemblance to someone else. And I don't like gush. Acting is a profession, and has nothing to do with the personal side of anyone in it. I hate having that side brought out. Being called 'Dimples,' for example, drives me into a white lather of fury. I don't mind what work they give me to do just so long as they let the rest of me alone."

He turned to the fish he was having for lunch. And as our chin-wag happened to be on a Friday, it was my guess that this Englishman has a dash of Irish in him. Fish aside, I take him to be a good trencherman. Certainly the eupeptic look of him suggested good red meat. His face held none of the pallor exhibited by some of our stars. Here is one movie actor who carries his own color.

"After my Hollywood baptism, I'm now going to try frozen water," he laughed. "I'm doing a picture with Sonja Henie—she's delightful—and it's great fun. I can go fairly fast on skates, but the trouble is I can't stop. That proved most humiliating at a rink in England one night when the band played 'God Save the King' and everybody stopped—everyone but me. I went round and round till a shocked assistant grabbed me. I needed practice. I still need it, so I'm going over to the set. Come along?"

As we ambled down a studio street the alert Mr. Greene was calling all cars by their right names. Presently he stopped in dumb admiration before a long and glittering automotive masterpiece. The next moment he was flat on his back beneath it raptly gazing at its expensive underpinning.

I had a deal of a time extricating him. Oh, well, small car or big car, that boy's certainly going places!

POND'S SUNLIGHT SHADES

"GLARE-PROOF" powder shades to flatter your skin in hard blazing sun...

OUT in the pitiless glare of the sun, skin faults are magnified. Color flattens out. Skin seems coarser. Your face looks harder all over!

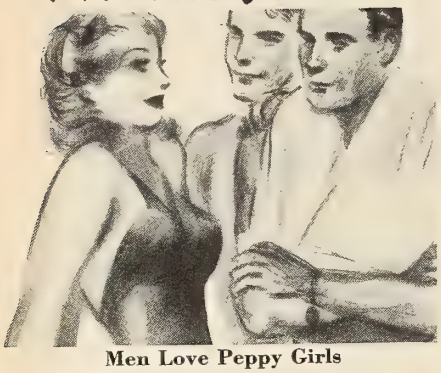
But see how "Sunlight" shades flatter you!

"Glare-proof"—Pond's "Sunlight" shades are scientifically blended to reflect only the softer rays of the sun. They soften its glare on your skin . . . make it flattering! Your face has a lovely soft look. Your tan a rich glow.

Try them right now. Two glorious "Sunlight" shades, Light and Dark. Low prices. Decorated screw-top jars, 35¢, 70¢. Big boxes, 10¢, 20¢.

Test them FREE! in glaring Sunlight

Pond's, Clinton, Conn., Dept. 9MS-PW. Please rush me, free, Pond's "Sunlight" shades, enough of each for a 5-day test. (This offer expires Nov. 1, 1938.)



Name_____

Street_____

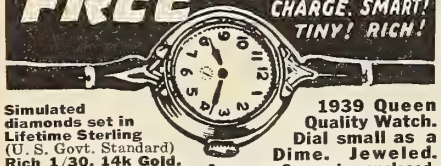
City_____ State_____

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

HOW YOU CAN Attract MEN

Men Love Peppy Girls

IF you'd like to help change your dull, drab life into a more happy, thrilling existence—if you'd like to be more sought after and admired by men, consider this:



It's the girl bubbling over with vivacious pep and ginger who attracts men. Men can't stand cranky, ailing women.

So in case you need a good general system tonic remember this:—For over 60 years famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots, has helped Nature tone up delicate female systems, build up physical resistance, and thus help calm jittery nerves and give more pep and zip to really enjoy life.

Tune in Voice of Experience Mutual Broadcasting System: Mon., Wed. and Fri. See your local newspaper for time. WLW Mondays through Friday.

Lydia E. Pinkham's
VEGETABLE COMPOUND

ROUND WATCH INCLUDED FREE WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE. SMART! TINY! RICH!

Simulated diamonds set in Lifetime Sterling (U. S. Govt. Standard) Rich 1/30, 14k Gold.

1939 Queen Quality Watch. Dial small as a Dime. Jeweled. Accuracy Guarantee enclosed.

Watch included FREE with every ring ordered during SALE and paid for on our easy two monthly $2 payment plan (total only $4). No extra charge for the watch. Wear 10 days ON APPROVAL! Send NO Money. Mail postcard now. We pay postage. We trust you. Your package comes at once by return mail.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO.
Dept. 329-A, Newton, Mass.

NEVER OFFEND!
BE "SURE" OF YOUR BREATH

Use "Sure" the amazing new breath purifier that helps in romance, social contacts, business. Removes offensive breath odors from onions, garlic, tobacco, cocktails, etc. Just use one drop on the tongue and your breath will be sweet. Also removes odors from hands. Fits purse or pocket—sold everywhere on money-back guarantee.

GET YOURS FREE. WRITE SURE LABORATORIES
Dept. M1-847 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

THERE IS ONLY ONE Sure
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
BREATH PURIFIER

ONE DROP DOES THE TRICK!
10¢
WEEK'S SUPPLY

On Sale at Good 10¢ Stores

"AM I HOMELY!"

(Continued from page 31)

faces I have ever seen. Oh, there are times, when I am dressed to go out in the evening, when I catch a slight glimpse of myself and think, 'Not so bad, Davis, not so bad.' The only other allowance I can make for myself, and it's rather a plaintive one, considering how I have just described my eyes, is that, bull-froggishness and all, my eyes are really my best feature.

"And I love beauty, too," said Bette fiercely. "I envy beautiful women. I love sumptuousness in every way. I'm not extravagant, but I would certainly adore to have one wild splurge in my life. I'd love to buy myself luxuries from the skin out. I'd love to have my room entirely cleaned out and then begin all over again, with every single thing new and simply too elegant. I'd like to have wonderful underwear, which I've never had in my life. I'd love to have dozens of pairs of mules, the kind that look like butterflies on the feet. I'd buy dozens of dresses, with millions of accessories. I'd buy ten skin sables, the kind that goop all over you. Not minks nor ermines. They don't mean a thing to me. I'd buy dozens of wonderful tailored blouses, the kind that Claudette Colbert wears so often. Just once in my life," cried Bette, "I'd like to sow my wild oats about luxuries."

And as Bette went on, indulging in her mental orgy, I thought that she was doing a better job of skinning the star and revealing the woman beneath than even she knew. For with this confessed love of luxury has gone a common sense, a balance, an economy of living which, like giant indicators, point to a character which deserves a hand off the screen, as well as on. For Bette has, in every way, lived her private life as her husband's wife, thus proving a rare sensitiveness to a situation which could have been intolerable to any man, and usually is.

I CAME to to hear Bette saying, "If I have anything to offer professionally, it's certainly not my beauty. It is, if anything, reality. It's the love of being other people. That's something I was born with. It's something of the same quality, if I may make so proud a boast, that Spencer Tracy gives—that sense of reality so real that you believe he is the character he is playing. I love to be other people and I believe that I give to the 'other people' I play a certain uncompromising honesty. Also, I'm conscientious about my work. I strive to please. I treat my work as a job to be done as competently as possible. I don't pull cute tricks on the set. I don't waste my time or the time of others by being late for work, by not knowing my lines. I realize that other people are there to work, too, not to play audience to Davis being the diva.

"I love fame. It's a bad business to go onto the stage or screen just for the sake or the hope of becoming famous. But once you're in the profession, fame is your tangible reward. I thank God for autograph seekers! Annoy me? I love them! But for the fact that people recognize us, we would have no visible indications that our work is being appreciated. I love admiration. I eat it up. I don't always believe it, but it's tonic just the same. I love people. I can't bear to be alone for four minutes.

"You said you wanted a personal story?" Bette went on, with that vehemence which is a Davis characteristic. "Well, you're getting one. I'm practically taking myself to pieces, turning myself inside out. I'll now trot out all of my little virtues and most beastly little vices and set them up in neat rows like the nine-pins children play with. This should be the Davis story to end all Davis stories, for it is the whole truth.

"Of my virtues, the greatest is, that I'm considerate of other people. I sort of seem to know how other people feel, not only how I feel, which is awfully white of me, wouldn't you say?" (I would say, and so have others . . . such as the prop man Bette rescued from going to jail when he was arrested, a frame-up, for drunk driving. Bette came to the rescue, then, with money for bail and money for a lawyer, time and money both . . . and saved the fellow from a miscarriage of justice and from imprisonment . . . and Margaret, Bette's hairdresser, who told me that Bette will hurry with her make-up, do her own hair if necessary, when she knows that Margaret has a date and would like to get off early . . .) "I appreciate things people do for me," Bette was saying.

"My worst fault, the one that sticks its ugly head out beyond its fellows, is my impatience with slow-thinking people, stupid people. I cannot suffer fools gladly. I simply can't. I'm intolerant of incompetency in servants. I'm intolerant of incompetency in any job. If my car is dirty I'm simply furious. If a servant polishes only one vase a day I want that vase polished flawlessly and if it isn't I am very disagreeable about it.

"I'm intolerant of false flattery, the brand saleswomen hand out when they tell you that you look too, too divine in a hat which you know makes you resemble a starving Armenian. I'm so intolerant of that kind of false flattery that I feel positively ugly about it.

"I'm fairly intolerant of people who don't fight for what they want from life; people who sit back and sigh with puling patience and say, 'It's the breaks.' They are always the people who, when things are riding high for them pat themselves on the back and say, 'What a bright boy am I!' I can't bear people who are always expecting other people to do for them what they should be doing for themselves. I never answer letters from girls who write and ask me to 'get them' in the movies. There's only one person who can get you in the movies, or anywhere else, and that's yourself. No one ever 'got me' anything. There's a youngster in our picture right now. She came to the casting director of this studio every single day for six months. The first time she came he told her that she was overweight. She didn't go home and whine and say, 'I can't get into pictures, I'm too fat.' No, she went home and lost weight and came back and continued to come back every day for six months and didn't ask for help or so much as a hitch-hike from anybody. And here she is and she's got a nice talent and you'll see her in 'Jezebel.' Her name is Janet Shaw and she'll go places because she uses her own brains.

"Wasn't that killing?" William Gargan asks Frank Morgan. And merrily they laugh!

"I can't stand pale martyrs. I adore people who go out and get what they want. I even admire this gal I'm playing because she goes out and, come hell or high water, gets her man.

I CAN'T bear people, professionals, who discuss their 'marriage problems' in print. In the first and last place, when a marriage becomes more 'problem' than anything else, it's time for the parties thereof to divide the books and go their ways.

"I will not discuss my marriage," yelped Bette. "I'm all through with that. If my husband were an actor, it might not matter, publicity would then be his natural element. But Ham isn't in pictures and it's embarrassing for him to read about his private life in my publicity. Besides, I have no marriage problems. Hateful word, problems. I have no more problems than does the wife of a boiler-maker or the wife of a traveling salesman. For if a woman is in love with her husband there are no problems. It's only when she falls out of love that she begins to figure how much she is putting up with.

"I'm not affected by the rumors, the grapevine system of Hollywood, which, with its little slanderous shots and tattletale tendrils, coils around so many hearts here, so many marriages, crushing the life out of them, and the faith. If there's anything important going on in our lives, Ham's and mine, we won't have to read about it in the newspapers. We'll go to press first."

"Let's see, what else? I'm a doggone good housekeeper. My mother drilled that into me with an iron rod. I try to be a wife as well as a moom pitcher star, and so far there have been no complaints. I keep my house myself. I mean, I order the meals, with an eye to the things Ham likes to eat. I inspect my ice box and cupboards as a good New England housewife should. I count the linens, send Ham's clothes to the tailor, inspect bureau drawers and usually put them in order myself.

"I love to talk. It's my favorite pastime.

"I'm not the maternal type and I know it. I would make the most ghastly mother that ever lived. On the other hand, if ever I have a child, and I hope I do, I might turn out to be one of those doting mommers with complexes about sterilizing everything the child touches, even to boiling the woolly lamb.

"I'm horribly possessive. I love the feel of things being mine. I could never adopt a child because I would have to feel that the child belonged to me, was my own flesh and blood or not at all.

"I'm not happy. I'm absolutely frightened to be happy, afraid something might happen. I'm superstitious about it. I'm like the Chinese peasant who shields his sturdy little son from the vengeance of the jealous gods by hiding him with his body, crying out, 'He's a poor thing, Lords, he's ugly and pock-marked and shrivelled.' So I deny my happiness, crying out, 'I'm not happy, Lords, I'm a poor miserable wretch, do not envy me to my destruction.'

"And there is no reason why I should not be happy. I am happy in my home. I am happy in my marriage. I am happy in my work because I love it. I wouldn't give up my work for anything in the world, nor for anyone, not even to save my own heart from breaking.

WHEN I'm not working I like to go away for week-ends. Or I catch up on my reading. Now and then we have a few friends in for an informal supper party. Most of our friends are writers. We never go night-clubbing.

"My favorite foods are potatoes and chocolate bread pudding. I adore them.

"I loathe orchids and those big corsages that always wobble all over me and ruin my dress. I love lilies of the valley, little sprays of them, to pin at my throat, waistline, wherever I please. I'm tritely fond of gardenias. Among my favorite film stars are Garbo, and, of course, Spencer Tracy. I want to play Ibsen's 'Wild Duck' on the screen. I'm skeptical about people. I don't trust people until they've stripped themselves to the bone, so that I can see how their hearts beat and of what stuff their spirits are made. That's one thing this town called Hollywood has done for me, turned a trusting little New England girl into a cynic and a skeptic!

"And now," said Bette, quite savagely, smashing out her cigarette with enough vigor to damp down Vesuvius, "now bring on your candid cameramen, ace interrogators, cross-examiners, and see if they can dig up anything I haven't told on myself!"

Limply, I followed lively Bette to the set and, unamazed, watched her get her man.

Binnie Barnes has the fresh beauty so often found in her native Britain. After successes on the London stage, her movie roles under the direction of the famous Alexander Korda led to a Hollywood contract in 1934. (See her in Goldwyn's "Marco Polo".)

Every pack wrapped in 2 jackets of Cellophane; the OUTER jacket opens from the BOTTOM.

Freshness is the special charm of Old Golds, too!

THE most priceless and perishable charm a star—or a cigarette—can have, is freshness. No effort, no expense, is too great to guard it. For if it fades, down goes "box office appeal".

Hollywood spends fabulous sums to prolong the freshness of its stars. Old Gold spends a fortune to protect—for you—the freshness of prize crop tobaccos.

Just as too much exposure coarsens beauty, so dryness, dampness and dust rob fine tobaccos of smoothness and flavor. To give you Old Golds at the very peak of appealing freshness, every Old Gold package is double-sealed, in 2 jackets of moisture-proof Cellophane.

Try a pack of Double-Mellow Old Golds, and discover how much factory-freshness adds to your smoking pleasure!

TUNE IN on Old Gold's Hollywood Screenscoops, Tues. and Thurs. nights, Columbia Network, Coast-to-Coast.

HERE'S HOW I KEEP TOILETS CLEAN AS A CHINA DISH

It's no trouble to keep a toilet sparkling clean and sanitary. You don't even have to touch the toilet with your hands. Just sprinkle a little SANI-FLUSH in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet and that's all!

SANI-FLUSH is made to do this job. It removes stains. It puts an end to toilet odors. It kills germs. It purifies the hidden trap. Porcelain glistens like new. SANI-FLUSH can't injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, O.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

FOR WONDERFUL IRONINGS

Try this FREE

Here's that new way to do hot starching without mixing, boiling or straining as with old fashioned lump starch. Everything already included in powdered form. Makes starching easy. Makes ironing easy. See how elasticity and that fresh new look are given back to curtains, aprons, play clothes, soft collars and shirts. Your iron fairly glides. A wonderful invention. Send now.

THANK YOU

THE HUBINGER CO., No. 591, Keokuk, Ia.

Your free sample of QUICK ELASTIC, please, "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

.....

BETWEEN YOU

"Why should an actor once typed remain so until doomsday?" a Minnesota fan pleads.

$5.00 Prize Letter
I Confess

If you'd walk down a certain street in Seattle you'd see a legless man seated on a corner selling his pencils and needles. No matter how hot the sun, no matter how cold the wind, he's always there. If purchases aren't made, people stop to chat and leave a coin in the cup with the comment, "I don't see how you can keep so cheerful just sitting there hour after hour. It's a pleasure to talk with you. . . ."

And then I say, "Well, I get it from the movies!" Twice a week a neighbor takes me to the movies, otherwise I couldn't go. I go to the movies for something real, not just make-believe. And I get it. I'm admitted into a land of youth and romance, a land where the memory of happier days is jogged, days when I was young and whole and dashing like Fredric March, when I had a wife like Norma Shearer and a son like Freddie Bartholomew. There, in the darkness of the theatre I feel a human warmth and sympathy, the world is brimming over with kindness, sparkle and interest.

Perhaps I'm tired of just sitting on a corner; I want to move, to feel free. There in a Western I see myself making a mad scramble for my broad-rimmed hat and my favorite "painted hoss" and my craving for the far, green hills, wide plains and fast riding is satisfied.

The movies have not only given me consolation, intelligent information and romance, but they have taught me to be brave, to have faith and courage. "Seventh Heaven" brought me my favorite philosophy: "Never look down, always look up." The movies—God bless 'em!—M. Matthews, Seattle, Wash.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Please, Don't Type Them

Did you see Irene Dunne in "The Awful Truth" and try to imagine her as she was in Magnificent Obsession?" Did you see "Night Must Fall" and picture Robert Montgomery as the charming Piccadilly Jim? Did you see "Parnell" and remember Gable in "It Happened One Night?" If you did, you're a fop! and I can imagine how much you enjoyed each picture. Yet one of our ardent fans writes to tell us that once you are typed on the screen you must remain in your particular groove until doomsday as far as he is concerned. To be specific—if you have the misfortune to play a swashbuckling villain well in several plays, you are doomed to remain in that category for the rest of your screen career.

One honorable commentator goes even further—he cites an example. It seems that in the role of a priest in "Captains Courageous," Jack La Rue caused quite a sensation—due to his previous gangster pictures. Our "typester" says that when Jack came into the scene as a priest the audience howled. Now I saw this picture twice, and I don't remember the "howling" at any time during the entire feature. May I add that if anyone was fool enough to laugh at Mr. La Rue in that scene, regardless of the nature of his former roles, I hope with all my heart that he bit his tongue.

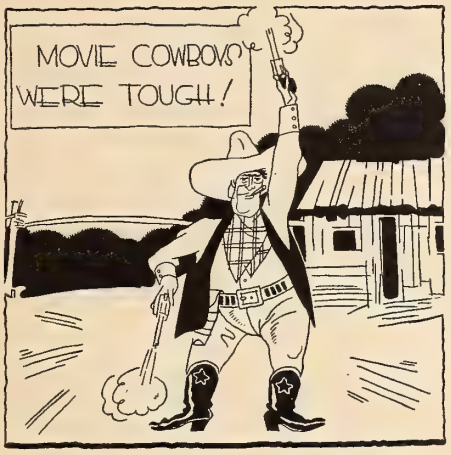
I'm not advocating actors taking parts they cannot handle, but I do say that it doesn't hurt to try different characters so that they won't become "typed." The word "act" means to be able to portray all kinds of people and all kinds of emotions—and anyone worthy of the name "actor" should be able to step from one role into another with comparative ease. Don't, oh, please don't type our villains—let them have more than one screen personality—give them a chance to show what they can do.—E. A. Nelson, St. Paul, Minn.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Is That Relaxation?

I have just returned from a section of the country where the double feature program has made little headway. What a pleasant change it was upon several occasions to leave the theatre after a two-hour varied program, feeling refreshed with a bit of comedy, broadened by the news, mentally stimulated by a brief educational feature, and inspired, perhaps, by the main feature. Mind you I said two hours!

But, woe is me, upon returning to the metropolitan area, I find that the double feature program is still packing them in at the neighborhood houses, and I'd like to know why!

Unless I foresightedly inquire the showing time of the feature presentation, I must sit through an inferior quickie, coming attractions, advertising, and maybe bingo or bank night before the title I've been waiting for is flashed on the screen. After three or three and one half hours of twisting and squirming to ease my—er—position, I leave the theatre, nigh onto midnight, with an aching back, a splitting head, and my bones fairly screaming protest. Now I ask you, is that relaxation?—Harriet Bossard, New York, N. Y.



$1.00 Prize Letter
Is it Fair?

Is it fair? I ask myself that question every time I read about a "new discovery"—a star over night.

Many of our foreign stars have been ushered to success over night—some justly, some unjustly—but what about our little starlets who strive for their big chance and get the cold shoulder from their studios? What about those grand little beauties who play bit parts, sometimes stealing the show,

'N' ME

Have your say! Why shouldn't you be the lucky winner of one of our nine monthly cash prizes?

From a young lady in Seattle comes the cry for tougher and rougher Westerns.

but who continue to play these parts until the public recognizes their names? They receive practically no notice from the press until after three or four years and there at least they might get a break.

I cite the example of Marie Wilson. I have watched her every inch of the way. When I read of her getting the lead in "Boy Meets Girl," I gave a sigh of relief. "It's about time!" said I. Why that gal's grand—such comedy, such a personality, and real beauty, too! But how long has it taken Mr. and Mrs. Movie Fan and all the little Movie Fans to recognize her? Not because they didn't enjoy her work! Horrors, no! But because they saw her occasionally, enjoyed her, but not seeing her again for a long time, forgot her. If her studio had played her up big, like some of these overnight sensations, Marie would be right on top today—and rightfully, too.

Why is it some stars have to take the hard road—and others such an easy one? Is it fair? I'd like an answer!—Norma Sharp, Collingswood, N. J.

$1.00 Prize Letter
More Power to Westerns

Where are the good old Westerns? There are, of course, films like "Wells Fargo," "The Plainsman," and "Girl of the Golden West," but it isn't the superproductions in which I'm interested. It's the plain everyday horse-opera which you see at the corner show or sandwiched in on a double-featured bill.

Though they've been stream-lined and bedecked with the most modern touches, though the plaintive and beautiful cowboy melodies add a romantic dash, the old up-and-at-'em pattern with its stock situations is not the same.

Neither are the characters. The heroines

WRITE A LETTER—

WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

PLAY SAFE the MAVIS Way!

the "Undies" Test proves how this amazing talcum guards your daintiness

MAVIS
TALCUM

What good times you can have in the summer! Beach parties . . . dances . . . dates with a man who adores you!

But you'll miss all this happiness, unless you're careful to guard your daintiness. So always, before you dress, shower your body with Mavis Talcum. It's the easy, delightful way to guard against giving offense.

Make the undies test and prove what amazing protection Mavis Talcum gives. Tomorrow morning, shower your body with Mavis Talcum . . . then at night, notice that your undies are fresh and sweet. This proves that you, yourself, have been sweet, dainty and alluring!

Mavis Talcum reduces the amount you perspire because it forms a soothing film of protection between your clothing and your skin. And the Mavis fragrance is divinely glamorous! Get your Mavis Talcum today. Generous quantities — 10¢, 25¢, 50¢, $1. V. VIVAUDOU, INC.

TRIPLE WHIPPED CREAM
AIDS DRY SKIN

★BOOTS MALLORY

PRAISED BY MOVIE STARS

If your skin is dry and therefore rough you owe it to yourself to try the new triple-whipped cream, called TAYTON'S CREAM. Modern electric production methods and triple-whipping make TAYTON'S CREAM so soft, light and fine in texture, that it spreads evenly and thoroughly, resulting in true cleansing, lubrication, freshening and softening.

And equally important, modern high speed machinery produces a sterilized glass jar for Tayton's at a saving of one-half compared with most cosmetic jars. This saving is passed on to you in two ways; the purest and most expensive ingredients that money can buy and double the quantity. The 10c jar contains one ounce, while most others contain only one-half ounce. Compare these facts for yourself.

TAYTON'S is tops in quality. It has been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. And the glamorous movie stars also praise Tayton's—for instance lovely Boots Mallory says: "I use Tayton's Cream to cleanse and keep my skin smooth and youthful looking."

You can't know the joy that TAYTON'S can bring until you try it. Get a jar of TAYTON'S Cream at your 10c store today. Put it to the test. See how it cleanses, softens and lubricates dryness. If your dealer is out ask manager to order for you or send 10c to Tayton's Dept. F. 811 W. 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Accepted Approved ★ 5018 Good Housekeeping Bureau

FREE POWDER SAMPLE COUPON

Take this coupon to any 10c store for free generous trial packets of Tayton's new, no-shine, silk-sifted Face Powder with purchase of 10c jar of Tayton's Cream. See the new colors. How fine it is. How it stays on—will not cake. If store is out of samples send coupon to us with 3c stamp to cover mailing cost. Tayton Co

LONG LASTING • FAST DRYING CURLS

Now! A special lotion for use with any hair curler, bobby pin, or clip. Easy to use, not sticky or greasy. Makes long-lasting, fast-drying curls even in damp weather. Get Wildroot Curling Lotion Today!

10¢ at all drug counters
15 Cents in Canada

NEW WILDROOT CURLING LOTION

BE A NURSE

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates, 39th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 239, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age____

aren't as fiery and independent—remember the spit-fires Ann Little, Neva Gerber and Ruth Roland? The villains have a strain of Sir Galahad in their Simon LeGree make-up, while nature's nobleman, the hero, is imbued with a streak of Don Quixote. Even the rattle of the gun-fire isn't as menacing as before. The old Westerns were strong pictures! Harry Carey's "Start Reachin'" was enough to make me hang onto the edge of the seat for weeks. Bill Hart thrilled me more than all the Taylors and Powers put together.

Then too, today the love interest is tucked in just as if it were a necessary evil. But the old silents made the love part essential, vivid, alive. And Western stories do it that way, you know.—Samela Parkhurst, Seattle, Wash.

$1.00 Prize Letter
A Change for Sylvia

It's about time someone took the shadows away from Sylvia Sidney and brought out the sunlight that surely must be somewhere within her. Every picture Miss Sidney appears in, she must be the morose, morbid heroine, in the toils of the law, speaking with trembling lips, eyes weary from crying, and railing against humanity's unkindness.

I'm sure she is capable of carrying brighter roles. Why not let her do a good sophisticated comedy for a change? Anything—anything to get her out of those whole-world-against-the-girl roles.—C. L. Mersich, San Francisco, Cal.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Unspoiled Shirley

It seems to me to be more than a happy thought for Shirley's parents to take their wonder child on a personal tour so that the public can see at close range what an honest to goodness real human being this beautiful child is.

It was my good fortune last August to be present on shipboard across the Pacific with Shirley and her parents and at the hotel in Honolulu where they stopped.

Naturally, I was intrigued and observed things closely. To my mind, Shirley is even more beautiful off than on the screen. She had the most charming, unaffected manners in the world—those of a natural, unspoiled child with a spontaneous little smile that won everyone's heart instantly.

Her parents seemed to me to be people of rare good sense who, while keeping a watchful eye over Shirley, were never fussy, conspicuous nor seeking the lime light, either for themselves or their famous little daughter.

Another thing that struck me was the really nice way the public behaved toward Shirley. Always considerate and deferential, they never crowded nor inconvenienced her in the slightest degree. She took the homage as a matter of course, and still remained, as I think she always will, the same darling unspoiled Shirley.—Mrs. J. L. O'Connell, Washington, D. C.

$1.00 Prize Letter
What Price Stardom?

If you'd enjoy living a private life like that of the proverbial goldfish; rising early and working long hours under bright lights; dieting to the point of starvation to thwart a few excess pounds; having your clothes torn to shreds by souvenir-hunting crowds whenever you go out; signing autograph books 'till you have writer's cramp; having people gossip about you, pry into your affairs, and invent all sorts of stories about your past and present; being besieged by reporters whenever you stick your nose out the front door; being told to dye your hair, have your teeth straightened, to be nice to so-and-so because of the effect on your fans; then, my dear, you want to be a movie star.—Margaret Forster, Welland, Ont.

$1.00 Prize Letter
The English Accent

Pardon my English accent, but there's a fellow here by the name of Laughton who has just made a film "Vessel of Wrath" that in point of subtle artistry is way ahead of his Hollywood performances. Of course, there are only six hula dancers instead of the three thousand chorines we have been led to expect in modern spectacles.

But there is a certain quiet satisfaction in viewing a picture that relies on convincing acting rather than vulgar display and I only hope that success will attend such a praiseworthy production.

I like a good tap-dance or blues singer as much as anyone, but the mass attack of noise, numbers and nuts that seem to be an essential feature of today's musical pictures is sending me whacky.—John Lane, London, England.

THE INFORMATION DESK

(Continued from page 87)

Marcella Griffith, Paget, Bermuda. The music for the picture "Robin Hood" was written by E. W. Korngold. Music and lyrics for "The Girl of the Golden West" were written by Romberg and Kahn. Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson wrote the music and lyrics for "Mad About Music."

A. Spinelli, New York City. To sell movie stories you should get yourself an experienced literary agent who knows the requirements of the various Studios and can contact the proper executives for you. These days few stories are sold by the author direct.

Katharine Boyer, Savery, Wyo. Cary Grant's real name is Archibald Leach. Paul Muni's name is Muni Weisenfreund. The Ritz brothers' name is Joachim. Fred Allen's name is Sullivan.

Dorothy Beattie, Jackson, Mo. In "The Girl of the Golden West" the part of Jeanette MacDonald (Mary) as a child was played by Jeanne Ellis. You can address her in care of M-G-M Studios, Hollywood, Cal. Jeanette MacDonald was born in Philadelphia, June 18, 1907.

Ruth Ness, Miami, Fla. Bing Crosby was born in Tacoma, Wash. on May 2, 1904. He has blue eyes, brown hair, is five feet nine inches tall and weighs one hundred and sixty-five pounds. His children's names are Gary, Dennis, Philip and Lindsay.

Stanford Hale, Lake Sunapee, N. H. Full page pictures of Jean Harlow appeared in MODERN SCREEN in January 1937, and February 1937. If you will send ten cents a copy to our circulation department you may secure these back issues.

Yvonne Claret, Montreal, Canada. Ralph Bellamy was born in Chicago on June 17, 1904. He is six feet tall, weighs one hundred seventy-eight pounds, has blue eyes and light brown hair.

Shirley Owens, Shaw Island, Wash. The names of the "Dead End" boys are Leo Gorcey, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and Gabriel Dell. You can address them in care of Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, Cal.

Josephine Newman, Brooklyn, N. Y. Merle Oberon's real name is Estelle Merle O'Brien Thompson. She was born on the island of Tasmania, February 19, 1911, of English parents.

THE MYSTERY OF MISS GAYNOR

(Continued from page 39)

that's chance. I haven't meant to stay away from them. But it's difficult, when you've worked as constantly as I have. When you're free, they're busy, and the other way 'round. I've made my friends probably as you've made yours. You don't feel that because you write, all your friends must be writers. You go along, you meet someone, something clicks, and there you are. One of my best friends is an actress, one's my hairdresser, one's a doctor, another teaches art appreciation, others I've met at the beach—all are just people I like. It's so simple that it's hard to explain. Does that make it a mystery?

"Of course, when you spend much time with friends who aren't in the limelight, that keeps you out too. At first, there was another reason. I was terribly shy. We jumped into the middle of things so quickly." (The Gaynor "we" includes Janet and her mother). "If I could have been just a girl at a party, I'd have loved to go to parties. But to be somebody people stared at terrified the life out of me."

THAT was in the days when "Seventh Heaven" catapulted her into sudden prominence. She was wild with happiness. There's never been anything blasé about her. A star among stars, she was as excited over their doings as a girl in Podunk. But rather than venture among them, she'd stay at home and get her thrills second hand from Charlie Farrell.

It was Charlie who'd sally forth, top hat and tails, into the wide world, then come back and report to a wide-eyed and eager Janet the marvels he'd encountered. One night he'd dined with the So-and-sos. "And you know where they ate?" His voice promised a minor miracle.

"No. Where did they eat?"

"Well, you won't believe it. It's amazing. They didn't eat in the dining-room at all."

"Not in the ——! Well, for heaven's sake, where did they eat?"

"On a bridge table! In the living-room! Right in front of the fireplace!"

"Not really, Charlie!" Next night she and her mother would sit beaming at each other across a bridge table in front of the fireplace. "Do I look like a movie star now?" Janet would demand.

That phase passed. Timidly at first, then with more assurance, she stepped into the Hollywood social stream. After a while, finding she didn't care for it, she stepped out again. "It's as if you'd gone through an interesting experience, and all of a sudden you're back, living the life you've always wanted to live, where, if you use the wrong fork, it doesn't matter."

Nor does it matter if you don't live in a mansion among the stars. "We were going to build a house like the rest of them, had our lot bought and our plans drawn up. Then we changed our minds. What had started as a small house threatened to turn into a white elephant. You see, when you've lived in a place for a long time, as we have here, you put up with its disadvantages. When you build, you want the earth—a terrace here, a huge dressing-room there and all sorts of things. One day mother said to me, 'We're going to rattle around like a couple of peas in that barn.'

"Then there were the servants." The servants, as it turned out, compose a retinue. First, there's the chauffeur who's been There's harmony in those voices and rhythm in those tootsies! Left to right, Gale Page, Lola, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane.

NOW...introducing
FLAMINGO
America's finest
NAIL POLISH

★ —Easier Application
—Wears and WEARS
—New HIGHER lustre

The most exquisite Nail Polish you've ever tried...FLAMINGO, guaranteed Beauty-Salon Super-quality! FLAMINGO Nail Polish is Hollywood-produced for the world's most exacting nail-beauty demands...Choose your favorite of FLAMINGO'S 20 distinct popular shades for new glamour on every occasion

★ ...now being introduced at better 10¢ stores. ★

FLAMINGO
NAIL POLISH

STOP Itching
TORTURE This Quick Way

For quick relief from the itching of eczema, blotches, pimples, athlete's foot, scales, rashes and other externally caused skin eruptions, use cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION. Original formula of Doctor Dennis. Greaseless and stainless. Soothes the irritation and quickly stops the most intense itching. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or your money back. Ask for D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION.

Sensational FREE Offer!

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous REJUVIA Lipsticks "None Better Made" FREE...each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks...that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

REJUVIA LIPSTICK

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. KC, 116 W. 14th ST., N.Y.C.
Send me 3 trial size REJUVIA Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs. (15c in Canada).
NAME
ADDRESS

ONLY 10¢ AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

with them for eight years. "He's the first I ever had, and I'm the first he ever had. Isn't that nice?" she asked like a gleeful child. Then there's Fanny, the cook. Fanny came to her one day with the story of a sister and brother-in-law in the East who wanted to come to California. "Tell them to come. We'll find something for them to do." Fanny hesitated. "Also they have two children," she finally blurted. Fanny's sister is now the Gaynors' maid. Her brother-in-law works out three days a week, and takes care of the Gaynor garden the rest of the time. The children go to school. The roomy old house accommodates them all. "But by the time you got them into a house on a hilltop, it would be a monster. So we're staying put," she finished contentedly.

She's done what's generally considered impossible to a movie star—kept an originally normal sense of values, ignored the unwritten law that in Hollywood you've got to put up a front. Her beach home—not at fashionable Malibu, but at Venice where the oil derricks bloom—is just large enough for herself and her mother. The cook sleeps over the garage. A stranger, spying her on the beach, would say, "Hm, looks like Janet Gaynor, but it can't be. What would she be doing in a place like this?" That's why she's there. She no longer dreads the limelight. But she finds herself more comfortable in the shade.

Because of her friendship with Tyrone Power, her public appearances have grown more frequent of late. A great deal of nonsense has been rumored and written on the subject of their romance. It's been said, for example, that they fell in love at sight. They first met on the set of "Ladies in Love." Tyrone had been a fan of Janet's for years, but he didn't venture to tell her so. They worked in the same picture, and that was that. Then one night they met at a friend's home. They began exchanging reminiscences of their ushering days.

"My great ambition was to be promoted downstairs," said Janet.

"You too? That makes me feel better. They'd never let me come down from the gallery either. You know what used to keep me awake nights? I'd be holding a couple of seats—"

"I know. And a man would come in and grab one instead of taking a single farther back where you wanted him to sit."

"What did you do?"

"Gnashed my teeth and grinned. What did you do?"

"Grinned and gnashed my teeth."

That was how it started. Tyrone took Janet home. They discovered they had deeper interests in common—a passion for books and ideas. Before long they were spending all their spare time together. Tyrone had met a woman who stimulated him, Janet a man with a mind as eager as her own. If they were also in love, that was their business. They kept their own counsel, as you'd expect them to.

THE business of the gossip-mongers is to watch them like hawks, guess at what they don't know. The formula is simple. If they fail to appear at a nightclub for a week or two, they're no longer friends. The formula fails to take into consideration the pleasure of quiet evenings beside a cozy log fire.

Just about a month ago columnists were featuring the news that "the Gaynor-Power twosome had gone on the rocks." Janet was in Palm Springs. Tyrone was working in "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Even as the tongues wagged, he was hopping a plane, though his studio forbids flying. Arrived at Palm Springs, he spent thirty minutes with Janet, and then flew back again.

Her pleasures are the quiet kind. "A book, a game of golf, a phone call you didn't expect, having a few friends to dinner and talking it over 'round the fire afterwards." She finds deep satisfaction in adventures of the mind. Recently she's taken to painting. It's not her creations that excite her, but the fact that her eyes have been opened to a new and glorious world of color to which she'd been blind. "I'm beginning to see rose and violet," she said, her eyes sparkling, "where I used to see only gray."

There's a core of quietness within Janet Gaynor from which she seems to draw both her cheerfulness and her strength. Partly it's the fruit of her own living and thinking, partly a heritage from the mother to whom she's so close.

Laura Gaynor has the rare adaptability that can bridge the chasm between two generations. She has been the companion of Janet's lighter moments, and her bulwark in time of stress. Coming from a simple Philadelphia home, she fought her own shyness as her daughter did, and with the zest for adventure of the young in spirit, marched step for step with Janet into the new life. They smoked their first cigarettes, drank their first cocktails together. Every morning they play golf together. Between them they handle Janet's business. Mrs. Gaynor also shares Janet's sense of values. On those few occasions when fundamental differences have arisen between studio and star, and Janet has brought the problem to her mother, there's been no question of choice for Mrs. Gaynor. "Better make twenty-five dollars a week and be on your own, than go through the torments we've seen some people go through."

Elsie Reade, Vyvyan Donner, Frances Conier and little Barbara Devine enjoy four o'clock tea while making one of Miss Donner's Movietone Fashion shorts. We wonder what the tea leaves tell.

"She'd be my friend, even if she weren't my mother," says Janet. "Yet I'm still just her child, and when I make a mistake, she tells me so."

Having learned something of her own method of checking up on herself, you can't help feeling that the need doesn't often arise. Through all her years of stardom, she has never for long lost sight of the girl who used to usher in the gallery of a San Francisco theatre, who used to clerk in an antique shop in Chinatown for nine dollars a week and go home at night, her feet so swollen that she all but cried.

That other Janet keeps a firm hold on Janet the star. She's frank to admit that the star sometimes yields to the temptation of acting like a star. "I'll go into a bungalow and decide I don't like the color of the curtains, and ask to have them changed. But I'm always aware of this other girl inside me, giving me the bird: 'Be yourself, Janet. Remember when you'd have burst with joy at any curtains—let alone a bungalow.'"

She sat silent for a moment, then spoke slowly. "I've been successful easily, so I haven't the same right to talk as people who've been through a great deal. Neither do I mean to sound as if I'd read two pages of philosophy and was trying to give it all out again. But even a movie star," she smiled, "can't help thinking.

"I never get into an elevator without feeling how awful to have to make this thing go up and down, up and down all day. I never go into a beauty shop without feeling a little ashamed. You know how hard those girls work. I drive up in a car, a chauffeur helps me out, I have nothing to do but relax for a couple of hours while they fix me up. 'Are you tired?' they ask me. 'Are you getting enough rest?' And they mean it. It's not just a sales talk. I often wonder how they can keep that attitude when they have so little and I have so much. And I've never wanted anything more than to feel I might be like that, if all this were ever taken away from me.

"Don't misunderstand me. It's lovely to have lovely things. When I was in Venice, I bought some Venetian glass. It was my first visit and I thought, 'Here goes. This time I'm going to do it up brown.' Of course I enjoy having it and looking at it and using it, because it's beautiful. But what if I worried every time it was brought out? What if I kept thinking, suppose somebody breaks it? I'd be letting it make me miserable instead of happy, deliberately hurting myself—for what? I never want anything to possess me so I can't let it go.

BECAUSE in the final analysis," said Janet, a curious gentleness in her voice, "though things can possess you, you can't possess anything—but yourself. Suppose you're in love. Who tells you it's going to last? Suppose you're happily married. Who tells you an accident won't destroy your happiness? What's inside yourself—that's the only thing in this world you're sure of. That's what you have to live with. So why not make the best you can of it?"

There is no mystery—at least, none of Gaynor's making. There's a girl who's passed through the glitter, and come out at the other end, serene, wise, kindly, compassionate. I remembered Tyrone Power's saying to me once, "Janet makes me feel more alive than anyone I've ever met. She starts things going in my head that I never knew were there. She'll make a casual remark that'll throw a search-light on something I'd been groping for in the dark. I never realized before how exciting it was just to talk."

Those closest to them are convinced that they'll never marry, that their feeling for each other will, by its nature, mellow into a staunch and lasting friendship. Once you've had a taste of her quality, you can understand how winning Janet Gaynor as a friend would enrich any life.

HE WANTS TO DISAPPEAR

(Continued from page 46)

a private plane and flies, he and the pilot, by themselves. Slim flies sometimes for a couple of days. He likes, also, to go on a bust, a bender. When he is feeling a little tightish, his laziness vanishes, gives way to prodigious energy. He usually goes to San Francisco. He tears up the town and has a terrific time. His best pal in San Francisco is Frank Martinelli of the Bal Tabarin. They do up the town from Nob Hill to Chinatown and back again.

SLIM LIKES to go into his kitchen and mess about with a meal, which, he says, no one can eat. He is the biggest softie in the world. A hand held out to Slim is a hand filled, without question. He is especially a "softie" when it comes to ragged little newsboys. There is one thing in the world which could rouse Slim from his loafing—and that is the thought of a kid in need. That appeal has never failed.

He is of the school of Isaak Walton, of Thoreau, men who counted the world well lost for the woods and streams, men who watched the sunsets and felt no need of theatres nor of society. He is of the ilk of Will Rogers, is Slim, kin to all plain and homely men with homespun hearts. He has one passion in life—his young adopted son. He has one ambition in life—to loaf. He has one plan and aim in life—to disappear, utterly and completely.

Slim Summerville was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, on a tenth of July over forty years ago. His mother died when he was five. His father took him to live with an aunt in Chatham, Ontario, Canada. But Slim was constantly "disappearing." So when he was ten, he was sent to live with another aunt in Oklahoma. It was there, a year or so later, that he first wanted, consciously, to "disappear"—and did. He ran away, not to "make his fortune," as is customary in fiction. No, Slim didn't aspire to worldly gain. The Fords, the Morgans, the Rockefellers have always left him cold. He ran away from the schoolroom. He ran away from "being a name on the roll call." He ran away from books, and from learning "things that don't matter."

I STOP PERSPIRATION

I AM dri-dew

THE NEW CREAM DEODORANT

I AM APPROVED by the American Institute of Laundering, and the Nat'l Ass'n of Dyers and Cleaners

I do not dry up in the jar

I do not irritate, even right after shaving

I am not greasy and I'm safe

I smell nice and clean

I am a new member of the well-known family of DEW deodorants

I do not harm towels or clothes

I WILL KEEP YOUR SECRET

P.S.
I am sure you will find I am the last word in cream deodorants that stop perspiration

BECOME AN EXPERT
ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 16,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LASALLE EXTENSION, Dept. 9318-H Chicago

The School That Has In Its Alumni Over 1,450 C.P.A.'s

STREAKED HAIR?

This way brings even color

FADED streaks — dull strands — grayness —all vanish at the touch of this famous clear, water-like liquid. Just comb it on and color comes: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Hair stays soft—easy to curl or wave. Entirely SAFE. Millions know this time-tested way. Get bottle from your druggist or department store on money-back guarantee.

Test it FREE ~ Will you try Mary T. Goldman's on single lock snipped from hair? No risk this way. We send complete Free Test. . . . Mail coupon.

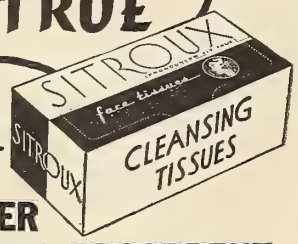
MARY T. GOLDMAN
2331 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Name.....
Street.....
City..... State.....
Color of your hair?.....

MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM
KEEPS YOUR SKIN
Young-Looking

Mercolized Wax Cream flakes off the surface skin in tiny, invisible particles. Reveals the clear, soft, smooth, young looking underskin. This simple, all-in-one cleansing, softening and beautifying cream has been a favorite for over a quarter century with lovely women the world over. Bring out the hidden beauty of your skin with Mercolized Wax Cream.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily



THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

CALL ME SIT-TRUE

STRONGER
• MORE ABSORBENT
AT 5 AND 10¢ AND BETTER DEPARTMENT STORES

FIX THINGS!
Books
Furniture
Toys
Leather
Glassware
China

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores
BOUGHT BY MILLIONS EVERYWHERE

YOUR choice included with every ring ordered and paid for on this Amazing new plan—Wear 10 days at our risk!

FREE of extra charge

GUARANTEE by a famous $1,000,000 factory enclosed! ACCURATE, JEWELED, Rich. Your choice included FREE of extra charge to introduce fiery, flashing simulated diamond ring set in LIFETIME Sterling—925/1000 pure and 1/30 14K GOLD—WEAR 10 days FREE TRIAL. Make 2 monthly $2 payments (total $4 in all). We gladly trust you—Send NO money—send postcard—your order shipped SAME DAY by RETURN MAIL.
GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO., Dept. 329, Newton, Mass.

KIDNEYS MUST CLEAN OUT ACIDS

Your body cleans out excess Acids and poisonous wastes in your blood thru 9 million tiny delicate Kidney tubes or filters. If functional disorders due to germs in the Kidneys or Bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Backache, Swollen Joints, Acidity, or Burning Passages, don't rely on ordinary medicines. Fight such germs with the doctor's prescription Cystex. Cystex starts working in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Sisstex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr 1937 The Knox Co.

For six years Slim knocked about the United States, Canada, and Mexico. He worked in coffin factories, and thought "it wouldn't be bad to be dead." He worked in brick yards, lumber mills, machine shops. Occasionally he played small parts in amateur shows. He kind of liked that. It was one way of disappearing, for when he put on a costume and grease-paint, he wasn't George Somerville at all. He was someone else. His own identity "disappeared." He worked in the fields, and forests, in shops and cities. He learned that the less you say the better off you are, the less you do the more time you have for loafing and inviting your spirit.

In Tootencarry, New Mexico, in the course of his wanderings, Slim "found" his father. Slim landed there after riding the rods for long, wild nights. He was hungry and he wanted a meal. He had "two bits" and a railroad pass belonging to his father, whose face he didn't remember, whose whereabouts he didn't know.

The tall station master looked long at the bit of pasteboard which was a railroad pass. He looked long at the tall, hungry, dusty young man who was carrying it. He said to the lad, "How much have you got on you?" "Two bits," the boy replied. The station master, without blinking, took the two bits from the boy, told him to go and eat his fill at the adjacent lunch wagon. When the boy returned to the yard he found awaiting him not only the two bits but—a father. They have seldom been separated since.

SLIM, "on the bum," rode the rods into Los Angeles. He planned to visit an uncle there, get a job, send for his Dad. He didn't find the uncle. He "postponed" his meals for three days. Finally, in desperation, he took a job as a poolroom porter, washing out the cuspidors, racking up the balls. And in the course of time he became acquainted with a jovial chap, though dour of face, named Edgar Kennedy.

Edgar was a small-time comedian at a movie studio, and through his good offices Slim secured work at the, to him, princely sum of three dollars and fifty cents a day. He became a fixture on the studio police force. He was so tall, so thin, so gloomy. And, best of all, he could "take a pie." Why not, when the gravel of most of the road-beds in the country had zinged him in the face?

He became the first "guaranteed" extra in the business. For, when other studios sought him, his own offered him the astounding guarantee of four working days a week for twelve dollars flat rate. Slim took the guarantee. He was featured in a series of comedies. He became one of his studio's ace directors.

Then over went Slim Summerville to another lot and for several years directed Clyde Cook and "Unreal Newsreels." He moved over to a third studio and directed a series of shorts featuring Arthur Lake. He guesses that the grease-paint must have seeped into his blood, perhaps on account of how he was always too lazy to wash it off at nights. Anyway, he decided to return to acting.

Slim's first real recognition came when he played in "Troopers Three," and he got his big break as Tjaden in "All Quiet on the Western Front." Since then he has done the same role in "The Road Back," Tjaden being the only character who lives on in the sequel. For a time he was co-starred with Zasu Pitts, but he doesn't believe in "teams." He played with Will Rogers in "Life Begins at Forty," and was promptly signed to a long-term contract. His favorite role was in "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

He likes his work. It's easier than any way he knows of making the same rather more-than-substantial living. It's because his wide-open heart automatically opens his hands and wallet that he isn't a very wealthy man. He never will be. He's just not the type.

Summerville guesses that his work has improved. There's some characterization to it now. He doesn't have to "take pies" any longer. He isn't just a comic. The character he plays on the screen is a four-dimensional, definite identity. He spends most of his off-the-set time in the studio playing with Shirley Temple, wrestling with Jane Withers.

He could write, as perhaps no one else could, the saga of a quarter century of Hollywood, memories of the days when Gloria Swanson, Charlie Chaplin, Wally Beery, Zasu Pitts, Marie Prevost and others were "taking pies" at Sennetts. He never will write it because, he says, "I never paid much attention to 'em." He changed his name from Somerville to Summerville. He doesn't know just why. "Perhaps because it was one way of disappearing a little," he says.

He told me the other day, "I have only one aching desire in my life—to have my boy with me every hour of every day. I couldn't love that little feller more if he were my own flesh and blood. He's grown right into me. Why, he even looks like me. I plan to adopt another baby, maybe two more, another boy, and a baby girl. That's all I want to do."

Most people don't know that Slim adopted small Elliott before the child was born. He knew the case, and circumstances. When Elliott was four days old, Slim took him to the hospital, had him placed in an incubator. He was premature, delicate. His chances were slim. Every care that money could buy, that love could suggest, Slim gave to that baby. At home he had a model nursery installed. He had nurses and doctors. He sent him to nursery school. Elliott is indeed the child of Slim's spirit, the inheritor of his heart.

"I have only one ambition in life," Slim was saying, "and that's to loaf. And what I mean by loafing is to do exactly what I feel like doing. I don't sit and think—I just sit. Or I fish or wade around out there in the ocean. I want to take my wife, 'Brownie,' and my boy, Elliott, and just live and loaf and be unknown. That's all I ask of life."

Take it from Johnny Davis, this movie business is serious! His next is "Garden of the Moon."

SHE'S A SOFTIE

(Continued from page 47)

warmth, good nature. Letting police dog lie wherever it may be, you subtly assume Miss Oliver's bark is worse than her bite.

"Indeed it is!" she laughs. "I'm not actually the hard-boiled old woman I'm supposed to be. I'm really a nice lady," this with a gay grimace to let you know she isn't taking herself seriously. "The rest is Hollywood, which probably will never give me any rest from the type of part I'm forever doing. Still, there's a bit of variety from time to time. In 'Parnell,' for example, I played a wealthy old aunt with great understanding of life—regal, Victorian, witty—and to a dull person like myself it was gratifying to be witty!"

Another merry peal rings with her sense of humor. To your great delight, you find that she is really good fun.

"For the life of me," she declares, "I've never been able to understand why Hollywood gave me parts designed to frighten little children. I was a little girl myself once, if you can believe it. Not a very nice little girl, I'm afraid, for I loved to dress up outrageously and give most shocking imitations of people who came to the house. As a child I was crazy to act, the only one in our family with this obsession, so today I have no one to blame but myself. To add to the mystery, all my forbears were straight laced New Englanders."

NOW you understand that brass knocker. Your understanding grows when Miss Oliver mentions her birthplace, Boston, with an accent pure and unmistakable.

"A violent change took place when I went on the New York stage," she relates. "Advised there might be a part for me in a musical comedy, of all things, I went to the theatre where it was in rehearsal, galoshes, umbrella and all. My dismal appearance among those gay people was, apparently, so affrighting that it stopped the rehearsal. Everybody simply stood and stared. But I got the part. It was in 'Oh, Boy!' No, I didn't sing, but I did a dance—yes, really. I played a Quaker aunt. She had never felt her oats, poor thing, but someone put something in her cambric tea and the old lady got quite ginny."

When, drunk with unholy mirth, you remark that even the most rigid may find it agreeable to relax on occasion, Miss Oliver, with a twinkle in her eye, agrees.

"True. But, believe me, it is quite impossible to relax in forty weeks of one-night stands. That was part of my three-years' experience in 'Oh, Boy!' And when I was making one picture, 'Parnell,' I had to stand up hours on end. My dress weighed no less than fifty pounds, and I wore steel corsets that made me feel like a by-product of the United States Steel Corporation. I couldn't sit down in the darn things without cramping my style, not to mention other trifles, so I did a lot of heavy standing around. About eleven every morning I was ready to fold up. But, instead, I just bucked up."

This woman of steel sighs and lights a cigarette before you can beat her to a match. Then, "I tire very easily. I'm up at six o'clock, then work at the studio till six, but I always quit on the dot. The producer caught me at it one evening when we were making a picture and exclaimed, 'Great Scott, do you belong to a union? The minute it's six you drop your tools!' He was right. With me it's just a hard grind. I'm really not too strong."

For the first time you notice that this vital actress of vigorous roles is, physically, a curious contradiction. She is actually frail, utterly unlike the screen characterizations she embodies so robustly.

"I have an idea," she reflects, "that audiences always think I'm like the woman I happen to be playing. I don't like to have them think that. I'd really love to be bright and gay in pictures. I made this happy suggestion to studio powers one time, but they couldn't see it at all, even though I assured them that most of my parts on the stage had been very humorous. They reminded me that in Hollywood I was established in a wholly different line of parts. So they always hand me an old hyena role, and I have to keep on barking my head off."

TOO bad, now that you're ready to swear on a stack of dog biscuits that there isn't a bite in a carload of her barks.

"Of course," she admits, "this isn't all as bad as it sounds. The parts I play are hard, but at the same time they have a certain softness. At least I try to find this in them. I liked Aunt Betsey Trotwood for the little warmth in her, and my one hope and aim was to bring it out. To me she was like so many people who, for some reason, seem set on hiding their better nature. Perhaps this is due to a shrinking from any outward display of their inner qualities. Most people, I imagine, are hopelessly shy."

You suspect Miss Oliver to be speaking, not of others, but really of herself, making a sort of confession.

"I paid my money four times to see 'Romeo and Juliet,'" she says. "That may sound conceited, as though I went to see myself. But I didn't. For one thing, I went again and again just to hear the music of that fine score. But that wasn't all. Each time I found something new in the picture, a new beauty and meaning. Finding myself in it was, somehow, always a surprise. If, when I was on the stage, anyone had told me I should one day be in Shakespeare I'd have thrown up my hands in amazement.

"But that is Hollywood. After eight years here it still continues to astonish me. It is always doing strange things. Quite the strangest now is its plan of pairing romantic couples in real life as screen lovers. This was never done in the stage world. It never occurred to a theatrical producer that there might be 'box-office' in such a combination. Not that I feel any immediate likelihood of its affecting me. Thus far, at any rate, Hollywood has shown no wild desire to cast me opposite Clark Gable or Robert Taylor in throbbing, heart stirring romance."

An oversight, no doubt. Yet you feel certain Hollywood has by no means failed to grant Miss Oliver rewards of a much more lasting nature.

"Most of all," she gratefully replies, "Hollywood has given me this house, the only home I have known since leaving the one I knew as a girl. By playing hard old women I've managed to make it rather soft for myself. There is nothing I appreciate so much as having a roof over my head. Here I am content. I never go anywhere, except to symphony concerts."

That Miss Oliver goes far in her love of music is obvious, for living at least twenty-five miles from Los Angeles she evidently is more than willing to travel twice this distance to get what she wants—and needs. Evidence of this is offered by her fine piano. Equally fine, you sense, is the artist in the woman, making her solid and substantial in her values, not mere foam on that ferment called Hollywood.

X-Ray of baby foot in new inexpensive Wee Walker shoe contrasted with foot in a still good, but outgrown shoe.

Millions of baby feet are RUINED because mother lets baby wear outgrown shoes. Short, tight, outgrown shoes, no matter what you paid, will twist and warp the soft, delicate bones forever out of shape.

Wee Walker shoes are so inexpensive you can afford to change to new ones often. They have every feature baby needs. They are correctly proportioned, full-sized, roomy shoes that give real barefoot freedom. They are good-looking, flexible, soft. Distributed at low cost through nation-wide stores maintaining a low profit policy. The stores listed have or will gladly order the size and style you want. See them—compare them—in the infants' wear department. For baby's sake accept no substitute.

ACCEPTED PARENTS MAGAZINE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck & Co. Charles Stores
Isaac Silver & Bros. Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.
F. & W. Grand Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.
Schulte-United Stores

So natural they even have half-moons.

NOW! Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10 stores

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS
NU-NAIL CO., 4042 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

wise girls don't risk body odors! after every bath
use Hush and be Sure

You're dainty and sweet as you step from your bath. Stay that way for Hours Longer with HUSH. There's a type for each need:
CREAM—Pure, soothing to skin, harmless to dress fabrics.
LIQUID—Instant, protects 24 hours. Regular, for 1 to 3 days.
POWDER—Ideal for Sanitary Napkins. Keeps feet and shoes fresh.

25c 50c—10c size at 10c counters

End CORNS

I USE ONLY DR. SCHOLL'S ZINO-PADS AND NEVER HAVE CORNS!

Instant Relief—Prevent Corns, Sore Toes

Stop suffering! Put Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads on your feet or toes—wherever the shoe hurts—and you'll have no more pain. Enjoy instant relief with these soft, soothing, healing, cushioning pads. Wear new or tight shoes and never have corns, sore toes or blisters. The separate Medication included in every box, quickly, safely removes your corns or callouses. Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere. Made in sizes for Corns, Callouses, Bunions, Soft Corns. FREE sample Corn size, also Dr. Scholl's Foot Booklet—write Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

There is a Dr. Scholl Remedy, Appliance or Arch Support for Every Foot Trouble

"Myrna's Maid Tells on Miss Loy" in the October MODERN SCREEN

Free for Asthma During Summer

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is hot and sultry; if heat, dust and general mugginess make you wheeze and choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a life-time and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co. 207-C Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara St. Buffalo, N. Y.

Happy Relief from PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"Would you care to see my house?" she inquires expectantly.

It is the biggest little house you have ever seen. You go admiringly from room to room, one walled with books and all sunny, cheerful, homelike, then out into a garden bright with flowers. There are many charming things—but neither hide nor hair of that other thing. This is the only mystery about the frankly domestic lady of the house on the hill. And you know, even before she tells you at that brass-knockered door, "I'm just an old-fashioned home-body."

Never mind about anything else. Shutting the white gates, you smile indulgently at their fearsome warning, "Beware Police Dog!" Nonsense. Edna May Oliver can't scare you any more! You'll wager now that she doesn't even have a police dog!

HIGHLIGHTING HERSHOLT

(Continued from page 50)

has switched clothes and will get into the other's place and look up to see if the new girl can tell the difference."

Lighting his pipe, Jean Hersholt settled back comfortably, to continue a subject near his heart. "Those babies are as strong and sturdy as any healthy four-year-old children. The public will see an entirely different set of Quints this time. Heretofore they haven't had benefit of lighting to really be photographed properly. Now that they are a little older they'll have the opportunity to profit from better camera effects. Of course, you knew their pictures have never been retouched? Well, when we see an unretouched photo of ourselves we wonder if it can be real, it's so bad. From now on, you'll see some vast improvement in each of those five little girls when you see them in the movies.

"This new picture is called 'Five of a Kind' and, if you know your poker, that's tops. I play the country doctor again, but the girls will have much more to do this time. There's a very cute song called 'All Mixed Up,' which will be adorable for them. I'm very happy about making another picture with them and I'm looking forward to the three weeks I will spend up there with my five leading ladies!"

Since there's been so much publicity about the return of the Quints to their parents, we were anxious to hear the latest bulletin first hand.

"I think the babies will eventually go to the Dionnes. However, I think the first thing will be to build a new nursery for them, as the one they have at present is far too small. Of course there's been some bad feeling, but I feel sure they will build a big place, and have one side for the family with the other side fixed up for the babies. Mr. Dionne, who is one of their guardians with Dr. Dafoe, now goes to meetings and takes more of an interest in things than before, so it looks much more encouraging.

"Dr. Dafoe has certainly handled everything in a dignified manner and deserves lots of credit. He has difficulties to combat, but you'd never know it. He's a fine man. And, too, I'm sure if my children were wards of the Crown, I'd be pretty well satisfied, especially when I saw how well they were treated."

AFTER a quarter of a century in pictures, Jean Hersholt has been one of the few actor's to run the gamut of characters. There's no type part he hasn't enacted at one time or another in his colorful career. The interesting thing is the transition he has made from bad men to the kindly, sympathetic parts he is now portraying so well.

"I don't think I really know just how I came to graduate from villains to the thing I do now. The transition was so gradual that the fans accepted me. You know, I played the title role in 'The Beast of the City' and I was the Beast for true. After that, I began to get sympathetic roles until, finally, I graduated to Sonja Henie's picture Papa and playing with the Dionne Quints. You know, in October I begin another picture as Sonja's Papa. It's my next after 'Five of a Kind.' Sonja's a fine girl, with a real head for business, too, and just as sweet as she can be.

"I've just finished 'I'll Give a Million,' where I play a clown. My partner in that was a Chimpanzee! I assure you it was no fun working with him either. They say after five years chimpanzees get nasty and this fella was seven, with a head start on all others. When I turned my back, he'd pinch me so hard that I'd bleed, but all in good clean fun, of course! Then there were the boxing sequences and he hit so hard my chest was black and blue for days. After this picture it would be a pleasure to do a good juicy villain, just for a change y'know!"

AN actor's life at best seems speculative. In fact, often a seemingly good break in the way of a part will spell finis to his chance for the future. While, on the other hand, an apparently bad bit of casting may mean a new lease on movie life. However, even though Jean Hersholt is the exception that proves the rule, he has camera comrades who suffer from the ill fate of the aforementioned.

"It seems a pity that when someone does a good job of acting it should react against him," the country doctor explained. "You remember John Qualen, who has played the Quints' father in their films? Well, he's a fine actor, but, since these pictures, he can't appear in anything serious, because the fans won't believe him. Recently he had a dramatic role and the minute he raised his head, the audience began to laugh. When he landed the first assignment he felt it was a grand chance for him, never realizing the public would always associate him with 'Papa Dionne.' Unfortunately, he's typed now and it's pretty tough to break away from that sort of thing once you've gotten into it.

"When I used to do heavies exclusively, I never thought I could get away from them, but I sat right down and figured it all out. Most of my characters were bewhiskered men of one sort or another. So, for each one, I used an entirely new set of whiskers and makeup, so the fans wouldn't get too bored with me. I think that's one reason I was able to make the transition comparatively unnoticed. Of course, it was this stunt, coupled with my first real break, playing with Marie Dresser in 'Emma'. From that time on I became a sympathetic human being."

This will give you a rough idea of what Jean Hersholt has accomplished through twenty-five years service in the picture world. During Mr. H.'s time he's seen many changes, many stars come and go, but nothing seems to give him nearly the genuine thrill of his latest find, the prospect of publishing these newly unearthed Hans Christian Andersen fairy tales. Hasn't it some slight connection with his great affection for the Dionne Quints?

PUT YOUR BEST FACE FORWARD

(Continued from page 45)

they need darkening. You can raise your eyebrows almost a quarter of an inch by this trick, and train them to stay in position, too. Conversely, if your eyebrows are too far away from your eyes, giving you a constant surprised look, you can train them down. A little judicious plucking, on the under or upper side, as is necessary, will help.

Personally, I think mascara is a swell thing and I feel undressed if I'm not sporting a touch of it, but there are girls who declare they can't get the hang of using it. Maybe you're one, and your eyes are just crying, figuratively not literally, for it. Putting it on is a knack and one which requires a little practice, but once you get the knack, you'll be able to whisk a little glamor onto those eyes of yours with as much ease as you powder your nose. Have the brush damp, not wet. I like to run hot water over the mascara cake itself rather frequently—it keeps it moist and nice and easy to use. Maybe this ain't delicate, but old hands at the art of applying mascara claim that saliva is a much more satisfactory lubricant than water. Yeah, I said 'twarn't delicate, but nine out of ten models, stars and glamor girls do it.

THE kind of lashes which are easiest to make up are those which—like my own—are sort of thin, fine, stringy and nondescript. The kind which are very difficult to make up are the thick, short, bristly lashes—the kind which are dark enough to hold their own, but which are too short and stubby to be beautiful. Here I advise the application of oil or cream first. Perhaps a dab of powder on top of the cream—an old movie star trick—will make the mascara cling better. If the average good commercial makes of mascara which you can buy anywhere do not seem to work for those of you whose lashes are thick, but short and unglamorous, see if you can get your paddies on a cake of theatrical mascara. It comes in a block, and has wonderful staying powers. Or use a cream mascara—harder to get used to, but very elegant looking once you get the trick.

Do you have rouge-trouble? Does rouge seem to do nothing whatever to put umph into your face? Then don't do what we all are apt to do. That is, go doggedly on, placing the same kind of rouge in the same spot every day, hoping against hope that if you're extra neat and careful in applying it, some miracle will take place to make you beautiful. Try something else. Use no rouge at all, perhaps. Yes, I know—after wearing bloom-out-of-a-box for years, you feel a bit undressed at first.

Five-six years ago, when the electric Miss Lombard was a-busting into pictures, she was buxom, over-bedecked and over-rouged. She slimmed down to streamline proportions. As a matter of fact, she's a smitch too thin right now, if you ask me. But anyway, the slimming process brought out the truly beautiful modelling of her face, and when a face is nicely modelled, 'tis a sin to put rouge on it—except (ah! always an exception) at night, maybe, when you may put a touch of rouge, not on the curve of your cheeks, but in the hollows of the same.

This must be done with care and cleverness and you must practice a little to get the right effect, and you must have that Who's this? A mermaid on our shores? No, it's our own Ann Rutherford.

Little Susan Hayward is another reason why you and you adore the movies.

With Ginnie-Lou NAIL POLISH REMOVER PADS

A STA-RITE PRODUCT

Quick dabs with a wafer-thin pad—and instantly your ten fingernails are free of polish, ready for a fresh manicure. No bottles—no brushes—no bother—and Ginnie-Lou Remover Pads are treated to lubricate and condition nails and cuticle, prevent drying or cracking. Nails stay soft and smooth and beautiful. But be sure to say, "Ginnie-Lou Pads, please" when you purchase. 10¢ and 25¢ packages.

Other Products by Ginnie-Lou
Facial Cleansing Pads
Bob Pins—Creme Rouge

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

NIL

THE VANISHING CREAM DEODORANT

Nil never reminds you that you have it on. It's absolutely safe — non-irritating —non-greasy! It dries instantly—vanishes entirely—ends perspiration odor immediately.... Use Nil any time —even after shaving—will not rub off or harm fabrics. . . .

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau . . .

Large size, ten cents. At leading ten cent stores.

NIL LABORATORIES - TOLEDO, OHIO

TOUCH UP GRAY STREAKS

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy, will not rub off nor intertere with curling. $1.35, for sale everywhere

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. Dept. M98
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Name .....
Street .....
City ..... State .....
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

TEETH hard TO BRYTEN?

Here's News! Iodent No. 2 toothpaste and powder is scientifically compounded by a Dentist and guaranteed to SAFELY remove most stubborn stains—even smoke stains—from hard-to-bryten teeth, or money back. Have bright, sparkling teeth like millions do. Get refreshing Iodent today.

IODENT

NO. 1 FOR TEETH EASY TO BRYTEN — TOOTH PASTE also POWDER — NO. 2 FOR TEETH HARD TO BRYTEN

Say Goodbye to Dull, Drab Hair

In one, simple, quick operation, Lovalon the 4 purpose rinse, does all these 4 important things to your hair. 1. Gives lustrous highlights. 2. Rinses away shampoo film. 3. Tints the hair as it rinses. 4. Helps keep hair neatly in place. Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. It does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, made in 12 different shades. Try Lovalon. You will be amazed at the results.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. 5 rinses 25 cents at drug and department stores. 2 rinse size at ten cent stores.

LOVALON

—the 4 purpose vegetable HAIR RINSE

NEURITIS Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the Doctor's formula. No opiates, no narcotics. Does the work quickly—must relieve worst pain to your satisfaction in few minutes or money back at Druggist's. Don't suffer. Get trustworthy NURITO today on this guarantee.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

hollowed-in look just below the cheekbones, a la Dietrich and Lombard, to do it at all. Lessee if I can think of some other movie star examples—stars who could and stars who could not employ this trick. Well, of the belles who adorn the beginning of this article, Garbo could, Ginger could not. Loretta couldn't. Gladys Swarthout could. See what I mean?

If you're using cream rouge and have trouble, switch to cake rouge or liquid rouge. And vice versa. And there's a new cosmetic aid out, which isn't a rouge at all. It imparts a very natural-looking glow to the face. And in some of the hoity-toity beauty parlors, they use a trick for thin faces. It's a little difficult to do, but it looks grand if you can work it.

Rouge—oh, but very little—is put on portions of the friendly old face you never heard of before. Not on the curve of the cheeks at all, but in the hollows of the temples, blended very carefully, and on the eyelids, and at the outer corner of the eyes and on the point of the chin. So little is used that it's almost like using a pink powder on these parts of the face, and then one is powdered carefully all over the pan with the regular shade of powder. The pink glow in the hollows of the temples and so on adds roundness to a thin face.

Akin to this trick is the stunt of using two shades of powder, the darker shade to highlight your face as rouge will. This isn't difficult to do and you might try it if you're tired of the way you look.

To wind up the cosmetic department, let me mention again the wonderful help to beauteh that these new lipstick pencils are. If you're one of these girls—like myself—who get their mouths painted on a different shape every time, dash right out and buy a lipstick pencil in your pet shade. You can outline your mouth just grand with one of these, and fill in with the regular lipstick. And the pencil is awfully handy for repairing the lipstick quickly, too. Use taste and judgment with it, as with all things. Don't draw your mouth on so hard and definite that it don' look purty. Blot the paint job with tissue for the most natcherl effect.

Before I forget, I want to pass along two beauty tricks from our songbird, Gladys Swarthout, which struck me as being awfully good. After cleansing her face, Gladys puts on a nourishing cream and polishes her skin with small squares of turkish toweling—old turkish toweling, which is soft and non-irritating. And—put this down in your book and remember it—Gladys Swarthout brushes her hair five hundred strokes a day. I am not telling you a story, my pets.

You see, Miss S. figured it out this way: her hair is not a glamorous color. It's neither golden, nor flaming red nor jet black. It's a plain, nice, hair-colored brown, just like the hair on millions of you girls' heads. But, thought Gladys, is there any reason why plain brown hair shouldn't be pretty? Of course not. So instead of monkeying around with dyes and things, trying to make her hair something it wasn't, she took the common-sense route to beautiful hair and made it shine and gleam with a good old fashioned brushing.

BRONZE and golden lights will come out in dark brown and light brown hair if you will shampoo and brush it. Coarse hair will be crisp and manageable, but look soft and never get that rusty, bristly look if you brush it. Fine hair, instead of sitting dankly down on the scalp, and looking thin and miserable, will have fluff and life to it. If there's the slightest tendency to natural wave or curl in your hair, brushing will bring it out. If your hair is just naturally as straight as a poker, it will hold a wave much longer after brushing.

By the way—joost in passing—if you're going in for one of the newer up-on-the-head coiffures, here's a cute trick. Have some little Victorian nape-of-the-neck curls permanented. For an occasional evening affair, let them show there at the back of the neck—very feminine and quaint. Other times, comb them up into the rest of the hair. The permanent will give them body and they'll stay put, doing away with that untidy wispy look.

When it comes to your figure here is a surprising but sterling hint from no less an authority than Orry-Kelly, head designer for one of the studios. It sounds odd, but it makes sense—you see if it doesn't. He says you should conceal, to some extent, your best figure points, in order to minimize figure faults. Let me explain.

Figures are all mixed up, as a rule. The figure that's beautiful all over is the exception. The figure that's terrible all over is the exception. A chunky, stocky body Pretty little Anne Shirley went right on eating and John Howard Payne went right on lifting that right eyebrow while the candid cameraman did his little chore.

CARNIVAL GIRL

Moon-silvered dusk. Throbbing beat of music and the click of the roulette wheel. Scent and sound and laughter—but only grim terror to the girl who hid, crouched low, behind the terrace wall—safe for a moment from the desire in Ettienn's black eyes and the sting of his cruel whip.

Recklessly she vowed to destroy herself rather than submit to his cruelties. But something held her back. Could it be the strange warmth that filled her heart as she thought of the grey-eyed stranger—of his strong bronzed face and the thrill of his arms about her as they danced together at the Casino?

For one ecstatic moment she had been happy—now hopes and dreams crashed about her—her world seemed to be spinning like the Casino's roulette wheel. And where would it stop? Would she win or lose?

Read this thrilling story of the love and adventures of a French carnival dancer. It appears in the SEPTEMBER SWEETHEART STORIES. Don't miss it!

Sweetheart Stories

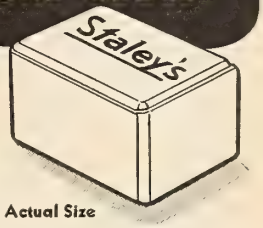
On Sale Everywhere - 10c

often winds up in a pair of legs as slim and exquisite as Ginger Rogers' own. A tiny waistline suddenly zooms out into too much hip. The girl with the pretty, trim figure feels that her life is ruined because she has fat legs. And so on.

Now, says Monsieur Orry-Kelly, one should not play up and dramatize a pretty pair of legs, a tiny waist, a Venus-like bust development, unless the rest of us matches up. The plump girl with the slim legs should wear her dresses long enough to slim her body, even if it breaks her heart not to show her legs. The tiny waist with the large hips should be more or less loosely fitted until the hips are slimmed down. Understand?

More about making the best of figures. Out Hollywood way, all the girls have pretty darn good looking figures, some really beautiful, all pretty good. Furthermore, the stars are, generally speaking, little women. A size sixteen is the exception out there. When we use the stars as models of figure beauty, we're inclined to forget this. The average American girl is taller, huskier, heavier boned than the average star. What I'm getting at is a little preachment for the "big" girl, the girl who wears an eighteen or a twenty, even, and who tries to copy too much the dress and get-up of her favorite star.

WHY, nowadays, eighteens and twenties are spoken of in sort of a hushed tone as if it weren't quite nice to be tall. Phooey. If you are slim and in proportion, if the tum is flat and the hips minus bulges, you have just as much claim to beauty as the little wisps of girls. In fact, an artist would say you have more claim to beauty. But don't commit the mistakes so many tall, big girls commit. Wear your proper size. I know—the cheaper dresses put all their prettiest styles into the smaller sizes. When you hunt for an eighteen or a twenty, you run into dreary old Mother Hubbard affairs you wouldn't be caught dead in. So you do one of two things—squeeze into a sixteen, which is wrong, or unhappily buy something that will "do" and hate it every time you wear it.



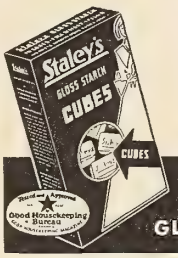
Yuh gotta pay more for things if you're tall and big, sister, and you might just as well make up your mind to it. Go to the better shops. Better dresses run larger, have generous seams and good hems. Instead of running one dress style through the whole range of feminine sizes and shapes, there are special, suitable styles for you and special, suitable styles for your eentsy-teentsy girl friend.

If you have hat-trouble, you must pay more for hats. There are the fortunate people who can put on nine hats out of ten and look well. They can pick up bargains. They can jam the little dollar-ninety-five caps on their heads and look cute.

But if the nine out of ten hats make you look rather nutty, find yourself the clever milliner, or go to the hat shop whose prices are a little bit frightening, or stick rigidly to those plain, moderately priced well made sport types, made by several nationally known manufacturers, and no matter how your soul aches for something a little bit mad in the hat line, do not be tempted.

Well, now, in closing, I wanna tell you that I'm on the trail of some specially posed pictures for an early article, showing you some very special and clever tricks which are whipped up in the Hollywood studios. If some kind lady will step up and pose for us while one of the studio make-up experts dolls up her face, I do believe we will have something there. I want to show you exactly how an average-looking gal, properly made up, becomes a beauty, and how clever brush work can conceal facial faults in a truly magical manner. Be watching for it!

NOW! LAUNDRY STARCH IN EXACT-MEASURE CUBES



EXACT MEASURE • QUICKER IRONING • FINER FINISH

Actual Size

Finest gloss starch is now available in handy exact-measure cubes. No guesswork, no muss. Just count cubes for perfect results. Women say smoother ironing surface saves ⅓ ironing time . . . imparts lovelier finish. Saves time and work. Ask your grocer today for laundry starch in CUBES.

A. E. Staley Mfg. Co., Decatur, Ill.

STALEY'S GLOSS STARCH CUBES

SNAPSHOTS IN NATURAL COLORS—

Roll developed, 8 Natural Color Prints—25c. Natural Color reprints—3c. AMAZINGLY BEAUTIFUL.

NATURAL COLOR PHOTO, C-151, Janesville, Wisconsin

FRECKLES DISAPPEAR in 5 to 10 days

Don't worry over unsightly freckles. Here's a new way to remove them quickly and gently while you sleep. Simply apply Nadinola Freckle Cream over face and arms at night. Then watch freckles disappear usually in 5 to 10 days. Your skin is cleared, freshened, becomes satin-smooth. NADINOLA Freckle Cream is guaranteed by a laboratory with over 36 years' experience in this type of skin treatment. Only 60c at toilet counters; 10c size at Five and Ten Cent Stores. • Or send a dime for trial package to NADINOLA, Dept. 158, Paris, Tenn.

NADINOLA Freckle Cream

Complexion Glamour EVEN IN SUMMER!

Retain your glamorous complexion, so attractive to men . . . so conducive to romance! It can be yours all day at golf, tennis, swimming . . . all evening — dancing, motoring!

MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP keeps skin petal-smooth, aglow with radiant freshness. Avoids shine and an overworked powder-puff. Use it regularly on face as complete make-up or powder base alone . . . also on arms, neck, back and legs. Try the flattering seasonal Suntan shade!

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

50c at all drug and department stores. Trial size at 10c counters or mail coupon.

4 SHADES
PEACH . . . . ☐
RACHELLE . ☐
BRUNETTE . ☐
SUNTAN . . . ☐

MINER'S, 40 E. 20th St., Dept MD9, New York, N.Y.
Enclosed find 10¢ for trial bottle of Miner's Liquid Make-Up
Name _____
Address _____
Check shade desired!

Anne Shirley (the smile) and Vicki Lester (the squint) do a little light imbibing in good old Roman style.

BEACH BELLES

"But don't go near the water!" Meanie Anne leads on despite Vicki's anguish. Anne'll have her wading yet!

Oop! Over she goes! There's nothing like a rollicking game of leap frog when peppy gals get together.

Anne Shirley and Vicki Lester "hang their clothes on a hickory limb"—etcetera Couldn't take it? Indeed, yes! Just time out for a little serious copper-tinting while the sun is high.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

BOY Meets GIRL

Here it is, and for the first time, the complete story of "Boy Meets Girl," the hilarious comedy that caused Broadway to slap its thighs and quake with mirth.

Two eccentric writers. Two bewildered young lovers. And one unborn baby. Juggle them together, set them down in a Hollywood studio, and prepare for anything! You'll find you're getting more than you had hoped for when you follow situation after situation in the lives of four goofy individuals and one dimpled mite who gurgled his way into the heart of America.

Don't miss the complete story of "Boy Meets Girl"—adapted from the Warner Bros. picture starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. It is but one of the 16 stories appearing in the September SCREEN ROMANCES. In this same issue you'll find the complete stories of

TOO HOT TO HANDLE
Clark Gable and Myrna Loy a complete book-length novel

SPAWN OF THE NORTH
George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour

MY BILL
Kay Francis and Anita Louise

Each month SCREEN ROMANCES brings you 16 exciting stories of the latest pictures, all illustrated with actual "stills" from the movie productions. Once you've read an issue, you'll never miss another. Why not insure for yourself six months of perfect magazine enjoyment by taking advantage of our SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER . . . a six months' subscription for only $1.00! It would ordinarily cost you $1.50! Simply mail your check or money order to Screen Romances Magazine and the next six issues will be delivered at your door.

SCREEN ROMANCES MAGAZINE

149 Madison Avenue, New York City

Please enter my subscription for the next six issues of Screen Romances, effective with the.....issue. My check (or money order) for $1.00 is enclosed herewith.

Name.....

Address .....City.....

Mrs. S. Kip Farrington, Jr.

OF NEW YORK AND EAST HAMPTON

She's decidedly a modern . . . this young matron . . . Foregoes many social events for the greater thrill of big-game fishing

"Chisie, what makes you say: 'Camels are different'?"

Comfortably lounging in the cabaña, Dorothy Lovett and Chisie Farrington (right, above) are deep in a talk about the difference in cigarettes. "I'm really quite interested in that difference you're always bringing up—the difference between Camels and other cigarettes," says Miss Lovett. "What is it?"

"Oh, you must have noticed!" replies Mrs. Farrington. "Why, for one thing, I can smoke Camels steadily—and they never upset my nerves. They never tire my taste either. And they're always gentle to my throat . . . good to my digestion. Oh, there are so many ways in which Camels agree with me . . .

"That's it," she repeats. "Camels agree with me!"

MRS. FARRINGTON is a lovable, easy-to-know person. Even mere acquaintances think of her fondly as "Chisie". Below, "dinner at home"—smoking a Camel. She is an alumna of the Spence School and Miss Porter's . . . travels considerably . . . takes part in sports the year 'round. A steady Camel smoker, she has this to say: "Almost all of my friends smoke Camels too. If they're not smoking mine, I'm smoking theirs. A grand cigarette—Camels! So good and mild!"

MRS. FARRINGTON has fished for big game from Nova Scotia to the Bahamas—caught tarpon, sailfish, big blue marlin, tuna. Above, photograph taken after her biggest catch was weighed in. A giant tuna—720 pounds, 9 feet, 10 inches long! And she's a mere 102 pounds! "That tuna tried hard to pull me overboard," she says. "Tense moments like that make me realize how much I depend upon healthy nerves—and how glad I am that I smoke Camels! Camels never jangle my nerves, and I smoke them steadily. And when I'm tired, smoking Camels gives my energy such a 'lift'!"

Among the many distinguished women who find Camels delightfully different:

Mrs. Nicholas Biddle, Philadelphia • Mrs. Alexander Black, Los Angeles Mrs. Powell Cabot, Boston • Mrs. Thomas M. Carnegie, Jr., New York Mrs. J. Gardner Coolidge 2nd, Boston • Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel 3rd, Philadelphia • Miss Jane Alva Johnson, St. Louis • Mrs. Jasper Morgan, New York • Mrs. Nicholas G. Penniman III, Baltimore • Miss Alicia Rhett, Charleston, S.C. • Miss LeBrun Rhinelander, New York • Mrs. John W. Rockefeller, Jr., New York • Mrs. Rufus Paine Spalding III, Pasadena Mrs. Louis Swift, Jr., Chicago

CAMELS ARE A MATCHLESS BLEND OF FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS . . . TURKISH AND DOMESTIC

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS
IN CAMELS

THEY ARE THE
LARGEST-SELLING
CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

Copyright, 1938, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER "Camels agree with me"

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HEPBURN?

Modern Screen

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

OCTOBER

10

CENTS

IRENE DUNNE

ERROL FLYNN Confesses!

"We started through life on a healthy foundation" THE QUINTUPLETS

Karo is the only syrup served to the Dionne quintuplets. Its maltose and dextrose are ideal carbohydrates for growing children—

Allan Roy Dafoe, M.D.

World Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.

Remember:
Karo is rich in Dextrose the food energy sugar

SCHOOL DAYS

Even movie stars must study the three R's!

Judy Garland's got the copybook blues. Who wants to study French this kind of weather, she'd like to know?

Even studio school marms have twin troubles—but Billy and Bobby Mauch are really good students.

What's this, teacher? Has Mickey Rooney got report card complications already? Aw, shucks!

Deanna Durbin of the lark-like voice adores her history. How about a date or two, Deanna?

AUG 31 1938

ARMAND
Blended Cream

DRY skin with its unattractive texture, is the bane of most women. Sun, wind, dry heat, cold weather, numerous factors, prevent the natural functioning of your skin, causing it to be dry and weathered instead of radiantly lovely.

To dry weathered skin, Armand Blended Cream helps to give an appearance of glowing, natural beauty and of a rose petal complexion. Use Armand Blended Cream and you will notice that your skin soon seems more fresh looking and firm—clearer, more refined. A new type of all purpose cream with the fragrance of fresh cut roses, the delicate oils it contains soften harsh, dry and weathered skin.

At your favorite cosmetic counter you may choose one of four sizes, $1.00; 50 cents; 25 cents and 10 cents — each size has the effect of five facial aids in one jar. Or, send coupon below, for a generous trial size.

Created by Armand to Glorify Your Loveliness

ARMAND, Des Moines, Iowa
(In Canada, address Windsor, Ontario.)
Now I know I simply must try Armand Blended Cream and the famous Armand Bouquet Powder. My ten cents is enclosed.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

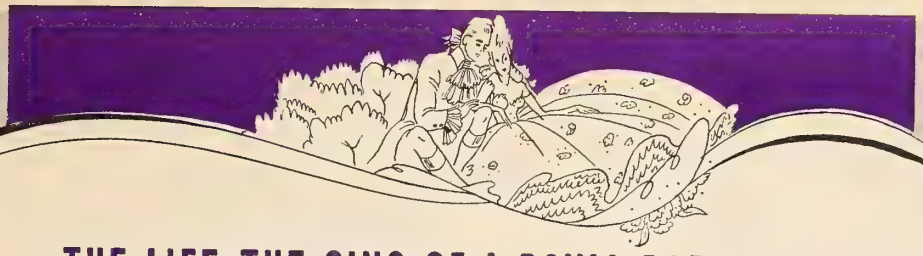
MS—1038

©C1B 389292

MODERN Screen

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co., Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor



NOW Showing

SHE SHOULD WORRY!	6	JEAN SOMERS
WHITE ELEPHANTS	10	JULIA SHAWELL
WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HEPBURN?	26	BEN MADDOX
STRICTLY OFF THE RECORD	28	MARY PARKES
MYRNA'S MAID TELLS ON MISS LOY	30	IDA ZEITLIN
THE WOES OF A HOLLYWOOD BACHELOR	32	JAMES REID
SHE WANTS TO STAY MARRIED	34	KAY CAMPBELL
SCARED OF HIS SHADOW	36	NANETTE KUTNER
HOW THEY WIN FRIENDS	38	DORA ALBERT
HE WHO GOT SLAPPED	40	GLADYS HALL
KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES	42	CAROLINE S. HOYT
SOCIAL SECURITY	44	MARIAN SQUIRE
HE'S GOOFY AND HE LIKES IT	46	FAITH SERVICE
SHE COULDN'T SAY "NO"	47	MALCOLM OETTINGER
COOL WEATHER BEAUTY FORECAST	48	MARY MARSHALL
LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY	50	HARRY LANG

SHORT Subjects

MOVIE REVIEWS	12	WHAT TO SEE
BOX LUNCHES ARE FUN	14	SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S FAVORITES
PORTRAIT GALLERY	19	FOR YOUR ALBUM
OFF THEIR GUARD	51	CANDID SHOTS
GOOD NEWS	64	LATEST MOVIE GOSSIP
TOWN AND COUNTRY KNITS	70	FREE INSTRUCTIONS
OUR PUZZLE PAGE	74	MOVIE X-WORD
INFORMATION DESK	76	BAROMETER AND QUESTIONS ANSWERED
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME	100	PRIZE LETTERS
MOVIE SCOREBOARD	112	PICTURE RATINGS

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill. office, 360 No. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 5, October, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Postoffice, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington; San Francisco, California; Houston, Texas; New Orleans, Louisiana; St. Louis, Missouri. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England. Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semifictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

THE LIFE, THE SINS OF A ROYAL BAD-GIRL!

The world has read and remembered the story of Marie Antoinette...

glamorous Queen of France. Of her virtues .. her intrigue and brilliance as a queen but .. more than anything else .. we read of her scarlet history as the playgirl of Europe... of her flirtations .. her escapades with the noblemen of her court .. her extravagances even while her subjects starved. * Now the screen gives us .. "MARIE ANTOINETTE" the woman .. we see her, as tho' through a keyhole .. not on the pages of history... but in her boudoir .. in the perfumed halls of the palace of Versailles .. on the moonlit nights in her garden .. A rendezvous with her lover .. we follow her through triumphs and glory .. midst the pageantry of that shameless court .. we see the tottering of her throne .. the uprising of her people .. her arrest and imprisonment .. and we follow her on that last ride through the streets of Paris to the guillotine. NEVER .. not since the screen found voice .. has there been a drama so mighty in emotional conflict .. so sublime in romance .. so brilliant in spectacle .. so magnificent in performance .. truly "MARIE ANTOINETTE" reaches the zenith of extraordinary entertainment thrill!

NEVER HAS THE SCREEN WITNESSED A GREATER PERFORMANCE THAN THAT OF NORMA SHEARER AS THE "ROYAL BAD-GIRL"

NORMA SHEARER · TYRONE POWER

in Metro · Goldwyn · Mayer's Finest Motion Picture

The Private Life of

MARIE ANTOINETTE

JOHN BARRYMORE · ROBERT MORLEY

ANITA LOUISE · JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT

Gladys GEORGE · Henry STEPHENSON

Directed by W. S. VAN DYKE II · Produced by HUNT STROMBERG

ROMANTIC TYRONE POWER AS THE MAN WHO OFFERED HER THE LOVE SHE COULD NEVER FIND IN HER STRANGE MARRIAGE

It's hard to believe that the gracious Gail we know was ever a shy, awkward novice.

"They lost the pattern after they made him," says Gail of handsome hubby, Bob Cobb.

SHE SHOULD WORRY!

BY

JEAN SOMERS

I WANTED to find out why Gail Patrick had played Deanna Durbin's mother in "Mad About Music." Mother roles are popular. You've seen many an actress cuddle a moppet of four or five or six. But to take on a daughter of fourteen is another story. It's saying in effect, "I think I look old enough to have a daughter of fourteen." And that a glamor girl must never do.

I wanted to find out why this glamor girl had done it. In the process, I stumbled onto another and better story. We were seated at a table in one of the booths of the famous Brown Derby. Bob Cobb, the Derby's genial owner, passed. "Hello, darling," he called. Gail's dark eyes crinkled into a lovely smile. "Hello, darling yourself." There was nothing casual about either "darling." Married for almost two years, they're deep in love, and don't care who knows it.

The smile still lay in her eyes as she turned to me. "There's one reason why I'm not afraid of anything. And I guess maybe he includes all the rest."

It was pleasant to hear, because it came so simply and spontaneously, as if spilling over from a cup brimful of happiness. Watching her, I thought, "Lucky guy, to have a wife so beautiful and so adoring." By the time we parted, I knew she was just as lucky.

The movies will never come first with Gail Patrick. If she were perched, the starriest of stars, on the topmost branch of the Hollywood Christmas tree, and were told to choose between husband and career, she'd blow the career a kiss and come sliding down without a second thought. Pictures are her job. She likes the job, she wants to make progress in it, but for all that pictures are not Gail Patrick's whole life.

When she was five, she made up her mind to be a lawyer. Till twenty, it remained her single goal. Then she entered a college beauty contest. To her genuine astonishment, she won first prize. It meant a trip to Hollywood, and a screen test. The test would be a joke, thought Gail, but the trip would be fun, something to tell the girls about back in Birmingham.

You know what happened. Time and again she was on the point of departure. "I don't want to be an actress, I want to be a lawyer," she'd cry rebelliously. They'd wave a raise in salary under her nose, and drag her off the plane. She was bewildered, incredulous, torn two ways. She couldn't turn down all that money. On the other hand, it couldn't last. "Every time I got my check, I'd race like mad to the bank, for fear they'd call my bluff before I got a chance to cash it," Gail told me.

Eventually she took the path chance had blown her into. But she took it with a difference. She didn't say, "I've got to act. If I lose out, my life will be dust and ashes." She said, "I wasn't born to act. A freak of fate's put me into this, but I'm just stubborn enough to want to see what I can do with it. If I lose out, I can still go back to studying law."

This sense of another harbor gave her perspective, helped her see through the Hollywood delusion that movies are the whole of life. What the law began, Bob Cobb finished. Over a period of (Continued on page 16)

Gail Patrick lets you in on the secret of her newly-found happiness

A TIP ABOUT BATHING TO A GIRL WITH A DATE TONIGHT

After your bath, don't fail to give underarms Mum's sure care!

WHAT a wonderful lift a bath gives to a girl who is going out in the evening. It starts you off so gloriously fresh and alive.

But even the most perfect bath can't protect you all evening long. Underarms must have special care—that's why smart girls, popular girls, follow every bath with Mum! They know that a bath only takes care of past perspiration—but Mum keeps underarms sweet through the hours to come—makes odor impossible.

Many a girl who starts out fresh, loses that freshness before the evening's over. If you want to avoid worry about underarm odor—if you want to be a girl who gets a second date and a third—remember, no bath protects you like a bath plus Mum. Then you'll never risk offending others, never risk spoiling your own good times. Always use Mum.

MUM IS QUICK! Just half a minute is all you ever need to apply Mum.

MUM IS SAFE! Mum is completely harmless to every fabric. And Mum is gentle, actually soothing to the skin. You can use it immediately after shaving the underarms.

MUM IS SURE! Mum does not stop perspiration—it simply banishes all odor, all day or all evening long. Hours after your bath, Mum will keep you as fresh and sweet as when you started out.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT USE FOR MUM —Thousands of girls use Mum for Sanitary Napkins because they know it's gentle, safe, sure. Avoid worries and embarrassment with Mum.

ONE HALF MINUTE AND YOUR CHARM IS SAFE

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

Ann Miller in "You Can't Take It With You" is ballet conscious —and how!

A bit surprised at her own agility, Ann is about to yell for help, but the good old family armchair comes to the rescue.

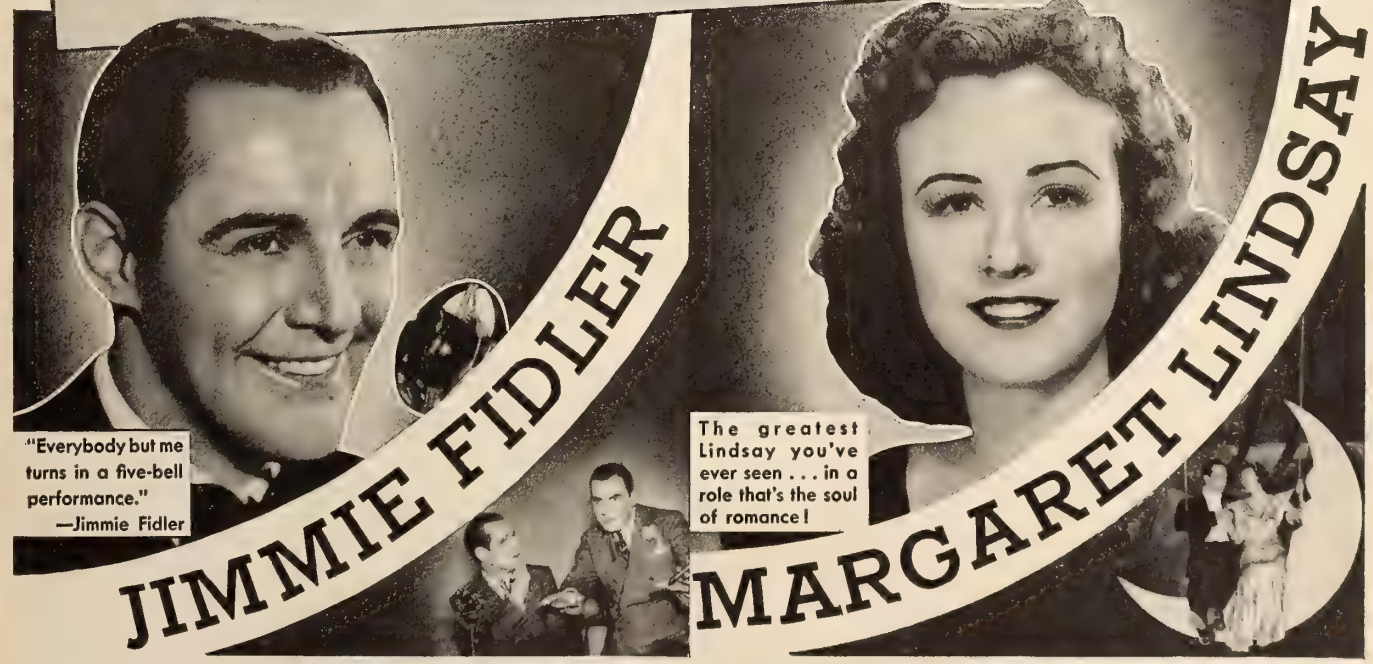
OH, TO BE A DANCER!

You can't say Ann doesn't try!

Now isn't that coy? We like that one. This girl has possibilities!

Where'd you learn that step, Ann? Don't tell us! We've guessed it—you made it up!

Don't give up, honey child. You'll be another Pavlowa bye and bye!



HEADING THE PARADE IN MOTION PICTURES' GREATEST YEAR!

Here's the new season's high level in new entertainment. Packed with action! Crammed with surprises! Be there when this fast-moving romance is shown in your theatre!

WARNER BROS. PRESENT

GARDEN OF THE MOON

JOE VENUTI AND HIS SWING CATS • JOHNNIE DAVIS • JERRY COLONNA

DIRECTED BY BUSBY BERKELEY • Screen Play by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay From the Saturday Evening Post Story by H Bedford-Jones and Barton Browne • Music and Lyrics by Harry Warren, Al Dubin and Johnny Mercer • A First National Picture.

Hear these great new song hits: "GARDEN OF THE MOON," "LOVE IS WHERE YOU FIND IT," "CONFIDENTIALLY," "THE LADY ON THE TWO-CENT STAMP," "GIRL FRIEND OF THE WHIRLING DERVISH."

WHITE ELEPHANTS

"I've got everything I want," says Joe E. Brown—and means every word of it

BY JULIA SHAWELL

IN ONE of those well-kept imposing California stables that make a lot of people envy the life of a race horse, a short slender man, gaily decked out in an English country coat, was quietly stroking the side of a smooth, glossy mare. The horse whinnied appreciation of such admiring attention and the man, in expert fashion, opened his mouth wide to imitate his four-footed friend's "thank you." Joe E. Brown lost the contest by an inch—and the size of his teeth.

Massa Brown was being one of the landed gentry, surveying his domain. "From elephants to horses, and it took a long time," he remarked with a reminiscent note.

"Well, if it's horses you want, you deserve them, Joe," a watching friend replied.

"But the elephants weren't so bad—not even the white ones," retorted Joe with that genial broad grin he doesn't reserve for the remunerative occasions when he's being paid for it. The kind of elephants that never forget were the ones Joe E. Brown had to water, a long time ago. And what a reservoir it took, when the lonely little circus slavey tended them. The white ones, though, are what Joe calls those bad breaks that are part of every real trouper's road to glory, and he says he'll always do the remembering for them.

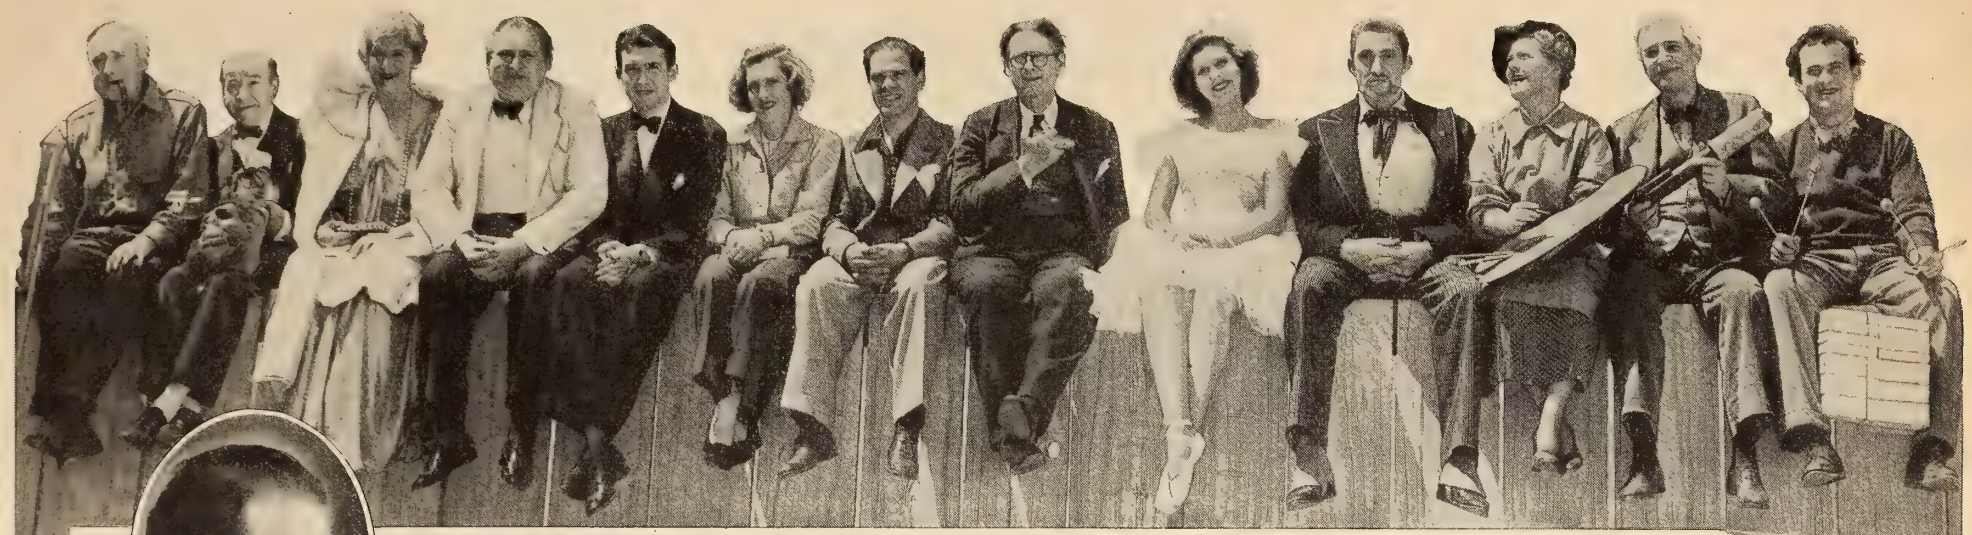
Elephants, white and otherwise, have played an important part many times in the Brown career. In fact, there have been a couple of stall occupants on Joe's San Fernando farm which might be classed in the white elephant family, judging by the way they've gone around the track for their owner. But elephants or horses, they're all just a part of the fun this unassuming, kindly star gets out of living.

To the millions who crowd theaters all over the world when a Joe E. Brown picture comes to town, this stellar comedian is a lovable clown whose antics get under the skin of the crowd. Away from his acting, he's a quiet sort of person who doesn't waste his words, but makes sense when he talks. Home, job and horses are his chief interests in life, and his family always comes first with him.

Well-rounded as is his knowledge of general affairs, ambitious as he may be about his Hollywood career, concerned as he is about what happens around him, the most significant thing I ever heard Joe E Brown say was this statement which he made not long ago, "I've got everything."

It wasn't a boast to create an impression, nor a remark to make conversation. Right out from deep inside of him those words came, and they carried a conviction of such contentment and happiness as are rare in Hollywood—or any place else.

"So you're the man who has everything?" he was asked, with an "I've always wanted to meet that man" suggestion.



"Well, everything I want," Joe answered. It's wonderful—especially because it's true.

Joe E. Brown has all those things he used to hope would come to him, but sometimes didn't dare to dream he'd get. He has a film contract that not only gives him one of the Class A cinema salaries, but also permits him considerable authority in choosing his stories and planning his productions. He has a wife, the same one he married over twenty years ago. He has four children who—well, when you get him started on that subject, it's difficult to switch him to any other. He has a house in Beverly Hills, a ranch-farm in the San Fernando Valley, (Continued on page 113)

Above, Joe takes small daughter Mary Elizabeth aboard Jumbo. Below, Joe and Mrs. Brown at the races.

FRANK CAPRA

The Great Pulitzer Prize Play Becomes the Year's Outstanding Picture!

Frank Capra's

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU

JEAN ARTHUR ★ LIONEL BARRYMORE ★ JAMES STEWART ★ EDWARD ARNOLD

MISCHA AUER · ANN MILLER · SPRING BYINGTON · SAMUEL S. HINDS · DONALD MEEK · H. B. WARNER

Based on the Pulitzer Prize Play by GEORGE S. KAUFMAN & MOSS HART

Screen play by Robert Riskin

A Columbia Picture

Directed by FRANK CAPRA

MOVIE REVIEWS

★★★★ Marie Antoinette

Norma Shearer is back on the screen in what well may be hailed as her finest performance. A wildly enthusiastic première audience proclaimed both Miss Shearer and the film a tremendous success. "Marie Antoinette" is film pageantry at its finest. It moves along at a pace unusual for costume pictures. The fact that there isn't a dull moment is definitely a personal triumph for director W. S. Van Dyke. Scenarists have wisely taken liberties with history by accentuating Marie Antoinette's love story and by "humanizing" both the Queen and her husband, Louis XVI. All in all, "Marie Antoinette" is grand entertainment, and will be enjoyed by all types of audiences.

For Miss Shearer it is a highly successful return to the screen, and her followers will be delighted with her performance. Even so, the portrayal which will be remembered longest is Robert Morley's superb playing of Louise XVI, France's weak and stupid king who marched to the guillotine a brave and honorable man. Space does not permit extolling added virtues, but there are excellent supporting roles played by Joseph Schildkraut, John Barrymore, Gladys George and Anita Louise. Tyrone Power, in the romantic lead, handles his comparatively small role effectively. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.—M-G-M.

★★★ The Shopworn Angel

Intelligently written and directed, and beautifully played by the three principals, "The Shopworn Angel" is a certain hit, as appealing and sympathy-stirring as it is humorous and bright. It is so good in all of its departments that it can be recommended heartily. It is head and shoulders above nine-tenths of this season's pictures.

Setting is New York in 1917, when America entered the World War. Principal characters are a hard-boiled Broadway show girl (Margaret Sullavan), a worldly producer (Walter Pidgeon) and a naive, gangling soldier from Texas (James Stewart). There is comedy in the meeting of the soldier and the show girl, and drama in his pathetic attempt to show his buddies that she is his sweetheart. In the background of the well-written script there is an undertone of the futility of war and the false patriotism inspired by bands and marching men.

Margaret Sullavan again proves that she is one of the most talented young ladies in filmdom, and Jimmy Stewart even exceeds his excellent work in "Vivacious Lady." Walter Pidgeon rounds out the trio of good performances with a wise and understanding portrayal of the Broadway producer. In fewer words—don't miss "The Shopworn Angel." Directed by H. C. Potter.—M-G-M.

★★★ The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse

When a reputable physician, interested in crime and reactions of criminals, personally conducts a series of sensational robberies and winds up with the ultimate crime—murder—is he insane or did he actually do all these things in the interest of science? That's the question asked in one of the best and most interesting of the current films.

As the amazing Dr. Clitterhouse, Edward G. Robinson completes a series of daring robberies, purportedly to check his reactions for a contemplated book on crime. With the stolen goods on his hands he goes to a prominent "fence" (Claire Trevor) to dispose of them, and becomes the leader of her gang, deposing one, Rocks Valentine (Humphrey Bogart). The gang is highly successful, but when Dr. Clitterhouse bids them goodbye to return to normal life, Rocks trails him and blackmails him with threats of disclosing his activities to the police. Dr. Clitterhouse calmly murders Rocks, and an exciting trial follows. Does the jury convict him? We won't spoil the fun by telling you.

"Dr. Clitterhouse" is perhaps Edward G. Robinson's best screen characterization. Claire Trevor and Humphrey Bogart are excellent. There is also swell comedy by Maxie Rosenbloom, the reformed prizefighter. Directed by Anatole Litvak.—First National.

BY LEO TOWNSEND

TODAY'S TALKIES

★★★ Four's a Crowd

Here is one of this season's most entertaining comedies. The story deals with the trials and tribulations of a newspaper owned by wealthy socialite Pat Knowles, who is constantly on the verge of closing up shop. Rosalind Russell, as the ace reporter, decides to do something to save the paper. This, however, turns out to be the rehiring of Errol Flynn as managing editor. Flynn has other ideas, but sees the job as a means to his end. With one idea in mind, to get wealthy Walter Connolly to donate millions to purify his name, Flynn plays both sides. Not content with making love to Roz and Olivia De Havilland (Connolly's granddaughter), he uses the paper to make Connolly the most hated man in the world. Though a bit confusing at times, it all works out and as the four elope each goes his own happy way—in one cab!

Errol Flynn gives his best performance to date. As his foil, Roz Russell comes through with flying colors. Patric Knowles' performance is both entertaining and well done. The beautiful De Havilland, as the gullible daughter of the rich is completely charming.

Walter Connolly and Hugh Herbert are perfect. Herbert comes near to stealing the show as the minister aroused in the middle of night to marry the four. Connolly, as usual, is a grumpy Grandpa but manages to make himself as lovable as possible. Directed by Michael Curtiz.—Warner Brothers.

★★★ Professor, Beware

Harold Lloyd's back again in this one. But there's nothing absent-minded about Prof. Lloyd. He's remembered every gag that slew audiences of the Mack Sennett era. It's slapstick de luxe, with not a trick missing. But honest hokum still guarantees a fine time for all as evidenced by the preview audience's howls of glee.

There's a thread of story to belie suspicion that the whole thing was shot off the cuff. The professor's an Egyptologist whose main interest in life is mummies. He's almost at the ossification point himself when Phyllis Welch decides her main interest in life is the prof. Phyllis, an actress-heiress, is a delectable dish in any language—except Egyptian. Unfortunately our hero has just deciphered the hieroglyphics on an ancient tablet which tell of a dame who made a sucker of a gent some 3000 years ago. Working on the theory that history will repeat itself, Harold takes flight, with the blonde in hot pursuit. It's a chase that makes the Keystone cops look pretty silly, taking in all the country from Los Angeles to New York.

The supporting cast is hardy and competent down to the last bit. "Professor Beware" makes no sense whatever, but it's bound to make the dollars. Which is the test of a good picture in any language—even Egyptian. Directed by Elliott Nugent.—Paramount.

★★ Boy Meets Girl

The famous Broadway comedy hit finally turns up on the screen, but it isn't as amusing as it was on the stage.

The plot deals with the making of movies. This, however, is more than a satire. It's a brutal burlesque. Those familiar with the inner workings of the picture game will laugh long and loud, but the general public may not find it so amusing.

The entire action takes place in and around the office of a producer, Ralph Bellamy, whose two problem children are crack pot writers Jim Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Waitress Marie Wilson, in a delicate condition, proves the inspiration for their story material. The roving cowboy is to inherit a baby for his future thrillers—the baby Happy. Dick Foran doesn't object to horses, but draws the line at stooging for a baby. However, Happy becomes a star, but develops measles and is through at the age of eight months.

Cagney as a screwy writer gives an excellent and very amusing characterization. Pat O'Brien as his partner is miscast, but does the best possible. Ralph Bellamy as the dumb producer is excellent. And Dick Foran playing the ham cowboy star threatens to steal the picture. Marie Wilson in the role of Happy's Ma does a bang up job, and supplies the love interest to boot. The supporting cast is good. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.—Warner Brothers.

More Reviews on page 82

Here's the tops in entertainment fare for every taste and every mood

"Variety and surprise are the secrets of successful lunches," says Shirley Temple's mother

BY MARJORIE DEEN

Courtesy General Foods

These nut-sprinkled cookies are favorites with most children, and they pack well too.

Box LUNCHES ARE

A PICNIC EVERY DAY in the week! That's Shirley Temple's—and every other child's—idea of a wonderful time. Whether the food that makes the picnic comes out of an elaborately well appointed basket or out of a pasteboard box makes no difference.

But have you ever stopped to wonder why the usual school lunch box (with which our youngsters will soon be trudging forth daily) seems to hold no such charm?

When I asked her opinion on the subject, little Miss Temple, for one, couldn't imagine why that should be. But Mrs. Temple, wise mother that she is, suggested the probable solution, basing her conclusions upon her own daughter's reactions. Which, despite her fame, box office standing and amazing poise, are likely to be pretty normal reactions. For Shirley has much the same tastes and opinions as the average youngster of her age, and the same ideas on what's fun and what isn't. And picnic lunches take a high place under the former category, according to the friendly, homey mother of this wonder child.

"When we started to plan our trip East," declared Mrs. Temple in an interview that took place in New York, "one of the first questions Shirley asked was, 'Well, if we go by automobile do we get to have a picnic every day?'

"Naturally I didn't commit myself," she continued, "for Shirley has a very carefully planned regimen for meals as well as everything else. But as it turned out there were many al fresco repasts along the way.

"At the Desert Inn in Palm Springs, where we usually spend vacations between pictures, Shirley's greatest joy is to have lunch on our bungalow lawn with some little friend. Even at home we frequently picnic in the back garden, where I notice it takes no coaxing to get Dad and the boys to join us!"

Undoubtedly what Shirley and all other children like about picnics is their impromptu air, was the way Mrs. Temple summed it up. "But any youngster would soon find it monotonous if these boxed meals were to fall into a set pattern of repetition and sameness. It's the charm of the unexpected that makes any lunch box take on the beloved and exciting attributes of an honest-to-goodness picnic!"

So, from now on, when you send little Junior or Mary Ellen off to school in the morning, just get them to pretend with you that that "nuisancy old school lunch" is really a picnic. And have the box contain, as does Shirley's, unexpected treats.

Did I hear you ask, "What, for instance?" Nothing fancy, I assure you, for that would not be healthful. Concentrate instead on variety and the surprise element, to make delving into the box a real adventure!

For example, in her lunch box at the studio or elsewhere, Shirley finds a lamb sandwich one day, chicken the next, while on still another day there are little biscuits made by that fair young miss herself, with her mother's help, in her own little glass-brick playhouse.

Tucked away in one corner there might be a stalk of celery stuffed with cream cheese and nuts. A simple sponge cake might be on hand to accompany the inevitable glass of milk, while under the gay paper napkin a wax paper-protected piece of candy might lurk. For good candy in moderation, you know, supplies what every child needs, energy.

Why, the possibilities for variety, even in so small a space, are indeed endless. Fruits of all kinds provide a strong supporting cast for the stars of the meal. A sweet ripe banana, to mention one, supplies extra food energy plus vitamins and minerals that growing children require.

By the by, why not delight your child some day soon by making the school lunch box sandwich with date bread for which Mrs. Temple's favorite recipe is given here. This easy-to-make bread is delicious used with a variety of fillings and also boasts long-keeping qualities.

And how about cookies for that midday surprise? They pack about as well as anything I know, and of course "packability" is a prime requisite for school lunches. Shirley particularly likes the flavor of these nut-sprinkled cookies and so, I'm sure, will your young hopeful.

"LUNCH BOX" COOKIES

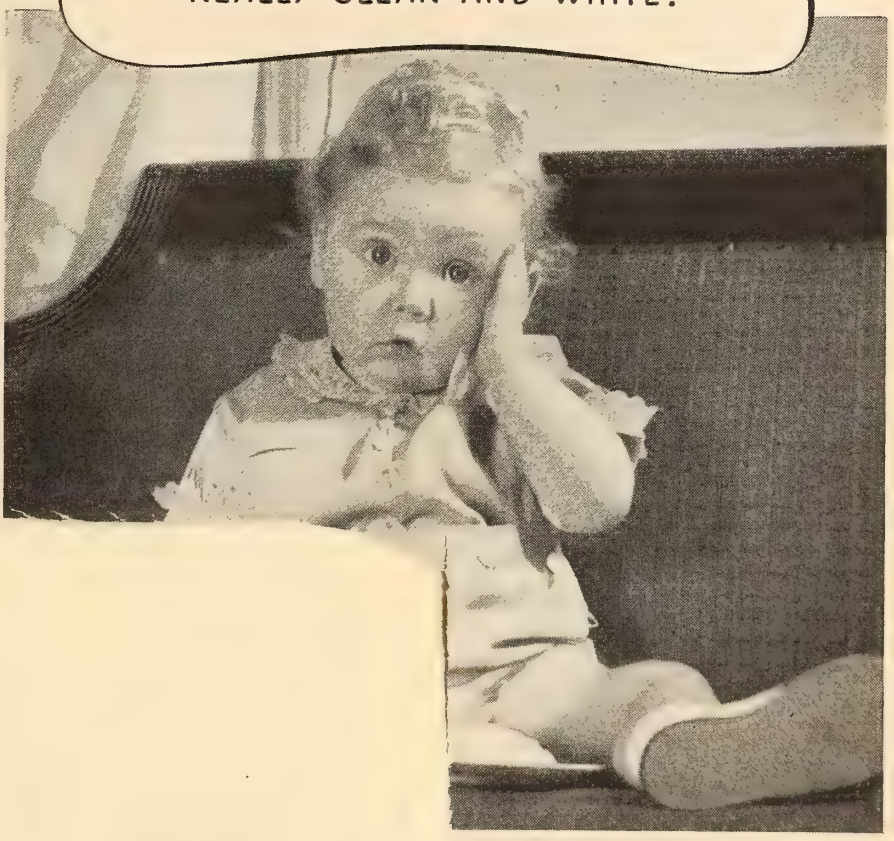
Part 1

½ cup butter, or other shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Part 2

1 egg white, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup finely chopped Brazil nuts

Part 1: Cream shortening thoroughly. Add one-half of the sugar gradually, creaming well together. Add egg and flavoring; beat well. Add remaining sugar, beating until sugar is dissolved. Sift flour, measure. Add baking powder and salt and sift again. Add flour mixture to first mixture. Form into a ball and chill before rolling. Roll out small portions of chilled dough on a slightly floured board to ⅛ inch thickness. Cut with floured cutter. (See illustration above.)



Shirley Temple adores box lunches that are full of unexpected goodies.

FUN . .

Part 2: Brush cookies with egg white. Mix together the sugar, cinnamon, grated rind and nuts. Sprinkle this mixture on the

HE'D BE THE CUTEST BABY AT THE PARTY IF THAT SUIT WASN'T SO FULL OF TATTLE-TALE GRAY

HIS POOR MOTHER MUST BE USING LAZY SOAP. I WISH TO GOODNESS SHE'D SWITCH TO FELS-NAPTHA AND LET ITS RICHER GOLDEN SOAP AND LOTS OF GENTLE NAPTHA GET CLOTHES REALLY CLEAN AND WHITE!

see if you don't get the snowiest, sweetest washes that ever danced on your line! See how much easier and quicker its richer golden soap and lots of naptha make your wash!

Change to Fels-Naptha! Get a few golden bars from your grocer on your next shopping trip. You'll save money. And you'll save your clothes from tattle-tale gray.

GRAY" SOAP!

PEPPIEST FLAKES EVER! TRY FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS, TOO!

TROPIC BEAUTY for your FINGER TIPS

From the Tropics, where Nature's loveliest colors are found, fashion experts bring the perfect shades for your nails. See how exquisitely Glazo captures their subtle beauty . . . select your own flattering shade today!

FAMOUS STARS CHOOSE TROPIC

Hollywood—The favorite nail polish shade for fall and winter is Glazo's smoky ash-pink TROPIC. "I love it," says Joan Bennett; "it's fascinating!" Like all Glazo colors, TROPIC gives you days longer wear.

PARK AVENUE GOES CONGO

New York—The deep, luscious orchid-rose of Glazo's CONGO is seen at the smarter places. Every Glazo shade gleams with rich non-fading brilliant lustre.

PALM SPRINGS TAKES CABAÑA

Palm Springs—At this style-making resort, the popular polish shade is CABAÑA—Glazo's gay rusty-red color. Glazo nail polish goes on easily and evenly; does not streak or run; and dries quickly.

IN BERMUDA IT'S SPICE

Bermuda—The tempting exotic burgundy color of Glazo's SPICE is the vogue. Get the becoming new Glazo shades at all drug counters.

Other Glazo fashion-shades: Old Rose; Thistle; Rust; Russet; Shell. All shades, extra large size . . . 25¢

Glazo's NAIL-COTE guards nails against splitting and breaking; gives added gloss; makes your polish last longer. Only 25¢.

GLAZO
NEW TROPIC SHADES

SHE SHOULD WORRY!

(Continued from page 6)

years he had seen movie stars come and go, rejecting all the other gifts of life in their grim climb upward, breaking their hearts as they lost their toe hold and went crashing down again. He never made speeches nor obtruded his own point of view. When Gail asked him how he felt about her work, he said, "That's up to you, honey. I bring home the bacon. If you want to do that for fun, it's your business." But he won't let her worry about it. If she comes home disappointed over a part given or withheld, "So what?" he wants to know. "We're happy, aren't we?" And the whole picture takes on its true porportions.

Now you begin to see why Gail will do what others are afraid to do. Movie tradition says the illusion of youth must be preserved. An actress must never be more than twenty-nine. Gail thinks not in terms of movie tradition, but in her own terms. Her mind cuts through fuzzy inessentials to the core. "What if people do think me older than I am? That doesn't bother me. I never was the ingénue type. Who am I to turn down anything? It isn't so easy to kill a featured player, anyway. It might be different if I were a star.

"The born actress feels, I'll die unless I get to the top. But if I never get to the top, I'll still be happy. Life looks fine to me from just where I am. Don't misunderstand. I want to be a good actress. But I figure that my best chance is to play every kind of part that comes my way. Then maybe some day I might turn in such a good performance that I'll fool everybody, even myself."

Her studio didn't want Gail to play the other sister in "My Man Godfrey." It wasn't a sympathetic role. She pleaded and argued, and finally went to the top. "Who cares whether it's sympathetic or not?" she stormed. "Here's a chance to work under La Cava, to play with Carole Lombard, to learn something. If you owned a piece of real estate, you'd do all you could to improve it, wouldn't you? Well, this is the same thing."

The head of the studio grinned. "Okay, property. Go ahead and improve yourself. We wouldn't stop you for the world."

In the case of "Mad About Music," Gail's studio left the decision up to her. "Frankly," they said, "we don't know whether you'd be smart or not to play Deanna's mother. It's up to you."

GAIL read the script and thought it was a honey. She considered it a break for anyone to play in a Durbin picture. "At least you know you'll be seen by the maximum audience. As for the mother angle, it's possible to have a child at sixteen. I'm twenty-six, and I look thirty. Oh yes, I do." Laughter ran through her warm Southern voice. "I've looked thirty ever since I was twenty-two. With luck, maybe it'll work the other way round, and I'll go on looking thirty until I'm forty. That wouldn't be so bad."

"And don't think I didn't learn from that child. There was a scene where I had to hold out my arms and say, 'My baby!' That threw me. I sounded as if I were saying, 'Let's go fishing.' Then suddenly she looked up and smiled, the sweetest smile I'd ever seen in my life. You couldn't help loving her, you couldn't help meaning all the pet names you could call her. If ever I have to go soft in another picture, I'll only need to think of Deanna's smile. I keep it here," she said, poking at the general region of her heart. "It's part of my stock-in-trade."

Four months ago John Stahl told Gail he wanted her for the part of Adolphe Menjou's fiancée in "Letter of Introduction." They were about to begin shooting when he sent for her. "The part's been rewritten. It's not big enough for you."

"That doesn't matter. I want to work with you," Gail announced calmly.

Stahl clutched at his head. "I tell her it isn't big enough, and she says it doesn't matter." He broke into a yell. "Did you hear that, everybody?"

An assistant came running. "What's the matter?" he shouted.

"Nothing, nothing. For a minute I died and went to heaven and saw an angel."

As it happened, she didn't play the part. Instead, she was given the lead opposite Warren William in "Wives Under Suspicion."

"But a few years ago this town had me scared to death," Gail reminisced. "I was afraid to open my mouth or show my face, before Bob came along. He gave me self-confidence. He believed in me, made me feel he was proud to be seen with me, so I began thinking maybe I wasn't such a freak after all."

This statement floored me. That anyone who looks like Gail Patrick should need reassurance sounds impossible. But Gail doesn't go in for coyness. When she tells you something, it isn't for effect. It's the truth, you can rely upon that.

Imagine a girl brought up in the normal environment of family, school and friends, her course plainly marked out for her, suddenly transplanted to the razzle-dazzle of Hollywood. Yesterday a leader in her class and social set, today a nobody, surrounded by strangers.

She'd been taught that business was business, and had nothing to do with personalities. She didn't know how to bare her soul to all comers. As she put it, "Nobody but my family had ever seen me take down my hair, and I couldn't get used to doing it in public." She was labeled a freeze. She neither drank nor smoked. So she was considered a prude.

She was accused of looking and acting like a lady, than which there are few more damning epithets in Hollywood. A lady is a female, minus a heart or any of the more endearing human traits. That reputation did her more harm than anything else, for it lost her good roles. Hesitantly, Irving Thalberg once tested her for the part of a girl who got drunk. He didn't think she could do it, but after watching her on the screen he was so pleased that he gave her a contract.

THAT was encouraging, but it wasn't until she met Bob Cobb that she unsnarled herself in earnest. Here was an expert in the movie world who asked nothing better than to spend his time with her. It wasn't so much that he could steer her right, as that he seemed blithely unaware of anything wrong. To him she was perfection. She didn't smoke or drink? What of it? She couldn't talk Hollywood's language? He liked her own.

The power of suggestion worked with her, as it does with all of us. She grew surer-footed. Her whole personality unfolded in boundless gratitude and love.

"They lost the pattern after they made him," Gail says, "and I'm not alone in thinking so. Once we had a misunderstanding and broke up. Often, on such occasions, your friends rally round and try to comfort you by telling you what you've escaped. All the comfort I got was, 'Gail, you're a dope. Better get that guy back. You won't find another one like him in a hundred years.'"

Her husband sends her flowers every Tuesday, because Tuesday was the day on which they met. Regularly on the seventeenth of each month, their wedding anniversary, a box arrives with a gift he himself has chosen. Lately he's been concentrating on copper kitchen vessels, because she wants to do her kitchen in copper. "Hey, Bob, the first year's over," a friend reminded him. "How long does she rate a wedding present every month?"

"All the rest of her life," said Bob briefly.

To him, she's still perfection. He insists that she really is. She insists it's his seraphic disposition that makes him think so. "Sometimes I flare up and say more than I should. He says, 'I'll be right back, honey,' or, 'I think so too.' If I want to stay home, that's swell, he's just discovered he's tired. If I want to go out, that's the one thing he's been yearning to do. Any little mistakes I make, that's exactly the way he wanted it. If I invite people he doesn't like to dinner, it's wonderful how he couldn't have lived another day without seeing those very people. It sounds like a gag, I know. But that's the kind of a man I married, God love him. Here he comes now."

He paused at the table again, a husky-looking seraph, blissfully unaware of the wings I saw sprouting from his shoulders.

"I've been telling how it took me three years to talk you into marrying me," said his wife.

"Are you through? Now I'll tell the real story. Okay, Mrs. Cobb?"

Their eyes met in that look which shuts the rest of the world out. "I'm not afraid," she smiled.

This thrilling coiffure was attained after a shampoo with Special Drene for Dry Hair. All the natural glamor, brilliance and beauty of the hair is fully revealed. Hair is also left manageable—right after washing. This is the beauty miracle of the amazing new Special Drene for Dry Hair.

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

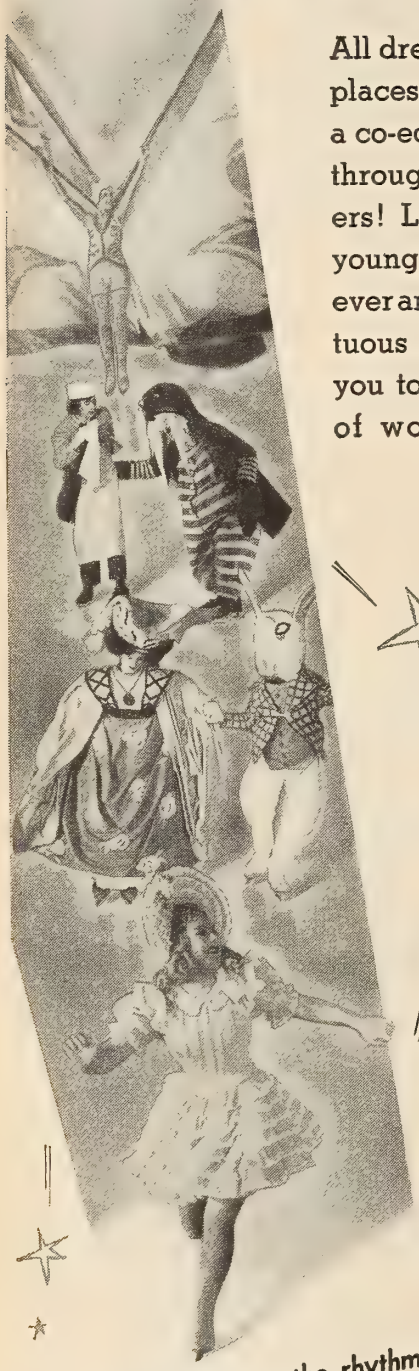
New Glory for Your Hair

IT IS now unbelievably easy to reveal all the natural radiance and beauty of your hair. Glamorous natural radiance, beautiful beyond your fondest dreams.

Drene performs this beauty miracle because it not only removes loose dandruff flakes, grease and dirt—but also removes the beauty-clouding film often left on the hair by other types of shampoos.

Drene is so different from other types of shampoos, that the process by which it is made has been patented. It is not a soap—not an oil. It cannot leave a dulling film on hair to dim and hide natural lustre. Nor a greasy oil film to catch dust. And because Drene contains no harmful chemicals it is safe for any type and color of hair.

A single application—and dirt, grease and perspiration are thoroughly washed away. Hair is left sparkling clean, naturally brilliant—without the need of vinegar, lemon or special after-rinses of any kind. So clean that the permanent wave solution can spread evenly, thus helping to give a soft, lustrous permanent.



And because different types of hair require a different type of shampoo to reveal full individual beauty, there are now two kinds of Drene—Special Drene for Dry Hair—and Regular Drene for normal and oily hair.

Ask for the type of Drene shampoo created to reveal the beauty of your individual type of hair—at drug, department or 10c stores—or at your beauty shop. Whether you shampoo your hair at home, or have it done by a professional operator, a single washing will thrill you with the new-found brilliance and glamorous natural beauty Drene reveals.

drene Shampoo

REGULAR for Normal or Oily Hair
SPECIAL for Dry Hair

A MODERN GIRL HAVING A MODERN GOOD TIME . . .
SWANK CLOTHES, SWELL DATES, SWEET ROMANCE . . .
THAT'S SONJA NOW, SO DAINTY, SO DESIRABLE, SO INCREDIBLE!

All dressed up, and plenty of places to go, as the queen of a co-ed campus! Laughs sail through the air like ski-jumpers! Love calls in the good young American way — forever and ever! And the sumptuous ice climax will bring you to your feet with shouts of wonder and delight!

SONJA HENIE
and RICHARD GREENE
in
MY LUCKY STAR

with

JOAN DAVIS
CESAR ROMERO
BUDDY EBSEN
Arthur Treacher • Billy Gilbert
George Barbier • Louise Hovick
Patricia Wilder • Paul Hurst

Directed by Roy Del Ruth
Associate Producer Harry Joe Brown
Screen Play by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen • From an original story by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger

a 20th Century-Fox Picture

Darryl F. Zanuck
in Charge of Production

Snow-deep in the rhythms of Gordon & Revel!

"I've Got a Date with a Dream"
"Could You Pass In Love"
"The All American Swing"
"This May Be the Night"
"By a Wishing Well"

Every woman in America will be crazy about Sonja's twenty-eight new Fall costumes styled by Royer!

DOROTHY Lamour

Tyrone POWER

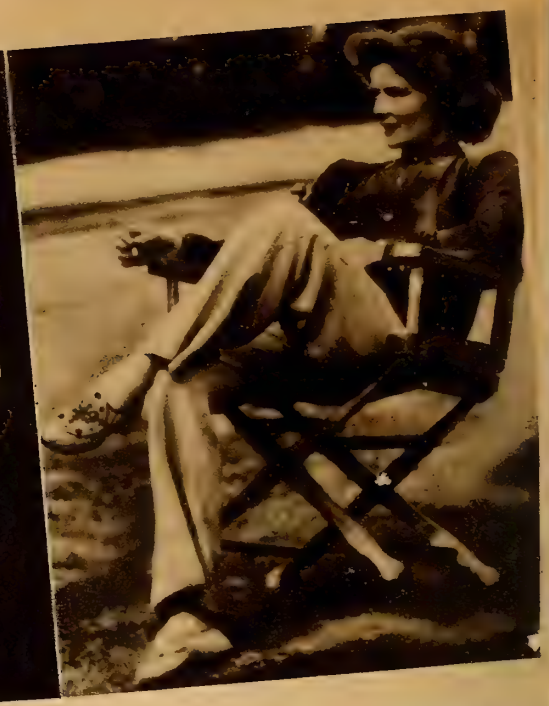
Jean
ARTHUR



John
PAYNE

Janet GAYNOR

Warner
BAXTER

Hedy
LAMARR

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH Hepburn?

Wearing unconventional clothes and dodging everyone have been two of Hepburn's favorite poses.

Why has happiness eluded Katharine Hepburn? Can she save herself now?

Shall she be wife, stage or

BEFORE THIS summer is over Katharine Hepburn must decide which road she will take.

Shall she go on splitting her precious youth between battles in Hollywood and heartaching attempts to establish herself on the New York stage? Shall she remember, before it is too late, that first of all she is a woman? Or shall she toss off her mistakes of yesterday with a fierce saneness and begin a last, grand effort to become the triumphant, superior person she originally resolved to be?

In Hollywood today there is a profound curiosity as to which future Hepburn will choose. She has still, obviously, great undeveloped potentialities. Up to now it has generally been Kate who has foiled herself.

Now once more her course is open for her own selection. There are no strings, no ties that bind. She has movie fame, wealth, health, and no man to interfere with her career. She's seen to all this. Yet is she content? No! Happiness is eluding Hepburn.

Kate impatiently hastened her arrival at the cross-roads by walking out on the studio that discovered her and made her renowned. She's no longer under contract because when they ordered her into cheaper pictures she indignantly refused. Is she then going backwards after six years of Hollywood's sparing no expense to develop her? She really hasn't, she declares, the slightest intention of even considering a move like that.

The very idea of abandoning her pedestal makes Hepburn furious. Just the thought of having to do anything she doesn't want to always makes Kate see

MISS LOY

Myrna Loy keeps Clark Gable busy again in their new picture. This time it's "Too Hot To Handle."

Myrna is a hard worker but an incorrigible tease. Her pranks keep the whole studio laughing.

Theresa says the Arthur Hornblow, Jr.'s are gayest when there's no company around.

THE WOES

It's no cinch to be single and Jimmy Stewart, who is miles from the altar, tells you why

MAYBE IT'S because he is tall enough to make any girl feel petite alongside of him. Or because he is good-looking enough, but not so good-looking that he makes a girl wish she had put on more make-up. Or maybe it's because he is so natural and human that a girl can forget that he is also a famous actor.

Whatever it is that James Stewart has, it's enough to give the feminine population of Hollywood gooseflesh and complexes. At least, that's the impression I've gotten, listening to the feminine population.

No male bystander, noting such a phenomenon, could help wondering how Jimmy has managed to elude matrimony. How has he managed to maintain his bachelor standing?

So I decided to ask him.

I found Jimmy in the San Fernando Valley, working on "You Can't Take It With You." Today, on an interior set, with a city street and a city crowd visible through windows in the background, Jimmy had been dancing jubilantly with Jean Arthur. And it wasn't a day for jubilant dancing. Between the California sun and the Hollywood arc-lights, the temperature on the set was every bit of 108°.

We went to luncheon in an air-cooled restaurant and, for a moment, Jimmy didn't say anything. He took a long quaff of beer and looked at me accusingly over his glass.

"So," he said finally, with pained deliberation, "you're putting me on the spot? Before I even get a taste of lunch, too."

He shook his head

OF A HOLLYWOOD Bachelor

BY JAMES REID

ruefully, as if that were the unforgivable part.

Turning on fiendish grin number seven, I intimated that we had a lot of ground to cover, what with romance rumors and all, and therefore couldn't begin too early.

His answer was a bewildered grin, a shrug of the shoulders, and, "What's there to say? A fellow doesn't get married just to oblige some romance rumors. He has to find the right girl. At least, that's a quaint little notion I've always had. So far, I haven't found her. As far as I'm concerned, that explains everything."

But, with all the possibilities that Hollywood had to offer, how did he explain his not having found her?

"Maybe," he hazarded, "maybe I haven't met all the possibilities. Or maybe I haven't been concentrating hard enough on the search. Or maybe she's hiding from me. That's quite possible, too."

He hadn't built up any advance notions of what she would be like. He was open-minded.

"Though I don't think I'd mind if she were a sort of duplicate of Margaret Sullavan," he volunteered, looking hard at the roll he was buttering, like a man talking to himself. "She could be the same size, look a little like that, be a little like that. Un-artificial, for one thing. I've known Sullavan for years. I knew her 'way back in the Cape Cod acting days—even if it didn't get me anywhere—and she's the kind that wears well."

I gave Jimmy a thorough once-over. A few casual strands of hair were sneaking down his forehead. His necktie was askew, his collar unfastened. He didn't look like a fellow who would insist on getting acquainted with a girl for a few years before he decided whether or not he could fall in love with her. But you never can tell by looks. So, to hear what he would say, I told him that a few people had the idea that he didn't want to get married, that he was having too good a time as a bachelor.

"Those are fightin' words, pardner," he said. "There's nothing I'd like better than to settle down. 'The fun of being single' is a snare and a delusion, an exaggeration, a canard. The life of a Hollywood bachelor is fraught with hardships. Take it from one who knows."

That called for plenty of explanation. And Jimmy, particularly now that some solid food had at last arrived in front of him, was willing to explain. Between mouthfuls, chewed with typical Stewart deliberateness, he elucidated this way:

"Well, take these romance rumors, for example. You go out with Gloria Glutz once or twice, because Gloria likes to dance and you like to dance, and she's companionable and you're companionable. Then, first thing you know, there are romance rumors. People come up to you and say, 'Look, this is getting serious. Let us in on the elopement plans.' That strikes you funny—after all, you've just met the girl—and you laugh. The word gets back to Gloria Glutz that you guffawed at the idea of a romance with her. And that's the end of you with Miss Gloria Glutz.

THAT'S JUST one of the things that can happen. And do happen. I know. But the romance rumors still strike me funny. Any other place on earth, after you go out with a girl three or four times, people assume you're beginning to get acquainted with her. Here, people suspect you of being secretly married to her. Well, practically. And the whole big happy family crowds in around the two of you, to see whether or not the romance is going to last. They don't seem to realize that it hasn't even started yet, that, up to now, it hasn't had a chance to get started.

"It's a sad set-up, very sad," said Jimmy, forking viciously into his Salisbury steak. "Suppose you're just beginning to like a girl, and she's just beginning to like you. Somebody starts a romance rumor. Maybe both of you laugh it off. After all, what's a romance rumor between friends? But, sub-consciously, both of you build up your sales resistance to a romance. You don't want her to get the notion that, as far as you're concerned, she's the only flower in the garden of love. She doesn't want you thinking that she can't live without you. And, before long, you aren't holding hands any

(Continued on page 72)

Will Paulette Goddard divorce Charlie Chaplin? Rumor is divided. Now Paulette gives you her side of the story

PAULETTE GODDARD has never had the slightest intention of filing suit for divorce against the sad-eyed little man with the funny mustache, Charlie Chaplin.

If he should ever want his freedom and ask for it—well, now, that's another story. But, in a town where gratitude is an almost unknown virtue, the little girl whom Charlie made a star is grateful. She appreciates not only her chance at stardom, but the hours of happiness which have been showered upon her by the man she loves.

That she herself has made the most of her opportunities, taking every slight bit of instruction seriously, changing her entire pattern of life so that the fabric might be that of a star rather than that of a chorus girl, she discounts as nothing beside the fact that Chaplin gave her the chance to make good. And though it's David Selznick who's offered her her latest opportunity to create an important role in "The Young in Heart," she hasn't forgotten the man to whom she feels she owes

Under Charlie's guidance, Paulette exchanged curves for svelte lines, pretty frocks for smart gowns and costume jewelry for real diamonds.

Charlie Chaplin, master of comedy and pantomime.

Paulette with Doug Fairbanks in "The Young in Heart."

She WANTS TO STAY

the deepest debt of gratitude, the chap who turned her from a blonde chorine to the voluptuous, finished actress that she is today.

And rather than hurt or distress him in any way, she would sacrifice her own hope of personal happiness, throw away forever her right to be free, and maintain her present (rather secret) status. Other little actresses in the past have climbed to stardom through marriage and then, having attained success, have had few compunctions about throwing aside the husbands who aided them. But not Paulette. She's too grateful.

Born Pauline Levy, a native of Great Neck, Long Island, she attracted little attention in the film colony until Chaplin, the man who's always been the vivid exception to every rule, the paradox who's mingled pathos with fun-making, took her under his guidance and made her not only the leading lady in his life, but in his last picture, "Modern Times." Under his guidance and tutelage, she exchanged curves for svelte lines, pretty frocks for specially designed ones, and costume jewelry for real diamonds and rubies.

With her mother, Mrs. Alta Goddard, acting as chaperone she has put in appearance with Charlie at Palm Springs, Lake Arrowhead, the Catalina Isthmus (where all the film famous moor their boats) and Del Monte. Together, the three of them have been seen at all the right places and, since October, 1932, moviedom has linked romantically the names of Paulette and Chaplin.

But, though the film colonyites guessed a marriage ceremony had been performed, neither of the principals would admit as much. Charlie replied to questioners that he was anxious to launch Paulette on a career of her own before letting the truth in regard to their marriage be known. As time went on, however, certain facts leaked out which seemed to substantiate wedding rumors.

Before they left on a trip to the Orient in 1936, Hollywood columnists carried interviews in which Chaplin was quoted as saying this was to be his honeymoon voyage and that he would be married somewhere along the way. A couple of months later, his agent in Singapore reported receiving a wireless message from the actor asking him to "do your utmost to arrange for our marriage."

THIS MESSAGE raised a great cry the length of the Straits Settlements, and everyone began a discussion of the validity of American divorces (Chaplin having been married and divorced twice previously) under British law. Then officials opened an inquiry as to whether a special license such as would be required by the comedian under the circumstances could be granted him. Archdeacon Graham White, when contacted, flatly refused to perform a wedding ceremony in the Anglican Church because of Charlie's previous marriages.

However, the following day, March 19, while no details were given, the wire services of United Press carried the following report: "Charles Chaplin and Paulette Goddard were reported married in Singapore today." That was all it said, but sources close to the couple intimated that they had been married by Captain Dave Anderson, skipper of the yacht "Panacea," on which Charlie and Paulette were sailing.

Just about a year later, Elias Berger, a wholesale jeweler in Hollywood, who had just delivered to Paulette Chaplin's latest present, a wide platinum bracelet set with marquise diamonds and linked together with smaller ones, reported that Paulette, while thanking Charlie had observed that "this is my wedding anniversary present. Where we were married, he couldn't even buy a simple wedding ring."

"Where we were married." That little phrase seemed to tell a story of a wedding in a little village in a far-off land. So Berger, on his next trip to their house took along a slender band of platinum set with marquise diamonds which he offered as a substitute for the band that already should have been on her finger.

"She was like a child with

(Continued on page 81)

MARRIED!

BY KAY CAMPBELL

Scared OF HIS SHADOW

Did you know that the best dancer in America is the victim of an

By NANETTE KUTNER

THIS IS none of my business. But I consider Fred Astaire a very unhappy young man. I believe that he lives within a self-imposed nightmare of insecurity, that he constantly worries about what people will think or say about him.

I have reasons to back up my opinion, reasons that have accumulated not just yesterday, nor the day before, but over a period of years. Here they are, offered (believe me, Mr. Astaire) in a spirit that is both well meaning and friendly. I even hope it will be helpful.

Recently a popular magazine ran a short story about a college boy who was so self-conscious he was all hands and feet. Of course he had a crush on a girl, and he was going to escort her to the prom—or die in the attempt. So he went to a second-hand store and hired himself a dress suit. After he took it home, he discovered, through the label, that it had once belonged to no less a personage than the famous Fred Astaire! According to the story, this remarkable coincidence gave said college boy such confidence and ease that he immediately became the beau of the ball, danced the Rhumba like a Cuban, and, what's more he even won the girl he'd formerly been too shy to court.

What a pleasant little tale! Understandable, too. I can see how it happened. But the author might never have written that story if he had really known Fred Astaire. Granted that on-screen Mr. Astaire has the poise and dash of a Duke of Windsor. Granted that off-screen, he is rated one of the world's best dressed men. Still, of all the stars I have interviewed, over a period of fifteen years, Fred Astaire stands out as the one possessing the greatest inferiority complex!

By inferiority complex I don't mean modesty. Valentino had that. And I don't mean humbleness. George Raft has that. Raft is forever conscious of his roughneck background, but always likable because his personality hits you straight from the shoulder. He has a sort of take-me-or-leave-me quality, with absolutely no pretensions or affectations.

No, when I say that Fred Astaire has an inferiority complex, I mean exactly that. To an interviewer he gives a lack-of-self-confidence impression, as though he felt not quite good enough, as though he were always walking on eggs, always afraid of something.

Let me go back a bit to the first time I met him. The Astaires, Fred and Adele, brother and sister, had just come into the big money class. They were starring in "Lady, Be Good" and dancing at a swanky night club. Often I would drop backstage to chat with Adele. She was lively. She was natural. She was a lot of fun. She was the exact antithesis of Fred. Although, at the time, I did not know him except as someone who poked his head in and out of her dressing room. I could see that her breeziness annoyed him. I think he resented it. Perhaps, because, like most self-conscious people, deep down in his heart he would have liked to have been that way too.

One day Adele shouted, "Freddie's got a girl. Look out front. She's a blonde. I'm so thrilled. You know, he's very bashful!" Brother-like, he was furious.

I especially remember one time when Adele came to the gala opening of a dancing school. Her hair was in curlers, tucked up under her hat. If Fred had been a woman, never, in a thousand years, would he have done such a thing. He would have been too worried about what people might think.

For he was (and still is) the worrier. In those dressing-room intervals he would worry about Adele's practicing, about the music's tempo, about the audience, about their responses and about every tap in his routines. I am not criticizing him. This kind of worrying simply means that Astaire is a true artist, never satisfied with results. It is only the public-opinion worrying that bothers anyone who has worked with him.

As you know, after Adele married her nobleman, Fred Astaire went on alone. Then came my second interview.

On the screen Fred Astaire appears poised and suave, yet he is actually afraid of his past, present and future.

amazing inferiority complex?

Somehow, there had been a mix-up. The press-agent had forgotten to notify Fred. So, a tall skinny figure, huddled in a blue flannel dressing-gown, he sat on a trunk, backstage of "The Gay Divorcée," and told me he just couldn't give a story because he "wasn't prepared."

Ten days later I got the story. This time the stage was set. We were in his Park Avenue apartment. A backgammon table stood near the window. A well trained servant opened the door. And Astaire was all good humor and shy boyish charm. He was going to get married, "but don't print that." He was going to Hollywood "but," he raved as he stood in front of a mirror, "who wants this face in pictures. Look at it. I'll be terrible!" It was plain enough. He was already scared to death.

YOU WOULD think that after his tremendous screen success this inferiority bugaboo would have taken flight. But, no, Hollywood has made him worse. When he was on Broadway there had been rumors. His partners had told how he cried when a dance went wrong. His producers had repeated the story. But Broadway has a sense of humor. It had winked its eye, dubbed him "Moaning Minnie," and let it go at that. But Hollywood panders to his temperament, a temperament that is the natural offspring of that inferiority complex.

They say that he never kisses an actress in a picture. If this is true, if, after paying him hundreds of thousands of dollars, Hollywood actually lets him get away with that, then Hollywood is balmy. If, while he is before that camera, the script calls

(Cont'd on page 80)

George Murphy takes an interest in other people's problems. He once won an important job because he knew how to win a friend.

Claudette Colbert is adored in Hollywood because she is sympathetic, tolerant, and never high-hat. Such traits always influence people.

HOW THEY WIN friends

BY DORA ALBERT

YOU'RE TIRED of your job and the dull monotony of your existence. You wonder why Mamie Jones, no better looking, with less education and brains, has got ahead so much more quickly than you have. Goodness knows, you've tried hard enough.

"Maybe it's all luck," you say bitterly. "I never got the breaks. That's the only difference."

In a way, you're right. You never did get the breaks. But why not? Simply because you lacked the most vital ingredient needed to make anyone a success—the ability to win friends and influence people—which is so important that a book on the subject by Dale Carnegie, "How To Win Friends and Influence People," set a new record for best sellers.

All Dale Carnegie did was to formulate the rules by which you could influence people. But the Hollywood movie stars have been living up to their own rules, which they discovered long before Dale Carnegie's book was ever heard of. They would not be stars today if they didn't know how to influence people into giving them the kind of publicity they want and the kind of roles for which they are best suited. You may be very sure of that.

Take a lesson from the movie stars who, believe it or not, knew their

By honestly appreciating everything anyone does for her, Eleanor Powell makes those around her happy.

Being big enough to admit his mistakes has won for Nelson Eddy many a friend and even a renowned music teacher.

Often their careers depend upon whether they have more friends, eager to boost them to success, or more enemies, who would welcome an opportunity to knife them in the back. I am sure that when Ethel Merman, that dark-haired, tempestuous gold digger of merry memory, first met George Gershwin, it never occurred to her to try deliberately to influence him. But from the beginning it was very evident that she was interested in his work and genuinely awed by his great musical ability. He, in turn, became interested in her personality, and although she was a young, comparatively unknown singer, he composed "I've Got Rhythm" with no other purpose in mind than to fit the striking personality of this girl.

"I think," he told her, "this song will make you a star."

It did make her a star—one of the gayest, brightest, most twinkling stars on the New York stage, but the song would never have been composed if Gershwin had not become interested in Ethel Merman because he sensed her sympathetic interest in his own problems.

George Murphy, who recently made a brilliant comeback in pictures, was at one time particularly anxious to land a dancing job in one special club. Sizing up the situation, however, he discovered that asking for the spot on the floor show would accomplish nothing.

The manager was a friendless sort of person who awed everyone by ensconcing himself behind a mammoth desk and remaining there while he pushed buttons for attention. Discovering this fact, Murphy set out to try to help the man out of his loneliness. At first, George's entrance into this man's office was rebuffed.

"Oh, I just wanted someone to talk to," he would say, "and I'm interested in the work you're doing and the way you're doing it. Just thought perhaps you wouldn't mind chatting with me for a while."

After a time, the club manager began to look forward to Murphy's visits. One evening after a particularly pleasant session he asked George what was his line of work.

"I'm a dancer," young Murphy replied.

"Why didn't you say so before?" the manager boomed. "I have a place for you in the (Continued on page 90) psychology long before Dale Carnegie's famous book was ever heard of

"We may be gelatine gods in Hollywood," says Fredric, "but elsewhere it's different."

Fredric steals a march on failure and turns it to glowing success

BY GLADYS HALL

FREDDIE TOOK a spanking on the place where spankings hurt actors the worst—his ego. And he took his spanking, as he has taken his successes, handsomely, nonchalantly, withal thoughtfully.

"Success can be failure," said Fred, his teeth in a cheese sandwich, his wife on his lap, his wise, amused eyes on me. "But failure can be success, too. Ever think of that? We have, haven't we, Mommie?" he asked, with a sly wink at Florence. "We are Case Histories 1A and 1B illustrating this hopeful theory."

"I'm going to take a nap," said Florence, making an unsuccessful effort to remove herself from the lap of her lord and master. Unsuccessful because Freddie, as you may have noticed, has a way with women on the screen. He has the same way at home.

I said, "Are you referring to the Marches on Broadway last season? To the play titled 'Yr. Obedient Husband,' starring Florence Eldridge and Fredric March?"

"I am," said Freddie, with a gusty sigh. "I am also referring to the hurried funeral of same. But I am thinking of more than appears on the surface. It wasn't just a play that flopped, you see, it was a dream. It was a dream we'd dreamed, Florence and I. A dream with a capital D. Then one week passed and we wrapped it up and put it away. Or it was wrapped up for us, in nice prickly cactus leaves."

"I want to take a nap," said Florence, wriggling.

Freddie's strong right encircled her firmly. He said, "You look too well to need a nap," and went on talking. He said, "It was kind of a hurdle to me, you know, the theatre—a hurdle I wanted to make very fleetly and successfully. Florence had done it. She was a success on Broadway before we came to Hollywood. I have never really cracked it. I'd played featured roles on Broadway, as you may remember, though why should you? I'd been in such plays as 'The Half-Caste,' 'Puppets,' 'Devil in The Cheese,' and others. On the road we played for the Theatre Guild. In Los Angeles I played in 'The Royal Family.' That was the play that started me off in pictures.

"But I'd never really done it, you know. I wanted to, badly. Florence came out with me when I went into pictures. And she has stood by, a willing and very cheerful martyr to my career, forsaking her own. So we both wanted to make good, Florence again, I for the first time. Well, we went back. We flopped. And it taught us a lot of things. Nice, acid things, good for the soul.

"Just before we got to New York last winter Florence had a qualm. She said to me, 'Do you think we are making a mistake?' I answered, 'What can we lose? Sixteen or seventeen thousand dollars and a couple of reputations, that's all!' "

WELL, THEY lost the thousands, but out of the cremation their reputations rose up, brighter Phoenixes than ever they had been before. Which is saying something. They came out of the debacle, all their colors flying because they were good sports about failure. They've learned that when you can laugh at failure it isn't failure any more.

I think that I have never seen an actor take a spanking on his ego more sportingly than Freddie. He proved that mummers are men. He proved that Hollywood success doesn't soften, after all; doesn't do something to the fibres of its darlings so that they can't take the raps when they come.

I gazed upon Freddie with new respect superimposed on the respect I have always felt for him. For the strength and simplicity with which he has gone about carving out one of the most successful careers in Hollywood. Never a headline hero, Freddie. Never any ballyhoo. Never one of the "sensational" successes of the school of Valentino, John Gilbert, other fiery spellbinders. None of the Barnum methods. But in every picture he makes, he scores an authentic (Continued on page 103)

Florence Eldridge (Mrs. March to you) was a Broadway success before she married Freddie.

Fredric goes dramatic to amuse Virginia Bruce between scenes of "There Goes My Heart."

Keeping UP WITH THE Joneses

BY CAROLINE S. HOYT

Meet the Jones family! From

WE'VE BEEN asked to lunch with the Jones family today. It's an invitation few would refuse. To you and me and thousands throughout the country, the Joneses are as real as the people next door. You and I and those thousands are responsible for their continued existence. When "Every Saturday Night" was being made, it was just another picture. No one suspected it was also a fruitful seed, about to take root and spread into a family tree.

Then it was released, and with a promptitude there was no mistaking, America took this typically American family to its heart. Much as they might have said, "We like those people who've moved in across the way. We want to see more of them," so they said in a million voices that swelled to a sweet-sounding roar, "We like the Joneses. We want to see more of them. We want to go to Bonnie's wedding and watch Roger in the throes of puppy love. We want to hear Dad yell 'Louise' when he gets into a mess, and we want to sneak a cup of coffee with Grandma in the kitchen." Or as one fan put it, "We can't bear to lose sight of them. They're kinfolk."

There's nothing curious about the fact that they look like a family. Max Golden, the producer, bore that idea in mind when he spent weeks choosing the original cast, which has been kept intact throughout, except for the substitution of Shirley Deane for June Lang after the first picture. They bear such a

Left to right, Alan Dinehart, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, Shirley Deane, George Ernest, Director Herbert Leeds, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, June Carlson and Billy Mahan.

Grandma down to Billy they're as happy and lovable off-screen as on striking resemblance to one another, they might all have been bred from the same stock. They all have blue eyes, fair skin, round faces for the most part, and hair shading from blonde to light brown.

"Of course Jeddy's hazel-eyed," points out Grandma. (Florence Roberts is Grandma to them all, off-screen and on.) "But then, he takes after his father."

"Brown sheep of the family," cracks Kenny Howell.

"And you can see that they get their button noses from me," Mother Byington chimes in.

"Whatever they get from you," grunts Dad Prouty, "they can thank their lucky stars for it."

The children break into a chant. "Dad-dy's ma-king lo-ove to Mo-o-thah!"

"And who has a better right, you young gangsters?"

"He calls us that," dimples June, "because we're always ganging up on him."

The curious thing is that even off the screen, there seems to be a certain kinship among them—the kinship of good humor, perhaps. Gathered 'round their table in the café on the studio lot, they remain as homelike a group of people, as pleasant to know as those who eat in the Jones' dining-room. There is the same give and take of good comradeship. There is the same implicit affection without sugariness. Dad Prouty ribs the children. The children take it and bounce it back. Grandma feeds George a forkful of her dessert, because "he wants to see if he likes it." Mother Byington reads the menu for Grandma, ties Billy's napkin 'round his neck, tells Shirley how pretty her hat is, waggles her finger at Kenny who is late, and draws Dad out on the subject of his reminiscences—all with as deft and gracious a touch as her screen prototype.

She passes 'round a snapshot she's taken of June. Dad Prouty takes a squint at it. "Hm, she looks like a colt sitting there—all legs."

"Well, if the Lord's made anything sweeter-looking than a colt, I've yet to set eyes on it," retorts Mother.

"When is a colt not a colt?" inquires Kenny, imps dancing in his eyes. "When he's sitting."

This strikes Billy as pretty funny. He chokes over his milk. Shirley rescues it and thumps him gently on the back, like any sister would.

"I'll take your picture, Junie," offers George, the candid camera fiend.

"Thank you, Georgie," she murmurs sweetly. He scowls, and her dimples deepen. "'Scuseitplease, George with*out* the ie."

They're contracted for four pictures a year. Between pictures they go their separate ways. "But when we get together again," George explains, "it's like we'd just been away for the weekend or something, and we're glad to be back."

"Like any family," volunteers Shirley cheerfully.

"Not like any family," snorts Grandma. "Indeed not! We all like each other." (Continued on page 94)

SOCIAL Security

Danielle Darrieux's luscious all mulberry ensemble is enriched by sable revers and muff.

Right, on Lynn Bari's velvet suit fox fur swirls gracefully from collar to cuffs.

SOCIAL SECURITY can be a lot more than "pie in the sky" if you take your wardrobe tips from the current film fashion parade.

"The Rage of Paris" presents Danielle Darrieux in a series of fetching frocks, well suited to the Latin looker's willowy proportions. Her street things belie rumors of longer suit jackets. Better for the five-feet-fours and under, to ignore such rumors though, as the hip length jacket lops off height. In "The Rage of Paris" Miss Darrieux sets out to land a millionaire, wearing a bolero suit with slim skirt and trimming concentrated at the top. The brief jacket is bordered all the way around with fur and the sleeves have double fur cuffs. Another stunning street suit of mulberry rodier jersey has a peplum jacket with revers and huge muff of tipped sable.

The peplum also appears on the lamé tunic of a dinner dress with a slinky black skirt ending in a tiny train. Hip frills are all right for Miss Darrieux's wispy silhouette, but remember that peplums add poundage, so if you have any extra heft of your own don't spotlight it with ruffles.

Draped evening things are definitely in, and a new twist is evolved for the French star in a white gown. The bodice is probably more intricate than it looks, but it seems to consist of two lengths of material, one draped from right front to left back, the other from left front to right back, where they join a girdle and the flowing skirt. The flavor is Grecian, and Miss Darrieux "ups" her shoulder bob for this one.

Katharine Hepburn goes through "Holiday" with her accustomed tailored severity, being very much at home in swagger sports things. Her one formal gown accents her slim figure. It is black sheer, high at the throat, fitted through the body, and has long tight sleeves. Its severity is relieved only by a slit in the back of the bodice and an occasional coy peep of white ruffled petticoat. Miss Hepburn wears a chiffon handkerchief clipped to the shoulder.

"Sister" Doris Nolan's wardrobe is gayer. A backless lamé with peplum is held up by the narrowest of shoulder straps. Her sheer black dinner dress is topped by a graceful bertha and a corsage of enormous satin roses.

Like Miss Darrieux in "The Rage of Paris," Loretta Young acquires a million dollar wardrobe—object matrimony—in "Three Blind Mice." A high off-the-face sombrero, clinging to the side of her head, tops a trim short jacket suit. Of a series of elaborate evening gowns, the one with the "newest" air shows a decided sarong influence. A splashy South Seas print, the gown drapes over one shoulder, winds around the body and ends in a bit of train.

Filmdom's best dressed stars suggest some winning numbers to insure your fashion future

by MARIAN SQUIRE

Doris Nolan's flattering dark sheer dinner dress is the kind that should be in every girl's wardrobe.

Binnie Barnes, who seems to be everywhere at once lately, stops menacing long enough to turn up as a gay gal with a penchant for beer, in "Three Blind Mice." Either Miss Barnes gave up watching the scales when she turned to comedy, or her clothes are playing practical jokes on her silhouette. She is more than a bit to the buxom in a flowered number with halter strap, and material twisted over the shoulders to form large straps or tiny sleeves, depending on the point of view. This is worn under a boxy white fox jacket.

Girlish simplicity rules for Harriet Hilliard in "Cocoanut Grove." She reserves one dress-up frock for the finish, a dream-girl white net with spreading skirt and tiny fitted bodice.

Dorothy Lamour, who can lend an air to smart clothes as well as any of her screen colleagues, is confined to Mexican peasant dresses in "Tropic Holiday." The splashy wardrobe is reserved for Binnie (that girl is here again) Barnes.

One of Binnie's best is a wool suit of loose, smart weave with a short self-material cape trimmed with strips of natural wolf suggesting sleeves. With this she wears an angora sports hat whose chiffon veil drapes about the face or falls casually from one side like a scarf.

In "Always Goodbye," Barbara Stanwyck suffers through most of the picture in the simplest of frocks. Then she makes a lot of money and blossoms out, sartorially. But blossoms! A street ensemble consists of a bracelet sleeved redingote over a light pleated dress, the bodice draped and caught with a huge clip. With this, Barbara wears a high turban with a scarf floating down the back and crossing the shoulders in front.

Lynn Bari, Miss Stanwyck's screen rival, wears a light between-season coat with double rows of fur on the sleeves. Her tiny cap hat has a bunch of quills shooting up on one side and curving (Continued on page 79)

HE'S GOOFY and HE LIKES IT

Diplomat, charlatan, gentleman, rogue, Reginald Owen plays them all. But what is he really like? Read on

This delightful Englishman has an unexpected slant on life. It's fresh and amusing, too.

I AM slightly unbalanced," said Reginald Owen pleasantly, as he peppered his oysters on the half shell. "I look at things sort of abnormally, you know. Quite normal people and things take on, in my mind, a slant, a perverse twist, a hump, an oblique angle.

"I am not a pathological case. I annoy no one, so far as I know. I live the most matter-of-fact life. I have orderly, circumspect habits. I neither collect penguins, pinch babies nor go in for voodoo. On the contrary, I eat, swim, play tennis, cricket and golf, like hamburgers, adore Garbo, go to bed early, rise early, am kind to my wife, read biographies, think "Hamlet" the greatest play ever written and "David Copperfield" the greatest picture ever produced anywhere.

"I own a dog and am kind to him—or her. Which illustrates what I mean. I do not know the sex of the dog, now that you ask me. Which is, I am sure, looking at things abnormally, here in Hollywood. But it's just that the sex of the animal isn't important to me. That it's a dog is all that matters—as far as I'm concerned. Hollywood doesn't worry me in the least either. I live and let live and manage very nicely, thank you.

"I have been married twice. My first wife was a well-known English actress. My second wife, also English, is a non-professional. We have a cottage at Malibu and live there all year round. I know everyone in the movie colony, but am intimate with no one. People seem to like me. No one trembles at my approach.

"But I do look at things abnormally. The sun, to me, is not just the sun, blazing away to give me a becoming tan. It is a copper cauldron (Continued on page 96)

BY FAITH SERVICE

Reggie says Mrs. Owen is the perfect understanding wife. What does he mean—he isn't happy?

by MALCOLM OETTINGER

She COULDN'T SAY "NO"

Gale Sondergaard tells what every girl wants to know about acting

OUT OF TEN thousand girls who dream of a stage career, one actually becomes an actress. Out of a hundred thousand ambitious girls, one may penetrate the precincts of the aloof Theatre Guild, proud standard-bearer of the New York stage. Out of a million girls, possibly one may win an Academy award with her very first picture.

Yet here is one girl who did all these things. Her name is Gale Sondergaard. And how, you ask, did she ever do it?

She is square-jawed, high cheek-boned, attractive in a sultry way. Her predatory mouth surprises you when it curves into a smile. She has been acting since she was a high school sophomore, in innumerable tent shows, barnstorming troupes, stock companies and road companies. She has played hags and ingenues, mothers and daughters, wantons and nuns. In Jessie Bonstelle's famous Cleveland stock company, Gale Sondergaard won a reputation as the girl who never said "no." She would tackle any part assigned to her.

"That helped me when I was lucky enough to connect with the Guild," she says, "and it was marvelous training for pictures, too."

Miss Sondergaard chanced to be available to a working member of the press while spending a fortnight in New York on vacation between pictures. Ever since she snared the Academy award for her impressive performance in "Anthony Adverse" she has been deluged with offers, and her biggest task has been to select the best parts in what appear to be the more promising pictures.

"I haven't been a menace in every picture," she boasts gaily. "'Maid of Salem' offered a psychopathically jealous wife. 'Seventh Heaven' permitted me to indulge in a whim by playing a she-devil with a wicked smile. 'Zola' gave me a really sympathetic part, Madame Dreyfus. Then my latest, 'Lord Jeff', gave me another soulless role, that of Doris, the jewel thief."

In the film world the Sondergaard name is definitely significant. Her picture career was launched as smoothly as a new streamlined cruiser. No waiting around, no gnawing of fingernails, no heartbreak. She just walked in to a director's office, took a test, and was signed on the spot.

"I was out west simply because my husband was out west. You know, he was another Theatre Guild fugitive seeking refuge in the gold fields of Hollywood. He was to direct a picture so I went along for the ride. For six months I forgot the theatre and just had myself a time golfing, riding, sleeping late, swimming, luxuriating in (Continued on page 106)

Exercise regularly if you want to keep beautiful, say Virginia Grey and Ann Rutherford who do their daily dozen together.

Learn to be your own fashion expert. Phyllis Brooks shows excellent taste in the choice of this two-piece wool dress.

COOL WEATHER Beauty

The "Grande Toilette" is with us—so here are some timely tips to

BY MARY MARSHALL

IT'S A DARN sight easier to be beautiful in cool weather than in hot weather. For most girls, that is. Mebbe I'm some prejudiced, because hot weather has me falling completely apart—such a struggle does it seem to look half-way decent, with the make-up running off my face as fast as I put it on. Come the first cool days, I snap to and begin to feel like a human being. Come brisk October, and I begin to look quite nice, considering everything.

But, after all, who cares about my ever-present beauty struggles. 'Tis you this article is for and about. So, if you have felt rather beaten down and have said, during the heat of the past season, "A pox upon all this fussing and grooming!" take heart and consider the good-looks question of fall and winter of this year, nineteen toity-eight.

For, m' dears, kinder though the coolth is to many of us, there is right now quite a problem before the women of America where beauty and fashion are concerned. The men and women who set styles, trends and changes in high fashion are, and have been, doing everything in their power to make it a pretty expensive matter to be lovely, chic and well-dressed. Well, sure. Fine. That's their business and that's how they make their hard-earned money.

The "Grande Toilette" is with us. And what is this here now "Grande Toilette?" It's French for a get-up so flossy and complicated that nobody could do such without a lady's maid and a nice, fat bank account. Elaborate coiffures; sheer witch-craft where make-up is concerned; gowns with mile-wide skirts, stiffened, tucked, flounced. Why, you couldn't touch the least of them under a hundred and fifty bucks! Even day clothes are so shrewd and clever in cut and detail (the ones sponsored by these high fashion guys and guy-esses, I mean) that you and I would simply have to go around in Mother Hubbards if there were nothing else to be had on this fair planet.

To some extent, this situation has always cropped up with the start of the winter season. I mean, caviar and champagne styles for the rich and lucky, cheap tawdry copies for the honest working girl. But the situation is wuss this year than it has been for many years past and is further complicated by the great to-do over fixing one's hair and painting

Connie Bennett knows she looks best in a long bob, so she doesn't change her hair style with every passing fashion whim.

Let Danielle Darrieux wrap herself in ermine—but less expensive furs can be just as flattering if you choose them carefully.

FORECAST

make you glamorous

one's face, until, as I have implied, one would need an Antoine and a Perc Westmore combined, around the premises—but constantly.

Ladies, how are we going to meet this problem? How are we going to get the most chic and glamor out of our clothes, our hair-dos and our pet beauty tricks? How are we going to adapt high fashion trends to our pocketbooks and our everyday needs? How are we going to avoid the many pitfalls which shops and advertisements are going to set in our paths? Or shall we just say "to heck with it all," and keep on doing what we've been doing right along?

Ah, now, maybe we have something there. Something —but not everything. You've got something there when you pass up the dizzy coif-

(Continued on page 107)

LITTLE LORD Fauntleroy

BY HARRY LANG

You know Bartholomew's professional "front," but this is a story of the real Freddie

One minute a romping boy, the next a self-assured adult, Freddie is always the finished actor—and British to the core.

ACCORDING TO the birth records, Freddie Bartholomew is fourteen years old. But that doesn't mean a thing! Because, despite simple arithmetic, Freddie's age is a constant question. Minute by minute, hour by hour, week by week, you're wondering just how old Freddie is being at the particular moment you're talking with him, or watching him.

Sometimes he's an adult, acting with the poise, bearing and calm self-assurance of a man of thirty. He'll talk about internationalism, his conception of the ideal life, or the grandeur of the British Empire with the same mental reactions and vocabulary you'd expect from a grown person.

The next minute he whoops a war-cry to some kid playmate or his stand-in, and they descend forthwith to a mental age of about four years, doing some inane prank like pushing arc-light dollies from one end of a movie stage to the other until director, actors, technicians and grips all want to slap 'em down!

The only answer seems to be that the brain that functions inside the fourteen-year-old skull of this little English wizard of the screen is actually a sort of Jekyll-Hyde affair. And that Freddie, by some trick of psychology, can snap it on and off like you or I would switch an electric light. One minute he thinks like a grown-up, the next he sloughs off all that and is a child again. To see him do it is often amazing.

I remember the time he recited Shakespeare for a group of grown-ups. Now, you've all heard kids recite. They get up there and, according to their abilities, they rattle off a poem or a speech or whatever they've memorized—and they're done. Every-(Continued on page 109)

OFF THEIR Guard

What goes on? Versatile Carole Lombard has become a press agent pro tem! And such industry! Not a moment to herself with the phone ringing every other minute, Miss P. A. "lights up" while she talks.

Photos by George Strock

DANGER—LOMBARD AT WORK

It might be well to let the "underlings" know where a girl stands on business matters.

One must take time out for a sandwich and a glass of milk—so Miss Lombard does just that.

Carole walks in on—she knows not what. Starring isn't enough. Here she's directing publicity.

Catching up on her predecessor's correspondence. A press-agent's gotta know things.

The lady takes to the floor. What's wrong with this picture? It's just out of focus, Carole decides.

Then, of course, there's the filing. And being an orderly belle, Carole keeps it up to date.

Here's the fade-out. Fun's fun, but when things get this busy, it's certainly time to quit!

Norma's NIGHT

All Movietown pays homage to Miss Shearer's "Marie Antoinette"

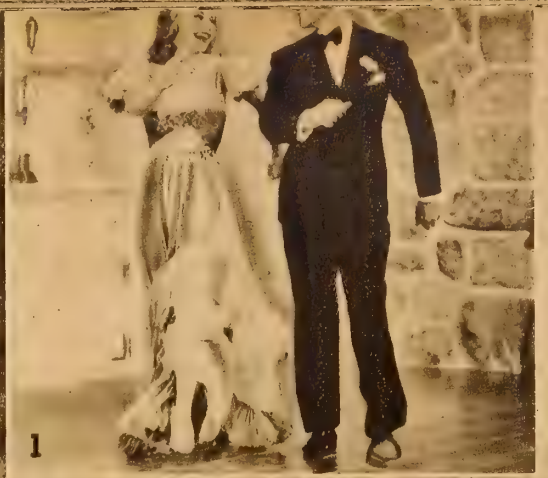
Louis B. Mayer, Helen Hayes, Norma and Ty Power enter the theatre.

Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond congratulate Norma.

Spencer Tracy, back from location, with his best gal, Mrs. S. T.

Carole Lombard with the ever-attentive Mr. Gable and Ty Power.

Barbara Stanwyck signs the theatre's guest book with Bob Taylor lookin' on.



Margaret Sullavan—who's expecting the stork again—with Hubby Leland Hayward.

DOIN' the Jam

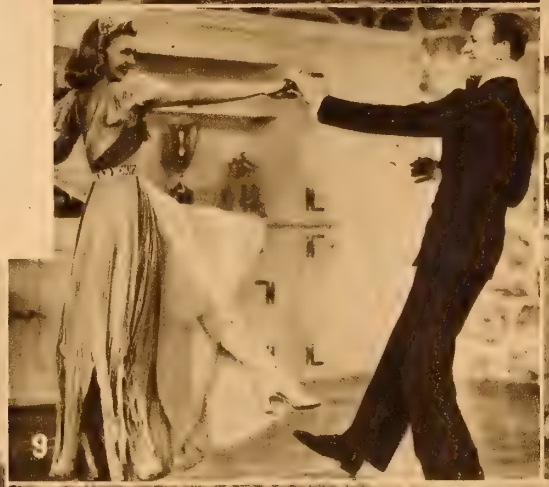
1

2

3

4

5



A scoop for you! Modern Screen presents an exclusive preview of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire swinging it again in "Carefree." Follow them as they breeze along in four-four time doin' the new dance that Fred himself created. 1. Let's go with a smooth swing stroll. 2. Break and strut your own. 3. Together with a "heel-and-toe." 4. Then Yam! (Heels together, toes apart, then a left, right, left, right). 5. Slide back with left foot forward. 6. Then pivot—so. 7. Right leg steady, hop in a half circle. 8. Knees raised, do a lowdown strut. 9. "Heel-and-toe" in a complete circle. 10. Follow the leader and strut. 11. The Yam again! 12. Raise your hand and sway. Did you get it?

Mary Livingstone, the guest of honor, opens one of her birthday presents as Gracie Allen and George Burns look on. Now that is a loving cup!

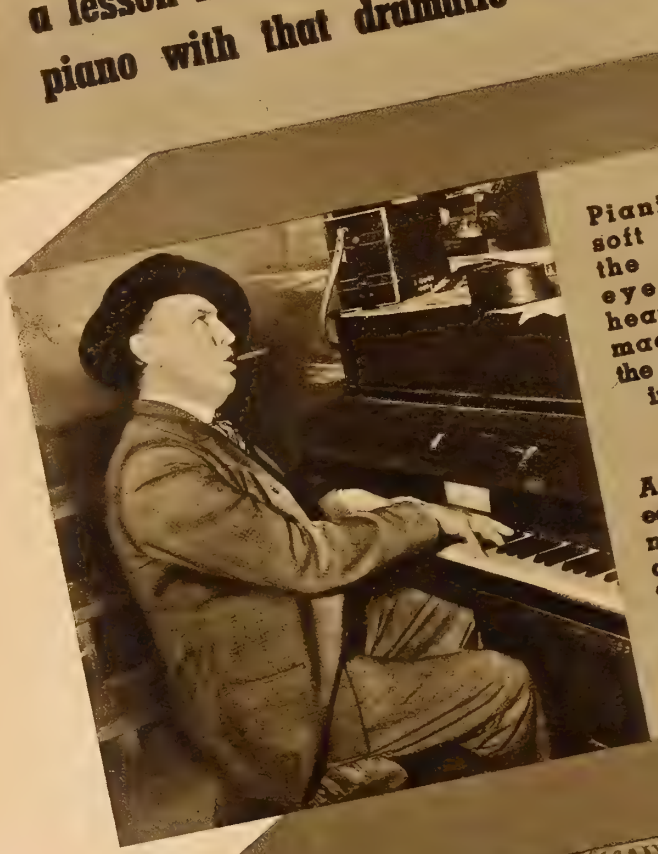
Hollywood Party

A gay time is had by all when Gracie Allen and George Burns throw a shindig

E. E. Horton, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell enjoy the floor show.

Host Burns and Jack Benny burlesque a strip-tease act.

Sally Eilers and Cesar Romero beside the Burns' swimming pool, which was converted into a dance floor.



Cesar Romero, Ethel Merman, Allan Jones, Irene Hervey and the Jack Bennys.

Facing THE MUSIC

John Barrymore, who never took a lesson in his life, punishes the piano with that dramatic touch

Preliminaries—with a flourish the professor lights his cigar.

Pianissimo—soft pedal to the ground, eyes to the heavens, the maestro gets the feel of his instrument.

Arpeggio—executed with the nonchalance of a veteran and topped off by a distinctive and clever twist of the thumb.

Fortissimo—The piano cringes helplessly before the attack. There's determination in those eyes!

What a racket! It's the first time in fifteen years that Barrymore has sung professionally. And no wonder!

Dates More Dates Re-dates!

. . . ALL FOR THE GIRL WHO KEEPS SKIN THRILLING

SMART GIRLS CREAM EXTRA "SKIN-VITAMIN" INTO THEIR SKIN. . . FOR EXTRA BEAUTY CARE *

Men fall for soft, smooth skin. When skin lacks Vitamin A, the vitamin essential to skin health, it gets harsh and dry. Now Pond's Cold Cream contains this necessary "skin-vitamin."

If skin has enough "skin-vitamin," Pond's brings an Extra Supply against possible future need. Smart girls follow this new beauty care to help provide against loss of the "skin-vitamin."

● All normal skin contains Vitamin A—the "skin-vitamin." ● In hospitals, scientists found that this vitamin, applied to the skin, healed wounds and burns quicker. ● Now this "skin-vitamin" is in every jar of Pond's Cold Cream! Pond's has not been changed in any other way. It's the same grand cream you have always known. Use it as always—night and morning and before make-up. Same jars, same labels, same prices.

* Statements concerning the effects of the "skin-vitamin" applied to the skin are based upon medical literature and tests on the skin of animals following an accepted laboratory method.

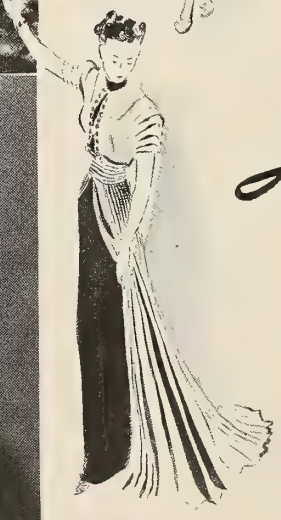
Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P. M., N. Y. Time, N. B. C.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

Schiaparelli

Schiaparelli tops a sheath of violet crepe with a naive mauve satin bolero and yellow kerchief, the two embroidered in rose, yellow, green. For the nails, she suggests Cutex HEATHER—says, "It harmonizes perfectly with all these colors."

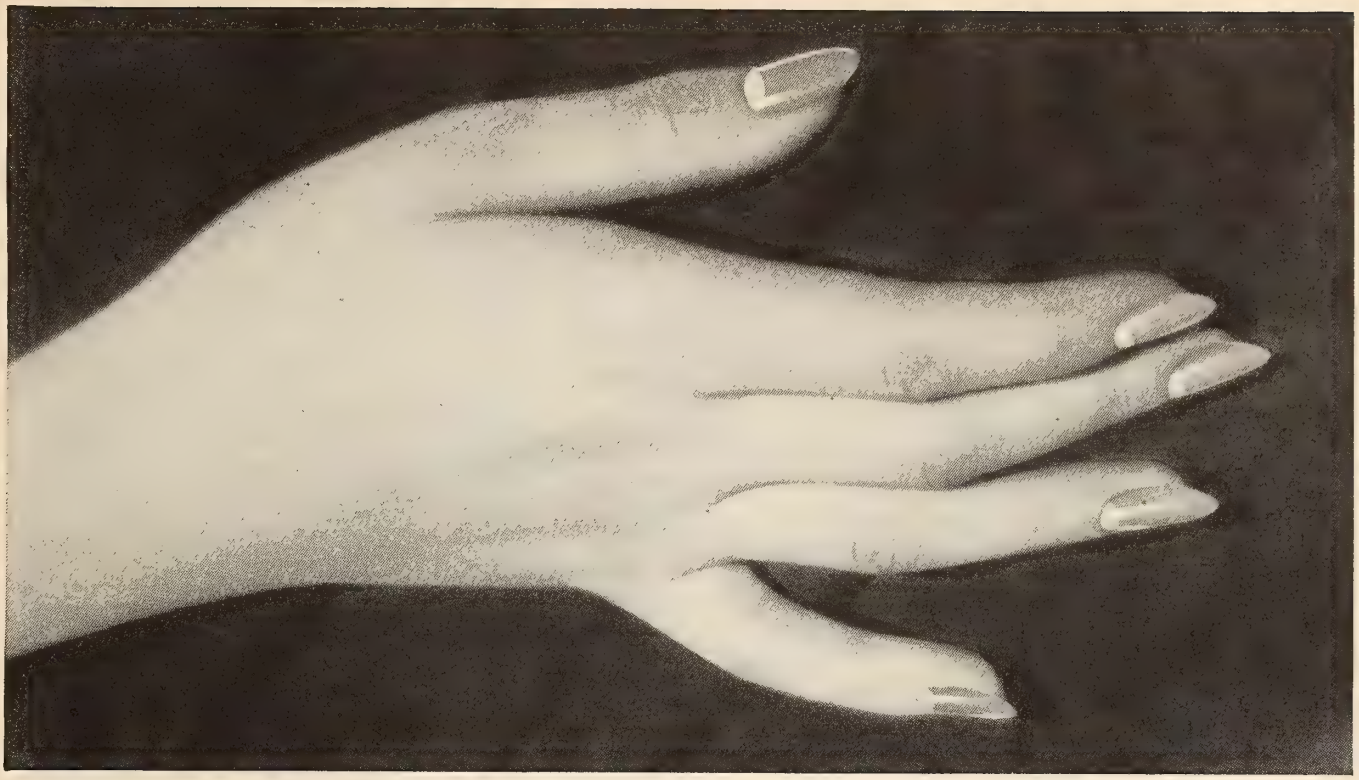


Alix

With studied simplicity and accent on contours, Alix drapes an afternoon frock of canard-green crepe—the side-fullness of the skirt flowing from a narrow bowknot just under the heart. For a final touch of feminine subtlety, Alix suggests the mauvy pink of Cutex LAUREL nails.

Lelong

Grayish-blue wool crepe is folded and tucked and pleated by Lelong into a ravishing evening coat. Worn over a sheer black jersey evening dress. With it Lelong recommends contrasting finger-nails done in Cutex HEATHER. The purplish tint of Cutex HEATHER emphasizes the blue of the coat.



Lanvin

Singular grace and elegance mark this Lanvin creation—"Intermezzo"—a charming suit of soft brown wool with the new short-clipped box jacket. Appliqué motif of ciré satin and beaver. To accentuate its graceful charm, Lanvin advises finger tips of the delicate new Cutex LAUREL.

CUTEX

SPONSOR CUTEX Laurel, CUTEX Heather

YOU'LL lead a charmed—and charming—life if you choose Cutex LAUREL and Cutex HEATHER for your nails this Fall.

Four famous Paris dressmakers, Schiaparelli, Alix, Lelong and Lanvin, say: "It is nothing short of clairvoyance the way these two new nail shades —Cutex LAUREL and Cutex HEATHER— tone in with the newest autumn colors."

The new Cutex LAUREL is a chic, mauvy pink—a delicate complement to the new, deep purplish tones — mulberry, grape, purple blues. Lovely with the lighter blues, gray, rose. Very smart with brown, dark green.

The new Cutex HEATHER is a deeper, duskier shade with the same illusive purple cast. A natural with deep violet, burgundy, wine. Lovely with blue, pink, mauve, yellow. A rich contrast for brown and green.

Magic at Your Finger Tips!

Enhance the natural charm of your hands in the gay winter days and evenings to come. Follow the advice of Schiaparelli, Alix, Lelong and Lanvin! Conjure up romance for yourself, aided and abetted by the finger-tip sorcery of Cutex LAUREL and Cutex HEATHER!

NEWEST WEAR SENSATION! Cutex Salon Type Polish—for those who are "hard on their nails." Based on a new principle, Salon Type Polish is a little heavier than the regular Cutex Crème Polish — gives a jewel-like finish. It takes slightly longer to dry, but those few extra minutes mean days of extra wear! In all twelve smart Cutex shades. Only 35¢ a bottle. Try it! Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris.

6 ENCHANTING NEW CUTEX SHADES TO CHOOSE FROM

HEATHER: Deep purplish rose for violet, mauve, wine, gray, brown, green, blue, yellow.

LAUREL: A subtle grayed pink. For blue, brown, green, beige, gray, rose or lavender.

CLOVER: Deep, winy red —goes with everything except orange tones.

THISTLE: Blended Rust and Rose. Perfect with gray, green, rust, brown.

TULIP: A soft, glowing red. Stunning with black, gray, blue, bright green, fuchsia, yellow.

ROBIN RED: True red, subdued in intensity. It really goes with everything.

Besides an exciting range of colors to choose from, Cutex Polishes wear for days without fading, chipping, peeling. Only 35¢! Get a bottle today!

Send for complete Home-Manicure Set Special Value . . . only 25¢ containing your choice of Cutex LAUREL or Cutex HEATHER Salon Type Nail Polish, plus Cutex Oily Polish Remover, Cutex Oily Cuticle Remover, Cotton, Orangewood Stick and 4 Emery Boards. Attractively arranged on a handsome, compact stand with convenient finger rest.

Northam Warren Corporation, Dept. 8-M-10,
191 Hudson St., New York
(In Canada, P. O. Box 427, Montreal)
I enclose 25¢ to help cover postage and packing for Cutex Set, including either Cutex LAUREL or Cutex HEATHER. (Check shade desired.)

LAUREL ☐ HEATHER ☐

Name_____

Address_____

City State

POLISH

"KISS ME QUICK!"

"YOU WIN! I can't stay mad when you bring me Beeman's! It's got such flavor—a dash and tang and irresistible lusciousness that lifts me right out of the dumps!

They say it's the triple guard airtight package that keeps Beeman's so fresh and full of flavor—all I know is, it's good!"

Beeman's
AIDS DIGESTION...

TOWN AND COUNTRY KNITS

OH, DEAR, I've nothing to wear!" need never be said by the girl who knows how to knit. This year, more than ever, smart women are wearing knit dresses and blouses for every occasion. With two or three of these in your wardrobe, you'll never be at a loss for the right costume at the right time. There's big style news in the two stunning designs illustrated here, made from angora and metallic yarns. And, what's more, you don't even have to be terribly clever with your needles to make either one of them.

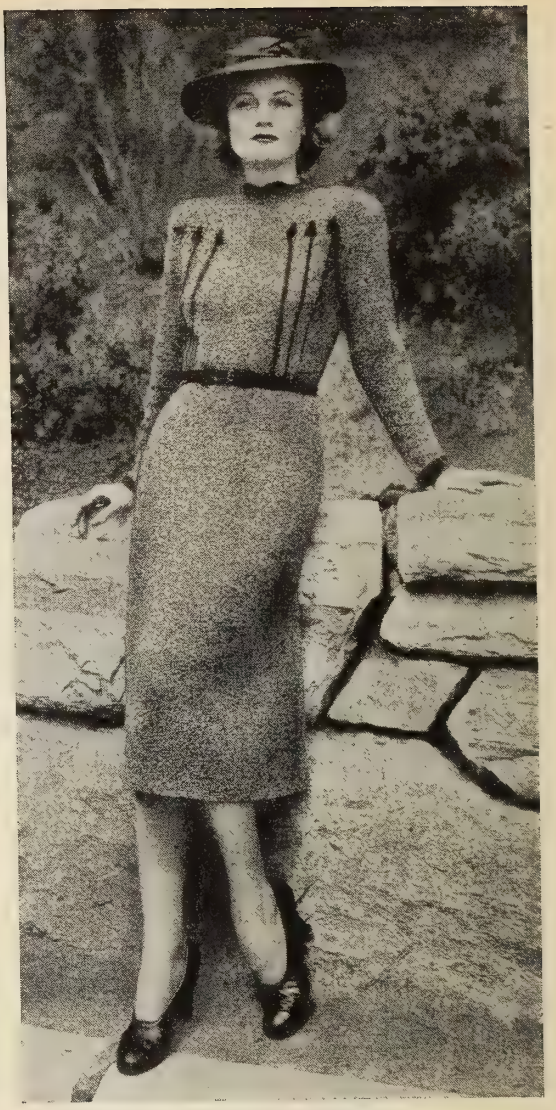
The striking one-piece dress places importance upon its pockets, outlined in contrasting angora which finishes in three small tassels at the top of each pocket. The flattering high neckline opens at back with a slide fastener, and is trimmed in angora, which also makes the smart little roll cuffs. All this soft angora trim is done with one ball of yarn. The stockinette stitch is all you need know to make this becoming dress.

The cocktail blouse repeats last year's success in this year's lines. Made of crepe and gold thread, it gives a lamé appearance. The gilt zipper is a stunning note. The new cutaway line, with that beautiful nipped-in waist, is achieved by simple knitting and purling, the same detail being carried out in the shirred sleeves. Wear this with a short pleated crepe skirt for afternoon, with a long one for evening. Instructions for both designs are free. Send for them today and be ready to meet the new Fall season smartly.

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Knitting directions for No. 2664.....
Knitting directions for No. 1356.....



I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name .....

Address .....

City..... State.....

Check one or both designs and please print name and address plainly.

No. 2664—There's big style news in the angora trim on this chic one-piece dress.

No. 1356—Below, the hand-knit cocktail blouse for formal afternoons or evenings.

"Born for Romance"

Lovely Loretta Young tells other girls a secret that wins..

"DAINTINESS is most important to charm," says Loretta Young. "Luckily, it isn't a matter of dollars, but of Lux!"

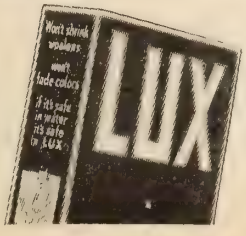
Even before screen success came, this charming star had dozens of beaux who thought her handed-down clothes, fastidiously fresh, looked like a million dollars. She still looks out for her wardrobe personally—insists on Lux. "Thanks to Lux, my personal things look wonderful," she says.

Luxing dresses, undies, stockings keeps them immaculately fresh—lovely looking longer. Anything safe in water alone is safe in Lux.



● LORETTA YOUNG in a charming negligee and (right) in an evening dress of white jersey. Her washable screen costumes, like her personal things, are cared for with gentle Lux.

● 20TH CENTURY-FOX stars Loretta in a new screen romance, "Suez."

● BEAUTIFUL STOCKINGS are a matter of course to Loretta. "It's easy not to get constant runs," she says. "I just trust to Lux instead of luck." Lux saves elasticity—cuts down runs.

● LEADING HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS specify Lux for all washables. "It keeps them in perfect condition for the camera," says Arthur Levy, wardrobe supervisor at 20th Century-Fox.

for daintiness

THE WOES OF A HOLLYWOOD BACHELOR

(Continued from page 33)

more in the movies. You're going to the movies with a couple of other people.

"I used to pooh-pooh the idea of love at first sight. But I'm beginning to hope there's something to it. Yes sir. When I meet the right girl, I hope I know it after one look—before any complications can set in."

For a moment, he gave his undivided attention to a hardy chunk of steak. Then he said, "I'll tell you another hardship about being a bachelor. That's to have most of your friends married. They don't stop with feeling sorry for you. They come right out and pity you. You're missing all the fun of having family responsibilities. You don't have anybody except a cook who cares whether you come home to dinner or not. If that place you live in could be called a home—lacking, as it does, a woman's touch . . . and so on and on.

YOUR friends try to take you out of your misery. They arrange for you to meet 'a girl you really ought to know.' The girl has been told, very confidentially, that 'she'll like Jimmy Stewart.' Condemned to meet, we go through with it, because we can't get out of it gracefully. But she's prussic acid to me, and I'm bichloride of mercury to her. And our helpful friends can't understand it.

"But there's one hardship I haven't suffered yet. I haven't had to go on any dates inspired by press agents. I've got a gun all primed, ready for use on the first press agent who tries to arrange my private life. A man has to protect his rights." Jimmy gingerly sampled an unidentifiable object on his plate that turned out to be escalloped tomato. Satisfied that the experiment was reasonably successful, he went on talking.

"Now, three years ago, I might have appreciated a little fixing. But did anybody come to my rescue in my hour of solitude? No. My difficulties as a Hollywood bachelor started about as soon as I landed here.

"Back in New York, I'd never had any money. Neither had Hank Fonda. So, to cut down on expenses, we shared a room about the size of this table. When Hank got his movie bid and headed West, and I had to foot the room rent alone. I had visions of moving into the closet. That was about my financial speed. Four months later, I got a movie bid myself. But I couldn't believe, I didn't dare believe, that such riches would endure. So, when I got out here and found Hank living with a couple of other fellows, I moved right in. They could help me save money, and help me get acquainted. That's what I thought.

"But it didn't turn out that way. In the matter of dates, I was politely but firmly informed, it was every man for himself. It was hard enough going for the three of them, without their trying to help out anybody else.

"'S funny thing. I can remember when I was six years old, but I can't remember my first date in Hollywood. It was with somebody I'd met at the studio. It had to be somebody I'd met at the studio; I didn't know anybody else. We probably went to a movie and a place to dance afterward. And I probably stumbled all over her. I hadn't done much dancing up to then. And, hoping to make everything right, I probably sent her a box of flowers the next day. And then, the next time I tried to call her, I probably found that she'd had her phone number changed, and the phone company wouldn't give me her new number. So that very definitely was over.

"You'd be surprised how many times that happened. And even my best friends couldn't tell me why. It took me quite a while to figure it out. You see, I never planned my dates in advance. I still don't. Some fellows say, 'Well, next Sunday night I'll take Annabelle to the Troc, and a week from Wednesday I'll call Eloise'—really map out a campaign for themselves.

"But, somehow, I can't do that. I like a date to be spontaneous, something to fit the mood of the moment. How do I know now how I'll feel next Sunday night, or a week from Wednesday? No, sir. I'll wait till Sunday rolls around before I decide whether I want to go to the Troc that night, or down to the Fun House at Venice, or maybe stay home with the dogs.

"It's a good system when it works. You can have a helluva good time. But it doesn't always work. That's what makes life difficult. Maybe by the time you call Annabelle on Sunday, she'll be all tied up for Sunday night. Or, if you've just met Annabelle and she isn't an understanding type, she may get the idea that she's just a last-minute thought in your life, that the date you had for Sunday night has fallen through and you're scouting around for a last-minute substitute. That's bad. Yes," he repeated, with a melancholy shake of the head, "that's bad.

"But, speaking of never planning dates, I'll take part of that back. In New York, I belonged to the Thursday Night Club. I founded it, in fact, along with Fonda and poor Ross Alexander. That was 'way back in the speakeasy days. We met every Thursday night in the basement of a speakeasy on 41st Street, across from the Herald-Tribune, and had to go through a coal shed to get to it. The proprietor, who thought the club was a swell idea and sort of gave his joint distinction, didn't charge us anything, except for the beer he piped down from the bar.

"Everybody who came had to pay a dollar, which went for steaks and beer and, if there was anything left over, for more beer. We cooked the steaks, ourselves. Nobody could get in except by invitation. And we were mighty particular about our company. We wanted people who were good for an all-night party. We'd have actors who could put on extemporaneous one-act plays, magicians who could do tricks, musicians who could really go into high gear and make people stomp and sing. Benny Goodman used to come down with his clarinet. In those days, he was making his living playing for recordings of background music for newsreels. I'd play the accordion. They couldn't stop me. That was one of the rules of the Thursday Night Club—you did what you felt like doing.

"That's one thing I miss in Hollywood, a Thursday Night Club. A night club different from all other night clubs. A place where you could go in your old clothes, spend a buck, and make your own good time. You miss a lot, getting your fun ready-made.

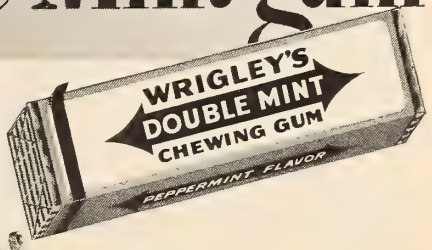
"But that's how you usually get it, as a bachelor. Now, if I were married—to the right girl—I'd stand a fifty-fifty chance, anyway, of going places where I'd like to go on our evenings out. But I'm not married. So, nine times out of ten, I go where the girl wants to go—and like it. Even though it may mean climbing back into a tuxedo after being in one all day on the set. It's lucky for me I'm such an amiable, easy-going, un-temperamental fellow. I don't have to have my own way to enjoy myself. If the company's congenial, I can have a good time. Easily-pleased Stewart, they call me.

WHAT really pleases me is to get in an evening at the Palomar, the big dance hall down at Third and Vermont. You can dance all evening for forty cents—or a dollar, if you want to sit in the loges between numbers. You can step out on a big floor to the music of big-name orchestras, and really get some dancing done. Nobody knows you. Nobody cares who you are. Everybody concentrates on dancing. And that's what you can do.

"Another of my ideas of a good time is to go down to the Fun House and take in everything the girl will go for, from roller-coasters on down. The last time I was there I came home with four cents. And I can go skating at the Ice Palace, any time a girl is willing. Or do some bowling. Anything with a little action to it. Maybe I don't pick out the most romantic spots in the world, but after sitting around a set all day, waiting to work, I like to be moving when evening comes along.

"Sure, I'm restless. That's one of the penalties of being a Hollywood bachelor. It's a tough town to settle down in. You're under constant tension, if you're any good at worrying. And I'm expert at it. So are the girls I know. They earn their livings working in front of cameras, too.

"It's a difficult thing, sometimes, to find a girl who's doing some heavy worrying at the same time you are. That's another of life's little complications. I'll never forget the time I suggested a Saturday night dancing date to a girl who had been at Palm Springs all week. My feet gave out after two hours, when she was just getting into her stride. And the columnists called it a romance!



"I always had the idea that it would be better to marry young, and grow up with my kids. I still haven't changed my mind. But I'd better get started pretty soon. Time's a-wasting."

One look at Phyllis Brooks and you know why Cary Grant dates only one girl.

You ..made doubly lovely by healthful, delicious Double Mint gum

MASCULINE HEARTS skip a beat when a lovely woman flashes an enchanting smile. And, refreshing Double Mint gum does wonders for your smile. Enjoy this popular, double-lasting, delicious tasting gum. This DAILY chewing helps beautify by waking up sleepy face muscles, stimulating beneficial circulation in your gums and brightening your teeth nature's way. So you have double loveliness, admired by everyone.

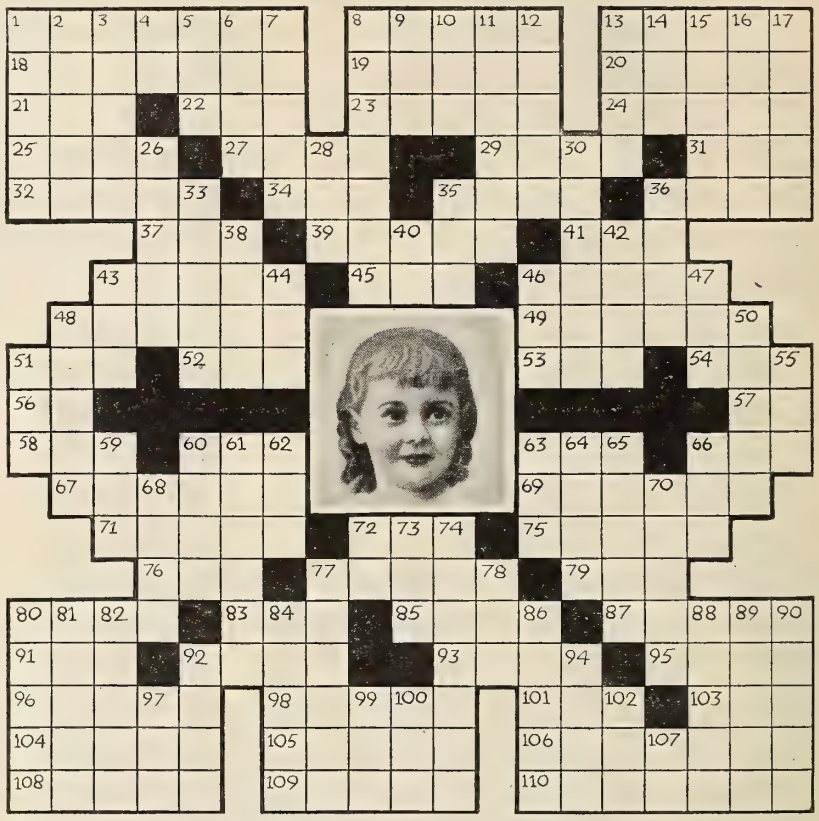
Since smart clothes as well as an attractive face mean charm, Double Mint gum had Hollywood's fashion-creator TRAVIS BANTON design this very flattering, slim hipped looking Suit Dress for you, which Hollywood's beautiful star CLAUDETTE COLBERT models, left. You can make this becoming dress for yourself by purchasing SIMPLICITY Pattern 2902.

All women want to dress smartly and know this helps set off loveliness of face. Millions agree refreshing, delicious Double Mint gum helps add extra charm to your smile, making your face doubly lovely. Try it. Begin to enjoy Double Mint gum today.

Healthful, delicious DOUBLE MINT GUM is satisfying. It aids digestion, relaxes tense nerves, helps give you a pleasant breath. Sold everywhere. 5c. Buy today.

S-178

DON'T LOOK NOW, BUT YOU'RE IN FOR A TREAT!



Want to enjoy the smoothest, tastiest gum you ever tucked in your mouth? The clean, fresh, breezy flavor of real mountain tea? ● Easy! Step up to the counter, lay down a nickel—and reach for Clark's Teaberry!

You'll like CLARK'S TEABERRY GUM

OUR PUZZLE

Puzzle Solution on Page 106

ACROSS

1. First name of our star
8. Last name of our star
13. Sat for pictures
18. Tap dancing star
19. Interior
20. Mrs. O'Leary in "In Old Chicago"
21. Our star wore this in "Ramona"
22. Prefix: three
23. Public storehouse
24. Lengths of film
25. Russian actor
27. "Now I'll ----" starred Spencer Tracy
29. Warmth
31. Large tub
32. Mexican title
34. Freddie Bartholomew is one
35. Male lead in "The Jury's Secret"
36. Our Gang's dog
37. Linger
39. Resume
41. Eric Bl---
43. Co-star in "Vivacious Lady"
45. With our star in "Love Under Fire"
46. Aromatic seed
48. Martha Raye's rival
49. "------ Honeymoon"
51. "Four --- and a Prayer"
52. Heroine in "Reckless Living"
53. Compass point
54. Florence ---mond
56. "Love -- News" starred 1 across
57. Musical note
58. Indian memorial post
60. Enemy
63. English stars' favorite beverage
66. Popular western star
67. Opposite our star in "Clive of India"
69. With our star in "Wife, Doctor and Nurse"
71. "Dumb blonde" comedienne
72. Nickname of Bette Davis' hubby
75. Constellation
76. Mischa Auer's birthmonth: abbr.
77. Nut
79. "---geant Murphy"
80. Deanna's real name
83. Comedienne in "Cocoanut Grove"
85. French for "very"
87. Famed for his explanatory shorts
91. Bobby sports one in "Hawaii Calls"
92. Talented Irish actress
93. Comedian with "rubber" legs
95. On the sheltered side
96. Flows
98. Robert Wildhack's specialty
101. Used in slap-stick comedy
103. Miss Munson's first name
104. Inactive
105. Dowel
106. Singer in "Boy of the Streets"
108. Significance
109. Mountain ridge
110. Begin over again

PAGE

DOWN

1. Veteran in "Stolen Heaven"
2. Silent star: ----- Borden
3. Star of "Outside of Paradise"
4. Star of "Blossoms On Broadway": init.
5. Explosive: abbr.
6. Infringement on civil rights
7. Elaine Barrymore was once called this
8. Submitted
9. Canadian province: abbr.
10. She's in "Checkers"
11. Noah Beery, Jr., is Wallace Beery's ------
12. Mitzi -----
13. Screen role
14. Johnson's comic partner
15. Strainer
16. Striking effect
17. Columbia foreign star
26. Lloyd -----
28. Malay gibbon
30. Makes amends
33. Star of "The Sheik Steps Out"
35. Oswald is his stooge
36. Spanish coin
38. She was in "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round"
40. "-- Time to Marry"
42. Sports reelist
43. Our Star's birthmonth: abbr.
44. "--- Francisco"
46. Peer Gynt's mother
47. "Dead ---"
48. Orchestra leader in "Happy Landing"
50. Hinder
51. Former cowboy star
55. Birthdate of our Star
59. Juvenile in "Goodbye Broadway"
60. Card game
61. Bigger half of a comedy team
62. Holland commune
63. Our star adopted --- children
64. Gable's "outstanding" features
65. First sign of the zodiac
66. Myrna Loy's box office rank
68. Actress in "Mad About Music"
70. Returns to films as "Marie Antoinette"
72. --len Broderick
73. Emote before the cameras
74. Ace film glamor girl
77. Star of "Go Chase Yourself"
78. By birth
80. Patricia's last name
81. She tried "Love on a Budget"
82. Actor in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"
84. View
86. Deep sleep
88. New singer in "Rosalie"
89. Nino Martini is one
90. "Change of -----"
92. Princely Italian family
94. Our star's first role was in "Naughty but ----"
97. Bitter vetch
99. "It Happened --- Night"
100. Spoil
102. Dawn goddess
107. Initials of Miss Talmadge

A TIRED WOMAN MAKES A POOR WIFE

How You Can Have Time for Home and for Husband, Too!

How can you be a comfort to your husband and a help to your children, if you are tired out all the time? Too many women work so hard over their homes that they have no time for play. Then they wonder why their husbands seem restless, and their children are a burden instead of a joy.

Here's a suggestion that has been followed by millions of women; it makes their housework much easier, means nourishing, appetizing meals, and saves a good deal of money, too. Several times a week, serve Franco-American Spaghetti.

Franco-American is packed with nourishment, and it tastes so good that the family never seems to get tired of it. For the children's lunch give them this savory dish—with milk and fruit you have a complete meal that's on the table in a jiffy. For dinner use Franco-American as a side dish, or it is perfectly wonderful to make left-overs go further and taste better.

Franco-American is not like ordinary ready-cooked spaghetti. Franco-American is the kind with the extra good sauce—it contains eleven savory ingredients. It usually costs only 10¢ a can, and that's less than 3¢ a portion.

Get Franco-American at your grocer's today and get a little time for pleasure!

Franco-American SPAGHETTI

The kind with the Extra Good Sauce—Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

MAY I SEND YOU OUR FREE RECIPE BOOK?
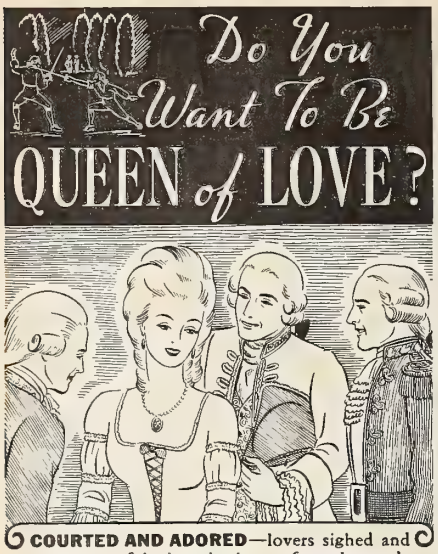
SEND THE COUPON, PLEASE



CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY, DEPT. 610
Camden, New Jersey
Please send free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."

Name (print) _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

COURTED AND ADORED—lovers sighed and poets sang of the intoxicating perfume that made her the loveliest of women...

EVERY GIRL A QUEEN when she borrows for her own the enchanting fragrance of Djer-Kiss Talc...provocative and Parisian.

START your day the Djer-Kiss way! Bathe your entire body with this delightful talc each morning. Djer-Kiss keeps you dainty and refreshed all day . . . Helps you stay cool, for it actually lowers body temperature. Clothes feel more comfortable . . . Makes you alluringly fragrant. Use Djer-Kiss generously, for the cost is surprisingly small. Buy it today at drug and toilet goods counters—25c and 75c sizes. Liberal 10c size at all 10c stores.

The same delightful fragrance in Djer-Kiss Sachet, Eau de Toilette and Face Powder.

YOURS FREE—the exciting new book, "Women Men Love—Which Type Are You?"

—full of valuable hints on how to make yourself more alluring. Just send a post card with your name and address to Parfums Kerkoff, Inc., Dept. M, New York.

... genuine imported talc scented with Djer-Kiss perfume by Kerkoff, Paris.

DJER-KISS
(Pronounced "Dear Kiss")
TALC
By KERKOFF • PARIS

You ask the questions—we'll answer them

ALICE FAYE: This hundred per cent American girl was born in New York City on May 5, 1915. Her ancestors on both sides of the family were colonial settlers, and fought in both the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. Those on her father's side came from France and Germany, and those on her Mother's side from England and Ireland. From the time Alice was a tiny tot she has always loved to play make-believe and wanted to be an actress. She was prominent in all her school entertainments, and excelled in both sports and studies. As a child Alice took many prizes at skating, was very fond of bicycling and horseback riding, but most of all she enjoyed swimming and dancing. She's the kind of girl who likes to do everything herself and takes pride in doing everything well. When she was very young, despite her interest in the theatre, Alice thought she might be a school teacher, but a summer vacation tryout for a chorus job with the Ziegfeld Follies definitely set her ambitions on a dancing career. She passed the test, and was on the verge of being accepted, when she confessed that she was only thirteen years old! The instructor complimented her talent but told her to go home and wait a few years. That was Alice's first big disappointment. She went home, but kept on studying her dancing, and just a year later she tried out for another chorus job, this time with the Chester Hale troupe. At the close of a week's rehearsals Alice was engaged for the season. But there still remained the little matter of breaking the news to her family, who, up to now, had known nothing about her theatrical tryouts. Alice went home and announced that she "had decided to leave school and continue her education in the theatre." Her father and two brothers opposed with considerable fervor, but her wise mother argued for Alice. And that's how, at the age of fourteen, Alice Faye went on the stage. After touring with the Chester Hale Unit Alice got a spot in George White's "Scandals" on Broadway. Then one night a friend of hers took a home-made record of Alice's singing to Rudy Vallee, and that young orchestra leader liked it so much that he gave Alice an opportunity to sing with his Connecticut Yankees.

When Vallee took his troupe to Hollywood to appear in the picture version of the "Scandals" Alice went along. And when Lilian Harvey, European star, refused to act in that picture, because her part was too small, Alice Faye took a screen test and was given the Harvey role. After one week of shooting she was signed to a term contract.

Alice loves pets, especially dogs. In fact, she gets a great "kick" out of life. There is always an atmosphere of gaiety about her and her enthusiasm and ability to enjoy herself are well known.

Alice's real name is Leppert, although three years ago she had it legally changed to Faye, and, to save confusion, the entire family now uses the name of Faye. Alice is five feet, five inches tall, weighs one hundred twelve pounds, has amber colored hair and deep blue eyes. She likes new books, shows and symphony concerts. She doesn't care much for jewelry but loves flowers, especially gardenias. She collects phonograph records and adores perfume. Her pet aversion is dishonesty. She is a wonderful mimic, and although she does not read music she interprets it with fine intelligence. Such song writers as Irving Berlin, Cole Porter and the late George Gershwin have said that they would rather have Alice Faye introduce their songs than any other girl before the public today. Money does not mean a lot to Alice, but she is an indefatigable worker, and would rather be praised by an expert than anything else in the world. She is happily married to orchestra leader Tony Martin. Alice Faye's last two pictures were "In Old Chicago" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Her next one will be "By the Dawn's Early Light." You may address her in care of 20th Century-Fox, Hollywood, California.

HUNDREDS OF ADDRESSES FOR A STAMPED ENVELOPE!

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking. So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, naming the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing addresses. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do it write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

THE "DEAD END" KIDS: These six boys, transplanted to Hollywood after their success in New York's stage hit, "Dead End," keep all Hollywood busy with their pranks, and most fans busy telling which one is which.

Billy Halop, whose picture appears here, is perhaps the best known so we'll start with him. Billy, a big dark haired youngster, was born February 11, 1920, the son of a well-to-do Long Island lawyer. He started acting at four, and was well known in radio before joining the "Dead End" cast. He was educated at the New York Professional Children's School, the MacBurney School, and on the set in Hollywood. Off-screen Billy can be very gentlemanly. He is enthusiastic, and absolutely sure of himself. He's a fine cook, collects stamps, and wants to play more refined roles. Some day he'd like to be a director.

Huntz Hall's first name is really Henry but somebody nick-named him Huntz and it stuck. He is tall, blonde, and eighteen, and has a very crooked nose. He was one of sixteen children whose father was in the air-conditioning business. He is puckish and intelligent, and occasionally well-mannered. He was "Dippy" in the original "Dead End" cast. As a youngster Huntz used to sell peanuts and pop-corn at Madison Square Garden in New York. He once wanted to be a civil engineer but would rather be a producer now. He sings quite well, plays basketball, and boasts that he has read through "Gone With the Wind." His best pal is Gabriel Dell.

Gabriel Dell is perhaps the one most of all the boys who promises to become an intellectual. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., October 4, 1919, the son of a well-known physician, Dr. Del Vacchio. Gabriel Dell is the boy's stage name. Gabriel also attended the Professional Children's School. He reads a good deal, knows what's going on in the world, and is a good conversationalist, although, around the other boys, he is something of a cut-up. He also plays a good game of baseball. Gabriel once wanted to be a doctor but now is torn between a desire to act and a yen to write.

Bernard Punsley is the serious member of this troupe. He wants to be a doctor and is saving his money to that end. He was born in New York, July 11, 1923. His father was in the clothing business but one cousin is a director and another is an actors' agent. Bernard goes in for model engineering and bacteriology. He likes swimming, books, and motion pictures, and is also interested in chicken farming.

Bobby Jordan was born fifteen years ago in New York, the son of a merchant. Because of an angelic look about his face he was given the part of "Angel" in "Dead End." Bobby has a great deal of that quality known as charm, though when he is with the other boys he rough-houses all over the place. He has always wanted to be an actor. He thinks his best role was that of Douglas Fairbanks Rosenbloom in "A Slight Case of Murder".

Leo Gorcey is the lone wolf of the "Crime School" pack. He is the eldest and smallest of the "Dead End" kids. He was born June 3, 1916. Leo is just five feet six inches tall, and very slim. Often he passes for the youngest in the group. Both Leo's father and mother were on the stage, and so also is his brother. Leo was going to be a

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

.....

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State.....

If you would like our chart listing the heights, ages, birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.

MARVELOUS FOR COMPLEXIONS, TOO!

You'll want to use this pure, creamy-white soap for both face and bath.

Cashmere Bouquet's lather is so gentle and caressing. Yet it removes dirt and cosmetics so thoroughly, leaving your skin softer, smoother . . . more radiant and alluring!

NOW ONLY 10¢ at drug, department, ten-cent stores

TO KEEP Fragrantly Dainty — BATHE WITH PERFUMED

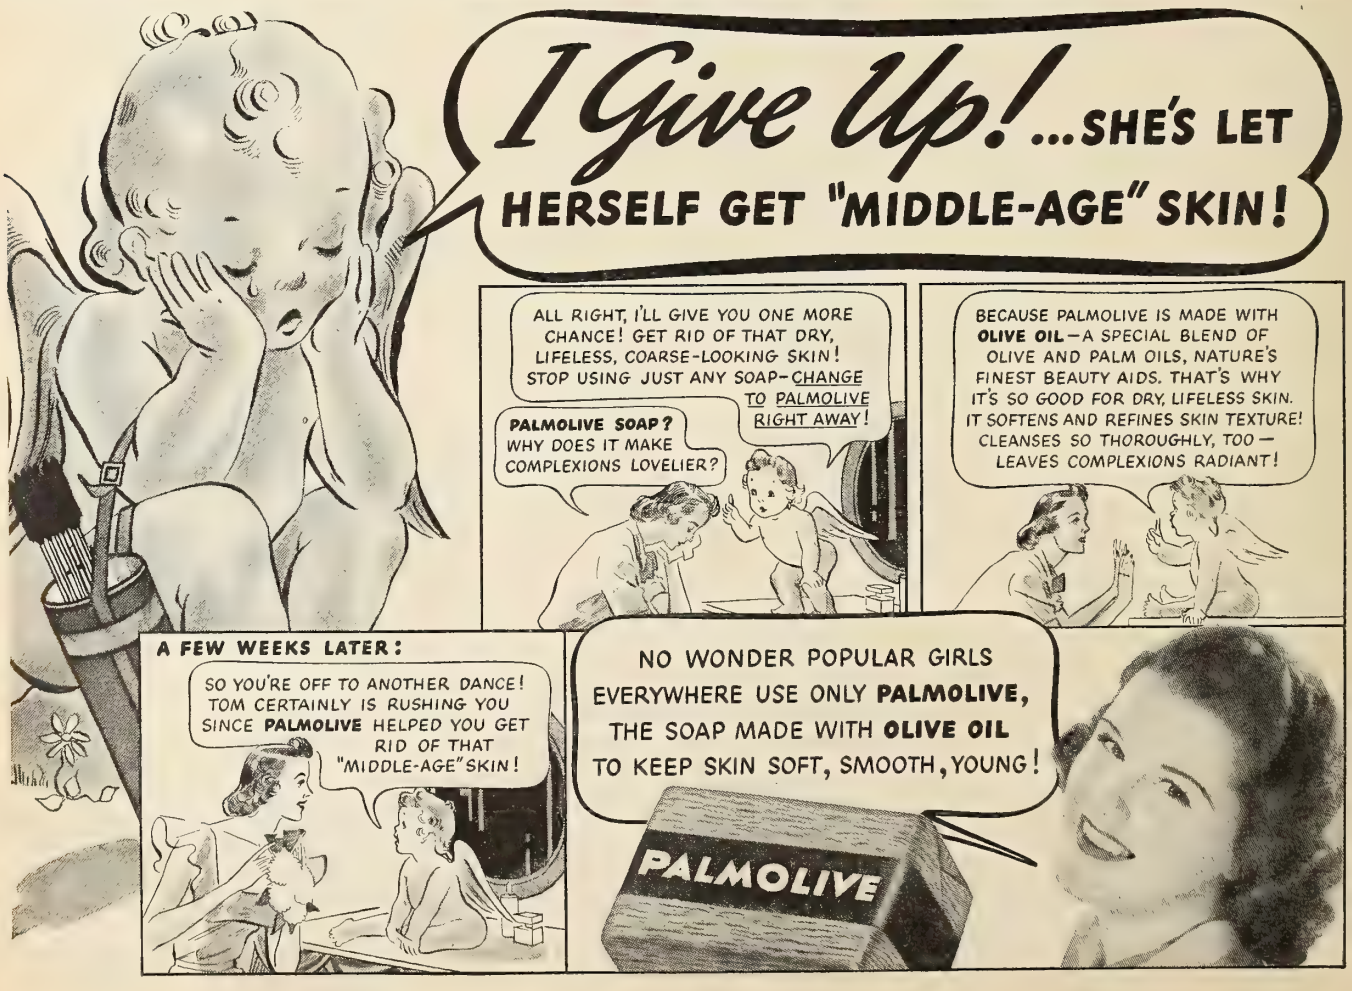
CASHMERE BOUQUET SOAP

plumber when the stage caught up with him and changed his mind. In one year he has now made six movies. "Angels with Dirty Faces" will be his seventh. When Leo isn't getting arrested for speeding he is at home knocking off short stories and poems. He hopes to be a writer, though he isn't interested in reading. Leo likes speed, cats, stamps and fishing. He is also a fine bowler. He saves half his salary and supports his mother and sister. Any of these boys may be addressed in care of Warner Brothers' Studio, Burbank, California.

JEANETTE MacDONALD: This talented girl comes from a family of musically gifted children. She was born in Philadelphia June 18, 1907. For as long as she can remember Jeanette always intended to be a dancer or musician. She attended the public schools of Philadelphia and Al White's dancing school. One summer, when she was fourteen, Jeanette went to New York with her father who was a contracting builder and somewhat of a politician. Jeanette's sister at the time was dancing on the New York stage, and introduced her to Ned Wayburn who persuaded her father to let Jeanette dance for two weeks in his current Revue. Jeanette stayed in the Revue for several years, and her family moved to New York to make a home for her. She continued to study dancing, and also took voice lessons regularly. She posed for commercial photographs and modeled furs when there were no stage engagements. Then she started in minor roles in musical shows and worked up to the rank of co-star. In 1929 she said goodbye to the New York stage and went to Hollywood with a two-year contract. Her first picture role was opposite Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade." After making a number of pictures, among them "The Vagabond King," "Monte Carlo," "Annabelle's Affairs," "One Hour with You," and "Love Me Tonight," Jeanette went on a long concert tour through Europe, singing in all the European capitals. She returned to Hollywood to play in "The Cat and the Fiddle," and "Merry Widow." There followed "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," "San Francisco," "Maytime," "The Firefly," and her most recent, "Girl of the Golden West." Now Jeanette hopes to divide her time between pictures and concert stage, spending part of her days traveling and the rest in Hollywood. She likes to meet new people and see new places. Jeanette is fond of swimming, dancing, riding and the theatre. She studies music and languages with unremitting regularity, and plays the piano for her own pleasure. She reads mystery novels, and owns quite a collection of them. She also collects little orchestras of figurines, and tiny figures playing musical instruments.

In June 1937 Jeanette was married to Gene Raymond, also of the films. She is five feet, five inches tall, weighs one hundred and twenty pounds, has red-gold hair and green eyes. Her real name is Jeanette MacDonald. Her next picture will be "Sweethearts." You may address her in care of M-G-M Studios, Hollywood, California.

Col. Harry Marcus, Seagate, N. Y. Yours is one of scores of inquiries we've received regarding the career of Rudolph Valentino, so here are the statistics: He was born in Castellaneta, Italy, on May 6, 1895, of a French mother and Italian father, a cavalry captain. His full name was Rodolpho Alfonzo Raffaelo Pierre Filibert Guglielmi di Valentina d'Angonguolla. After military and agricultural school in Italy, Rudolph came to New York in 1913. He did odd jobs including landscape gardening until his graceful dancing won him a vaudeville engagement. Musical comedy followed, and then pictures. His first important movie was "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." "The Sheik," "Camille," "Blood and Sand," "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Cobra," "The Eagle," and "The Son of the Sheik" were a few of his best known pictures, the latter being his last. He died suddenly in the summer of 1926 following an emergency operation in New York City. He was thirty-one years of age. You may secure pictures of Valentino at fifteen cents a piece from the Artcinema Associates, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Or for twenty-five cents they will send you a profusely illustrated booklet containing the life story of this star of the silent era.



Jackie Nakagawa, Turlock, Calif. Address Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, and Robert Kent at the 20th Century-Fox Studio, Hollywood. Janet Gaynor can be reached at Selznick-International, Elaine and John Barrymore at Paramount, and James Stewart at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, all in Hollywood, Cal.

Vivian Perryman, Sacramento, Cal. Gene Autry's last two pictures were "Gold Mine in the Sky," and "Man from Music Mountain." His next will be "Pony Boy." Write him in care of Republic Studios, Hollywood, Cal. Always enclose twenty-five cents when requesting pictures of stars.

Sanford Strickland, Perry, Fla. The ten best pictures of 1937 as selected by 531 of the nation's picture critics were: "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Good Earth," "Captains Courageous," "Lost Horizon," "A Star Is Born," "Romeo and Juliet," "Stage Door," "Dead End," "Winterset," and "The Awful Truth."

Doris Lanzinger, Toledo, Ohio. Danielle Darrieux was born in Bordeaux, France, May 1, 1917. Her father is French, her Mother Algerian. You can reach her in care of Universal Studios, Hollywood, Cal. Her next picture will be "Rio."

Jane Franklin, New Preston, Conn. Richard Greene was born in Plymouth, Devonshire, England. He is six feet tall, weighs one hundred seventy pounds, has dark brown hair and blue-grey eyes. You may address him in care of 20th Century-Fox Studios, Hollywood. His next picture will be "Wooden Anchors" with Nancy Kelly.

Bob
wyc

a race horse.) But why can't he face himself, face his work, face his past and have society too? If he did he would be a happier and saner person.

No matter how much money he earns and how many clubs of The Racquet caliber accept him, he is not (thank goodness) a banker. And no matter how he looks at it (and it is the very result of all that hard work which he won't admit, and of the boyhood to which he won't refer) Fred Astaire is, for all that, the best white man dancer in America today. That should be ample satisfaction for anyone.

SHE WANTS TO STAY MARRIED

(Continued from page 35)

a longed-for toy," he observed, "laughing one moment, crying the next, as she slipped it on her finger."

And a month or so later, Randolph Churchill, son of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, who had been visiting the couple, was quoted as saying, "I am not at liberty to quote Mr. Chaplin directly, but I can definitely say they are married."

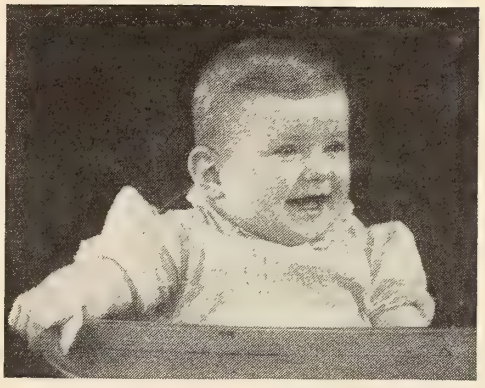
Then Gregory Bautzer and Bentley Ryan, her attorneys, said they were certain she was married. And her business manager, Arthur Taylor, who handles all her business problems and takes care of Paulette's investments said there was no doubt of her marital status.

BUT some time last spring, differences, which were kept as secret as their marriage, separated the couple. Charlie went to Pebble Beach to remain there several months in seclusion, while Paulette, after re-decorating the house to her own taste, went in search of a job—in the movies. Always, until that time, she had planned to make another picture with the comedian. But, as all the world knows, it is a long time between pictures for Hollywood's most famous star, and it was a long wait for ambitious Paulette. Too long, she evidently decided, for she accepted the role of Leslie, Janet Gaynor's younger sister in "The Young in Heart."

Whether or not her acceptance of this part served to further estrange the couple is still a matter of conjecture. Certain it was that about this time divorce rumors began to fly, followed by whispers that she had been ordered to liquidate her personal possessions in order that they would be in negotiable state to put on the community property block.

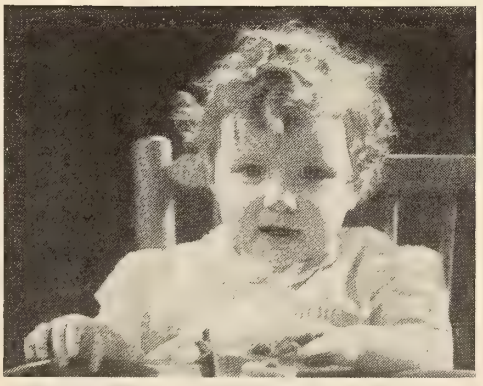
Paulette, herself, spiked the first of these stories by saying that she would not file suit. "If Charlie wants a divorce let him get it," she told her attorneys. "But I am too grateful to him for everything and love him too much to cause him a moment's anguish. Besides, I am satisfied with my present status."

Then Chaplin's friend and attorney for twenty-five years, Lloyd Wright, laid the second in ashes by labelling the rumor "preposterous." "I don't know Mr. Chaplin's plans for divorce," he stated coldly, "but I am certain he would never ask his wife to sell her jewels and furs in order to make a community property settlement."



This chatter had started following the admission that she had put up the boat, "Panacea," for sale, although she is reputedly worth a quarter of a million dollars in her own right and Chaplin's wealth is estimated at more than ten millions. Who's right? The gossipers? Probably not, for they seldom are. What's ahead for this couple? Reconciliation or divorce?

Frances Corbett—aged 4 months



Ecstatic wiggling of fingers and toes marks the arrival of Frances' supper, which now includes Clapp's Baby Cereal. Like many of her young neighbors in Westfield, N. J., Frances is having pictures taken and growth records kept, as part of a study in infant feeding. Her meals will soon be further enlivened by Clapp's Strained Vegetables.

Gay little Frances is 8 months old

And she's gained an average of more than 1½ pounds a month. She gets Clapp's Soups and Fruits now—loves 'em like all her Clapp Foods. Their texture is exactly what baby specialists recommend—finely-strained, but not too liquid. On Clapp's Foods, a baby makes real progress toward the handling of a more solid diet.

Frances has had a birthday!

Curly Hair, more teeth and added weight aren't the only things she has to brag about. She can walk, and she can feed herself (a trick that Clapp-fed babies, with their eager appetites, often acquire early). And just one look at Frances tells you that her pressure-cooked Clapp's Foods have been chock-full of vitamins and minerals!

16 foods that made her grow....

16 VARIETIES of Clapp's Strained Baby Foods—Baby Soup Strained or Unstrained, Vegetable Soup, Beef Broth, Liver Soup; Apricots, Prunes, Apple Sauce; Tomatoes, Asparagus, Peas, Spinach, Carrots, Beets, Green Beans; Baby Cereal.

FREE BOOKLET! Photographs and records of 12 Clapp-fed babies—and valuable feeding information. Write to Harold H. Clapp, Inc., Dept. QSO, 777 Mount Read Blvd., Rochester, N. Y.

NEW!...for young children

Clapp's Chopped Foods

Doctors asked for them...even-textured foods with all the advantages of Clapp's Strained Foods, but more coarsely divided. At dealers' now—remember them when your baby outgrows Clapp's Strained Foods.

Clapp's Strained Baby Foods

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

★★ Algiers

Based on a foreign film hit ("Pepe Le Moko") "Algiers" is a cops-and-robber story in a new background. The plot is a thin fabrication about a section in Algiers known as The Caspah, hideout for criminals of all nations, and the more or less placid existence there belies the alleged viciousness of its inhabitants. The excellent camera work, however, manages to keep the story moving and actually makes it seem more exciting than it really is.

Charles Boyer is Pepe Le Moko, a French jewel thief, regarded as the most dangerous man in the Caspah. The police are unable to catch him because Pepe has his gang and his girl (Sigrid Gurie) and he's quite content not to emerge. One day, however, a beautiful Parisienne (Hedy Lamarr) comes to the Caspah on a slumming trip and Pepe falls in love with her. You know what happens. The police trick him with a message from her, he comes to town and walks into their trap.

Boyer plays Pepe in his usual sulky, dark-eyed manner. Hedy Lamarr causes a minor sensation and Sigrid Gurie does not fare quite so well. In the supporting cast, Gene Lockhart almost walks away with the picture with a well-defined and expert portrayal of an informer. Directed by John Cromwell.—Walter Wanger.

★★ Little Miss Broadway

Little Miss Temple, queen of 20th Century-Fox and America's answer to England's Princess Margaret, comes to her public once more in another of those sugary sweet offerings which send her admirers home happy and contented. Despite her advancing years, Shirley still manages to captivate the entire cast.

This time she is an orphan (what, again?) who is adopted by the kindly proprietor of a Broadway theatrical hotel. Her surroundings, of course, give Shirley ample reason to demonstrate her talent as a singing and dancing star. In the latter department she excels, and is fortunate in having George Murphy as her partner in two or three really entertaining routines. Her songs still run to the saccharine. However, Shirley's personality and general excellence will make audiences forget such relatively minor complaints. Suffice it to say that under Shirley's guidance the old proprietor pays off the mortgage, and the mean old rich lady next door winds up sweeter than Snow White.

It is, of course, Shirley's picture throughout, but credit must go to George Murphy, Jimmy Durante, Edna Mae Oliver, Edward Ellis, Donald Meek and others for keeping the thing amusing when Shirley has her stage waits. Directed by Irving Cummings.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Love Finds Andy Hardy

When it's love in bloom for Andy Hardy there isn't a man, woman or child in these United States who couldn't get a chuckle out of it. This time he's torn between three charmers—Ann Rutherford, the old girl; Lana Turner, the town siren; and Judy Garland, an out-of-town visitor. Trying to purchase a twenty-dollar jallope on the installment plan doesn't add anything to his peace of mind either, particularly since father Lewis Stone, though pretty understanding about most things, is rabid on installment plans. Andy's plight is real and heart-rending as he becomes more deeply involved with every move. This role will add even more prestige to Mickey Rooney's record, while the picture is bound to make the Hardys, en famille, more popular than ever. It's their best story to date. Andy isn't the only Hardy with problems. Mother Fay Holden is called away from home, and daughter Cecilia Parker is left holding the reins. Between cooking, an absolute mystery to her, and kid brother Andy, a constant nuisance to her, Cecilia has her hands full. To make matters worse, it's the Christmas season, and things look pretty glum around the Hardy household for a time, though everything turns out for the best, of course. Judy Garland almost steals the honors from Mickey with her excellent characterization of the sympathetic girl friend. You won't want to miss this Hardy family picture. Directed by George P. Seitz.—M-G-M.

★★ The Texans

A glorified Western, this picture is full of strong men, strong language and daring adventures. The story centers about the trials and tribulations which befall a courageous group who attempts to drive a herd of 10,000 head of cattle from Texas to Kansas in the perilous days following the Civil War. The herds belong to Ivy Preston (Joan Bennett) and her grandmother (May Robson). They are the victims of an exorbitant tax levied on their cattle by the government and, in order to save their property, they resort to the 1,500 mile trip. With them go their trusty friends, the old cowhands on the Preston ranch, and Kirk Jordan (Randolph Scott) whom Gramma regards as a tried and true friend but who's just a pain in the neck to granddaughter Ivy. Romance, of course, blooms along the trail for the two, though the atmosphere is hardly conducive to sentiment. Isaiah Middlebrook (Robert Barrat) and his troupe of Yankee cavalry follow close at heel, determined to get the herds back in their hands. Indians descend upon them. They are the victims of blizzards, dust storms, droughts, and thunder-storms along the trail. In short, it's durned tough goin'. But you who like films where men are men and women full of courage will like "The Texans." The pictorial effects in many instances are breath-taking. Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott turn in satisfactory performances, but the honors go outright to May Robson for her characterization of the Southern lady who is all gentleness and charm in appearance but turns out to be the fiercest fighter of them all. Directed by James Hogan.—Paramount.

In "Algiers," Charles Boyer surprises his admirers with a very good singing voice. Nice work, Charles.

★★ Passport Husband

Stuart Erwin, true to form, is in for another terrific beating. This time two gangs of desperate characters are vying for the privilege of murdering him. It all started, of course, because of Stu's good heartedness, which has got him married to a glamorous creature, Joan Woodbury.

When Joan allows as how she'll die if Stu doesn't wed her, he doesn't know it's deportation and not death that's facing her. Nor does he realize that Joan isn't exactly the home type, but a moll at heart. Complicating matters even more is Douglas Fowley, a gentleman of unsavory reputation who would have Joan for his own, and Pauline Moore, an awfully nice girl who feels just that way about Stu.

It's all pretty innocuous stuff as far as the plot goes, but the laughs are good and plentiful. And the cast, though far from illustrious, do an excellent job within the script limitations. The climax is one of the rowdiest, lustiest and funniest ever, with Stu Erwin capturing both gangs of criminals single handed by the simple expedient of pushing them out of a supposedly burning building into the waiting firemen's net below.

You will find real entertainment in "Passport Husband," in which Stuart Erwin is at his best. Directed by James Tinling.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Tropic Holiday

Paramount has taken Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour and a number of their friends down to Mexico for a musical show which has its moments. Said moments are confined, properly enough, mostly to the musical numbers, beautiful Mexican songs by Augustin Lara, the country's foremost ballad writer. In addition there are comedy moments, the best being a bull fight sequence featuring a ferocious bull and a very frightened Martha Raye.

Story has to do with a Hollywood scenario writer on a Mexican hegira trying to find peace and time in which to finish a script. He runs into everything, including romance with Dorothy Lamour, who is probably as surprised as anybody to show up in a picture without a sarong.

Martha Raye and Bob Burns furnish most of the comedy, agreeably aided by Roberto Soto, Mexico's Charlie Chaplin. Tito Guizar is handsome and pleasant to hear as he sings several Mexican love songs, and Miss Lamour tosses off a song or two of her own with good effect. Binnie Barnes is excellent as a Hollywood beauty jealous of Milland's romance with Miss Lamour, and there is nice work by a group of natives. "Tropic Holiday" is no great shakes, but it is entertaining and better than most run-of-the-mill song and dance films. Good for a frivolous mood. —Directed by Ted Reed.—Paramount.

MYRNA'S MAID TELLS ON MISS LOY

(Continued from page 30)

she was going out and she asked me to put some polish on her nails. "I never did," I said, "but I can try." It was ruby polish, and that's the worst kind, even if you're an expert manicurist. Well, what with my being so rattled, and my hands shaking like I had the palsy, I got more polish over her fingers than I did on her nails. I sat there so miserable I didn't know where to look, and she kept saying, "That's fine, Theresa. Just clean up this bit. Now that little dab in there—"

Well, I knew I'd made a hash of it and that she was just being nice. I started putting things away, thinking, "You certainly cooked your goose to a crisp that time, my girl." Miss Loy was at the door. Then suddenly she turned around. "Theresa," she said, "I like you very much and I'm very well pleased with your work. Would you like to stay?" Well! I just stood there with my jaws dropped and couldn't think of a thing to say. Imagine her doing it right then, just because she saw how badly I felt. She smiled and said, "Then that's settled. Good night, Theresa." And when she was gone, I did a little rhumba all by myself, right in the middle of the bedroom floor.

In all the time I've been with her, I've never seen Miss Loy angry except once in a great while, and that's when somebody tried to put something over on her. You have to know her very well to know when she's angry. She doesn't go popping off like a string of firecrackers. She just seems to get more quiet. Then, if she can, she goes and has it out with whoever's upset her, and that's the end of it.

Miss Loy loves to have jolly people around her. She gets bored with a lot of society talk—I mean the stiff kind. We have more fun on location. She likes to have pillow fights with the girls—there's Shirley, her stand-in, and Eleanor, who does her hair, and Margaret from the wardrobe department. They borrow her shirts and sweaters and shower-caps and go running back and forth, just like girls in a boarding school.

THEN I'll go in to wake her in the morning, and I'll grab a shawl from the piano and twist it round my shoulders, and stick a rose in my mouth. (Mr. Hornblow always sends her roses.) I clown around, pretending I'm a Spanish dancer or something crazy, till she laughs herself sick. There was one time, though, when she had us in hysterics. She was trying to peck. Miss Loy's no fancy pecker, but she looked so cute and funny with her head jerking up and down like a baby doll, that we laughed till our sides ached. But she kept right on, solemn as a judge. "I'm dishing it out," she said, "and you can take it."

Miss Loy loves to tease. She found out I was crazy about William Powell. Maybe it's kind of silly, but I guess we all have our favorite movie actors. Anyway, the first day she worked with him, I was all eyes and mouth. She was sitting there talking to him, when all of a sudden she called me over and introduced me. I almost fainted. But as if that wasn't enough, she got that little twinkle in her eye, and I knew she was up to something. "Bill," she said, "you're Theresa's favorite movie actor." Well, I wanted to crawl into a hole and hide. She saw I was fussed, so she patted my hand and said, "Sorry, Theresa. I didn't mean to embarrass you." Well, I mumbled something about not wanting Mr. Powell to think I was fresh. "Theresa," he said, "no actor thinks you're fresh when you pay him a compliment. He thinks you're smart." Wasn't that cute of him? He's like that.

When my baby was born and I named him Willard, Miss Loy wanted to know was it after Mr. Powell. I said, in a way it was and in a way it wasn't. So now, when she wants to tease me, she calls the baby Inaway. At first she couldn't come to the hospital, because she was working, but she sent ice cream and a beautiful cake. Then, as soon as she had a day off, she called up and said she was coming over. Well, the sweetest thing happened. The baby was half asleep. Miss Loy picked him up and he opened his eyes and just lay there looking at her for a minute. Then she held out her finger and he grabbed it tight, and next minute he was smiling up at her. I was so pleased, because it was the first time he'd ever smiled at anyone.

She's just crazy about children. She'll come home all excited. "Oh, Theresa, I saw the cutest baby today. He was just as homely as he could be, but oh, so sweet." She has a way with them too. If they're kind of hard to make up with, she doesn't rush them. She waits until they make up with her, and they always do.

There's little Junior who comes to the studio to sell papers and magazines. She just loves that kid. Last Christmas she had everybody hunting a dog for Junior. Then she heard that somebody else had bought him one. She was dreadfully disappointed at first. Then she said, "No matter, so long as he gets a dog," and she bought him a leather jacket instead.

Then there was the time when one of the directors thought maybe he could use Junior in a picture. Miss Loy was testing for a picture at the same time. Every day, regular as clockwork, Junior'd ask, "Dja get the pitcha, Miss Loy?" That's just how he'd say it. And she'd say, "Not yet. Did you?" "Not yet," he'd say. And she'd say, "Got my fingers crossed." And he'd cross his fingers too and wave them at her.

Then finally one day he said, the same as always, "Dja get the pitcha, Miss Loy?" And she said, "Yes, did you?" "Nope," Junior said. Then he took one look at her face and said, "Gee, Miss Loy, you don't have to feel bad about it. I'd rather sell papers any day."

So you can imagine how she felt when there was talk about not letting Junior sell his papers any more at the studio. She went straight to the front office and got that fixed up. We were sitting here in the dressing-room one afternoon when Junior came in. Generally, nothing fazes him, but he was plenty bothered that day. He wiggled and kept shoving his feet around, and at last he came out with it. "Miss Loy, my mother said to give you something." He ran up and grabbed her and gave her the biggest kiss, then he ran out as if the cops were after him. Next minute he poked his head in at the door again. "No snitching now," he says. And she holds up her hand and says, serious as anything, "No snitching, Junior." But her eyes were just shining.

Miss Loy is forever talking about her grandchildren—kidding, you know. When she got that crown for being Queen of the Movies, she put it in a little nook in the library. "That's to show my grandchildren, when I'm old," she said.

SHE'S the happiest person for all she's so quiet. It's just grand to see two people as happy as she and Mr. Hornblow. I never shall forget the day they were married. She didn't say much, but goodness! You could see it written all over her. I helped her pack—or rather, I packed for her. She didn't know what to take. It was the only time I ever saw her fluttery. We told her she had to have something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue. Well, of course, there were lots of new things, so she wore a pair of old hose. Then she borrowed a handkerchief, and Miss Bond, her secretary, went out and bought her a pair of blue garters.

Her dress was a beige handprint, all over colors, and she wore a brown crêpe de chine hat, with brown patent shoes and bag. All of us were standing at the door, Sergei the cook, the butler, the chauffeur and I. I said, "I hope you'll be as happy as a queen, Mrs. Hornblow," and she smiled the sweetest smile, and bent over and kissed me. I was so thrilled.

Sergei baked a beautiful wedding cake and sent it down to surprise her at Palos Verde where they spent their honeymoon. She still has a piece of that cake and the little bride and groom Sergei put on top of it.

Then when the house was built, my, she was like a kid. It's not a fancy house—they don't like a lot of frills and feathers—just a beautiful home. And she'd rather fuss around that house and garden than—go to see the President, I guess.

Every morning, even when she's working, she plans the menu for dinner. She loves to cut recipes out of magazines and then do something different with them. For instance, the recipe might call for a certain kind of wine. Well, she'll talk it over with the cook and say, "Maybe that wine won't be so good. Let's try this kind and see what happens." Then she has a little book where she puts all the recipes that turn out good. And if Mr. Hornblow specially enthuses about anything, she puts a star next to it, to remember.

Between pictures and on days she's not working she has breakfast about ten. Then she puts on a blouse and slacks, and maybe ties a scarf round her head, and out she goes with her spade and basket till we call her for lunch. Sometimes we have to call her several times.

She doesn't just pick flowers, either. She gets out there and digs. She's not even afraid of slugs and lizards and things. She laughs at me because I'm petrified of anything that crawls. "Go 'way," she'll tell the lizard. "Theresa's afraid of you. Go on home to your babies." Then when she comes in, Johnny's generally trailing her. Johnny's the neighbor's little dog. "He needs a bone," she'll say. "He's been helping all morning and he's tuckered out."

Sometimes Mr. Hornblow runs home and has lunch with her. Then in the afternoon we might clean cupboards or straighten out the basement. And she doesn't watch while I do it. Don't you believe it. She gets down in that basement and helps me push things around. Or, if we are doing the cupboards, she'll wash down one side while I take the other. Then

What a Marvelous Difference Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids Do Make!

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Solid-form Mascara, in brilliant gold-colored metal vanity. Black, Brown, Blue. ● Cream-form Mascara, with Brush, in dainty zipper bag. Black, Brown, Blue. ● Eyebrow Pencil. Colors to match your Mascara. Black, Brown, Blue. ● Eye Shadow. Blue, Gray, Blue-Gray, Brown, Green or Violet.

Why Let Pale Lashes and Brows Spoil Your Charm?

Do you carefully powder and rouge, and then allow pale, scanty lashes and scraggly brows to mar what should be your most expressive feature—your eyes? You will be amazed at the added loveliness that can be yours, so easily, with Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids.

A few simple brush strokes of Maybelline Mascara, either Solid or Cream form, will make your eyelashes appear naturally dark, long and luxuriant—see how your eyes appear instantly larger and more expressive. Absolutely harmless, non-smarting, and tear-proof. Keeps your lashes soft and silky, and tends to make them curl. At any cosmetic counter—only 75c.

Now a bit of Maybelline Eye Shadow blended softly on your eyelids, and notice how your eyes immediately take on brilliance and color, adding depth and beauty to your expression!

Form graceful, expressive eyebrows with the smooth-marking, easy-to-use Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. A perfect pencil that you will adore.

The name Maybelline is your absolute assurance of purity and effectiveness. These famous products in purse sizes are now within the reach of every girl and woman—at all 10c stores. Try them today and see what an amazing difference Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids can make in your appearance.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST SELLING EYE BEAUTY AIDS

while I wash the dishes she'll dry and put them away. She likes putting them away, because it gives her a chance to arrange them differently.

Oh, and she's the cutest thing with her clothes. She has them sent home and if Mr. Hornblow doesn't like them, she generally doesn't take them—only once in a great while, if she happens to be set on a thing for some reason. He never tells her not to. He says, "Well, that doesn't appeal to me but if you like it, honey, you get it." So, when she buys something out of the ordinary, she keeps it for a big surprise and puts it on just before time for him to come home. Like she got a red hat and she said, "I'll bet this won't go over, Theresa." But one look at his face made me chuckle to myself, "Well, that's one bet you lost, Mrs. Hornblow."

Evenings, they might listen to the Capehart, or they might read. If he's interested in a book, he'll bring home two. He reads one and she reads the other, and then they compare notes. Or they might have a few friends to dinner. They don't go much for big parties. But there's one thing I noticed. Even when they have people in, it's always kind of peaceful, and even when just the two of them are alone, it's always kind of gay. That might sound funny to some people, but it's true.

Well, I guess that's all, except maybe this'll show why we feel like we do about Miss Loy. She never orders you around and she never bawls you out when you make a mistake. She might say, "Let's try to get this a little brighter," or, "Here's a scratch, maybe we could polish it off." She was having a tea-party and it was the butler's day off. She didn't even ask him to stay. She said it was his day and he had a right to it. Miss Loy just put on an apron and came out in the kitchen and started fixing some sandwiches and making her own tea. She didn't expect the maid to do everything by herself. She pitched right in and helped. A person like that has a good effect on you. You just want to do and do and do things for her.

Football days are here again and is Marjorie Weaver glad! She puts that college spirit into "Hold That Co-ed."

To have a "Camera Perfect" skin you must have Deep-Down Beauty

Danielle Darrieux, star of the Universal picture, "The Rage of Paris". Her beauty is thrown into high relief by her creamy-white, "Camera Perfect" skin.

Two distinctive elements in this famous cream help build beauty more than skin-deep

Of course, you've longed for it—"Camera Perfect" skin, that transcendent complexion which can fearlessly meet the camera's eye or strong revealing sunlight.

Now such a complexion may be won from thorough care with Woodbury Cold Cream. For this cream contains two elements which inspire skin beauty.

One of these elements keeps Woodbury Cold Cream germ-free. Pure to the last dab. This purity reacts upon your skin, helps to keep it, in turn, radiant, clear.

The skin-stimulating Vitamin, the second element, speeds up your skin's breathing, helps keep your skin vital and alive.

See how Woodbury Cold Cream can build in your skin the foundations of loveliness! $1.00, 50c, 25c, 10c.

SEND* for Trial Tubes of Woodbury Creams

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 6794 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario

Please send me trial tubes of Woodbury Cold Cream and Facial Cream; 7 shades of Woodbury Facial Powder; guest-size Woodbury Facial Soap. I enclose 10c to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN MEN SEE RED?

Men react quickly to vivid colors . . . and perhaps scarlet is just the high note your wardrobe needs . . . or green . . . or dashing blue. Rit offers you dozens of sparkling, flattering shades that are fun to wear, never look "dyed". Rit's amazing new formula (latest patent 1936) contains "neomerpin" that gives you fast colors without boiling! So much easier—YOU'LL 'DYE' LAUGHING.

RIT TINTS & DYES

Never say "Dye"—say RIT!

BLONDES!

Keep Hair Golden With New Shampoo!

Bring out the full, radiant loveliness of blonde hair with NEW BLONDEX, the Shampoo and Special Golden Rinse that keeps it lighter, lovelier, that gives it the lustrous, golden sheen—the alluring highlights that can make blonde hair so attractive. Try BLONDEX today. Costs but a few cents to use and is absolutely safe. New combination package—shampoo with separate rinse—sold at all stores.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH HEPBURN?

(Continued from page 27)

absolutely dying to catch a glimpse of Hepburn in overalls! So her policy of being the eccentric one wasn't a flop, either. They knew she wasn't just another one of those movie gals.

And so when Kate recently shook the dust of Hollywood from her feet and climbed onto the East-bound plane it was with the strangest feelings she'd ever had. Other studios wanted her, would give excellent roles. But is acting enough for her? For six years she's had Hollywood prestige. It's brought her a fortune—and Kate has never underestimated the power of money. She knows that a woman isn't independent until she can afford to be. Acting for the movies is a tremendous kick if your parts can be hand-picked, and if you can out-bluff the moguls. But outbluffing is a tiring sideline to a job? What did it all amount to?

When she and Laura Harding reached New York the spell of the city, its hum, its theatres, its splendid shops and big hotels, captured her imagination, restored her ambition. She was on the go from late morning until early morning. Then suddenly Kate was fed up with city whirling. She had to get home. She told Laura goodbye for a while and headed for Hartford, Connecticut.

When she first arrived home there was a bit of a stir. The papers duly reported her celebrated person materializing again. The front doorbell did double duty as eager fans, oblivious to Hepburn's Hollywood reputation for aloofness, politely dropped in for autographs. The family maid was in no end of a flurry conveying scraps of paper to wherever Kate was. One can't be an ambassadress every day!

In a day or two, though, it seemed as though Kate had been home for months and months. She isn't pampered by her parents or her brothers and sisters, you see. (There are four brothers and sisters, so she's only one of five children equally loved.) Naturally the family is thrilled over Kate's success. She wants to share her good experiences with them, and does. She's exceptionally thoughtful. But none of the family will chisel in on her earnings as a movie star. None of them are the helpful type. They say she followed her hunch and has been rewarded. They figure they'll do the same.

Consequently, it has been like old times for Kate. She usually plays golf these mornings. When she was in college she was runner-up for the Connecticut women's golf championship. She's kept up her golf out in California, even to making a hole-in-one. The family would like to have seen that!

At the home country club Kate is one of the crowd. She doesn't rig herself up in overalls, you may be positive, but appears in conventional, attractive slacks. After thirty-six holes, which gives you some idea of her endurance, she comes into the caddy house and chins with the "pro" about her game, and coaxes her caddy into coming clean on what he thinks of her strokes. Kate passes up the "nineteenth" hole and its jolly drinkers. She's fond of her cigarettes but not of tall cool ones.

BACK at home she races her partner of the morning, a brother or a sister, to the luncheon table. Dr. Hepburn, who idolizes her and has never been known to refuse a single thing she's asked for, hurries home from his office to enjoy every minute of her stay. Kate is intensely concerned with all of his current cases and wants to learn exactly what's happened to Mrs. Smith, and if George Barry is any better, and will that neighbor girl have to have an operation after all?

Following lunch she and her mother practically always find a conference in order, and Kate smiles discreet amusement as her mother practices a campaign speech on birth control. Kate realizes where her own soap-box tendency comes from. She is immensely proud that her mother has combined marriage, motherhood, and welfare work so intelligently. Every time she looks at her mother, Kate recalls the meaning of service to others. She admits how worthwhile being a good sport really is.

Sonja Henie and her troupe take us back to fairy-tale days in the Alice in Wonderland number from "My Lucky Star." Kids from six to sixty will love this one.

Her mother has built a life around the vital elements, and Kate approves.

It seems amazing not to have to rush to a set right after the noon hour. Kate lazily yields to the drowsiness which creeps up on her. That chaise lounge in her cretonned bedroom lures her. She picks up a new book—the house is chock-full of new books—and totes it upstairs with her. In half an hour she is yawning over it. When she wakes she hears noises down on the side porch. It's the collegians again. So she drops the book, runs a comb through her hair, and dashes down to get in on the argument. It's some world-shaking matter. She edges into a swing, grabs a glass of lemonade, and swears that when she went to Bryn Mawr no Harvard man ever dared to defy her with any such sheer nonsense!

This star who can confound Hollywood with idiosyncrasies, who won't be interviewed out there at all, is now part of an intensely real household, reveling in the kind of vacation few movie stars ever take. Kate has gone a long way up. She's acquired great acclaim. She certainly could be summering in grand style. But home sounds better to her. When faced with a dilemma, Kate has invariably come home.

WHAT to do about Hollywood and marriage seems far away on these long summer evenings, with the crickets chirping in the lawn and no one demanding that she Do Something Dramatic Immediately.

Kate is certainly earnestness itself when her adored older brother relates his progress. She doesn't have bossy words for her sisters either, but gives her opinion when they request it.

The family's conversation gets around to what she's going to do, eventually. But there is no sense of urgency here in Hartford, no feeling that Kate must rush into some bizarre schedule for fear of losing out in Hollywood. The Hepburns, anyway, have always seen to it that they don't have to rush crazily into ill-advised paths. Kate can afford to select because she's saved enough money to be independent.

In Hollywood it's the theory that Kate's never taken advice from anyone. Hollywood accuses her of egotism, because she persists in working on barred sets. However, those who actually work with her have found her as likeable as her family and close friends do. Cary Grant, who is in a position to speak authoritatively and who has nothing to gain by apple polishing, says, "Kate is more congenial than any actress I've ever worked with. She's my favorite!"

But Hollywood as a whole will never be able to reason out a star who'll talk seriously with mere studio employees and thereby lose a chance to broadcast sensationally via interviewers. Kate's views are numerous, logical, provocative. But she contends that Garbo had the truest inspiration about publicity and that what the public wants to imagine about an actress is unlimited. If any actress should talk freely to the press, it is evident that she'd not be as intriguing. So, why talk?

Because Kate is so analytical, and honest, she should reach the right conclusion about herself this summer. She knows that she wants to go on acting in important pictures. But she says one or two a year will be sufficient. Last year she earned $200,000 in Hollywood, so why not pick carefully now? She knows, too, that she wants to continue her stage climb, for she has much further to go in the theatre itself. She quit Broadway when she'd only begun, and her one return was severely panned. Last year she toured on the road, most successfully. She didn't take the play into New York because she had a suspicion she

One of These Window Shades Costs 15c..the Other $1.50

Can You Tell WHICH IS WHICH?

*Above guaranteed to be exact photographic reproductions of shades named

In Actual Tests 3 Women Out of 4 Thought the 15¢ CLOPAY Lintone Looked the More Expensive

See These Amazing Shades at Neighborhood and 5c & 10c Stores Everywhere

A REMARKABLE new cellulose material is found to be far more practical for window shades. Hangs straight, rolls evenly, doesn't crack, curl or pinhole. Wears amazingly. More than that, an exclusive CLOPAY process produces a lovely Lintone texture that so resembles fine-count linen as to astonish women everywhere. In actual tests, 3 out of 4 women viewing a 15c CLOPAY Lintone beside a $1.50 shade only 4 feet away, thought the CLOPAY was the more expensive shade! (Affidavit on file.)

ONLY CLOPAYS ARE LINTONED

CLOPAY Lintones come in a wide variety of colors to fit any decorative scheme. Cost only 15c, ready to attach in a jiffy to old rollers with patented CLOPAY gummed strip. No skill, no tacks, no tools needed. On new rollers, including molded shade button and new EDGE SAVER brackets, 25c. CLOPAYS are sold at 5c & 10c and neighborhood stores everywhere. But be sure to ask for AND GET genuine CLOPAY Lintones—America's fastest selling window shades—the only fibre window shade with the rich, exclusive finish that looks like linen.

*Did you guess correctly? The shade at lower left is the CLOPAY Lintone. Try it on your friends.

CLOPAY Washable Shades

WITH THE RICH LINTONE TEXTURE

For only 10c more per shade you can now get window shades made of the costly-looking CLOPAY Lintone material PLUS a coating on both sides of expensive oil-paint finish that's 100% washable! All you need is plain soap and water. Grime, grit, soot, stain, and finger marks wash off like magic with never a streak, ring or watermark. CLOPAY WASHABLES come in a variety of colors, all with the exclusive Lintone texture that resembles fine-count linen. CLOPAY WASHABLES on new rollers including new EDGE SAVER brackets and molded shade button, cost only 35c for 36″x6′ size. At 5c and 10c and neighborhood stores everywhere. For sample swatches of both type CLOPAYS, send 3c stamp to CLOPAY CORPORATION, 1347 Exeter Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

GUARANTEED by Good Housekeeping

CLOPAY LINTONE WINDOW SHADES

BOTHERED BY CONSTIPATION?
Get relief this simple, pleasant way!

Take one or two tablets of Ex-Lax before retiring. It tastes just like delicious chocolate. No bottles or spoons to bother with. No disagreeable concoctions to mix. Ex-Lax is easy to use and pleasant to take.

You sleep through the night . . . undisturbed! No stomach upsets. No nausea or cramps. No occasion to get up!

In the morning, Ex-Lax acts . . . thoroughly and effectively! It works so gently that, except for the relief you enjoy, you scarcely realize you have taken a laxative.

Ex-Lax is good for every member of the family—the youngsters as well as the grown-ups. At all drug stores in 10¢ and 25¢ sizes.

Now improved—better than ever!
EX-LAX
THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

DON'T DELAY! SOFT, TENDER, BLEEDING GUMS ARE AN S.O.S.

SEE your dentist at first sign of soft, tender, bleeding gums. He can give you expert care. But he needs your help, too.

Forhan's Does Both Jobs
CLEANS TEETH • AIDS GUMS

Dentists advise daily gum massage to help prevent gum trouble and to help keep teeth brilliant. Use Forhan's Toothpaste and massage twice every day. Forhan's is different. It contains a special ingredient for the gums.

wasn't quite good enough in it. This fall? The Theatre Guild already has Broadway designs for her.

"I still have to keep my fingers crossed," she confesses. She can grin now about her first onslaught on Broadway. Kate remembers how she started by making the rounds of the producers' offices, and it was as hot a summer as this one has been. Hotter, she maintains. She was far too nervous and bashful. Quite soon she was perspiring dreadfully, her clothes and hair sadly mussed. She was anxious to repair these damages of the heat, but ashamed to inquire for the ladies' rooms. That's the real reason why she was never chic! And because she wasn't chic, if you want to know all, she never once got to talk to a single solitary stage producer!

"But I had red hair, freckles and a temper, and the only solution was to live up to them!" Thoroughly ignored in the New York that now gossips about her plans, she heard that a stock company in Baltimore wanted an actress. Kate attempted her first bluff. Outstanding in campus dramatics, with no stage record in a theatre, but needing only a break, she talked so long and fast that down there they gave her the job that was open.

ONE of her self-imposed drawbacks has been her insistence upon interpreting all her roles absolutely as she herself visualizes them. She almost never got to Hollywood because of this trait. She was fired from a succession of Broadway shows, even losing a lead opposite Leslie Howard when she was still a nobody because she refused to change her mind about how his leading lady should be characterized. What if he was famous and she was a rank amateur? She didn't care! She knew, instinctively, what was best for her.

As a small child Katharine Hepburn was given to either crying until she got what she wanted, or she'd refuse to participate in the back-yard dramas until her rules were accepted. Luckily she became a star overnight in Hollywood, so she hasn't had to give in to any movie director on points of interpretation. She wouldn't have a director who'd subdue her slant on a role.

She thinks it's quite a coincidence that, exactly ten years ago, she understudied the original stage star of "Holiday." When Hope Williams was creating the role that Kate has recently clicked in, the fiery Hepburn gladly joined the troupe as stellar understudy. "Hope Williams was the healthiest star I ever met!" But standing in the wings every night, praying for a miracle so that she could go on, imprinted this particular drama in her mind. When she was offered a screen test she chose a sequence from this play to display her acting.

Kate has the talent and the desire to ultimately reign as one of Broadway's enduring queens. So she thinks she'll keep on with her stage yen. But now what of her as a woman?

She was married from the jolly house in Hartford ten years ago. She was all ecstatic hopes about love then. Hollywood wasn't even a glint. He was tall, gallant, and so sympathetic towards her stage leanings. He'd graduated from college and had put himself into the brokerage business in Philadelphia. But he moved his firm to New York so that she could go into the theatre and they could be modern and skyrocket in two careers together. It was young romance rampant.

As Mrs. Ludlow Smith in private life, she fixed up an apartment, and they were very determined to get ahead. But she grew more and more devoted to her career, and less and less devoted to Ludlow. When she went to Hollywood she denied her marriage. Later she secured a Mexican divorce, hoping for secrecy in the break-up.

In Hollywood she has managed her career battles herself, has never gone with any studio powers. Love's been out. George Cukor and Leland Hayward, her agent, have been her closest men friends. Laura Harding, her chum from Bryn Mawr days, has been her companion in her rented hilltop mansion in the West.

But Kate, of course, is very emotional. So when she met Howard Hughes, who is adventurous and a sophisticate and a millionaire besides, she remembered she could be just a woman after all. Now—should she be? He is fascinating, and being with him is so stimulating. But he'd never play second fiddle to any woman's career. He's Loretta Young poses for us with one of her special friends. Who said something about a dog's life being hard?

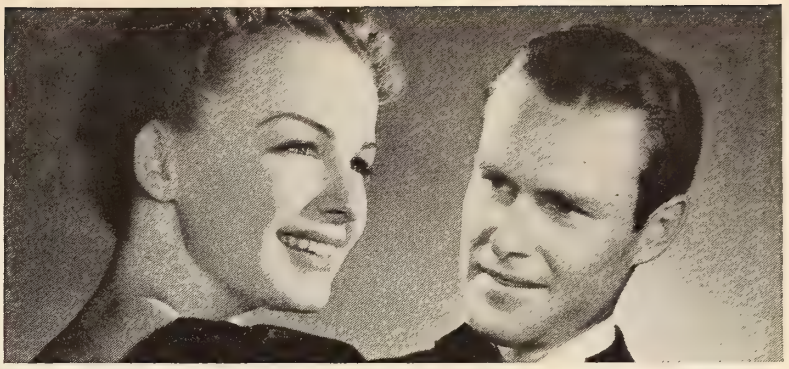
used to having his own way with women, too. Kate doesn't mind giving in to his whims now. But could she—for always?

The gangling, timid, bright girl from Hartford is back home vacationing. She's a glamorous woman of the world now and, incredibly, she hasn't outgrown her "folks." But what lies ahead for her? Merely acting greatness, gained by concentrating on technique and devoting herself to self-improvement? That's going to be a very lonesome life.



Suppose she allows herself to be a woman, concerned only with one man's wishes. We only live once. What's fame? They forget you in a few years! Being a wife like these others, with a home full of kids who'll be a comfort when age comes—Kate's thinking of this too. One marriage bust-up has taught her plenty. Holding onto love seems simpler now. An extremist? Too outspoken? Spoiled into demanding all or nothing in everything? It's not too late to change!

Now look at all of these college kids who flock around her home—why, before Kate went into the theatre she too was awarded a fancy degree. She was branded a bachelor of psychology! Why can't she practice her psychology now? Why can't she have an all-consuming love and also a brilliant, wonderful career? Why can't she become a great woman, understanding and tender, and also the American Bernhardt?

Such thoughts as these are running riot through Katharine Hepburn's head as the summer moon wanes and the family and their friends, who are her friends too, chatter on. What's the matter with Kate? She's undecided, for the first and only time she can ever recall. But, as I see her smiling, I know that inside she isn't smiling at all. Inside she's busily trying to determine her destiny. She is on the verge of her wonderful discovery. Conquest of self, conquest of divided impulses, that must be her answer! It will be brutal if she pulls a boner.

A bit of charm from yesteryear. Jim Ellison, Ruby Keeler and Anne Shirley in "Mother Carey's Chickens."

FOR A WOMAN IN LOVE... If you want to attract HIM, use the lipstick he likes! Don't have red, smeary lips. Men detest that "painted" look. Use the lipstick that gives your lips a natural glow—soft and smooth as a rose petal.

LIPS ARE ROSY, SMOOTH AND TEMPTING—when you give them the magic touch of Tangee! Orange in the stick, Tangee changes on your lips to the exact shade of blush-rose that best suits you—whether you're blonde, brunette or redhead. And Tangee's special cream base keeps lips smooth and soft.

AND ROUGE TO MATCH... In the Creme or Compact form, Tangee Rouge blends with your individual complexion—gives your cheeks a delicate, natural tone. It's one rouge that suits every type of coloring—from corn-silk blonde to nut-brown brunette. Try Tangee Rouge and Lipstick tonight!

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES! There is only one Tangee—don't let anyone switch you. Be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. If you prefer more color for evening wear, ask for Tangee Theatrical.

4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET

The George W. Luft Co., 417 Fifth Ave., New York City

Please rush "Miracle Make-Up Set" containing sample Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)

Check Shade of Powder Desired ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name _____
(Please Print)

Street _____

City _____ State _____ MM108

Don't Hesitate About
Feminine Hygiene

Use a modern method

Why add to the problems of life by worrying about old-fashioned or embarrassing methods of feminine hygiene? If you doubt the effectiveness of your method, or if you consider it messy, greasy, and hateful, here is news that you will welcome.

Thousands of happy, enlightened women now enjoy a method that is modern, effective—kills germs—and, equally important—dainty!

ZONITORS ARE GREASELESS

Zonitors offer a new kind of suppository that is small, snow-white and GREASELESS! While easy to apply and completely removable with water, Zonitors maintain long, effective antiseptic contact. No mixing. No clumsy apparatus. Odorless—and an ideal deodorant.

Zonitors make use of the world-famous Zonite antiseptic principle favored because of its antiseptic power and freedom from "burn" danger to delicate tissues.

Full instructions in package. $1 for box of 12—at all U. S. and Canadian druggists. Free booklet in plain envelope on request. Write Zonitors, 4009 Chrysler Bldg., N. Y. C.

SNOW WHITE
Each in individual glass vial.

Easy to Beautify Skin with
MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM

Make your skin young looking. Flake off the stale, surface skin. Reveal the clear, beautiful underskin by using Mercolized Wax Cream regularly. Give your skin the combined benefits of cleansing, clearing, softening, smoothing and beautifying in every application of this single cream. Mercolized Wax Cream brings out the hidden beauty of the skin.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily

THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

"Hello, operator! What? Deposit five cents? Oh yes, of course, how stupid of me!"

"What do they do with all my nickels while I wait? Well, I'll just get comfortable."

HOW THEY WIN FRIENDS

(Continued from page 39)

floor show." Murphy had won a friend, and, through winning a friend, he had won a job. So, Rule 1: Take an interest in other people and their problems.

The most important thing to remember is that people are first, last and always interested in themselves, and that they will be flattered if you show that you are interested in them. In line with this, it is important to remember people's names, and to call them by name whenever you can.

Buddy Ebsen, long, angular laugh provoker, learned early in his days as a trouper that the more friends you can make in various one night stands the better. Realizing the value of incurring the favor of stage door and prop men, Buddy hit upon a plan.

EVERYONE is flattered, he figured, when someone remembers a first name. People are also flattered if, in addition to a name, one remembers the name and age of a wife or child or little details they may reveal as to their personal lives.

And so Buddy made out a book. At every new theatre he would list the town, theatre name, and the names and personal information about various employees. When scheduled to arrive at a certain town, Buddy would whip out this vest pocket volume and review the situation. As a result, there isn't one of these men who fails to respond to Ebsen's name on the screen. In him they recognize a friend.

Rule 2, then: Remember people's names, their likes and dislikes.

If Hollywood stars were entirely selfish, they might go out of their way only to befriend those who, in turn, can help them. But that has never been true of the finest stars in the profession.

Eleanor Powell, one of the best-liked girls in Hollywood, is just as friendly toward humble, unimportant people as she is toward big executives. That was recently proved when she traveled on the S. S. Santa Paula from California to New York. Although any Hollywood star could demand and get good service anywhere, she would undoubtedly arouse a good deal of resentment if she acted as if it were her prerogative to be served.

When Eleanor Powell casually mentioned that she liked cream soup and chow mein, every night after that they appeared on the ship's menu. Two Chinese stewards, Lee and Tom, vied with each other to serve Eleanor. One of them, Tom, was supposed to be the captain's own cabin boy, for he had been with the captain for years. The captain liked to boast of how faithful Tom was and of how Tom would never leave him for anyone else.

Towards the end of the trip, Tom went down to see Eleanor. "I want to work for you," he told her. "I like you. Please give me a job for always."

"But the captain—what of him?" Eleanor said helplessly.

"Never mind the captain," Tom told her. "I want to work for you."

Practically the same scene was repeated with Lee. Regretfully Eleanor told the two boys that she couldn't possibly make use of their services in either New York or Hollywood. But some time later she received a letter from the captain saying that Tom and Lee continually keep talking about her and hoping that some day they would have another chance to serve "the very pretty lady."

What made the two boys so eager to work for Eleanor? The answer is so simple that I can only hope you will believe it. Eleanor showed her frank, honest appreciation of every service they did for her and made them feel important. "You're so good to me," she kept telling them.

So, Rule 3. Show your appreciation for the services other people render you. Take a tip from Dale Carnegie and be "hearty in your approbation and lavish in your praise."

Not all Hollywood stars are always kind to other people, and to say that they are would be to stretch credulity to the breaking point. There are a number of girls who were once top-notch stars who have been very cruel to dressmakers, to the prop boys on their sets, to script girls and other people in badly-paid jobs who cannot very well defend themselves.

There was, for instance, one star who bought a dress at a department store for seventeen dollars, when the dress should have been priced much higher. When the salesgirl discovered her mistake, she pleaded with the star to return the dress or pay the difference, as she could not afford to do so out of her meagre salary. But the star only laughed at her predicament, saying she had brought it on herself.

Never has one of the stars who trample on other people's rights lasted very long as a top box-office attraction. A cameraman, whom a star has snubbed, can take a few unflattering pictures of her, so the fans find that she no longer looks attractive. Possibly a story about the star's real characteristics gets printed in a magazine or newspaper, and there is so much evidence that the fans lose faith in her.

Not asleep after all! "Hello, Bill! This is Edward Horton. What are you doing tonight?"

But nothing can defeat the Joan Crawfords, the Jeanette MacDonalds and the Irene Dunnes of Hollywood. They have too many friends.

There is an amazing but true story about Irene Dunne which explains why she will never be without friends. One night her bedside phone rang and a woman's voice, hoarse with desperation, said, "Oh, I thought I'd never reach you. Please come right away. —— is dying, and she's too proud to let herself be taken to the charity hospital. I don't know what to do, for she's absolutely penniless."

The name she mentioned was one with which Irene Dunne was familiar—the name of an actress who had once been a great star. Stopping only long enough to ascertain the address, Irene Dunne came to an unfamiliar house in one of the poorest sections of Hollywood.

The woman who opened the door gasped in astonishment when she saw Irene. "But," she said, "you're Irene Dunne."

"Yes," Irene said, "you sent for me, didn't you?"

In a daze the woman said, "I sent for my friend, Mrs. X. I never dreamed that it was someone else, least of all you, who answered the telephone."

THROUGH an accident, she had been connected with Irene's private number instead of her friend's number. Silently she led the way into the room of the woman who was ill, a fine, grand old woman who had once played in a picture with Irene. Irene helped her, as she has helped so many others, and because of her timely aid, the woman is alive and provided for today.

Rule 4, then: Be ready to go out of your way to help other people.

Claudette Colbert is adored in Hollywood, because she is always sympathetic and tolerant, and has never been known to be high-hat. She possesses the knack so few people have, of being able to put herself in the other person's place. One of the most amusing instances of this is that now one of her best friends is a girl who once did something for which another actress might have sued her.

The girl, a writer, read in one of the Broadway columns that Claudette Colbert was in New York, and asked her editor if she could have the day off to interview Claudette. This permission was readily granted. But the girl, instead of interviewing Claudette, drove out to the country and spent the day playing golf, believing that she could get the interview the next day by appealing to Miss Colbert's Days of Donts are over!

Because when you buy Kotex* you can be sure that:

★ Kotex stays Wondersoft--it's cushioned in cotton to prevent chafing.

★ Kotex doesn't show—thanks to its flattened and tapered ends.

★ Kotex can be worn on either side --both sides are fully absorbent.

★ Kotex is made with a special patented center section that guards against spotting by keeping moisture away from the surface.

★ Only Kotex offers three types—Regular, Junior and Super--for different women on different days.

KOTEX* SANITARY NAPKINS

Use Quest* with Kotex... the new positive deodorant powder developed especially for use with sanitary napkins—soothing, completely effective.

(Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Patent Office*)

I USED TO HATE THIS JOB TILL I FOUND SANI-FLUSH

It's no fun to scrub and scour a toilet. But it must be kept clean. A speck of dirt breeds dangerous germs. A dirty toilet has an offensive odor. A stained toilet is unsightly, and unnecessary.

SANI-FLUSH is made scientifically to clean toilets. Just sprinkle a little in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet. See stains and streaks vanish. Germs are killed. Odors are banished. The bowl sparkles like new. SANI-FLUSH cannot injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

sympathies and telling her that she would be fired if she didn't get the story.

The next day she told her editor that she had obtained a splendid story from Claudette, with lots of quotes on Claudette's long-distance marriage. (At the time Claudette was married to Norman Foster.) Then she called Claudette's apartment, but learned, to her horror, that the columnist had made an error, and that Claudette was still in Hollywood.

Afraid to tell her editor the truth, she wrote a story which purported to be an interview with Claudette, but which was entirely "dreamed up." When the story was printed, the writer shivered, fearing a possible libel suit.

Not long afterwards, Claudette came to New York and the writer met her at a cocktail party. Introduced to the girl, Claudette said coldly, "Oh, so you're the one who wrote that story about me? Are you in the habit of quoting people whom you've never met?"

Shaking with apprehension, the writer said, "Oh, but I can explain exactly how it happened." Then she told how much she had longed to take a day off to go tramping in the country. Before she got through Claudette was laughing heartily and agreeing that a game of golf was much more fun than interviewing stars.

So, Rule 5: Put yourself in the other person's place and be tolerant, sympathetic and understanding.

WHEN Sylvia Sidney first came to Hollywood, she was so anxious to get her own way that she got the reputation of being very temperamental. Recently she told me, "I have discovered that if you want to influence people, you can't afford to be temperamental. It's a waste of energy and emotion to go yip-yip-yipping about everything. When you make an issue of every little thing, no one will pay any attention to you when you make an issue of something that is really vital and important.

"When I am working on a picture, I am as good a trouper as possible, and generally do not complain about anything. Once, however, when I was loaned out for a picture, I was asked to shoot some special scenes at night when I was dead tired and not feeling very well. I said, 'Listen, I've been a good little girl and done everything else you've asked, but I don't feel right just now. Let's postpone these scenes till tomorrow.' They were lovely about it, but I doubt if they would have been if I'd been a pain in the neck all through the production."

Which gives us Rule 6: Give in to other people on issues that are not vital, taking a firm stand only on really important matters.

Most of us err in being too honest in our criticism of other people, though we seldom are willing to profit by criticism ourselves. Once Nelson Eddy almost made a mistake like this.

When Nelson was singing with the Philadelphia Opera Company, Dr. Edouard Lippe, a famous vocal instructor whom Eddy had never met, attended the rehearsal. When it was over, he said to Nelson, "You have a nice voice, my boy, but you don't know how to use it."

Nelson, not knowing who Lippe was, but furious because a stranger had dared to criticize him, turned and walked away. At home that evening the thought of the morning's event haunted him. He wondered who the stranger had been, and what he had meant by the criticism. Realizing that he had been inexcusably rude, Nelson called other members of the company, found out the name of the man and his address and, later that night, called to extend his apologies.

Naturally, the first meeting was a trifle strained, but more meetings followed, and at each one Nelson put forth more effort to win Lippe as a friend. He succeeded so well that Dr. Lippe has been Nelson's voice teacher ever since.

Rule 7, then: When you have made a mistake, be big enough to admit it.

There are certain qualities which are universally admired, and which are bound to make friends for us if we cultivate them. There is good sportsmanship, for example. One of the best-liked actors in Hollywood is Cesar Romero. Originally cast in inferior roles, he is rapidly forging ahead to stardom, principally, I think, because executives like Cesar and are eager to find roles in which he will be able to acquit himself well.

During the making of one picture Cesar was subjected to a series of practical jokes that would have infuriated most people. There was the moving van which arrived

Send for trial offer

Hot Starch without boiling!

MAKES IRONING EASY

A Wonderful Invention

Here's the way to revolutionary freedom from bother and trouble in starching and ironing. Unlike lump starch Quick Elastic is a powder and contains other ingredients already mixed for instant preparation of hot starch. Nothing to add. No cooking needed. Your iron fairly glides. Hot starch in 30 seconds!

ELASTIC STARCH

THANK YOU----------

THE HUBINGER CO., No. 592, Keokuk, Ia.
Your free sample of QUICK ELASTIC, please, "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

Name.....

Address.....

Jack Benny strums a tune for seven Cinderellas—all starlets in his new picture, "Artists and Models Abroad." Left to right: Joyce Mathews, Dolores Casey, Gwen Kenyon, Yvonne Duval, Sheila Darcy, Marie De Forrest and Punkins Parker.

at his house with orders to move Cesar and all his furniture, although his lease wasn't up and he had no intention of moving. There was the colored undertaker who arrived to pick up the body of Cesar's colored maid, who, the undertaker had been informed, had died in a tragic accident. (Actually Cesar has no colored maid.) There was the huge box of flowers Ethel Merman received, with Cesar's card inside it. Cesar protested that he had never sent them, but at the end of the month he got a bill for them, and when he called up the florist, he was told that his secretary, a Miss Rosenbloom, had ordered them. Though Cesar has no secretary named Miss Rosenbloom, he realized that the florist was not to blame, and paid the bill.

Though Cesar knew very well that the other actors on the set had ganged up against him, he took it all with a smile. Do you wonder a fellow like that makes friends?

So Rule 8: Be a good sport.

That doesn't mean that you must always take circumstances lying down, or that when you are trying to get a job or influence people you must be too humble and meek. If it is natural for you to fight for what you want, go ahead and fight.

CONRAD NAGEL had been starring in all sorts of productions when a new director, considering him for a tough role, insisted that Conrad must take a screen test before he could be considered. To Conrad this seemed pretty ridiculous, since he had played in dozens of picture at which this director could have looked. But he agreed to take the test.

Since Conrad could say and do anything he wanted to in that test, he decided to show the director just how tough he could be. He started in by telling him just what he thought of a man who didn't have sense enough to look at one of his regular films. Conrad said such a director didn't have enough discrimination to cast a travelogue, and that, as far as he was concerned, said director knew what he could do with his part, his screen play and his picture.

Conrad told me, "I used some language I couldn't repeat now, when I'm calmed down."

But it worked. When the director saw the test, he rolled on the floor and then when he could speak, he slapped Conrad on the back and said, "You're the man for the part. I didn't think you had it in you."

Rule 9, then. Don't be afraid to fight for what you want.

If you will start today to follow the movie stars' rules for popularity and success, they will work for you just as inevitably as they work for everyone else who has tried them.

If you want to make friends and influence people:

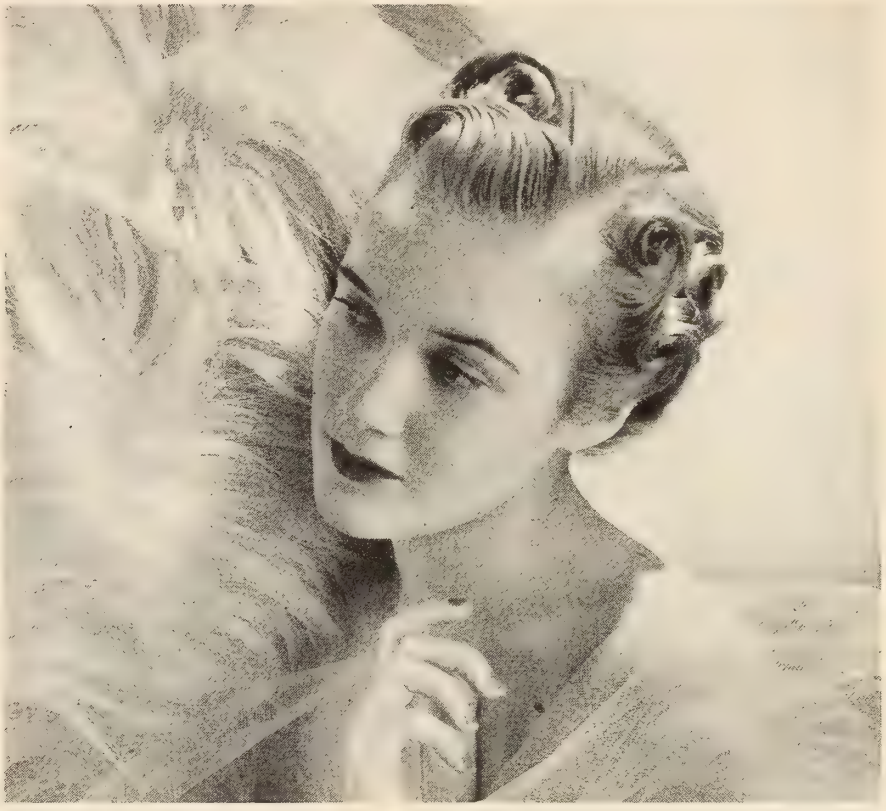
1. Take an interest in other people and their problems.

2. Remember people's names, their likes and dislikes.

3. Show appreciation for services rendered.

4. Be ready to go out of your way to help others.

5. Put yourself in the other person's place and be tolerant and understanding.



6. Give in on issues that are not vital, taking a firm stand only on important matters.

7. Admit your mistakes, and be big enough to apologize for them when you have offended.

8. Show good sportsmanship.

9. If you want something badly, fight for it.

Accent on Youth
Highlights on Hair—

BUT NO SHINE ON THE NOSE!

FASHION, this fall, has particular wiles to make a woman look young. Shimmering silks, sparkling jewels, and highlights on brushed-back hair. But the shine that appears on the nose Fashion will not permit, for it mars the picture of youth.

Shiny Nose is often due to excessive oiliness, which germs may aggravate. Happily, there's a face powder that both covers shine and actually helps to reduce it. Woodbury Germ-free Facial Powder discourages germ-growth, clings reliably for hours, helps keep unwelcome shine away.

Seven fashion-tested shades, Champagne and Windsor Rose among the newest, bring out the youth in your face. $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢. Woodbury Germ-proof Rouge and Lipstick in four smart shades.

Send for Seven Fashionable Shades

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9194 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario. Please send me 7 shades of Woodbury Facial Powder; trial tubes of two Woodbury Beauty Creams; guest-size Woodbury Facial Soap. I enclose 10c to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

HEAR TYRONE POWER in thrilling radio dramas, Sunday Nights, NBC Blue Network, beginning October 2.

MAKE YOUR HAIR SPARKLE! With Nestle Colorinse there is lovely enriched color . . . gleaming lustre . . . in every shade of hair.

IT TAKES JUST A JIFFY to use Colorinse after each shampoo. The cost is small—a few pennies can make your hair shine with fascinating youthful highlights.

Rinse gleaming lustre into your hair with Colorinse -- quickly, simply! Colorinse is easy to use -- it is not an ordinary bleach or dye.

Complete every shampoo with your own special shade of Nestle Colorinse. It rinses away shampoo film -- makes your hair soft and easy to handle -- leaves it lustrous -- helps make waves last longer. Colorinse glorifies your hair. Consult the Nestle Color Chart at your nearest toilet goods counter -- today!

10c for package of 2 rinses at 10c stores.
25c for 5 rinses at drug and dept. stores.

Nestle COLORINSE

See how Oatmeal Cleans Away Excess Oiliness!

Now science finds that Oatmeal Skin Cleanser actually absorbs excess oil . . helps remove blackheads

Grandma used Oatmeal as a skin beautifier—and now recent scientific research reveals that pure oatmeal is wonderfully effective in cleansing the skin of excess oiliness and grime, and in helping remove blackheads. Today a new beauty aid, Lavena, brings you pure oatmeal powder specially refined and processed for daily cosmetic use. Thousands of women now praise Lavena—many use it in place of soap or creams for daily cleansing. Lavena cleanses thoroughly without injury to the live growing cells which form fresh new smooth skin. Begin to use Lavena today—almost overnight you will see improvement in your complexion. At leading 10c stores; also drug, and department stores. 10c, 50c, $1.00 Sizes.

Sample FREE Write to The Lavena Corporation, Dept. 100, 141 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Lavena THE OATMEAL SKIN CLEANSER

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES

(Continued from page 43)

Grandma has a dry and crackling wit. A veteran trouper, the Jones series has given her film career a shot in the arm. She herself needs no stimulus beyond what she generates. You don't listen to Grandma as to a sweet old lady who ought to be humored. You listen because, while her speech is somewhat tart, it's never dull.

She has a house in the valley. Outdoors, she gardens. Indoors, she knits. "Of course I live alone. I've lived alone all my life. I don't see why I shouldn't a few days longer. There are always handmaidens, of course. But those you can get rid of. I've just got rid of my last one. She wouldn't let me have anything the way I wanted it. Her doctor only allowed her two things to eat, caviar and I forgot the other. So that was all she ever gave me to eat. One day she came in to fetch me, looking like a thundercloud. I'll admit her grievance was just. She'd missed Fannie Brice on the radio. Well, I don't pretend to pull any weight as against Fannie but, so far as I'd heard, Fannie wasn't paying her to listen. When I fired her, she turned the other cheek. 'You're erratic,' says she, 'but I like you.' Maybe it was my mistake. Maybe I should have exhibited her as a curio."

SPRING BYINGTON creates an impression closely akin to that of her screen characterization. She seems moved by a spirit, gayer than that of Mother Jones but equally serene. To her, Mrs. Jones is what a mother should be. "She holds the place every mother ought to hold in a family, letting others go their own way, being always there but not as a stumbling block, letting their excitement wash over her without upsetting her too much. It will all come out in the end. Eventually they'll remember to take their rubbers off before tracking mud into the house. They'll remember, to pick up their things. Johnny will break his arm, but eventually the arm will mend. That's mother's set-up in the household. That's the kind of mother I'd like to be.

"Of course, I've been a working woman all my life, so I haven't had so much of the day-by-day routine with my girls." (Her girls are Phyllis, twenty, who's learning to be a stage manager, and Lois, eighteen, who wants to design clothes.) "That may have led to my over-stressing things a little. I remember writing to them once, 'Do you ever get tired of my lectures by mail?' They wrote back, 'Since you're kind enough to ask, mother, it's a question of placement. A little lecture in the middle with a lot of sugar coating 'round it doesn't taste so bad.'"

Which brings us to Dad Prouty, who's blessed with more humor than Dad Jones. He and Mrs. Prouty have no children of their own, though from his way with the younger generation you'd never guess it. He's alternately sparring with them and lending a paternal ear to their various enthusiasms. He won't take them too seriously but, caught off guard, pride in them kindles his eye. "Look at them! Wise guys! Showing up father! When we started, June was up to here on me and George was up to here. Now I can't see over their heads. D'you like short men, mother?"

"Of course, dear. Better than anything else in the world."

From his years on the stage and in vaudeville, he has brought a wealth of trick songs and stunts with which he enlivens the set, and which make him young Billy's special joy and wonder. He is also supplied with innumerable sprightly anecdotes bound up with the old days. Between shots you're likely to find him with Miss Byington on one side, Grandma busily knitting on the other, and Kenny, a lover of all things theatrical, sprawled at his feet as he spins his tales.

When Dad Prouty first came to Hollywood, he played a comic stuttering role that proved his downfall. "We've nothing in the stuttering line today," they'd tell him, and though he proved a dozen times that he could stutter but didn't have to, it did him no good till the Jones pictures came along. Then the first picture hit, and the exhibitors began yelling, "We want big names." There was talk at the studio of a new father Jones. "No," said Sol Murtzel. "We're not playing for names, we're playing for the Joneses. Jed's the father of that bunch, and they're too nice a bunch to be saddled with a stepfather. Jed stays." The event proved his wisdom.

Shirley Deane is unique among the Joneses for two things. She was the only player under contract to the studio when the series was first started. And she's the only player who didn't start with it. Blue-eyed and golden-haired like June Lang, and sufficiently like her in type, she inherited the part when June's schedule grew too heavy for her to continue. As vivacious as Bonnie, she and Bonnie have something else in common. Each is in love with a man named Russell—Bonnie with Russell Gleason (Herbert to the Joneses), Shirley with Russell Bowditch, studio technician. When the family attended the première of "In Old Chicago" en masse, Shirley was escorted by her screen fiancé, while her own fiancé took Cynthia Hobart, engaged to Russell Gleason.

"But the funniest mixup," says Shirley, "came after 'Borrowing Trouble.' There was this old caretaker on the set who was sort of vague—"

"How kindly you put it," comments Grandma. "She was downright balmy. They've pensioned her off since."

"Well, anyway, I walked into my dressing-room the first day, and what had Bob Hope suspects that this giant golf club from his enemy of the links, Bing Crosby, was not given in good faith.

she done but put Russell's things in with mine. When they asked her about it, she kept saying, 'Well, they were married in the last picture, weren't they? Married folks belong together.' "

Kenneth Howell is like Jack Jones in his open-heartedness, differs from him in being more fluent of tongue. He gave up a good insurance job "for the pleasure of trying to starve to death as an actor." "How do you get to be an actor?" he asked a friend. "Find an agent." "How do you find an agent?" "I wouldn't know." Kenny opened the phone book, closed his eyes and speared an agent. For reasons unknown, though something engaging in Kenny's makeup was probably involved, the agent agreed to handle him. Kenny knew George Ernest's elder brother. He discovered that George was trying out for the younger Jones boy. They got together and rehearsed the miser scene.

Said George, with ten years of screen experience behind him, "Now we'll make them test us together or put up a kick." The kick wasn't necessary. They were tested together and signed together.

A warm friendship has grown up between Kenny and Miss Byington. "I've taken him under my wing," she says.

"Wing, nothing," he scoffs. "She's my best girl."

Kenny pays fifteen dollars a month for his house at Manhattan Beach and lives on twenty-five dollars a week. "That's what I'd get in a bank or store, and I'd have to live on it. Now I make myself live on it, so I can save to do things I want—learn to be a good actor, and travel."

GRANDMA grew weary not long ago of listening to Kenny yearn for far off places. "Don't talk about it," she snapped. "Don't think about it. Go."

The following week he was off for two months in Europe.

About ten years ago Sid Graumann was lunching at a restaurant owned by a Scandinavian couple. A small boy entered, closed the door behind him, and as he started up the aisle between the tables, broke into this singular chant. "I'm George Ernest. I'm three years old. I'm fine, thank you. I'm George Ernest. I'm three years old. I'm fine, thank you—" keeping it up till he ducked through the back door.

"What's it all about?" Graumann asked the proprietor.

"That's my kid. The customers kept calling him over and asking his name, so he does it that way."

Graumann whooped. "He ought to be in the movies." George Ernest, three, was registered at Central Casting and has been in the movies ever since.

No Shylock, he's still a better business man than Kenny. Kenny goes on a budget to protect himself from spending. George is protected by a sound sense of business values and the courage of his stout convictions. "For instance, I spend most of my allowance on camera equipment. I won't save when it comes to cameras. But I won't just get anything either. I look it over. I read the magazines. I ask questions. Then, if it's good, I buy it." At school he majors in mathematics. "I might go in for aeronautical designing. Sure, I'd like to be an actor, but not just an actor. Suppose something goes wrong, or you have an accident and get a scar on your face. Then where are you? I'd just as soon work in a camera store. You could have all the scars you want and it wouldn't matter. Say, could I show you this picture of Patricia?" His eyes softened as the eyes of small boys rarely do. "She's my niece, she's five. I'm proud of her. Isn't she a cute one, Miss Byington?"

"HANDS can have such Compelling Charm"—

says Ann Miller*

(Lovely Hollywood Star)

"A MAN CAN'T RESIST the appeal of soft white hands", says ANN MILLER*, charming picture star. Even hard-working hands can be attractively smooth — Jergens Lotion helps prevent roughness and chapping.

*Ann Miller with James Stewart in Frank Capra's "You Can't Take It With You" (A Columbia Picture)

Your HANDS can be helped to adorable Softness!

DON'T PERMIT your hands to get rough and red because cold, wind, and frequent use of water have dried the natural moisture out of the skin.

Supplement that moisture by using Jergens Lotion. See how soon your hands become lovely! Two fine ingredients in this fragrant lotion are used by many doctors for effective help in whitening and softening rough skin. Soothes chapping — helps restore caressing smoothness! No stickiness! Hands cared for with Jergens are adorably worthy of love. Only 50¢, 25¢, 10¢ . . . $1.00 for the special economy size . . . at any beauty counter.

Soon helps even rough, neglected hands to be soft and velvet-smooth.

JERGENS LOTION

FREE! GENEROUS SAMPLE

Mail this coupon. See—at our expense—how wonderfully Jergens Lotion helps to make red, rough, chapped hands smooth and white.

The Andrew Jergens Co., 1646 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, O. (In Canada, Perth, Ontario).

Name _____

(PLEASE PRINT)

Address _____

ELOQUENT EYES . . .

KURLASH makes eyes speak volumes . . . frames them in new, starry beauty! In 30 seconds, this wonderful implement gives you naturally curly lashes . . . longer, darker looking . . . expressing your personality. Try it — $1 at all leading stores.

Learn what shades of eye make-up are becoming to you — how to apply them! Send your name, address and coloring to Jane Heath, Dept. E-10; receive—free—a personal color-chart and full instructions in eye make-up!

THE KURLASH COMPANY, Inc.
Rochester, New York
Canada: Toronto, 3

Kurlash

COPYRIGHT 1938, THE KURLASH CO., INC.

Unlike Lucy, June is a little shy. Her smile comes readily, her words less so. Her transplantation to the film world has left her quite calm. "I was taking tap with Fanchon and Marco, then I was in a play. The scout saw me, told me to come over, so I did. I just sat there and they looked at me, and that night they called and told me I had the part. My daddy's always been kind of the excited type. He got all fussed, but mother and I never get excited. We were just happy about it. The girls at school thought it was good luck, that's all—and it was. The only difference is, I go to school at the studio now. It's nice, because you get the afternoon off." Still, Lucy's impishness lurks behind June's demureness. "Isn't it, Geo-orge-ee?" she drawled.

Plucked from the radio to play Bobby Jones, Billy Mahan is a normal youngster, squirmy, mischievous and lovable. He has two passions, airplanes and Brian Donlevy. He can no more help yelling to climb aboard an airplane on sight than he can help breathing. Why he should have picked on Donlevy as an object of veneration is a greater mystery. He stalks the actor like a shadow at every opportunity, his chattering tongue stilled, his heart in his eyes. Recently they were photographed together. When the picture was brought for Billy's inspection, he screwed his eyes tight and refused to look at it at all.

"Why won't you look, Billy?" his mother asked him.

"Maybe it's not so nice," he murmured.

Luncheon was over by the time all these gleanings were gathered. The Joneses were bidding each other casual farewells. No need for ceremony. They'd be seeing each other again tonight or tomorrow or after the week-end.

Dad stood with his arm around Mother's shoulder. "Hear you're going to have a baby in the next picture, Bonnie. That means you and I'll have to retire, Mother."

"Not at all," protests Mother. "Not until Bonnie's baby has a baby."

"Why then?" Kenny wanted to know. "What's wrong with great grandpa and grandma Jones?"

"What's wrong with all the Joneses?" piped young Billy suddenly, and answered himself, "Nothin'."

Which answer is good enough for you and me and several hundred thousand other Jones family fans.

HE'S GOOFY AND HE LIKES IT

(Continued from page 46)

boiling a passionate brew. Books are not silent. I hear them talking aloud, in many tongues. I read a script and the lines mean nothing to me. The character I am to play means nothing, as written. I am a bad 'study' because of this. Then, suddenly, some oblique angle of the character's personality will leap out at me, a twist, a goat-like angle and—I play him so." (Which is, of course, what makes Reginald Owen's "characters" bite into the mind as they do. One would not be surprised, watching Mr. Owen, to perceive that he has goats' feet, a pair of horns, a nimbus round his head or almost any curious addenda.)

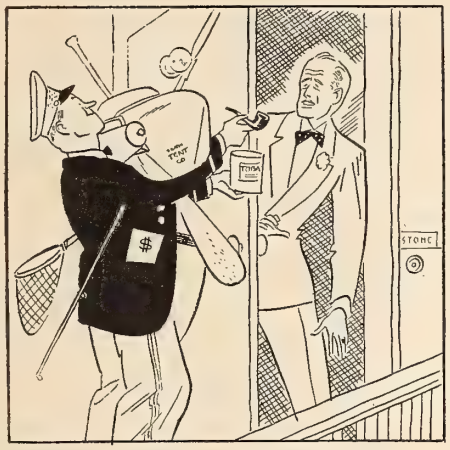
"I look at love abnormally. The same is true of world conditions, public personalities. I am cynical to the point of being a touch mad. When famous men speak, for example, I don't think that they always believe what they are saying. I find myself digging, quarrying, mining for what they do mean back of their camouflaging words. I cannot take any thing or any one at face value. I feel an itching to tear off the mask from every face.

"As for love, I have an acquaintance, a very well-known actor. He has been married for a quarter of a century or more. He tells—and the world believes—that theirs has been a 'great love,' an idyl of connubial felicity. Whenever his wife enters a room he rises and says, 'How are you, my love?' though he knows perfectly well just how she is. Or he sits, invariably at her side, patting her hand, her shoulder. His face never changes, no matter what role he plays, saint or satyr, priest or passionate poet. The expression in his eyes never changes, and hasn't for forty years. Therefore, he can feel any emotion and no one be the wiser. I look at him and suspect him of having little salacious question marks in his eyes, just tiny little ones, you know, when a tidy Miss in her teens passes him by.

"I sort of don't believe that things are as they seem. No, it doesn't make me uncomfortable or unhappy, because I don't care. Not that I am happy. I am not, of course. I don't know why, I'm sure. I am happily married. I adore my work. But there it is. Is anybody altogether happy?

"I regard love with laughter, not as the be-all and end-all of existence. I suspect it of being a pleasant trap charmingly decorated and sprung—not once, but often—by wily Nature. I may be abnormal in this, too," smiled Reginald Owen, his blue eyes frank and honest, his smile subtle and somehow secretive, "but I regard us mortals as lamentably stupid, all of us. Poor stupid animals still floundering in archaic morasses, living the legends of the Dark Ages, not living life as it really is today. We're beginning to fumble a little with the bandages over our eyes, the hypocrisies that are on our lips. But what strides remain to be taken!"

ALL of which oration, on the part of Mr. Owen, sprang, full-fledged, from a question I had asked. For I had said to this tall Englishman who has so often played sadists dealing out creeps and crawls and spinal shudders—I had asked him, "Which are you? Who are you?" My question was prompted not only by the sadist in Reginald Owen's portrayals. I'd been thinking of the gamut this man has run, scoring every time whether as sadist, fool, charlatan, diplomat, lover, or rogue. What wonder then that I asked, "Which are you?"



Reginald Owen seldom plays without make-up, but seldom does anyone realize that he is in make-up. With such cruel verisimilitude does he etch his characters that one doesn't pause to consider whether he is "made up" or not. Behind whiskers and scars, eye glasses and grease paint trickeries he has given us a never to be forgotten gallery, all the more remarkable because no one has ever realized his amazing make-ups.

So I asked, legitimately, "Which are you, Mr. Owen? Madman? Fool? Kindly English gentleman? Clever prestidigitator, "playing parts?" Every man has a major chord in his nature. What is yours?"

Mr. Owen, looking younger than he appears on the screen, kindly, with bright blue eyes, tanned skin, easy, delightful manner, only his mouth twisted now and again into a tolerant cynicism, answered

'N' ME

Try your luck at winning a cash prize. What do you have to say about the stars and the movies you see?

Lewis Stone deserves to be showered with everything good says a devoted admirer from Tennessee.

Lewis Stone for the continued excellence of his screen portrayals.

For fully a dozen years (perhaps longer), Lewis Stone has been portraying fine old gray-haired gentlemen—lawyers, doctors, judges—and each portrayal has been a masterpiece. But do you ever hear of his being nominated for an Academy supporting role award? No. Yet, this fine actor goes right along giving the same fine, competent performances that he has given for years.

Perhaps Mr. Stone may never have an "Oscar" to stand upon his mantelpiece, but in the hearts of the movie audience there is an "Oscar" that is not made of cold, hard gold, but of warm, tender affection.—T. N. Pappas, Memphis, Tenn.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Realism

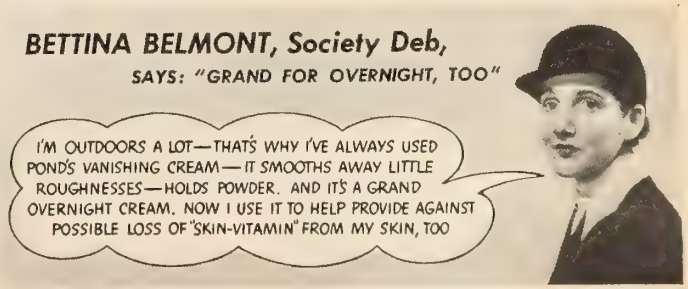
I went to the show the other night to enjoy a pleasant evening. Did I say pleasant? Pardon me, I meant unpleasant. I entered the show with a good bar of candy, the usher found me a comfortable seat, and I relaxed. After a hectic day catering to the whims of fussy customers, I had, at last, found complete relaxation. But just a minute—wasn't that my handsome Robert Young dying up there on the screen. Oh well, Robert Taylor and Margaret Sullavan were the stars and they were still alive. The show continued. The end came. Alas, fatal climax, and Maggie was drooping nobly out of the picture. The show was finished. I sauntered homeward. Happy? No! Were any of the others in the audience. No!

We insignificant proletariats work all day in the humid heat of city buildings, in crowded department stores, everywhere. We, in this category must live in dreams with our heads in the clouds to live through

WRITE A LETTER—
WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.



Petal Smooth Skin MAKES A HIT EVERY TIME

..NOW SMOOTH IN EXTRA "SKIN-VITAMIN," TOO!*

Now Pond's Vanishing Cream supplies extra beauty care. It contains Vitamin A, the "skin-vitamin." When skin lacks this necessary vitamin, it becomes rough and dry. When "skin-vitamin" is restored, it helps skin become smooth again. Now every time you use Pond's, you are smoothing some of this necessary vitamin into your skin! Same jars. Same labels. Same prices.

BETTINA BELMONT, Society Deb, SAYS: "GRAND FOR OVERNIGHT, TOO"

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

*Statements concerning the effects of the "skin-vitamin" applied to the skin are based upon medical literature and tests on the skin of animals following an accepted laboratory method.

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N.Y. Time, N.B.C.

New Under-arm
Cream Deodorant
safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses—does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration.
4. A pure white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering, for being Harmless to Fabrics.

TEN MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold. Try a jar today!

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS
(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

BECOME AN EXPERT
ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $2,000 to $10,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 17,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A.'s, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays."

LaSalle Extension University. Dept. 10318-H, Chicago
A Correspondence Institution

Nearly Two Million jars of this New all-purpose creme already have been sold thru Department, Drug, Ten Cent Stores, and Beauty Shops. . . .

DUART
CREME OF MILK CREME
CONTAINS MILK-OILS BLENDED WITH OTHER OILS

these days of depression. We are not all intelligentsia acquainted with the classic romances of the centuries, nor do we find consolation in the beauty of Milton's and Wordsworth's works. Ours is a dull existence but for the Cinderella stories that flash on the screen. We walk home from a theatre completely ecstatic in the thought that what has happened to Joan Crawford in that film might happen to us, and so we starved romanticists pray and live.

A show like "Three Comrades," where the protagonist has been dealt an unkindly blow from life—this is wrong. We who attend the shows may not need jobs, but we do need dreams. What America needs today is not the proverbial good five-cent cigar, but more fairy tales from Hollywood with the popular "they lived happily ever after" ending.—V. Kougias, New Bedford, Mass.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Then, Again—

Let us have more pictures like "Three Comrades." The superior acting, the touching story, the excellent photography all help to create one of the most human and pathetic stories of the year. Three cheers to Miss Sullavan for her perfect portrayal of the tragic wife of one of the comrades.

I, for one, hope that pictures produced in the future will measure up to the standard set by "Three Comrades".—B. Wellmann, Sparks, Nev.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Teen-age Stars

A few years ago, child stars faced the future with dread because of the abrupt endings which had always come to the careers of child stars when they reached the teen-age. And for what reason? No one seems to know—unless some past movie-mogul decided that they would not appeal to the public as they passed through adolescence.

Lucky for Rooney, Durbin, etc., and lucky for the movie-goers that Hollywood has at last allowed these stars to stay on the screen during the transition from child to adult. What a world of entertainment has been found for the movie-going public.

What would the screen be without Judy Garland, Freddy Bartholomew and the afore-mentioned Durbin and Rooney? Look what a come-back Jackie Cooper has made since "Boy of the Streets!"

I for one, am happy that Hollywood has finally discovered this new field of entertainment for us to enjoy. I am sure there are many others who are with me on that. —J. C. Treuden, Milwaukee, Wis.

$1.00 Prize Poem
To Wallace Beery

You haven't got glamor
Nor "looks" (It's the truth).
You haven't a figure,
You haven't got youth.
But, boy, can you act?
You're the best of the lot,
What any part calls for
Is just what you've got.

Your grin brings a laugh
Or it makes the tears come.
You bleary-eyed, no-account,
Lovable bum.
Years come and years go,
New stars rise and fall
But still you continue
"The Champ" of them all.

—L. P. Roberts, Salt Lake City, Utah.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 66)

Hearts and Flowers: Last month's new romance involving George Brent and Merle Oberon is still in full bloom, with indications that it will continue. And now the newest twosome around town is Tyrone Power and Annabella. He squired her to the "Marie Antoinette" première, and they've been out together several times since.

●

Joan Bennett is taking singing lessons from Al Siegel, who once coached Ethel Merman and Gertrude Niesen. So far no one knows whether she plans to sing the blues in some future film or whether, à la Joan Crawford, she hopes one day to be an opera singer. If this sort of thing keeps on, some of the opera stars now in pictures will have to reverse the process—and spend some time learning to act.

●

The other day we ran across a list of the Big Ten Western Stars—a poll taken by motion picture exhibitors—which names the top ten cowboy stars in the order of their popularity with the men who sell the tickets. The list, according to their ranking, is: Gene Autry, Bill Boyd, Buck Jones, Dick Foran, George O'Brien, Tex Ritter, Bob Steele, The Three Mesquiteers, Charles Starrett and Ken Maynard.

●

Unknowns in Hollywood We'd Hate to Be: The guy who fired Deanna Durbin because she had no future. . . . The man who mixes the cement the celebrities plant their footprints in at Grauman's Chinese. . . . The Ritz sisters, if any. . . . Sigrid Gurie's ex-husband. . . . The Count di Frasso.

●

Lionel Stander lives in style with a colored maid and man to serve him in his Hollywood apartment. The colored maid and man also live in style, she wearing evening dresses with aprons tied on around the house and the boy wearing golf knickers and Lionel's cast-off sweaters.

●

When Tyrone Power was doing the Little Theatre circuit around here several years ago, before he broke into pictures, he made a lot of friends. Some of them are now at the University of California at Los Angeles, where they are members of Delta Key, men's dramatic society. Tyrone hasn't forgotten his old friendships, for he belongs to the society, attends as many meetings as possible, and helps sponsor their shows. All of which is unusual in Hollywood, where old friends generally become former friends.

●

Winning the Academy Award may have added to his prestige in other locales, but out in San Fernando Valley, Spencer Tracy has always rated tops with the press. The tip-off is that the drama editor of the "San Fernando News" is a young journalist named John Tracy, who is Spence's son. (Continued on page 114)

HE WHO GOT SLAPPED

(Continued from page 41)

success and lets that success speak for itself. He wears a coat of many colors and wears it modestly. "Jekyll and Hyde," "Death Takes a Holiday," "Anthony Adverse," "A Star Is Born," "The Buccaneers," "Nothing Sacred"—he weaves the splendid stripes of his versatility into a pattern of colors which do not fade.

So many successes might have made for spoiling. But no. When his dream took a floppo he and Florence and Director John Cromwell took page ads in various newspapers and in Time magazine. And that little cartoon, with one aerialist figure catapulting to the ground, the single caption, "Ooops—sorry!" signed Florence Eldridge, Fredric March and John Cromwell did more to win admiration for Freddie et al than even a year's run on Broadway could have done.

So many letters came to them after that gallant gesture that they could not possibly answer them all. So, Freddie told me, they had black bordered cards printed, mourning cards, bearing some such inscription as "Florence and Fredric March wish to express appreciation for your sympathy"—and that was that. The Marches stole a march on admiration. And failure was success.

He could have made sensational copy of his illness. He could have laid the blame for the play's failure to the fact that he was, on that stage, nearer to death than to the footlights. For when Freddie walked onto the stage that opening night he was the sickest man outside any hospital. He had, in fact, just come out of a hospital—and many days too soon. But he didn't make capital of it. He didn't use it as an alibi. He told me "people were paying their money to see an actor, not a clinical exhibit of hemolytic streptococcus."

If you will check on hemolytic strep you will realize that Freddie was taking a holiday with Death.

YES, folks, hand it to the contenders who can take the count of nine, get up, a grin on their faces and go after it again. And that is exactly what Florence and Freddie intend to do, go after it again. Every year they will return to New York, to do a play, no matter how long it takes before the critics bring laurels instead of thorns.

Freddie and Florence and I were sitting in the green Venetian-blind-shaded living-room of their French Provincial house in Holmby Hills. When I had first come in, at tea-time, I'd heard the tentative tinkling of piano keys. A child's hand, I'd thought, practising the good old scales. But no. For presently Florence had appeared from the next room, greeted me with a sheepish smile and said, "I was practising. Penny and I are taking piano lessons."

Freddie had come in at that moment (from the dentist) and said, as he pulled Florence onto his lap, "D'you know why Florence has gone back to practising scales? Because our young daughter said to her the other day 'Mommie, when I grow up I'm going to be the kind of a Mommie who can play the piano for her little girl!' Florence couldn't bear the implicit reproach in this remark, so she has started taking pianny lessons again. Soon now we will be able to gather around the piano, Penny, Tony and I singing 'Old Black Joe' and 'Oh, Susannah!' while Mommie plays for us."

"And don't think we won't," laughed Florence. "Now I am going to take a nap. Unhand me, villain. But don't say anything interesting until I get out of the room. I might not be able to tear myself away." And she fled.

Freddie called after her, "Hold up the prayers until I come upstairs, huh?" He explained to me, "I always have to hear the kids say their prayers. I've cut many a picture scene short so I'd get home in time. But now that the babies and Florence have all gone to bed, as it were, I'll tell you what little Fredric has learned since they buried him.

"You asked whether Hollywood spoils us, softens us with too much easy success. I don't think so. Because the minute you get out of Hollywood, try some other medium, you are face to face with a startling fact: They resent us. The instant we step off the screen they say, 'I dare you!' and 'Who the hell do you think you are?' So if you've been thinking that you were pretty much the tops you are immediately and ferociously disabused of that pretty notion.

MARCHAND'S tonight NEW GLAMOUR tomorrow!

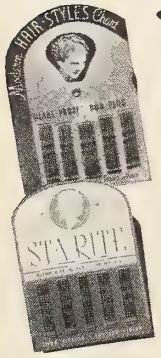
BEFORE Mary X. discovered Marchand's—her hair was dull, drab and mousey looking which, contrasting against her light complexion, did much to age and destroy her beauty and charm.

AFTER Mary X. used Marchand's—Note the blonde highlights that blend into perfect color harmony with her fair skin and light eyes. Now she is younger looking and more glamorous.

MARCHAND'S GOLDEN HAIR WASH



★ 60% OF ALL WOMEN WERE BORN BLONDE ★

MAKE YOUR HAIRDRESS
More Alluring

Use

STA-RITE
Blend-Rite BOB PINS
They Blend in!

Ugly, conspicuous bob pins, like a run in your stocking, spoil everything. Don't take a chance. Choose Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins. They blend softly with your lovely hair—give it new allure—added charm. Smoothly finished on the inside, Blend-Rites slide in easily. "Tension-Tite" they hold the hair securely—yet secretly. Four different colors. Insist on Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins. Sold everywhere. Large card 10¢.

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

my FEET ITCHED so bad I could... SCREAM!

I got relief from ATHLETE'S FOOT with HAPPEE FOOT BALM

Greaseless, pure white antiseptic cream.

10¢ SIZE AT 10¢ STORES . . .
FAMILY SIZE AT DRUG STORES

GLUE THINGS!

Wood, Paper
Leather
Celluloid
Plywood
Porcelain
Tile, Glass
China

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores

BOUGHT BY MILLIONS EVERYWHERE

BE A NURSE

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates, 39th yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2310, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____

"I realize now that success in Hollywood doesn't mean success anywhere else, in any other medium. Quite the contrary. Hollywood handicaps you. It's a funny thing, too, when you think of the fan letters we all get, the autograph seekers, the seemingly irrefutable evidence that we are gelatine gods of heroic proportions. It's a funny thing to find that god, you thought you were, torn down from his pedestal and trampled in the mud.

"They resent us," said Freddie, his dark eyes still slightly incredulous, "especially in the big cities. Of course in the cities, even in New York, the theatre balconies are usually filled with fans who want to see a movie actor in the flesh. But with the orchestra, the intelligentsia, for want of a better word, it's not so easy.

"You can't blame them. You can't blame a writer getting, say, fifty dollars a week for stuff that it takes brains to do, looking at a movie actor fresh out of Hollywood, and saying, 'Who does that smart guy think he is? Maybe he does make a lot of dough in Hollywood, but he needn't think that means he will make the grade with us.'"

"The kind of criticism we got," said Freddie, completely without rancor, "proved to us that we were facing a complex problem. The critics said that I 'roistered about' in the play so as to appeal to my fan audience. They then said that I 'dragged in' Addison and Steele to demonstrate to the intelligentsia how intellectual I can be. When I wore a wig, as I did in the play, the fans didn't like it. When, in one scene, I tried the experiment of taking the wig off and appearing as I am, the fans cheered, but those in the orchestra raised slightly scornful eyebrows. 'Showing off, eh?' they seemed to say. When I'd stop and sign autographs in New York, part of the crowd would be muttering, 'Doing your movie actor stuff for us, are you?' When I ducked out of back doors to avoid signing autographs, John Public said that I was ritzing him. Either way, I was wrong.

"It's a funny prejudice, because it isn't consistent with the reactions we get from our screen work. Before I did the play I didn't know that this prejudice existed. Now I know what I've got to fight.

"We can do fine things in the theatre, we who come from Hollywood. But I realize now that it will take much longer than if we did not come from Hollywood. That is what I meant when I said that success can be failure. For I have learned that Hollywood success, the most sensational kind in the world, can be failure elsewhere. Picture people are resented. That's one of the lessons I've learned."

I said, "Did it disillusion you?"

"In a way," admitted Freddie, with the customary March candor. "Not because they panned the play, or me, or Florence (though they were kinder to her) or John Cromwell who directed us. It wasn't a very good play, granted. It was a mistake to do a costume play. But it was the way they panned us. For instance," laughed Freddie, "they said that Cromwell had directed Dietrich's legs, Temple's curls, Gable's ears, Mae West's figure, and was now directing the Marches! That kind of thing. Funny, I know, but the barbs were certainly poisoned.

BUT what I mean is that, while they were justified in panning the play, they might have given us credit for loving the theatre. They might have recognized that we do love the theatre or we wouldn't have put our own money into a play.

"People say to me, 'Why do you want to go back to the theatre? Why don't you stay in Hollywood? Why aren't you satisfied where you are?'

"I can only answer by saying, 'Because I love the theatre.' We also enjoy being in New York for part of each year. We love the music we hear there. We love the people there. We like the children to go to an Eastern school. Besides, I get tired of seeing myself on the screen too often. I should think that other people would get tired too. I feel that two pictures a year are enough. I am free lancing, you know. I don't even have commitments ahead. Two pictures a year ought to be the solution.

"I'm doing 'There Goes My Heart' now. The studio wired me about it when we were East. I liked the story. I liked the idea of being directed by Norman McLeod who did 'Topper' and 'Merrily We Live.' I liked the idea of working again with Carole Lombard, as was originally planned. That plan didn't work out and now Virginia Bruce and I are playing together. I like that, too.

Five pretty gals from "Girls' School." Left to right, Martha O'Driscoll, Peggy Moran, Marjorie Deane, Marjorie Lord and Jean Lucius.

"I am not 'tired of Hollywood,' as I read in the papers. I am not planning to sell our home here so that we can shake the last mote of Hollywood dust from our feet. We may sell this house so that we can buy a ranch in the San Fernando Valley, because we do intend to spend part of each year in the East, to do a play there whenever possible. Such being the plan, we feel that it would be better for the children to live on a ranch in the summers, a place where they can have cows and pigs and things.

"I want to do something different now and then. I want Florence to have her job again. But wanting the theatre has nothing to do with a dislike of Hollywood. The two have nothing in common. I believe that the slogan "Stage versus Screen" has been misleading. It isn't Stage versus Screen. It is Stage and Screen. The two are diametrically opposed. They have nothing in common except some of the actors. The Rocky Mountains divides them geographically. Great mountains and chasms divide them spiritually, too, and physically.

HOLLYWOOD is kinder than Broadway," said Freddie. "I'll certainly say that for it. Out here we receive a Helen Hayes, a Katharine Cornell with open arms. We don't say, 'Who the hell does she think she is?'"

"I know," I said. "Look what they did to Walter Huston in New York, to Leslie Howard, Katharine Hepburn. And Miriam Hopkins wasn't exactly acclaimed as a new Bernhardt."

"The inference seems to be," said Freddie, "that if you 'come from' Hollywood nothing but Hollywood can be expected of you. But great scott, Huston isn't originally a screen actor. He is of and from the theatre. Ditto, Leslie Howard. And if you want screen actors who have scored on Broadway look at Frances Farmer, Zorina, Paul Lukas, all having made very definite hits on the New York stage. It can be done. But Hollywood doesn't pave the way for you."

The shades of night were falling fast. Over our heads came the suggestive patter of little feet. Soon, now, Penny and Tony would be saying their prayers, Mommie's sleek head bowed on one side of the bed, Freddie's dark head on the other. Freddie offered to drive me home. On the way out he paused at the hall table to show me the contents of some little packages.

"Next week," he explained, "we celebrate our eleventh wedding anniversary. Among other things I always give Florence a charm for her bracelet. Each charm is supposed to represent one of my pictures. For instance, for 'The Royal Family' I gave her a tiny gold English crown. For 'The Buccaneer' a tiny gold treasure chest. When I made 'A Star Is Born' I couldn't think of anything better than a miniature gold trailer, so I got that. For 'Nothing Sacred' well, I'd rather not tell you what I got for that! This is for 'There Goes My Heart.'" Freddie held up a tiny gold heart with running legs spouting from it, the inscription on it, "Home, James." "Then," he said, "I just bought these squirrelly things." And he spread out before me an array of ornate anniversary cards bearing such inscriptions as "Anniversary Congratulations To A Mighty Fine Couple," and "Good Wishes To You On Your Golden Anniversary."

"It's a lot of fun," laughed Freddie. "It's all a lot of fun—marriage and kids, home and books, music and games and people. Hollywood, the theatre, a lollipop now and then for being good—even a spanking where it hurts the most."

Hi, ranger! In "The Lady and the Cowboy" Gary Cooper returns at last to the type of role which first brought him fame.

WATCH included FREE of any extra charge with every ring ordered during SALE and paid for promptly on our easy two monthly $2 payment plan (total only $4). YOU PAY NOTHING EXTRA for the Watch! Wear 10 days ON APPROVAL! Send NO Money with order! We trust you. Mail coupon now. We pay postage. Your package comes at once by return mail.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO., Dept. T-3210, Newton, Mass.
Rush offer. ☐ Ladies' Model ☐ Men's Model
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____

Sensational FREE Offer!

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous REJUVIA Lipsticks "None Better Made" FREE...each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

REJUVIA LIPSTICK

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. S3, 116 W. 14th ST., N.Y.C.
Send me 3 trial size REJUVIA Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs (15c in Canada).
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
ONLY 10¢ AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

SHE COULDN'T SAY "NO"

(Continued from page 47)

the mañana atmosphere of California."

Then her New York agent's western office suggested that Gale see the director about playing the evil wife in "Anthony Adverse." All that is history now. Gale saw the director, got the rôle, and won the Academy Award on her very excellent performance.

After that Hollywood was a paper-shell nut for Gale Sondergaard to crack. But the road to fame had not always been rose strewn. At the beginning Gale's path was rough and rocky. Her first disappointment came when she tried out for the lead in "A Thousand Years Ago" in high school, only to lose it to a girl who was the leading man's sweetheart. But she appeared in other school plays, went on to a dramatic school, and soon felt that she was ready for the theatre.

TO a Minneapolis fledgling Chicago seemed the ideal metropolis in which to launch a theatrical career. But during three months of stage door knocking Gale heard "no" said a dozen different ways. It was during those days that she determined to accept anything she was offered in the theatre. Never would she turn down a part, even if it was the most miserable walk-on.

"Finally," says Gale, "I heard about a shoe-string troupe, Chautauqua circuit, you know, that did plays wherever there was a shelter—even under canvas. There was no salary attached to the undertaking, just coffee and cakes. But it was experience! When we stranded on the coast I hooked up with a Shakespearean repertory company, just about a step above the tent show. I played everything from Desdemona to all three witches in 'Macbeth'."

A year in stock with Jessie Bonstelle prepared Gale for the lead in "Strange Interlude" with the Guild's touring company. Following this her talents were employed in various strays which for one reason or another folded up almost as soon as they opened.

The only advice Miss Sondergaard would venture to stage and movie-struck youth is this: get a job in the theatre anywhere, doing anything, from scene-shifting to off-stage noises. Some day someone will fail to appear and you'll get your chance. If you're good you'll go on finding more important things, gradually working up to real parts. But you will require lots of stamina, she warns. You will need a stout order of perseverence, and luck too.

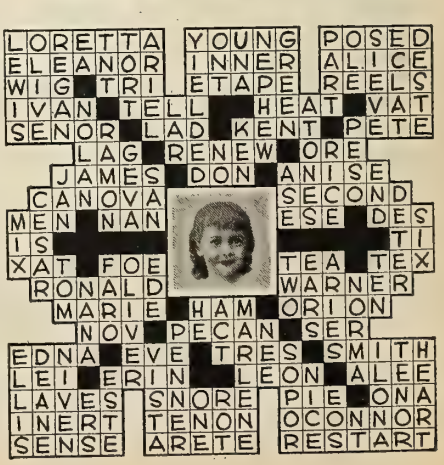
While breaking into the theatre Gale wrote home for money only once, she told me proudly. Between engagements in New York she served as a typist, sold hats in a department store, and acted as receptionist in an advertising agency. And in all her buffeting to and fro from casting office to stage door and back to agent, seeking parts or bits or even walk-ons, she never encountered the sinister figure, so often portrayed in fiction, who wanted her to barter her soul for a big part.

In making the transition from stage to screen many actors have registered complaints about the difficulty of stepping into a scene "cold" and doing it justice, acting the climax first, perhaps, and then performing such piecemeal histrionics as the screen requires.

"These things don't bother me at all," said Gale. "When I am assigned a part, the first thing I do is to read the whole script in order to determine just what sort of a person I'm supposed to be in relation to the other people in the story. Then I plan the whole part in my mind, scene by scene. When I'm through laying the groundwork I have it so definitely set that when I'm called on to do any part of it, it all seems natural and easy.

"After all, rehearsals on the stage amount to the same thing. You go over and over the play until you have it pat. It would be simple to play any scene by itself. Acting is not inspiration, it's technique. You need experience, intelligence and an overwhelming desire to get the most you can out of what the author has given you."

Sondergaard looks highly explosive, but she claims that her only concession to temperament is when a carefully rehearsed scene goes askew before the cameras. When lights flicker, sound falters, film buckles or some evil spirit causes her to blow up in her lines, then Gale explodes dramatically. She thinks that in such cases temper is a very good safety valve for the nerves.



She talks in a positive manner, expressing herself intelligently and at the same time forcefully, without recourse to slang or even polite profanity. She permits herself no half-baked sentences, no false starts ending in the air. It is apparent that before Gale ventures a statement she has formulated it in her mind, decided upon a complete opinion.

"I've been lucky in appearing in only grade A productions that haven't been hurried or skimped in any way," she said. "Then, too, I've been fortunate in my directors. Frank Lloyd is a fine scholar. Mervyn Leroy is original and dynamic. Dieterle is one of the most artistic souls in Hollywood, a careful, painstaking worker, as conscientious as a monk. And Sam Wood is another artist."

Gale Sondergaard is arresting in her poise, intense in her reactions. She lives at high tension. Her enthusiasm is contagious. And when she sets her mind on anything she has the force to sweep you along with her. Miss Sondergaard is sold on California, and pictures, and has no thought of returning to Broadway. She has a quiet, pleasant home, away from the harried social rush, and she is content.

Gale has hit her stride, and enjoys her work. It's a demanding medium, the screen, but a challenging one. To Gale Sondergaard each part is a fascinating new problem. She doesn't know what her next picture-problem will be, but she's eager to start solving it!

Solution to Puzzle on Page 74

COOL WEATHER BEAUTY FORECAST

(Continued from page 49)

fure (worn by Mrs. Gotrocks) that would take a million hairpins and two hours' time to arrange, and stick to the becoming bob, swirled across the back and just one flat curl here and here, please. You've got something there when you stick to your exercises and eat sensibly, and anoint your face and neck with tissue cream at night, when the first cold winds come, and give your nails a thorough manicure once a week and two minutes' attention every day. And what else can you do to get the most fun out of life this winter? Let's see.

A lot of clothes chatter is going to creep into this opus, but never mind. It's all part of the good looks game, isn't it? In a way, fall can make one feel awfully poor. If you haven't a generous clothes budget, the annual problem of what to do about good looking cold weather attire can be depressing. But again, take cheer, for cold weather clothes are lots easier to wear, much kinder to figure faults than chiffons, shorts and bathing suits.

None of us can afford such luxury as the ermine pelts which wrap up Danielle Darrieux on page forty-nine. Said picture was chosen purely because it was so pretty, girls, and not to put ideas into anybody's head. But lapin can be flattering as ermine, and kidskin, pony and a dozen of what I call the "make believe" furs are smart, warm and they wear well.

While we're on the subject, don't discard or give to the poor any small pieces of good fur. Have yourself a tippet made, or put a strip of fur on a velvet toque type of hat, or band the sleeves of a dark velvet afternoon dress or hostess gown with it. Have a muff, or even cuffs of fur on a good looking pair of gauntlet gloves.

A perennially clever idea when it comes to that awfully expensive item, the winter coat, is to get a plain, collarless affair—very plain but meticulously fitted, preferably black. Then dress it up with various tricks as long as your money holds out. Gay home-spun scarves. Vivid silk ones. Buy one and a half yards of that very wide, quite expensive silk ribbon which you always see on display on the first floors of department stores and which nobody ever seems to be buying. Hand-roll or fringe the ends and tie it in one loop or in Ascot fashion.

Then, other times, use the made-over fur tippet or your good fur piece, if you're lucky enough to own one. Perhaps there are enough good pieces in that old fur coat to make a cape to wear over the plain, good coat. But remember, no fur is better than cheap fur. If you can't squeeze out enough cash for something good, stick to gay silk and wool dresser-uppers.

Make your clever brains and the wonderful art of taking pains compensate for a limited amount of dough.

Still more about clothes is coming, I fear me, but let me follow up my little tip on coats with a sound, sensible beauty tip: Keep warm enough. "Huh," says you, "what's that got to do with beauty?" Puh-lenty. Young things the world over sacrifice warmth to pride. Doncha do it. And you needn't bundle up in red flannels as they did in grandma's day, either. But you can wear woolen pants. And take vitamin pills if you suffer from the cold. And wear those extra feet under your stockings if your feet get cold. Furthermore, wear lisle or silk and wool stockings for daytime—they're smart and save the silk stocking bill. And keep up your pep and coax roses into your cheeks by making sure there's enough iron and protein in your diet.

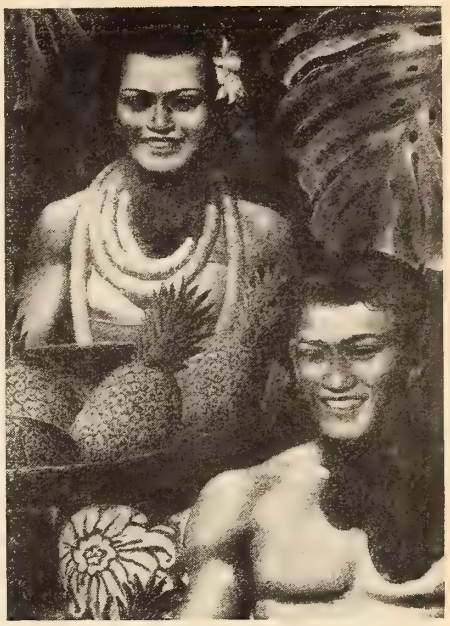
FOR example, if you include the following items in each day's diet, you're safe on the iron and protein side. A medium serving of a green vegetable—the canned are as good as the fresh. A medium serving of meat. One egg. Two slices of wholewheat bread (toasted very crisp for the overweights). Four ounces (about half a water glass) of tomato juice or orange juice. And, for the underweight, a dish of cooked cereal.

Stewed prunes and stewed apricots are dandy iron-givers, too. Aside from the cereal, the above foods should be in the average overweight's diet, while the underweights should tuck in, also, milk, cream, butter, cheese, and enough sugar to make things taste good, as well as light, nourishing desserts.

Another cold weather beauty tip—about hands, which should be a mark of beauty and often are not. Do your hands get red? Make you self-conscious? Enough daily exercise will improve your circulation and help check the coldness and redness of hands. Don't wear tight gloves or tight sleeves. And give your hands lavish slatherings of cream.

By the way, one of the old-fashioned remedies which is supposed to be so fine, and which really isn't much good at all, is rose water and glycerin for the hands and skin generally. It does feel good, but if your skin is badly roughened and reddened, it won't help. You need a rich, oily cream. Do your hands up in the cream at night and wear a pair of old fabric gloves to bed.

And if, after doing all these things, your hands get red from nervousness just when you want to look your best, try the stunt of holding them up—rest your elbows on something and hold the hands up for a while. It helps. I used to suffer from this embarrassing business when I was a young thing. And somebody told me about that.



And then, to add a little zest and zip to life for a small financial outlay, have all the shades of nail polish on the market. Change your nail polish often. The advertisements, dished up by experts, tell you just exactly as well as I could, probably better, what shades look best with what colors. Have all those luscious shades, from the very palest, thru the shrimps and the dusty roses, on to the deep reds, and have fun keeping your nails in the most exquisitely groomed manner all winter.

To add further zest and zip to life and to Virginia Bruce and hubby, J. Walter Ruben, said they'd think it over, but the cameraman went ahead and clicked, regardless.

PINEAPPLE HARVEST Lithograph by ROBERT RIGGS

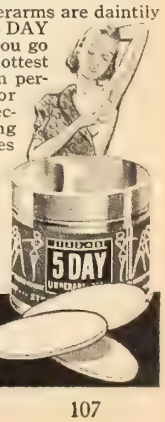
Truly Hawaiian

Gather pleasure in full measure with every glass of fragrant, appetizing Dole Pineapple Juice from Hawaii. Pure—unsweetened—natural!

Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., also packers of Dole Pineapple "Gems," Sliced, Crushed, Tidbits, and the new "Royal Spears." Honolulu, Hawaii, U.S.A. Sales Offices: San Francisco.

NURSING MOTHERS

Consult your doctor regularly. Ask about Hygeia Nipples and Bottles. Nipple, breast-shaped, easily inverted and thoroughly cleaned. Patented tab keeps nipple germ-free. New inside valve prevents collapse.



HYGEIA NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE

SAFEST because easiest to clean

NEW UNDERARM PADS STOP PERSPIRATION

Prevent Wet Underarms and Odor

Now it's easy to make sure underarms are daintily dry and sweet. Simply whisk a 5 DAY pad over both underarms and you go to office, parties or anywhere on hottest days without offensive underarm perspiration odor, wet armpits, or stained dress sleeves. Often effective 5 days or more, depending upon the individual. Easy on clothes too. You see that for yourself . . . the saturated cloth pads are not harmed by the mild, gentle lotion. Large jar, 55c. Toilet goods counters or direct postpaid. Associated Distributors, Inc. 11 East Hubbard Street, Dept. MM-1, Chicago, Illinois.

5 DAY UNDERARM PADS

● Of course, we don't claim that you'll do the Highland Fling, but—

If you don't vote FEEN-A-MINT tops in easy, pleasant relief from constipation's headaches, sourness, and loginess, it won't cost you a single penny. Already millions of users, of all ages, praise this delicious chewing gum way to relieve constipation. It's modern. It's different. It's easy. And so effective. Just imagine—simply by chewing this marvelous-tasting gum you enjoy all its splendid benefits. That's why users say: "Why, it seems like magic!" FEEN-A-MINT is so easy and pleasant you'll wonder why you didn't try it sooner. Get FEEN-A-MINT today!

FEEN-A-MINT

Tastes like your favorite chewing gum!

BEST for DANDRUFF

Lucky Tiger

Good Housekeeping Bureau

Gives Quick Action

QUICK-action is what you want on dandruff, itching scalp and resulting hair loss. Try Lucky Tiger and get it. Costs little at druggists, barbers or 10¢ stores.

Bad days

Reduce the pain
Save your nerves
No narcotics

Salicon TABLETS

NEVER OFFEND!
BE "SURE" OF YOUR BREATH

Use "Sure" the amazing new breath purifier that helps in romance, social contacts, business. Removes offensive breath odors from onions, garlic, tobacco, cocktails, etc. Just use one drop on the tongue and your breath will be sweet. Also removes odors from hands. Fits purse or pocket—sold everywhere on money-back guarantee.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

GET YOURS FREE. WRITE SURE LABORATORIES
Dept. M3-847 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

THERE IS ONLY ONE Sure

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

BREATH PURIFIER

ONE DROP DOES THE TRICK!
10¢
WEEK'S SUPPLY

On Sale at Good 10¢ Stores

win your share of laurels for beauty and chic, even though you can't dash out and buy everything you want, learn to be an individualist—to be different. This takes taste and time and study, sure, or you may end up merely being odd or arty or freakish. But I was mulling over in the mind about all these Up hairdos and thinking, dawgunnit, if the good old long bob wasn't about the easiest, most becoming affair to almost everybody. Not the page boy, dear no. That was just extreme enough for us all to get a little tired of it.

But take Connie Bennett, now. She may have altered her disposition lately, but nobody has been able to change her hair style. Connie knows she looks best with a long bob, because she has a wide jaw—very character-ful and all that, but not the kind of jaw to top with a high coiffure. Hers is a little overlong for everyday folks, but you could take off an inch or maybe a little more than that and have your practical long bob this winter, if such a style is the most becoming to you.

Or, if you're real smart, get a haircut and a permanent which can be either up or down, as suits the occasion. If you have access to a good hair artist, this is a fine solution of the hair problem. Do remember, though, when it is down, it mustn't be too much becurled and flopping around. Just soft and flattering. And don't let it get too thick and bunchy. Make it shine, every hair of it, with plenty of brushwork.

A word about hats here. They tell me hats are going to be more sensible. Swell. But please don't rush out and buy one of the first fall or winter models. I'll tell you why. Manufacturers purposely put "freaks" on the market for the early trade. These freaks are designed to trip the girl who simply can't wait to throw her money away on something new.

The classic example of this was the Eugenie hat which, you'll remember, flooded the market in late summer. By Labor Day, nobody who was anybody would be caught dead in one. If you must have a new bonnet right away, buy a conservative felt sports model and wait a good solid month before you waste your allowance or salary on anything else.

ONE more word about clothes, and then I'll stick to my beauty business. How are you going to get nice winter dresses for a reasonable sum when, as I say, the shops and advertisements are going to be full of pitfalls, cheap copies of really beautiful original models which cost plenty and which can't be copied for the average trade. These are skimpy as to seam, shoddy as to material, with stitching that would be all right on a tent and fasteners that fall off the minute you look at them.

Yuh gotta learn to be your own fashion expert. Learn to know values. (1) Look for a label with a nationally advertised name on it. (2) On sheer materials, look for French seams or bound seams. On heavy materials, look for pinked seams. (3) If you have no access to good stores, get a couple of good fashion magazines and go thru the ads. You'll see a dress you like—simple, but nice, with a little touch of detail that pleases you. Very often, at the bottom of the page, you'll find a list of stores which carry this model. Order by size from the store in the city nearest to you.

(4) It is awfully hard to make a good choice sometimes. You can't find what you want for the money, or some smart sales gal gets hold of you and you find yourself with some awful thing, and you've simply got to wear it. Well, try cutting pictures out of magazines. If you like the two piece outfit Phyllis Brooks has on, for example, snip it out and go off on a shopping tour until you find its near-duplicate. (Don't wear a chin strap on ye hat, by the way, unless you're as pretty as Phyllis, and you really should be under twenty-two.)

(5) Don't wear knits if you're heavy in any spot, and particularly if you're large in the buzzom. Remember in buying sweaters and knit goods generally that it's well to buy a size larger than you usually wear. If you're a big girl, several sizes larger. I wear an eighteen—I buy sweaters size forty and do I have a time finding them!

(6) When it comes to formal and semi-formal things, be uffly, uffly careful. You'll be tempted by the dream dresses, yards and yards of skirt, daring decolletages, and so on. Or the very, very sculptured, slinky numbers. Maybe you will be able to find a good buy in one of these more glamorous styles. If so, fine. But if not, remember that the simple, well fitted black dinner dress can't be beat and can be found for a rizzonable sum. Remember also that the simple evening gown, in a color that does the most for you, won't bore you and everybody else if you have to wear it more than once.

SINCE styles remain pretty form-fitting, it will make you all happier if your figures are better than passable. Concentrate on the waistline. The firm waistline is the mark of youth. You "older" girls and you women who no longer count the birthdays—try this limberer and slimmer-down of waistlines: sit on the floor, your legs straight out, feet about ten inches apart. Twist your body to the left and bend over as far as you can toward the floor. Up, turn to the right and bend again. It isn't strenuous and you can do it as many times as you like right at the start. As you gain proficiency, twist your body more and more, without letting hip or leg up off the floor. It will do the trick.

It's so much easier to exercise in cold weather—why don't you start today and really keep it up faithfully this time? Sometimes a cute special costume will help you get into the proper frame of mind. Or how about going to a gym? Or if there just ain't any gym, get a girl friend to do exercises with you every day. See how much fun it is for Ann Rutherford and Virginia Grey when they do their daily dozen together. Anyhoo, exercise—the fat to get slim, the thin to relax, the good figures to keep their beauty.

And now, how about achieving one of those "Grande Toilette" affairs for yourself, in a simple sort of way, for your next important date or party? Sure, you can do it. You may need a little help, but it can be done. It begins with a bath—a really de luxe bath. Perfume, toilet water, one of those delicately scented packages of starch, bath salts, or some of that essence that bubbles and foams and makes you feel so very, very something-or-other—put one or the other of these into your tub. Cleanse your face and neck first, put tissue cream on it, and then you sit. And sit.

If you have one of those little bath trays, arrange your manicure things on it. If not, the old chair or stool alongside the tub will do. Then putter with your nails, being particularly solicitous of the cuticle. Leave the polish until later. Your hair is tied up in a net or something. When you get darn good and ready, you get up out of the tub. You'll be very careful about drying, giving particular attention to upper arms and elbows, so they'll be soft and alluring. You spray on toilet water. You go and lie down, with pads of cotton soaked in witch hazel or eye bath over your eyes. You relax, with your feet on a pillow to rest them.

In fifteen minutes, get into your foundation, pants, stockings and bra and call someone to come help you. Sister. Mama. Husband—if he's nice about such things. Girl friend. You have a bottle of really good foundation cream in the shade that does the most for your skin. This is going, not only on the face, but on the neck, the arms, and as far down the back and the front as is is going to show. It is going on CORNS Lift OUT!

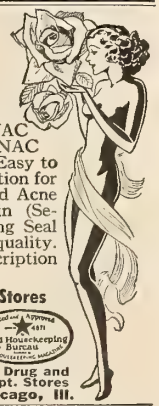
Safe, Sure Instant Relief

Pain stops the instant you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. Shoe pressure on the aching, sensitive spot is ended. New or tight shoes are eased by these soft, soothing, cushioning pads. Used with the separate Medication included in every box, your corns and callouses soon lift out! Medically Safe. Costs but a trifle. Sold everywhere. Sizes for Corns, Callouses, Bunions, Soft Corns between toes. For FREE sample, Corn size, also Dr. Scholl's FOOT Booklet—write Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Chicago, Ill.



Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

There is a Dr. Scholl Remedy, Appliance or Arch Support for Every Foot Trouble

Intimate stories about
Loretta Young
Spencer Tracy
Ginger Rogers
Hedy Lamarr
and many others in November MODERN SCREEN

SKIN

CLEAR, FRESH and SMOOTH

Regain thrilling loveliness. Apply NAC Prescription Cream at night and NAC Prescription Powder during day. Easy to use, NAC is a physician's prescription for the treatment of externally caused Acne Pimples, Rosacea, and Oily Skin (Seborrhea). The Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval is your guarantee of quality. NAC Cream 50c-$1.00. NAC Prescription Powder 55c-$1.00.

Purse Sizes 20c at Ten Cent Stores

NAC

Good Housekeeping Bureau

At Drug and Dept. Stores

11-101 Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill.

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove the hair permanently, privately at home, following directions with ordinary care and skill. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Also used by professionals. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Illustrated Booklet, "How to Remove Superfluous Hair Forever." D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36M, Providence, R. I.

Help Kidneys

Don't Take Drastic Drugs

Your Kidneys contain 9 million tiny tubes or filters which may be endangered by neglect or drastic irritating drugs. Be careful. If functional disorders of the Kidneys or Bladder make you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Backache, Swollen Joints, Excess Acidity, or Burning Passages, don't rely on ordinary medicines. Fight such troubles with the doctor's prescription Cystex. Cystex starts working in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week, and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Siss-tex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co.

smoothly, blended carefully, and when it dries, powder is patted over it. Surplus is dusted away, so that you don't "come off" on somebody's dinner jacket.

Then go on making up as usual, but with particular pains. A bit of cream, vaseline or oil is rubbed into your eyelids to give that glamor look. A bit, too, into your lips before and after the lipstick goes on, for extra sex appeal. Maybe two coats of mascara, with careful brushing with a dry brush afterwards, will do a lot for you.

After you're all dolled up, get away from the mirror and stop fussing, and smoke a cigarette or have a cup of tea, or read a little. Let that make-up "set" in other words. Then go back and look at it carefully and see if you're all right, or have put on too much or too little. Get into your gown and put a towel or something around your shoulders and untie the net from your hair and give it the attention it needs. Don't try any last minute inspirations on the hair. You've had it "done". Now leave it alone, except for a little pushing and softening of the wave, perhaps, and an artful pin here and there. Put a little perfume behind your ears, along your hairline, and in the hollow of your neck—and if your hair is up, in the nape of your neck. Be ready when he calls. Be ready five minutes ahead of time so that you can just sit again and feel all wonderfully clean and dainty and exquisitely coiffed and gowned and groomed. You're going to have a wonderful time tonight.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY

(Continued from page 50)

body claps politely and then forgets it.

But Freddie began on that immortal speech of Portia's, "The quality of mercy is not strained . . ." The gathering, many of them actors of note in Hollywood, sat up at the first few words. Here was no child stringing words together by rote. Beneath the words, they sensed at once an adult understanding of the words as well as the thought.

"It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven . . ." Freddie went on. His voice thickened. And suddenly, in the midst of it, he began to cry! Tears rolled down his cheeks. He couldn't go on. He couldn't finish! There was no kindly applause for him as he hurried to a corner seat and wept. There was a hushed silence, as though every one there had seen and sensed something too deep for superficial applause or chatter. They had realized that here, in the mind of this fourteen-year-old child, lay a fully-developed, ultra-adult understanding of Shakespeare's depth that was beyond the capacity of many a grown-up! In short, Freddie was not reciting words strung together by rote and repetition. He was being Portia in those brief but intensely real moments.

And there, probably, is the fundamental explanation of Freddie's sensational screen success. Other child actors are told what to do and say, and how, and like nice little automatons, they do it. But Freddie is like a grown-up actor. He does it from deep inside.

"On exhibition," Freddie carries this same trait into his off-stage activities. By "on exhibition," I mean those times when Freddie is being interviewed, or is being watched by a group of studio visitors, or even when he's out socially with grown-up people in Hollywood. At those times, Freddie is the pluperfect little English gentleman. He parades a vocabulary and a nicety of diction that makes people marvel and then wonder if he isn't perhaps a con-

with Wigder EYEBROW CONTROL

FOR charm and beauty, it's most important to keep your eyebrows trim and shapely. And it's easy, too. Just "tweeze" away those stray hairs and heavy outlines with Wigder Tweezers — especially constructed with raised shoulders and carefully set jaws for positive grip.

Don't neglect this essential beauty care! Get Wigder Tweezers today at any drug or 10-cent store 10c

ASK for Wigder Tweezers, with the special Lock-Grip that makes eyebrow-grooming quick and agreeable.

Wigder QUALITY COSTS NO MORE
NEWARK NEW JERSEY
NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

DON'T TAKE CHANCES. USE MY PUPPY CAPSULES TO WORM SMALL DOGS

There are 23 tested "Sergeant's" Dog Medicines. Trusted since 1879. Constantly improved. Made of finest drugs. Sold under money-back Guarantee by drug and pet shops. Ask them for a FREE copy of "Sergeant's" Dog Book, or write:

POLK MILLER PRODUCTS CORP.
5010 W. Broad Street • Richmond, Va.

Copr. 1938, Polk Miller Products Corp.

Sergeant's DOG MEDICINES

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS

START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

Men—Women Get ready Immediately

Common education usually Sufficient

Mail Coupon today sure

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. A265, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.

Name.....

Address.....

YOUR CUE TO BEAUTY

Lovely Make-up...always

...with the new POWD'R-BASE stick

Keeps powder and make-up on until removed. No nose or face shine. Non-visible, non-greasy and waterproof. Simple to use; achieves that velvety, flattering complexion.

FLESH-RACHELLE-BRUNETTE-SUNTAN. 10c-25c-50c-$1.

POWDR-BASE

hampden

Hampden, 251 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

CALL ME SIT-TRUE

SITROUX face tissues CLEANSING TISSUES

STRONGER

MORE ABSORBENT

AT 5 AND 10¢ AND BETTER DEPARTMENT STORES

NOW! Beautiful NAILS

AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

So natural they even have half-moons.

NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10 stores

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS

NU-NAIL CO., 4042 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Brush Away GRAY HAIR ...and Look 10 Years Younger

● At home—quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural appearing color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

ceited, insufferable little prig!

When you see him putting on that grown-up act of his, you rather imagine that Freddie must be a boresome little lad, full of his own importance and with a nose turned skyward.

But that's because you're only watching the professional Freddie. Now let me tell you a few stories about the real Freddie, who comes out from behind his grown-up front when all's clear, and who is really a fascinatingly likable kid.

ALL that varnished dignity drops. Even a great deal of his extreme British-ness rubs off. They're trying to preserve it, heaven knows, and they've even gone to the length of hiring an ultra-British teacher to keep him talking in the British fashion. But inevitably, Americanisms have crept into his speech. He can say "scram" and "gimme" and "nuts" with the same explosive effect as Mickey Rooney. Mickey, in fact, is one of his best pals. You can draw your own conclusions.

Even the star-spangled American term "chisel" has become part of his vocabulary. Not only that, but part of his philosophy as well! He demonstrated that to perfection recently. It was on the set between scenes. He was pushing those rubber-tired dollies around, with his stand-in. His aunt Mylli-cent Bartholomew, who is his guardian in America while his father and mother stay in London, called him over.

"Freddie," she said, "here are some very complimentary clippings about your work in 'Lord Jeff.'"

Freddie looked at her. "Thanks, Cissie," he said. That was all. Incidentally, he always calls her Cissie, never "Aunt Mylli-cent." He ran off to resume his play. That was characteristic of him. It's a fact that clippings about himself, word-of-mouth praise, or even the picture's he's made do not interest him. He is bored to death watching himself on the screen. He likes acting, but when he's done he loses interest.

But this time, after a minute's huddle with his stand-in, Freddie came back to his aunt. Something was on his mind.

"Say, Cissie," he began, "about that 'Lord Jeff' thing, now . . ."

"Don't you think it was nice, Freddie?" asked Cissie.

"Uh huh." Then, "But say, look, don't I get anything out of that?"

Cissie's eyebrows went up.

"What should you get, besides the honor?" she asked.

"Well—ah—uh—y'know, I did a lot of hard work in that . . ."

"H'm," said Cissie. She "got it." This was a bit of chiseling.

"Well, do you think a dime would cover it?" she asked.

Freddie's eyes brightened. "Why, yes, that'd be fine," he conceded. Cissie shelled out a dime, and considered the matter closed. In another minute Freddie came back.

"Say, Cissie," he began, "y'know, my stand-in did a lot of hard work on that picture, too!"

"This," protested Cissie, "is blackmail!" Freddie merely grinned a very un-British but colossally American grin. And Cissie shelled out another dime for the youthful stand-in. The two kids, with loud whoops of delight, ran to the studio café and gorged themselves on twenty cents' worth of chocolate bars.

Freddie's salary check is undeniably up in the four-figure-a-week class. (Aunt Cissie, as his guardian, also gets a tidy little fee from the studio.) But all that means nothing at all to Freddie. For Freddie's actual pay each week, cash-in-hand, spendable money, is exactly thirty-five cents!

What's more, he gets it, not in one lump sum each Saturday, but doled out to him by Aunt Cissie at the rate of a nickel a day.

It's hard for even a fourteen-year-old kid to get along on that. So Freddie some days manages to chisel an extra nickel or two. But in this, Aunt Cissie is firm. If he draws ahead like that, she makes it up before the end of the week with a nickel-less day or two. So that each week Freddie gets no more than thirty-five cents for himself, except in a very exceptional case such as the twenty-cent-chiselling on his good picture review.

When Freddie gets to that inevitable age and stage when he's no longer a screen bet, he hopes to be able to go back to England and be a little Lord Fauntleroy grown up.

And going back to England is the one big thing that Freddie is looking forward to. Despite his Americanization, and his delight in many things American, Freddie Bartholomew is a perfect living example of every Briton's unshakable conviction that to be an Englishman is the supreme essence of everything desirable or worth attaining on this earth. No matter where Freddie goes or what he may turn out to be there will always be a part of him that is "forever England."

He hopes to go back to finish his education in English schools. His dad is a British civil service employe; his mother a solid, fundamental English housewife. Maybe Fred will go on in his father's course, and serve his Empire. Maybe he'll continue to be an actor. But certain it is that he'll remain British.

OH, he has grandiose ideas about internationalism. He gets them from reading. Internationalism in this sense: "I think a union of the English-speaking peoples of the world would be a great step toward everlasting world peace," he spouts. He concedes America a reasonable place in this English-speaking Union. It's tremendous, really, to hear this fourteen-year-old youngster talking international politics and economics! But when he's saying things like that, he's more or less putting on his "exhibition" accent and manner.

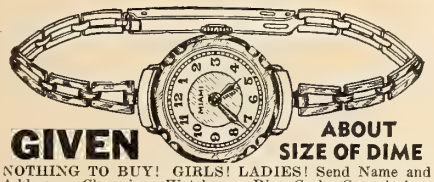
His Aunt Cissie will tell you how, even as a three-year-old, he used to stand erect and salute whenever he was taken past

Janet Chapman grins and romps with her kittens between scenes of "Broadway Musketeers."

don't gamble with body odors—after every bath

use Hush and be Sure

You're sure of personal daintiness for Hours Longer after your bath when you use HUSH. Wise girls find uses for all 3 convenient types:



CREAM—Pure, soothing to skin, harmless to dress fabrics.

LIQUID—Instant, protects 24 hours. Regular, for 1 to 3 days.

POWDER—Ideal for Sanitary Napkins. Keeps feet and shoes fresh.

25c 50c—10c size at 10c counters

GIVEN ABOUT SIZE OF DIME

NOTHING TO BUY! GIRLS! LADIES! Send Name and Address. Charming Watch or Big Cash Commission. Send No Money. Given for SIMPLY GIVING AWAY FREE Big Colored Pictures with our well known White Cloverine Salve, used for burns, chaps, sores, etc., easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with picture FREE) and remitting per catalog. SPECIAL: Choice of 20 gifts for returning only $3. Be first. 43rd year. Write today for order of Salve and Pictures, postage paid.

WILSON CHEM. CO., INC., Dept. 10-19, Tyrone, Pa.

OVERWEIGHT?

NUTRITION CLINIC'S FORMULA REVOLUTIONIZES REDUCING

Not a Drug or Medicine

Here is good news for people who want to reduce without drugs, severe diet or violent exercise. Overweight due to over nutrition can now be safely overcome with the DEXDIET FOOD METHOD, consisting of liberal diet, daily walks and tasty energy-food lozenges to be enjoyed between meals. Has proved easy and effective for many. Clinical records of 1500 men and women show substantial reductions in 65 cases out of every 100.

Mrs. A. S., Clio, Ga., reports: Your method is the best and most pleasant I ever found. Besides losing weight I was relieved of the awful craving for something to eat all the time.

7 DAYS TRIAL. You may be one of the "lucky 65." Send for free demonstration and full particulars today. See what it looks like—taste it—learn why the DEXDIET Method has been acclaimed everywhere—and why reducing can now be really fun! Write now for no-risk trial offer.

DEXDIET, INC., Dept. D-24
360 N. Michigan Ave. Chicago, Ill.

BACKACHE-
Leg Pains May Be Danger Sign

Of Tired Kidneys—How To Get Happy Relief

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Buckingham Palace for a ride or walk.

"But the King might not be there," someone once told the tot.

"I know. But I'm doing this just in case he is!" replied Freddie.

Freddie's day-in-day-out life in Hollywood is a matter almost entirely of studio routine. That consists of four hours of acting, three hours of schooling on the set, and one hour for lunch out of each eight-hour work day. The rest of the time, he learns his next day's lines at home, goes to some social affair, or squeezes in an hour or two of play.

Those play hours are his real fun. He loves to wrestle and fight. Freddie's taking boxing lessons, and he likes to practice on his friends. His stand-in gets a bit tired of being a punching bag, and pretty soon, they're at it hammer-and-tongs, all boxing niceties forgotten. They're on the floor, clothes all mussed, and the director is always afraid there'll be a black eye to endanger production. But pretty soon the kids are up again, laughing and shaking hands, and there's no black eye. Freddie is very careful about that. He knows he mustn't endanger production. That's his god, at present. One night, a studio attaché was protecting him from the crowds at a public appearance.

"If I weren't here, you might get killed," the studio man wisecracked.

Freddie wisecracked right back, "Yes, and that'd hold up production, and we mustn't do that, must we?"

NIGHTS, before bed, Freddie likes to read. He really enjoys Shakespeare, Dickens, and Sir Walter Scott! Days, when he has some time to himself, he likes most of all to ride. Victor McLaglen, with whom Freddie became buddies during one of his early pictures, has taken Freddie under his wing. Two rabid Englishmen together! Knowing Freddie's delight in horseflesh, and his proficiency as a rider, McLaglen gave him a splendid blooded steed for his very own, and commissioned Freddie an officer in the famous McLaglen Light Horse Cavalry, that independent semi-military organization of horsemen which Victor maintains. If England goes to war again after Freddie's come of fighting age, the young star thinks he might like to lead a light brigade of British cavalry. He is really a splendid rider. And indefatigable. He sometimes spends an entire day in the saddle.

Socially, he's the perfect gentleman and conversationalist. His real friends are such persons as McLaglen, Basil Rathbone, Herbert Marshall and others of the British actor colony in Hollywood. Among them he's accepted as an equal, and the conversation is adult in tone. Freddie's never at a loss for words, never loses poise. There's only one exception on record.

It was in the Vendome café. Freddie and Aunt Cissie were at tea. In came Charlie Chaplin and H. G. Wells. Cissie pointed them out. Freddie's eyes glowed. He'd never met either and he worships both Chaplin and Wells as great Englishmen, though in different spheres. "I'd love to know them," he confessed to his aunt, shyly.

Then, suddenly, Chaplin stood beside their table. "I recognized you, Master Bartholomew," he said, "and so did Mr. Wells. We wish you'd come and say hello!"

Freddie, all hollow inside with hero-worship, went over and shook hands gravely with Chaplin and Wells. "I've always wanted to meet you," said Wells. Freddie didn't get over that thrill for days, his Aunt Cissie later confided to friends.

Now, he's looking forward to some day shaking hands with his new King. That, to this young dyed-in-the-wool Briton, would be life's greatest moment.

"NEW SHOES FOR OLD"
with
GRIFFIN BLACK DYE

● Take those white and colored shoes you thought were "done for."

● Apply the new and guaranteed GRIFFIN BLACK DYE—following the simple but sure directions in every package.

● Your shoes will have a new jet black finish that will not wear off!

For sale wherever shoe polish is sold

ONLY 10¢

Made by

GRIFFIN

THE GREATEST NAME IN SHOE POLISH

KEEN FOR DRY HAIR!

VEG-E-LAY HAIR DRESSING

The Perfect Hair Groom

SUMMER sun and winds are hard on hair. Lucky Tiger Veg-E-Lay corrects dry hair—makes it look better—stay groomed longer—checks loose dandruff and tones the scalp. Costs little at druggists, barbers, 10¢ stores.

Your choice of ladies' smart new Jeweled Wrist Watch or men's curved Gold Plate Front wristwatch included FREE of any extra charge with every ring ordered during SALE and paid for promptly on our easy new two monthly $2 payment plan (total only $4). YOU PAY NOTHING EXTRA for the Watch!

SEND NO MONEY with your order. We gladly trust you. Wear for 10 days Free Trial. Send coupon or postcard today. Your order shipped postage prepaid by RETURN MAIL.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO., Dept. S-3210, Newton, Mass.
Rush offer. ☐ Ladies' Model ☐ Men's Model

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

DON'T MAKE CORNS WORSE BY PARING THEM!

Remove ROOT* AND ALL with double-action Blue-Jay

MILLIONS have found quick relief from painful corns with scientific Blue-Jay that relieves pain—removes corns root and all. They know that home paring only affects the surface of a corn—leaves the root to come back bigger, uglier, more painful than ever.

Don't suffer needlessly. Get relief this safe, easy way. Blue-Jay relieves pain by removing pressure, then in a few days the corn lifts out root and all (exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application). Blue-Jay is safe, easy to use. 25¢ for 6. Same price in Canada.

BAUER & BLACK BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

REMOVE CORNS ROOT AND ALL

* A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

Say Goodbye to Dull, Drab Hair

In one, simple, quick operation, Lovalon the 4 purpose rinse, does all these 4 important things to your hair. 1. Gives lustrous highlights. 2. Rinses away shampoo film. 3. Tints the hair as it rinses. 4. Helps keep hair neatly in place. Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. It does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, made in 12 different shades. Try Lovalon. You will be amazed at the results.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. 5 rinses 25 cents at drug and department stores. 2 rinse size at ten cent stores.

LOVALON

—the 4 purpose vegetable HAIR RINSE

Hundreds of candid pictures of your favorites in November MODERN SCREEN

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accidents Will Happen (Warners)	2★
Adventure's End (Universal)	2★
Adventures of Marco Polo (Samuel Goldwyn)	3★
Adventures of Robin Hood (Warners)	4★
Adventures of Tom Sawyer (Selznick-International)	3½★
Adventurous Blonde (Warners)	2½★
Alcatraz Island (Warners)	2½★
*Alexander's Ragtime Band (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Ali Baba Goes to Town (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Annapolis Salute (RKO)	2★
Arsene Lupin Returns (M-G-M)	2½★
Back in Circulation (Warners)	2★
Bad Man of Brimstone (M-G-M)	2½★
Battle of Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Baroness and the Butler (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barrier, The (Paramount)	1★
Beg, Borrow or Steal (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Broadcast of 1938 (Paramount)	2★
Big City (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Town Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Blockade (Walter Wanger)	3½★
Blondes at Work (Warners)	2★
Blossoms on Broadway (Paramount)	1★
Bluebeard's Eighth Wife (Paramount)	3½★
Boots and Saddles (Republic)	2½★
Breakfast for Two (RKO)	2★
Bride Wore Red, The (M-G-M)	1★
Bringing Up Baby (RKO)	3★
Buccaneer, The (Paramount)	3½★
Bulldog Drummond's Peril (Paramount)	2½★
Bulldog Drummond's Revenge (Paramount)	2½★
Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Checkers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Cocoanut Grove (Paramount)	2½★
Colorado Kid (Republic)	2★
Condemned Women (RKO)	2★
Conquest (M-G-M)	4★
Cowboy From Brooklyn (Warners)	2½★
Crashing Hollywood (RKO)	2½★
Crime of Dr. Hallet (Universal)	2½★
Crime School (Warners)	2½★
Damsel in Distress, A (RKO)	3★
Danger, Love at Work (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Dangerously Yours (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Danger Patrol (RKO)	2★
Daughter of Shanghai (Paramount)	2½★
Divorce of Lady X, The (London)	3½★
Dr. Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
Double Wedding (M-G-M)	2★
Ebb Tide (Paramount)	3★
Every Day's Holiday (Paramount)	3★
Everybody Sing (M-G-M)	3★
Fast Company (M-G-M)	2½★
52nd Street (Walter Wanger)	2★
Fight For Your Lady (RKO)	2★
Firefly, The (M-G-M)	3★
First Hundred Years, The (M-G-M)	2★
Fit For a King (RKO)	2★
Fools For Scandal (Warners)	2½★
Forty-five Fathers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Forty Naughty Girls (RKO)	2★
Four Men and a Prayer (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Gaiety Girls, The (London)	3★
Girl of the Golden West (M-G-M)	3★
Go Chase Yourself (RKO)	2★
Gold Diggers in Paris (Warners)	2★
Gold Is Where You Find It (Warners)	2★
Goldwyn Follies, The (Sam Goldwyn)	3★
Great Garrick, The (Warners)	3★
Happy Landing (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Having Wonderful Time (RKO)	2½★
Headin' East (Columbia)	2★
Heidi (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Here's Flash Casey (Grand National)	2★
Heroes of the Alamo (Columbia)	2★
High, Wide, and Handsome (Paramount)	3½★
Hold 'em Navy (Paramount)	2★
Hold That Kiss (M-G-M)	3★
Holiday (Columbia)	3½★
Hollywood Hotel (Warners)	3★
Hollywood Round-up (Columbia)	2½★
Hurricane (Sam Goldwyn)	3½★
I'll Take Romance (Columbia)	3★
I Met My Love Again (Walter Wanger)	3★
In Old Chicago (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
It's Love I'm After (Warners)	4★
Jezebel (Warners)	3★
Josette (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Joy of Living (RKO)	3★
Judge Hardy's Children (M-G-M)	3★
Keep Smiling (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Kentucky Moonshine (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Kidnapped (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Lady, Behave (Republic)	2★
Lancer Spy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Last Gangster, The (M-G-M)	3★
Life Begins in College (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Life of Emile Zola, The (Warners)	4★
Life of the Party (RKO)	†★

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Live, Love and Learn (M-G-M)	3★
Lone Wolf in Paris (Columbia)	2½★
Lord Jeff (M-G-M)	2½★
Lost Horizon (Columbia)	4★
Love and Hisses (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Love, Honor and Behave (Warners)	2½★
Love Is a Headache (M-G-M)	2½★
Love on a Budget (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Love on Toast (Paramount)	2★
Mad About Music (Universal)	4★
Madame X (M-G-M)	1½★
Making the Headlines (Columbia)	2★
Mannequin (M-G-M)	3★
Man-Proof (M-G-M)	2½★
Men Are Such Fools (Warners)	2★
Merrily We Live (Hal Roach)	3★
Merry-Go-Round of 1938 (Universal)	2★
Midnight Intruder (Universal)	2½★
Mr. Moto's Gamble (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Mr. Moto Takes a Chance (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Music For Madame (RKO)	2★
Navy Blue and Gold (M-G-M)	3★
Night Club Scandal (Paramount)	2★
Nothing Sacred (Selznick-International)	3★
No Time To Marry (Columbia)	2★
Of Human Hearts (M-G-M)	2½★
Over the Goal (Warners)	1★
Over the Wall (Warners)	3★
Paradise For Three (M-G-M)	2★
Patient in Room 18, The (Warners)	2★
Penrod and His Twin Brother (Warners)	2½★
Penrod's Double Trouble (Warners)	2★
Perfect Specimen, The (Warners)	3★
Port of Seven Seas (M-G-M)	3★
Portia on Trial (Republic)	3★
Prescription for Romance (Universal)	1★
Prison Break (Universal)	2★
Radio City Revels (RKO)	2½★
Rage of Paris, The (Universal)	3★
Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel (London)	2½★
Romance in the Dark (Paramount)	2½★
Rosalie (M-G-M)	3★
Sailing Along (Gaumont British)	3★
Saint in New York, The (RKO)	2½★
Sally, Irene and Mary (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Saturday's Heroes (RKO)	2½★
She Asked For It (Paramount)	2★
Sheik Steps Out, The (Republic)	2★
She's Got Everything (RKO)	2★
Sh! The Octopus (Warners)	2★
Slight Case of Murder, A (First National)	2½★
Snow White and the 7 Dwarfs (Walter Disney)	4★
Something to Sing About (Grand National)	2½★
Spy Ring (Universal)	2★
Stage Door (RKO)	4★
Stand-In (Walter Wanger)	3★
Start Cheering (Columbia)	2★
Swiss Miss (Hal Roach)	2½★
Stolen Heaven (Paramount)	3★
Storm in a Teacup (Korda)	3½★
Swing It Sailor (Grand National)	1★
Swing Your Lady (Warners)	2½★
Tarzan's Revenge (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Test Pilot (M-G-M)	4★
Tip-Off Girls (Paramount)	3★
There Goes the Groom (RKO)	2★
There's Always a Woman (Columbia)	3★
They Won't Forget (Warners)	3★
This Way, Please (Paramount)	1★
Thoroughbreds Don't Cry (M-G-M)	2½★
Three Comrades (M-G-M)	3½★
Three Blind Mice (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Thrill of a Lifetime (Paramount)	1★
Thin Ice (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Torchy Blane in Panama (Warners)	2½★
To the Victor (Gaumont-British)	3½★
Tovarich (Warners)	3★
Trip to Paris, A (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Troopship (Gaumont-British)	2½★
True Confession (Paramount)	4★
Varsity Show (Warners)	3★
Victoria the Great (RKO)	4★
Vivacious Lady (RKO)	4★
Walking Down Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Wells Fargo (Paramount)	3★
Westland Case, The (Universal)	2★
White Banners (Warners)	3★
Who Killed Gail Preston? (Columbia)	2★
Wide Open Faces (Columbia)	2★
Wild and Woolly (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Wise Girl (RKO)	3★
Women Are Like That (Warners)	2★
Women in Prison (Columbia)	2★
Yank at Oxford, A (M-G-M)	3★
Yellow Jack (M-G-M)	3★
You and Me (Paramount)	2½★
You're a Sweetheart (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
You're Only Young Once (M-G-M)	2★

Turn to our Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. It's a valuable guide in choosing entertainment. Instead of giving the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under General Rating, beside each picture. 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. Asterisk denotes that only Modern Screen ratings are given on films not reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

WHITE ELEPHANTS

(Continued from page 10)

and a growing stable of carefully chosen horses. Baseball used to be his principal outside interest but lately the ponies have been edging in on his spare time.

And, with all these things, as Mr. Brown says, "What more can a fellow ask?" Particularly a fellow who still remembers when he ran away from Holgate, Ohio at the age of nine, started to take the world in his stride and to cover all he could of it on the upgrade. That was all of thirty-eight years ago and if, in the ensuing years, he has had to take the knocks with the good luck, the lean months with the seasons of plenty, the golden horn is certainly pouring out its contents for him now. And he's meeting the avalanche with saneness and rare good judgment—the way he took Brown's white elephants.

A travelling circus, stopping over outside Toledo one spring afternoon just before the turn of the century, was what started Joe going places. The big tent, the performers, the animals, the thrilling music were a magic land to him, the sawdust ring was his dream of far green pastures. He was a sparse little tike with freckles on his nose, hair that got in his eyes, and that same big mouth, when he dared to smile. It was because of that smile that he was allowed to remain with the troupe when he was discovered toting pails full of water that nobody apparently had hired this particular little boy to carry.

His lot was cast among the youngsters who ministered to the elephants but, while Joe labored in behalf of the big gray beasts, his ambitions centered around the cages on wheels. He wanted to be an animal trainer and tame those beautiful tigers.

But it was his penchant for nimble turns in mid-air that got Joe a spot with the Five Marvelous Ashtons. "Imagine me as a marvel!"

Early in his variety career, comedian Brown discovered that his forte was being funny. He could allez-oop with the best of them and win moderate applause but, when he opened his mouth to its widest stretch and made strange noises as he deliberately missed a turn, the audience "rolled in the aisles," and so he concentrated on clowning.

In early life he was a serious young man, with an eye on Broadway. He was naturally shy and a little self-conscious about his looks. Romance was a minor key until he met a home-type girl who was as beautiful as she was sincere. Kathryn Frances McGrau had plenty of beaux who admired her peaches and cream complexion, her Irish eyes and her ever-present smile, but the big-mouthed comedian won her, and they've been happily married ever since. One son, Don, was a football player at the University of California in Los Angeles. The second, Joe, Jr., has been a student at Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania, and there are two beautiful little daughters of whom Joe is very proud.

Joe's first big chance came when he signed for The Greenwich Village Follies in a comedy role fifteen years ago. From that success he went into several other New York shows. Joe, at last, was doing all right for the Browns. He joined the Lambs Club and met all the other actors, became an Elk (on lodge nights) and was maintaining a pleasant menage in the vicinity of Manhattan when Joseph P. Kennedy, then president of a movie company, sent for him in 1928.

That's one time Joe was really scared. He and Kathryn talked it over and finally decided on the big gamble. His introduction into the cinema circles of the east had somewhat the cast of the old white elephant business. The company gave a party for him at the Astor Hotel to observe his entrance into the flicker fold, and Joe arrived all dressed up in a nautical outfit, because he heard the festivities were to take place in the Yacht Room.

Shortly after the party started Joe had a message to meet Mr. Kennedy immediately. That executive was leaving for Europe in an hour and there were some last minute contract details to be settled. Joe slipped away and the press thought he was high-hatting them. They didn't like his admiral's uniform, either, and rode him considerably in their columns the next day. That doubled Joe's fears about himself and Hollywood as a combination.

Though, so far as he knew, there would be no elephants in the movie studios out West—and that helped at least. One of his first assignments was to play a clown in "A Circus Kid." Always looking for a story, we asked hopefully, "Wasn't the elephant that once tried to trample you in that picture?"

But Joe had to admit he never saw his old enemy again, agreeing that it would have made a good story—unless the elephant had remembered too suddenly.

JOE'S first season in the celluloid town wasn't "so hot," as he remembers. It took him longer than that to acclimate himself, for his reticence was a drawback in a colony where a man has to take care of himself, but with vehemence, because nobody else does.

"Gosh, I guess I wasn't so hot among those glamor boys," he reminisces. But many of the "glamor boys" of 1929 aren't so hot themselves right now, and Joe is doing all right. Studio executives soon discovered that Brown was good business at the ticket-sellers' windows. With every picture Joe's popularity grew, until his company was using Brown vehicles as sure-fire box office appeal to sell other program offerings of less certain grosses. Not long ago he achieved the enviable distinction of having his own production unit to make three pictures a year, with Brown having plenty to say about stories, directors and supporting casts.

Once in a while Joe E. Brown's memory plays a trick on him with pleasant pictures of theater audiences to watch his work. But when British interests recently beckoned him across the Atlantic for a variety engagement at the Palladium in London he had a terrible attack of stage fright—several weeks in advance.

"Maybe the white elephants are coming back," Joe remarked. But his fears were needless because in the English capital he was an outstanding success.

Certainly, when Mr. Brown views his San Fernando farm and looks with pride on his family, he must feel that keeping to the main road of life, despite the alluring detour signs he used to meet up with, has paid him generous premiums. As he says, he isn't a glamor boy, but his feet have been planted deep in reality, and success hasn't changed him.

The younger generation of the Browns is growing up but Joe Senior has remained amazingly young—maybe the laughter does it. "Eventually I want to be a director-producer. I ought to know enough about the business by now," Joe confides. But for the present he goes on acting and remains the enviable person who can say honestly, "I've got everything I want."

Do This If You're NERVOUS

Help Calm Jumpy Nerves Without Harmful Opiates

IF you fly off the handle at little things and at times feel so nervous, cross and jumpy you want to scream—if you have spells of "the blues" and restless nights—

Don't take chances on harmful opiates and products you know nothing about. Use common sense. Get more fresh air, more sleep and in case you need a good general system tonic take a TIME-PROVEN medicine like famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots. Let it help Nature tone up your system—build more physical resistance and thus help calm jangly nerves, lessen distress from female functional disorders and make life worth living. Give it a chance to help YOU.

Tune in Voice of Experience Mutual Broadcasting System: Mon., Wed. and Fri. See your local newspaper for time. WLW Mondays through Friday.

Lydia E. Pinkham's
VEGETABLE COMPOUND

VOICE

100% Improvement Guaranteed

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons—but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises . . and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100% . . . Write for wonderful voice book—sent free. Learn WHY you can now have the voice you want. No literature sent to anyone under 17 unless signed by parent.

PERFECT VOICE INSTITUTE, Studio 7217
64 E. Lake St., Chicago

Lustrous Color for FADED HAIR
(Test Bottle FREE)

Have ever-youthful looking hair this SAFE way. Clear liquid is combed through hair. Gray goes—streaks disappear. Color wanted comes: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Nothing to wash or rub off on clothing. Hair stays fluffy—takes wave or curl. Get full-sized bottle from druggist on money-back guarantee. Or mail coupon for Free Test.

FREE TEST—We send complete Test Package Free. Snip off a lock of hair. Test it first this safe way. No risk. No expense. 3,000,000 women have received this test. Mail coupon.

MARY T. GOLDMAN
2322 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Name.....
Street.....
City.....State.....
Color of your hair?.....

Don Ameche and his wife snapped as they arrived in New York en-route to a belated European vacation.

Connie Bennett and Gilbert Roland enjoying the fights—one of Hollywood's pet diversions, by the way.

A Hollywood columnist caused Bill Powell considerable anguish when he reported recently that a star sapphire being worn by Azadia Newman, the portrait painter, was a gift from Powell. The ring was actually a gift from Scott Colton. Miss Newman's fiancé. The star sapphire which Powell gave Jean Harlow was given back to him as a keepsake by Jean shortly before her death, and the columnist's implication that he had given it away hurt William Powell tremendously.

●

Add Michael Curtiz stories: Despite the fact that he's one of the best directors in the business, Mike has trouble remembering the names of the stars with whom he's working. On the set of "Four Daughters" recently he was doing a scene with Priscilla Lane and Dick Foran. He wanted Foran to move a few steps away from Miss Lane, but he couldn't remember Foran's name. Closest he could come was the fact that Foran was a cowboy star, so he yelled: "You—lonely ranger—move over, please!"

●

Hollywood oddities: Joan Bennett's swimming pool has a cut-glass bottom. . . . Johnny Weissmuller, who has never uttered a word of dialogue in pictures, makes $40,000 a year. . . . Garbo, who has never—they say—uttered a word of dialogue outside of pictures, makes $400,000. . . . On the first of every month, Carole Lombard writes a check for $1500 for her family . . . and Jack Oakie, who was once one of the town's most convivial tipplers, now drinks nothing but cokes.

●

Ilona Massey, left, and Eleanor Powell waiting for their best beaus.

Battle of the moment is the one going on between Bing Crosby and his studio. A Crosby picture called "Sing You Sinners" during production was suddenly changed to "The Unholy Beebes." Bing registered immediate disapproval because the picture's story is parallel to his own life story, and he doesn't think the Crosbys were particularly unholy, as families go. The studio stood firm. A week later Bing sang three songs from the picture on his radio show. The songs, he announced, were from "Sing You Sinners." You can place your bets now on the ultimate title of the picture, but we'll put our money on Bing any day.

The "Hollywood Reporter" records Shirley Temple's newest joke, pulled on eleven-year-old Walda Winchell at a recent luncheon in New York. Shirley asked Walda to spell the numeral "two" and the word "too" and Walda complied. "Now," said Shirley, "what's the last name of the man who wrote 'Tom Sawyer'?" "Twain," said Walda. "Okay," said Shirley. "Now repeat all three words." "Two too Twain," Walda responded. "That's fine," said little Miss T. "Now when you're a little older I'll teach you how to say 'locomotive'."

●

Question Box: What well-known singing star can't go before the cameras unless she has had ten hours of sleep the night before? Reason is that the gal is older than she cares to tell, and a night without much sleep brings those tell-tale circles under her lovely eyes.

●

The Flynn-Damita Sweepstakes: During the space of one recent week, the course of their love ran anything but smooth. They each spent a week-end in Mexico, but at resorts thirty miles apart. On Wednesday of the following week they entertained the customers at the House of Murphy with one of their best battles, and on Thursday the same startled customers could have seen them billing and cooing at the Cocoanut Grove. Miss Damita, we learn, will soon do a solo trip to Europe, and there are indications of a divorce suit while she's there.

●

Another member of the Power family has come to Hollywood to live, but she doesn't want to be in pictures. She is Tyrone's sister, Anne, who recently left New York to make her home here with Tyrone and her mother. A year younger than Tyrone, she played in stock in New England during the time her brother was getting his start with the Katherine Cornell company back on Broadway.

●

Watched Virginia Bruce and Fredric March do an ice skating sequence for "There Goes My Heart," and when it was over Miss B. confided that skating is a great hip reducer. "In the past two hours," she said, "I've landed on my—well, hips, twelve times. I'm sure I've taken off at least a pound or two."

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

READ THE COMPLETE STORY OF MARIE Antoinette

Let us take you back with us to the glory and the glitter that was Versailles . . . to the despair and poverty that was France. Come along down the pages of history, to the days that belonged to MARIE ANTOINETTE!

No weaver of tales could have conceived her story. For only on the scroll of life itself can be found the ecstasy, the hopelessness, and the burning romance of a woman who was more dearly loved, more bitterly hated, than any character in fact or fancy.

The memorable story of "MARIE ANTOINETTE," adapted from the M-G-M picture starring Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power, appears, in complete fiction form, in the OCTOBER issue of SCREEN ROMANCES.

In this same issue, you'll find the complete stories of

There Goes My Heart — Fredric March & Virginia Bruce
The Great Waltz — Luise Rainer & Fernand Gravet
Hot Heiress — Olivia de Havilland & Dick Powell
Youth Takes a Fling — Joel McCrea & Andrea Leeds

Discover for yourself the absorbing entertainment of SCREEN ROMANCES fiction. Buy your copy today!

As a SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY inducement, we are offering a six months' subscription for only $1.00. You'll save 50c on your next six copies by mailing your check or money order to SCREEN ROMANCES Magazine today!

SCREEN ROMANCES MAGAZINE
Dept. 2
149 Madison Avenue, New York City

Please enter my subscription for the next six issues of Screen Romances, effective with.....issue. My check (or money order) for $1.00 is enclosed herewith.

Name .....

Address..... City.....

● WITNESSED STATEMENT SERIES

Charles Belvin—independent buy —has smoked Luckies for 10 yea

He's Seen Luckies Buy THE "CREAM" OF 19 CROPS

Copyright 1938, The American Tobacco

So CHARLES BELVIN Smokes Luckies, the 2 to 1 Favorite of America's Independent Tobacco Experts

TOBACCOLAND has many independent experts — skilled auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen. These men do not work for any cigarette company, therefore they are impartial. Here's what one of them — Charles Belvin, independent buyer—tells you about tobacco:

"At auction after auction for over 19 years, I've seen Luckies buy the best grades of tobacco — the 'Cream of the Crop'!"

Sworn records show that, among Mr. Belvin's fellow experts, Luckies have over twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together.

In addition to the finest tobacco, Lucki give you throat protection. The "Toastin process, you know, takes out certa harsh irritants found in all tobacco. Luckies are a light smoke — gentle your throat — delightful to your tas Let a one-week trial prove it!

Sworn Records Show That - WITH MEN WHO KNOW TOBACCO BEST - IT'S LUCKIES 2 TO

Exclusive! COMPLETE GUIDE TO ANSWERS IN $250,000 MOVIE QUIZ

Modern Screen

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
OCT -5 1937
PERIODICAL DIV.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

NOVEMBER
10 CENTS

WILL AMERICA'S HERO, HOWARD HUGHES, Marry KATHARINE HEPBURN?

Hedy Lamarr's LIFE STORY!

Irresistible
There are women who invite Romance as naturally as flowers invite the enjoyment of their perfume. You envy them, perhaps. For you, too, want Romance. But do you invite it? Do your lips lure? Your skin, your hair, your very fragrance... do these invite caresses? ¶ Buy IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME if you want to be Irresistible. Be fragrant if you want to be pursued. Men adore fragrant hair, fragrant lips, and soft fragrant skin. The satin-smoothness of Irresistible Face Powder, the soft blush of Irresistible Rouge, the seductive coloring and creamy indelibility of Irresistible Lip Lure...these speak the language of enchantment. ¶ Tonight, try Irresistible Perfume. You'll be sparkling, electric, ready to conquer the world and the man! To be completely ravishing use all Irresistible Beauty Aids. Certified pure, laboratory tested and approved.
10¢ at leading 5 and 10¢ stores
Irresistible
TALC
IRRESISTIBLE LIP LURE—THE NEW GLOWING VIBRANT LIPSTICK

"Well, I certainly did my smile no favor—Neglecting that tinge of 'pink'!"

Protect your smile! Help your dentist keep your gums firmer and your teeth sparkling with

IPANA AND MASSAGE

Foolish, foolish you! The loveliest smile in the world grows dim if neglected. And you neglected yours.

Oh yes you did! Of course you brushed your teeth every day. But you never gave a thought to your gums, did you? You suspected that first tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush meant trouble, but you just didn't bother!

Well, today you're going to see your dentist (it's the sensible thing to do)! Today you're going to learn that gums as well as teeth need special care! And if he suggests the healthful stimulation of Ipana and massage you're going to follow his advice—if you want to recapture that lovely, appealing, winning smile!

Guard Against "Pink Tooth Brush" And Protect Your Smile

IF you've noticed that warning tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist. Let him decide if there's serious trouble ahead. Probably he'll say your gums are simply lazy—that they need more work to help keep them firm and strong.

All too frequently our modern foods are too soft, too well-cooked to give our gums the stimulation they need for better health. Understand this—and you'll appreciate why modern dentists so frequently advise the regular use of Ipana Tooth Paste.

For Ipana is especially designed not only to clean teeth but with massage to help the health of your gums as well. Each time you brush your teeth massage a little extra Ipana into the gums. This arouses circulation in the gums—they tend to become stronger, firmer—more resistant to trouble.

Don't risk your smile! Get a famous and economical tube of Ipana at your druggist's today. Let Ipana and massage help you to keep your smile a winning smile!

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

OCT -1 1938
©CIB 391216

BOY! THERE'S A TOUCHDOWN IN EVERY STICK OF TEABERRY

Teaberry does more than just keep your teeth white and sparkling, your gums pink and healthy, your breath sweet as a baby's. It gives you the taste-thrill of the year—the fresh, lasting flavor of real Teaberry!

Reach for the Bright Red Package!

You'll like CLARK'S TEABERRY GUM

MODERN SCREEN

Copyright, 1938, by Dell Publishing Co., Inc.

Regina Cannon.....Editor
Leo Townsend.....Hollywood Editor
Abril Lamarque.....Art Editor

NOW SHOWING

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN	8	MACK HUGHES
SHIRLEY DISCOVERS AMERICA	26	DORA ALBERT
THE LURE THAT'S LAMARR	28	KAY PROCTOR
NEVER OUT OF CHARACTER	30	MARY PARKES
GINGER'S MA SPEAKS HER PIECE	32	MARTHA KERR
SHE'S A SMARTIE	34	NANETTE KUTNER
AND FATHER IS DOING WELL	36	KATHARINE HARTLEY
SHE'S LOOKING FOR LOVE	38	FAITH SERVICE
A MAN WHO CAME BACK	40	GLADYS HALL
DIVORCE BECAUSE OF TAXES	42	CAROLINE S. HOYT
MAKING THE MOST OF THINGS	44	MARY MARSHALL
SEVENTEEN VO-DE-O-DO	46	IDA ZEITLIN
IN BETWEEN	47	GEORGE BENJAMIN
SUITING THE SEASON	48	MARIAN SQUIRE
HE'S NOT MOVIE-MINDED	50	ROBERT McILWAINE
ON HOLDING A MAN	108	LILLIAN GENN

SHORT SUBJECTS

MOVIE REVIEWS	6	WHAT TO SEE
MOVIE SCOREBOARD	10	FILM GUIDE
WIN $250,000.00	12	BIG QUIZ CONTEST
BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME	14	PRIZE LETTERS
PORTRAIT GALLERY	19	OF YOUR FAVORITES
OFF THEIR GUARD	51	CANDID SHOTS
GOOD NEWS	62	MOVIE CHATTER
KNITS FOR NOVEMBER	72	NEW KNITS
OUR PUZZLE PAGE	76	MOVIE X-WORD
DOWN WITH DULL DINNERS	84	LLOYD NOLAN'S RECIPES
INFORMATION DESK	104	QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Modern Screen, No. 301773. Published monthly by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 No. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; J. F. Henry, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 17, No. 6, November, 1938. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions $2.00 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Postoffice, Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries entered at Seattle, Washington; San Francisco, California; Houston, Texas; New Orleans, Louisiana, and St. Louis, Missouri. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England. Names of characters used in stories and in humorous and semifictional matter are fictitious. If the name of a living person is used it is purely a coincidence.

Brave Men...

AND THE BRAVE WOMEN WHO FOLLOW THEM!

GO WITH THEM... through the Khyber Pass! Watch the bitter struggle between East and West. Thrill to the love story of a brave woman who followed her man among seething tribes. A majestic episode in the historic drama of India.

Alexander Korda
PRESENTS

DRUMS

IN GLORIOUS TECHNICOLOR
with
SABU · RAYMOND MASSEY · DESMOND TESTER
ROGER LIVESEY · VALERIE HOBSON
And a cast of 3,000 · DIRECTED BY ZOLTAN KORDA
FROM A STORY BY A. E. W. MASON
RELEASED THRU UNITED ARTISTS
COMING SOON TO YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE—ASK THE MANAGER WHEN!

A MOVIE QUIZ $250,000.00 CONTEST PICTURE

Thrill to the most majestic scenery on earth... the Himalayas of India...in Technicolor.

See Sabu, native Indian lad, cast as native Indian prince, riding triumphantly his plunging white charger!

See real British Troops fight where they battled long ago to win an Empire.

Go to the feast where dining was only a prelude to betrayal... and fear rose in the hearts of the bravest!

Mr. D. catches up on his practicing.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

By MACK HUGHES

Johnny Davis loves tootin' a horn, but then a farm has its points, too

SOME FOLKS dream of the day they can own a yacht, a Rolls Royce or a mansion complete with swimming pool and tennis courts. But not Johnny Davis. This render of swingy songs wants nothing of the sort. In fact, Johnny admits that all he's after is a small house, sufficient land to plant a vegetable patch and room enough for his chickens and dogs. Of course this is a pretty elastic order, since Mr. D.'s younger pup is a St. Bernard, and chickens have been known to raise families!

Johnny Davis' face wrinkled into one of his famous grins as we looked questioningly in the direction of some strange sounds. "That's my chickens," he informed us. "I've got about twenty-four out there now. You didn't know I was a country boy at heart? Oh, yes. I'm from the farmin' section of Indiana. Y'know that ole saying, 'You can take the boy from the country, but—' I raise vegetables and gather my own eggs each day. Which reminds me, things slacked up a bit today. I only got eleven. Gotta give those chickens a little pep talk. They can do better than that. But, then they've got the afternoon ahead, so I'm looking for results."

Sitting in his modernistic living-room, Johnny Davis looked anything but a farm boy. More, indeed, like a sophomore home for the weekend. But then, college attire was more or less what we had expected as Johnny was in the throes of making "Brother Rat," a tale of collegiate capers.

"You see, I've always liked the country," Johnny confided. "Even when I was in New York playing with orchestras, I had a little house up on a lake where I could go every so often. I said then if I ever worked in one place long enough, say a year, I'd get a home and do a little farming. That's why I'm so crazy about it here in California. Now, back in New York they build up in the air, so you can't afford much in the way of land. But, here they spread it out in all directions, so you gotta better chance.

"This place is nice, but it's not exactly what we want. The house is big enough, but when it rains the darn thing leaks. I called the owner about it, after one of our heavy rains and what d'ya think he did? Came running out here with a handful of putty and began sticking it around the leaky spots! Heck, I could've done that myself! Somehow they don't seem to understand you want things fixed permanently.

Here is Johnny doing the work he really loves. Yes, raising vegetables, and not Cain, is his idea of a good time.

"In case you're wondering why there's no grass in the garden," Johnny continued as he showed us around his place, "just look at that pup. He's the responsible party. We've only had him four weeks, so you can see what a thorough job he's done! And, after all my work planting grass and flowers! I even got special potted plants which I put out by hand. Then along comes this young fella and in a couple of days even the grass is trampled down. When I get my own place I'll have a patch of ground fenced in for him; otherwise he's liable to flatten us in a few months!"

As we moved from this scene of desolation, Johnny proudly led us to his "eatin' patch."

"This is where we grow our vegetables," he announced. "There's corn, beans, radishes; in fact, anything we want, right here! I call it Option Acre. Y'know, it's sympathetic with my contract. Long about option time, it gets sorta low, then when my time is extended, I run home and plant another row of corn and throw in some beans for good measure. And now my pride and joy! See this plow? It's motor-driven. The folks next door owned it, but I had my eye on it every time I went over to buy eggs. When we got

(Continued on page 16)

The Man Who Made The Picture

Talks to the people who are going to see it!

★ It is my business to make pictures, not to advertise them. But I have seen "Four Daughters," one of those rare and perfect things that happen once or twice in a lifetime. Now I want the whole world to see the finest picture that ever came out of the Warner Bros. Studios.

★ I sat at the preview with Fannie Hurst, its author,—the woman who gave you "Humoresque," "Back Street" and "Imitation of Life"—the woman who knows how to reach human hearts and bring life's joys and sorrows to countless millions of readers. She shared with me the thrilled delight of watching "Four Daughters." Now, after seeing her grandest story quicken to life on the screen, she joins me in the enthusiasm I'm trying to pass on to you.

★ Warner Bros. have made many other great pictures. Among them — "Robin Hood," "Pasteur," "Anthony Adverse," "The Life of Emile Zola." But here is a picture entirely different. A simple story of today and of people close to you and yours. An intimate story of four young girls in love and of youth's laughter, dreams and heartbreak.

★ Once in a blue moon comes a picture where everything seems to click just right. "Four Daughters" is such a picture. Action, story, direction blend, as if under kindly smiles of the gods, into a natural masterpiece. Especially, the truly inspired acting of three young players — Priscilla Lane, John Garfield and Jeffrey Lynn —is sure to raise these three to the topmost heights of stardom.

★ If you could attend but one picture this year, I think "Four Daughters" would give you your happiest hour in the theatre. See it! I sincerely believe it's the best picture Warner Bros. ever made.

JACK L. WARNER, Vice-President
In Charge of Production,
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

WARNER BROS. Presents FANNIE HURST'S Great Story

"FOUR DAUGHTERS"

with

PRISCILLA LANE • ROSEMARY LANE
LOLA LANE • GALE PAGE
CLAUDE RAINS • JOHN GARFIELD
JEFFREY LYNN • DICK FORAN

Famous on the New York stage—John Garfield now takes his place among Hollywood's chosen great.

Frank McHugh

Directed by MICHAEL CURTIZ
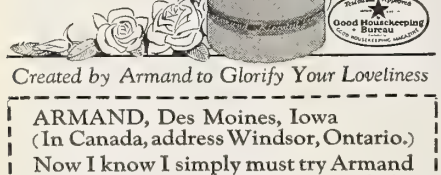
From the Cosmopolitan Magazine Story

May Robson

Screen Play by Julius J. Epstein and Lenore Coffee
Music by Max Steiner • A First Nat'l Picture



A dashing new personality — Jeffrey Lynn brings the gay romantic glamour that wins all hearts.

Wintry winds outdoors, dry heat indoors tend to rob your skin of natural oils, detract from your radiant loveliness. You can enjoy looking in the mirror in winter when Armand Blended All Purpose Cream is on your dressing table. After using it, your skin soon appears dewy fresh and firm — clearer and more refined. The delicate oils which Armand Blended All Purpose Cream contains are welcomed by harsh, dry weathered skin. A new type of all-purpose cream with the fragrance of fresh-cut roses, it helps you enjoy a rose-petal complexion, and the appearance of glowing, natural beauty.

Armand Blended All Purpose Cream is at your favorite cosmetic counter. Four sizes: $1.00, 50 cents, 25 cents and 10 cents. Mail coupon for a generous trial size.

ARMAND BLENDED

Created by Armand to Glorify Your Loveliness

ARMAND, Des Moines, Iowa
(In Canada, address Windsor, Ontario.)
Now I know I simply must try Armand Blended All Purpose Cream and the famous Armand Bouquet Powder. My ten cents is enclosed.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

MS 1138

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accidents Will Happen (Warners)	2★
Adventure's End (Universal)	2★
Adventures of Marco Polo (Samuel Goldwyn)	3★
Adventures of Robin Hood (Warners)	4★
Adventures of Tom Sawyer (Selznick-International)	3½★
Adventurous Blonde (Warners)	2½★
Alcatraz Island (Warners)	2½★
Alexander's Ragtime Band (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Algiers (Walter Wanger)	2½★
The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse (Warners)	3½★
Army Girl (Republic)	2½★
Arsene Lupin Returns (M-G-M)	2½★
Bad Man of Brimstone (M-G-M)	2½★
Battle of Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Baroness and the Butler (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barrier, The (Paramount)	1★
Beg, Borrow or Steal (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Broadcast of 1938 (Paramount)	2★
Big Town Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Blockade (Walter Wanger)	3½★
Blondes at Work (Warners)	2★
Blossoms on Broadway (Paramount	1★
Bluebeard's Eighth Wife (Paramount)	3½★
*Boy Meets Girl (Warners)	2★
Bringing Up Baby (RKO)	3★
Buccaneer, The (Paramount)	3½★
Blulldog Drummond's Peril (Paramount)	2½★
Bulldog Drummond's Revenge (Paramount)	2½★
Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Chaser, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Checkers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Cocoanut Grove (Paramount)	2½★
Colorado Kid (Republic)	2★
Condemned Women (RKO)	2★
Cowboy From Brooklyn (Warners)	2½★
Crashing Hollywood (RKO)	2½★
Crime of Dr. Hallet (Universal)	2½★
Crime School (Warners)	2½★
Damsel in Distress A (RKO)	3★
Danger, Love at Work (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Dangerously Yours (20th Century-Fox)	1★
Danger Patrol (RKO)	2★
Daughter of Shanghai (Paramount)	2½★
Divorce of Lady X, The (London)	3½★
Dr. Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
Ebb Tide (Paramount)	3★
Every Day's a Holiday (Paramount)	3★
Everybody Sing (M-G-M)	3★
Fast Company (M-G-M)	2½★
52nd Street (Walter Wanger)	2★
Fight For Your Lady (RKO)	2★
Firefly, The (M-G-M)	3★
First Hundred Years, The (M-G-M)	2★
Fools For Scandal (Warners)	2½★
Forty-five Fathers (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Four Men and a Prayer (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Four's a Crowd (Warners)	3★
Gaiety Firls, The (London)	3★
Gateway (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Girl of the Golden West (M-G-M)	3★
Give Me a Sailor (Paramount)	2½★
Go Chase Yourself (RKO)	2★
Gold Diggers in Paris (Warners)	2★
Gold is Where You Find It (Warners)	2★
Goldwyn Follies, The (Sam Goldwyn)	3★
Happy Landing (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Having Wonderful Time (RKO)	2½★
Headin' East (Columbia)	2★
Heidi (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Here's Flash Casey (Grand National)	2★
Heroes of the Alamo (Columbia)	2★
High, Wide, and Handsome (Paramount)	3½★
Hold 'em Navy (Paramount)	2★
Hold That Kiss (M-G-M)	3★
Holiday (Columbia)	3½★
Hollywood Hotel (Warners)	3★
Hollywood Round-up (Columbia)	2½★
Hurricane (Sam Goldwyn)	3½★
I'll Take Romance (Columbia)	3★
I Met My Love Again (Walter Wanger)	3★
In Old Chicago (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
It's Love I'm After (Warners)	4★
Jezebel (Warners)	3★
Josette (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Joy of Living (RKO)	3★
Judge Hardy's Children (M-G-M)	3★
Keep Smiling (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Kentucky Moonshine (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Kidnapped (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Last Gangster, The (M-G-M)	3★
Life of Emile Zola, The (Warners)	4★
Little Miss Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Lone Wolf in Paris (Columbia)	2½★
Lord Jeff (M-G-M)	2½★
Lost Horizon (Columbia)	4★
Love and Hisses (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Love Finds Andy Hardy (M-G-M)	3★
Love, Honor and Behave (Warners)	2½★
Love Is a Headache (M-G-M)	2½★
Love on a Budget (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Love on Toast (Paramount)	2★
Mad About Music (Universal)	4★
Making the Headlines (Columbia)	2★
Mannequin (M-G-M)	3★
Man-Proof (M-G-M)	2½★
Marie Antoinette (M-G-M)	4★
Men Are Such Fools (Warners)	2★
Merrily We Live (Hal Roach)	3★
Merry-Go-Round of 1938 (Universal)	2★
Midnight Intruder (Universal)	2½★
Mr. Moto's Gamble (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Mr. Moto Takes a Chance (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Mother Carey's Chickens (RKO)	3★
Navy Blue and Gold (M-G-M)	3★
Night Club Scandal (Paramount)	2★
Nothing Sacred (Selznick-International)	3★
No Time To Marry (Columbia)	2★
Of Human Hearts (M-G-M)	2½★
Over the Goal (Warners)	1★
Over the Wall (Warners)	3★
Paradise For Three (M-G-M)	2★
Passport Husband (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Patient in Room 18, The (Warners)	2★
Penrod and His Twin Brother (Warners)	2½★
Penrod's Double Trouble (Warners)	2★
Perfect Specimen, The (Warners)	3★
Port of Seven Seas (M-G-M)	3★
Portia on Trial (Republic)	3★
Prescription for Romance (Universal)	1★
Prison Break (Universal)	2★
Racket Busters (Warners)	3★
Radio City Revels (RKO)	2½★
Rage of Paris, The (Universal)	3★
Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel (London)	2½★
Romance in the Dark (Paramount)	2½★
Rosalie (M-G-M)	3★
Sailing Along (Gaumont British)	3★
Saint in New York, The (RKO)	2½★
Sally, Irene and Mary (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Saturday's Heroes (RKO)	2½★
She Asked For It (Paramount)	2★
Sheik Steps Out, The (Republic)	2★
She's Got Everything (RKO)	2★
Sh! The Octopus (Warners)	2★
Sky Giant (RKO)	2½★
Slight Case of Murder, A (First National)	2½★
Snow White and the 7 Dwarfs (Walter Disney)	4★
Something to Sing About (Grand National)	2½★
Spy Ring (Universal)	2★
Stage Door (RKO)	4★
Stand-In (Walter Wagner)	3★
Start Cheering (Columbia)	2★
Swiss Miss (Hal Roach)	2½★
Stolen Heaven (Paramount)	3★
Storm in a Teacup (Korda)	3½★
Swing It Sailor (Grand National)	1★
Swing Your Lady (Warners)	2½★
Tarzan's Revenge (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Test Pilot (M-G-M)	4★
The Texans (Paramount)	3★
Tip-Off Girls (Paramount)	3★
There Goes the Groom (RKO)	2★
There's Always a Woman (Columbia)	3★
They Won't Forget (Warners)	3★
This Way, Please (Paramount)	1★
Thoroughbreds Don't Cry (M-G-M)	2½★
Three Comrades (M-G-M)	3½★
Three Blind Mice (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Thrill of a Lifetime (Paramount)	1★
Thin Ice (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Torchy Blane in Panama (Warners)	2½★
To the Victor (Gaumont-British)	3½★
Tovarich (Warners)	3★
Trip to Paris, A (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Troopship (Gaumont-British)	2½★
*Tropic Holiday (Paramount)	2★
True Confession (Paramount)	4★
Varsity Show (Warners)	3★
Victoria the Great (RKO)	4★
Vivacious Lady (RKO)	4★
Walking Down Broadway (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Wells Fargo (Paramount)	3★
Westland Case, The (Universal)	2★
White Banners (Warners)	3★
Who Killed Gail Preston? (Columbia)	2★
Wide Open Faces (Columbia)	2★
Wild and Woolly (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Wise Girl (RKO)	3★
Women Are Like That (Warners)	2★
Women in Prison (Columbia)	2★
Yank at Oxford, A (M-G-M)	3★
Yellow Jack (M-G-M)	3★
You and Me (Paramount)	2½★
You're a Sweetheart (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
You're Only Young Once (M-G-M)	2★

Turn to our Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. It's a valuable guide in choosing entertainment. Instead of giving the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under General Rating, beside each picture. 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. Asterisk denotes that only Modern Screen ratings are given on films not reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

NOW ON THE SCREAM!

. . . Broadway's most successful comedy hit! . . . The biggest laugh show in a generation! . . . A two-season sensation!...The movie rights cost more than any other play ever produced—and, measured in laughs, it was cheap at twice the price! . . .

ONE LOOK AT WHO'S IN IT—AND YOU WON'T LET ANYTHING KEEP YOU AWAY WHEN IT PLAYS YOUR LOCAL THEATRE!

THIS IS ONE OF THE MOVIE QUIZ $250,000.00 CONTEST PICTURES

THE MARX BROS.

madder than ever, with a million new gags...in...

"ROOM SERVICE"

WITH

LUCILLE BALL

ANN MILLER

FRANK ALBERTSON

RKO RADIO PICTURES

PANDRO S. BERMAN IN CHARGE OF PRODUCTION
DIRECTED BY WILLIAM A. SEITER
Screen Play by Morrie Ryskind

LET US HELP YOU WIN

Here is the complete guide to the answers which can make you a lucky

EXPLANATION

Here is a chance at fame and fortune! To enter this contest, simply secure a movie quiz booklet at your neighborhood theatre. Answer one question about any 30 pictures included in the booklet, and then write a statement of not more than 50 words, telling which one of the 30 pictures you like best, and why.

Our sample letter will help you in writing your statement. Remember, it must be original. Just write as if you were telling a friend why the picture appealed to you.

As a further guide, read our synopses carefully. They'll assist you in selecting the correct answers.

After you have completed your entry, mail the booklet containing your answers and the 50 word statement to

Motion Picture Contest
480 Lexington Avenue, New York City
Postmarked not later than December 31, 1938

FOUR DAUGHTERS

I enjoyed "Four Daughters" primarily because it gave a true picture of a happy home life. The girls, though different in character, were very human and appealing. Their spirit of "one for all" taught a valuable lesson and the things that happened to them come into the lives of all of us. Therefore, the story rang true.

MARIE ANTOINETTE

"Marie Antoinette" is one of the most beautiful pictures ever made. I enjoyed every moment of it, from the fine characterizations of its players to the colorful, historical pageant. The direction was truly expert and the acting of Robert Morley, Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power, something I shall never forget. Here is everything in the way of entertainment.

FOUR DAUGHTERS

There is much excitement at the Lemp household because of Thea's new beau, wealthy Ben Crowley, and the arrival of the young musician, Felix. Though impressed with Ben's beautiful car, the orchids he sends to Thea—all four daughters (Thea, Kay, Ann, Emma) fall in love with debonair Felix. The announcement of his engagement to Ann is a blow to everyone including Mickey, Felix's cynical orchestrator, who also loves Ann. When Ann discovers how much Emma loves Felix and Mickey loves her, she marries Mickey. Later, Felix and Ann find reunion after Mickey's tragic death.

MARIE ANTOINETTE

From Austria to France comes the lovely Marie Antoinette, to be the bride of the weakling, Louis, grandson of the King. Unable to find happiness, she turns to Count Axel de Ferson. When Antoinette becomes Queen she realizes she must give up her lover. They are separated until the outbreak of the Revolution when Ferson, learning of Antoinette's danger, reappears to arrange the escape of the Royal Family. His plan fails when a priest recognizes the King, and the unhappy pair are returned to Paris, and death. The courage of the king and queen lives after them.

THE GREAT WALTZ

When the Commercial Bank of Vienna dismisses him, Johann Strauss gets a job as musician in Dommayer's Cafe. His inspired performance there impresses Carla Donner, a member of the Imperial Opera, who invites him to play for her friends. Strauss is deeply infatuated by Carla, but after she ridicules him, he marries his first sweetheart, Poldi. Years later, he and Carla meet again, and realizing their love, plan an elopement. Poldi unselfishly gives them her blessings but, at the last moment, the lovers separate and Strauss returns to his faithful wife.

* * *

BOYS TOWN

With the aid of a pawn-broker friend, Father Flanagan founds a happy, self-governing community of boys who might have ended as criminals. The most disrupting influence among his charges is hard-bitten young Whitey Marsh who, after earning the enmity of the other youngsters, runs away. Through his bandit brother, Whitey accidently becomes involved in a bank robbery and almost ruins the good reputation of Father Flanagan's school. However, when his innocence and unsuspecting love for Boys Town are revealed, he returns with the priest, and is unanimously elected Mayor by the enthusiastic boys.

* * *

MEET THE GIRLS

Homer Watson, the owner of a valuable diamond, is travelling from Honolulu to San Francisco with his wife, Daisy. Also on the boat are Judy and Terry, two penniless girls whom the Captain has put to work, and Maurice Leon, a famous jewel thief. When the diamond disappears, due to Mrs. Watson's negligence, Judy and Terry become involved and, in clearing themselves, prove that Leon is the real crook. The grateful Daisy rewards them liberally.

* * *

PROFESSOR, BEWARE!

Dean Lambert, a bespectacled young college professor, owns an incomplete set of tablets which tell the tale of two ancient lovers. Lambert believes he is the story's hero reincarnated, and wants the last tablet which will reveal his ultimate fate. When he is invited to join an expedition leaving New York for Egypt, he begins a crazy cross-country dash, pursued by Jane, a beautiful heiress who makes him marry her. Jane's irate father separates the newlyweds, but they finally win his approval and travel to Egypt together, which proves that love will find a way.

$250,000.00 MOVIE QUIZ winner! Read this carefully, for your chance to click is excellent

P R I Z E S

1st Prize	$50,000	40 of $500 each	20,000
2nd Prize	25,000	40 of $250 each	10,000
2 of $10,000 each	20,000	300 of $100 each	30,000
5 of $5,000 each	25,000	5000 of $10 each	50,000
5 of $2,000 each	10,000
10 of $1,000 each	10,000	Total -	$250,000

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" was especially enjoyable to me as its gay and sad songs brought back many memories. I recalled the happy times associated with the beginning of jazz and the tragic occurrences of the World War. Somehow, there's nothing so satisfying as reminiscing, and besides the opportunity for this, the film offers splendid acting and settings.

BOY MEETS GIRL

Everyone wonders what makes "the wheels go 'round" in a big studio and even though the answer in "Boy Meets Girl" is probably exaggerated, I loved the picture because it gave an inside, intimate picture of a "film factory." I'd rather laugh than eat, too, and there's a laugh a movie minute in this riotous story. Fun is the thing—and here it is aplenty!

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND

Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche are all members of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." While Don had fallen in love with Alice at their very first meeting, unknown even to themselves, Alice and Tyrone are in love with each other. When Don sings a song he has composed especially for Alice, she and Tyrone realize their love. With Alice's withdrawal from the band, Tyrone leaves for war. Hurt by his attitude, she marries Don. Years later, when Tyrone's orchestra has made him famous, he and Alice are happily reunited. It is Don who really brings them together.

BOY MEETS GIRL

Two Hollywood scenarists, who look more like collegians than writers in their little round caps, have a great idea. They plan to make a star of an infant, and before it is born, become its godfathers, with power of attorney. When the baby becomes famous, they forget to renew this power which makes their own jobs insecure, and they resort to a wild plan in order to retain their hold. They are joyous when they outwit their scheming rivals, but are really doomed to disappointment, for Susie, the mother, suddenly ends her baby's career by taking him to England.

THAT CERTAIN AGE

Deanna Durbin is a fifteen-year-old who thinks she has just found love. The object of her affections is Melvyn Douglas, a war-weary newspaper correspondent. When she puts her whole heart into the singing of the Waltz Aria from "Romeo and Juliet," and addresses her song to Melvyn, Jackie Cooper, her youthful boy friend, is deeply hurt and turns to another girl to get even. Deanna's parents, learning of her infatuation, conspire with Melvyn and produce a woman whom Melvyn introduces as his wife. Deanna's heart is broken, but she recovers quickly and wins back the still devoted Jackie.

* * *

HOLD THAT CO-ED

When George Murphy arrives at State College, where he has taken a job as football coach, he discovers that the college is just a jerk-water school in the final stages of dilapidation. John Barrymore, chief executive of the state, has just taken another fat slice out of the college budget, and there are not sufficient funds to pay the new coach. George Murphy consents to coach the team for nothing, however, when he sees the anxious faces of the students—and, realizing that it will help his fight for U. S. Senator, John Barrymore gives a certain sum to support State's team. They win their final big game, and the governor turns out to be not such a bad sort, after all.

* * *

BLOCKHEADS

Oliver Hardy takes Stan Laurel home to meet his wife. Mrs. Hardy cold-shoulders Stan and angrily leaves the house. The boys are preparing their own dinner when the stove explodes and Patricia Ellis, a neighbor, comes in to see what has happened. Mrs. Hardy returns unexpectedly and Stan and Oliver, terrified, conceal their guest in a trunk. When they try to get the trunk out of the apartment, the noise brings Billy Gilbert from across the hall and, Patricia, hearing her husband's voice, bobs out of the trunk. The boys begin to run, with the furious husband after them.

* * *

CAMPUS CONFESSIONS

Middleton College is in the doldrums because Atterbury, Sr., their one man money bag, clamps the lid on all athletics. This makes Wayne Atterbury, Jr., poison on the campus, particularly with Joyce, the campus reporter—until he lands a straight right to the jaw of his worst heckler, and then, when he shows he is a whizz with a basketball, (Continued on page 17)

WHY DOES THE BRIDE Wear a Veil?

• In olden days the bridal veil was supposed to protect the bride from the "evil eye" of some invisible "evil spirit."

Today, women know that they don't need protection from unseen "evil spirits"—but they do need protection for their skin.

Did you know that more women in America use Italian Balm, the famous Skin Softener, than any other preparation of its kind?

This famous skin protector — for warding off chapping, dryness, and work-or-weather skin coarseness — contains the costliest ingredients of any of the largest-selling brands. Yet it costs far less than a small fraction of a cent to use liberally each day. It "goes so far." Test it on your skin. Try it before you buy—at Campana's expense. Use FREE coupon below.

Campana's
Italian Balm
"America's Most Economical Skin Protector"

FREE

CAMPANA SALES COMPANY
600 Lincolnway, Batavia, Illinois
Gentlemen: I have never tried Italian Balm. Please send me VANITY Bottle FREE and postpaid.

*Name*_____
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____
In Canada, Campana, Ltd., MG 600 Caledonia Road, Toronto

BETWEEN YOU

Why turn a romantic lover like Taylor into a he-man, asks one fan.

$5.00 Prize Letter
Family Pictures

Are Hollywood producers coming down to earth? The answer is, "Yes, and it's about time." For years the major studios have been grinding out star-studded spectacles and flickers saturated with phoney sophistication. Now they're giving us such down-to-earth and lovable pictures as "White Banners," the Jones family pictures, and the Judge Hardy series.

They are giving us people who can act—actors and actresses who can act humanly and with genuine warmth. Already we have stellar performers such as Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Mickey Rooney, Jackie Cooper, Virginia Wiedler and Donnie Dunagan. These players have shown us that pictures about the home and the family can be made much more interesting than pictures about phoney counts and runaway heiresses.

What theatre-goer is not touched when he sees Mother Carey worrying over one of her brood, or amused when he sees Mickey Rooney in his first tuxedo? Why not drag the movies out of the thin air of fantasy and put them down right in our own living-rooms?

We are getting a new type of picture and a new type of star. We are getting films and stars as down-to-earth and warm as fresh baked apple pie. Hollywood, you've a fine start for providing us with real honest-to-goodness moving pictures. More power to you!—Russell S. Burg, Denver, Col.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Thanks for the Memory

These are the ten most memorable moments moving pictures have given me. Do you remember them?

For thrills: In "San Francisco," a ragged crowd marching over the hill into the dawn of a new day for their loved city. Hatless, courageous, united, triumphant, they sang together the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." The mile-a-minute, breath-taking, heart-rending power dive of Clark Gable and his plane in "Test Pilot."

For pathos: Luise Rainier's beautifully restrained heart-break in the wistful telephone scene of "The Great Ziegfeld." The fade-out in "A Star is Born" with Janet Gaynor's gallant cry, "This is—Mrs. Norman Maine!"

For high comedy: The immortal hitch-hiking sequence in "It Happened One Night." The halting progress of Loy, Powell, and Asta in the hilarious dog-walking scene in "The Thin Man."

For tragedy: The tender death of Norma Shearer in "Smilin' Thru" and the courageous death of Margaret Sullavan in "Three Comrades."

For romance: The marriage of the "star-crossed" lovers in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." In "Naughty Marietta," Nelson Eddy's singing "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" to Jeanette MacDonald in a lazily floating canoe.

Ah me!—Mrs. J. R. Zimmerman, Indianapolis, Ind.

$2.00 Prize Letter
Bob Taylor

Why all the fuss about cinematizing Robert Taylor as a virile, he-man sort of chap? Just because a few people (and they were probably envious males and frustrated females) had the idea that he was nothing but a pretty boy whose job was to make love to glamorous gals isn't any true reason to think he is a "panty-waist." It isn't his fault that women hid under his bed, even swiped his vest buttons. Certainly it isn't his fault that he's good-looking.

One has only to consider Bob Taylor to know that he's a regular guy, a man's man. Of course, "A Yank at Oxford" gave a couple of wallops to the pretty boy legend, and in "The Crowd Roars" Taylor finished the job by knocking the legend to the canvas for a count.

The point is this: A lot of us gals go thru life sans romance, or being contented with just any ordinary sort of man who takes a shine to us. Seeing a handsome lover on the screen satisfies that secret desire of ours to be loved by someone whom all the world admires. After all, any brawny pug can fight or become involved in a brawl, but not every man can be the personification of woman's dream-lover. Valentino was that; so is Robert Taylor. Yet, you have only to see them to know they're masculine to the ninth degree.

Is it so wrong to bring happiness to us old maids and plain ugly ducklings who get our romance only via the silver-screen with its Valentinos and Robert Taylors?—M. F. Doner, Seattle, Washington.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Gary Cooper

Gary Cooper is making another cowboy picture, and I call that good news for fans who like class A Westerns. Gary is an old hand at this sort of thing. He was doing puncher parts when some of our modern day screen cowlads were campus cutups.

Cooper really looks like a cowboy. He is lean and tanned, with a slow and quiet way of talking like one who has lived under the stars. He even has the characteristic squint. Furthermore, he can be depended upon to dress the part. No silk shirts and fluffy-haired chaps for him. Instead it will be blue denim pants and dark flannel shirts.

I read that the film, tentatively titled, "The Lady and the Cowboy," will have no villain. That suits me swell. Not even on the screen have I any use for mean critters who use knifing tactics.—J. C. Allen, Emeryville, Cal.

'N' ME

Frank, lively letters from fans to interest everyone. Lucky winners get cash prizes, too

An admirer of Rudy's wondered how her daughter would react to a Valentino revival.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Mother Won

My seventeen-year-old daughter sat awed and breathless in the hushed darkened movie theatre. She was seeing the immortal Rudolph Valentino!

As I watched her, I felt a little glow of pride. I had always told her stories of the great Valentino, and she had listened with a sort of amused patience, as though thinking, "Let Mom have her memories, but no one could ever compare with Gable, Taylor, Power, or MacMurray."

And so, when the revival of one of Rudy's greatest pictures, "The Son of the Sheik," was showing at our theatre, I took my daughter to see it, secretly praying that the present-day screen-fare would not altogether influence her against the different charm of Valentino.

I need not have feared. As the picture unreeled itself before our eyes, my daughter sat eagerly watching and admiring the great Valentino. I felt a lump in my throat, and a tear in my eye as I, too, watched Rudy as I had watched him fifteen years ago.

When the lights were turned up, and we slowly left the theatre in silence, my daughter pressed my hand and whispered, "You were right, Mom, he's swell."—Ada Springer, Revere, Mass.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Ronald Colman

I want to say just a word in praise of the most charming and talented actor on the screen today—Mr. Ronald Colman. Seldom photographed, infrequently interviewed, and never built up by publicity, this fine actor has remained on "top of the heap" for several years now, thus proving that the public still appreciates his fine acting ability. (Continued on page 81)

WRITE A LETTER—
WIN A PRIZE

This is an open forum, written by the fans and for them. Make your letter or poem brief. Remember, too, that your contributions must be original. Copying or adapting letters or poems from those already published constitutes plagiarism and will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Following are the prizes awarded each month for the best letters: 1st prize, $5; two second prizes of $2 each; six prizes of $1 each. Address: Between You 'n' Me, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

Achieve This→
Pond's "Glare-Proof" Rose Shades reflect only the softer rays—add thrilling glow.

Avoid This→
Brilliant lights drain the color from your face—kill your make-up!

Here's your Big Chance to get POND'S GLARE PROOF Rose Shades

FOR a limited time only, you can test any of four flattering Pond's "glare-proof" shades with your regular purchase of Pond's Cold Cream. Rose Cream (Natural) and Rose Brunette for the rosy-pink coloring fashion demands. Also Light Natural and Brunette.

Don't delay—go to your store at once! Ask for your Pond's Combination Package!

POND'S "GLARE-PROOF" ROSE SHADES—soften glare, reflect rose-touched rays

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

EXTRA-EXTRA-EXTRA!

This Amazing Pond's Offer at local stores

Choice of 4 shades:
Light Natural
Rose Cream (Natural)
Brunette
Rose Brunette

Now—with purchase of large jar of Pond's Cold Cream get a generous box of Pond's "Glare-Proof" Powder—

BOTH for the Price of the Cold Cream

FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY—GET YOUR COMBINATION PACKAGE TODAY

Say it with a Clear Skin

NO MAN or woman wants to have a finger poked at them or receive sympathy because of an unhealthy skin appearance.

Some skin troubles are tough to correct, but we do know this—skin tissues like the body itself must be fed from within.

To make the food we eat available for strength and energy, there must be an abundance of red-blood-cells.

Worry, overwork, undue strain, unbalanced diet, a cold, perhaps, as well as other causes, "burn-up" your red-blood-cells faster than the body renews.

S.S.S. Tonic builds these precious red cells. It is a simple, internal remedy, tested for generations and also proven by scientific research.

It is worthy of a thorough trial by taking a course of several bottles . . . the first bottle usually demonstrates a marked improvement.

Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite and improve digestion . . . a very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The larger size represents a price saving. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good." © The S.S.S. Co.

S.S.S. Tonic stimulates the appetite and helps change weak blood cells to strong ones acquainted I asked all about it and admired his chickens each time I made a purchase. I even went into town and priced plows, but they were so expensive I went right on growin' my produce by hand. Then one day I heard they'd sold their home and were moving. My business head came to the fore and over I went to strike a bargain."

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

(Continued from page 8)

Johnny chuckled, almost going into one of his "scat-tee-scats," as he explained, "I came home with the plow, twenty-two chickens and a sack of feed, all for a hundred and seventy bucks. Less than half the price of a new plow! With my new equipment, I figured to ease into this farming racket sort of quietly. All I need now is a cow and we'll have all the comforts of Indiana!"

We agreed it was certainly a start, considering the amount of space Mr. D. has to work with. However, after seeing an example of his carpentry it wasn't hard to believe that he could do even more!

WHAT I'm trying to do now," Johnny explained as we turned toward the house, is trade my place back east for something out here. You can get more on a trade than a straight sale. If I can find a house with enough land, I'll let that go as a down payment, then the rest I can pay in installments. One month I can fix the lawn or build a room and so on until I've got everything finished. It will be like rent and we'll never miss it that way. But, I don't want enough room so's I'll be getting a swimming pool or a tennis court. Once you get them you're finished—and it's goodbye to any savings then.

"I took a look at my bank book after my first year here and got an awful shock. I wasn't crying over spilled milk, but down I went and hired a business manager. He collects my salary and banks it, allowing me just so much for expenses each month. This next year will end up with a different tale or I'll know the reason why! I feel better already, now that I've settled down. As a matter of fact, I've taken to it so rapidly that the other night when we stayed out until eleven I really suffered the next day! Can't take it any more, I guess.

"It's not like in New York when I worked with orchestras. I worked nights and slept days and got used to the grind. Since coming here, I work by daylight and sleep by moonlight. But, I haven't forgotten my ole trumpet. No sir! There it is and I keep it well oiled and do a bit of practicing now and then—just to play safe. You can never tell when they'll get tired of me, so I'm pounding my A's often in case I have to go back to work!

"Fact is, not long ago, before they took up my option, I thought my time had come. I hadn't heard from the studio and got a little worried. Then I got a call from M.C.A. and they wanted me to take out an orchestra, at more money than I had any right to collect. I went down and heard the boys and they were pretty good, too. With a couple of weeks' rehearsal we could have whipped up something darn nice. I even had the itinerary set when they called me back to work, saying to skip any idea of a vacation. So, I climbed out of the orchestra pit and into some grease paint to scat-tee-scat a little. At that, guess I'd be kinda lost without my trumpet and shoutin'. I did one picture that was a straight part and I was running around in circles. It was a 'B' and they shoot, cut and show them in seventeen days! Well, I'll admit I don't want to do any more like that. They're too hard. Guess I don't know enough about acting and should stick to my music, eh?

"You know, it seems kinda funny I should be making my living playing and singing the hot stuff—swingy songs," Mr. Scat Davis reflected, serious for the moment. "My Dad had me playing a horn when I was three, but didn't allow me to play anything except good stuff. No jazz for him. But, I sorta slipped in a little every now and then on the side. He was instructor of music and conducted the Brazil (Indiana) Concert Band. I remember when I was about twelve and my uncle came from Terre Haute to ask Dad if I could come up and play in an orchestra. There was a shortage of trumpet players and the job paid twenty-five a week. Dad said, 'No!' most emphatically. But, by the next time he came, Dad decided that twenty-five bucks was good money, even though you had to play jazz for it. So, up I went and from then on I've been working steadily. You see, my studies were arranged so I went to school mornings and had the rest of the day free. I'm crazy about orchestra work. I even had my own once in St. Paul. I was with Fred Waring longer than any other person. That's how I came to the coast. Fred made a picture. Then when I got the chance to stay, I jumped at it, for it meant my dream come true. At last I would be in one spot long enough to have a place of my own."

Hearing Mr. D.'s thumbnail description of his past left little wonder that he could woo, and win, the daughter of the opposing movie theatre chain. Fact is, Mrs. D.'s Dad operated all picture palaces in the town except the one that Johnny was packing in the cash customers. I'm afraid that our hero is the "impulsive" type, for he courted his gal seven years before tripping to the altar!

So, if you read, in the near future, that Johnny Davis has become one of southern California's successful farmers, be sure that he's fallen heir to a nice long-term contract, minus, of course, too many of the usual options. They are Mr. D.'s boogy-boo and as Johnny says, "Give me a house, a dog and some land—with no options—then I'll live a happy life—whoa-ho-de-h-ho and scat-dee-sca-at!"

Jane Wyman is Johnny Davis' big moment in "Brother Rat." You'll admit she's cute.

(Continued from page 13)
he is actually "in" at last. That year Wayne makes the team and Middleton soars into athletic prominence. Joyce at last realizes she is in love with Wayne, and when Atterbury, Sr., tries to stop the big game, they convince him that love and basketball are too important to be trifled with.

* * *

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY

Betsy leaves the Madrey Orphanage to live with Pop Shea and his daughter, Barbara, who have adopted her. Pop is the proprietor of the Hotel Variety, home of vaudeville stars since the turn of the century, but now in its seedy days. Betsy makes many friends in her new home, including Roger, the nephew of crochety Sarah Wendling, who turns out to be the owner of the hotel. When Mrs. Wendling threatens to cut Roger off from his share of the Wendling estate, because he has fallen in love with Barbara, he brings suit against his aunt. It is Betsy, finally, who wins both the suit for Roger and Mrs. Wendling's heart.

* * *

BREAKING THE ICE

Because he is anxious to make money to take his mother to Indiana, Willy sells some very old newspapers to an antique dealer named Terwilliger. But the money, he realizes, is not sufficient and he decides to try his luck in the city. He hides in Terwilliger's wagon, drawn by a mule named Chippendale, and arrives in Philadelphia. Pinch-hitting for a five-year-old skating star, he becomes famous overnight. He returns home, however, because Terwilliger has cheated him, and finds that he is suspected of stealing a twenty-dollar bill belonging to his uncle. He concludes the bill must have been mixed with the newspapers be sold Terwilliger. After a mad search, they find the money, and Willy realizes his dream. He takes his mother to Indiana.

* * *

MR. DOODLE KICKS OFF

Ellory Bugs offers a huge donation to his alma mater, payable only in the event his son, Jimmie "Doodle" Bugs becomes a football hero. Doodle refuses to have anything to do with football until the President persuades his daughter to use her charms to get him to play. The ruse works and in his first game, his unorthodox submarine play followed by his parachute play are the high spots of the game. The final game of the season arrives and Doodle once again comes through for his team and they win by a single point.

* * *

IN OLD MEXICO

An escaped prisoner, The Fox, swears revenge on Colonel Gonzales and Hopalong Cassidy, who has brought about his capture. He is aided by his sister, Janet, and causes the death of the Colonel. Hopalong, with the help of Anita, the dead man's grand-daughter, and his friend, Windy, outwits the Fox and his men, and, in an attempt to shoot Cassidy, the bandit kills his own sister.

* * *

SAFETY IN NUMBERS

After a guest appearance on the radio as the "world's best mother," Mrs. Jones agrees to go on the air in a series of broadcasts on domestic problems. The program is sponsored by Mr. Edmonds, President of the company controlling the Barton Springs, site of a new mineral water discovery. Mr. Jones becomes very much interested in the new mineral, and persuades Mr. Emmons to allow the citizens of Maryville to invest in the "good thing." The spring is discovered to be a phoney and the swindlers, having made a quick getaway, are tricked into returning by Mrs. Jones. The money is finally returned and the crooks are arrested.

* * *

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY

Bob Montgomery, a successful novelist, goes to a little southern town to elude a designing actress, and meets Janet Gaynor, who is about to be married. When Janet's bridegroom fails to appear, she leaves for New York to find him. She visits the apartment of Montgomery who, having been advised that the actress is gone, has also returned to New York. Without realizing it, Bob has fallen in love with Janet, as has his best friend. Their argument over her is complicated by the arrival of Janet's fiancee, but Bob proves the most successful of Janet's three loves.

* * *

GIVE ME A SAILOR

Letty is the ugly duckling sister of Nancy Larkin. Walter, the man they both love, gets shore leave. Also, he is marriage-minded. Each sister determines to land him. Through a mix-up, when Letty enters her home-made cookies in a contest, a shot of her lovely legs are included and so she suddenly finds herself a winner. She wins a man, too. Not the one she planned on, but one equally good.

(Continued on page 113)

How Dull, Dry-Looking Hair Reveals Glamorous, Natural Beauty

Millions Thrilled by Beauty Miracle of Special Drene for Dry Hair

WOMEN with dull, dry-looking, unruly hair need no longer despair. Here is an amazingly easy way to reveal all the glamorous natural beauty that is hidden away in your hair. A way that leaves your hair without a trace of ugly film to cloud its charm and beauty—leaves it radiating with its full natural sparkle and gleam—brilliant beyond your fondest dreams.

Special Drene Shampoo for Dry Hair leaves unruly hair thrillingly soft and manageable, so that it sets beautifully after washing. A single sudsing and thorough rinsing in plain water leaves hair gleaming and glistening in all its radiant natural brilliance and lustre.

Drene works these wonders because it is an entirely different type of shampoo. So different, that the process by which it is made has been patented. It is not a soap—not an oil. Its whole beautifying action is the result of its amazing lather. For Drene actually makes five times more lather than soap in hardest water. Lather so gentle and cleansing that it washes away dirt, grime, perspiration—even loose dandruff flakes. It cannot leave a dulling film on hair to dim and hide its natural brilliance, nor a greasy oil film to catch dust. Instead, Drene removes ugly film often left by other types of shampoo. So vinegar, lemon and special after-rinses are totally unnecessary. And, because Drene contains no harmful chemicals, it is safe for any kind of hair. Special Drene for Dry Hair is made and guaranteed by Procter & Gamble. It is approved by Good Housekeeping.

So—for thrilling, natural beauty of dull, unruly, dry-looking hair, ask for Special Drene for Dry Hair at drug, department or 10c stores. Or—at your beauty shop. Whether you shampoo your hair at home or have it done by a professional beautician, you'll be amazed and delighted to see your hair manageable and sparkling. How glorious a Drene shampoo really is!

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Special drene Shampoo for Dry Hair also Regular drene for Normal or Oily Hair

Youth...EAGER, VITAL...OFFERS ITS LIFE...GLORIFIES ITS ARDENT LOVE . . . IN THE GREATEST ADVENTURE OF THE GREAT WAR!

A picture dramatically presenting two young stars destined for instant fame ...in the heroic story of the wooden cockleshells that won the Navy's greatest honors! Produced on a spectacular scale by Darryl F. Zanuck! Masterfully directed by John Ford!

SUBMARINE PATROL

A 20th Century-Fox Picture with

RICHARD GREENE • NANCY KELLY
PRESTON FOSTER • GEORGE BANCROFT
and
SLIM SUMMERVILLE • JOHN CARRADINE
JOAN VALERIE • HENRY ARMETTA
DOUGLAS FOWLEY • WARREN HYMER
MAXIE ROSENBLOOM • ELISHA COOK, JR.
J. FARRELL MacDONALD • ROBERT LOWERY

Directed by John Ford

Associate Producer Gene Markey • Screen Play by Rian James, Darrell Ware and Jack Yellen • From a story by Ray Milholland and Charles B. Milholland

Darryl F. Zanuck in Charge of Production

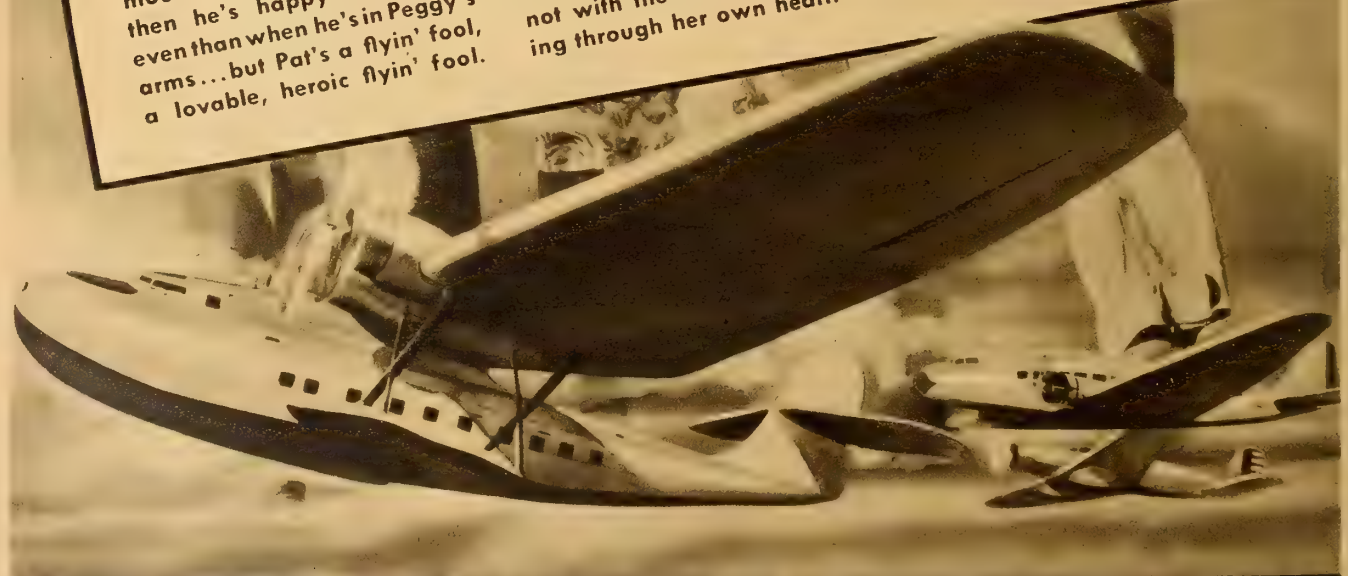
Joan Bennett

John Howard

Deanna Durbin

DREAMERS WHO DARE TO MAKE THEIR

PAT (Fred MacMurray)



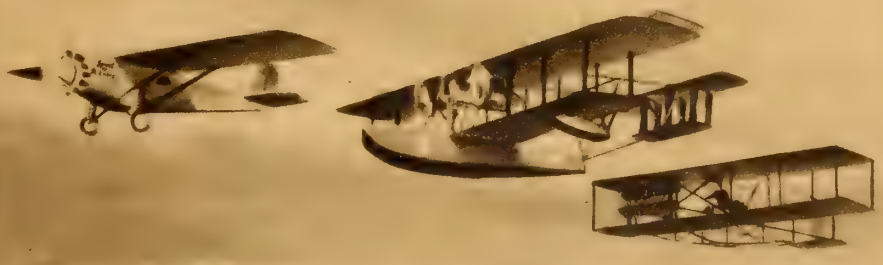
When the motor is making him deaf again . . . and the propeller is blowing the hair off his head . . . and he can smell the funny stink of burning castor oil . . . and see some blue mountains to climb over . . . then he's happy . . . happier even than when he's in Peggy's arms . . . but Pat's a flyin' fool, a lovable, heroic flyin' fool.

PEGGY (Louise Campbell)

She's been looking at the sky so long her eyes have stars in them . . . this girl who's had the luck, call it good, call it bad, to love a lad with flying blood in his veins and no use for the good earth at all except to leave it . . . and yet she wouldn't have him different, not with the love of it winging through her own heart.

SCOTTY (Ray Milland)

It's out of the dreams and the sweat and the heart-break of earnest, serious-minded men like Scotty that aviation was born, yes, and lives, and grows greater and greater, year by year, day by day, moment by moment . . . and what is Scotty's reward for all of this, not even the love of the girl whom he adores . . .



"MEN WITH WINGS"

PARAMOUNT'S ALL TECHNICOLOR CAVALCADE OF AVIATION

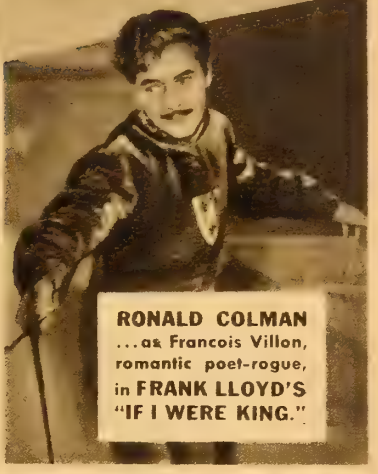
A MOVIE QUIZ $250,000.00 CONTEST PICTURE

DREAMS COME TRUE . . .

FOR the first time on any screen and in the glorious, heart-throbbing power of Technicolor, Paramount tells the mighty story of America's favorite heroes, "Men With Wings." Before your eyes, in flaming sequence after flaming sequence, moves that thrilling cavalcade of courage, the march of American aviation, told in the living, human story of two boys and a girl whose romance is the romance of aviation itself, with all its heart-leaping excitement, its clutch of fear at the throat, its soul-rending disappointments, its hysterical, all-conquering triumphs.

with

FRED MacMURRAY · RAY MILLAND



Produced and Directed by William A. Wellman, creator of "Wings"

LOUISE CAMPBELL

Screen Play by Robert Carson

Andy Devine · Lynne Overman · Porter Hall · Walter Abel
Kitty Kelly · Virginia Weidler · Donald O'Connor

COMING SOON
THE YEAR'S GRANDEST LOVE STORY . . .
"IF I WERE KING"

RONALD COLMAN . . . as Francois Villon, romantic poet-rogue, in FRANK LLOYD'S "IF I WERE KING."

FRANCES DEE . . . as the lady fair, whom Villon loves.

ELLEN DREW . . . as the tavern girl who loves Francois.

Gary Cooper

EXTRA GOOD-WILL BOTTLE OF HINDS

just when your chapped hands need it most!

MONEY BACK ON THIS

IF NOT SATISFIED WITH THIS

Try Hinds at our expense! Extra Good-Will Bottle comes as a gift when you buy the medium size. No extra cost! A get-acquainted gift to new users! A bonus to regular Hinds users!

Money Back if Hinds fails to soothe and soften your rough, chapped skin. If the Good-Will Bottle doesn't make your hands feel softer, look nicer, you can get MONEY BACK on large bottle. More lotion for your money—if you are pleased. You win—either way. This offer good for limited time only. Hurry!

You've never used Hinds? Try it now. Money Back (where you bought it) if Hinds fails to soothe and soften your rough, chapped skin. It's extra-creamy, extra-softening. Even 1 application proves—Hinds makes chapped hands feel smoother! No matter how hard you work—doing dishes, dusting—Hinds gives you soft "Honeymoon Hands."

You've always used Hinds? Then this 2-bottle Good-Will bargain brings you a bonus! Nearly 20% more lotion! MORE HINDS—for the price of the medium size—than ever before! The Good-Will Bottle is handy for kitchen use, office desk. Hinds tones down redness . . . smooths away chapping. Also comes in 10c, 25c, and $1 sizes.

LOOK FOR THIS HINDS GOOD-WILL BARGAIN AT ALL TOILET GOODS COUNTERS

Copyright, 1938, Lehn & Fink Products Corp., Bloomfield, N. J.

HINDS HONEY & ALMOND CREAM

FOR HONEYMOON HANDS

Mr. and Mrs. Temple and their famous little daughter, Shirley, start out on one of their many sightseeing tours.

Reporters to right of her, cameramen to left of her —but none phase La Temple. She is mistress of every situation.

Shirley DISCOVERS AMERICA

A HOLLYWOOD radio columnist was on the air, reading an open letter, and in millions of homes Shirley Temple fans heard him hurl a serious charge at the mother of America's most famous child.

Before Mrs. Temple left Hollywood, he said, he had had a heart-to-heart talk with her and she had told him that she was planning a real vacation for Shirley, one that would take her out of the spotlight and into the sunlight. Naturally he had been delighted when he heard that, but since then he had been thoroughly disillusioned when he learned that elaborate preparations had been made for the trip, that a press agent had accompanied Shirley and had arranged all sorts of publicity stunts, such as having her crowned princess of an Indian tribe, made a Shriner, and elected a member of the Junior League at the north rim of the Grand Canyon.

All of those things, the columnist asserted, might seem amusing to adult members of the party, but had they stopped to think what they meant to Shirley? To Shirley, taking part in all those stunts was depriving her of the vacation she had been promised.

At the very moment this speech was being made, a party of eight tired travelers landed in Craig, Colorado, in two cars, in one of which Shirley Temple, her mother and father traveled. In the other was Jack Mulcahy, the press agent who had been criticized, a maid and chauffeur and two bodyguards. As night was falling and the Temples did not wish to do any traveling after dark, Jack Mulcahy stopped a passerby and said, "What's the leading hotel in this town?"

"There ain't no hotel," said the passerby, "but there's a tourist camp a little way up."

"We stayed at the tourist camp," Jack Mulcahy told me. "When we arrived there, I told the proprietor that I wanted accommodations for eight people. 'That'll be $13.50,' he said, 'payable in advance.'

"One of the members of the party is a child, I told him, as Shirley came out of the car. 'Okay, that's seventy-five cents less.'

"As Shirley stepped out of that car, the proprietor yawned, not realizing that the most famous child in the world was a few inches from him. There were eight other people at the tourist camp, but, weary from

New York's Governor Lehman entertained for Shirley at his country estate. Now she has a new fan—Spook, a Great Dane.

Shirley's tour included every experience from a night in a tourists' camp to a day at the White House, and she'll never forget it.

BY DORA ALBERT

Where did you spend your vacation? Little Miss Temple took in the whole U. S. A. and, what's more, had the time of her young life doing it traveling, they didn't notice Shirley. They went to bed early and left the next morning before we were awake, never realizing that they had slept in the same camp with the famous child star.

"Does all that sound as if we had made elaborate preparations for the trip? We hadn't. When the Temples liked a place, we stayed for several days. When they were bored or it was very hot, as it was in St. Louis the day we were there, we left the same day.

"The heart-to-heart talk the columnist said he had had with Mrs. Temple never took place, as he has not seen her in two years. And all the publicity stunts to which he said we had subjected Shirley were figments of the imagination. She was not crowned princess of an Indian tribe; in fact, the only Indians she saw during her entire trip across the continent were the silversmiths in Bryce and Zion Canyons. She was not made a Shriner. Since only men are admitted to the Shrine, she would not have been eligible, and she was not elected a member of the Junior League at the north rim of the Grand Canyon. The truth is there is no such organization there."

"And so, let me tell you the first true story of Shirley Temple's vacation trip.

"Determined not to commercialize it, Mrs. Temple turned down an offer of $350,000 for personal appearances by Shirley, and also an offer by a famous syndicate of $15,000 for a day-by-day account of Shirley's progress across America.

"We left Hollywood on May 31st, and one of our first stops was Boulder Dam. With awe Shirley looked up at the eight giant electric generators, one of which gives enough power to light a city of 300,000, and exclaimed, 'What a wonderful movie set that would make, wouldn't it!'

"Because she had never been inside any school save the schoolhouse on the studio lot," Mr. Mulcahy continued, "Shirley was anxious to see the kind of school to which other little girls go, and the principal of the Government School at Las Vegas, Nevada, offered to take her into all the classes. With interest, Shirley stared at the blackboards, and at the crayon drawings done by students. 'I do that kind of work, too,' she confided to one of the teachers. (Continued on page 88)

THE Lure

BY KAY PROCTOR

HEDY LAMARR is the name. You pronounce the Hedy to rhyme with lady.

She owns a chinchilla wrap and an eleven carat pure white diamond, among other little trifles. In case you measure your diamonds by the carat or half carat, an eleven carat stone is about the size of a dime and as thick as the tip of your little finger. She lives in an extremely modest little six-room bungalow which she rents furnished. She has made one American picture to date, "Algiers," and has set Hollywood on its ear as it hasn't been tilted in many a moon.

There was a time when the word glamor meant something. It meant mystery, allure, exciting beauty, and that certain indefinable something that set men half crazy with desire and women with envy. It meant the late Barbara LaMarr, Pola Negri, Nita Naldi, and Gloria Swanson in her hey-day. It meant flame.

Then everybody began kicking the word around. Every pretty little newcomer with a passable figure was a glamor girl. Every gal who had more than one beau had glamor. You could buy it by the box in any drug store, according to the ads, and find it on every movie lot in town, according to the publicity departments. Absolute tops was reached when buxom, pumpkin-mouthed Martha Raye made the serious pronunciamento that henceforth she was through with plebeian pratt falls and would the world please realize she not only was a great artiste but also one big bundle of glamor! Yes, believe it or not!

What of the Gardiner-Lamarr romance rumors? Hedy answers here.

Hedy was the spoiled only child of a wealthy Viennese family.

One moment Lamarr is all guile—the next she's artless as a child.

THAT'S LAMARR

She's "Hedy" stuff, with that indefinable something that spells glamor

Then along came Hedy just to remind us what glamor really is. It all happened so suddenly that everyone is still more or less in a state of shock, including the beauteous Hedy herself, who is sure she must be dreaming.

"What is this all about?" she asked. "I do not understand it. For seven months I am here, a nobody. Suddenly everybody gets excited and I am important. This I do not understand."

"Algiers" is the answer. Nobody had had a chance to see her before that picture opened. And there's quite a story back of that. But once her exciting beauty was flashed on the screen, once people saw her play her torrid love scenes with Charles Boyer, the whole thing was burst wide open.

She was loaned to Walter Wanger for that picture by her home studio. Wanger was introduced to her by Charles Boyer at a private party and, after seeing her, he tested no more aspirants for the role of the exotic Parisienne who lures Boyer to his death. Her studio maintains that it had her in mind for the role when it owned the rights to the picture and that, after selling the story to Wanger, merely was waiting for another suitable role for Hedy. There are those who maintain the studio was afraid to gamble with an unknown, and that Hedy got lost in the shuffle of European actresses.

Hedy is one of the most provocative women in Hollywood. I spent an entire afternoon with her at her home, where she lives with Ericka Manthey, a middle-aged Viennese who is a combination maid, secretary and companion. She is one of the most unaffected of all the lovely women here. There is a natural charm about her that wins your heart immediately.

But she is provocative. One moment she is every inch the sophisticate, the next unbelievably naïve. One moment she is thoroughly a woman of the world, for all her youth of twenty-three years, and the next she is almost sub-deb in her girlishness. One moment you are sure she is a clever and shrewd little person who knows all the answers, and then she will confound you by some utterly ingenuous remark.

We were talking about the current separation of a prominent Hollywood couple, for instance, and she said, "I cannot understand this American psychology of separation without divorce. Either you love a man and live with him in complete marriage, or you do not love him and that is the end of everything. That is the way I see it."

Fifteen minutes later she was telling why she herself had married at the astonishing age of seventeen.

"I thought it would be wonderful to wear the gold ring and to have waiters address me as Frau instead of Fraulein," she candidly admitted. "When I got it, I used to fuss with my hair, pose my hand on my cheeks, anything to make sure everyone would see it."

A child playing grown-up! And yet at that time, as the wife of the fabulously wealthy Viennese munitions maker, Fritz Mandl, she was an acknowledged leader of Austria's smart social set and already a famous Continental hostess. (Continued on page 70)

BY MARY PARKES

HE'S

Tracy has no tricks, he doesn't work for effects, he isn't even handsome in the ordinary sense—yet he "gets" you. Just why?

Fisherman

Priest

NEVER OUT OF Character

HE WAS just a little kid, maybe eight years old, maybe nine. He'd hitch-hiked all the way from Connecticut to Boys Town, which is twelve miles out of Omaha. I was there when he came in," said Spencer Tracy. "There were sores on his feet and hollows under his eyes and he had an old, mangy, moth-eaten cat clutched to his skinny front. He hadn't washed for days. Nor eaten either. Nor laughed. Father Flanagan didn't have any room for him. Boys Town can only take care of 200 boys at a time and it was full-up. But he took him in. There's one place on earth, I guess, where there's always room where there isn't any room—and that's in the heart of a man who cares about kids.

"Well, Father Flanagan took the kid in. And the kid said, 'I have a confession to make to you, Father. I haven't had anything to eat for forty-eight hours. But I stole six quarts of milk on the way out—for the cat.' "

There was a silence in the portable dressing-room on the Boys Town set where we were talking. The silence was broken by Spencer, sitting there in the black vestments of Father Flanagan. He said, "Certainly makes you appreciate your rations, things like that. . . ."

I didn't have to be told what Spencer was thinking. It was all there in his eyes . . . he was thinking of the kids out here in Hollywood, in California and other over-privileged places, his kids and the kids his kids play with . . . sun-tanned and well-fed, with ponies and swimming pools and all the vitamins in their diets and love as generous as the California sunshine to warm them. He was thinking of those other children, too—the underprivileged ones whom he had seen while on location at Boys Town.

And I was thinking that I was on the track of that much-discussed question of what makes Spencer Tracy the great actor he is.

"I wonder," Spencer was saying, "that any one of us out here dares to open our traps to use the word 'hardship.' What do we know about hardships? There can't be any more stories written about the 'Hardships of the Stars'. Who would give one? Not me. We moan we have no 'private lives', no privacy. But wouldn't we moan louder if any one of us could walk, footsore and starving, from Connecticut to Nebraska, with no one to give us so much as the eye?

"What we've really got to complain about," said Spencer, "is that we don't get out of our cotton wadding often enough to realize how soft it is, what rags and straw and outhouses the 'other half' live in."

In Hollywood it is a favorite form of research on the part of directors, players, writers, to try to divine just what quality in Tracy makes his greatness. He has said of himself, "I've never seen an actor who looks like me." So it isn't his looks. He doesn't seem to "do" anything, folks say. He has no tricks. He doesn't work for effects. Then why is it that he can stick a wad of chewing gum on the tail of a plane and break your heart?

"It's the look in his eyes," Fredric March will tell you. "Such a look, nameless but inescapable, so that you can't keep your eyes off him no matter who else is playing a scene with him."

"I've never seen Tracy when he wasn't magnificent," said John Barrymore. "It's because he knows in his blood what he's doing."

"I wish I could be exactly like Spencer Tracy," carolled Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney and Jackie Cooper when, separately, I asked each one what screen actor he'd rather be like when he grows up.

"I think it's because he cares about people," vouchsafed Mickey Rooney when I asked him how he would define Tracy's greatness. "And the way he cares shows through."

"It's that look in his eyes," said Bob Taylor. "I have sat on the sidelines by the hour (Continued on page 94)

There's a deep, dark secret behind Spencer Tracy's success and—here at last it is revealed

Mrs. Rogers models while her talented daughter sketches.

GINGER'S Mama

And when Mrs. Rogers takes the

BY MARTHA KERR

I'VE BEEN learning about Ginger Rogers. I've learned that in the last six months she has been out only twice for dinner. I've learned what it is she wants out of life. I've even learned about her faults and her fears and her boy friends, and a little about the type of man she may marry. I've learned these things from the one person who knows her best, Lela Rogers, her mother.

Ginger was in California, finishing "Carefree" with Fred Astaire. Three thousand miles away, in New York City, Lela had set up housekeeping. It was their first separation. The rumors flew. They said Lela had leased that apartment so Ginger, overworked, could have a normal life between pictures. They also said Lela and Ginger had broken for good.

Jimmy Stewart squires Ginger on one of the few dates she's had time for.

Ginger adores sodas, so mother gave her this de luxe home fountain.

SPEAKS HER PIECE

stand, there isn't one in the jury who isn't convinced and converted Neither report is true. Both hurt the Rogers women.

"My job with Ginger is finished," Lela Rogers said to me. "Until a couple of years ago we discussed every problem, personal and business, together. Sometimes we differed, but in the end we always saw alike. Two years ago I realized Ginger was grown-up. She had to make her own decisions, her own mistakes. I had to be honest with myself. I've never regretted any of my experiences. To me the greatest sins are those of omission . . . so I let Ginger alone . . . to learn. "And," Lela heroically admitted, "it is in those last two years that Ginger has made the most strides, become a woman. Certainly her acting shows it very clearly.

"However, you laid the foundation," I interrupted.

"You might call it that," she said. "To me Ginger is like a diamond on which a cutter has labored for years, bringing out every facet by careful work. But she was a good diamond to begin with. She had to be, or the work would have failed.

"I came East to take up my own life, to pick up the threads of my original writing career—to get away from the label 'Stage Mother.' As for breaking with Ginger, that, of course, is utterly ridiculous—plain idle chatter!"

Then she told me. Ginger telephones her every other night. And there are innumerable wires and letters in the inimitable Gingerish manner. One morning Lela received a brief telegram containing the simple single statement, "Time to get up."

Before Lela left, Ginger had started a new hobby, modeling. She had begun Lela's head in clay. All the time Lela packed, Ginger sat on the bed, staring with the intentness of the artist, trying to memorize her mother's features. After Lela arrived in New York, there came a cryptic wire: "Am glad you are going to have a good time but why did you have to take your head along?"

Also, the week of her mother's departure, Ginger had been invited to take part in a tennis tournament. She is a superb athlete, but of late has been working so hard at the studio that there was no time for tennis practice. So, accepting the invitation, Ginger called her pals with. "Listen, kids, you've got to practice tennis with me every night this week." The result was she won all games until the semi-finals.

(Continued on page 99)

SHE'S A Smartie

This intimate character study of Sonja Henie reveals a side you never knew Sonja may look like a doll but there's nothing helpless about little Miss Henie.

BY NANETTE KUTNER

WHEN I questioned about Sonja. Henie, the press agent said, "Romance is cold."

And the fans outside her stateroom door had demanded that I ask Miss Henie about Richard Greene. "That new partner of hers," they called him.

The ship news reporters asked it first. There were two of them, a man and a woman. The woman took the lead. "What about Richard Greene?" she asked. The man echoed the question, "Yeah, tell us, what about him?"

Sonja turned a cold cheek. She said, "I am only with him in the picture."

"And in the gossip columns," snapped the woman reporter right back at her.

Sonja tried to laugh this off. She has learned in America. She knows all the "I tank I go home" answers. So she said, "We are very good friends." That went for Tyrone Power, too.

Later, she gave herself away. We were seated in the bedroom of her suite on the "Normandie." "We" were her mother, Sonja and I. Outside, in the living room, swarmed a crowd, assorted executives, press agents, a man from Madison Square Garden and a man delivering a new fur coat.

Sonja perched on the edge of one twin bed. She swung her sheer silk-stockinged legs, their feet in size three extra high heeled opera pumps. I remarked on the heels. Most athletes wear oxfords.

"High heels never bother me," she said.

But then, nothing bothers her. Sonja Henie is a healthy person with nerves of steel. She gives that impression. She wore a pin-striped navy blue tailored coat trimmed with a crisp white piqué collar. The coat fitted perfectly. The up-turned felt hat matched and was decorated with a pin, a diamond reproduction of Sonja, skating, with one leg in mid-air. It was a cute pin. It would have looked smart on a black afternoon dress. Now it spoiled the tailored effect. It was just a little too much. So was the strap under her chin.

On-screen Sonja's clinging, feminine and fragile—off, she's as substantial as pretzels and beer.

Sonja on the set with Richard Greene and Cesar Romero whom she dates for publicity.

Sonja Henie loves clothes. She knows values. Yet she will never be rated as one of the best dressed women in Hollywood. She has so much yet to learn about the subtle art of sartorial simplicity.

She started toward the small living-room. The crowd was chattering away, anxious to reach her. She looked at me and smiled and said, with that faint trace of accent, that slight misplacing of words, "It's not nice for an interview, is it?"

I was just about to say no, it wasn't, when a side door burst open and a tall girl came rushing at Sonja.

There were delighted shrieks on both sides. Even Sonja's mother shrieked and babbled something in Norwegian. The girl was the wife of one of Sonja's business associates. They hadn't seen each other in months, not since Sonja had started something new by ice skating in normally snowless Florida.

It was when she met this girl that Sonja gave herself away. Just like anyone talking to her chum, she wanted to tell about her boy friend. The very first thing she said was, "What do you think of my new leading man?" She added a few words about red hair and dimples, and seemed more than pleased when her friend said she thought Greene and Sonja look alike.

Then she remembered me. She turned quickly, smiled and glanced down at her corsage of orchids.

"Do you like orchids?" she asked.

"I love them," I said.

"Every woman looks well with them," said Sonja. Then she added slyly, "I have twelve orchids . . . sent me." She paused significantly.

It was my turn to exhibit the cold cheek. I would not be bribed. The Richard Greene paragraph was in this story to stay. So Miss Henie talked about her home in Hollywood. "It is very nice," she said. "It has a swimming pool, you know. I like living in California."

At ten o'clock that morning Sonja had telephoned, suggesting I meet her within fifteen minutes at the boat, in cabin one twenty-four, so we could have some time alone. I got there on the dot. Miss Henie showed up at half-past eleven. She'd been detained by photographers.

IN THE meanwhile I waited. I talked to the fans who clustered outside the cabin door, a matron from Jersey, a skinny girl with glasses, three school girls from Brooklyn, a candid camera fiend and a middle-aged woman who, from the knowledge she graciously imparted to me, must have read every press clipping ever sent out about Miss Henie. Because these were her fans I inquired of them just what I should ask, and it was they who suggested Mr. Greene.

For ten cents the "Normandie" lets you buy a ticket to see the boat. They had bought their tickets. But they had come to see Sonja Henie. "We read that she was sailing," they said.

"The 'Normandie' is one of the greatest boats ever built. You ought to see it," I hinted, fearing for the privacy of my interview.

"We want to see Miss Henie," they chanted.

And they did. First came three hat boxes, twelve suit cases and Mrs. Henie, carrying a blue fox cape and a mink coat, then Sonja, who turned on that smile and said that if they would send in the pictures she would autograph them. After that, she expertly whisked me into the cabin.

Meeting her is a shock—and a pleasant one. Here is none of that dainty, fragile pink-and-white-frosting-on-a-cake beauty which is hers on (Continued on page 91)

AND Father IS DOING

BY KATHARINE HARTLEY

SEE THAT man over there?" said Dick, nodding across the room. "He has a new baby, too. At the hospital he had the room across from ours."

The room across from ours! Well, in a way, that foolish-sounding statement was true, for when one Joan Blondell Powell gave birth to one Ellen Powell, weighing eight pounds six ounces, on June 30th, Papa Powell just about moved into the hospital, too.

It was eight o'clock in the morning when Dick bundled Joan into the car, and set off on that long awaited trip to the Cedars of Lebanon. A few minutes before he had phoned the studio to say that he wouldn't be coming to work. "It's here!" he had announced ecstatically and prematurely, and that was what threw the studio into so much confusion. The word spread that the baby had been born at eight, and yet no one could discover during the next few hours exactly what it had been, a boy or a girl. The baby didn't arrive until after four in the afternoon, but Dick was too jittery between the hours of eight and four to even be reached on the phone.

"I had only one disappointment about the whole thing," he admitted at lunch, smiling ruefully. "For months I had been planning that automobile trip to the hospital with Joan. I had it all worked out in my mind. I would break every speed law, ignore every stop sign, go through every red light on the way. Then when I heard a siren screeching, I would give it even more gas. Finally, of course, the law would catch up with me, then I would say my little piece, 'Sorry, old pal, but the lady has to get to the hospital!'

"Then, just like I had always seen it in the movies, a glow of sympathy would come into the copper's eyes. More sirens and more speed, only this time the cop would be ahead of us, an escort all the way there! You see," explained Dick, "I've known what it is to get a ticket in my time! I've tried all the excuses I could ever think of, but I always got the ticket anyway. For once I was going to have the pleasure of a real excuse, and for once a cop was going to grin and not yell at me.

"Now that fellow over there," again Dick indicated the other new papa in the room, "he really did have that kind of luck. On his way to the hospital that same morning they did try to pinch him. But nobody even looked at us twice! I went through a stop sign and almost brushed a state patrolman off his motorcycle seat, but he was parked there talking to another patrolman and they were too engrossed to even notice that it was a car instead of the wind that went by. We didn't even get a tumble!" Again Dick regarded the other papa, envy in his eyes. "But he's a nice fellow, very nice. (Continued on page 86)

Yes, Dick Powell is holding his own in spite of a new star in the family! In fact, he's taking bows

WELL

Young Paderewski (Norman Scott Powell to you) has a new baby sister and is her papa proud! Of course Mama Joan Blondell isn't! Oh, no!

Olivia with Patric Knowles in "Four's a Crowd."

"When Errol Flynn and I are doing a romantic scene, our minds are on our lines, not on each other," says Olivia.

She's LOOKING FOR LOVE

I KNOW it will happen to me some day," says Olivia, "for, after all, I am only a woman."

By which Olivia means that, being a woman, she knows that she will fall in love some day.

We were talking about "lerve," Livvy and I. Any man would say, "Well, what else would you talk to Olivia De Havilland about?" The way men feel about that girl! As Jimmy Fidler said on the radio one time, "No mortal woman has a right to be as beautiful as Olivia." But Livvy doesn't let her loveliness throw her nor even occupy much of her time and thought. In fact, when I met Olivia the other day for tea I was that taken aback. For she was clad in a smart black frock with a vivid floral design of scarlet, and a wide black hat tied under her chin. She wore a dash of lipstick, carried a smart purse, wore sheer hose and good-looking sandals. I was taken aback be-Olivia De Havilland, who has fame, fortune and beauty, hasn't been able to snare Dan Cupid! Why?

"When I fall in love I want something honest and substantial," says Olivia. "I want to know I'm not dreaming."

BY FAITH SERVICE

cause Olivia is generally in a skirt called shapeless, a sweater which has dropped many stitches in the course of wear and tear, a purse that doesn't match anything and no more make-up on her face than a mermaid.

Maybe, I thought, maybe Livvy has met her "Dream Prince." That would account for the change.

So I brought up the good old themes of love and romance. Livvy never would, let men think as they will. I was curious, anyway, about all the rumors printed in the papers when Olivia went abroad a few months ago. One story regaled us with how Olivia was going to England for the express romantic purpose of wedding one Lord Mitchelham. Another story gave us to understand that Olivia was bound for Budapest, because she'd "had a premonition" that there she would find her "Dream Prince." So I asked her. And when I said the words "Dream Prince" Olivia screamed. Olivia screamed right out loud, with her mouth roundly open. And when Olivia screams it's no lamb's bleat, either. She said, "Isn't that Too revolting! I can't imagine anything more silly. I'm proud to say that I've never thought of such a thing as a 'Dream Prince.' As for the story about my wedding one Lord Mitchelham, I read it and was floored. It didn't cause me any acute suffering because it was so silly. But I wasn't amused, either, because I don't like untrue things to be printed about me. Especially stupidly untrue things.

"When mother and I got to England we ignored the thing, but a friend of ours consulted 'Burke's Peerage' just to find out whether there is any such person as Lord Mitchelham. There is. He does exist. And he is over forty—and married. I'd never met him in my life. I haven't met him yet. When we got back to New York the reporters met us. They asked me about 'my peer.' I said that I'd never heard of the man until I read about him in the papers. They said, 'So you won't talk, huh?' And then I read little pieces about how I'd been overheard crying in my cabin on the way home, the inference being that I'd been 'stood up' at the altar.

"Now, I've never been stood up at the altar in my life. And if I was overheard crying in my stateroom it must have been on the trip to England, not on the trip home. For when I went over I was nervously exhausted, feeling simply horrible. I was feeling low in my mind and unhappy for no reason whatsoever. I felt so miserable that I hate to think about it now. I went away to get a rest, to check up on myself. I even used assumed names to escape attention over there. I came back feeling pretty fit. I also came back with my heart doing a normal beat and, I might add, completely whole.

"I am not," continued Olivia disdainfully, "in quest of romance. I am not looking for love nor expecting it nor even thinking about it. I hate to talk about love. How can anyone talk about love? What is there to say about it? I am neither looking for romance nor am I running away from it. When it comes, as it undoubtedly will, I just hope that I'll have the intelligence and wisdom to handle it wisely.

"I don't dream about 'him.' When I am talking with girl friends we do not discuss our 'Dream Prince.' That term revolts me. I don't romanticize every man I meet. When I go to parties I never think, 'Maybe . . . tonight . . . I will meet my Fate!' I think that the women of a generation ago did just this. But I am of this generation and—we don't.

"I think that the women of the last generation lived in a world of half-reality. They never really grew up. They sat around romancing about Galahad or Prince Charming or the elder Barrymore and so they didn't recognize good old Joe Doakes when he came awooing. I think that's why there were so many frustrated old maids, so many girls going into 'declines.' They were always waiting for the shadow. They were dreaming instead of up-and-doing. They starved to death emotionally because they waited for Sir Galahad and (Continued on page 106)

"I was sitting on top without having had to climb," says Lew Ayres, "and it can't be done."

BY GLADYS HALL

LEW AYRES' "resurrection" from B, C and D pictures has stirred Hollywood, appealed to it as no other resurrection has done since Elaine gave us John Barrymore again, all done over and good as new.

When George Cukor's "Holiday" flashed across the screen, people answered the question, "Is it true what they say about Hepburn?" by heaping laurels upon her. But the big surprise of the picture was not Hepburn's tender performance. It was not the depth and finish of the production, nor was it the ace anticking of Cary Grant.

No, the big surprise of the picture

Lew won loud applause for his performance in "Holiday." Here he's with Doris Nolan and Cary Grant.

Ginger Rogers' and Lew Ayres' wedding picture. They're still good friends and though separated are not divorced.

A MAN WHO CAME Back

Lew Ayres, who has been in Movieдom's No Man's Land, returns to the Hollywood front—with a bang was the "come-back" of Lew Ayres. Everyone was carolling, "It is true what they say about Lew Ayres—he has come back."

Not a critic, not a fan, not an actor, director or producer but what mentions "Holiday" and then says, "A grand picture, and boy, what a comeback Lew Ayres has staged!"

For the young man who, nine years ago, scored so spectacularly in "All Quiet On The Western Front," the handsome young man who was constantly intriguing public interest by his performances off and on the screen, by his marriages, first to Lola Lane, then to Ginger Rogers, by his talking to Einstein, by his interest in astronomy, in music, in sculpture . . . that young man seemed to be sucked, gradually, into the morass of B, C and D pictures from which so few are ever able to return.

In short, the name of Lew Ayres, once a name to be reckoned with, became, why, no one could explain, a name to reckon with no more. Young Lew Ayres was becoming too quiet on the western front.

There seemed to be no sufficient reason for this comparative fade-out. Everyone was aware that Lew was working. Now and again he would rise above the surface, playing rather unimportant roles in rather unimportant pictures. You would see him about town, though infrequently, and his grave good looks were as dark as ever. You would read that he had turned director. Then nothing would happen for a long time.

You knew that Lew Ayres directed a picture called "Hearts in Bondage." That stirred a ripple of interest. Occasionally, you were reminded that Ginger Rogers and Lew are still married, at least not yet divorced. Now and then the (Continued on page 97)

Binnie Barnes says she still loves her ex-husband, but—

Binnie and Sam Joseph fell in love, married and were happy.

DIVORCED

BINNIE BARNES' best friend is, believe it or not, the man she divorced.

You've heard that line before. This time it happens to be true. No one is closer to Binnie than Samuel Joseph, and one can judge from Samuel Joseph's actions that no one is closer to him than Binnie. Some day they may re-marry. Time will tell.

Their case is unique in this, that if any other Hollywood actress ever left her husband for similar reasons none has so frankly acknowledged it. Binnie is that rare bird who says "nuts" to Hollywood taboo. She can't be bothered with tricks and evasions. She lives her life according to her own honest lights, let the chips fall where they may. The screen is her job, and she loves it. But if she's got to pull a line of boloney to keep her place there, then nuts to the screen too. It's not worth the price.

She's that modern girl you meet in magazines and movies, the girl who's been faced with the necessity of choosing

Binnie with David Niven in "Three Blind Mice."

If you're sentimental don't read this — for Binnie Barnes is a realist

by

CAROLINE S. HOYT

Because OF TAXES

between husband and career. She made her choice as she felt she had to make it. There's no issue of right or wrong involved. What might have been right for you or me or Sally Doakes would have been wrong for Binnie.

She's been on her own from the time she was fifteen. Untrained, unbacked, she set out to find her place in the world. From factory drudge she progressed through clerking and rope-twirling to night club dancing, from slapstick comedies with Lupino Lane to revues with Cochrane. The salient point, however, is this, that she took joy in the battle, for its own sake. She loved the sense of striking out for herself, of discovering new fields and the capacity to conquer them. Obstacles didn't daunt, they stimulated her. And though the rewards in money and position were sweet, the sweetest was the feeling that she'd done it all by herself.

She was dancing in a night club when she met Samuel Joseph, dealer in rare books, art connoisseur, owner of a business that was a tradition as well. The Joseph fathers had handed it on to their sons for generations, and Samuel Joseph had it in his blood.

Two people could hardly have been more different. Sam had indeed been born to solidity under his feet, Binnie to quicksands. Sam was quiet, a student, a rock of dependability. Binnie bubbled like a geyser and, less than anything else, did she want a rock to lean on. She was her own rock, and fiercely jealous of her independence. Yet they fell in love, they married, they were happy.

It was after the first delicious embrace that Binnie looked up at him, half fearful, wholly determined. "You know, I'll never give up this work of mine."

"Perish the thought," he grinned. "If you did, I couldn't go around bragging about my wife in the show business."

Each was enchanted with the other's world and eager to learn more of it. Night after night Sam would call for her, watch her final routine and applaud with the rest, hugging to his heart the knowledge that he alone had the right to take her home. Later, when she was appearing in Cochrane revues he never missed an opening, however far out of town (Continued on page 96)

Making

THE MOST OF THINGS

You will find your type here. Her corrected faults should solve your problems

Learn to smoke gracefully—or don't smoke.

1. Slide-away chin.

By MARY MARSHALL

WHO ARE all these people? Well, they're just girls, just folks, like you and you and you. The six small pictures show a group of average girls—girls who neglect their potentialities for beauty, girls who do something all wrong, or who fail to do something just right. One is rather lovely, but she has her problem, too. One has that nice, fresh, wholesome look—but lacks glamor completely. Two need to be shown a few tricks to conceal their facial faults. And two have faces that simply cry out, "Make-up, maestro, please!"

I hope that with the aid of these pictures I may help you in your search for beauty. And I hope that the five larger pictures will put over a short, snappy lesson in acquiring social poise and stuff and things, without which not even a beauty can be a belle.

Step up, then, and meet the girl friends. The six small pictures are conveniently numbered. Even though you may not resemble in the least any of the girls pictured here, perhaps a discussion of each general type and her particular problems may help you. So pay attention, plizz, while I expound, and refer to the pictures by number when you want to.

The chief facial fault of girl Number One is a very common one—a slide-away chin. A weak chin. Furthermore, the chin is long in proportion to the tiny, rather child-like face, and there is almost no crease in it. The lower lip is tucked in, too, as if Ickle Dirl were twying so hard to keep the tears back. And now, Miss Smarty—I'm talking to myself—suppose you cease picking on the poor girl and tell other girls with a similar problem what to do about it.

There are several things you can do. You can use a one-shade-lighter tint of powder on your chin than you use on the rest of your face. The lighter powder will make the chin appear more prominent. Blend the two shades carefully into each other, so that you won't give your little secret away to the jeering public. (Conversely, of course, if your chin is too prominent, powder it a shade darker.) The powder trick for the weak chin should be supplemented by a simple exercise which I will tell you more about presently.

If your mouth is small and insignificant like this girl's, experiment with lipstick to make it larger, more dramatic. Smile when you put on your lipstick. Try, for evening, the Hollywood trick of blotting out the natural shape of the mouth with foundation cream and painting a new mouth. Perhaps this will work and perhaps it won't. If the natural contours of your mouth are firmly marked, it won't be so easy.

If you can't improve upon (Continued on page 101)

Seventeen VO-DO-DE-O-DO

The world is Mickey's oyster. Swing bands, food, girls and loud clothes are his passion. Above, left, with Sylvester, his valet. Right, with Lana Turner.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

UNLIKE THE Andy Hardy he plays, Mickey Rooney got no thrill out of wearing his first tuxedo He was three years old and its stylishness was lost on him.

"It's like a baby," Mickey explains. "If he grows up in France, he speaks French and thinks nothing of it. I grew up in vaudeville, wore tucks and thought nothing of it. Vo-do-de-o-do. (The final snatch has nothing to do with the subject, but serves Mickey as a musical punctuation mark plus an outlet for animal spirits.)

Vaudeville alternated with, and then gave way to, the movies. For several years Mickey enjoyed a definite vogue as the typical American kid, fresh but nice. There followed that crucial period when he was no longer a little boy and not yet a big one—the period when most movie children's contracts are allowed to lapse. Mickey's parts shrank in importance, but his studio hung on to him. There was in his acting a sureness, a humor and an honesty that seemed worth investing in for the long pull.

The issue proved his studio wise. A single wordless scene in "The Devil Is a Sissy," that scene where he stood under a lamp post while his father died in the electric chair, might have netted Mickey, had he fallen within the age limits, an Academy Award. The success of "Ah, Wilderness" encouraged the studio to put into work a little number called "A Family Affair." To the general astonishment, a long line formed outside the Capitol Theatre in New York on the day of its first showing. To the question, "What brought you down here?" the answer, almost 100%, was "Mickey Rooney."

Thus began the new flowering of Mickey's career. He's been kept hopping since—from "Hardy" to "Lord Jeff" to "Hold That Kiss" to "Hardy" to "Boystown." They can't come too fast for Mickey. Occasionally it suits him to bemoan his vacationless lot. Actually, any between- (Continued on page 90)

He's the typical American kid, fresh but nice—and a born comic

Being young is fine and being old doesn't seem so bad, but—ugh!—

IN Between!

BONITA GRANVILLE sighed, appearing to have the cares of the world on her shoulders, and began, "Isn't it terrible when you're just at that age when you're neither one thing nor another—sort of just in between. I don't enjoy playing with dolls, and yet I'm not old enough to go out with boys alone. I guess I'm at the awkward age. Fifteen, y'know, isn't either here nor there. Gee, I'd give anything if I were older, or even younger. Then I would at least fit in somewhere. I can't even drive a car till I'm sixteen and that's such a long time off. Yep, it's seven whole months and that seems like just about a lifetime now!"

We agreed it did seem unfair that in the process of maturing one must just sit and wait for that magic time when the world unfolds before your very eyes. However, once Bonita has arrived, so to speak, it might prove disillusioning to discover the moon's made of green cheese! That is, the phenomena she has lived for isn't all it's cracked up to be! Many a deb has the disappointment of her young life once she's launched and has done the rounds. Far off fields are always the greenest, you know.

"I did go out once, my first time, and it was wonderful," Bonita reminisced. "Of course, it was with a girl friend, and Mama was at the next table chaperoning us, but it was grand! I was so elegant that you'd have thought me twenty at least. I was putting it on and everything went fine till the waiter came for the dessert order. I asked for demi tassé and my friend chimed in, 'What is dema tas-sie?' I could have died! I didn't know myself, but I was going to find out. I never

(Continued on page 78)

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

"I'd hate to think I'd end up as an ingenue," sighs Bonita Granville, who has too much on the ball to ever do that!

Maureen O'Sullivan's striking ensemble of black and white flannel shows a definite Cossack influence.

The soft green of Rosalind Russell's wool suit contrasts subtly with her black and grey accessories.

Suiting

BY MARIAN SQUIRE

THE SUIT is definitely leading lady in this Fall's fashion picture, according to the head cinema stitchers, and it may have as many different guises as fancy dictates. Blouses take on a more important role, as the newer numbers are designed with interesting skirts, leaving you with a complete costume if the coat is discarded. Skirts are inclined to climb up and cling to the diaphragm for added slimth and height. Jackets may end anywhere from just under the armpits, to the hem of the skirt.

This trend is a great help for the girl who hasn't time to change after office hours, for her dinner date. The simplest office frock becomes a date dress when it dons a tricky jacket. With various toppers as a sartorial hypo the most limited wardrobe assumes an air of opulence and plenty.

Here are Olivia De Havilland and Rosalind Russell to illustrate

You'll be in the swing with any one of these

Diagonal weave black and white wool furnishes new contrast in Rosalind Russell's suit.

Olivia De Havilland's collarless beige wool bolero suit has an exciting alligator belt and bag.

THE SEASON

the point. Two entirely different types, these cinemamisses run the suit gamut in "Four's A Crowd." Designer Orry-Kelly whips up short jackets for the diminutive Miss De Havilland, and ranges from brief boleros to skirt length coats for the taller Miss Russell.

Nearly all of Miss De Havilland's gowns are "suited" with various jackets. One dress, flaring slightly at the hem, boasts a pert bell hop jacket with a double row of shiny buttons and lapels outlined in braid. A short plaid jacket and crew neck sweater go with a solid color skirt fitted to below the hips and then bursting into released pleats. A black fox bolero gives umph to a simple street dress with quilted trimming. A very flaring skirt builds up to a white blouse with enormous sleeves caught at the wrist with narrow cuffs.

One of Miss De Havilland's evening gowns has a black taffeta skirt billowing enormously at the hem, with an occasional coy peek at an India print petticoat. The top is the same print decorated with sparkles (technically known as dardanelles), black epaulettes on the tiny cap sleeves and a contradictory little-boy collar of crisp white pique.

Miss Russell clings to suits even for formal wear. Her evening gown is all white and worn with a long sleeved peplum jacket. The silhouette of this outfit is somewhat confused, what with the peplum dipping in the back, and a roving waistline. Miss Russell seems happier in her more orthodox numbers. A suit with a loose hip length jacket has a sweater (Continued on page 80) fashion-right ensembles worn by Hollywood's brightest young stars

He's a star on Broadway, film player in Hollywood and a dancing fool in any language.

HE'S NOT Movie-MINDED

Ray Bolger, scene stealer, is looking for a four star picture to swipe

BY ROBERT McILWAINE

TEN YEARS ago Ray Bolger definitely decided not to take up with "moom pitchers." That is, he firmly believed the stage was the place for him and his talents. So, just to prove he sticks to his guns (?) ten years to the day later we found Ray in the process of moving into his new home high on a hilltop overlooking dear old Hollywood.

"You know, this isn't my first experience in pictures," Ray began with a twinkle in his eye. The Bolger humor is the talk of the town. "I did them back in 1926 in the good old silent days. They were shorts, called "comedies" in the dark past. I was given to understand they were so good a test was made of me on the strength of them. However, I never heard from that test. I got lost in the shuffle, so decided then and there that the movies were not for me. I was going to stick to the legitimate stage and build a name for myself.

For years I played the circuits with Broadway as my goal. Then came the time I was to debut on the big time! My pals told me how sophisticated New Yorkers were, so I was as busy as a bird dog gettin' sophistication. Well, to make a long story short, I was a complete bust 'til one day, in disgust, I played myself. They loved it, and from then on I forgot advice and began to get ahead."

Now, if you've never seen Ray Bolger stop a show, you've missed a real treat. Undoubtedly one of the most popular musical comedy stars on the stage, Ray is in a class of his own when it comes to dancing.

"After I got into the legitimate theatre, things began to happen," Ray continued. "Each time I'd do a show, the movies would come around with offers. Finally they made me such an attractive proposition I accepted. I came out here with a deal to do two pictures a year with the rest of the time off to play on Broadway. Well, I sat around all summer with nothing to do but draw salary. Finally, with only a few weeks to go on my contract, I got a call from an executive's office. I figured he would tell me my services were no longer required. I was wrong.

"The first thing the man did was to ask what I did! I thought it was a rib and said most anything coming my way. 'Yes, but just what sort of thing do you do,' he asked, 'dramatic or what?' I told him to get a rehearsal hall and I'd give him an audition. 'How long will you have to practice?' he wanted to know. I told him to let me show him. Well, I went through the works, and did tap stuff and pantomime—well, the works. When I got through he said, 'Could you do a dance number in "The Great Ziegfeld?' "

"I worked like mad and did a routine for the picture. When I was through, I went back to New York, without a new contract. I figured this picture business was nice work if you could get it, but, well—I had a date in New York and was very glad to keep it! (Continued on page 74)

OFF THEIR Guard
Spencer Tracy takes time out between chukkers at the polo game.
Photos by George Strock

THE SPORT OF Movie KINGS

The Who's Who of Moviedom turned out en masse at the Uplifters' Annual Motion Picture Polo Tournament. Left, Mary Astor with Hubby Manuel De Campo. Right, Eddie Robinson, his wife and pretty daughter, Jean.

Left, Hank Fonda took his attractive little woman to see the fun, and right, Anne Shirley and Florence Lake grinned happily as their favorite team came through with a winning score. Did you win a bet, girls?

Our cameraman uncovered a whole bevy of beauties being chaperoned by Reginald Gardiner. Of course you recognize Joan Bennett, Joan Crawford and Hedy Lamarr. Right, Ginger Rogers behind those dark glasses.

Left, Joan Crawford must know she doesn't need sugar to win this horse's heart, but it makes a pretty picture. Right, Bob Montgomery helped judge the hosses. That cute gal by him is none other than Mrs. M.

Reggie Gardiner looks on while Hedy Lamarr broadcasts.

Freddie Bartholomew chats with Spencer Tracy.

This time Loretta Young is with John McLain.

Norma Shearer with John Swope, Jimmy Stewart's pal.

Hollywood PREMIERE

There's a brilliant new star in the cinema sky since Hedy Lamarr made her American debut in "Algiers"

Virginia Bruce and husband, J. Walter Ruben, were early birds.

Gilbert Roland, Connie Bennett and Fredric March snapped entering the theatre.

GETTING A SKATE ON

1. At the Roller Bowl, Leo Carrillo clowns with Paula Stone while Wayne Morris and Jackie Cooper stand guard —just in case! 2. One down and Wayne to go as Penny Singleton goes off on a tangent all her own. 3. Wayne decides it's safer to go by rail. 4. The end of a perfect crack-the-whip and Bobby Jordan comes up on top.

Hallowe'en

Jackie Cooper shows Deanna Durbin just how to bob for apples.

Freddie Bartholomew and Judy Garland try hard to keep the doctor away.

[illegible] Granville [illegible] write" into the holiday spirit, soap and all.

[illegible] Withers [illegible] tened at all— [illegible] just plain scared!

"I don't need a jack o'lantern," Mickey Rooney tells Ann Rutherford.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE!

Claire Trevor entering the church to wed Clark Andrews, radio producer.

Scoop! This is the only picture taken of the actual wedding ceremony.

Claire Trevor, one of Hollywood's favorites, says "I do"

The bride and groom leaving the church after the ceremony. A handsome couple, don't you think?

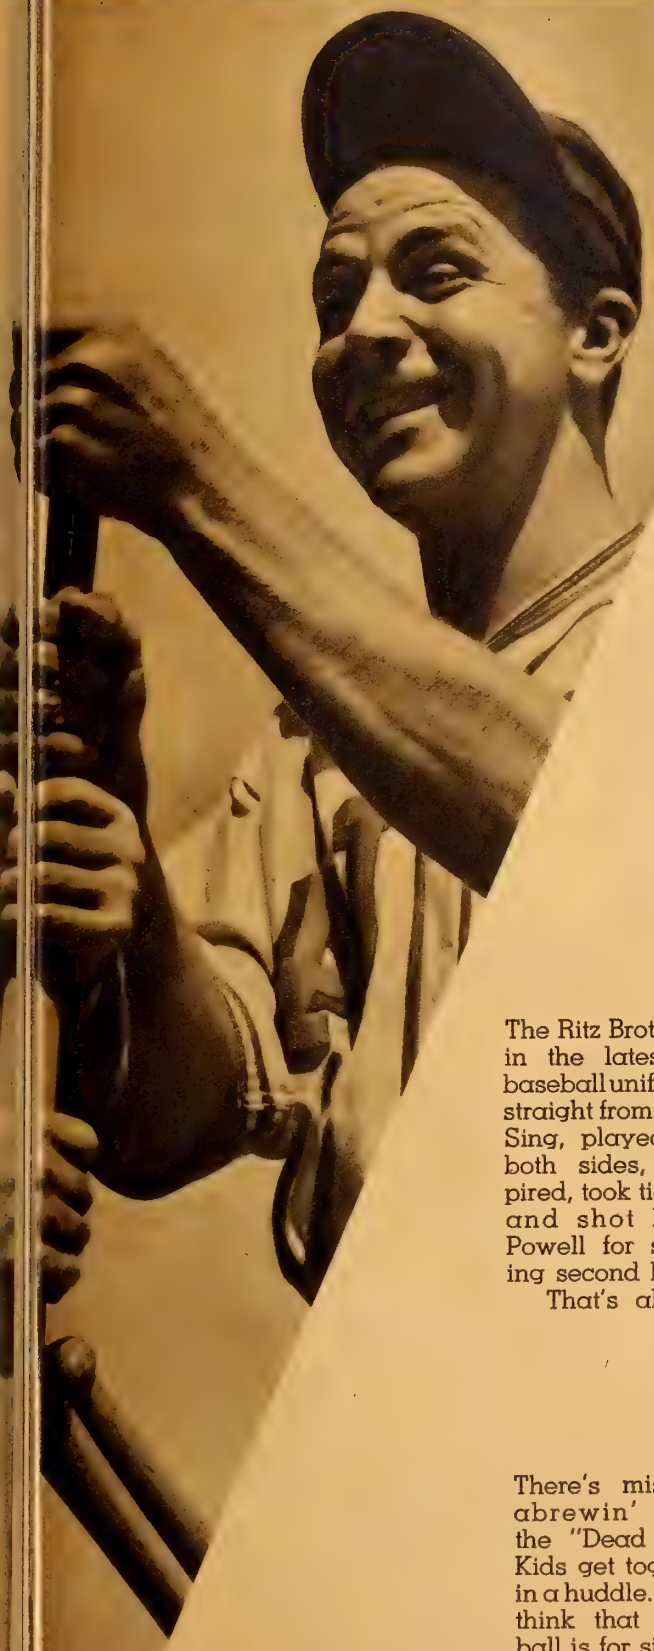
Jackie Cooper was right there to get the bride's first kiss. And we can't blame him. Guess he rates!

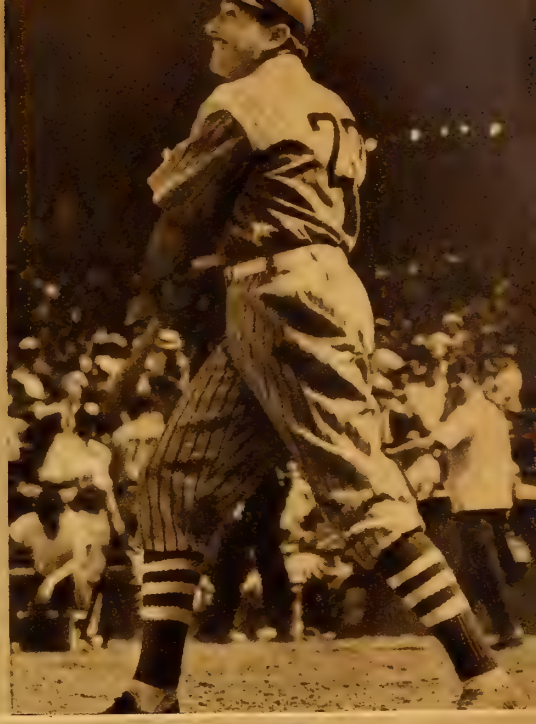
Edward G. Robinson, who has worked with Claire in radio and pictures, toasts the bridal pair.

COMEDIANS VS.

When the Comedians played against the Leading Men, Mary Pickford tossed out the first ball as Buster Keaton looked on.

Maybe one reason why Mary's was the only good pitch of the day was that Umpire Joe E. Brown ruled the Mauch Twins ineligible because the game wasn't a double-header.





With the score 72-28 against his team, Hugh Herbert gets renewed hope from Gloria Blondell. Incidentally, the game ended with a score of 84-76—the winner, sweet Charity.

Leading Men's captain, Dick Powell, goes through a batty formality with Comedian's captain, Joe E. Brown. Joe was also umpire and official announcer.

LEADING MEN

John Boles drove a terrific bunt into the infield, then quickly packed, said goodbye to friends, and set off for first base.

The Ritz Brothers, in the latest in baseball uniforms straight from Sing Sing, played on both sides, umpired, took tickets and shot Dick Powell for stealing second base. That's all.

There's mischief abrewin' when the "Dead End" Kids get together in a huddle. They think that baseball is for sissies, so they're waiting for a nice, interesting game of "seven-come-eleven."

In a studio romance, you must allow the young lady to take your arm—while the cameras are around anyway!

Richard Greene and Sonja Henie are reel-ly in love. Is that why he's so attentive?

Romance-

And pay attention while she makes the momentous decision between lamb chops and the regular blue plate.

You don't have to be quite so attentive to your real girl. She knows how you feel. At least, that's what men think.

Here's the real thing—

with Arleen Whelan

shifting pretty much for herself

ON AND OFF

Food plays a minor role at the luncheon table with Richard and Arleen, when there's so much to talk about.

Good News

With Autumn stepping in, our social cinema celebs begin to step out

The ever inseparable Paul Munis.

Sally Blane and George Murphy.

Our favorite story this month concerns the heat, Tyrone Power and New York, in the order named. It was during Tyrone's week in Manhattan, when the young man spent almost every waking moment with a crowd at his heels. Wherever he went, the crowd went, all of which is nice and pleasant in the winter but a bit sticky in New York's sulphuric summer. So one night Mr. P. decided on a quiet evening in his hotel room. He armed himself with a cool drink and sat back in an easy chair, but it was still hot. Thinking a little circulation would help matters he phoned the desk and said, "Send up a couple of fans." A moment later he answered a knock on the door and in walked two urchins with autograph books.

●

Since Shirley Temple's "firsts"—from first teeth to first bright saying—have been carefully recorded by the nation's press, we are bound by tradition to report another "first." First thing Shirley said when she arrived in Hollywood from her across-the-continent jaunt was "How's Ching-Ching?" Ching-Ching is a baby Chow, and the first thing he ever did had better be left unrecorded.

●

If our guess is right, a young lady about town named Ellen Powell is in for some pretty strained moments fifteen or twenty years from now. For Papa and Mamma (Dick Powell and Joan Blondell) have made a recording of Ellen's first audible sounds—all her howls and yowls—for posterity. We can see the picture twenty years from now: a group of friends gathered at the Powell home, listening to music, when suddenly Old Man Powell (that's Dick) will say, "Here's an interesting record." And Ellen, full of the dignity of her twenty years, will have to listen to the shrieking of a little girl she doesn't even remember.

Most fun of the month, and probably of the whole year, was the party sponsored by Bette Davis for The Tailwaggers, of which she's national president. The Tailwaggers is a charitable organization similar to the Humane Society for the protection and care of dogs. (We explain this only because someone asked us if the Tailwaggers was a rhumba club.) The whole town turned out for Bette's party at the Beverly Hills Hotel, everyone had a swell time and the entire proceeds will go to make this a happier nation for canines.

●

Any of you gals who saw the gorgeous Hedy Lamarr in "Algiers" will thank us for this bit of information. It's Hedy's street make-up secret, and anyone who has seen her breath-taking beauty in person will vouch for its effectiveness. Hedy wears a cream powder base—and no powder, and a bright lipstick which she applies with a pencil. All right, girls, let's all be gorgeous.

●

One of the strangest cases in Hollywood is Ann Sothern's. With a beautiful face and figure and plenty of acting talent, she hasn't had a picture job since her contract terminated six months ago. But she's contracted to do a Broadway show for Jed Harris this fall, and our guess is that she'll be back in Hollywood before the end of the year, and the studios will be fighting to pay her twice what she got before they let her go.

●

Bill Powell definitely will not be seen on the screen before the early part of 1939, due to the fact that he is in delicate physical condition and has been ordered by his doctor to refrain from strenuous work for at least six months. And that is the principal reason why Bill will appear regularly on the Hollywood Hotel radio show. The work is comparatively easy, he has an audience to work to, he likes radio, and, most important of all, it keeps him before his public.

By LEO TOWNSEND

Franchot Tone and Bob Montgomery.

The lady with Wally Beery is Mrs. W. B.

●

Although it hasn't yet been published, Deanna Durbin is now free of all the agent trouble which has been dragging her into the courts these recent months. Her studio and her family have bought her agent's contract, and from now on all her business deals will be handled by her father. Deanna, incidentally, is in a class with Shirley Temple and Jane Withers in that she makes as much money from sidelines as she does from her pictures. Last year, for instance, Deanna made $100,000 on royalties from the sale of dresses bearing her name.

●

Although Luise Rainer has already filed suit for divorce against Clifford Odets, there will undoubtedly be no action taken on it before the first of next year. Reason: Luise is not yet an American citizen. She is in the process of obtaining her citizenship papers, and having a husband helps considerably in such matters. However, no one can blame her for not wanting to return to Austria.

●

Now that the Joan Crawford-Franchot Tone split is definite, one wonders what will be Miss Crawford's next move. Following the separation Franchot was seen at practically all the town's night spots, usually by himself. But Joan remained in hiding, and up to press time she hasn't emerged for a single social event. Is she going into another Phase, we wonder? Will Joan emerge as the new Garbo, or will she decide to be the Gay Divorcee? No one knows and very few care.

●

Hey, what's this? Hollywood has just made a college picture and —believe it or not—there's a college girl in it. Check the records back to the golden days of college pictures, when one of the studios put Jack Oakie through college at least twice a year, and you'll find this is tradition-shattering news. As long as the news will leak out anyway, we may as well tell you that the picture is "Hold That Co-Ed" and the bona fide college girl is Marjorie (Indiana University) Weaver.

●

Gary Cooper has come out with the statement, according to his studio's press department, that men who smoke "tailor-made" cigarettes are sissies. Mr. Cooper, according to the busy Boswells, has been rolling his own ever since he was old enough to shave, and figures it isn't manly to go up to an effeminate cigar counter and order a pack of "ready-mades." When pinned down, the publicity boys will admit that Mr. Cooper has just completed a picture called "The Lady and the Cowboy," but they indignantly deny any connection between the two items. They also forget that a few months back Gary received a sum supposed to be $5,000 for endorsing a well-known brand of sissy cigarettes. $5,000 buys a powerful lot of makin's, eh, Gary?

Miriam Hopkins chats with Errol Flynn at the West Side Tennis Club's party.

pended by her studio for refusing to play the feminine lead in 'A Very Practical Joke.' This is the picture with which Ricardo Cortez will make his bow as a director. According to studio sources, the primary reason given by the actress for declining the femme lead, which is reputed to be a fat part, is the fact that it is the director's first megaphone job. As an additional reason, she is reported to object to Michael Whalen as the leading man, claiming the last time she appeared before the camera with him, he 'gave her nothing' to help 'lift' her work."

●

"Smile when you call me that, stranger!" All of which is a lead-up to the fact that Jesse James was a bold bad bandit, a rough-and-tough he-man who took his fighting where he found it. Everyone knows he was a straight shot and a desperate character. So now, the studio filming his life has the nerve, in several trade paper ads, to spell his name "Jessie." It's like calling that one-time hero of the West Buffalo Willie.

●

Questions without Answers: What recently filed divorce action

Nancy Kelly makes her screen debut in the lead opposite Tyrone Power in "Jesse James." Since Miss Kelly is a newcomer, items on her are scarce. All we found out is that she's seventeen, she scored a hit last season on Broadway, and she's seen about with a distinguished looking man, but he's her father. She also likes to jump into a swimming pool of a moonlit evening and, unlike most girls who feel that way about pools and evenings, she has one handy.

●

The power of the screen in "building up" a name has never been so definitely proven as in the case of Tony Martin. Six years ago Tony was a saxophone player in San Francisco. He had his own band at a small night club, but no one paid much attention to it. Two months ago, after a couple of years of moderate success in pictures, Tony took a dance band out on the road, and he did sensational business everywhere, topping even such established band leaders as Benny Goodman and Guy Lombardo. Everyone came to spend an evening with the guy who spends his evenings with Alice Faye.

●

Strange Parallel Dept. From a publicity release: "On her studio lot, Phyllis Brooks is known as 'the darling of the directors.' She never blows up in her lines and she always knows them perfectly. She never grows temperamental. She is never late for work. Consequently, the directors on the lot are among her strongest admirers and are eternally begging for her services in their pictures."

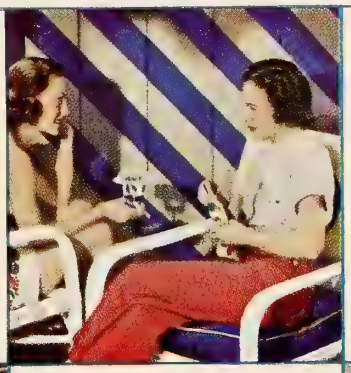
From the Hollywood Reporter: "Phyllis Brooks has been sus-

Hollywood's most romantic couple, Cary Grant and Phyllis Brooks, dine at the Brown Derby.

Ann Sothern and Madge Evans reminisce as they lunch tête-à-tête.

had been planned by the wife even before she married the guy? Before holy wedlock occurred she signed an agreement with the groom's agent which stated $100,000 would be the limit of the settlement when the divorce came. In the meantime, of course, she has accumulated enough furs and jewelry to attract many Hollywood wolves to her door.

●



This is an era of strange nicknames, but the strangest we've run into are a couple on the set of "That Certain Age." You knock at a dressing-room door marked "Butch" and little Juanita Quigley pokes her head out. The owner of the one next to it, marked "Charlie," is —guess who—Deanna Durbin! (Continued on page 116)

They prefer different sports... but the same cigarette

"CAMELS ARE MY FAVORITE!"
SAYS EACH OF THESE DISTINGUISHED WOMEN OF SOCIETY

(LEFT) Miss Peggy Stevenson of New York...Watch Peggy Stevenson tee off and you can well believe that her game is never upset by jangled nerves. "It takes healthy nerves to play a good game of golf," she says, "so my smoking is confined to Camels. Camels are mild. They never get on my nerves at all!"

(LEFT) Mrs. S. Kip Farrington, Jr. of New York...Her favorite sport is big-game fishing. She has caught a giant tuna weighing 720 pounds! Here she is pictured with a friend, chatting about Camels. "I'm glad that I smoke Camels," she says. "When I'm tired, smoking Camels gives my energy such a lift!"

(RIGHT, STANDING) Miss Jane Alva Johnson of St. Louis... Riding, hunting, and horse shows are "an old story" to Jane. Her horses have won trophies and ribbons. "That delicate Camel flavor tastes just right to me," she says. "Though I smoke quite steadily, I'm always ready for another Camel!"

(RIGHT) Mrs. John W. Rockefeller, Jr. of New York... Mrs. Rockefeller has had thrilling experiences in the air. "My first thought, when I put my feet on firm ground," she says, "is to smoke a Camel. Smoking Camels eases up my nervous tension. Yes, 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel'—and fly a thousand!"

(LEFT) Miss "Milo" Gray of New York...Devoted to figure-skating, Miss Gray has visited winter sports centers—Innsbruck, Gstaad, Krynica—and is an enthusiastic participant in Long Island skating parties. She stops frequently to refresh herself with a Camel. "Camels taste grand all the time!" she says.

(LEFT) Mrs. Rufus Paine Spalding III of Pasadena... Mrs. Spalding is a skilled yachtswoman. She travels a great deal, entertains frequently, and smokes Camels—as many as she pleases. "Smoking Camels gives me a delightful lift," she says. "And Camels are so mild...really gentle to my throat!"

(RIGHT) Miss Le Brun Rhinelander of New York... In her own words, "Skiing is great sport!" Lake Placid is her favorite winter resort...Camels her favorite cigarette. "I need healthy nerves," she says, "to make speedy descents...without a spill. So I do my nerves a favor by smoking nothing but Camels."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS:
Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic

GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL !

Copyright, 1938, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina

A ROYAL ROMANCE

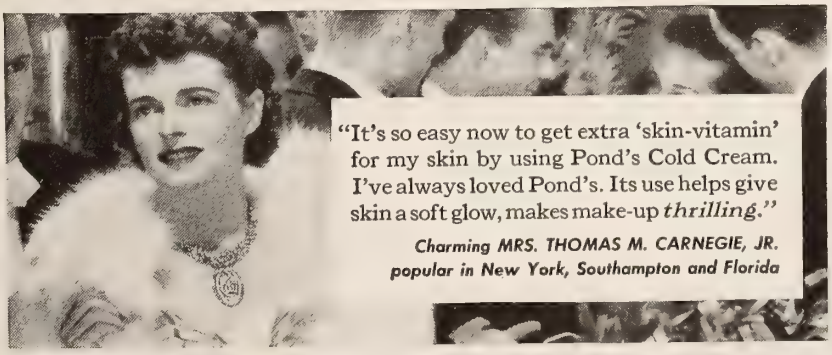
Frances Dee and Ronald Colman in a tender scene from "If I Were King."

Men Fall HARD and FAST for Her...

—she keeps skin thrilling

*Cream EXTRA "SKIN-VITAMIN" into your skin — Get Wise to TODAY'S EXTRA BEAUTY CARE

Every Girl Strives to Keep skin soft—thrilling. Today's smart women give their skin extra beauty care. They cream in extra "skin-vitamin"—with Pond's Cold Cream. (above) Miss Camilla Morgan, active member of the younger set, snapped at Newark Airport.



Glamorous Whitney Bourne, Society Beauty who has chosen the movies for her career, snapped with friends at Hollywood's Brown Derby . . . "I believe in Pond's extra 'skin-vitamin' beauty care," she says. "I use Pond's every day."

All Normal Skin contains Vitamin A—the "skin-vitamin." Without this vitamin, skin becomes rough and dry. When "skin-vitamin" is restored to the skin, it becomes smooth and healthy again.

● In hospitals, doctors found this vitamin, applied to wounds and burns, healed skin quicker.

● Use Pond's as always, night and morning and before make-up. If skin has enough "skin-vitamin," Pond's brings an extra supply against possible future need. Same jars, same labels, same prices.

"It's so easy now to get extra 'skin-vitamin' for my skin by using Pond's Cold Cream. I've always loved Pond's. Its use helps give skin a soft glow, makes make-up thrilling."

Charming MRS. THOMAS M. CARNEGIE, JR. popular in New York, Southampton and Florida

AMAZING POND'S OFFER

With purchase of large jar of Pond's Cold Cream, get generous box of Pond's "Glare-Proof" Powder . . . BOTH for the price of the Cold Cream.

FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY— GET YOUR PACKAGE TODAY!

 Statements concerning the effects of the "skin-vitamin" applied to the skin are based upon medical literature and tests on the skin of animals following an accepted laboratory method.

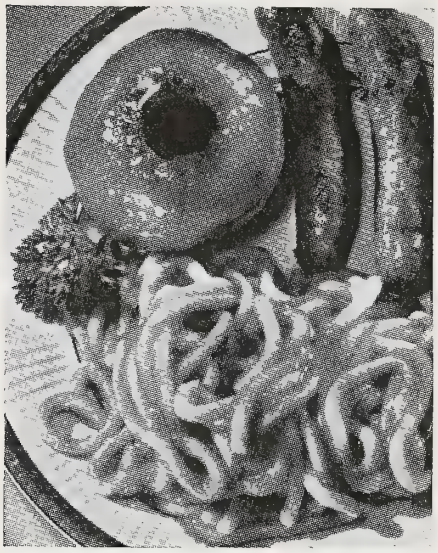
Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P. M., N. Y. Time, N. B. C.



Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

Less money to spend

BUT BETTER MEALS THAN EVER

—thanks to this delicious ready-cooked spaghetti

TRY THIS TEMPTING SAUSAGE AND SPAGHETTI PLATE

4 spiced apples
12 sausages
2 cans Franco-American Spaghetti

Cook apples in sirup made of ½ cup sugar, 1½ cups water, 3 teaspoons red cinnamon candies, 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Parboil and panfry sausages. Meanwhile heat Franco-American Spaghetti. Divide each into 4 servings.

FRANCO-AMERICAN supplies an abundance of the quick energy growing children need. It's easy to prepare; just heat and serve.

Its rich, savory cheese-and-tomato sauce (made with eleven different ingredients) adds zestful flavor to left-overs, new relish to cheaper meat cuts. Serve Franco-American often as main dish or side dish. See how it peps up meals and s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-s food dollars!

Franco-American SPAGHETTI

Made by the Makers of Campbell's Soups

Send for FREE Recipe Book

CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY, Dept. 611,
Camden, New Jersey. Please send me your free recipe book: "30 Tempting Spaghetti Meals."

Name (print)_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

THE LURE THAT'S LAMARR

(Continued from page 29)

Or again, she had a true sophisticate's appreciation of the texture and color of the skins of the rare little animals that made up her chinchilla cape. She frankly confessed pleasure in owning it because it is of the most expensive fur in the world.

She was in London before her present contract was signed. She was approached by a top executive who offered certain terms. She refused them and the discussion was closed. Then she noted the executive was returning to America on a certain boat.

"I think it is a good time for Hedy to visit her relatives in New York," she told herself. (There were no relatives, needless to say.) "I think, too, that it would be nice to take that same boat. Who knows? Something may happen. Boats are nice places and people feel pleasantly disposed to one another on them."

SHE caught the same ocean liner. She wore her most striking clothes. She was charming to the executive and his party. She was distant, but not too distant. Men passengers flocked around her by the score, and she took care that the fact was seen and noted.

"When I want something very much, I go after it," she explained to me. "I don't let people tell me no."

The contract, on her terms, was signed in mid-ocean. And it was there, incidentally, that she was christened Lamarr. It was easier to pronounce than her real name of Kiesler, to which some unpleasant publicity had been attached. Perhaps it was hopeful prophecy of success to match that other great beauty's, Barbara LaMarr.

TO better appreciate the simplicity of her present surroundings one has to know something of Hedy's past. She was born in Vienna of well-to-do parents. As the only child she was spoiled in some respects, yet she remembers feeling the curb of sharp discipline at unexpected times. At fourteen she was sent to a private pension in Switzerland. She ran away from there because of rhubarb.

"The head mistress had a sour face and pulled her hair up, so," Hedy said, illustrating a severe coiffure with her own luxuriant mop of wavy, brown hair. "She liked rhubarb and so we had it every night for supper. I didn't like the stuff and refused it. They told me I would get nothing else to eat unless I did. So I ran away."

Hedy's philosophy is if you don't like a thing, run away from it. It's so much simpler than staying to argue, and a much faster way of getting your own way about things. She's just now learning, poor child, that there are some things you cannot run away from but must face and fight down. Like the way the world will not forget her first picture, "Ecstasy." It is taking courage on her part to learn that lesson.

She went back to Vienna third class because the head mistress had the guardianship of her pupils' money. En route her fellow passenger got both legs broken, the train caught on fire and she had no money for food. "Oooh, such a mess!" Hedy described it.

Her indulgent parents permitted her to remain. And then rued the decision, for Hedy got stage-struck. Such a thing had never happened in the family before. She finally landed a tiny part in a Max Reinhardt production called "The Weaker Sex."

When that play closed and no more engagements were forthcoming, she ran away to Berlin to get in the movies. She made one or two pictures which she said were terrible. Finally after a year a family friend coaxed her back to Vienna on the pretense of a "wonderful surprise." There was no surprise, but Hedy was glad of an excuse to be home again without losing face.

BEFORE going to Berlin, however, she secretly had appeared in the picture "Ecstasy" which was to raise such a controversy and to dog her life for the next eight years and still is hounding her. In that regard, she was more sinned against than sinning. Advantage was taken of her youth in the first place, and in recutting the picture for foreign distribution, an entirely different and sensational interpretation was placed upon it, for the sake of the dollars it could rake in on the American market.

Returning to Vienna she appeared in a number of stage plays and was building a creditable reputation for herself as an actress when she married Fritz Mandl. Like herself, he was a man of strong determination. He wanted to marry Hedy and did.

For the next four years her life was lived the way Hollywood society stories are pictured. She had exquisite jewels and magnificent furs and gowns. Formal dinners over which she presided were served from plates of gold, which recently were stolen in the Vienna rioting. Seven servants waited upon her in her ten room apartment in Vienna. Others served her in the Mandl hunting lodge some miles away. She had a place in the Austrian Alps, and another on the Riviera.

It should have been a thrill for such a young girl to hold so much power in her slim hands. It wasn't; it was a bore. She wanted to be an actress. She wanted to do something herself, not be done for.

Just before going to England she divorced Mandl in the courts of Vienna on the grounds of desertion. An annulment of the marriage is now being sought in Rome.

And so to Hollywood, where she is living with one servant in a simply furnished six room bungalow, where she drives her own modest car, and does her own marketing.

"It is all I can afford right now," she said. She must have caught my incredulous smile because she said quickly, "You think I must have a lot of money because I have a big diamond ring and a chinchilla coat, eh? Because I was married to a very rich man? That is not so. I took nothing from him."

"And are you happy living this way?"

"No," she said honestly. "I like having nice things. But I'll have them again. You wait and see. This time I'll make them for myself."

Hedy speaks English with only a trace of an accent, and she has an amazing command of vocabulary for one who has been speaking the language only seven months. In fact, she has perfected her speech more in those seven months, Hollywood claims, than Marlene Dietrich has in seven years.

Gallantly she denied loneliness during those long months that preceded her present triumph. She was busy, she said, and she went to lots of "private parties." It must have been galling to her pride, however, to possess a beauty which Reinhardt called the greatest in the world and be forced to keep it hidden from all but a few friends.

For she was kept hidden. That was part of her studio's carefully prepared plan. Or so they say. They wanted certain publicity to die down that she might break upon the

(Continued on page 79)

Schiaparelli-Lanvin
SPONSOR
CUTEX OLD ROSE

Alix-Lelong
SPONSOR
CUTEX LAUREL

SCHIAPARELLI goes romantic in this flattering evening gown of taffeta bands in cyclamen and black. She recommends Cutex OLD ROSE nails to emphasize the purplish cast of the cyclamen.

ALIX'S ensemble in burgundy wool with plaid pockets and blouse. "Carry out the winish color scheme," she says, "with your nails in mauvy Cutex LAUREL."

LANVIN does a square-shouldered coat dress in black wool with a lavish twist of silver fox. To match its mannered elegance, she suggests finger tips in rich Cutex OLD ROSE.

LELONG'S dinner gown in violet crepe has a jacket and sash of aqua broadcloth. He recommends suavely harmonizing nails in mauvy Cutex LAUREL.

7 Chic New Cutex Shades to Choose From OLD ROSE: Rich rose with a hint of purple.

LAUREL: Mauvish pink.
HEATHER: Deep purplish rose.
CLOVER: Deep, winy red.
THISTLE: Blended Rust and Rose.
TULIP: A soft, glowing red.
ROBIN RED: True red, subdued in intensity.

SWING INTO WINTER with finger tips that dance in step with the new purplish costume colors. Try Cutex OLD ROSE sponsored by Schiaparelli and Lanvin . . . Cutex LAUREL sponsored by Alix and Lelong!

Cutex OLD ROSE is a rich, full rose with a subtle hint of purple. Harmonious with wine, violet, amethyst, the new blues. A charming partner for browns, greens, pastels, black.

Cutex LAUREL is a mauvish pink. Divine with lavender, rose, plum, light blue, gray, all shades of green . . . the new deep purplish reds, blues, browns.

Key your finger tips to the gay pace set by the Paris dressmakers—Schiaparelli and Lanvin, Alix and Lelong! Wear Cutex OLD ROSE and Cutex LAUREL.

RECORD-BREAKING WEAR! Cutex Salon Type Polish is based on a new principle—goes on with flawless lustre—clings to your nails like something possessed! Heavier than regular Cutex Crème Polish, it takes a trifle longer to harden but rewards you with days more wear! In all twelve chic Cutex shades. Only 35¢ a bottle! Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris.

Send for Complete Home-Manicure Set Special Value . . . Only 25¢

Northam Warren Corporation, Dept. 8-M-11, 191 Hudson St., New York. (In Canada, P. O. Box 427, Montreal)
I enclose 25¢ to help cover postage and packing for handsome Cutex Set, including Cutex Oily Polish Remover, Oily Cuticle Remover, Cotton, Orangewood Stick, 4 Emery Boards and a choice of Cutex OLD ROSE ☐ or Cutex LAUREL ☐ Salon Type Nail Polish. (Check shade desired.)

Name_____

Address_____

City State

I GOT A SMILE OUT OF THE BOSS!

BEEMAN'S PEPSIN GUM

Say, who said the boss wasn't human? Right in the middle of a Board meeting he wanted a stick of Beeman's. And with every Director casting hopeful glances in my direction I opened an extra pack in my purse and passed it around.

"Have a treat on Miss Street," said the boss. "You never tasted a tangier flavor. Relax and rejoice with Beeman's. Even our new budget will be easier to take. You will find that flavor as fresh as an ocean breeze."

BEEMAN'S AIDS DIGESTION

KNITS FOR NOVEMBER

MAYBE you're going in for fancy skating this winter, or maybe you're just going to be a decorative spectator at the rinkside. In any case, let your knitting needles provide you with a smart costume. For lookers-on, there's the one-piece frock, with trim white collar, high patch pockets, leather belt, and front slide closing. A bouclé-type yarn, knit in stockinette stitch, with the reverse side out, gives an interesting woolen-like texture to this easy-to-make dress. Epaulettes give a flattering broad-shouldered look. Very Sonja Henie are the ribbed skating sweater with white crochet buttons and the fetching little bonnet, both crochet trimmed with gay Scandinavian colors of red, green, and black. Makes a swell Xmas gift, too. Directions, of course are free. Send for them today before you forget!

ANN WILLS, Modern Screen
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

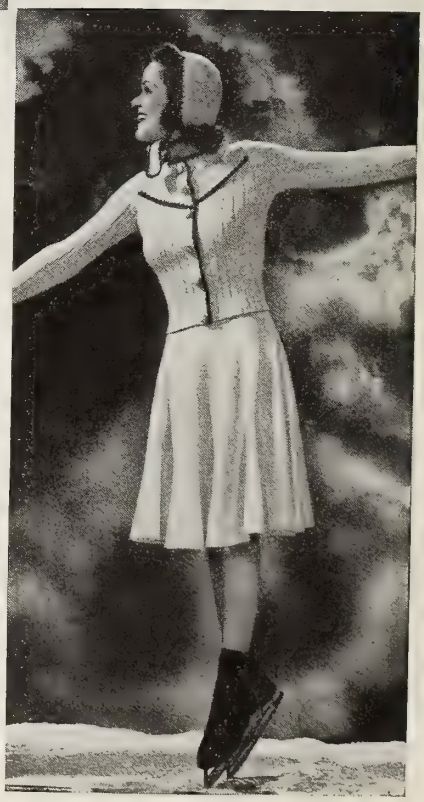
Kindly send, at no cost to me:

Knitting directions for BM 3851.....

Knitting directions for BM 3853.....

I enclose a stamped, self-addressed (large) envelope.

Name.....



Address.....

City.....State.....

Check one or both designs and please print name and address plainly.

BM-3851—Not only for promenading the pooch, but for many another informal occasion, this smartly styled one-piece frock with trim details will prove itself indispensable. Wrongside stockinette stitch in soft bouclé-type yarn gives it an interesting woolen-like texture. The white collar adds a note of freshness.

BM-3853—You'll look and feel just like the famous Sonja as you pirouette on the rink in your handknit skating vest and pert little bonnet. Crochet buttons and colorful embroidery in red, green and black lend a touch that is definitely Scandinavian. Make this set for yourself, and for your best friends' Christmas gifts, too.

NOTHING DOING FELLAS. SHE'S MY GIRL FOR THE EVENING!

Girls who guard against COSMETIC SKIN the Hollywood way win out—

IRENE DUNNE

COSMETIC SKIN SPOILS A GIRL'S CHANCES OF ROMANCE!

PORES CHOKED WITH DUST, DIRT AND STALE COSMETICS MAY MEAN COSMETIC SKIN. REMOVE COSMETICS THOROUGHLY WITH LUX TOILET SOAP

I USE COSMETICS, OF COURSE, BUT I NEVER HAVE COSMETIC SKIN. I USE LUX TOILET SOAP REGULARLY!

9 out of 10 Hollywood Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap new! daring! exciting! glamorous!

"BLACK" Lip Stick
By VARADY
Gives Your Lips That
Alluring, Tantalizing Appeal
For New Moments of Romance

Amazing "Black" Lipstick Changes Instantly, When Applied, to Glamorous; Blood-Warmth Shade of Radiant Red! . . . Most Amazing, One Lipstick Gives Any Shade Desired!

GIVE YOUR LIPS the clinging witchery of midnight romance . . . the look that attracts and enchants men! All you do is use the amazing new "black" lipstick creation that has aided thousands of women to acquire new allure, new mystery, new glamor!

The name of this sensational lipstick marvel is Varady's Midnite Rose Shade. Never before has there been anything like it in America. It is black with the deep rapture of whispering shadows. Yet it changes instantly when you apply it to the ravishing color of blood-warmth; makes lips appear moist and dewy with the yearnings of youth; gives them a vivid look of promise that holds men spellbound!

Created by Varady, renowned beauty authority, and creator of world-famous beauty aids. Ask for Varady's Midnite Rose Shade now, at any cosmetic counter, and see your lips with new and intriguing loveliness.

"THE RAGE OF PARIS"

"On Parisian boulevards, everyone is raving about this seductive new black color in lipsticks!

"As the creator of Varady's face powder and rouge, Oil of Youth, face cream and other well known beauty aids, I am glad to offer you the original American-made 'black' lipstick.

In the interests of your own charm, I urge you to try it."

Varady

Permanent! Indelible! Waterproof! Midnite Rose will give your lips any shade desired!

If your cosmetic counter cannot supply you with Varady's "black" lipstick, send coin or stamps to Varady, 427 W. Randolph St., Chicago. Please specify whether you wish the 25c or 55c size.

HE'S NOT MOVIE MINDED

(Continued from page 50)

"Anyway," Ray continued, "that Fall I opened in 'On Your Toes'. We had worked for nearly two years on the play and I was pretty excited about it. You see, in the theatre we work with the creators, putting part of ourselves into the roles. In pictures, they do things differently. You do what the writers say in the script and that's that.

"However, to get on, we rehearsed for weeks and then pushed off for Boston to open. I was running around in circles. We were all nervous about the show, not knowing whether it would be a hit. The opening night came round and next morning the papers announced we had a sure fire smash that would run for months. Then the fun began. Phones rang like mad and, believe it or not, movie companies were on the wire for me! I wouldn't talk to 'em. My place was the theatre, and there I should remain.

FINALLY I got together with one studio and signed before the show even got to New York. I didn't know what I was doing, I was so excited. Starred in a show that was a huge success, I was the happiest man in town. We came to New York and things went better than I'd even dreamed until 'The Great Ziegfeld' opened around the corner. Here I was, a bit player in the picture, and not a stone's throw away my name was up in lights! I got the ribbing of my life from my friends, so I kept my trap shut about this new deal with the cinema. After the show closed, I quietly came out here with hopes high and a determination to make good in the greatest medium of all, the talkies."

Yes, Ray Bolger's a guy that can take it! Not merely once has he been to the camera coast only to return disheartened, but each time he comes back for more. However, from reports, he's made his last trip back east, for since his excellent job in "Rosalie," his studio has really important plans for him.

"I've just finished working in 'Sweethearts,' but you won't be able to find me in it. It really takes time to get started in pictures. It's like beginning all over again. They haven't found just the right thing for me yet, but I'm not discouraged. Look at Fred Astaire. He did nothing for quite a time until some producer took a long chance and said, 'Well, he was a success when he played himself, so we'll let him do that on the screen.' Then over night Fred was famous as a movie star. The whole country clamored for his pictures. I don't expect to emulate his good fortune, but I do think we're on the right track. You see, with me, it's quite a difficult think. I get a star's salary, but I'm no star. So it's pretty hard to figure just what to do with me.

"However, I've heard tales at the studio that Eleanor Powell and I are to do a picture about Honolulu. Of course I won't play the love interest, merely her brother, but I think it would be good for me to work with Eleanor. She's a grand person and there's no one could stop her if she's cast properly. She's a sensible, sweet girl, not the dizzy society type damsel and, when she starts playing her type, watch her go to the top."

Also watch Mr. B. if those studio heads ever cast him as himself. How they have overlooked the great possibilities in his "On Your Toes" is a mystery. Of course, far be it from me, to take the casting problems from their shoulders, but were I in the purchasing department, Ray's first assignment would be to film his stage success. And, in so doing, fill the company's coffers with that always welcome cash.

"This much I do know," Ray continued with enthusiasm. "I'm to do 'The Wizard of Oz.' I'm looking forward to this because I feel it can be a highly amusing and successful picture. I'm not sure whether I will play the Scarecrow, or the Tin Woodman. Both are swell parts and if they keep it in a light vein, sticking to fantasy, I think it will be a big hit. Judy Garland is to play Dorothy, the little girl blown from Kansas to the Land of Oz. There are some marvelous songs in it, so she should be perfect."

There will be a rooting section for Ray here, because there's no one who deserves a break more than said gent. Chockful of talent, charm and personality, he is just what the fans have ordered for good fun.

Speaking of fun, the Bolgers are having the time of their lives getting ready to move into their first home. Seems that, due to traveling here and there, they never had the opportunity to settle in anything more than a hotel suite or an apartment. Well, all is changed, and you can take a tip that Mr. and Mrs. B. will be in for many an envious glance once a house warming is in order.

"We're having a marvelous time with this house," Ray confided as he proudly showed one around the grounds. "We certainly were lucky to find a place with shrubbery and trees. Why, it would have taken us a lifetime to get all this set. I can't understand how it remained vacant so long, unless no one could find it. The thing that sold us immediately was its eastern appearance. It's more like an English farm house architecturally, but all this gardening is typically Connecticut or New England. We've done the whole thing over, even to the conservatory, which is now a card room. Everything is new. We've started from scratch, even to the linens and pots and pans. It's been quite a job for Gwen, but she loves it and she's good at it, too."

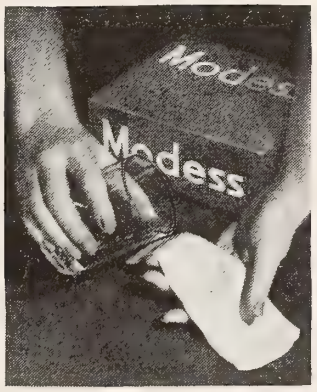
With things looking up for the Bolgers, there seems to be only one small fly in the ointment. When they go out socially, Ray wants to dance with his wife, there's always some producer's wife who wants to dance with Ray. Well—Ray wants to stay in pictures!

Roy Bolger and Jeanette MacDonald in an amusing scene from "Sweethearts."

"I was mad enough to jump overboard"

Gee—was I sorry for myself! And mad, too! Five precious days of the cruise I'd planned and saved for—to be spoiled by chafing discomfort and annoyance! I thought of the dancing and gay deck games, and inwardly wailed . . . Oh, why was I born a woman?

Well—at least I've drawn a nice cabin companion, I consoled myself, when I met the girl who was sharing my stateroom. And apparently it was mutual, for before we were unpacked we were friends . . . and I was telling her my troubles.



"Me, too"—she grinned. "But it doesn't get me down. Though I used to feel just as you do about it until I discovered Modess. But now—with Modess—I'm so completely comfortable I just don't think about it . . ."

"Here"—she continued, offering me a box of Modess. "Help yourself. Fortunately, I brought an ample supply." And while I finished unpacking, she explained how Modess is made and why it's so wonderfully comfortable . . .

"It's made differently," she told me. And she actually cut a Modess pad in two so that I could see and feel the soft, fluffy filler . . . so unlike napkins made of close-packed layers. "Now," she added, "I'll show you how safe you are with Modess . . ."

Taking out the moisture-resistant backing, she dropped water on it. Not a drop went through! "And," she pointed out, "there's a blue line on the back of every Modess pad that shows how to wear it for the greatest possible comfort and protection!"

Well—every day of that cruise was glorious! Not a single uncomfortable moment—thanks to Modess. So, naturally, I've been a Modess booster ever since. And think, for all its comfort and security, Modess costs not one cent more than any other nationally known napkin!

Get in the habit of saying "Modess"!

IF YOU PREFER A SMALLER, SLIGHTLY NARROWER PAD, SAY "JUNIOR MODESS"

ONE KISS ISN'T ENOUGH when lips are rosy, soft and tempting! Men love natural looking lips. But they hate the "painted" kind—glaring red and "hard as nails." Ask the man you love. See if he doesn't prefer this lipstick on you.

TANGEE—FOR TEMPTING LIPS... It's orange in the stick, but on your lips Tangee changes to the shade of blush-rose that best suits you! Blondes, brunettes and redheads... all use it perfectly. And its special cream base keeps lips soft, smooth.

HERE'S ROUGE TO MATCH!... Tangee Rouge, in Creme or Compact form, blends perfectly with your individual complexion—gives your cheeks lovely, natural color. It's one rouge that suits everyone—from blue-eyed blonde to deep brunette. Try Tangee Rouge and Lipstick tonight!

BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES! There is only one Tangee—don't let anyone switch you.

World's Most Famous Lipstick
TANGEE
ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

Be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. If you prefer more color for evening wear, ask for Tangee Theatrical.

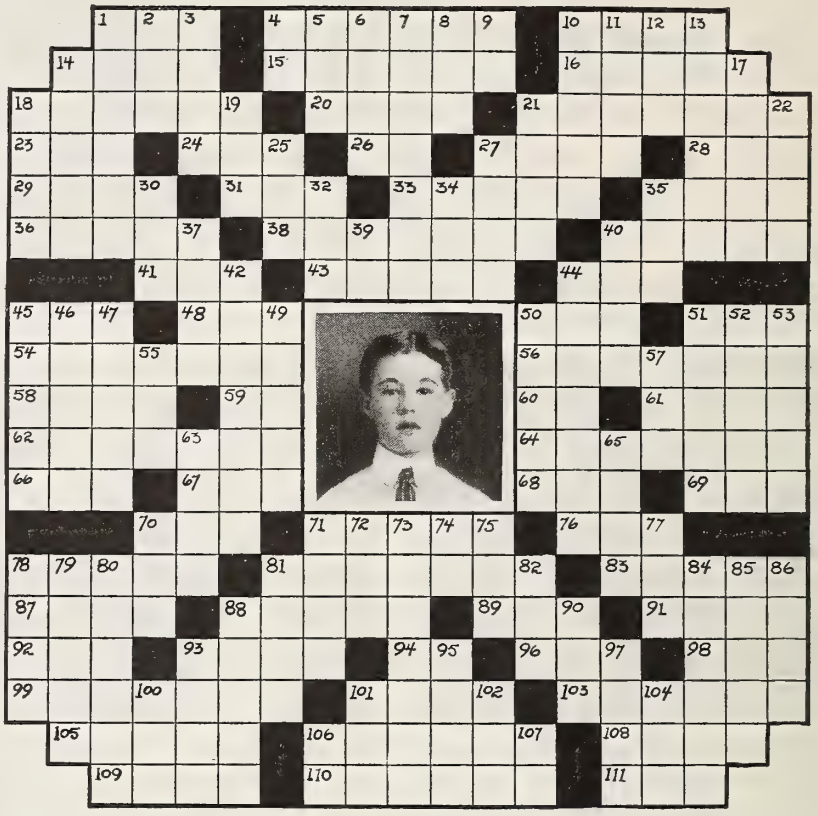
4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET

The George W. Luft Co., 417 Fifth Ave., New York City... Please rush "Miracle Make-Up Set" of sample Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)



Check Shade of Powder Desired ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

*Name*_____
(Please Print)

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____ MM118

OUR PUZZLE

• ACROSS

1 and 4. First and last names of our star
10. Wife of Charles Laughton
14. Actor in horror films
15. Exotic star of "Her Jungle Love"
16. Contests
18. Singer in "Romance In the Dark"
20. Egyptian river
21. Declares
23. Hastened
24. - - - ly Eilers
26. The boss in "Test Pilot": init.
27. Aid
28. Brother of George Gershwin
29. Sea eagle
31. Birthmonth of our star
33. Infant daughter of Dick Powell
35. Wreck
36. Crave
38. Beautiful spy in "Blockade"
40. "Oil for the - - - - - of China"
41. Stitch
43. Trifling
44. Place
45. - - - el Norman, silent star
48. Sorrow
50. Spanish hero
51. Judy - - - land
54. Actor in "Vivacious Lady"
56. Enthrall
58. M-G-M's trade-mark
59. "- - Cucuracha"
60. Mid-western state: abbr.
61. Level
62. Our star is this about his work
64. Ginger's dancing co-star
66. Compass point
67. Heroine in "Wells Fargo"
68. College yell
69. Pheasant's brood
70. Some
71. Male lead in "Sinners In Paradise"
76. Nevertheless
78. - - - - - Shelton
81. Birthplace of 1 across
83. Star of "Marie Antoinette"
87. Drug plant
88. More intelligent
89. Conclusion
91. "Kentucky - - - - shine"
92. - - - Tin Tin, famous dog
93. Rave
94. Star of "Ali Baba Goes to Town": init.
96. Conjunction
98. Genevieve To - - -
99. Climbing up
101. Loretta Young's birthplace
103. Photographing apparatus
105. Choicest part
106. Miss Allwyn's first name
108. Peel
109. "- - - - End"
110. Landed property
111. Motion picture stage

Answer to Puzzle on Page 115

PAGE

• DOWN

1. Lovely singer at "That Certain Age"
2. Our star was great in "In --- Chicago"
3. Negative votes
4. Cameraman for news: -- Mingalone
5. Our star's first film, "Sins of ---"
6. Great silent era actor
7. "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"
8. Color
9. Norse deity
10. 'Jellybeans' in "Yellow Jack"
11. "---- Horizon"
12. Cora Collins' middle name
13. Hall of an old Roman house
14. Sound loudly
17. Long, narrow piece of cloth
18. Girl in "Danger on the Air"
19. "Penrod and ---"
21. Drunkard in "Wise Girl"
22. Without
25. Varnish ingredient
27. Associate
30. Bitter vetch
32. Yelp
34. A studio's grounds
35. Male lead in "Tropic Holiday"
37. 1 across was in "Love Is ----"
39. Musical note
40. Our star has two
42. "High Flyers" was his last film
44. She was in "When Were You Born?"
45. Scrimmage
46. Asssumed name
47. Featured comic in "Swiss Miss"
49. Growing out
50. Our star managed him in "Happy Landing"
51. Mr. Gordon's first name
52. Man's name
53. French girl in "The Big Parade"
55. Hotel
57. Meadow
63. Queen in "Rosalie"
65. In that case
70. Beverage
71. School teacher in "South Riding"
72. 1 across co-starred in "--- in a Million"
73. With our star in "Ramona"
74. Plural ending
75. Film Helen Gahagan played in
77. Juvenile in "Goodbye Broadway"
78. Disfigures
79. She married our star in "Alexander's Ragtime Band"
80. Male lead in "Girls On Probation"
81. Principal in "State Police"
82. Eleanor Powell's dancing rival
84. Our star's brother in "Josette"
85. Watered silk fabric
86. Noted Chinese actress
88. Diminished
90. One of the famed Seven Dwarfs
93. Her last name is Hayworth
95. Alfalfa of "Our Gang"
97. Knocks
100. Carole does this in "True Confessions"
101. Employ
102. "The --- Parade"
104. Star of "Every Day's a Holiday"
106. Cinderella girl: --leen Whelan
107. Delivery: abbr.

MARVELOUS FOR COMPLEXIONS, TOO!

You'll want to use this pure, creamy-white soap for both face and bath.

Cashmere Bouquet's lather is so gentle and caressing. Yet it removes dirt and cosmetics so thoroughly, leaving your skin softer, smoother . . . more radiant and alluring!

NOW ONLY 10¢
at drug, department, ten-cent stores

TO KEEP Fragrantly Dainty —BATHE WITH PERFUMED

CASHMERE BOUQUET SOAP

IN BETWEEN

(Continued from page 47)

would have asked. I was so mad I told her I bet she thought that butterflies made butter! This was at the Cocoanut Grove, you know, so you can imagine what I went through. But, we did have a marvelous time."

Seeing Bonita's eyes sparkle and her head toss as she recounted her experiences, reminded us somehow of the brat in "These Three." It needed only half a question from me to get her started on her favorite characterization.

"I had so much fun doing 'These Three.' It was work, too, but when you got through there was something to show for the time you spent on it. Then too, in a part like that there's lots of meat—something to get hold of. It really wasn't hard getting the character in hand. You see, the first thing I do is to read the script, then the director gives me his idea of what the part should be and I sort of mix it with my interpretation and, there it is.

"I always treat my characters as though they were real. Then I can get to know them better. But with the sort of person I played in 'These Three,' it wasn't so easy. She wasn't just a mean brat on the surface. It went deeper than that. She was vindictive and a liar through and through. She loved hurting people and causing trouble in the worst possible way.

"Now in 'White Banners,' I played a girl who could have been quite a meanie. But, the director said she shouldn't be nasty—just a little fresh and completely sincere. She said some pretty awful things for a girl of her age, but the way she said them and felt about them made things all right.

"I liked that part. It was the nearest to a grown-up I've played yet. And it was swell working with Jackie Cooper. He's the nicest boy and has so much respect for his mother. Girls are supposed to be respectful, but with boys, it's sort of different. If you could see him on the set with his mother, you couldn't help admire him. And it isn't that he's dull either. He kids around and has lots of fun, but in a quiet way. He's a good actor, too. The real test is when you play with someone and he sure enough comes through."

Our young Miss G., who ordered lemonade and confided the reason was she was on a diet, reached for her third piece of cinnamon toast. She got it and also a look from Mama Granville, who took her seriously about the diet business. So, we quickly asked what sort of roles she liked best.

"Oh, I like to do a variety of parts," Bonita began. "I'd hate to think that I would end up as an ingenue. When I grow up I want to play the sort of women Bette Davis does now. But, I don't want to go through the bad period she went through to get to doing the things she now does. She's my favorite actress. I hope I'll be as good as she is some day. Then I'll feel I've really accomplished something. I kind of like doing mean roles, because when you get through you've really done a job. Fans remember you if you're mean enough, or good enough, but when you're just a sticky ingenue, you haven't anything!

"I've been awfully worried about how I'd accomplish the transition from kid parts to grown-ups, but now I hope it's settled. You see, the studio has just bought the Nancy Drew series for me. It's the story of a girl detective, sixteen years old, and her adventures. She has a car of her own and drives everywhere, but I don't think they'll let me do quite that much. There are about twelve books in the series and I've read all but one. They'll be something on the order of the Judge Hardy and Jones Family series, each one a separate adventure. I hope this will bridge the gap and graduate me to adult roles. At least it will help."

Hearing Bonita discuss the problems confronting her now reminded us of the story of her first venture into the theatre. But then it's her story and she loves to reminisce—at her age!

"You see, Daddy was an actor and so was Mummy till she married. I was practically born in the theatre, so to speak, but didn't live in a trunk backstage. Nothing so romantic! I lived a normal life out on Long Island. But, when I was old enough to walk, Daddy would lead me onto the stage to take a bow. Then once in a while he would let me go on and ad lib with him. I loved it and from then on it was sort of understood I would act when I grew up.

"When Daddy came to California to make pictures, Mummy and I came along, too. When he was finished and went back world as a new personality. (And how she has broken!) They wanted her to learn the language. And so she was forbidden to appear in public places, and was permitted no interviews. Even photographers were barred from snapping her, either in posed or candid shots.

(Continued on page 100)

(Continued from page 70)

If that's true, the plan worked well indeed. From a nonentity she has become the sensation of Hollywood. If it is not true, if she was neither interviewed nor photographed because no one knew anything about her and therefore cared nothing, Hedy certainly has the last laugh. And I have a hunch she's laughing quietly to herself these days.

WHAT is this extraordinary beauty and appeal of hers? Well, you've seen it on the screen now. It's good old-fashioned allure, the same as Negri, Naldi and the others had. She is not voluptuous in body, as Jean Harlow was, but she suggests it through her eyes. They're hot and smokey, the essence of mystery. They're what men used to call "come-hither" eyes.

In person that same beauty and appeal is there but somehow refined. Possibly the lack of make-up accounts for that. Hedy suggests the fragile yet stirring loveliness of a full blown orchid. But she suggests it only in appearance. In speech, thought and action she is as direct and open as a field daisy. And maybe that's the secret of her; she's confusing!

She had a doll her mother had just sent from Vienna. She was as excited as a child. "Isn't it lovely?" she asked delightedly. Yet she'll turn right around and appraise a person or a situation with all the worldly wisdom you'd expect from a woman twice her years.

There has been a lot of romantic gossip about Hedy and Reginald Gardiner the English comedian. Their names constantly are linked in the public prints, with predictions of marriage coming at regular intervals.

"What about him?" I asked. "Is it serious?"

"Look, I'll show you." She led me into a room in the back of the house. It was a small, modernistic lounge with a pint-sized bar, deep chairs and divans. On the wall were gay posters of Austrian resorts, and a dozen or so autographed pictures of Hollywood celebrities, all neatly framed in red.

"It's charming, but what about it?" I said.

"Reggie fixed all this. You see, that's how it is with us. He helps me. We're friends. He has been like a nurse to me, cheering me up when I was homesick, making me laugh, helping me with English lessons. But romance? No!"

On the wall was a caricature of Hedy, done in water colors by Reggie. It shows her dressed in slacks and comfortable old shoes. Over her head is a halo. She has her back turned to the things she doesn't like in life which were depicted as "castor oil, scotch, champagne."

In the picture she is facing the things she loves. They are labeled on boxes, bottles and jimcracks and include "money, a tremendous amount of anything frightfully expensive, Agnes hats, squash (the vegetable), furs, candy, perfume, phonograph records, and How Not To Become Bored With a Rolls Royce."

Under Gardiner's signature on the sketch were the words te amo in very small letters. When I went to school that meant "I love you."

Hedy's eyes opened wide when I mentioned it.

"My goodness," she said in great surprise. "I never noticed that before."

Says Hedy!

"I've lived an extra month this year"—

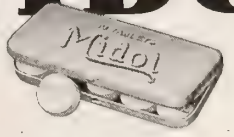
Like so many women, Janice believed menstrual pain had to be endured. As regularly as her dreaded days came on, she stopped "living"—gave up all pleasure to give in to suffering.

Then, a year ago, a thoughtful friend told Janice about Midol; how it relieves functional periodic pain even at its worst, and how it often saves many women even slight discomfort.



Now Janice is "living" again—not just part of the time, but twelve full months a year. Letting Midol take care of unnecessary menstrual pain has restored to her a whole month of wasted days!

MIDOL is made for women for one special purpose—to relieve the unnatural pain which often makes the natural menstrual process so trying. And Midol is dependable; unless there is some organic disorder requiring the attention of a physician or surgeon, Midol helps most women who try it.

Why not give Midol the chance to help you? It acts quickly, not only to relieve the pain, but to lessen discomfort. A few Midol tablets should see you serenely through your worst day. Convenient and inexpensive purse-size aluminum cases at all drugstores.

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL PERIODIC PAIN

SUITING THE SEASON

(Continued from page 49)

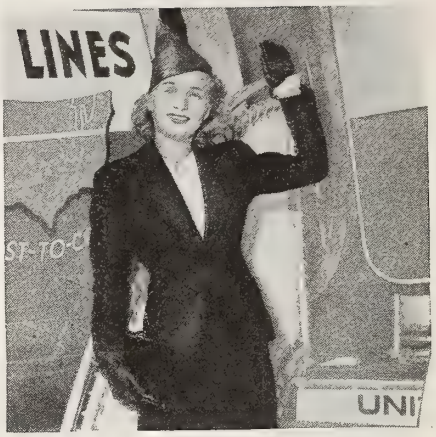
blouse and the accompanying hat has a narrow round brim and peaked crown.



A flat bow at the throat relieves the plainness of a tailored blouse Rosalind wears with a straight skirt and full length coat. A patterned tweed jacket is paired with a solid color, very flaring skirt. An openwork yoke decorates the fitted blouse. A diagonally striped jacket with a plain skirt goes gay with black revers and sleeves. A pill box hat tops a pencil striped outfit of soft material with very short jacket and dolman-like sleeves.

Maureen O'Sullivan and Jane Wyman are suit conscious in "The Crowd Roars." Sweaters of all types, from simple weaves to lacy openworks, go with suits. Miss O'Sullivan chooses a trim sweater with a round white pique collar for a loose jacketed tweed suit. A more tailored suit has a trim white blouse, and her large flat beret has a narrow band and bow of white. Her dance frock has draped cap sleeves and the off-shoulder bodice line is outlined with flowers.

Miss Wyman wears casual sports hats, brims dipping abruptly in front, with two different suits. One is a tailored tweed, and the other a very feminine version of masculine tailoring—something like a streamlined version of the old time minstrel suit. The jacket is light with wide black revers, and the saucy white vest has a standing collar and black string tie.

"Give Me A Sailor" (or the glamming of Martha Raye) has the rowdy vocalist in a series of glamor gowns, dripping with fur, feathers and ruffles. Blonde Betty Grable is forced, by the script, to take a sartorial back seat to Miss Raye.

After a session in the kitchen in little gingham numbers, Miss Raye blossoms out in a sweeping princess coat deluged with white fox. A white evening gown cut low across the top has net ruffles cascading over the shoulders. A white formal has a black lace bolero and belt and huge bow knots of the lace appliqued on the bouffant skirt. A street frock is snowed under in gray fox, the fur forming huge cuffs on the three-quarter sleeves and bordering the widely flaring skirt.

When "Four Daughters" was released, Priscilla Lane flew to New York for the premiere. It surely was her picture!

Betty Grable, who has the knack or the gift of looking just a little better groomed and band-boxy than almost anyone else, has fewer costume changes but makes the most of the ones allotted her.

A white bolero with black revers dresses up a slim black frock. A new half and half note is struck with a combination of black and dotted material. From the back, Miss Grable is wearing form-fitting black. The front is dotted, the top draped and its skirt is released into fullness from shirring at the waist. Sort of a half-dirndl effect.

Arleen Whelan's "Gateway" wardrobe features two suits. One is light with polka dot vest and lapels. The short jacket of a black suit has lapels and tiny breast pockets of white.

Anne Shirley and Ruby Keeler are young ladies of an earlier day in "Mother Carey's Chickens," but the jackets worn with their long old-fashioned gowns would be right in step with today's wardrobes. The jackets are very short, with long tight sleeves puffed at the shoulders, of the bicycle-built-for-two era. Time marches on. Both jackets and bicycles are enjoying a widespread revival. It isn't advisable to raid the attic for jackets mother used to wear, however.

BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME

(Continued from page 15)

To my mind, his performance in "A Tale of two Cities" was the most beautifully done piece of work I have ever witnessed on the screen. Charles Dickens himself would have been completely satisfied. Not one man in a million could have done that last tragic scene by the guillotine with such depth of feeling as Mr. Colman.

You can have your Flynns, Taylors and Gables but give me Ronald Colman, a gentleman in every sense of the word. I can't wait to see his "If I Were King."—Minor Robertson, Memphis, Tenn.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Oh, Yeah?

Boo hoo. With tears streaming down my cheeks (sniff) and with a breaking heart, I pen this letter of condolence to the poor, abused movie stars. After reading Margaret Forster's touching version of the trials of stardom in the September "Between You 'n' Me" Department, I realized what a miserable lot is theirs.

How hard it must be to accept the admiration of millions, but bravely they bear it! Bravely they leave the squalor of their forty-room mansions each day and slave in the arms of beautiful co-stars! But being courageous creatures they manage to struggle along on a paltry five-thousand dollars per week. Ah, what price stardom!

This is just a gentle hint that I think Miss Forster's letter was, to put it bluntly, a trifle ludicrous. We don't pity the stars; we envy them!—Miss Garpow, Chicago, Ill.

$1.00 Prize Letter
A Salute For Hollywood

With sincerity I salute Hollywood. It is a place where passions and emotions are manufactured daily with such realism that they make the millions who compose the movie audiences laugh or cry at their will.

Under crazily glaring hot lights, cold eyes of cameras, loads of makeup, and the critical stares of directors and technicians, the Hollywood performers put their very souls into their roles that they might live as other persons on a silver screen! Your tasks are difficult and your products are so valuable to us. I repeat—I salute you, Hollywood, and may your magic machinery hum and create, forever!—Milton Swiren, Mont Alto, Penn.

$1.00 Prize Letter
Bette Davis

Perhaps Bette Davis was telling the truth when she exclaimed, "Am I Homely!" in an article in September Modern Screen—but wait, not so fast!

It's altogether possible that her eyes do bulge and that her mouth isn't just as she'd like it, but I don't see any reason for Bette to judge herself so harshly. I ask you, is there another star in all Hollywood who works as hard as Bette Davis and puts so much of herself into every endeavor?

Remember the scene in "Jezebel" that took place on the stairs—Bette's pleading with Margaret Lindsay? Well, if there's another actress in all filmdom who could have played that scene with the same perfection, I'll eat my shoe (strings and all).

So please, Miss Davis, remember the next time you see your image in the mirror, that through hard work and earnest effort you have developed a most intelligent countenance—a beauty much more than skin deep.—Alice Bohmer, New Britain, Conn.

For "Camera Perfect" skin you need Beauty more than skin-deep Annabella...fair young 20th Century-Fox star, now playing in the picture "Suez". In any light, studio light or sunlight, her beauty holds its glamour.

This cream contains two elements which are basic beauty builders.

One makes for purity and clearness. The other for skin vitality.

"CAMERA PERFECT!" These words describe the complexion that meets the hardest tests triumphantly. The skin that looks as clear and lovely under the noon-day sun as in mellow evening light.

Two elements in Woodbury Cold Cream help to give beauty more than skin-deep. One of these elements keeps this cream germ-free throughout your use of it. Such lasting purity encourages fault-free skin.

The second element in Woodbury Cold Cream stimulates the skin's rate of breathing. This is the skin-stimulating Vitamin which contributes to the skin's vitality.

Buy Woodbury Cold Cream today for only 10¢, 25¢, 50¢ or $1.00. Let it help you win a lovely "Camera Perfect" skin.

SEND* for Trial Tubes of Woodbury Creams

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 6795 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario

Please send me trial tubes of Woodbury Cold and Facial Creams; 7 shades of Woodbury Facial Powder; guest-size Woodbury Facial Soap. I enclose 10¢ to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 6)

★★★ Letter of Introduction

Andrea Leeds has the letter, and it's an introduction to a famed actor, Adolphe Menjou, who is really her father. Since he is something of a matinee idol it is considered unwise to advise his public that he has a daughter as old as Miss Leeds, so he calls her his "protege" and sponsors a stage career for her, an interest which seems all too enthusiastic to Mr. Menjou's fiancee (Ann Sheridan) and Miss Leeds' gentleman friend (George Murphy), who do not know of the relationship. The story is constructed on this rather slender thread but, thanks to good performances and the welcome presence of Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy and a wooden interloper named Mortimer Snerd, a good time will be had by all who go to see "A Letter of Introduction."

The director has contrived to make Edgar Bergen an essential character in the story rather than drag him in by McCarthy's heels as was done in "The Goldwyn Follies." Bergen and McCarthy are a pair of smooth performers and furnish most of the film's comic moments. McCarthy has an uneasy moment or two when Bergen introduces the rival, Mortimer Snerd, a country bumpkin who is destined for instant favor.

Both Adolphe Menjou and Andrea Leeds perform creditably, and there are good portrayals by the supporting cast. Directed by John Stahl.—Universal.

★★★ Sing You Sinners

Like old wine and money in the bank, Bing Crosby improves with age. The Groaner has always been a likeable screen personality, but now for the first time in his career he really acts. The character he creates—Joe Beebe—lives and breathes, and Crosby plays him so well one almost suspects the portrayal is autobiographical. Bing will probably never win an Academy Oscar for his histrionics, but he does play a drunk scene (one of the most difficult items in an actor's repertoire) so beautifully that it becomes the outstanding moment of the picture.

Joe Beebe is a guy with great ideas, and he expects one day to make a million. In the meantime, he hasn't a job, so Dave (Fred MacMurray) has to support the family (Elizabeth Patterson and Donald O'Connor) and put off his marriage to the village belle (Ellen Drew). But Joe finally leaves town, gets into a big deal and subjects the Beebes to a generous quota of excitement.

There are swell performances from the entire cast. Elizabeth Patterson is perfect as the harassed mother; Donald O'Connor and Ellen Drew, in their screen debuts, are definite finds, and Fred MacMurray does his usual good work. There are two hit tunes among several sung by Bing and by the trio (Bing, MacMurray and O'Connor). "Pocketful of Dreams" is one and "Small Fry" another. Wesley Ruggles directed.—Paramount.

★★★ I Am the Law

A good rousing interpretation of the racket-busting industry usually makes fine screen entertainment, and since "I Am the Law" is the best racket-busting film that has come along so far this year we can promise you a thoroughly enjoyable evening in the theatre. With Edward G. Robinson in the lead, furnishing one of his best performances, the picture has everything to recommend it to audiences interested in an exciting and an intelligent treatment of one of this country's most topical problems.

In a city overridden with rackets, Robinson, a law school professor, steps in to take charge of a clean-up campaign. Denied funds by a city council backed by supposedly legitimate business men who are actually the men behind the rackets, Robinson drafts his best law students and continues on his own. A well-constructed screenplay avoids the pitfalls encountered in the usual racket picture, and Alexander Hall's direction accounts for its speed.

Robinson runs the gamut in the role of the prosecutor—he even exhibits an excellent version of the big apple. Barbara O'Neil is handsome and dignified as his wife, Wendy Barrie is a svelte and believable racket queen, and John Beal performs credibly in the role of Robinson's assistant. Best performance in the supporting cast, however, is Otto Kruger's splendid portrayal of the racketeer who poses as a civic leader.—Columbia.

Myrna Loy and Clark Gable together again in "Too Hot to Handle."

★★ Give Me a Sailor

We are happy to report that the star of this picture is Martha Raye—not Moutha. For she doesn't indulge in one blood-curdling yip, not even a "yeah man," and the result is a performance of which Martha should be proud. It's a good-humored story of home, sweet home—as happy a home as could be expected when there are two daughters, one a beauty and the other an ugly duckling.

Betty Grable's the gal who's got allure and Martha's the one who's got the left-overs—left-over clothes, money and beaus. This state of affairs has been going on for years but comes to a climax when the man they both love (Jack Whiting) gets shore leave and has marriage in mind. The sailor's sweethearts forget all the bonds of sisterhood in their tactics from there on. Martha enlists the help of Bob Hope, Jack's brother, to help snare her man, and in return promises to get Betty for Bob. But overnight Martha becomes a femme fatale. Through a mix-up, when she enters a picture of her cookie "Yum Yums" in a prize contest, a shot of her "Yum Yum" underpinnings is included. She suddenly finds herself the winner of "the most beautiful legs in the world" contest. It's all pretty silly but there's a genuine laugh a second to offset it. Martha's performance shows a sympathetic understanding and dramatic ability which has heretofore remained hidden. Betty Grable is an eyeful, as usual, and handles her role competently. Bob Hope scores decidedly. Directed by Elliot Nugent.—Paramount.

★★ Always In Trouble

You know that a title like this can mean only one thing—Jane Withers. Jane actually manages to get into more trouble here than in all previous pictures put together. And that, you also know, is going some. But though she tackles every scene with customary gusto, the picture does not measure up to former standards.

The story concerns a family who get into one predicament after another, all dating back to the day when Dad (Andrew Tombes) becomes a millionaire over night. As far as Dad and his youngest daughter (Jane) are concerned, they see no reason why a million dollars should change their lives. But Mother (Nana Bryant) and the eldest daughter (Jean Rogers) see no reason why all that money can't make society folk out of them. Drastic methods have to be taken to save the family from going phoney and Miss Fix-It Withers is just the girl who can do it. Among other things, in a whole-hearted attempt to get them straightened out, Jane manages to get them ship-wrecked, puts them at the mercy of smugglers, and just misses getting the whole outfit kidnapped. But in the end she gets the high flyers, mother and big sister, down to earth and even imports a fine young man (Robert Kellard) to make a sensible wife out of Jean. Directed by Joseph Santley.—Twentieth Century-Fox.

★★ The Gladiator

They've given Joe E. Brown his best script to date in "The Gladiator." And he takes full advantage of every opportunity, which guarantees a fine time for all. This time Joe E. goes collegiate with rah rah aplenty. Some twelve years previous he has had to quit his freshman year because of financial embarrassment, but when he wins $1,500, at a Bank Night he beats it right back to the old Alma Mater. It looks like Joe's in for an awful beating from his classmates—particularly when they start using him for a tackling dummy on the football field. But the second day he comes out and mows 'em down.

No one is more surprised than Joe E.—for during the night an eccentric professor has injected a serum into his arm which gives him super-human strength. After winning glories for old Webster he next tackles Man Mountain Dean in the fight of the century. Man Mountain's tossed about like a tooth-pick for the first fifteen minutes. Then Champ Brown gets his—for the serum begins wearing off. Suspense is terrific, not only for the audience but for June Travis, queen of the campus, who's managed to get the obliging Joe into all his troubles. The supporting cast is entirely commendable. Directed by Edward Sedgwick.—Columbia.

★★★★ You Can't Take It With You

With more human appeal than his last production ("Lost Horizon") and almost as much as his greatest ("Mr. Deeds Goes To Town"), Frank Capra's latest film achievement will easily rank among the best pictures of the year. Capra, who is accustomed to turning out hits, has taken the Kaufmann-Hart Broadway success and with writer Robert Riskin has as delightful and heart-warming a picture as you'll see in many months.

"You Can't Take It With You" is the story of the Sycamores, an amiable and eccentric family which believes in doing exactly what it pleases. Headed by Grandpa Sycamore, who decided some thirty-five years back that he didn't like his work (and stopped working that instant), the family consists of Penny, who writes plays because someone left a typewriter at the house by mistake; Paul, her husband, who makes fireworks in the basement, assisted by a Mr. DePinna, an iceman who stopped one morning and decided to stay; Essie, who makes candy and studies ballet dancing with a Russian exile who manages to drop in every evening at dinner time, and Alice, who is Penny's daughter and the only more or less conventional member of the family. When the Sycamores encounter Anthony Kirby, the financial tycoon, and his family, there is conflict, fireworks and everything. Even love has its inning.

Of the cast, Edward Arnold as Anthony Kirby is probably the standout performer. Jean Arthur and Jimmy Stewart are expert in the romance department, in roles which will add to the prestige of them both. Spring Byington is amusing as the rattle-brained Penny, and Ann Miller furnishes excellent comedy as the ballet dancing Essie. Mischa Auer, as her Russian instructor, makes the most of his comic moments, and there are performances deserving more than passing mention by Donald Meek, Sam Hinds, H. B. Warner, Mary Forbes, Halliwell Hobbes, Eddie Anderson, and especially by Harry Davenport, whose fine portrayal makes his one scene one of the picture's most important. Only fault this reviewer can find is Lionel Barrymore's performance in the important role of Grandpa Sycamore. Lionel Barrymore, even under Capra expert guidance, is still playing Lionel Barrymore. Directed by Frank Capra.—Columbia.

★★★ Carefree

"Carefree" is a happy union of song, dance and story, plus a happy reunion of the screen's ace dance team, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire. Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire celebrate the occasion by giving us the best performances of their careers. "Carefree" is as good as any previous Astaire-Rogers musical, and it will be looked upon by some as their best. Certainly it is the most imaginative. Another definite advantage is a sound story which admits their dancing as part and parcel of the plot. We may as well go the whole route and say that for the first time in the screen history of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers there is not a single case of mistaken identity in the entire picture.

Astaire is a psychiatrist hired to straighten out the love life of Miss Rogers, a radio singer. When he places her in a hypnotic state in which she loses all her inhibitions, she becomes infatuated with him, tosses bricks at store windows, makes faces at her radio sponsor and tells her listeners that his toothpaste is positively the worst stuff on the market. Later, convinced by Astaire that he is not worthy of her, she is about to mary her original suitor, Ralph Bellamy, when she snaps out of her trance on her wedding day and marches up the aisle with the right gent.

Irving Berlin's songs are excellent, but neither Rogers nor Astaire are vocally up to the job of putting them over. Their dances, however, are skillful and beautiful to watch. A dream sequence, done in slow motion, is so good it will be copied by many future musicals. Their feature dance, "The Yam," is everything you'd expect of the team, even though it's much too intricate for ordinary mortals to copy on the ballroom floor. Mark Sandrich directed.—RKO-Radio.

★★ The Road to Reno

It's difficult to classify this one, because it combines two distinctly different types of opera—grand and horse—and winds up as a satire of sorts on the Nevada divorce laws. If you are a lover of any of these three brands of entertainment, perhaps you'll find your moments of pleasure in the picture. The combination would have been a happier one, however, had the story fashioners contrived a more logical tale and embellished it with dialogue without so much of a manufactured ring to it.

Hope Hampton, returning to the screen, photographs well and sings beautifully. She has difficulty, however, making anything genuine out of the character she plays. The blame here can be handed to the scenarists, who present, at the picture's start, an opera star about to enter divorce proceedings against her husband, a cowboy with whom she hasn't lived for

(Continued on page 107)

DOWN WITH DULL DINNERS

The Lloyd Nolans offer fine recipes in their campaign for more exciting menus

AT A TIME of year when politicians are filling the air with adjectives and agitating for all kinds of urgent reforms, Lloyd Nolan wishes to go on record as advocating the complete abolishment of routine, unimaginative, cut-and-dried, commonplace meals! He feels even more strongly on this subject when such meals include foods that are served "because they are good for you!"

"Just combine dullness with duty in your menus," declares this dashing young character actor, "and you'll never win a vote of approval from your family. You won't be elected 'the people's choice' as a hostess, either!"

"I'm convinced," broke in his charming wife, Mel, "that enjoyment affects both digestion and nutrition. Women would be wiser if they paid more attention to flavor, seasoning and originality in preparing everyday meals."

Acting upon her own suggestions, Mel Nolan has evolved—for the special delectation of her attractive husband—many grand dishes, combinations of foods and menus that are distinctive and different. Furthermore, in her food researches she has discovered that the familiar cooking directions, "season to taste," can mean a deal more than just adding salt and pepper!

Courtesy Sun-Maid

Roast stuffed breast of veal, Carolina.

"It's surprising, for example, what a little curry powder can do to a dish that might otherwise be thought of as just another lamb stew," this Hollywood hostess observed sagely. And how delightfully changed is a roast of veal when it boasts a special stuffing which the Nolans favor, one that I'll wager you have never tried before. Why, even baked apples become proud, aristocratic "beauties" when prepared according to the recipe I'm about to give you here.

The first of these treats—the Curry of Lamb—is the featured dish on the intriguing menu shown further along, as set down for us by Mrs. Nolan. Her recipe for this prime favorite of hers also follows, together with directions for making two other Nolan specialties which are quite as deserving of your attention. That is, if you intend to adopt Lloyd's stirring slogan: "Down with Dull Dinners!"

Remember, too, that when you try your hand at the unusual, every meal will seem like a party. And, by the way, there are a couple of special occasions coming up soon which you'll want to celebrate fittingly. Not only from the standpoint of foods, but of table decorations. I refer, of course, to Hallowe'en and Thanksgiving, both of which present as good an excuse to entertain charmingly as one could hope to find. You can serve the Lloyd Lamb Curry and the baked apple "Beauties" on the first of these two occasions. And you can make both events outstandingly successful by sending in the coupon which will bring you directions for making attractive, yet inexpensive, table decorations. Those for Hallowe'en feature witches and pumpkins; while for your Thanksgiving dinner table there are turkey napkin holders as well as special favors for each guest and an extra-special centerpiece arrangement. Easy to do, easy to secure—and free. So don't forget to mail in the coupon with your request for either or both.

The Lloyd Nolans ready for one of Mel's dinners.

LLOYD AND MEL NOLAN'S INDIAN CURRY DINNER

Vegetable Soup
Curry of Lamb
Baked Bananas
Rice Chutney
Molded Tomato Salad
Rolls, Split and Toasted
Raspberry Ice
Tea

CURRY OF LAMB, à la LLOYD NOLAN

2 pounds lamb (shoulder, breast or leg) boiling water to cover
⅓ cup butter
1 large onion, chopped fine
1 large apple, diced
5 outside stalks celery, chopped fine
2 teaspoons curry powder*
¼ cup cold water
⅓ cup seedless raisins
3 egg yolks
¼ cup milk
salt and pepper, to taste
grated cocoanut, shredded almonds

Have lamb cut into one-inch pieces, after removing all bone, fat and gristle. Wipe meat, cover with boiling water and cook slowly until meat is tender. Strain and measure stock. There should be 2½ cups (add more water, if necessary, to make required amount). Melt butter in large skillet or dutch oven. Add the onion, apple and celery. Cook until tender, without browning. Add curry powder which has been mixed with cold water to a smooth paste.* Cook and stir until blended. Add lamb and lamb stock, then the raisins which have been rinsed in hot water and drained. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and simmer gently for twenty minutes. Just before serving beat yolks of eggs with the milk. Add a little of the hot lamb liquor to them, then add this mixture very slowly to the curry mixture, stirring constantly. Continue cooking and stirring until smooth and slightly thickened. Serve on very dry, fluffy rice. Pass bowls of grated cocoanut and shredded almonds, to be sprinkled over the curry. Chutney is the traditional accompaniment, you know.

ROAST STUFFED BREAST OF VEAL, CAROLINA

4 pounds breast of veal
1½ cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon sugar
½ cup yellow corn meal
1¼ cups milk
1 egg, beaten
⅔ cup seedless raisins
⅓ cup minced onion
½ cup sliced mushrooms or diced celery

 Add more curry powder if a stronger curry flavor is desired. For a very hot curry add a dash of Tabasco sauce, advices Mel Nolan.*

BY MARJORIE DEEN

1 cup canned bouillon a pinch of sage salt and pepper, to taste
½ cup hot water

Have your butcher bone the veal. Rub inside and out with salt and pepper. Combine flour with the ¾ teaspoon salt, the baking powder, soda and sugar; sift together. Mix in corn meal. Beat in milk and eggs. Fry on hot oiled griddle or in greased iron skillet as for griddle cakes. When all are fried and cooled, break in small pieces into a bowl. Rinse raisins in hot water, drain and add. Fry onions and mushrooms (or celery) in small amount of fat until onions are soft. Add this mixture to raisin mixture. Moisten with ½ cup of the bouillon, add sage and salt and pepper to taste. Mix together thoroughly. Lay the boned veal out flat. Spread stuffing on boned side and roll up as for jelly roll. Skewer in three places; tie around the rolled meat and through the skewers, securely, with white cord. Brush entire outside of roll with melted fat. Place meat on rack in baking pan or roaster. Pour remaining ½ cup of bouillon, combined with water, in bottom of pan. Bake, uncovered, in moderately slow oven (325° F.) until meat is tender, about 3 hours, basting every 20 minutes with liquid in the pan, adding a little more water, whenever necessary, to prevent burning.

BAKED BEAUTIES

4 large baking apples
¼ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup chopped nut meats
6 tablespoons honey
1 teaspoon Angostura
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup water

Choose extra-large apples, suitable for baking. Peel the top half only of each apple. Remove each core generously but carefully so as not to cut the apple all the way through (this will keep juices in the apples as they cook). Rinse raisins in hot water, drain. Combine with chopped nuts and place a couple of spoonfuls in each apple. Mix honey and Angostura. Pour a tablespoonful into each apple, and spread a little of the mixture over the top of each apple to glaze it. Place apples in shallow baking dish. Dot apples with butter and pour water around them, to prevent burning. Bake in moderate over (375° F.) for one hour, or until tender. Serve plain; or with whipped cream or hard sauce.

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Ave., N. Y. C.

Please send me illustrated, easy-to-follow directions for special Hallowe'en ☐ Thanksgiving ☐ table decorations. Check either or both.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

1. I said somethin' a couple of weeks ago that made Mom so hopping mad, I almost caught a licking.

2. We were at Aunt Lola's and I piped up: "Gee, Mom, look at how white this napkin is! Our things must have tattle-tale gray or somethin' 'cause they never shine like this." . . . Zowie! Mom flew for the hairbrush.

3. But lucky for me, Aunt Lola stopped her. "It's the truth, so why get angry?" she told Mom. "Your lazy soap leaves dirt behind. If you'd switch to Fels-Naptha Soap as I did, your clothes wouldn't have tattle-tale gray."

4. So Mom forgot to spank me and went to the grocer's for some Fels-Naptha. This morning, she was raving about how its richer golden soap and lots of gentle naptha wash clothes so white and nice. And, golly, if she didn't give me a quarter for a pony ride!

COPR. 1938, FELS & CO.

BANISH "TATTLE-TALE GRAY" WITH FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

NEW! WONDER FLAKES! TRY FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS, TOO!

From the Tropics
TO YOUR FINGERTIPS!

Glazo brings you flattering new nail polish shades of fascinating beauty...created by fashion experts...inspired by the exquisite colors of lovely tropical flowers!

Your hands take on a new and romantic allure when you wear these subtly enchanting Glazo colors!

TROPIC—A smoky ash-pink tone found in a rare and gorgeous oriental Hibiscus.

CONGO—Captures the deep and luscious orchid-rose tint of the Kia-Ora petals.

CABAÑA—From the exotic Persian Tulip comes this gay and vibrant rusty-red.

SPICE—The tempting, rich burgundy color of an exquisitely shaded Amazon Orchid.

See Glazo's new tropic shades at any drug counter. Choose your color today!

Other Glazo fall and winter fashion-shades: Old Rose; Thistle; Rust; Russet; Shell. All shades, extra large size . . . 25¢

GLAZO'S NAIL-COTE guards nails against splitting and breaking. Contains wax. Is a perfect foundation for polish—makes it last longer. Gives added gloss. Only 25¢.

GLAZO
NEW TROPIC SHADES

AND FATHER IS DOING WELL

(Continued from page 36)

We smoked each other's cigars."

Shortly after the baby was born Joan was put on a strict diet, with a special diet nurse in attendance, and at the same time Dick received one of his bi-annual notes from Mr. Warner—a note which always says simply, "Dick, take it off—" and Dick knows all too well the meaning of that. It means that he's put on an extra pound or two and had better get rid of it. On this occasion he made it an excuse to be with Joan at the hospital for three diet meals a day. "It's hard to diet alone," he told the nurse, "but if I diet with Joan, it'll be easier for her. So how about it? Can't I join her at meals?" And the nurse, swayed by the Powell grin, had to let him have his way.

All new papas are a little nutty, of course, but Dick was one of the most jittery about-to-be-papas that we've had around Hollywood in a long time. Several weeks before the baby arrived Dick was at work in "Head Over Heels" and had to be on location several miles from a telephone part of the time. That meant he would be out of touch with Joan, but Dick devised a scheme to remedy that.

FEW people realize that Dick is a true handy-man at heart. Just last month he took the ailing Powell washing machine apart and put it together again, and the month before he built a fence. But, unlike Tom Sawyer, he white-washed it himself. Also on his sailing boat, the Eroica (which is a Beethoven Symphony, in case you are curious about the name), he has a short wave radio transmitting set and is licensed by the radio commission as an operator.

It was Dick's experience in this connection which gave him the idea for keeping in touch with Joan, even while he was on location: to install one of those new two-way short wave marine telephone sets, with which he could pick up anything within a radius of a hundred miles of the harbor radio station. All Joan would have had to do then was to telephone the station and they would broadcast a message to Dick. Without this safety precaution to ease Dick's mind, he might not have been able to finish the picture with so much calm and ease.

However, now that that is all over, father is doing well. He naturally receives congratulations on every side, and when asked how the baby is, he answers enthusiastically, "Prettiest thing in town!" They named her Ellen just because they liked the name. It was simple and not gaudy, and not theatrical—just like the parents themselves. Had Ellen been a boy she would have been David Blondell Powell. But Ellen is Ellen and they are glad of it, since they already have Joan's boy, Norman. Normie is three-and-a-half now, and quite the first light of Dick and Joan's lives, and will remain so, since there is to be no nose-throwing-out-of-joint in the Powell household.

"Normie is strictly a boy's boy," Dick said. "One month he is a cowboy, with all the contraptions and all the whoops. The next he's a fireman, with wailing siren and a fireman's helmet slipping down over his eyes. This morning when I left he had gone Mexican. The next thing I know he'll be an actor. Now we're very glad to have a girl.

"You know, Joan simply adores children, not only her own, but everyone else's too. During the last few months before Ellen was born she spent every day on the beach, with Normie. They went to the beach club, but Joan never spends any time with the grown-ups there. You'll always see her off down the beach somewhere, with about sixteen kids grouped around her. She builds sand castles with them, digs tunnels, tells them stories, somehow manages to keep them amused, and herself too. She and Normie always took their lunch with them. Sand in the sandwiches makes no difference to them!"

Dick has always been mad about sailboats, so while Joan stays in the sand, Dick sets sail on the sea. It's a very real compliment to them, that they can and do leave each other to their own particular likes—when it comes to pastimes and sports. They are so thoroughly devoted to each other that they actually enjoy seeing the other do what appeals most, whether they are together in the doing or not.

Dick bought his very first boat several years ago. Then he traded it in on the larger Eroica, and last spring he had dreams of capturing the cup in the "around the island" race, off Catalina, sponsored by the California Yacht Club.

"The first race I had ever been in, and it would be the time of the greatest storm on the West Coast in twenty years! Just my bad luck. I was one of twelve racers who started out, and only two boats even finished at all. The wind and rain started, that same wind and rain that brought on last spring's terrible flood, and my skipper and I soon saw that we were being driven into the Isthmus, and if we didn't turn around and start back we'd be dashed against the shore. We had to use the motor and it took us eight and a half hours to go back eighteen miles—so you can know how bad it was. But I'm not going to give up. The next race, you can be sure, barring an act of God, I'll at least be in on the finish!"

Few people think of Dick in this light—as a man seeking adventure, a man who keeps fighting for his goal. He has always seemed so smiling and good natured, so easy come, easy go. But behind the placidness of the Dick exterior there is the battling spirit.

AND not the least of the battles he has waged has been the one in his career—his wish to be allowed a chance as an actor, in a non-singing role. For years Dick has sensed that a motion picture career built on song had weak links in its chain, and recently he rebelled and refused to do the next singing part which the studio had lined up for him, the one in "Garden of the Moon," which John Payne did eventually in his place. He sat tight at home, and then finally returned for "Head Over Heels," in which he sings only one song.

Dick said to me with humor and honesty, "If there is one thing I hate it's being known as a boy who is always ready to break into song, and I think audiences, after too much of it, will begin to hate it too. That's the thing I want to look out for. I love to sing, as every singer does. But I want to act, without singing, now and then. The only non-singing pictures I ever did was when I first came to the screen. I did one with George Arliss, and another with Will Rogers. But people have already forgotten about those."

Dick has another unfulfilled wish too. "Joan and I would like more than anything to make a picture together. I think, naturally—" with another grin, "that she's one of the best actresses in pictures, and I want to work with her, but there's that old bugaboo to be overcome: that married couples are not romantic in pictures. I can't see that point of view, but producers seem to feel that audiences wouldn't be excited about man and wife appearing together. And yet what is more romantic than marriage? But maybe I am too old-fashioned about marriage."

Those words coming from Dick are a bit astounding since a few years ago he was a complete cynic as far as love and marriage were concerned. Having had one early first try which was unsuccessful, he had let it blight his outlook. Then, too shortly after "Flirtation Walk," when Dick's stock and his salary went up and up, and he found that girls were delighted to appear with him here, there and everywhere, he was beset with the very serious question of whether he was being liked for his company, or for the accompanying flash of photographers' lamps which trailed him wherever he went.

Dick Powell certainly is not one to thrive on artificiality, and it was this aspect of Hollywood romances which worried him. He wanted marriage, if he was to have it at all, for a home and contentment, and not to make of it a double barrelled bid for publicity.

THAT's what Joan and Dick have now, a perfect home, an ideal family life. And it's the most that these two want of life. Their careers are still important to them, but their careers are not a drain and a strain in their lives. Dick is quite frank in saying that if Joan had to stop acting she would probably miss it more than he would, for she was born and brought up a trouper. As for him, if his career were finished he could turn to something else without one backward look because the desire to be in the public eye is one which has never hit him.

The one thing that Dick Powell knows he will have to face, if ever that time comes, is an adjustment in his living expenditures. The Powells do not live extravagantly now (the boat is really the one luxury Dick allows himself), but they do live in pleasant comfort, such as another less lucrative business might not allow. But when Dick reaches his forties and fifties, you will never find him flinching and flushing when he overhears someone say, "That's Dick Powell. Remember him when he strolled down Flirtation Walk and had twenty million sweethearts?"

If you could meet the Powells at home on one of their drop-in Sunday afternoons, you would know yourself that the aura which radiates from them is one of utter happiness. Their home itself is an invitation to cheer. Windows open to the sunlight, doors thrown wide, big easy chairs and divans everywhere on which to lounge and relax. They practically live in the study, and there, on the tremendous round coffee table around which everyone gathers, is a perfect indication of their hospitality, a cigarette box two feet long, filled with cigarettes, open so you get the message at once, "Help yourself."

The whole house is like that, everything for convenience and ease, everything with a spirit of generosity, of wanting to be shared. Ask Dick who comes there on Sundays and he says, "Anyone who likes to laugh.

We have lots of just silly fun—games, stories, conversation about anything and everything but shop."

Sometimes Dick does not even join in. While the merriment goes on he may be off in the corner fixing an electric light plug, or rigging up an extension for some lamp, for Dick and Joan are never host and hostess in the organizing sense.

Follow the Gleam in

SATINS and JEWELS

Gown and Jewels from Bonwit Teller

BUT SUBDUE SHINE ON YOUR NOSE!

A BRILLIANT season of silks and satins, gleaming with highlights. Of glittering jewels and sparkling ornaments. "You may shine from head to toe", says Fashion, "all but your nose!"

Nose shine is often due to an overactivity of the oil glands, a condition which, in the presence of germs, may go from bad to worse. But now Woodbury helps subdue this hateful shine! Woodbury Facial Powder is germ-free. It discourages germ-life. And it stays on the skin loyally for hours.

Seven vastly becoming shades make your skin appear young and glowing. Try Champagne, the newest, or that flattering favorite, Windsor Rose. $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢. Wear Woodbury Germ-proof Rouge and Lipstick. Four smart shades.

Send for Seven Fashionable Shades

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9195 Alfred St., Cincinnati, Ohio.
(In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario.
Please send me 7 shades of Woodbury Facial Powder; trial tubes of two Woodbury Beauty Creams; guest-size Woodbury Facial Soap. I enclose 10c to cover mailing costs.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

In the rich blue boudoir box at drug and cosmetic counters everywhere.

DID YOU KNOW FABRIC CAN BE UNDYED?

It's easy to change a blue dress to tan . . . dark shades to light . . . if you *un*dye first with White Rit. White Rit takes dye out of fabric—leaves it virgin white again so you can re-dye it any shade you choose! Harmless as boiling water . . . White Rit acts only on the dye, not the material . . . is not a harmful bleach! Follow with a lovely shade of Rit—and you'll 'DYE' LAUGHING!

WHITE RIT
COLOR REMOVER

NEW HEAVY BODY 3-IN-ONE OIL IS MADE FOR WASHERS

HEAVY BODY 3-IN-ONE OIL is made especially for washing machines, electric refrigerators, lawn mowers, light motors, etc. LUBRICATES, CLEANS and PROTECTS just like regular 3-IN-ONE, but is heavy bodied for heavier jobs. In 1-oz. and 3-oz. handy spout cans.

HEAVY BODY
3-IN-ONE OIL

SHIRLEY DISCOVERS AMERICA

(Continued from page 27)

"She visited about twelve classes. When she came to one in the fifth grade, a little girl, who had evidently been chosen to make a speech welcoming Shirley, stood up, opened her mouth, gulped, was so overcome with excitement that she couldn't speak, and remained standing there, mouth still open."

"'She wanted to make a speech,'" someone whispered to Shirley, "'but she's embarrassed.'"

"'Oh, that's all right,'" said Shirley. "'I'll make a speech instead.'" "And Shirley, always mistress of the situation, said, 'It's lovely to be visiting here. Today I saw Boulder Dam, and thought it was wonderful. Have any of you seen the Dam?'

"Since the fathers of most of the girls at the school worked on the Dam and they had visited it many times, that broke the ice immediately.

WHEREVER Shirley went—in Zion Park, where she stared amazed at the peaks, in Bryce Canyon, where the buttresses rise like minarets of every color, and at the north rim of the Grand Canyon, where she caught her breath in wonder at the sheer majesty of the Canyon, Shirley took color pictures with her.

"Though Shirley was having a swell time, she didn't forget her friends at home. In Bryce Canyon she bought things for her two brothers, and remembered to send them cards—a card with a picture of a mail bag to remind Jack to write and a card with a little pair of riding chaps for George, to serve, she said, as a mascot for his horse. At Zion National Park she bought an Indian doll for May Isleib, her stand-in, and sent her a card.

"One of the things that interested Shirley most during her trip was discovering new kinds of animals that she had never seen before. In Hollywood she had seen camels when she played in 'Wee Willie Winkie.' She had seen elephants and occasionally a monkey, but she had never seen tigers, panthers and giraffes. Whenever she came to a city where there was a zoo, Shirley made a bee-line for it. At Colorado Springs, she and her parents stayed at the Broadmoor Hotel, which Spencer Penrose, who discovered the famous Cripple Creek Mine, built as a hobby. Back of the hotel was a zoo containing three hundred animals, which Shirley, fascinated, visited.

"In Chicago, she visited the Brookfield Zoo, and said that of all the animals she liked the does most—they were so gentle-looking. She also admired the peacocks, and exclaimed over the fact that their tails quivered. At the Chicago zoo was a baby panda named Mei Mei, only eight months old and very tame. After watching the trainer handle the baby panda, Shirley was asked if she would like to go inside the cage and make its acquaintance. Breathlessly she nodded, and then without a quiver of fear, she walked inside the cage and stroked the fur of the beautiful animal.

"One of the things that impressed her most in Chicago was her first sight of the elevated. 'Why, it's a railway on stilts,' she exclaimed. When the Temples were asked if they would like a special train for their party, they readily agreed and for two hours the Temples traveled around Chicago on a train which contained only Mr. and Mrs. Temple, the president of the railroad and his son, two conductors, the motormen, the bodyguards and myself.

"Since there was a 'dead man's switch' which worked automatically, the motorman, who stood just behind Shirley, let her handle the switch, which operated the car.

"Among the sights which impressed Shirley most on her trip was her first view of Great Salt Lake. Amused she watched the bathers go in, swim around, and come out covered with layers of salt. Shirley herself didn't go in swimming, but she went out to the edge of the lake on the float, put her finger into the water, and tasted it. Then she made a wry mouth. It certainly was salty.

"In Washington, D. C., Shirley was brought in to visit President Roosevelt, who asked for her autograph. Then, glancing over the collection of boats on his desk, he said, 'What do you think of these boats?'"

Shirley, who seems instinctively to understand what it took Dale Carnegie years to learn, that people like it when you talk to them about their hobbies, said, "I like boats very much and I understand you like fishing. The only fishing I ever did was once when I caught a salmon."

"With what kind of a hook did you catch it?" asked the President.

"I don't know," said Shirley, "but I caught it."

Shirley pointed to an empty spot at the side of her mouth and sighed, "I've just lost a tooth."

The President smiled. "You don't know how lucky you are," he said. "Sistie and Buzzie lose 'em in front."

Later she met Sistie and Buzzie, the President's grandchildren, at Mrs. Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park, and frolicked with them through one golden summer afternoon, playing ball, watching them swim and lunching with them.

When Shirley attended the horse races at the Westchester Country Club at Rye that evening, with the Governor's party, she was almost the only person who watched the races, for everyone else was watching Shirley.

"When a group of newspaper photographers in New York wanted to take her picture," Jack Mulcahy told me, "Shirley said, 'I bet you don't know the national theme song of photographers.'

"'What is it?' they asked.

"'I won't tell you now,' she said, 'but you'll say it, and then I'll tell you.'

AFTER taking several pictures of Shirley, the photographers said, 'One more please, and then we'll be through.'

"Shirley grinned. 'That's the national theme song,' she said. 'One more, please.' Then she posed for another photograph.

"In New York, Shirley was impressed by the Hudson Tubes and couldn't understand how there could be water over them. Like any tourist, she was thrilled by the skyline and took a picture of it from her window. Looking out at the Chrysler Building, she said, amazed, 'But how can it stand up? Isn't there any danger of its falling down? It looks like a pencil upside down.'

"Her first sight of a Broadway production, 'I Married An Angel,' astonished her. When the curtain rose, she said, 'This is funny. There are no microphones.' In Hollywood, there are microphones on every motion picture set.

"When she saw the Statue of Liberty, she said, 'I guess her arm is so big, because it has to hold that great light.'

"During her visit to New York, she was taken to only one night club, the International Casino, where she saw the Ice Ballet, the most elaborate spectacle she had ever seen. The Temples went to an early showing, and were out of the Casino by eight-thirty. Although Shirley was on her vacation, nothing was allowed to interfere with her regular bedtime hours, and she was in bed by a quarter of nine every evening."

One day during Shirley's stay in New York, I was invited to a small party given her at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Nearly always at parties for important stars, cocktails flow in profusion, but at Shirley's party, tea, coffee and orangeade were the only drinks served.

Throughout the course of the party, she wandered from table to table, asking at each table, "Is there anything I can get for you? Tea? Some cake? Ice cream?" No hostess could have been more charming.

There a famous editor tried to stop her. "Will you sit down? I'd like to ask you some questions," he said.

OH, I'm so sorry," said Shirley. "I can't stop now. I'm too busy."

"What keeps you so busy you can't answer questions?"

"I have to travel round all the tables," Shirley said, and resumed her tour as hostess.

Because of Shirley's importance on the screen and the constant adulation to which she is subjected, many people have wondered if the real Shirley might not become spoiled. That question was answered, once and for all, during her trip across the continent.

"We in Hollywood knew and loved Shirley ever since we first met her," Jack Mulcahy told me, "so that it did not surprise us when she revealed herself as the dimpled, sweet, lovable little girl she really is."

Two incidents that occurred during the trip reveal the real Shirley. In Craig, Colorado, when it was discovered that the Temples were staying at a tourist camp, almost the entire population of 1500 people congregated to catch a glimpse of Shirley. One man who ran a theatre in the town was very much put out, for, after having run a full page ad, he had expected a large turn-out.

When he learned that all the townspeople were hanging around the tourist camp, he went there himself and bursting in on Shirley and her parents, he said, "You're wrecking my business. Do you know that I've lost lots of money tonight because of you?"

Shirley's smile disappeared. This was indeed serious business and must be rectified.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I don't like to have you lose money because of me."

Then she whispered to her parents, and they all got into a car and drove around to the front of the theatre. The townspeople followed her, and the exhibitor attracted a larger crowd than he ever had before!

To me the most charming story of all about Shirley concerns the night Walda Winchell slept in the same room with her at New York's Waldorf-Astoria, after the two children had played together for several days.

Shirley, very much disturbed when she discovered that Walda was tossing around in bed and hadn't fallen asleep, said solemnly, "I know why you haven't gone to sleep. Nobody tucked you in."

"Why, that doesn't make any difference," Walda said. "Nobody ever tucked me in."

At this Shirley was aghast, because Mrs. Temple always tucks Shirley into bed.

"Why, that's terrible," she said. "I tell you what, Walda. I'll tuck you in."

And getting out of her own bed, Shirley, all smiles and dimples, walked over to Walda's bed and gently tucked her in.

Pretty smart . . . But she didn't know how important "Lysol" is in Feminine Hygiene

SHE thought it was jealousy of her success in business that had made her husband more and more indifferent. She didn't realize that she herself had been at fault . . . in a matter of feminine hygiene. "Lysol" would have helped save the happiness of her marriage.

If you are in doubt regarding a wholesome method of feminine hygiene, ask your doctor about "Lysol" disinfectant. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses, used in many hospitals and clinics.

Some of the more important reasons why "Lysol" is especially valuable in feminine hygiene are—

1—Non-Caustic . . . "Lysol", in the proper dilution, is gentle and efficient, contains no harmful free caustic alkali.

2—Effectiveness . . . "Lysol" is a powerful germicide, active under practical conditions, effective in the presence of organic matter (such as dirt, mucus, serum, etc.).

3—Spreading . . . "Lysol" solutions spread because of low surface tension, and thus virtually search out germs.

4—Economy . . . "Lysol" is concentrated, costs only about one cent an application in the proper dilution for feminine hygiene.

5—Odor . . . The cleanly odor of "Lysol" disappears after use.

6—Stability . . . "Lysol" keeps its full strength no matter how long it is kept, how often it is uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

What Every Woman Should Know

SEND THIS COUPON FOR "LYSOL" BOOKLET

LEHN & FINK Products Corp.,
Dept. 11-M.S., Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me free booklet, "Lysol vs. Germs" which tells the many uses of "Lysol".

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

Copyright 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

CHILDREN CONSTIPATED?

Give them relief this simple, pleasant way!

Watch your youngster's face brighten when you give him a half-tablet of Ex-Lax. No struggle. No forcing, to get him to take a laxative. Children actually love the delicious all-chocolate taste of Ex-Lax!

Your child's sleep is not disturbed after taking Ex-Lax. It doesn't upset little tummies or bring on cramps. Ex-Lax is a mild and gentle laxative...ideal for youngsters!

In the morning, Ex-Lax acts . . . thoroughly and effectively! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy bowel movement that brings blessed relief.

Ex-Lax is just as effective for grown-ups as it is for the youngsters. You can get a box at any drug store for only 10¢ or 25¢. Try it!

Now improved—better than ever!

EX-LAX

THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

Say Goodbye to Dull, Drab Hair

In one, simple, quick operation, Lovalon the 4 purpose rinse, does all these 4 important things to your hair. 1. Gives lustrous highlights. 2. Rinses away shampoo film. 3. Tints the hair as it rinses. 4. Helps keep hair neatly in place. Use Lovalon after your next shampoo. It does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, made in 12 different shades. Try Lovalon. You will be amazed at the results.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. 5 rinses 25 cents at drug and department stores. 2 rinse size at ten cent stores.

LOVALON

—the 4 purpose vegetable HAIR RINSE

SEVENTEEN VO-DO-DE-O-DO!

(Continued from page 46)

pictures lull sets him prowling. His mother, Mrs. Fred Pankey, is driven frantic with, "When'm I gonna start my next picture?"

"How should I know, Mickey? Ask the studio."

"I don't wanna be a pest. You're my mom. I gotta right to be a pest with you." On the day he comes bounding in with a Tarzan yell and his new script, peace returns to the home. "Know what, Mom? All the vacation I need is makin' pictures."

At seventeen, he's still the typical American kid—snub nose, cocky grin, bantam swagger, hair like a tumbled hayrick. Aside from his special interest in the movies, all life is divided into five parts—sports, cars, swing music, clothes and girls. He's never been afflicted with the melancholies of adolescence. His spirits are always in high. He's a natural comic, and clowns on the set up to the moment of going into action. Where work is concerned, he's strictly business.

ABOUT to make his first scene for "Love Finds Andy Hardy," he came sliding out of the dressing-room and tap danced into position. Sylvester, his valet, held a mirror while Mickey dragged a comb through his hair. The results were negligible. Grabbing a hammer and nails from a passing carpenter, he went through the motions of tacking his tufts down, then tugged at his scalp fore and aft, as one who settles a toupee. "Ready," called the director, and Mickey dropped foolery, slid to the side of Fay Holden, who plays Mrs. Hardy, kissed her and slid back to his place. This is the rite, without which he will begin no Hardy picture. He calls it his "good luck charm."

Sylvester is a recent acquisition, and Mickey makes it plain that the idea was none of his. Not that he has anything against Sylvester. On the contrary. "Only it looks like I'm tryin' to be a big shot, having a boy work for me at my age."

Nevertheless, he brought Sylvester on himself. At home a fellow's mother, as most mothers know, picks up after him. Mrs. Pankey extended the service to the studio, till Mickey was sixteen. Then she bought him a Ford and sent him out on his own. Which was all very fine, except that neckties flung into corners failed to re-hang themselves on the rack, and shoes, Mickey swore, walked off by themselves. The studio decreed that something would have to be done about it. Sylvester was the result.

Mickey did his own hiring, which took him not much longer than it takes in the telling. "I asked the bootblack if he knew a boy, an' next day Sylvester came around an' I told him his requirements, like takin' care of my wardrobe an' maybe runnin' out for a sandwich if I get a little hungry in the afternoon, an' we discussed money, an' I said, all right, it's a deal."

He still goes to the schoolhouse on the lot, and will until he's eighteen. He doesn't dislike school, just doesn't see any sense in it, "not at the age I am." He hasn't, however, cast all childish things aside. He refuses to get up in the morning till his mother has massaged his back and scratched his head. She started the practise when he was three, and he feels it's coming to him.

"A big bruiser like you," she jeers.

"Sure, but I'm still your little sonny boy," comes his voice, muffled against his hands. "Now scratch the other side, and I'll get up."

On his way to the shower he uncovers Pete, the canary, takes him out of the cage, rubs his topknot, exchanges a couple of peeps with him and restores him to his perch, with a parting admonition to keep his shirt on. He carols under the shower, often one of his own compositions, for, among other ambitions, he nurses that of becoming a song writer. He's found a collaborator in his friend, Sidney Miller, but thus far, no publisher. "So what?" he philosophizes.

To call Mickey a hearty eater is understatement. He puts away an awe-inspiring breakfast of melon, cream of wheat, bacon and eggs, an occasional lamb chop, potatoes always, and a quart of milk. His allowance of thirty dollars is enough, but not too much, since it must cover, besides transportation and incidentals, his notion of six adequate luncheons a week.

Mostly he stays within his budget, but his impulses are generous and sometimes a little fenagling is indicated to keep the books balanced. He got leave from his mother to spend a weekend at Catalina with the boys. His first thoughtful act was to phone her of his safe arrival. His second, to reverse the charges.

"You didn't have to do that, Mickey," she reproached him later. "I'd have given it back to you."

"Yeah, I know. But that way I figured I was safe." He thrust a box at her. "Might as well open it, Mom. Maybe you won't like it." She drew forth a blazing orange jacket. In an effort to conceal her dismay, she stammered. "But how did you know the size?"

"Got the littlest salesgirl to try it on," beamed Mickey.

Last Easter he appeared, clutching behind a huge lily, adorned with two pink bunnies. He was going out that evening. "You're probably short, Mickey. I'll give you back the money for that lily. The sentiment's there, just the same."

"Aw, no—" he protested feebly.

"Come on, take the five dollars."

Mickey whirled indignantly. "Five dollars! That bloom cost ten!"

HE doesn't smoke nor drink, though he's got to puff at a cigarette in "Boys Town," and practises at home, looking sheepish. "Mom, d'ya hate to see me smoke?"

"Not if you want to, Mick. Only you're so set on swimming and exercise. All it does for you, is cut your wind." At which Mickey will drop the cigarette like a viper, and fly to the window for ten minutes' deep breathing.

He plays the piano by ear, and the drums by preference. "Just a music lover," he explains. "Just a noise-lover," amends his mother. On entering the house, he makes straight for the radio, turns it on full blast, grabs the phone in one hand, bangs on the piano with the other and lapses into a state of pure content.

He's proud of the fact that he's played the drums with every famous swingband that's come to Los Angeles. "Like other people collect autographs, I collect drums. Say, put 'em all down, will ya—Benny Goodman, Jan Garber, Freddy Martin, Hal Kemp, Skinny Ennis—it's not many people can say they've played with all those bands, can they?"

His taste in clothes is akin to his taste in music—the louder, the better. Shoes are his hobby, toilet water his passion, and sports clothes a minor career. "A small the screen. No, here is vitality, capability, strength. Here is no clinging vine. Here is comradeliness, here is a slap on the back, a deep laugh and a hearty voice that makes itself heard across a room. And I like these traits. There is nothing helpless about Sonja Henie. On the screen she may be a bisque doll, but off, she is pretzels and beer.

(Continued on page 92)

SHE'S A SMARTIE

(Continued from page 35)

I could not help calling to mind the prophesy of an editor I know, a man who is usually very wise. He had said, "Some day someone is going to carry that little girl away and marry her for her money."

Not Sonja Henie. Men may try but she will be too smart for them. She is not squandering her money. She knows how to drive a bargain. She is very much aware. And I don't think she has many boy friends. I think men are scared of her. There is something so forceful about Miss Henie.

The suite alone told a story. It was an exceptionally modest one, one living room, one bedroom to be shared with mama. At that, she considered the living room an extravagence.

"I wanted two bedrooms."

Her habit of quick appraisal, her knowledge of values, came to the fore when she met her chum.

"I like your dress. Where did you get it?" she said, all in one breath, and then fingered the silk print as if she were about to guess the price.

Again I saw it when the chum showed her a new diamond wrist watch. With the practiced eye of a connoisseur, Sonja held the bracelet to the light and scrutinized the diamond as if she were a pawn broker.

In one corner stood some newly delivered boxes of shoes. Their labels were that of New York's cheapest cut rate shoe store. "Mama bought them," said Sonja.

NO, this year's take may have netted the Henies over a million dollars, but they're not throwing any of it away.

She sat at the dressing table and, true to her promise, autographed pictures for those waiting fans. Between autographs she turned on a smile for the photographers.

But in the middle of one of these pictures she spied an executive who had just made his entrance. Immediately the smile vanished. She rose, a calculating business woman, looking out for her own interests. She walked towards him and proceeded to unburden her mind. It was all about a photograph which had been published in an ad. It had been printed without her permission. She didn't like the pose and she didn't like the ad and she didn't do those things for nothing and they should please put a stop to it at once. I am sure they did.

When this was over she went right back to the smile and accepted a bundle of Norwegian newspapers from a foreign correspondent.

Again we were in the bedroom. "Tell me, who is on the boat?" she asked.

"Grace Moore."

"I meant men," said Miss Henie.

All the while I marveled at her energy. Only the Saturday before she had been out in Hollywood finishing "My Lucky Star," at two in the afternoon. She had gone home and they had called her for re-takes. She had worked then until midnight. The following day she flew to New York. It had been a bad trip.

"Very bumpy," said her mother.

She arrived in New York Monday night,

(Continued on page 93)

Andrea Leeds* (Charming Hollywood Star) says: "Adored Women have gracious tender HANDS"

"IT'S THE WOMEN with velvet-smooth fingers who win—and keep—a man's heart", says ANDREA LEEDS*, star of the Universal Picture "Youth Takes a Fling". Help prevent your hands from getting rough, red and chapped by regular use of Jergens.

*Andrea Leeds' hands thrill Joel McCrea in Universal hit "Youth Takes a Fling"

Help Yourself to Smooth Soft HANDS this lovely easy Way

DO YOUR HANDS feel a little harsh? Look older than your age? Probably the skin has lost too much of its beauty-protecting moisture, from exposure to cold and wind or from being often in water. That dried-out moisture can be quickly supplemented by using Jergens Lotion, which furnishes moisture for the skin. Never feels sticky! Contains 2 ingredients—used by many doctors to help soften and whiten rough skin. Hands are soon like creamy velvet—inviting to romance. Start now to use Jergens. Generous sizes only 50¢, 25¢, 10¢—$1.00 for the special economy bottle — at any beauty counter.

Contains 2 ingredients, often used in medical practice to help soften and smooth rough skin.

JERGENS LOTION

FREE: GENEROUS SAMPLE

See—at our expense—how wonderfully this fragrant Jergens Lotion helps to make red, rough, chapped hands smooth and white.

The Andrew Jergens Co., 1647 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, O. (In Canada, Perth, Ontario).

*Name*_____
(PLEASE PRINT)

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

IS THAT ACTRESS Peggy Jones from 8th Street?

Yes Sir—it's Peggy Jones all right but her name has been changed—her personality surrounded with glamour—Peggy is an actress—and a good one—lucky, some people say, but—

Little do they know the amount of effort Peggy spent studying dramatic art—learning to breathe correctly—gaining confidence and poise—practicing gestures and emotions. But Peggy's greatest asset was her own desire to succeed.

If you have the desire to be a fine dramatic actor or actress, if you can spare just a few minutes each day for study and have the feeling you can succeed when your big opportunity arrives—you need the proper dramatic coaching.

We want you to have the informative illustrated booklet, published by the Modern School of Dramatics*, titled "You Can Succeed" written by George D. Cochrane, formerly of Universal Pictures. This interesting booklet points out to you the necesssary steps so essential in a stage, screen, or radio career. Best of all you learn to act right at home. Mail postcard today or use coupon below. Booklet sent free and in plain wrapper.

Send for Your FREE BOOKLET*

Approved as a correspondence school under the laws of the State of New York.*

Modern School of Dramatics
Dept. A, 1767 Broadway
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Please send me your free booklet "You Can Succeed". Thank you.

_____

_____

_____

NO FRIENDS SINCE PIMPLES CAME?

Get this help in guarding against skin-blotching intestinal poisons

Are ugly skin eruptions spoiling your good times . . . making others shun you? Find out what the trouble may be—and take steps to help it.

Between the ages of 13 and 25, or even longer, important gland changes often upset the system. The skin often becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons from the intestinal tract may get into the blood stream . . . and be carried to the skin to cause disfiguring pimples.

Many have been helped by the regular use of Fleischmann's Yeast. Millions of tiny, live plants in each cake of this fresh food act to help keep intestinal waste poisons from the blood . . . and so help your broken-out skin. Start eating Fleischmann's Yeast now—one cake ½ hour before meals. Buy some today!

(Continued from page 90)

man should go in for sports clothes," says Mickey, and he has the unabashed courage of his convictions. He'll wear a green hat with a yellow feather, and a brown coat with a red necktie. "Mickey," sighs his mother, "I wish you'd try to blend your colors."

"Listen, you know what I'm considered? A fashionplate."

For a formal dance he donned a pair of iridescent green trousers and a hound's tooth coat. His mother protested in vain, and waited in some trepidation that night for the whistle with which he signals his approach, as he slips his key into the lock. Mickey's cheerfulness was undimmed. "Know what, Mom? They were all wishing they'd come like I did. Their old tuck shirts were melting to their spines."

MICKEY'S mother feels that he reached the climax of sartorial originality the night he joined Otto Klemperer's orchestra on the platform of a Los Angeles concert hall. A brilliant audience had gathered to hear Klemperer conduct "Midsummer Night's Dream." Mickey was to give Puck's prologue. She looked down at him from her box. The black-and-white of his evening clothes left nothing to be desired. Only a couple of wisps stuck at right angles from the sleek casque of his head. Suddenly a flash of color blinded her. Mickey had crossed his legs. Between black cloth and black leather stretched a brief but dizzying rainbow of candy-striped sock, red and green and yellow and red and green. She managed to catch his eye and signalled as frantically as stealth would permit. Mickey sent her a reassuring grin, uncrossed his legs—and crossed them the other way!

They're living in a Hollywood apartment at the moment, but they're going to build in the fall. The house is to be a gift from Mickey to his mother, "for her niceness to me." Since he plans to live there too, he's given notice as to what he wants—"a rambling ranch house with a pool and a tennis court and a rumpus room and my bedroom in knotty pine with six bunks so the fellas can stay over night."

Mrs. Pankey was doubtful. "All I want's a little cottage, Mickey. Mother's not going to have you all her life. You might want to take bachelor apartments when you're twenty-one. Then you'll marry—"

"Listen, Mom. When I'm gonna marry is a long way off. Anyhow, if the girl doesn't like you an' wouldn't want to live with you—" a gesture blotted her out.

Mickey doesn't remember his first date. "Do you?" he wanted to know. "Well, naturally, with a girl it's different. To a boy, maybe, it doesn't mean so much."

He's taken plenty of ribbing on the subject of Judy Garland, which he shrugs off with resignation as "kid stuff." "All that talk about Judy and I—that's a laugh. We're the best of friends, and always will be. Every once in a while we go out on a date together. She's a perfect girl, and the fella that goes around with her is lucky. But Judy and me, we just don't care for each other that way."

He likes brunettes with blue eyes. "June Lang's the kind of girl I could go for—if she was about three years younger, maybe four. Sure, I know she's a blonde, but what a blonde! Pardon me if I'm a little flighty, but foolin' aside, I'm not serious about any girl. Sure I like 'em, an' I like to take 'em out, an' I like 'em pretty, an' I like 'em good dressers. But in my position you gotta be careful. Lots of girls think that because you play certain parts in a picture, you're kind of a ruthless fella. That's the bunk. The girls I go round with are college or late high school girls. We might take in a show or maybe go bowlin' or drop up at my place an' listen to records. An' every Friday night we go to the Cocoanut Grove, me an' my pal Tobias, an' a couple of girls. Me an' Tobias, we're always the same, but the girls are always liable to be different."

Tobias, the friend of his bosom, is nineteen and Mickey's inclined to trust his judgment in girls, as in everything else. Not blindly, forever. "I swung a deal for you, Mick," he'll come in and announce.

"Sa-a-a-y! I'm not goin' out with any blind date. How do I know how tall she is?"

"Well, she's just about the size of your mother."

"Mom, take off your high heels, will you?"

Mrs. Pankey is then led through the measures of a dance, escorted to a table, helped into a car, with Mickey grimacing down at her from the vantage of his three superior inches. After which he dusts his hands briskly. "Okay, Tobe, it's a deal."

Recently she overheard one end of a phone conversation between her son and a girl who rang him up. Mickey's voice was unheated but firm. "Well, frankly, I didn't care for your attitude last time I called you. I mean, you hung up in my ear, that's what I mean. Sure, a girl can have a headache, an' a guy can have measles an' mumps an' chickenpox, but that don't give him any call to hurt a girl's feelings, like you hurt mine. Yeah, I'm sorry too, but there's nothin' we can do about it, an' I'll tell you why. When you hung up, you did something to me—I'm not the same Mickey I used to be—"

Occasionally he'll come home dreamy-eyed and plank himself down at the foot of his mother's bed. "Gee, Mom, I had a swell time. We didn't do anything much, went to a show, then I took her home and her mother made us sandwiches. You know, Mom—maybe I'll marry that girl some day."

"That's up to you and her, son. She's a sweet girl."

"Yeah." But the romantic mood can't hold Mickey for long. He jumps up. "Well, g'night, Mom. Guess I'll sleep over it."

Meantime, the world's his oyster. Tobe's joined him on location for "Boys Town," to be his temporary Sylvester. His mother's going to buy him a new car. Some day, later on, he plans to be a director—"but not until real later." Now all he wants is to keep on acting. School won't last much longer. But swing bands and girls and green iridescent pants go on forever. Vo-do-de-o-do!

Bobby Jordan and Judy Garland help Mickey celebrate his seventeenth.

(Continued from page 91)

never feeling the change of climate nor the loss of hours. She was out of her apartment by nine the next morning, running her manager ragged trying to find a projection room where she could see some rushes she had brought with her, transacting tedious business with the income tax bureau, sitting for hours at the haidresser's, visiting the shops and arriving home at seven that evening. Immediately she was out again. This time to do the town, not with a boy friend (evidently there was none in New York), but with one of her managers and his wife. She arrived home at three a.m.

NOW, here it was the next morning and she was on the ship, her only regret being that she didn't have time to buy hats. And she seemed surprised that she felt a little tired.

So she ate some candy, butterscotch for energy. And she talked to her chum.

"I got telegrams," she said, "from Bob and Harry."

Then she thanked her friend for a birthday gift. "A diamond and gold powder box," she explained to me. "It was beautiful. I showed it to everyone at the studio. But I didn't tell them who gave it. They thought it was a man. And they wrote about it in the columns."

Smart little Sonja, already wise in the ways of American publicity.

And she turned to the man who delivered the fur coat. It was an ermine wrap. She inspected it minutely. "Just an old one," she said. "I had it fixed."

She talked about "My Lucky Star."

"It has an 'Alice In Wonderland' sequence. I wish it could have been done in color, the costumes were so beautiful. I hope my next picture will be in color. They are talking about it."

She was thrilled because she will arrive in Norway in time for the opening of "Happy Landing."

"I am just going to rest," she said. "I did not bring with me one pair of skates. I am going to sleep and sleep and get up in time for lunch, and if I sleep longer, get up for dinner."

She talked about skating in Florida. It had been difficult in a tropical climate. "But when you have to, you do it."

This I think is her creed. She certainly is the best disciplined woman I ever met.

The ship's whistle blew a warning. She stared at her manager, her chum and me. She dimpled and said, "Come on, all of you, stay aboard."

I hesitated.

She said, "You don't think I mean it. Of course I mean it, but I know there is no more room . . . not a cabin." She laughed at her little joke.

A man poked his head in the door, inviting her to broadcast. She paid no attention.

"Grace Moore did it," he said. Still she paid no attention.

Then he said Darryl Zanuck had done it, and she flew. After all, what's good enough for the boss . . .

She was out of the door and down the narrow corridor, the man leading her by the hand, I following, and the fans, now multiplied by dozens, crowding down upon her from all sides, closing in . . . shrieking, "There she is!"

Anyone else would have turned back; anyone else would have lost all presence of mind. But not Sonja Henie. She quickly spied news reporters and more executives. She thought of another Hollywood star due in New York and she remembered her alma mater. So she smiled that smile, for playing to the gallery is her forte, and she called back, so everyone could hear, "Goodbye, and give my love to Shirley Temple!"

ACTIVE DAYS ARE CAREFREE DAYS . . . THANKS TO THE "CUSHIONED COMFORT" OF KOTEX* SANITARY NAPKINS

When you buy Kotex you can be sure that:

★ Kotex stays Wondersoft—it's cushioned in cotton to prevent chafing.

★ Kotex doesn't show—thanks to its flattened and tapered ends.

★ Kotex can be worn on either side—both sides are fully absorbent.

★ Kotex is made with a special patented center section that guards against spotting by keeping moisture away from the surface.

★ Only Kotex offers three types—Regular, Junior and Super—for different women on different days.

KOTEX* SANITARY NAPKINS

Use Quest* with Kotex . . . the new positive deodorant powder developed especially for use with sanitary napkins — soothing, completely effective.

(Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Patent Office*)

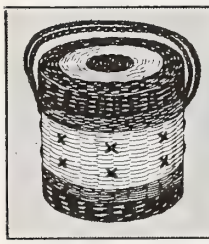
IT'S NO TROUBLE TO KEEP TOILET BOWLS SPARKLING LIKE NEW

SANI-FLUSH is made scientifically to clean toilets easily. You don't have to scrub the bowl. Don't even touch it with your hands.

Just sprinkle in a little Sani-Flush (follow directions on the can). Then flush the toilet. Film vanishes. Stains go. The porcelain gleams like the day it was new. Even the hidden trap is cleaned. Sani-Flush can't injure plumbing connections. It is also effective for cleaning auto radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores. 25c and 10c sizes. The Hygienic Products Co.. Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING



VOICE

100% Improvement Guaranteed

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons—but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises . . and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100% . . . Write for wonderful voice book—sent free. Learn WHY you can now have the voice you want. No literature sent to anyone under 17 unless signed by parent.

PERFECT VOICE INSTITUTE, Studio 7218
64 E. Lake St., Chicago

FREE!

HOW TO MAKE THIS COLORFUL Homespun BASKET

Make colorful novelties in a jiffy with this clever new craft! Easy, decorative, inexpensive! All you need is a paper box and Dennison Very Best Crepe! In 50 rich shades at department and stationery stores. Write for FREE instruction leaflet Y-192 on HOMESPUN!

Dennison
FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

HE'S NEVER OUT OF CHARACTER

(Continued from page 31)

watching him, trying to understand what it is he does, trying to learn from him. He doesn't do anything that I can see. He doesn't do anything that anyone can copy. It's just in the man himself."

In Myron Brinig's new novel, "May Flavin," there is the following passage: "So it is with all great men and women, they not only live their own lives but an inner life into which many other figures are crowded, men and women of their own blood, strangers who have passed them by . . . "

When I read that passage aloud to Mickey Rooney the boy's Irish eyes were quick with tears and he said, conclusively, "Yeah, that's him!"

I thought about these things as Spencer told me about Father Flanagan and the boys he shepherds to young manhood there in his Boys Town. Spencer didn't speak of the picture except when directly questioned, nor about playing the part of Father Flanagan. He talked about the real Boys Town which started over twenty years ago and will be going on long after the studio has ceased turning its cameras on the authentic story of this great humanitarian project.

AND just because he was not speaking in terms of the picture seemed to me additional proof that Spencer's screen greatness lies in the fact that he doesn't play a character with greasepaint and a costume and lines put into his mouth, but with the heart of a man crowded with the problems and plans of the character he is portraying. He is the man, that's all. He isn't making believe. The quality of each character he plays is a quality in him. He was the victim of mob cruelty in "Fury" because he feels that bestial cruelty in his blood. He was Manuel in "Captains Courageous" because that quality of gruff, rough tenderness is in him, too. He was the appealing mechanic in "Test Pilot" because there is in him that profound capacity for friendship which he expressed in the role. He is Father Flanagan in Boys Town because those homeless, orphaned kids are living.

"Father Flanagan started Boys Town twenty years ago," Spencer was saying. "He started in his own house with five boys. Before that he was a welfare worker and fooled around with old guys. He realized that you can't put the cart before the horse nor the man before the boy and get anywhere. You can't 'reform' adults. But you can mould the growing boy. It's Father Flanagan's conviction and motto that 'There is no such thing as a bad boy'. And so be began.

"Now the place is a regular little town. 400 acres, all told. The place is run entirely by donations—donations of money, food, clothes. Father Flanagan figures that it takes one hundred and eighty dollars to keep a boy there for one year. One hundred and eighty dollars," said Spencer slowly, "and one kid gets one year of education, food, lodging, clothes and security. A chance to grow straight instead of crooked. One hundred and eighty dollars . . ." and I knew that Spencer was thinking again, of the wealthy children with their toys costing thousands of dollars, with their guards to protect them from such men as the Boys Town boys might have grown to be if it were not for Father Flanagan.

"The first and only 'entrance requirement' to Boys Town," Spencer went on, "is that the boy have no semblance of a home. Nor any living relative, no matter how distant, who could give him a hand-out. Father Flanagan prefers to take boys under twelve years ago, too. But he sometimes takes them older than that because they can't stay in orphanages after the age of twelve. I didn't know that before, did you?"

I said that I didn't. "There's a lot of things we don't know," said Spencer, "we smart mugs who are in the picture business.

"There are no prejudices of any kind in Boys Town, either. There are no lines drawn, neither color nor religious denomination nor any other. There's a boy out of an insane asylum. He's not insane now. He hasn't got Fear for a bedfellow these nights. There's a kid so bowed down with some horror in his life that he walks all the time with his head bowed down to his feet. One day I happened to see the Father pass this kid. He put his hand under the boy's chin, turned his face up to the sky and said:

"'You have a beautiful face, my son, don't be afraid to show it.'

"I'm saying that line in the picture," said Spencer. "I asked them to write it into the script. It's the kind of thing everyone should hear—and think about. Makes you feel kind of useless sometimes when you think about the kind of work a man like Father Flanagan is doing . . . but when I get a chance to play a part like this of Father Flanagan, a chance to say words like that and mean them, I have the feeling that I'm doing something worthwhile, too.

"The only question that Father Flanagan asks is, 'Are you homeless?'" said Spencer. "'Are you homeless?'—kind of a beautiful question, at that. Imagine how it would be if that's all any of us ever asked a fellow being . . . 'are you homeless?' . . . and if the answer were 'yes' that would make him eligible to share and share alike with us. Kind of far-fetched, isn't it? Sure it is. Sure, I know.

FATHER FLANAGAN doesn't believe in heredity. He believes in the child. And so there are all kinds in Boys Town. There are two little hillbillies from Kentucky there. They never saw a pair of shoes nor heard of a motion picture nor listened to a gentle word spoken until they came to Boys Town. There are two kids there who murdered their own fathers. One kid's father had the habit of getting drunk and beating the living daylights out of the mother. The kid, not more than ten years old, had often threatened to 'get' the father. The old man, always laughed at him. But one night the kid let him have it, and shot him dead.

"Another youngster, not more than eight or nine, had taken a violent dislike to his school teacher. So he'd burned the schoolhouse to the ground. One kid had been deserted by his father. His mother was a street-walker. The boy used to get letters from her every now and again. He was proud of them. He was about the only fellow to get any mail.

"One day one of the boys wanted to go fishing with me. I said, 'I won't get you into trouble, will I, if I take you along?' He looked up at me and I'll be a long time remembering the look in his eyes when he said, 'What trouble do you think you could get me in that I haven't been in?' Sure, I'll remember that.

"The kids get schooling through high school. They are each taught a trade. They have self-government, the honor system. Honor is like a word in a foreign tongue to most of them before they came to Boys

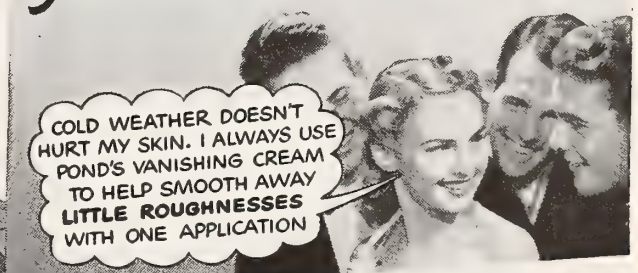
Town. One of the boys is the Mayor of Boys Town. The boys elect their own Council from among themselves. They mete out their own punishments. They have their own police force. They grow their own food, do their own farming and milking. There are no fences around the place. They can run away if they want to. They are told that they can. They never do. Makes you wonder about the value of bars of any kind, contracts, bonds, chains. Because you can't run away from yourself," said Spencer, "and, nine times out of ten, when a man wants to run away it's himself that he's trying to escape.

"When the boys are through high school they're on their own. They have to clear out and make room for others. And in all the twenty years since Boys Town began Father Flanagan has never had a jail sentence passed on any one of his boys."

"Yeah," said Spence, "it's good for a fellow to make a trip like that, see what we saw there in Boys Town. We haven't any right, we who are in Hollywood, to give stories about 'hardships.'

"Yeah," repeated Spencer, "it makes you appreciate your rations."

Yeah, and now I have the answer to the quality in Spencer which is the secret of his greatness on the screen. Now I can name it. It's caring. It's really caring about the other fellow. When he played "Fury" that hunted thing he played was in his heart. When he played Manuel, the tenderness was not acting only. It sprang from a natural source. When he played Gable's friend in "Test Pilot" that capacity for friendship was a living fact. In "Boys Town" he is Father Flanagan, with the boys of Boys Town walking through his heart. And so it will be in all the characters he gives us, because he lives, "not only his own life, but an inner life into which many figures are crowded."



The Robert Youngs take Bob Taylor out to dunk a doughnut. Quite a feast—eh, wot? Well, they like it!

3 P.M. ...Her Petal Smooth Skin THROWS HIM FOR A LOSS!

9 P.M... LURES THE STAG LINE

JOAN BELMONT now Mrs. Ellsworth N. Bailey, society sportswoman

NOW SMOOTHING AWAY ROUGHNESS BRINGS EXTRA "SKIN-VITAMIN" TOO! *

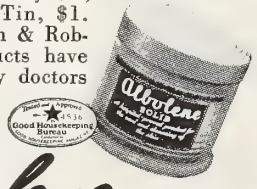
Now—give your skin extra beauty care—Smooth extra "skin-vitamin" (Vitamin A) into it by using Pond's Vanishing Cream! When skin lacks this vitamin, it becomes rough and dry. When "skin-vitamin" is restored to it, it helps skin become smooth again. If your skin has enough of this vitamin, it stores some of it against a possible future need. Same jars. Same labels. Same prices.

*Statements concerning the effects of the "skin-vitamin" applied to the skin are based upon medical literature and tests on the skin of animals following an accepted laboratory method.

Copyright, 1938, Pond's Extract Company

Tune in on "THOSE WE LOVE," Pond's Program, Mondays, 8:30 P.M., N.Y. Time, N.B.C.

YOUR SKIN



Becomes Youthfully Soft
Cleansed with Hospital-proved

Albolene Solid

Your skin is safely, thoroughly cleansed with pure, wholesome Albolene Solid—the hospital-proved cleansing cream. (Used for 20 years in many leading hospitals to protect babies' skin.)

Contains no adulterants to irritate skin, won't grow hair or harden in pores. Gentle cleansing action clears pores of dirt and make-up, protects natural texture, leaves skin soft, smooth, radiant.

Large 10¢ Size; Vanity Jar, 50¢; One-pound Tin, $1. Made by McKesson & Robbins, whose products have been prescribed by doctors for 105 years.

Albolene
SOLID
CLEANSING CREAM

CORNS

come back Bigger, Uglier
-unless removed Root* and All

● A corn goes deep. When you cut or pare it at home the root remains imbedded in the toe. Soon the corn comes back bigger, uglier—more painful—than ever.

That's why millions of people are using the new Blue-Jay double-action method. Pain relieved by removing the pressure. Then the entire corn lifts out Root and All.

Get Blue-Jay Corn Plasters today. 25¢ for a package of 6. Same price in Canada.

BAUER & BLACK BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS
REMOVE CORNS ROOT AND ALL

* A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

DIVORCED BECAUSE OF TAXES

(Continued from page 43)

it might take him. He knew his presence gave her pleasure. "But it's pure selfishness on my part," he assured her. "I'll bet I get more of a kick out of it than you."

On the other hand, once the theatrical season was over, he'd take her to Paris. They'd haunt the old bookshops, he'd show her the paintings he loved. He opened her eyes and mind to beauty she'd never known existed, and found her an apt pupil. Far from driving them apart, their contrasted backgrounds drew them together and added color and variety to both their lives.

If Korda had never made "Henry VIII," Binnie and Sam would never have parted. Her role in the picture brought offers from Hollywood. She bade her husband a happy good-bye. He would join her soon and they'd go back to England together. Meantime here were new worlds to conquer, and she wouldn't have been Binnie if her heart hadn't leaped at the prospect.

Sam did come over, but Binnie didn't go back with him. If you're a movie actress, if your work comes first, if Hollywood wants you, Hollywood is where you stay.

For a while they closed their eyes to the inevitable. Sam hopped over as often as he could. Binnie dashed back. He never asked her to give up her chosen work. He understood her well enough to realize that she wouldn't have been a whole woman without it.

"We never quarreled," says Binnie, "we never had so much as an argument. He's the best and kindest person I've ever met or I'm ever likely to meet. It sounds so infernally silly to say you divorced him. Things never turn out that way in the story books. No matter how much the girl loves her career, she always gives it up for the man. Love conquers all, or if love doesn't, the patter of little feet does.

"Well, my case proves one of two things—that life doesn't go by formulas, or that I'm a freak. Here was I, established in a paying business, there was Sam in the same spot. Perfect, except for one thing—we were thousands of miles apart. No one would have dreamed of suggesting he give up his work. 'What, that marvelous business that's been in the family for hundreds of years! That business you love! Give it up? You'd be crazy!' And I agree. It would have been crazy.

BUT for me to give up the business I loved, that had been my life—lots of people took that as matter of course. Well, I didn't. Don't think it was easy. I went through Hades and probably put Sam through the same. But I kept coming back to this: If I did give it up, I'd be so miserable that I'd be bound to drag Sam into misery with me. He couldn't be happy with a restless, discontented wife.

"Primarily, it wasn't a question of money. Now don't get me wrong. I'm not one of those airy creatures who can live on sunsets and a lettuce leaf. I think the laborer's worthy of his hire. When I say it wasn't money primarily, I mean just that. My husband had plenty. He was more than generous with it. What was his, was mine. But since I was a kid, I've stood on my own feet, been obliged to no one, dependent on no one but myself. That's the thing I couldn't get along without.

"You may ask, why couldn't I get a job in England? I could, but not as good a job. It's as if you said to Sam, 'Why can't you run your business in America?' He could, but it would have been bad.

"If you've got any pride in what you've built up, you want to build it as solid as possible. Don't think for a minute it's what they call the glamor of pictures that's got me. I don't care a whoop for it. Pictures happen to be my work, that's all. If fate took a hand and washed me up in pictures, there'd be nothing I could do about that. But you can bet your last nickel I'd find other work to do—also that I'd try to find it in England.

"People say to me, 'Why did you and Sam have to divorce? You didn't want to marry another man, he didn't want to marry another woman. Why couldn't you stay married and take the chance that some day you'd get together again?'

I COULD think up all sorts of pretty answers to that one—that it wouldn't have been fair to Sam, or that one ought to be a hundred percent wife, or none at all. Sounds pretty noble, only it isn't the truth. I would have hung on to Sam for dear life, but for one reason. Are you sentimental? Then prepare to be shocked. Me, I'm a realist. My reason, bald and unblushing, was the income tax.

"Sam's a resident of England. As his wife, I'm a resident of England, no matter where I live. That means I paid income tax in two countries. Do you know what the income tax in England is? Well, I won't spoil your dinner by telling you. And you see, Sam earned a lot of money too, which brought the tax still higher for both of us. So high, in fact, that I found myself practically working for nothing. On nothing it's hard to feel independent.

"So we divorced. I think a really mercenary woman would have sat herself in her husband's pocket, and said, 'Now pay up, old boy, for all I've sacrificed in order to be your dear and loving wife.' I'm not out to pin any medals on myself, but I did refuse to hang the burden of my boredom around Sam's neck. I claim a feather for that, here on the left shoulderblade—nothing so gaudy as a wing, you understand—just one small pinfeather."

When Binnie makes one of her flying trips to London, it's Sam who finds an apartment for her. It's with Sam she has dinner night after night, it's with Sam that she goes out dancing. At least once a year he turns up in Hollywood to see her. Each continues to feel an active interest in the other's work.

"And though he's no longer my husband," says Binnie, "I still love him. He's too good not to love. If I were in trouble, it's Sam I'd turn to—yes, even if he married again. I can't say I hope he doesn't—that would be unfair. But if he doesn't, then maybe some day we'll end up together, when I'm through.

"You see, I've no illusions about my place in the movies. I'm not the world's best actress, by any means. I'll never be a star and I don't want to be. But I'm adaptable. That part in 'Three Blind Mice,' for instance. We didn't know how we'd play it until we started. She was a nice dame, but nuts. Well, I suddenly remembered some women I'd met in the south of France. They live there so long, they get cracked. So I copied them.

"Producers know they can rely on me. 'Pick Barnes up,' they'll say. 'Old Barnes'll go through it all right.' I'm aware of that. It used to bother me, but not any more. What's the difference? People like me to a certain extent, I'm happy, I'm grateful, I get money for what I do. I should start worrying whether I'm a star or not, as long as I have enough to eat."

A MAN WHO CAME BACK

(Continued from page 41)

intriguing suggestion was made, is still made, that they never have divorced because they are still in love. Some day, whispers Hollywood drowsily, any day perhaps, there may be a reconciliation.

I said to Lew, "If these whispers are true, don't let me write a story about you, omitting all mention of a possible reconciliation between you and Ginger only to have the newspapers headline the news."

"I wouldn't want that to happen, either," Lew told me. "'Reconciliation,' by the way, is, essentially, the wrong word to use about Ginger and me. We are really good friends. We see one another now and then. We talk on the phone occasionally. But, currently, we have no plan for resuming our marriage. If there were any such plan, I would certainly tell you about it. I have no reason to be secretive about anything concerning either Ginger or me."

So anyway, there it was. There would be these little geysers of talk about Lew, interest in Lew, speculations, now and then, as to why so brilliant a career had, seemingly, petered out so vaguely. And that was all—until "Holiday." And then, Hollywood gave itself Ayres again. Then the come-back of Lew Ayres made taproom talk at the Trocadero, at the Brown Derbies, at all the meeting places of producers, agents, directors, critics, where careers (and reputations) are both glamorized and guillotined. More importantly, the studios became Ayres-minded again. Then one of them signed him to a contract. Now he is making "White Collars."

Yes, interest in Lew has taken a powerful shot in the arm. People are asking questions about him.

Was his pride hurt? Was his self-confidence shattered? Has he been bitter? What caused his slip in the first place?

I asked my questions of Lew himself. I had lunch with him in the studio commissary. There was Lew, in make-up, fresh off the "White Collars" set. Lew once again among the Gables, Montgomerys, Tracys, who were lunching at tables around us. Lew, I thought, come into his own again.

I said, "Tell me the story of a comeback. I know it will be exciting."

"I'm sorry, I haven't suffered," smiled Lew. "I know what good copy mental agonies can make. But the flat truth is, I'm glad I went down in those B, C and even D pictures. Because the backsliding has made the kick of coming back all the more intense. I can appreciate being in a big studio now, not having to be on the set until nine in the mornings, not being pushed around quite so much or so fast. I can appreciate it more than I could ever have done had I maintained the level on which I started.

"You know, it's something like never appreciating happiness until you have been unhappy; never knowing the blessedness of relief from pain until you have been in pain; never knowing how to celebrate peace until you have been at war.

"Not, I am sorry to tell you, that I have experienced anything so dramatic as unhappiness because I slipped from my high estate. I haven't worried. I haven't envied. I haven't been bitter. I have worked out of any bewilderment I may have felt at first. In fact, I was much more bewildered when I sat on top of the haystack than I was when I began to slide down. I have never even been distressed. The only thing I've missed is that feeling of wanting to go to bed early so that I would be on tip toe in the morning for the day's work. Otherwise, there are too many things in life to do, to appreciate, for me to feel downed by failure in any one field.

"So many things interest me," said Lew, "that I'm afraid I could never be a fanatic. To be a fanatic you have to be absorbed by one idea, one passion, one ideal. My interests are so many, so diverse, that pictures couldn't be my whole life. I'm afraid, too, that I have a funny bone. And I'm afraid that to be successful you can't have a sense of humor, especially where you yourself are concerned.

"So, the 'many things' have saved me from bemoaning the—shall we say eclipse of the one thing. There are so many things I want to do, could do, or try to do, if I never made another picture. And if I should never make another picture I'm still lucky for all I've done. I know that. Even before I played in 'Holiday'

GLAMOROUS Shoes by JOLENE STYLED in HOLLYWOOD $3 to $4

MAID MARIANNE
New platform sole

STYLED JUST LIKE THOSE YOU'LL SEE AT HOLLYWOOD'S FAMOUS Cocoanut Grove

EVERGLADES
soft calf alligator

HIGHLAND
velvety suedes

Just the shoes you've been looking for! Glamorous enough for a night at Hollywood's Cocoanut Grove because they're Styled in Hollywood by Jolene, famous fashion observer.

Don't be satisfied with anything but Jolene Hollywood Styled Footwear this Fall—you'll be amazed at the shoes $3 to $4 will buy at your Jolene dealer.

For the name of your nearest Jolene dealer write direct to Jolene's Studio R, 7751 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

Says beautiful Anita Louise:

"You've hit a new high, Jolene, styling your shoes in Hollywood."

See ANITA LOUISE in WARNER BROTHERS' "THE SISTERS"

Distributed by Tober-Saifer Shoe Co. • St. Louis, Mo.

Chamberlain's Lotion

Guaranteed NOT TO THICKEN ..NOT A DROP WASTED

at Drug...Department Stores and Toilet Goods Counters

SEND FOR CONVENIENT "CARRY SIZE"

CHAMBERLAIN LABORATORIES, INC. MM-118
DES MOINES, IOWA

Please send Free "Carry-Size" Chamberlain's Lotion. FREE!

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY-STATE_____

MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY Good only in U.S.A.

"Nothing to Say," so Fred MacMurray says it in December MODERN SCREEN hard TO BRYTEN?

Use Iodent No. 2 toothpaste or powder, the only dentifrice specially made by a Dentist—guaranteed to clean teeth sparkling bright or money back. SAFE ingredients remove most stubborn stains—even tobacco stains. Do as millions do—use Iodent today!

IODENT

NO. 1 FOR TEETH EASY TO BRYTEN — TOOTH PASTE also POWDER — NO. 2 FOR TEETH HARD TO BRYTEN

I was grateful for all I'd been able to do. I knew then that Hollywood owed me nothing."

Lew, I'd say, is of the breed of young men who would watch an operation being performed on himself rather than take an anesthetic. Because his curiosity would be greater than his sense of fear. Similarly, he has watched his career being operated upon, rallying, sinking, rallying again, with the same clinical interest he would display in a surgical amphitheatre.

He said then, "My case history goes something like this: I was too young when I started in pictures. Nineteen years old and a banjo player. That was ten years ago. I was too raw, too inexperienced. I knew no one in Hollywood, not even an extra. I just acted in the pictures they told me to act in. Just acting isn't enough. You've got to know what to fight for. I didn't know what to fight for.

"I came to Hollywood as raw a recruit as ever stepped foot in a studio. I was playing and singing at the Cocoanut Grove with Ray West's orchestra. Ivan Kahn saw me there and offered me my first chance.

I PLAYED bits in two pictures then. People said nice things about me. My third picture was 'All Quiet On The Western Front.' After that came 'Doorway To Hell' and 'Common Clay.' All three were big hits. I was all ready for the knife then. But I didn't know it.

"So there I was, sitting on top without having had to climb there. It can't be done. Read the biographies of men like Muni, Tracy, Gable and you'll realize that, at one time or another, they've done some powerful climbing. I had to do my climbing a little later, that's all. And it's all right. It's been good for me. For if you put a child of seven in high school before he's been to kindergarten the chances are that he'll be demoted to the first grade once they catch on to him.

"I was too successful at the start for the continued good health of my career. Then I didn't fight. There didn't seem to be anything to fight for. I didn't try to improve myself as an actor because, I thought, why should I? I realized that there was plenty of room for improvement but they seemed to like me as I was, so maybe I'd better stay as I was. I did.

"Then I made a series of bad pictures. The skids were under me and I knew it. Then my looks were against me because I was, unfortunately for me, a leading-man type—young, regular features and all that. I wanted to play character parts. I did not want to pose in profile among romance and roses.

"And so the see-saw began. I'd go down, then I'd come up again, and then in reverse. Little by little the ups became less up and the downs would be more downs and stay down longer. It was like a pendulum swinging, slower and slower and ever more slowly.

"I was twice married and twice unsuccessfully. I am completely unembittered by these experiences. I am not one of those who believe that Hollywood marriages cannot last, that, because a wife is a star and independent, the marriage is foredoomed to failure. On the contrary, I think it's a very fine thing for both husband and wife to be totally independent.

"I've bought a small house atop the highest hill in Hollywood. And I live there, alone. And like it. It's a very selfish way of living, I know. And I don't say that I want to live this way for the rest of my life. But right now I am, and for some time have been, well content to be alone.

"I've never been discouraged about anything," Lew continued. "Inclined to be moody, I've had my ups and downs, of course, good days and days not so good. But at least I've had enough perspective on myself to realize that I have the same good days and bad days whatever I'm doing at the time.

"Things were going along in this fashion when I ran into George Cukor in the lobby of the Biltmore Theatre in Los Angeles one night. Cukor was the dialogue director on 'All Quiet.' I hadn't seen him for years. We exchanged greetings. He said to me, laughing, 'I thought you'd be an old, gray-headed man by this time!' That was all. A week later he called me on the telephone, said he wanted to talk to me about the part in 'Holiday.'

"We talked. I made the test. That wasn't enough for Cukor. He talked to me about the part again. He made me read it to him, not once but many times. He then made me take lessons in diction.

"It was a thrill. Of course it was. I realized fully that here was an opportunity that was, literally, battering down my door. But, although I knew it was my big chance, I wasn't nervous about it. I'd been working very hard and perhaps I was too tired to feel nervous. Perhaps that was just as well, too, for the young man I played was also tired, all the way through. Then came the work, the hard work, but enormously stimulating because it was something that mattered. And then the preview, the reviews, and the word passed that I had 'come back.' And so, here I am.

"I don't believe," Lew said slowly, "that it's luck, the 'breaks' when good things happen to us. I don't believe that life is that shallow. I'd hate to think that life hinges on luck alone. It's a defeatist sort of philosophy to believe that everything depends on a throw of the dice.

"It might be called luck, my happening to be in the lobby of the Biltmore the same night that Cukor was there. But luck alone wouldn't have done it. If Cukor hadn't had some residue of faith in me he would have said, 'Hullo and goodbye.' And I—I would have stayed back.

"I have faith, you know, in a sort of divine justification. I think that we get things when we are ready for them.

"But that meeting with Cukor was not the first step in my 'come-back,'" smiled Lew. "It was the last. The first step was taken when I took the first step down."

You'll be seein' Nancy Kelly in "Jesse James." Nice?

GINGER'S MAMA SPEAKS HER PIECE

(Continued from page 33)

These were to be played the day after Lela left. On the train, Lela, whose humor is a great deal like her daughter's, wired, "If you don't win its bread and water for a week." The following morning she received, "It's bread and water, get it."

The minute Ginger heard about her six-week vacation, the first she's had in years, she called Lela in New York with, "I don't know where we'll go, but when the time comes get ready to fly to me!"

And, as a surprise, she shipped Lela's car, equipped with four new tires, to New York. Of course this is nothing new. With her first big pay check (it was a thousand dollars) Ginger took the whole thing and with it bought a brooch for her mother. And she designed that brooch.

Lela, too, is no slouch at surprises. It was she who gave Ginger the now famous soda fountain.

"I never dreamed how popular it would become. It's a boon for servants because all the guests insists upon making their own. Ginger doesn't drink, you know. She lives on malted milks and sodas. I gave her the fountain as a mark of luxury, as a way of saying, "You have arrived!"

Well, a mother-daughter friendship like that, with its attendant sense of humor, doesn't break.

As for the normal life . . .

"If any star's life is normal, it's Ginger's. And it's much easier to live normally in Hollywood than here in the East. Why, it took us two years to build our house. Twenty-five towns lie under our noses, we're ten minutes from the studio, and yet, we're so surrounded by hills that we're isolated. I didn't wear a pair of stockings all summer, or a summer dress; just lived in my bathing suit. Ginger goes to work in slacks. When I say work I mean work. You've got to be a trouper to get on top or stay on top.

"I wish you could see all her clothes hanging in the closet because she has no time to wear them. The night I left for the East we figured she had been out for dinner exactly twice in six months! She did manage to get to her own preview, but that, in its way, is work. But she was broken hearted because she couldn't get to Maggie's—Margaret Sullavan's, you know. Ginger is crazy about her. The night of that preview the studio kept Ginger until seven-thirty, and by the time she came home and had dinner, it was, as she said, 'As usual, too late.'

"Every Sunday we serve a buffet supper in our basement playroom and Ginger's gang comes—Maggie and Leland, Dorothy Fields, Bob Riskin, Phyllis Frazier, Jimmy Stewart.

"Ginger is the one who started all those quiz games that became such a fad. Every free night Bob Riskin would head one team, Dorothy Fields the other. And they would come armed with dictionaries and encyclopedias, literally playing for blood. It's great mental exercise, and Ginger loves it."

Of all Ginger's boy friends Lela seems to favor writer Robert Riskin. "He's the sweetest boy. Of course Ginger goes out a lot with Jimmy Stewart these days, but," Lela added significantly, "Jimmy manages to distribute himself among all the girls. He's very popular, you know."

She paused. Then, "Ginger has changed a great deal. Her faults have always been for blood. It's great mental exercise, and the chief fault of all the Rogers women, that of being too frank for their own good. Men don't like honest women. They're scared of them. It's always a straight 'Yes' or 'No' with Ginger, no side-stepping. She likes you or she doesn't. She's inherently honest, and that doesn't make for happiness. But if you're made that way there's nothing you can do about it. I know.

"Certainly, she has grown more serious. And her tastes have changed, especially in clothes. Her dresses used to be much too fancy. Now she is going in for the simple kind. She had to learn that by herself. Good taste grows as we grow.

"And," Lela Rogers hesitated, "this sounds unkind to the past, but, naturally, Ginger's taste in men has also changed. Nobody can bank on the idiosyncracies of love, but I have a hunch that the next important man in Ginger's life will be older and serious thinking, not just a boy. Heretofore, she's always had a youth complex, but now maturity has set in."

Her voice softened. "As Ginger's

Enchanting Fragrance
FOR
NIGHTS of ROMANCE

Let this entrancing odeur bring thrilling romance to you. Park & Tilford No. 3 Perfume surrounds you with provocative fascination . . . exotic and intoxicating as the moon-kissed breeze in an Oriental garden. This mystic fragrance makes tonight the night for love. At leading drug and department stores, in $1 and 25c sizes. Smart tuckaway size for your purse—only 10c at all ten-cent stores.

PARK & TILFORD
No. 3 Perfume

Other famous odeurs: Adventure; Cherish; Gardenia; Lilac; and No. 12.

FINE PERFUMES FOR HALF A CENTURY

new black lipstick turns luscious red on your lips!

PRESTO! Its blackness turns to red-ripe beauty the moment you apply Twin Sisters Black Lipstick to your lips. New! Startling! Indelible, smooth and lasting beyond compare. Three tempting shades—Light, Medium, Dark. Be first to use it. Only 10c at most 5 & 10c stores.

Twin Sisters
CREAMY FRENCH TYPE
BLACK LIPSTICK

Clark-Millner Co., Dept. 45-M, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago
● Send me Twin Sisters Black Lipstick. I enclose 10c.
Shade: ☐ Light ☐ Medium ☐ Dark. (U. S. A. only)

Name---------- Town----------
Address---------- State----------

See REBUILT BY WOODSTOCK BUILDER

Winner... Most World's School Contests—
EASY TERMS—FREE TRIAL
WRITE FOR LITERATURE DEPT. B-33

WOODSTOCK TYPEWRITER CO., WOODSTOCK, ILL.

How to SECURE and how to KEEP... A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION

EVERY woman wants to have a flawless complexion, a creamy, lovely skin. Men admire and love beauty. Beauty makes you more popular, brings more dates, invites romance. Beauty gives you poise, self-assurance, confidence. Why not be beautiful?

The makers of STUART'S LAXATIVE COMPOUND TABLETS will send you entirely FREE and without obligation, their fascinating booklet by a well known beauty authority, entitled: "Aids To Beauty" . . . what every woman should do. For

FREE SAMPLE
STUART'S LAXATIVE COMPOUND TABLETS and a FREE copy of
"AIDS to BEAUTY"
what every woman should do.
send name and address now.

Send to F. A. STUART COMPANY
Dept. H-110 Marshall, Mich.

mother, I think I know what she wants. It may sound trite to say, but I know from the occasional remarks she lets fall, and the questions she asks, and the way she acts that the only thing Ginger wants out of life is what every girl wants if she is thoroughly honest with herself—a home and babies. Ginger is twenty-seven now.

I think in three years she will have her heart's desire. Why, everything she does points that way. All her spare time, those few rare minutes, goes to Brooke Heyward, Maggie's child. Ginger was so proud because Brooke paid her first call on us. Ginger took up knitting so she could make Brooke a sweater. And every once in awhile Ginger asks about babies, funny little details, and whether I think she is too old to have one." Mrs. Rogers laughed. "Ginger, at twenty-seven, worrying about her age. But you can see what she is thinking about—in what direction her mind lies.

"Not that I think she could actually quit working for any great length of time. Ginger would never be happy idle."

She paused as a trim maid passed us iced coffee and little cakes. And I had time to sit back and study this Lela Rogers, whose face is stamped with living and work, and yet, who looks so much like Ginger, the expression around her mouth, the shape of her legs, a turn here and there. The sitting room makes a perfect background, with its white mantelpiece, its Venetian blinds, the vases alive with flowers, the chintz covered furniture.

On the mantel stood a picture of J. Edgar Hoover with the inscription "To Lela E. Rogers, in appreciation of a valued friendship." And on a table the only photograph of Ginger . . . Ginger wearing a plain sports frock, Ginger, her arms folded and looking straight at you with that frank, likeable stare of hers.

Lela Rogers looked at the picture too. "It's not easy," she said, "for a mother to talk about her daughter's faults. Every duck thinks her chick is white, but to me, Ginger's worst fault is the fact that when something bothers her she keeps it within herself. And it eats inside. I can always tell. Then I say, 'Out with it!'

ONCE I said this and she began, 'Pan (meaning producer Pandro Berman) said three months ago . . .'

"'Three months ago!'" I shouted. "And you've been worrying about this all that time! Go to him and have it out! When she used to be afraid to do that, I often started the battles for her.

"In that instance Pan had promised Ginger she didn't have to work with a certain person, and there he was, cast just the same. Please don't misunderstand, the person was not Astaire."

And then Lela Rogers made a startling and generous announcement. "I consider the success of their pictures due to Fred Astaire. He is tireless, painstaking, a glutton for perfection. And he fights for what he wants. So he fought for Ginger too. He was the first person to insist upon having a dance photographed all the way through. The producer said it would lose camera interest. They wanted to shoot away to a man chewing gum, a woman powdering her nose. Astaire said, 'If you don't do it my way, you don't get the dance!' So they gave in. And you know the result. He must have things right, or not at all. Because Ginger was his partner and believed as he believed, he fought for her rights, too. By herself, she never would have fought.

"For, believe it or not, Ginger has a great inferiority complex. She thinks everybody is better than she is. Do you know she was scared to death to tackle a dramatic part? And now, I believe that's the only kind she should go in for. Why, she was frightened stiff to act with Hepburn! Ginger is a square shooter. Give the other fellow a scene, and she practically turns her back. You can notice this in 'Vivacious Lady.' When it was Jimmy's turn, the camera was his. But Ginger knew Hepburn is an actress with every trick up her sleeve and ready to use them all. She felt she never could stand a chance playing in the same picture with Hepburn weaving around her. She herself felt she was no match as an actress. But she has will power. So she went to it. It was her job and Ginger faced it. When it comes to her own faults I must say she is painstaking about trying to overcome them. She has more will power than anyone I ever saw."

And I thought to myself, no wonder, she comes by it naturally. For what other mother would have the nerve to walk out and just stand by while her chick fends for itself? Only one with tremendous will power of her own—one like Lela Rogers.

IN BETWEEN

(Continued from page 78)

to New York we stayed on for my health and I sort of 'lucked' into pictures. I had done a couple of small parts when they started looking for a child that looked like Ann Harding. A lady living in the same apartment house with us told about me and I got the job. From then on, it was easy sailing; that is, till now. It's pretty tough when you've grown up, but aren't old enough to do things you enjoy."

You can see, too, that despite her cries of maturity and for all her fifteen years, Bonita has grown up! But, she hasn't arrived at the age when she looks romantically toward a handsome gent following in her footsteps, love aglow in his eyes! Seems, Bobby Jordon, one of the "Dead End" kids got a crush on Miss G. and followed her wherever she went. But to no avail! However, she did go into ecstasies over one gentleman of the cinema.

"Do you know who I really adore?" Bonita began. "Spencer Tracy! I think he's the finest actor I've ever seen in all my life. Everything he does seems so easy; while, with other actors, you're continually conscious of the struggle they're making to portray a part. With Mr. Tracy everything he does is the character. Yet each man he plays is entirely different and a real person. That's the test of acting, when you can play yourself, or submerge yourself into a character and not make the audience conscious that you're doing it. He seems to have something that no one else has on the screen. I think that's why he is great. Wouldn't it be wonderful to be able to act like Spencer Tracy?"

Indeed, it would, we agreed.

It's something quite remarkable for a girl fifteen to have such good judgment as Bonita Granville. In fact, that is probably one of the main reasons she is such a good actress. She doesn't know why she feels about things as she does. She only knows that by instinct she feels what is right and acts accordingly.

Many a youngster would pick as her ideal a handsome John Payne, or a beautiful Virginia Bruce. But not Bonita Granville! She's far too intelligent. She chooses the two top acting names in the movie world, tops because of their ability and not for their photographic angles. These are the stars little Miss Granville sets herself to emulate and, knowing Bonita, our guess is that in the future she will come into a place of her own that will equal any of the great stellar lights of her day.

MAKING THE MOST OF THINGS

(Continued from page 45)

nature with art, make up your mouth along its natural lines and let it go at that. Then make expression do what you can't do with make-up. Our pal Number One, for example, should consciously turn her mouth up at the corners until the habit becomes natural to her.

More hints for Number One: Do notice, please, how that double strand of pearls exactly reproduces the unbucked-up line of the chin. The lesson here is never to repeat a bad line.. If Nature has treated you shabbily in some feature, don't repeat that line by any detail of dress or ornament. The high, draped neckline on Number Six also calls attention to her chin. If the dress were in a light color, it would be all right. But better necklines would be broad necklines or squares. Tailored collars would be okay, too, but best in light colors. She should avoid V's.

You can do wonders for a weak chin by this very simple exercise. Results won't come quickly, but they will come with time. Rest your elbow on the table, your chin in the palm of your hand. Open and close your mouth very slowly, resisting the push of the chin all you can. That's all. You can do this exercise in any convenient odd moments.

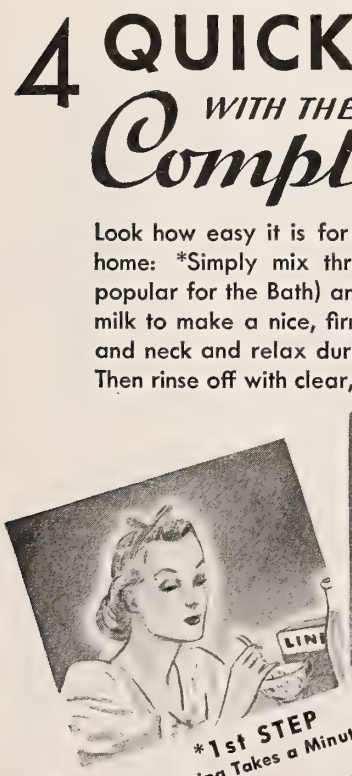
Number One might, when she is some years older, lengthen her brows the least bit at the outer corners. She is right in leaving them in their natural straight line. An arch would add to the illusion of length and narrowness which her face gives. I can't find much fault with the hair, since it is youthfully and simply arranged to suit her age. Perhaps there might be a little more fullness at the crown to give the face added width. Finally, this girl should never wear high hats, for obvious reasons, and she will never be able to wear too sophisticated a hat.

Girl Number Two, now, has a very short chin, and a very full mouth, particularly the lower lip. And, again, a tiny, too narrow face. The nose is just a wee touch long. She has done her hair out in that big roll on one side and a whoosh of curl on the other in the mistaken idea that it widens her face. It doesn't. Now if this girl had been a blonde, the contrast between her hair and her skin wouldn't have been so pronounced, see, and perhaps the stiff, rather formal coiffure would have had the desired effect, but as it is, the contrast between the dark hair and the skin makes the narrowness of the face all the more apparent. What to do, what to do?

With a little skill, this girl can have that desired blessing, the heart-shaped face. She has the small, delicate, but nicely cut chin. But she can't have all that forehead. And it's a nice forehead—it's a shame to hide it. Probably that's what the girl figured, but in acquiring beauty, we must consider proportion. A center part and a pressure forward onto the forehead of soft waves would be one solution. If she looks ghastly with a center part (and the rather long, thin nose might thus be accentuated) she might continue to part her hair where she does and have a short, thin, slightly curled bang. It would help.

Another thing: this girl's cheeks seem full when contrasted with her small chin. If her hair were a little longer and a tendril or so were allowed to escape over the jaw line, it might be a good idea. But that isn't so important as concealing part of the forehead height.

Number Two's mouth is full and sensuous. That's all right. A cultivated upturn in expression would be more attractive, as in the case of Number Six. The eyes are rather prominent, with deep lids—that is to say, a lot of space between eyelash and eyebrow. This is the ideal type of eyelid for eyeshadow.



The nose, as I said, is a trifle long.

In general, I advise you not to worry much about your noses. You can't do a great deal about 'em anyway, and if you play up your eyes and your mouths, people aren't going to notice noses nearly as much as you think. However, there are a few tricks to kid the public about noses, and I'll pass them along. With a long nose, make sure that the inner point of the eyebrow doesn't come any further in than the inner corner of the eye. This girl is okay in that respect—in fact, her eyebrows start a little beyond that point, which also helps to widen her face. If your nose is large, powder it a little darker than the rest of your face. If it's small and buttony, powder it a little lighter.

Number Three is a swell, friendly, outdoorsy looking gal. Black hair with a natural curl, blue eyes, those decidedly

4 QUICK STEPS
WITH THE NEW LINIT
Complexion Mask

Look how easy it is for you to make the Linit Complexion Mask at home: *Simply mix three tablespoons of Linit (the same Linit so popular for the Bath) and one teaspoon of Cold Cream with enough milk to make a nice, firm consistency. Apply it to the cleansed face and neck and relax during the twenty minutes the mask takes to set. Then rinse off with clear, tepid water and pat the face and neck dry.

*1st STEP
Mixing Takes a Minute

2nd STEP
Applying Takes a Minute

3rd STEP
Resting For 20 Minutes

4th STEP
Rinsing Off Completely

IT'S NEW!
LINIT ALL-PURPOSE POWDER
for every member of the family. Delightfully different. TRY IT TO-DAY!

Why not try Linit Complexion Mask NOW?
All grocers sell Linit

STOP
CAUSING LARGE PORES AND BLACKHEADS!

Start Using SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY Today!

● Do you take out your powder puff when you are shopping or away from home, and apply fresh powder on top of the old? Beware! Every time you rub stale powder and dirt into the pores of your skin, you fill them with waste . . . make them large and conspicuous . . . invite large pores, blackheads, blemishes. How can you avoid this harmful habit? Simply carry a dainty, metal push-up container of Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay in your bag and cleanse your skin in two seconds before you apply fresh make-up!

EASY TO USE AS A LIPSTICK

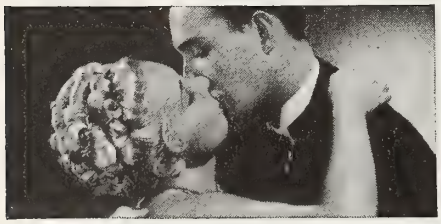
You'll find Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay as easy to carry and easy to use as your lipstick. Just take off the lid, push up the bottom and apply it to your face. Smooth the cream over your skin, wipe it off and your face is ready for powder . . . fresh, clean, radiant! You'll look lovelier . . . and your powder will stay on hours longer.

YOU NEED NO OTHER CREAMS

Generations of beautiful women have proved that Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay is the only preparation needed to keep the skin clean, soft, "always young." You don't have to bother with special creams when you use Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay. You don't even need a powder base! For this fine cream is a complete beauty treatment for your skin, made of rare imported oils not found in ordinary creams—blended by a long, slow, secret process. Use Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay morning, noon and night. Carry it with you to cleanse your skin before applying fresh make-up. Then you'll say good-bye to blackheads! You'll enjoy the thrill of a skin so clean, so fine, so soft that it will bring you compliments every day!

Purse-size at 10c counters or mail coupon.
Large 60c size at all drug and department stores.

SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY



Elizabeth Husted, Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay Company
Dept. 5-M, Grand Rapids, Michigan
Please send me your clever purse-size container of Sem-pray Jo-ve-nay. Enclosed you will find ten cents to cover cost of handling.

*Name*_____
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____

A Perfect Hair Groom

LUCKY TIGER VEG-E-LAY
Corrects Dry Hair
A few drops twice a week—a brisk scalp massage, and you'll say Veg-E-Lay is 100% to offset ravages of summer sun and wind. Keeps your hair just right. At your druggist, barber or 10¢ store.
TONES THE SCALP

How BLONDES
hold their sweethearts

MEN STAY in love with the blonde who makes the most of her hair. She does it with Blondex, the powdery shampoo that sets light hair aglow with new lustrous beauty—keeps it golden-bright and radiantly gleaming. Brings back real blonde gleam to stringy, faded light hair—without injurious chemicals. Blondex bubbles into a foam that routs out every bit of scalp dust—leaves hair soft and silky, taking fine permanent wave. Let Blondex make your hair unforgettably alluring. Try it today and see the difference. At all good stores.

marked eyebrows. Those grand teeth. A fine, likable face. The only thing I'd want to do would be to glamorize it a little for certain occasions. She looks like a girl who would be very popular on the golf course—but on the dance floor, she might be overshadowed by more languorous, less wholesome looking belles.

Number Three's face is a little on the wide side, and I've a hint to pass along about that. The nose is slightly bulbous at the tip, and I've a hint about that, too. Those brows are the least bit heavy at the inner corners, but they're so black and decided that, in this particular case, I think I'd leave them alone. Widening the space between the brows, you know, detracts from the effect of a blob on the end of one's nose.

Reams have been written about cutting down—and increasing—the width of a face by the placement of rouge. It can be done—by an expert. But the trouble is, if you put your rouge in the right spot to narrow or widen your face, it never seems to be the logical spot for you to have a flush of color. I think it's much easier to make one's hair do the trick. Number Three's face isn't so full as to be unattractive, but she could narrow it a little by bringing her hair down another inch and possibly letting it come forward a bit over the cheeks. If your face is too wide, don't make the common mistake of thinking you narrow it by slicking your hair back. Over-plump—and over-thin—faces profit by concealing part of the facial outline with a wave or a curl.

Another thing, while I'm being so fussy. This gal is young—in her early twenties. Come later years, I have a hunch that she'd better watch that chin. A fine exercise for keeping away—or getting rid of—a double chin is the following simple little stunt. Lie face down on the bed, with your head and shoulders hanging over the edge. Drop your head down. Then pull it up slowly and back as far as you can. Feel the pull in your throat muscles. This is also good for that little cushion of flesh which comes on the back of the neck—commonly known as dowager's hump.

I SAID something about glamorizing the face of Number Three, didn't I? Well, let—me—see. If you are in danger of being eternally classed as a "swell egg" . . . It used to be "a perfect peach"—ugh!—in my day. If, as I say, you're tops on the golf course, but find romance staying away in buckets on other occasions, what's to do about it? You can't make yourself all over just because there's moonlight and music, can you? No. Nor would you wish to. But girl Number Three could, for example, romanticize herself by three means: eye make-up, hairdo, and expression. The eye make-up would consist of nothing more revolutionary than putting mascara on her lashes, which should go unadorned in the daytime. She should make them up to match the luxuriance of the brows.

The hair, now. She wouldn't look so good in a long bob. No. Then it geefs an Up Coiffure—or false hair. Personally, I think this type of girl would look regal and distinguished with a false coronet standing up on the top of her head, her own hair smoothed into a rather slick, severe line around her face. True, this suggestion isn't the latest scream from Paris in the hair line, but nothing is more stunning for the right type. She should wear plain, beautifully cut, rather revealing evening gowns, of beautiful material, in black or some smashing, vivid, solid color. Never a frill or a bouffant line in sight. The young snips in the male line may prefer the Itsy-Bitsies and the Cutie-Pies, but I'll bet that the Interesting Older Men come flocking. And —oh, yes—the expression. Just cut down that smile, Number Three, please. Reduce it from the hail-fellow-well-met sort of thing to the half-smile, of the Mona Lisa variety.

Number Four was an exceedingly pretty girl. Therefore, I haven't a whole heap to say about her. Just a coupla things. Notice how charmingly her hairline is shown to advantage. If you still consider the longer bob most becoming and practical for general wear, here is a nice style for a well-proportioned, good-featured face. An upward feeling is achieved by securing the front hair with two tiny, efficient combs. For evening, this girl could lift the back hair onto the crown of her head, hold it with the combs, curl the ends flat and pin them with a few judicious invisibles.

THE particular reason I included this picture is that this girl's eyes are deep set and not nearly as large as they appear. Notice that the brows are not arched and that they are left in their natural position—fairly close to the eyes. This is the first trick to remember in making deep set or small eyes appear larger and more prominent. The amateur does the opposite—plucks or pencils the brows into a high arch. All wrong. Remember that. If your brows grow naturally too far from your eyes, train them down with vaseline and brushing. Pluck a very few hairs from the upper edge. Put mascara on the tips of your lashes only, and brush the outer lashes out in a diagonal line.

Numbers Five and Six—they're the sad birds. But each one has possibilities—oh, yes. That is proved by the fact that dear old Number Five is the selfsame girl as the one posing for the five sitting pictures. Perhaps you've noticed that already. Only, in the small picture, she has on no make-up at all, her expression is that of one who has just received a nasty letter from the Collector of Internal Revenue, and her hair is—well, need I say more?

It is this girl's coloring, however, that I want chiefly to discuss. She is a redhead. Redheads can be either stunning—or downright homely. Because usually, aside from the shining hair, they seldom are blessed with natural beauty. Their features are apt to be difficult—piquant, perhaps, but rarely classic. They usually have light eyes. Nothing much in the way of brows and lashes. Delicate skins which almost invariably freckle. They are the most difficult of all types to make up, and they need make-up very badly.

In the larger pictures, you see Number Five with her make-up on, her hair simply and becomingly arranged. She is a red-gold type of redhead, with big gray-green eyes, light brows and lashes, a wide mouth, a face that is very interesting in bone structure and plumb-full of character, but not pretty.

This girl uses a very clever shade of eyebrow pencil and mascara. It is what used to be labelled in my childhood paint-box "burnt sienna." A light brown-red. More brown than red, but not a definite browny brown. It was perfect. A darker redhead, now—one with mahogany or henna hair—could use the usual brown mascara. But strawberry blondes, golden redheads and carrot tops should shop around until they find this brown-red shade. It comes in theatrical make-ups and in some of the higher priced brands. No rouge is a good rule for redheads, but if you look terrible without rouge, get a shade which has a touch of brown in it. The same goes for lipstick. It may mean extra trouble, but it's worth it.

In choosing powder, each redhead must experiment. That's absolutely all I can say. In general, a light rachel is best. But sometimes, the florid coloring of this type demands more of a blush tone. In summer, when the freckles become more apparent, a mixture of a light suntan and a blush shade may be good. If your skin is nice, you could go without powder, fight each season's batch of freckles with a good anti-freckle cream, make up your eyes and mouth and let it go at that.

On Number Six, we see what disaster can befall when hair isn't properly taken care of. Perhaps her coiffure is all wrong and perhaps it isn't—I can't tell. The point is that her hair is in such a limp, lifeless condition that even if the hairdo were good, I wouldn't like it. The effort to lift the face up a bit by that coxcomb over the forehead is pathetic. The hair won't lift—it won't stay put. First of all, then, Number Six needs a good course in massage, gentle brushing, and plenty of good, warm olive oil. She needs to get her hair in condition above all else.

The eyes need make-up. The brows need to be lengthened, the lashes mascaraed. Since the eyebrows aren't much account anyway, I would suggest that they be arched a little, by means of judicious plucking, over the center of the eye, and then pencilled and brought out at the edges.

This girl might soften her decided jaw by fluffing her re-conditioned hair a little more forward. Rouge might be brought down onto the prominent jaw and blended with great care, and then powdered over. If your jaw is a decided one, remember to powder your neck carefully the same shade as your face. Number Six should cultivate a less starey expression. Her mouth should be made fuller and softer with lipstick.

Well, sir, I've spent so much time on my six young friends, I'll have to hustle through my lecture on gestures. The five larger pictures on pages 38 and 39 pretty much tell their own story anyway. Four of them point out certain common faults committed, through nervousness and lack of poise, by girls who are as pretty or even prettier than our model. That's why you sometimes see the poised plain girl having a better time and catching more beaux than the self-conscious beauty.

You recognize, I'm sure, the girl who has tobacco-trouble. Either she shouldn't smoke, or she should manfully swallow the tobacco, or she should learn how to smoke without getting shreds of the weed in her teeth. You recognize the belle who can't keep her straps up. She should have a dress rehearsal in her evening frock. So often we are apt to stand like a mannequin in the new gown in front of our mirrors, and think it's going to stay that way when we sit or lounge or dance. Remember to sit straight so that straps don't flop-doodle down the arm, or else shorten the straps, or choose something with a stronger bond between you and indecency than four strings of chiffon.

You recognize the "fiddler." She happens to be fiddling with her hair. She probably also fiddles with her hanky, packets of matches and anything that comes handy. Keep your hands still—until you have occasion to use them, and then use them as gracefully as you possibly can.

And then there's the picture where our model has fetchingly poised one hand on her shoulder, crooked the other one into her chest, and is favoring the world with an ear-to-ear grin. She is indicating to the gent who is talking to her that she's just too, too enthralled with his conversation—and she is overdoing it to beat hell. Contrast this picture with the quiet, poised girl with her hands clasped under her chin, her head bent charmingly forward just a little and the absorbed, half smile on her lips. Much, much better.

Just one last warning to you all. There are a lot of girls who look like perfect knock-outs—until they open their mouths. And then—you guessed it—dull, unattractive teeth ruin the whole effect. Well, there's a remedy for that too. What kind of dentifrice do you use? Is it too soapy, or does it contain grit? I know an excellent tooth powder which contains no grit, pumice or bleach but it does contain Irium, that wonderful cleansing agent which helps brush away surface stains that hide the beauty of teeth. If you'll fill out the coupon below we'll be glad to send you a seven-day free trial packet of this tooth powder.

Remember, not only the voice, but the face with the smile wins. And, in order to make yours winning, your teeth must be the proverbial pearly white.

That is absolutely, positively all the space I can take up. I could go on forever—each individual beauty problem is so different. There is so much to say about so many types. But I don't want to wear out muh welcome. So I'll sign off now, quickly, before I think of something else.

Mary Marshall
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, New York

Please send me, absolutely free, the 7-day trial of tooth powder.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

Her Freshness Charms

A twinkling dancing star, Dixie Dunbar charms movie-goers with her freshness. Hollywood claimed her only a few years ago and today her fresh talent is a feature of "Alexander's Ragtime Band".

Freshness
...wins fame for Dixie Dunbar and Old Golds, too!

Copyright, 1938, by P. Lorillard Co., Inc.

Every pack wrapped in 2 jackets of Cellophane; the OUTER jacket opens from the BOTTOM.

YOU can't blame a Hollywood star for worrying about going stale. For all the talent in the world won't hold a star's popularity . . . once the appealing charm of freshness fades.

That's true, too, of a cigarette. Many a talented cigarette, that leaves the factory fresh, is a stale "has-been" by the time it reaches the smoker.

Tobacco freshness must be guarded against dryness, dust, or too much moisture.

That's the reason for Old Gold's double-sealed, double Cellophane package. You can't buy, beg or borrow a stale Old Gold. Always, Old Golds are double-mellow, delightful in flavor, fresh as the minute they were made.

TUNE IN on Old Gold's Hollywood Screenscoops, Tuesday and Thursday nights, Columbia Network, Coast-to-Coast

X-Ray Shows How MOTHERS RUIN
BABY FEET

Little bones being twisted out of shape by outgrown shoes.

Mother, don't crowd baby's feet into shoes that have been outgrown. Save your baby's feet. Buy inexpensive Wee Walkers and change to new ones often. Wee Walkers are flexible, roomy, correctly shaped. Live model lasts give real barefoot freedom!

Wee Walkers cost less because they are sold nationally through store groups with tremendous buying power and a small profit policy. See them — compare them — in the Infant's Wear Department. Sizes up to about age 4. For baby's sake accept no substitutes.

ACCEPTED by PARENTS MAGAZINE

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck & Co. Charles Stores
F. & W. Grand Stores G. R. Kinney Co., Inc.
Isaac Silver and Bros. Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc.
Schulte-United Stores Lincoln Stores, Inc.

For FREE pamphlet "Which Way Are Your Baby's Feet Growing", address postcard to Moran Shoe Co., Dept M., Carlyle, Ill.

MORAN SHOE CO. CARLYLE, ILL.

"NEW WINDOW SHADES! DO YOU THINK I'M MADE OF MONEY?"

..and Then He Learned They Cost only 15c ea.

MILLIONS fast learning that expensive-looking CLOPAYS cost only 15c, including the exclusive Lintone texture that doesn't crack, curl or pinhole, hangs straight, rolls evenly, wears two years and more. Ready to attach to rollers, 15c (no tacks or tools needed). On rollers 25c. And, only 10c more buys the new CLOPAY WASHABLE Shade. Oil-paint finish both sides. Wash clean time and again, leaving no streaks or watermarks. Sold at 5c and 10c and neighborhood stores everywhere. Want sample swatches? Send a 3c stamp to CLOPAY CORP., 1330 Exeter St., Cincinnati, O.

CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES

You ask the questions—we'll answer them

RONALD COLMAN: It's not easy to picture the dashing Ronald Colman in black face, but he actually made his professional debut under a generous application of burnt cork. The occasion was a playlet by Tagore, entitled "The Maharanee of Arakan," the time, 1916, and the place the Coliseum in London. Ronald played a herald. Born in Richmond, Surrey, England, February 9, 1891, Colman attended the Hadley School at Littlehampton, Sussex, until he was sixteen, when the death of his father made it imperative that Ronald find work. He found a job as an office boy at $2.50 a week, and within five years rose to the position of junior accountant. At night he continued to indulge his interest in amateur theatricals, which had its origin during his Hadley School days. He also enlisted in the London Scottish Regiment, the equivalent of our National Guard. 1914 found him in the front line trenches, a private in Kitchener's "Contemptibles," that first hundred thousand of England's army to land in France. He saw action in the first battle of Ypres, suffered a fractured ankle at Messines and was sent back to England and given clerical work for his second year in the army. Finally he was discharged, after an unsuccessful attempt to get back into action. His blackface stage debut was followed by roles in "The Misleading Lady" and "Damaged Goods." He took a very small fling at films, making a two reel comedy in an improvised studio rigged up in a vacant house, and today expresses extreme gratitude for the fact that it was never shown. In 1920, he came to America armed with thirty-seven dollars and three clean collars. He was down to his last dollar when he got a role in "The Dauntless Three." In 1922, he was sent to Italy to play the male lead opposite Lillian Gish in "The White Sister." He remained there to make "Romola" with the same star. After that Colman returned to Hollywood and made many successful pictures, including "Bulldog Drummond," "Arrowsmith," "The Masquerader," etc. After another European vacation, Colman signed a new contract, made "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" and "Clive of India." His last two pictures were: "Lost Horizon" and "Prisoner of Zenda." His next will be "If I Were King." Ronald Colman is five feet eleven inches tall, has dark brown hair and eyes. He weighs one hundred sixty pounds. He enjoys tennis, motoring, reading and swimming. He was married once and divorced. At present Colman's name is often linked romantically with that of Benita Hume, English actress. You may address him in care of Paramount Studios, Hollywood, California.

LORETTA YOUNG: Don't let her record of twenty years in the movies fool you, for this talented star is still a youngster, unless you call twenty-five middle-aged. Loretta Young was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, January 6, 1913. Her real name is Gretchen Young. Loretta's whole family has been pretty closely identified with the movies. Her two sisters, Polly Ann and Sally Blane, have done considerable work in pictures. Loretta made one appearance at the age of five, then went to school in Los Angeles and Alhambra, California. When she was fourteen years old Polly Ann's studio called one day for that young lady to come in for a new role. But Polly Ann was away, so Loretta went over in her sister's place. She got the role, too, and played it so well that she won a long-time contract. She's been in the movies almost constantly ever since. She has been cast in a great many big productions, and at one time or another has played opposite almost every one of the screen's leading men. Loretta is as active as three average girls. Some of her hobbies are dancing, riding, swimming, yachting, flying and

HUNDREDS OF ADDRESSES FOR A STAMPED ENVELOPE!

Want to know your favorite player's address? In fact, would you like to have a complete list of all the Hollywood stars' mailing addresses? It's yours for the asking. So many of you have written to this department wanting to know where to write this one or that one for an autographed picture, or perhaps you just want to write a fan letter, that we've compiled a complete list for you, naming the players alphabetically, according to their studio, and giving their complete mailing addresses. They are all there, even the featured players, printed in such a compact form that you'll be able to keep the list in your movie scrap book for reference whenever you want it.

To receive one of these lists, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with unless we receive your stamped and addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

ping pong. She selects her own wardrobe both on and off the screen, and is a tireless movie fan. She also is quite a camera addict and takes her own movies everywhere she goes. Photography is probably her favorite hobby. Loretta Young is naturally reserved. She does a lot of reading, and prefers the intellectual type of man. She comes from a charming, harmonious home, and was educated mostly in convents and by private tutors. She is five feet three inches tall, has light golden brown hair and deep blue eyes. She weighs one hundred and nine pounds. Loretta is considered one of the best camera subjects in the movies because she photographs well from every angle. Loretta's last two pictures were "Four Men and a Prayer" and "Three Blind Mice." Her next will be "Suez." You may address her in care of 20th Century-Fox Studios, Hollywood, California.

LEO CARRILLO: This versatile character actor was born in Los Angeles, California, on an August 6th at the turn of the century. He is one of the eleven children of Juan J. Carrillo, first mayor of Santa Monica, California, and of Francisco Roldan de Carrillo. Leo, a direct descendant of the California dons, possesses a historical heritage unequalled by any other motion picture celebrity. His great-grandfather, Carlos Antonio Carrillo, the first provisional governor of California, fought the Battle of Cahuenga Pass a century ago against Michael Torena Bandini, an Italian admiral, and settled in San Diego early in the nineteenth century. At one time the Carrillos, through inter-marriage with other prominent early California families, owned nearly all the territory between Monterey and the Mexican border. The future actor received his early education at Santa Monica High School and at St. Vincent's (now Loyola College). He admits he was a restless scholar but a good athlete, and at one time he held the coast championship for long distance ocean swimming. His mother hoped he would become a priest, but his father favored the boy's desire to become an artist. Leo travelled north to San Francisco, working on the railroad en route, and became a cartoonist on the "Examiner." There he was assigned to Chinatown. He picked up Chinese and Italian dialects and became popular in San Francisco amateur theatricals and as an after-dinner speaker. He prepared a vaudeville act and was booked by the Orpheum Circuit. He remained in vaudeville for several years as a headliner, but his career as a legitimate actor began when, while playing polo at a fashionable Long Island club, he ad libbed a comic Italian, was overheard by a theatrical producer, and was given the part of an Italian in "Twin Beds." His greatest stage triumph was "Lombardi, Ltd." especially written for him. In it he starred for four seasons, touring New Zealand, Australia and Tasmania. Carrillo made his screen debut in "Mr. Antonio" in 1929. Since then he has made some forty or fifty pictures. His role of Corelli, the warm-hearted music-loving Italian gambler in "Love Me Forever" with Grace Moore, ranks as his favorite. Carrillo is married to Edith Shakespeare, a non-professional, and they have a seventeen-year-old adopted daughter, Marie Antoinette. They live on a ten-

(Continued on page 115)

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print, in this department, a brief life story of:

.....

Name... .....

Street. .. ..

City..... ..... State.....

If you would like our chart listing the heights, ages, birthplaces and marriages of all the important stars, enclose five cents in stamps or coin with your coupon.

A NICKEL goes a long way.. 9 FEET!

MEASURE your saving on Royledge shelving...you get 9 whole feet of shelf beauty for 5¢! No laundry or cleaning bills, either, and no quick replacement, for this shelving lasts. Royledge lies flat, protecting the whole shelf surface; the double, patented, strong border folds down to decorate the shelf edge. Hangs straight, never curls in steam or dampness. Doesn't catch dirt!

Your nearest 5-and-10¢, neighborhood or dept. store has the big 5¢ Royledge package (10¢ sizes too). You'll find a gorgeous array of colorful patterns to match kitchen and closet trimming...and you'll find a new combination of thrift and beauty! Roylace, 99 Gold Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

9 FT. 5¢ "FEEL THE EDGE" Royledge REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. SHELVING

Here's Joy Hodges, whom you'll soon see in "Personal Secretary" with Constance Bennett and Vincent Price. After a successful Broadway season with George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right," Joy hied herself to Hollywood. Her on-and-off romance with Robert Wilcox has kept the whole film colony guessing.

"The Lady Objects." She's Gloria Stuart and you'll see why in Dec. MODERN SCREEN

● At home—quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful, natural appearing color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by tinting a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

BE A NURSE

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 39th yr. One graduate has charge of 10 bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2311, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age____

DON'T BE A
"MARKED" GIRL!

*DISFIGURING BLEMISHES NOW SO EASILY CONCEALED!

SKIN BLEMISHES need no longer be embarrassing. Untold numbers of smart girls have learned this simple secret of always having clear-looking, lovely skin despite unexpected or permanent blemishes. HIDE-IT conceals pimples, birthmarks, freckles, scars and all discolorations. Waterproof—won't easily rub off—lasts all day until removed. Four flesh shades. Cream or Stick $1 at Department and Leading Drug Stores. 10c size at Ten Cent Stores.

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST
Apply HIDE-IT on the blemish. Let dry. Dust with powder, apply usual make-up.

Now! See how completely blemish has been concealed. See how marvelously clear and flawless yourskinlooks. You'll never be without HIDE-IT!

Clark-Millner Co., Dept. 15-M, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago
Please send me free Story Booklet "Marked Girl." I enclose 10c (U.S.A. only) for sample "Hide-It" ☐ Cream ☐ Stick. Check shade: ☐ Light ☐ Medium ☐ Brunette ☐ Sun Tan.

Name.....Town.....
Address.....State.....

HOW NERVOUS WOMEN CAN SLEEP EASILY

By Dorothy Blake

Being a woman myself, I know that many women, as well as men, find it extremely difficult to fall asleep for hours after they retire — that others become fully awake after they have slept for just a short time, then find it almost impossible to go back to sleep. The next day they are nervous, unstrung, highly irritable. Before retiring I take one or two TREMS Tablets. That's ALL I do. In about 15 minutes, tense nerves are completely relaxed, that taut feeling goes and I get a good night's sleep. All ingredients in TREMS are U. S. P. tested. Why put up with another sleepless night or nerve-wracking day when you can enjoy glorious relaxation with TREMS? If your druggist does not have TREMS, send your name, address and 10c to TREMS, St. Louis, and 25c Introductory Package will be sent postpaid.

START $1260 to $2100 YEAR

Men—Women
Many Appointments Yearly
Qualify Now
Mail Coupon Today

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. B266, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush (1) 32-page book with list of many U. S. Government Big Pay Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name.....
Address.....

SHE'S LOOKING FOR LOVE

(Continued from page 39)

refused Joe Doakes. There isn't much left nowadays of that sort of mewling and mooning. With the exception of the few fanatic fans who can see no romance in The Boy Next Door because he can't sing like Nelson Eddy, croon like Bing Crosby, wing an arrow like Errol Flynn, look like Tyrone Power or sweep them off their feet like Clark Gable.

"Today," said Olivia, "we think with the man's side of our brains. I know that I'm learning, too. I've seen to it, this past year, that I did some growing up. I'm not the girl I was a year ago. I realize that God gave me a brain as well as a body and I'm using the brain. Now I make my own decisions. I guide my own existence. I haven't much time to dream. There are too many things to do. A year ago I regretted that I didn't have more time for dreaming. Now I don't. I know that it's healthier.

"I'm not susceptible, I guess," laughed Olivia. "I never imagine that I am in love with anyone. When I fall in love, I'll know it. And when I do fall in love I want something honest, something substantial, something, well, inspiring and completely human. I want to know, when I fall in love, that I am not dreaming.

"Illusion is all very well in its place. Screen illusions are fine, in their place. People see me on the screen as Arabella, as Lady Marian, false eyelashes on, hair just dressed, giving it all I've got. That's all right. Masses of people have no right to know me too personally and too well. And they don't. For you have to remember that they don't see me washing my teeth, cold-creaming my face or putting out the cat!

"I suppose," said Livvy, "people may wonder why I don't splinter my young heart to pieces over the handsome men I meet and work with in pictures. I don't because, for one thing, it's work I'm doing. When Errol Flynn and I are doing a love scene on the screen, when he says, 'I love you,' he is thinking of his next line and I am thinking of my next line. We are both hoping we won't go up in them. We're hoping we'll deliver them with the proper inflection and feeling.

"When Errol kisses me on the screen, he's not kissing Olivia De Havilland, he's kissing Lady Marian. When I kiss Errol Flynn on the screen I'm not kissing Errol Flynn, I'm kissing Robin Hood.

"I don't mean that the girls and men who play together in pictures don't like each other a lot. We do. We usually like each other a great deal, enjoy being together, talking together. But we don't often fall in love with each other because love is not on our minds.

"Take some of the famous screen teams," Olivia suggested, "if you want to be convinced that propinquity during the making of a picture has nothing to do with Dan Cupid's blood pressure."

I "took" Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond—and was convinced. For certainly if propinquity on sets, if embraces under the camera's eye does induce the fever called love, then Jeanette would be married to Nelson, not Gene; Gene would be married to Ann, not Jeanette, etc.

"It would be too pat," laughed Olivia. "It would be much too pat for love to walk right into a set where Errol and I were about to go into a clinch. Dan Cupid is too subtle for that.

"Besides, I see so much of men, you know. We all do, working in pictures. Ever think of that? On the set, you know, there are usually three women, the star, the hairdresser, the wardrobe girl. All of the rest are men, producers, directors, members of the crew. We get to know men awfully well. And so, men are not mysterious beings to me. They are fellow human beings, that's all. We don't need men so much. If anything, when I go home at night I want to go home alone. I find that I don't need company of any description. I want to have dinner alone, go to bed alone, have breakfast alone. When I go home that's my real life, you know, that's me."

I said, suspiciously, "Oh, so? And what do you do at home?"

IF she says that she cooks dinner on cook's night out, I thought, reads good books, plays Russian bank with her mother or knits, I'll never talk to her again, but will confine all my future efforts to Hedy (Ecstasy) Lamarr and the Ladies Known As Lou.

But I was saved from that fate. Livvy plays ping-pong—a crashing game. Livvy goes surf-board riding with Billy Bakewell. Livvy and Billy have been twosoming it pretty steadily of late. But it is not, said Livvy loudly, a romance. It is a friendship. "There is such a thing as friendship," declared Olivia. Billy calls Livvy "Little Wall-Eye." Livvy calls Billy "Little Bat-Eye." Livvy also calls Billy "my Booer-Wooer." What this means she doesn't know. She doesn't even know how to spell it. So I've tried. Well, she warned me that she is slightly mad!

"Billy often calls me on the phone and reads philosophy to me by the hour," Olivia said. "Sometimes he comes over carrying stacks of books on philosophy and stacks of strawberry ice cream and we have a wonderful time. Now, there's nothing dreamy about doing things like that.

"I go out with other boys, too, now and then. But I've been going out mostly with Billy these past few months. We do things . . . we have fun."

I said, "But do you ever, well, sort of fix up for a date?"

"Why, yes," considered Olivia, "I suppose I do. If some young man is coming to the house and I know that he likes me I make an effort not to disappoint him, of course. I won't say that I put on the old false eyelashes or wonder what dress to wear, but I do make up—once—and hope to heaven that it will last.

"And I'm trying lately to dress up more when I'm not working. As you have noticed. I've noticed you noticing. Yes, I realize now that I mustn't disappoint the fans who see me as Lady Marian and the others. My business is to maintain their opinion of me. It's lazy and stupid not to.

"It's just that women have come into their own now," said Olivia. "We don't sit around imagining and dreaming. I know that I don't. But when the real thing comes along I'll recognize it. I won't be fooled by appearances, cheated by a deceptive illusion. I don't need a man to lean on. I want a man as a friend, as a lover, as a husband and companion. When love comes along I think I'll be wise enough to take it, for keeps.

"I am sure that it will happen to me," said Olivia, then, "because, as I said before, I am a woman. I can't get away from that. I don't want to."

(Continued from page 83)

some time. Audiences will wonder how two such opposite personalities could have met and married in the first place, a little detail which the above-mentioned scenarists don't even mention. Some of the typical western stuff is good, and the final scene, which kids the Nevada divorce laws, is bright and effective.

Randolph Scott does well by the handsome cowboy husband, and Alan Marshall is splendid as a well-mannered rival for Miss Hampton's hand. Helen Broderick subdues her customary acidity out of respect for the noble traditions of the West. Glenda Farrell plays her wisecracker role with the assurance which comes from having played it often before, and Dave Oliver supplies comic aid as Scott's pal. Spencer Charters stands out in a bit role as a Reno judge. S. Sylvan Simon directed.—Universal.

★★ My Lucky Star

Mr. Zanuck's grown-up Shirley Temple—Sonja Henie—returns again to her screen public, and once more Boy meets Girl, when Girl isn't busy skating. Shiny and cold as the ice on which she performs, Miss Henie is mechanically perfect in her skating routines and perfectly mechanical in her romantic interludes. Audiences, however, do not seem to expect Sonja to be a first-rate dramatic actress. They come to see her skate and they go away pleased, feeling they've had their money's worth. Because of that, little Miss H. is one of the screen's top box-office draws, a phenomenon which Academy Awards winners might well ponder.

This time Sonja goes to college. She's a department store clerk and the store sends her to college with trunks of clothes, hoping with typical movie optimism that she will increase their trade immeasurably. At good old Plymouth, Sonja is doubly fortunate. It seems to be winter all the time there, and Richard Greene is also present. Sonja falls in love with all three—winter, Plymouth and Mr. Greene—and after a barage of college songs and a bit of intrigue involving Cesar Romero (the boss' son) and Louise Hovick, the eventual happy ending arrives.

A lovely "Alice in Wonderland" ballet on skates, the picture's feature number, is beautifully staged, and Sonja's other skating numbers are well done. Richard Greene is an adequate college hero, and Cesar Romero turns in nice comedy as the playboy son of George Barbier, who is excellent as the department store owner. Louise Hovick, much improved over her past performances, makes a small role stand out. Buddy Ebsen and Joan Davis are well matched as a comedy team. Roy Del Ruth directed.—20th Century-Fox.

★★ Three Loves Has Nancy

In this new M-G-M comedy, Robert Montgomery plays a best-selling author who goes on a lecture tour to escape a designing woman. After giving his views on life and love to the ladies of a particularly small town, he meets Nancy (Janet Gaynor), spends the rest of the picture avoiding her, and in the end turns square.

Franchot Tone is involved in the story as Montgomery's bibulous publisher. When Janet Gaynor follows Montgomery to New York, Tone falls in love first with her cooking, then with her own simple self. It is Tone's interest in her that finally awakens Montgomery to her charms.

The comedy is all of a type that you've seen before, but some of it is amusing, and there are one or two really funny scenes. Miss Gaynor gives a good per-

(Continued on page 111)

NOW
Love IS TRUE

Yesterday, romance was distant . . . today, love is singing in her heart. That's because she discovered the secret of allure—the magic fragrance of Blue Waltz Perfume—the haunting, flower-like scent that no man can resist. ¶You, too, can win adoration. Dab the exquisite bouquet of Blue Waltz Perfume on your hair, your throat—and the very air about you will seem transformed by the witchery of your charm. 10c, at 5 and 10c stores.

Blue Waltz

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME • FACE POWDER • LIPSTICK • BRILLIANTINE • COLOGNE

WHEE... A SHINE SURE PEPS YOU UP!

AND IT'S SO EASY WHEN YOU USE THESE GRIFFIN POLISHES

GRIFFIN A. B. C. LIQUID WAX requires no brushing or polishing. Just spread it on . . . it dries to a real shine in a jiffy!

GRIFFIN A. B. C. WAX POLISH in the famous jumbo tin with the easy opener for the nearest thing to a professional shine at home. It's water-repelling!

All Popular Colors

BOTTLE OR CAN 10¢

GRIFFIN
THE GREATEST NAME IN SHOE POLISH

TO INTRODUCE TAYTON'S SILK-SIFTED POWDER

24 KARAT GOLD FINISH
GOOD LUCK CHARM BRACELET

SECRET OF GLAMOUR MAKE-UP FOUND IN SILK-SIFTED POWDER

To introduce TAYTON'S silk-sifted powder this beautiful 24 karat gold finish charm bracelet, with four good luck charms attached—a 24 karat gold finish horse shoe, four leaf clover, wishbone, and bluebird, designed exactly like the exquisite $50.00 bracelet presented to Margaret Lindsay for her great motion picture work, will be sent to the first 10,000 customers who send only 10c and the pink band from around a 10c or 25c box of TAYTON'S silk-sifted face powder—the no-shine powder sifted through silk to a flattering fineness to aid glamorous beauty. Praised by movie stars in Hollywood. Stays on longer—does not cake. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Six new nearest-to-life colors.

Buy a box of TAYTON'S face powder in your 10c store. Tear off the pink band that goes around the box. Mail the pink band and 10c to Tayton Company, Department H, 811 West 7th Street, Los Angeles, California, and you will receive your charm bracelet.

NOTE: If your 10c store is not as yet stocked! speak to the manager—or send your order and money to TAYTON COMPANY, Dept. H. 811 West 7th St., Los Angeles, California.

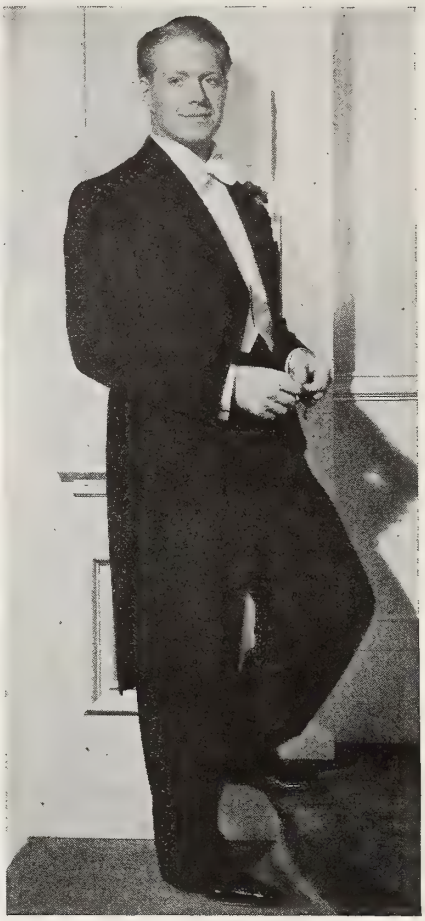
Tested and Approved — 5018 — Good Housekeeping Bureau

TAYTON'S
CREAM-POWDER-LIPSTICK-ROUGE

RUB IN AND INHALE
ZiP
PLASTIK-VAPOR
FOR COLDS
At first sign of a cold, rub on ZiP Plastik-Vapor to help relieve congestion in throat and chest.
Large jar 10¢...extra large jar 25¢
All good 10¢ stores and druggists.

"In spite of constant scrubbing in antiseptics, Frostilla keeps my hands smooth, satiny, refreshed, alive. It dries quickly, never sticky. And I love its fragrance," says nurse! Use Frostilla yourself every time you've had your hands in water. Made with costlier ingredients, you can feel the difference. 35c, 50c, $1.00 sizes in U. S. and Canada. Travel size in better 10c stores.

FROSTILLA
for Lovely Hands



Tested and Approved — 6279 — Good Housekeeping Bureau

ON HOLDING A MAN

BY

LILLIAN GENN

The glamor boys tell you—and they should know—how to keep a lad interested

"Kindness and understanding," claims Nelson Eddy, "will work out any problem."

EVERY YOUNG woman desires to know, not only how to get the right man, but how to keep him in love with her.

If she possesses youth, a slim figure and charm, she can usually win him. But to hold him to their mutual happiness—that is no small task. For a man's love is unpredictable. It must be fought for and cherished.

Today it is made all the more difficult to hold because the modern man is surrounded by attractive women both in his business and in his social life. And the position of wife is no longer a life tenure.

What should a woman do who has captured the man she loves and would like to keep wedding bells ringing? How can she keep alive the flame of their love?

She has gotten much advice from clever women who understand men. But there is no better way to learn than to ask some of Hollywood's most attractive men themselves. For a Hollywood husband is the hardest of all to hold.

The first man whose advice I sought was the popular Fredric March, who has irresistible appeal. I was eager to hear what he would have to say because his union with Florence Eldridge is like the Prince and Princess in the fairy-tale who "were married and lived happily ever after."

"I think," he said, "that the wife who gives fully of her love and devotion will arouse equal love and devotion in her husband. He will continue to be devoted even when the years have changed her. In fact, he won't notice the changes because her inner personality means so much more to him that he isn't conscious of her changed looks.

"I'm always very much amused at the advice given women to look alluring and glamorous for their husbands. Every man naturally wants his wife to look as attractive as possible. But that's never the thing that 'holds' him. One has only to look at the beauties that fill the divorce courts to realize the truth of this.

"It's a thing of the spirit that keeps a man in love. It's nothing that's found in beauty jars or bottles. And a woman who gives love and kindness doesn't have to worry whether she's alluring to her husband and whether she's 'holding' him.

"When you come down to it, no one can really be held," Freddie

FLAMINGO
America's finest
NAIL POLISH

—Easier Application
★ —Wears and WEARS
—New HIGHER lustre

The most exquisite Nail Polish you've ever tried...FLAMINGO, guaranteed Beauty Salon Quality! Use FLAMINGO Nail Polish for the most exacting nail-beauty demands. Choose from FLAMINGO'S 20 glamourous shades!

★ ...now being introduced at better 10¢ stores. ★

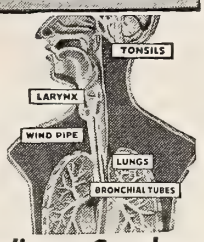
PENNY SINGLETON
Appearing in
"RACKET BUSTERS"
A Warner Bros. Production



FLAMINGO
NAIL POLISH

A3
SPECIAL OFFER! FLAMINGO offers to the women of America a generous sample of this Beauty Salon Quality nail polish for home use! Just send 6c in stamps to cover cost of packing and postage together with this coupon to:
FLAMINGO SALES CO. HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. CLIP THIS COUPON!

COUGHS...

Here's Why You Cough . . .
WHEN YOU CATCH COLD

1 Congestion results and the tiny glands in your throat and windpipe cease to work properly.
2 The secretions of these glands often turn to heavy, clinging phlegm.
3 This sticky phlegm irritates your throat and you cough.

How PERTUSSIN Relieves Coughs—

1 Pertussin stimulates the glands in your throat and windpipe to pour out their natural moisture.
2 Then that sticky, irritating phlegm is loosened, and easily "raised" and expelled.
3 Your throat is soothed and your cough relieved quickly and safely by the Pertussin "Moist-Throat" Method.

QUICK AND EFFECTIVE, AS PROVED BY MILLIONS OF BOTTLES USED

PERTUSSIN YOUR COUGH

WAKE UP
YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c at all drug stores. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

said. "Let one know that someone wants to hold him and he will at once look for an exit. This is true of any relationship in life and particularly of marriage.

"A wife should try to give her husband a completely satisfying companionship. That is what he marries for. To offset loneliness and to have someone responsive to come home to, someone who shares his business cares, his ambitions and his dreams. He wants her to make a pleasant home for him and his children, and not to cloud the relationship with nagging or bickering.

"In short, the woman who is a wife in every sense of the word can forget about holding her man. She won't be able to get rid of him," twinkled Fred.

Leslie Howard and his wife are another couple that are blessed with a fine companionship. They have their mutual interests in the children and in the literary and cultural things of life.

Despite the fact that he is a matinee idol pursued by women, Mr. Howard is essentially a home man and his life centers there. This is indeed a tribute to his wife.

"The woman a man loves," he said to me, "is the one who is gentle, unaffected, liberal-minded and nonpredatory.

"She must be a 'womanly' woman," he went on to explain. "Here I make a distinction between her and the 'womanish' woman. The one who is 'womanly' has a maternal quality combined with what one might call the greatness of her sex—a generosity of soul which makes her big, understanding and, one might almost say, divine.

"The 'womanish' woman is one who stays down on earth. She is tied to her petty feelings and personal prejudices. She has none of the greatness of the other woman. But every woman is a combination of both types, to a greater or lesser degree.

"I don't believe that sex is the most important thing in marriage. Naturally I can speak more positively about the English man. He doesn't marry a woman for her sex appeal or her beauty and she doesn't have to wonder whether she's still able to charm him.

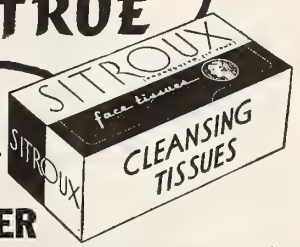
"They get married because they have similar tastes and aims. Each has something to contribute to the marriage. Because their marriage is based on something sound and durable, it grows stronger with the years.

"If a woman takes her marriage obligations seriously and has the qualities I mentioned, she will always have her husband's love and respect."

Gary Cooper has very definite ideas as

The Fredric Marches' marriage is a success.

MAKE YOUR HAIRDRESS
More Alluring



Use
STA-RITE
Blend-Rite* BOB PINS
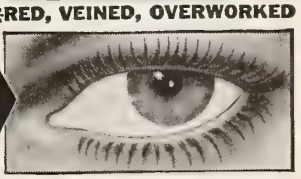
They Blend in!

Ugly, conspicuous bob pins, like a run in your stocking, spoil everything. Don't take a chance. Choose Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins. They blend softly with your lovely hair—give it new allure—added charm. Smoothly finished on the inside, Blend-Rites slide in easily. "Tension-Tite" they hold the hair securely—yet secretly. Four different colors. Insist on Blend-Rite "Glare-Proof" Bob Pins. Sold everywhere. Large card 10¢.

STA-RITE CO., SHELBYVILLE, ILL.

CALL ME SIT-TRUE



STRONGER
MORE ABSORBENT
AT 5 AND 10¢ AND BETTER DEPARTMENT STORES

TIRED EYES

*RED, VEINED, OVERWORKED

CLEAR SOOTHED

EYE SPECIALISTS' FORMULA
ACTS IN SECONDS!

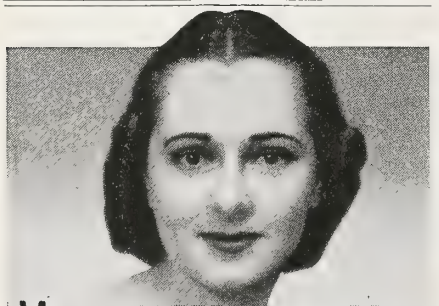
● New way to clear and soothe tired eyes. Eye-Gene acts differently. Contains six ingredients—one which clears red, veined, bloodshot eyes (*due to fatigue, late hours, glare, driving, etc.). 2 drops soothe, refresh tired, dull eyes like extra hour's sleep. Good Housekeeping approved. At drug, dept. and 10c stores.

EYE-GENE Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

You can change their appearance almost overnight. Just try a jar of Barrington Hand Cream. It is the complete answer to your difficulties. Ask your local drug store or Syndicate 5 and 10 Store for it. Barrington Hand Cream is a Nadco quality product.

Barrington HAND CREAM

NORTH AMERICAN DYE CORPORATION
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.



REPAIR THINGS!

Toys, Books
Furniture
China, Wood
Glassware
Paper, Tile
Porcelain

10¢ At Hardware, Drug & 10c. Stores

BOUGHT BY MILLIONS EVERYWHERE

MERCOLIZED Wax CREAM KEEPS YOUR SKIN Young Looking

Mercolized Wax Cream flakes off the surface skin in tiny, invisible particles. Reveals the clear, soft, smooth, young looking underskin. This simple, all-in-one cleansing, softening and beautifying cream has been a favorite for over a quarter century with lovely women the world over. Bring out the hidden beauty of your skin with Mercolized Wax Cream.

Use Saxolite Astringent Daily

THIS tingling, antiseptic astringent is delightfully refreshing and helpful. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and apply.

Try Phelactine Depilatory

For quickly removing superfluous hair from face.

Sold at cosmetic counters everywhere.

to what keeps a man in love.

"If a woman is tolerant of her husband's habits and faults, if she's willing to overlook little things and not magnify them, she will keep her husband in love with her forever," he insists.

"A wife should have a fair knowledge of housekeeping so that the home runs smoothly," he further specified. "She shouldn't be too vitally concerned with entertaining people and giving parties. A man who has been working hard all day doesn't always want to have people in his home. Nor does he want to be going out on a round of pleasure.

"I like a woman who is appreciative of the things done for her, who has a sense of humor and who doesn't nag. Nagging, to me, is one of the big sins of married life and is responsible for more divorces than any major offense.

"A man also seeks in a wife a certain calmness and understanding that will allow him to relax after business hours by merely being in her presence. He likes to get sympathy from her and to be petted when he is in trouble. He wants her to take an interest in his work and to know something about it so that she can give an opinion.

"He desires her co-operation in other things, too—in sports or in the hobbies or in any other interest he pursues. He wants her to be ready and eager to be with him. Whether in work or in play, the ideal wife is always a pal."

NELSON EDDY expressed surprise at the question when he was approached. He didn't see why there need be any speculation as to what holds a man.

"It's very simple," he said with an engaging grin. "It's kindness and understanding.

"Married life can't always be smooth. There are times when jealousy and doubt will appear. Kindness and understanding will help to work out these problems as well as any others that arise.

"Jealousy, mistrust and excessive vanity destroy love very quickly. On the other hand, I think that too much love is probably the worst enemy of love. There's nothing more terrible than that stifling attention of someone constantly around your neck."

Mr. Eddy agrees with the other men of Hollywood that it's important for the woman to make herself an essential part of her husband's life.

"She should be his companion in every enterprise. The wife is foolish who doesn't realize that every man has to have some woman to whom he can tell the things he would never tell a man, some woman to whom he can boast of his triumphs and who sympathizes over his disappointments and blighted hopes. Some woman who encourages him and who restores his faith in himself and gives him the courage to go on. That is why a wife should take an interest in her husband's work and be his best friend and pal.

"But," he added, "she shouldn't discourage him when he wants to get away with other men. There are times when a man wants to change to the companionship of men. Then he returns to her with renewed pleasure and interest."

According to Ronald Colman many a woman loses her husband because she tries to make him over.

"By the time a man marries, his habits are formed and his tastes set. A woman should accept them as they are and not try to change them.

"I think that tolerance of his tastes and idiosyncrasies is the secret of keeping his love. To my mind it would make a dull and boring married life if the husband and wife thought and felt alike and had the same tastes and desires.

Ronald Colman says not to try to make a man over.

"The wife who is easy to get along with will never lose her husband to any other woman. It's the one who is critical, who always complains and is dissatisfied who turns her husband from her. A man gets plenty of hard knocks in the outside world. A wife doesn't have to add to them by finding fault with him.

"A wife should praise her husband and make herself his most ardent admirer. If she feeds his ego," smiled Ronnie, "she will keep him at her fireside."

Richard Dix advises the woman to cultivate her sense of humor and to learn to laugh at things.

"A man wants peace and quiet and gayety in his home after a day's work. My wife realizes that my work puts me under a mental strain. When I come home, she sees to it that I forget work. She talks about other things, gives me a lot of attention. In that way it helps to shut the door to the work-a-day world.

"She never tells me what to do. She makes some casual suggestion and because I know she's interested in me, I'm inclined to weigh it. We have splendid times together because we like the same things. We enjoy books, the theatre, sports and home life. We love travelling and we love being on our ranch. My wife isn't socially ambitious, and although she's pretty, she doesn't want a movie career. Instead she's making a good home for our twin sons and me. That's why my home has become my greatest interest."

Paul Lukas believes that the secret of the whole business is to make the same effort after marriage as before the wedding knot was tied. For love has to be earned. No one is automatically bound to love you.

"Naturally," he pointed out, "love can't thrive if the woman lets down after marriage. A man will fall in love with a woman because of her gayety or her sympathy, her admiring and looking up to him. He likes her daintiness and grace and her lovely figure.

"After marriage she changes and the man finds as a life partner a woman he never selected. You can't blame him if he feels cheated. The woman should do the things she did before marriage. She should keep carrying on romance just as though she weren't married to him. In that way she won't make the mistake of relaxing all effort. She will try to be pleasant and agreeable and interesting, and discover it to be worth-while."

Do you get "poodle permanents"? Hair all frizzy? Brittle, dry hair is usually the cause. You can overcome this by a simple home treatment. First, stop using all alkaline, sudsing chemicals. Instead try proved oil and scalp tonic treatment. Try Admiracion Soapless Shampoo. It not only cleans the hair safely and thoroughly but does not steal the natural scalp oils that keep your hair strong, elastic and healthy. Easy to use, Admiracion is a beauty treatment approved by thousands of beauticians. If you'd like to have a sample, send three 3-cent stamps. ADMIRACION LABORATORIES, HARRISON, N. J.

TYPEWRITER ½ Price

Easy Terms
Only 10c a Day

Save over ½ Mfg.'s Orig. Price on all standard up-to-date office models.

SEND NO MONEY

Sensational saving on all late models completely refinished like new. FULLY GUARANTEED. Big Free Catalog shows all makes in full colors. Send post-card for lowest prices.

10-day Trial

SPECIAL PORTABLE BARGAINS—

Brand New FEATHERWEIGHT—Latest Model Portable—up-to-date streamline features—now offered at amazing low price. Fully Guaranteed—10 day trial—only 10c a day. Full details sent free!

Free course in typing included.

International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 1161 Chicago

STOP Scratching

RELIEVE ITCHING SKIN Quickly

Even the most stubborn itching of eczema, blotches, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other externally caused skin eruptions, quickly yields to cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION. Easy to use. Dries fast. Clear, greaseless and stainless. Soothes the irritation and quickly stops the most intense itching. A 35c trial bottle, at all drug stores, proves it—or your money back. Ask for D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION.

Back Pain and Kidney Strain

Wrong foods and drinks, worry, overwork and colds often put a strain on the Kidneys and functional kidney disorders may be the true cause of Excess Acidity, Getting Up Nights, Burning Passages, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Dizziness, Swollen Ankles, Rheumatic Pains, and Puffy Eyelids. Help your kidneys purify your blood with Cystex. Usually the very first dose starts helping your kidneys clean out excess acids and this soon may make you feel like new again. Under the money-back guarantee Cystex must satisfy completely or cost nothing. Get Cystex (siss-tex) today. It costs only 3c a dose at druggists and the guarantee protects you.

DIETING TO REDUCE CAN BE FUN

Diet plus exercise is the safe, sensible way to remove excess fat. Now at last, there's an aid to make dieting easier . . . more fun!

New DEXDIET consists of liberal diet, daily walks and energy-food lozenges to be enjoyed between meals. Has proved easy and effective for many. Clinic records of 1500 men and women show real reductions in 65 cases out of every 100.

DEXDIET now offered under no-risk-to-you Money Back Guarantee so that YOU, too, can discover whether you are one of the happy lucky "65!" Mrs. W. P. of Earnest, Pa. writes: "I've lost 14 lbs. since I started your method. I have never found anything like it for reducing."

DOCTORS! Write for special Physicians' Bulletin "C"

7 DAYS' TRIAL Are YOU one of the lucky "65!" Find out. Be sensible about reducing. WRITE TODAY. . Just say: "Send FREE sample and details of no-risk trial offer.

DEXDIET, Inc., Dept. D-31, 360 N. Michigan, Chicago

(Continued from page 107)

formance in the outmoded role of a sincere Pollyanna, Montgomery plays his usual suave man-about-town without apparent effort, and Franchot Tone manages to get in a few touches of light comedy which may surprise his followers. Guy Kibbee is entirely wasted, being assigned hardly ten short speeches in the pitcure. Charley Grapewin, as Miss Gaynor's grandfather, is outstanding in the supporting cast.

Producer Norman Krasna deserves credit for attempting a story different from Hollywood's run-of-the-mill product, even though his effort is not entirely successful. Richard Thorpe directed.—M-G-M.

★★ Crime Over London

Here is an amusing yarn concerning the manner in which Scotland Yard might deal with a band of 'so-called' American gangsters. It will probably prove a box-office success, as it contains well-known ingredients for pleasing Mr. and Mrs. Average Movie-goer. There is plenty of action, suspense, thrills and the usual love interest.

The story concerns the Silver Anniversary of Sherman's Department Store. When a member of the gang spots Joseph Cawthorn as the shop owner's double, the fun begins. The gangsters plan to use this as a means to effect their big haul. However, there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip and therein lies the suspense. Bruce Lister, nephew of the concern, is in love with Rene Ray, who goes to work for her future uncle-in-law. To make Bruce jealous, she flirts with Inspector Paul Cavanagh, which brings the law into the picture. After reels of tense excitement, Cavanagh manages to capture Basil Sydney and his gang, and all's well that ends well.—G-B.

★★ Strange Boarders

The prolific G-B gives us another of those mystery melodramas. This one, however, is far superior to those of the past and will no doubt reap rich returns for it's producers.

A pleasant surprise is a new and completely charming Miss, apparently hailing from la belle France—Renee Saint-Cyr. In fact, we think you'll be hearing more of her very soon.

This is a saga in which we glimpse the Intelligence Service solving a major problem of national importance. With the sudden death of an old lady, police discover that military secrets via photostats are being stolen. As the picture unreels we see Tom Walls, forced to abandon his bride on their wedding night. There are moments when apparently all is lost, but by the last reel Walls, with the aid of the fire department, surrounds and captures the criminals. At last bride and groom can safely look forward to that belated honeymoon, so everyone's happy.—G-B.

★★ Drums

Following an old formula, G-B gives us our second glance at their young star, Sabu. In this one, however, they have missed an excellent opportunity to turn out a really great picture. With the colorful background of the Northwest Frontier of India it seems conceivable that they could keep things going at a lively pace. Scenically, the picture is without reproach, the color enhancing the beauty and naturalness of the majestic mountains of India.

The story deals with tribal wars, headed by the villainous Raymond Massey, who shoots his own brother to gain his throne. Sabu escapes his uncle's dastardly plans for his untimely end and remains in hiding

(Continued on page 114)

GIVE YOUR LAZY LIVER THIS GENTLE "NUDGE"

FOLLOW NOTED DOCTOR'S ADVICE. FEEL "TIP-TOP" IN MORNING!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—headaches, constipation and that "half-alive" feeling often result.

So step up that liver bile and see how much better you should feel. Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients troubled with constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Made from purely vegetable ingredients—Olive Tablets are harmless, non-habit-forming. They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods, but also help to keep you regular. Get a box TODAY. 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All drugstores.

Dr. Edwards' OLIVE TABLETS

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin Arms Legs

Happy! I had ugly hair . . . was unloved . . . discouraged. Tried many different products . . . even razors. Nothing was satisfactory. Then I developed a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked. I have helped thousands win beauty, love, happiness. My FREE book, "How to Overcome the Superfluous Hair Problem", explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mme. Annette Lanzette, P. O. Box 4040, Merchandise Mart, Dept. 477, Chicago.

Rheumatism Relieve Pain In Few Minutes

To relieve the torturing pain of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia or Lumbago in few minutes, get NURITO, the Doctor's formula. No opiates, no narcotics. Does the work quickly—must relieve worst pain to your satisfaction in few minutes or money back at Druggist's. Don't suffer. Get trustworthy NURITO today on this guarantee.

DON'T HESITATE ABOUT FEMININE HYGIENE

USE THIS GREASELESS METHOD

Now there's a modern method that is GREASELESS! And it kills germs. It's amazing how safe to use (free from "burn" danger, no harmful drugs) and convenient this method is! No greasy base to melt or run! So easy to use and dainty! You get Zonitors at all drug stores in U. S. and Canada. $1 for box of 12—only 8½¢ each. They're small, snow-white and deodorizing. For informative FREE booklet, sent in plain envelope, write to Zonitors, 4109 Chrysler Bldg., New York City.

Zonitors FOR FEMININE HYGIENE a Zonite Product

New Under-arm
Cream Deodorant
safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses—does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration.
4. A pure white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering, for being Harmless to Fabrics.

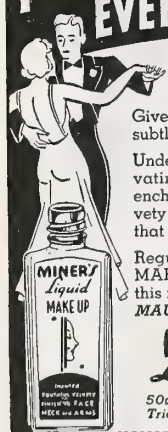
TEN MILLION jars of Arrid have been sold. Try a jar today!

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS
(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

Your mirror tells!



SPEARMINT
TOOTH PASTE
W. W. Wrigley
TRADE MARK REG U.S. PAT. OFF.
Buy a large tube at 5 & 10c stores
10¢

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove superfluous hair privately at home, following directions with ordinary care and skill. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again by killing the hair root. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for illustrated Booklet, "How to Remove Superfluous Hair Forever." D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36N, Providence, R. I.

For YOU! ... New EVENING ALLURE

Heavy date? Dress up with MAUVE, the new evening shade of MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP. Gives you that movie star glamour and subtle allure that inspires romance.

Under soft evening lights, this captivating new shade lends irresistible enchantment to your skin. Imparts velvety smoothness and radiant beauty that needs no retouching.

Regular users of MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP can't afford to be without this new boon to evening beauty! Try MAUVE tonight!

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

50¢ at all drug and department stores. Trial size at 10¢ counters or mail coupon.

MAUVE . . . . ☐
PEACH . . . . ☐
RACHELLE . . ☐
BRUNETTE . . ☐
SUNTAN . . . ☐

MINER'S, 40 E. 20th St., Dept. D11, New York, N.Y.
Enclosed find 10¢ for trial bottle of Miner's Liquid Make-Up.
Name_____
Address_____
Check shade desired!

ALL JOKING ASIDE

Here's Jack before he met Gym. There was plenty to Oakie then.

After Mr. O. found lamb chops and pineapple. A mere shadow, eh?

BY LOIS SVENSRUD

YOU CAN have a lot of fun piling up the poundage," said Jack Oakie, "but you can't laugh it off. Believe me, streamlining the chassis is serious business.

"How did I get started? Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said 'Am I getting a pot-belly'? And the answer in my case was obvious. I could be seen coming through a door three feet before the final Oakie appeared. Besides, Venita had said just once too often 'Sure I love you, honey. Everyone loves a fat man'. Now, being a studio laughing-stock is okay by me—but a man has his pride. It was just about time to start something anyhow. They were beginning to bill Oakie pictures as double features.

"Yeah, it was serious business," Jack said. "And of course," he added reflectively, "since I weighed two hundred and ten pounds it was hardly a matter to be taken lightly. Reducing's no fun for anyone around you, either. I tried it, that first week, at home. Each day experimenting with a different trick Hollywood diet—and stalking around like a starved cannibal with a missionary in mind. Under strain of trying to keep my appetite down and my spirits up, Venita, who's desperate to gain, was slowly dissolving before my eyes. And since Jack could eat no fat, his wife no lean, the cook was going quietly mad juggling menus. Then I stepped on the scales at the end of the week. I'd gained eight ounces! That was my cue. I took off to a sanatorium where I could pay to have my worrying done for me. And that," said Jack, with a look of remembered sorrow, "is the place to lose weight.

"In less than two months they'd peeled off forty-five pounds of fat—excess avoirdupois to be as fancy as the price. A cinch? Nope, you've got me wrong. Life was real, life was earnest to those guys—and one hundred and fifty pounds was my goal. I didn't have a minute to call my own. My trainer woke me at six, walked me for eight miles before breakfast, and then no breakfast. A couple of fast sets of tennis followed and then it was the masseuse's turn at me. Followed a lunch of lettuce salad and a spoonful of cottage cheese to take the curse off it. By that time I was ready for a nap—but not on your life! My other trainer was ready for eighteen holes of golf (my morning trainer, exhausted, was having a nap). For relaxation after this bout I was allowed a half-mile swim in the pool followed by a quick work-out on the rowing machine and a two mile dash around the lake on my bicycle. Came dinner, a tasty meal of lean meat and a variety of greens. The fastest road to svelte lines is a diet of green stuff, according to the head doctor who'd evidently never seen an elephant. Well, after that orgy, both trainers would race Inmate No. 17435, otherwise known as yours truly, to his cabin. I'd fall into deep slumber, too intimidated to even dream of a baked potato. I was beginning to wonder if half an Oakie wouldn't be better than none when the boys (Continued on page 114)

Believe it or not, half an Oakie is twice as funny as the former blown-up version, you will agree ★ Genuine milk-oils . . . resembling natural human skin oils . . . bring amazingly quick results. Get this all-purpose creme at department, drug, & 10¢ stores and beauty shops.

DUART

CREME OF MILK CREME

CONTAINS MILK-OILS BLENDED WITH OTHER OILS

300 CLASS & CLUB PINS SHOWN IN BASTIAN'S FREE 1939 CATALOG!

19 PCES 41 30

BIGGEST SELECTION, low prices, traditional Bastian quality—the combination that has kept Bastian out in front for 44 years. Clean cut work distinguishes Bastian Pins and Rings anywhere. Write for this new catalog today!

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 50, Rochester, N.Y. $1.00

NOW! Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

So natural they even have half-moons.

NEW! Smart, long tapering nails for everyone! Cover broken, short, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Can be worn any length and polished any desired shade. Defies detection. Waterproof. Easily applied; remains firm. No effect on nail growth or cuticle. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c. All 5c and 10 stores

NU-NAILS ARTIFICIAL FINGER NAILS

4042 W. Lake St., Chicago

Many Never SUSPECT Cause of Backaches

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

(Continued from page 17)

GARDEN OF THE MOON

John Quinn runs a night club called Garden of the Moon for the McGillicuddy brothers, who are so thrifty that they recite a rhyme concerning economy. John imagines that his press agent, lovely Toni Blake, is his for the asking. Then Don Vincente, a handsome orchestra leader, steps into the night club and the affairs of John and Toni. John makes things hot for his rival, but, after a series of obstacles and misunderstandings, Toni and Don get together.

* * *

MEN WITH WINGS

The time, pictorially, is 1914, and Louise Campbell, Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland have built a plane. As a result, an aircraft manufacturer signs Fred and Ray to work in his factory. Fred soon becomes bored and joins the Lafayette Escadrille. Louise, whose father works on a newspaper, joins an ambulance unit and marries Fred. Several years later, Fred starts an airplane factory and makes Ray manager. In 1936, Fred has gone to fight in China and is killed. And so, Ray and Louise, left alone, start a new life together.

* * *

AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE

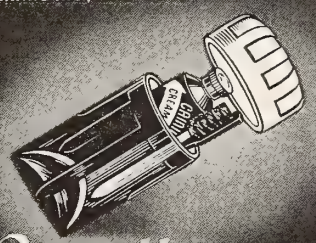
Dr. Clitterhouse (Edward G. Robinson) is discovered at his hospital with stolen jewels. He explains his robbery as "scientific research." He gets rid of the loot through a "fence," and, impressed with his ability, a group of gangsters offer him partnership. They arrive at a fur house for a last robbery when one of the gang, jealous of Clitterhouse, shuts him in a vault. The doctor, using an instrument, miraculously escapes, is arrested, finally acquitted and wins Jo (Claire Trevor).

* * *

TIME OUT FOR MURDER

Helen Thomas sits in a glass booth in New York's telephone office, giving the correct time in fifteen-minute intervals to all who call her number. Johnny, her beau, who is a bank messenger, stops by en route to Peggy Norton's, where he is to pick up jewelry to be deposited in the bank's vault. Shortly after Johnny leaves Peggy's, she is killed. The murder is pinned on him. Later, through calling Helen for the correct time and using that special phone number, the real criminal is indirectly brought to justice.

For more synopses for this $250,000.00 Quiz Contest see November SCREEN ROMANCES Now on Sale and December MODERN SCREEN on Sale Nov. 1st



Mrs. Patric Knowles with young Michael Patric.

DO YOUR EYES HAVE HOT CHA

Come Hither Appeal

There's ALLURE . . . in eyes mysteriously shadowed by long lustrous eyelashes. Make your lashes look silky, long and dark with the wonderful new Camille Cream Mascara. In its attractive plastic purse Vanity, Camille Cream Mascara can be safely carried with you, to be used any time of the day or night. Ask for Camille Cream Mascara, complete with Vanity—10c at department, drug and 5 & 10c stores. Black, Brown or Blue. Camille Inc., New York.

Camille CREAM MASCARA Complete with Vanity 10c

Don't Aggravate Gas Bloating

If your GAS BLOATING is caused by constipation don't expect to get the relief you seek by just doctoring your stomach. What you need is the DOUBLE ACTION of Adlerika. This 35-year-old remedy is BOTH carminative and cathartic. Carminatives that warm and soothe the stomach and expel GAS. Cathartics that act quickly and gently, clearing the bowels of wastes that may have caused GAS BLOATING, headaches, indigestion, sour stomach and nerve pressure for months. Adlerika does not gripe—is not habit forming. Adlerika acts on the stomach and BOTH bowels. It relieves STOMACH GAS almost at once, and often removes bowel wastes in less than two hours. Adlerika has been recommended by many doctors for 35 years. Get the genuine Adlerika today.

Sold at all drug stores

JEWELED WRIST WATCH FREE OF ANY EXTRA CHARGE. SMART! TINY! RICH!

Simulated diamonds set in Lifetime Sterling (U.S.Govt. Standard) Rich 1/30, 14k Gold.

1939 Queen Quality Watch. Dial Small as a Dime. Jeweled. Accuracy Guarantee enclosed.

WATCH is yours FREE of any extra charge with every ring ordered during SALE and paid for promptly on our easy two monthly $2 payment plan (total only $4). Remember, the cost of the watch is included in the price of the ring ... YOU PAY NOTHING EXTRA for the Watch! Wear 10 days ON APPROVAL! Send NO Money with order! We trust you. Mail coupon now. We pay postage. Your package comes at once by return mail.

GOLD STANDARD WATCH CO., Dept. T-3211, Newton, Mass.
Rush offer. ☐ Ladies' Model ☐ Men's Model

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

● No—we're not stating you'll want to swim the English Channel, BUT—

If you don't agree that FEEN-A-MINT is tops for restoring the normal pep and sunshine that constipation takes out of life—back comes your money! FEEN-A-MINT, as millions young and old already know, is today's way to combat constipation. It's modern. It's different. It's easy. And so effective! Imagine—you get all its splendid benefits simply by chewing this swell-tasting gum. No wonder folks say: "Why, it seems like magic!" See for yourself—get FEEN-A-MINT now!

FEEN-A-MINT

Tastes like your favorite chewing gum!

"Are You a Hidden Beauty?" Read Dec. MODERN SCREEN

GUARD YOUR HAIR

USE Lucky Tiger

Get Rid of Dandruff

GET rid of dandruff before it gets your hair. Lucky Tiger is your best friend. It cleans up the dandruff and stops that miserable itching. Costs little at druggists, barbers or 10¢ stores.

Sensational FREE Offer!

SEND COUPON FOR 3 LIPSTICKS AND 2 FLAME-GLO ROUGE COMPACTS

It's our treat! Let us send you 3 full trial sizes of the famous REJUVIA Lipsticks "None Better Made" FREE...each in a different fascinating shade, so you can discover the color most becoming to you. To introduce our newest achievement, we will also send you two new shades of Flame-Glo Dry Rouge Compacts, each complete with its own puff. You'll like the creamy smooth texture that gives a natural, youthful glow to your cheeks...that stays on because it clings! Just send 10c in stamps to cover mailing costs. For beauty's sake, send Coupon TODAY!

REJUVIA LIPSTICK

REJUVIA BEAUTY LABS.
DEPT. N7, 116 W. 14th ST., N.Y.C.
Send me 3 trial size REJUVIA Lipsticks and 2 FLAME-GLO Rouge Compacts; enclosed find 10c (Stamps or Coin) for mailing costs (15c in Canada).

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

ONLY 10¢ AT LEADING 5 & 10¢ STORES

(Continued from page 112)

suddenly told me they'd shown me the way and now I was on my own.

FREEDOM! Home I went and started breaking over—you know, cream in the coffee, butter on the toast and similar major vices. Woops, up went the scales! It's an insidious thing, this poundage. So back I went to the 'regime' even to buying that rack of torture, a rowing machine. At the point I could take on the Yale crew single-handed. And as a result there's fifteen fewer pounds hanging on the frame.

"Worth it?" Jack beamed. "Say, the glamor boys around town are giving me the wary eye, and in all due modesty I might add that I hear Slim Summerville's now watching his calories. And say! the day I returned to the studio was worth it alone. Hadn't been around the place for three months, you see. One of the prop boys stopped me, grabbed my hand and said, 'Well, well, it's a pleasure to meet you. I knew your father and he was a nice man, too'. The biggest director on the lot rushed up, 'Oakie,' he says, 'with that tantalizing torso we could make a Tyrone Taylor out of you. The only, absolutely only, condition he made was that I do something equally drastic to my face. And at home, let me tell you it was worth it. I had the laugh on the little woman. Venita's been after me for over a year to throw away a closet full of old clothes. Old, sure, and didn't fit. But still good, you know. Well, now I can wear them—won't have to buy a new stitch.

"I'm going to keep on wearing them, too. I'm still serious about the whole thing. You have to be. If I don't know anything else, I know now that reducing's about as permanent as a bath. The only sure way to keep in under control is by exercise, massage and diet. At the risk of Oakie going biblical I repeat, 'Exercise, Massage and Diet—and the greatest of these is Diet.' Come to think of it, Faith Hope and Charity thrown in wouldn't hurt. And that," said Jack, "is the story of how I got down to 150 pounds.

"150 pounds," he repeated complacently. So complacently, in fact, that it bordered on smugness. Which prompted an inquiry as to whether that was the least he'd ever weighed. "No," admitted Jack, "nine pounds, four ounces."

(Continued from page 111)

until he can claim his rightful place. As his friends, Roger Livesey and Valerie Hobson brave losing their lives for the sake of an empire, only to be saved in the nick of time by young Sabu. With Massey out of the way, our young Prince ascends the throne and all live happily ever after.

As the British Captain and his wife, Raymond Massey and Valerie Hobson give credible and believable performances. Sabu is charming and improves with each of his assignments. Raymond Massey comes through with his usual professional villain and does it excellently. Desmond Tester and his supporting cast turn in good characterizations. But as for the film in its entirety, well, it's the pace that kills—or the lack of it! Even the best comedy lines are repeated so often that they lose their humor. Why the director permitted this is a mystery, but then perhaps we are just as mysterious in our tastes to our English cousins. Directed by Zoltan Korda. —Gaumont-British.

The "Dead End" kids: standing, Gabriel Dell, Huntz Hall, Billy Halop; sitting, Bernard Punsley, and Bobby Jordan.

NOW!

Starch clothes perfectly every time with STALEY'S STARCH CUBES

Staley's

Save ironing time, too!

Here's laundry Starch in convenient, exact-measure CUBES. Easy to use. Gives clothes smooth surface, no lumps—no streaks—women say it cuts ironing time ⅓. Next washday, use Staley's Starch CUBES and avoid needless fatigue and vexation.

GET IT AT YOUR GROCER'S
A. E. Staley Mfg. Co., Decatur, Ill.

GIVEN! TO YOU! Send No Money. 7-jewel Movement WRIST WATCH. Or big cash commission. YOURS for SIMPLY GIVING AWAY FREE Pictures with famous WHITE CLOVERINE SALVE, used for burns, chaps, etc., sold to friends at 25c a box (with picture FREE) and remitting per catalog. FREE GIFTS. Be First. Write today for order of Salve, etc. WILSON CHEM. CO., Inc., Dept. 10-LW, TYRONE, PA.

LADIES and GIRLS

BUY! Engel Pocket Art Corners

The real thing for mounting Snapshots, Cards, Stamps, etc. No paste needed. Neat, easy to use for mounting prints tight or loose. Sold at photo supply and album counters or send 10¢ today for pkg. of 100 and free samples.

10¢ BUYS 100

Engel Art Corners Co., Chicago, Ill., Address Dept. 63L 4717 North Clark St.

ACTUAL SIZE

ASTHMA?

"If you are sick and tired of gasping and struggling for breath—tired of sitting up night after night losing much needed rest and sleep, write me at once for a FREE trial of the medicine that gave me relief. I suffered agony for nearly six years. Now I have no more spells of choking, gasping and wheezing and sleep sound all night long. Write today for a FREE trial. Your name and address on a post card will bring it by return mail." O. W. Dean, President, Free Breath Products Company, Dept. 1351-C, Benton Harbor, Mich., or Toronto, Ont.

Here's Amazing Relief For Acid Indigestion

YES—TUMS a remarkable discovery brings amazing quick relief from indigestion, heartburn, sour stomach, gas, and burning caused by excess acid. For TUMS work on the true basic principle. Act unbelievably fast to neutralize excess acid conditions. Acid pains are relieved almost at once. TUMS are guaranteed to contain no soda. Are not laxative. Contain no harmful drugs. Over 2 billion TUMS already used—proving their amazing benefit. Try TUMS today. Only 10c for 12 TUMS at all druggists. Most economical relief. Chew like candy mints. Get a handy 10c roll today.

You never know when or where

ALWAYS CARRY

EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS 10¢ STOMACH DISTRESS 10¢ A ROLL FOR ACID INDIGESTION

Tums are anti-acid—not laxative. When you need a laxative get—Nature's Remedy NR-TABLETS-NR This all vegetable laxative brings such gentle, dependable relief for conditions due to constipation.

(Continued from page 105)

acre estate in the Uplifters' Canyon, Santa Monica. Leo reads prolifically, has written volumes of poetry, speaks Spanish, Italian, French and English as well as a little Chinese and Japanese. He is a versatile athlete, is famous for his outdoor barbecues, and is a recognized authority on California history. His real name is Leo Antonio Carrillo. He is five feet ten inches tall, weighs one hundred eighty pounds, and has brown eyes and black hair. "Little Miss Roughneck," and "City Streets," were his two most recent pictures. You may address him in care of Columbia Studio, Hollywood, California.

W. J. McBroom, Medford, Okla., Dick Foran is his real name. He was born in Flemington, N. J., attended prep school and Princeton University. He is six feet two inches tall, weighs two hundred five pounds, has red hair and blue eyes.

Sarah Chapin, Lewisburg, Pa. Joan Davis was born in St. Paul, Minn., and has been acting ever since she was three years old. Her real name is Josephine Davis. She's happily married and has a three year old daughter. Her last picture was "Josette." Her next will be "My Lucky Star." Joan is five feet five inches tall, weighs one hundred twenty pounds, has red brown hair and green eyes. She is an expert bowler, swimmer and horsewoman. Address her in care of 20th Century-Fox, Hollywood, Cal.

Ruth Gehrig, Waco, Texas. A brief biography of Nelson Eddy appeared in this section of the August Modern Screen. A story appeared in April 1938, a portrait in July, and there will be another story soon.

A. Wing, Toronto, Canada. Walter Pidgeon was born in East St. John, New Brunswick, Can. September 23, 1897. He is six feet, two inches tall, weighs one hundred ninety pounds, has black hair and gray eyes. His hobbies are golf and music. He began his professional career with Elsie Janis in "At Home." He appeared in vaudeville, and made phonograph records before entering the movies.

Marguerite Balzer—Moberly, Mo. Louis Hayward is his own name. His first picture was "Sorrell and Son," made in England in 1935. The "Flame Within" was his first American picture.

Dorothy McNutt, Detroit, Mich. Edward Arnold was born in New York February 18, 1890. He made his stage debut in "The Jazz Singer," with Al Jolson. He has been in movies since 1933.

Nancy Carter, Elbow Beach, Bermuda. Craig Reynolds was born in Anaheim, California, a distant descendant of the Jay Gould family and the Enfields of rifle fame. His father is a school principal and Craig's real name is Hugh Enfield. He is six feet two inches tall, weighs one hundred eighty pounds, has gray eyes and black hair. His hobbies are deep-sea fishing and airplane modeling. Two of his recent pictures were "Under Suspicion," and "Making the Headlines." Address him in care of Columbia Studios, Hollywood, Cal.

Solution to Puzzle on Page 76

		D	O	N		A	M	E	C	H	E		E	L	S	A
		B	E	L	A		L	A	M	O	U	R		R	O	U	T	S
G	L	A	D	Y	S		N	I	L	E		A	S	S	E	R	T	S
R	A	N		S	A	L		L	B		A	R	E	T		I	R	A
E	R	N	E		M	A	Y		E	L	L	E	N		R	U	I	N
Y	E	A	R	N		C	A	R	R	O	L	L		L	A	M	P	S
			S	E	W		P	E	T	T	Y		L	A	Y
M	A	R		W	O	E						C	I	D		G	A	R
E	L	L	I	S	O	N						E	N	S	L	A	V	E
L	I	O	N		L	A						S	D		E	V	E	N
E	A	R	N	E	S	T						A	S	T	A	I	R	E
E	S	E		D	E	E						R	A	H		N	Y	E
			A	N	Y		B	O	L	E	S		Y	E	T
M	A	R	L	A		K	E	N	O	S	H	A		N	O	R	M	A
A	L	O	E		W	I	S	E	R		E	N	D		M	O	O	N
R	I	N		R	A	N	T		E	C		N	O	R		B	I	N
S	C	A	L	I	N	G		U	T	A	H		C	A	M	E	R	A
		E	L	I	T	E		A	S	T	R	I	D		P	A	R	E
			D	E	A	D		R	E	A	L	T	Y		S	E	T

WHITE ROUGE

WHAT IS IT? An entirely new rouge whose color changes right on your cheeks . . . to the one warm, natural shade that glamorously flatters your individual complexion.

WHAT IT DOES: Instead of coating your cheeks as ordinary rouges do, White Rouge tints only the oils. Heightens natural skin-tone and gives cheeks a clearer, vibrant color . . . so life-like, it's mysterious!

WHAT IT MEANS: The correct shade of rouge though you are blonde, brunette or red-haired. One exquisite rouge for every costume . . . so amazingly adhering it lasts a full day. Marvelously waterproof, too!

Try White Rouge just once—you'll adore it always! Leading department and drug stores, 50c

10c size at most ten-cent stores

WHITE ROUGE
The Self-Blending Rouge

Clark-Millner Co., Dept. 30-M, 666 St. Clair St., Chicago
Please send me a box of White Rouge. I enclose 10c. (U. S. A. only.)

Name ..... Town .....
Address ..... State .....

NEW...SIMPLE PRODUCT FOR Feminine Hygiene

LYGENES...when your doctor advises feminine hygiene . . . a dainty, white, antiseptic suppository; ready for instant use . . . melts promptly at internal body temperature, to form a soothing antiseptic film . . . freshly scented; no other odor . . . individually sealed; untouched by human hands until you open . . . scientifically prepared by the makers of "Lysol" disinfectant . . . box of 12, with full directions, $1.00.

LYGENES

A product of the makers of "Lysol".

Copr. 1938 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp., Bloomfield, N. J.

Tyrone Power steps out with his best gal friend, his mother.

(Continued from page 66)

Dorothy Lamour, who, attired only in a yard of cloth, has worked in her studio's deepest jungles with everything from leopards to crocodiles, has suddenly gone prissy on us—and just when we were beginning to admire her as a symbol of everything fine and rugged in womankind. The disturbing note turns up in a paragraph about the filming of Miss Lamour's latest venture, "Spawn of the North." Concerning a seal named Slicker, the paragraph said, "Smelling of his favorite food—fish—Slicker had to be doused with eau de cologne before doing a scene with the sensitive Miss Lamour, who is allergic to fish." Now, Dottie!

●

Statistical note: The money the Dionne Quints were paid for their work in "Five of a Kind" boils down to $6700 per hour—divided, of course, by five. In other words, it is almost as profitable (as far as pay per working minute is concerned) to be a Dionne quintuplet as it is to be heavyweight boxing champion of the world. Unfortunately for ambitious youngsters, all of those positions are filled.

●

From friends of Barbara Stanwyck comes a report on the activities of her handsome young son, Dion. He came home one afternoon flushed with excitement, and, when questioned by his mother, he said, "Louise and Johnny found a dead cat today and they're going to have a funeral. Can I go?" Barbara granted the request, and when Dion returned later she asked about the funeral. "Well," said Dion, "they didn't have it. The cat was too dead."

●

The rumors that Norma Shearer turned down the Scarlett O'Hara role because she received so many protesting letters from fans have been denied by those close to Miss Shearer at her studio. Our information is that Miss S. had no intention of playing Scarlett in the first place, and had never even considered the role at any time, feeling, even before her fans did, that it wasn't her type of thing.

●

Things are looking up for the cowboy heroes of the screen. What we mean is that in "The Lady and the Cowboy" a cowpuncher wins Merle Oberon. Of course the cowhand is Gary Cooper, but the fact that Merle Oberon has never before given in to a strong, silent man from the sagebrush definitely means that the open-air Romeos are moving up a notch or two in the screen social scale. We knew the lovely Miss Oberon when nothing less than a Noel Coward epigram would budge her.

●

When Loretta Young finished "Suez," the studio gave her a month's vacation. Loretta had planned to take a trip but, since she's now a mother, she had her adopted daughter Judy to consider. Judy is still too young for travelling, so Loretta, a dutiful mother, spent her vacation at home, with a few side trips to Sally Blane Foster's beach home.

●

As part of the ballyhoo for "Boy Meets Girl," her studio had Marie Wilson selling tickets in the box-office when the picture opened in Hollywood. Marie claims she cost the theater eighteen dollars because she gave some of the customers too much change, and her studio claims that one young gent got in line five times to buy tickets just to be near Marie.

●

Freddie Bartholomew is growing up, but his voice is dropping down—524 frequencies, according to his studio's sound department, which should know about such things. All of which means that in Freddie's current picture, "Listen, darling," they're really listening (darling), because the sound recorders have to control the variations in young Mr. B.'s tones.

Bergen helps Charlie McCarthy plant his footprint for posterity.

E. Robinson and Hope Hampton at the Hollywood Bowl.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

READ THE COMPLETE STORY OF

"By the Dawn's Early Light"

"You can make your own heaven, right here, in whatever moments of beauty you can find," Hank Topping whispered roughly to the frightened girl in his arms.

His words were warm, and earnest because he lived by them, but to Emmy Jordan they seemed just the futile tools of a dreamer. Stubbornly she resisted their persuasiveness. Too long she had kept her secret—now she yielded unresistingly to the maddening chant in her brain.

"Heaven? Though you know you've committed murder? Heaven, in the broken heart of China . . . in the love of an aimless drifter?"

What hope for happiness could there be for these two outcasts, brought together in a forgotten corner of the battle-bruised Orient? Could they ever emerge to make the world forgive what they had done? Read "By the Dawn's Early Light," a thrilling adaptation of the 20th Century-Fox picture, starring Warner Baxter and Alice Faye. It appears in the November issue of SCREEN ROMANCES.

To know us is to like us, and we want to make the getting acquainted easy! That's why we're continuing our SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY PLAN—a 6 months' subscription for $1.00! You'll save $.50 on the next six issues of SCREEN ROMANCES, if you mail your check or money order today.

Screen Romances

Dept. 3
149 Madison Avenue, New York City

Please enter my subscription for the next six issues of SCREEN ROMANCES, effective with the ..... issue. My check (or money order) is enclosed herewith.

Name.....

Address..... .....City.....

Up-to-the-minute...
mild ripe tobaccos and pure cigarette paper . . . the best ingredients a cigarette can have . . .

that's why more and more smokers are turning to Chesterfield's refreshing mildness and better taste

They Satisfy ..millions

Copyright 1938, LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

THE BOUND TO PLEASE
Heckman Bindery INC.
APR 68
N. MANCHESTER, INDIANA

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
0 010 455 970 0